President asks detractors to propose spending cuts

Tom Raum
Associated Press

SANTA MONICA, Calif. — President Clinton asked Congress on Sunday to take the first steps toward balancing the federal budget, but he didn't promise to propose spending cuts himself.

In a major address to the nation, Clinton said he would send Congress a budget that defends the deficit reduction efforts already begun by the administration, but then he added that he doesn't "promise to be the first to demand cuts this year.

"It is up to Congress to decide how best to reduce the deficit," Clinton said.

The president asked Congress to propose spending cuts to help cover the nation's annual $330 billion budget deficit. He said that, in return, he would propose cuts to federal programs that have long been seen as priorities by Congress.

Clinton's speech was his first since he took office in January, and it was widely expected to reflect his new willingness to take a more active role in budget negotiations with Congress.

The president's plan would include a combination of spending cuts and revenue increases. He said he would propose cuts to programs such as Medicare, Medicaid, and Social Security, as well as cuts to military spending and federal grants to states and local governments.

Clinton's speech was a major departure from his earlier, more conciliatory approach to budget negotiations. In recent weeks, he had suggested that Congress take the lead in reducing the deficit and that he would be willing to support any cuts that Congress proposed.

The president's speech was also notable for its lack of specifics. He did not outline any particular cuts or propose any new taxes. Instead, he asked Congress to come up with its own proposals and said he would be willing to consider any cuts that Congress might offer.

Clinton said he would propose no new taxes, but he did not rule out the possibility of increasing taxes in the future. He said that he would be willing to consider any tax increases that Congress might propose, as long as they were part of a broader plan to reduce the deficit.

Clinton's speech was met with mixed reactions from members of Congress. Some praised his willingness to take a more active role in budget negotiations, while others criticized his failure to propose any specific cuts.

"The president has a responsibility to the nation to propose a budget that will balance the books," said Sen. Orrin Hatch, R-Utah. "But he shouldn't be allowed to stay on the sidelines while Congress does the heavy lifting.

But Rep. James Sensenbrenner, R-Wis., said he was "pleased" with the president's remarks.

"I think the president has done a good job of laying out the need for budget restraint," Sensenbrenner said.

The president's speech was also notable for its lack of mention of the war in Kosovo. Clinton had been under pressure to address the issue, but he chose not to do so.

"The president's speech was a major departure from his earlier, more conciliatory approach to budget negotiations. In recent weeks, he had suggested that Congress take the lead in reducing the deficit and that he would be willing to support any cuts that Congress proposed.

Storms spur avalanches, tornadoes across nation

Colorado avalanche buried car as highway hit six states including Wyoming as fast-moving storm drew blizzard warnings through the northern Rockies and into the Plains.

A winter storm pummeling the East, at least two tornadoes spawned by thunderstorms and a glimpse of avalanches beneath Iowa City.

King said motorists in northern Colorado were faced with the possibility of avalanches as long as they were on the road. "We're seeing a lot of avalanches," he said.

The current forecast shows that northern Colorado will see a high chance of avalanches today, with a moderate chance of avalanches tomorrow and Monday.

In Colorado, a snowstorm that began on Saturday continued across the state. Despite the snow, the state's roads remained open, and drivers were urged to be cautious.

In Iowa, the National Weather Service issued a flash flood warning for Polk County, which includes the Des Moines area. The warning was in effect until 10:15 PM.

In Utah, the National Weather Service issued a winter storm warning for the San Francisco Peaks, which includes Flagstaff and the surrounding area. The warning was in effect until 10:15 PM.

In Wisconsin, the National Weather Service issued a winter storm warning for the Green Bay area, which includes the cities of Green Bay, Appleton, and Oshkosh. The warning was in effect until 10:15 PM.

McCue's teaching focuses on global picture

UI Professor Jim McCue finds his two interests, global studies and religion, come to each other well. He grew up in the small town of Princeton, Indiana, and his religious education included weekly classes at his church. He said the two interests come together because religion is a broad concept that encompasses many different cultures and beliefs.

"Religion is a big part of my life," McCue said. "It's a way for me to understand the world around me and to see different perspectives." He added that religion has always been a part of his life, even when he was growing up in Indiana.

McCue explained that his interest in global studies started when he was a child. He said he was always fascinated by the idea of what lay beyond his own small town. He said he always wanted to know more about the world and its different cultures.

"I was always interested in the world," McCue said. "I wanted to know more about what was beyond my own small town." He said that this interest led him to pursue a career in global studies, which he now teaches at the University of Iowa.

McCue's teaching style is characterized by his enthusiasm for the subject matter and his ability to engage his students. He said that he enjoys teaching students about the world and how it functions. He said that he likes to challenge his students to think about the world in new ways and to see things from different perspectives.

"I try to engage my students in the material," McCue said. "I want them to think critically about the world and to see things from different perspectives." He said that he enjoys seeing his students grow and learn as a result of his teaching.

McCue's research focuses on global studies and religion, and he has published many articles and books on these topics. He said that his research is important because it helps to bring together different cultures and beliefs.

"My research is important because it helps to bring together different cultures and beliefs," McCue said. "I want to use my research to help people understand each other better." He said that he enjoys seeing the impact that his research has on his students and on the world.

McCue's teaching and research have earned him many awards and honors. He said that he is proud of the work that he has done and is committed to continuing his research and teaching efforts.

"I am committed to my work," McCue said. "I enjoy seeing the impact that my research has on my students and on the world." He said that he is looking forward to continuing his research and teaching efforts in the future.

Variety spice of Diversity Day

Multicultural groups in the area provided food, music, demonstrations and products:

The cold weather outside did not have an effect on Saturday as the Field House became an indoor carnival on the UI's National Diversity Day. Several groups from different cultures set up booths and tables near the Food Court.

During the day, a variety of food was available and students, staff and faculty attended the various booths.

While various demonstrations such as the Brazilian game of "Carnival," the Cedar Rapids chapter of the Muslim Students Association offered "Pothowrn" and the Vermont United States League for Human Rights served "Gulab Jamun." The Cultural Association also offered "SaIhm" which is a similar dish to "Gulab Jamun.

Among the varieties of food were "Koeksisters" from the ASA Student Association in the United States, "Pork and Beans" from the Canadian Club and "Czecky" from the Czechoslovakian Student Association.

Among the presentations were a Chinese display of calligraphy and a Chinese language demonstration.

The day ended with a variety of music, including a Everybody Sing! performance at the University of Iowa Library.

The event also included "The Night of Many Colors," a series of performances from cultural groups, including the Black Student Association, the Hispanic Student Association, the Asian American Student Association and the African American Student Association.

The day was also marked by the "Lights Out" program, which featured a variety of multicultural performances, including a dance performance by the Somali Student Association and a musical performance by the Indian Student Association.

"We have been told that there have been several incidents involving harassment, particularly in the area of immigration," said UI Police Chief Larry Johnson.

Johnson said that the incidents have been reported to the UI Police Department and that the university is working with local and state authorities to investigate the cases.

"We are taking these incidents very seriously," Johnson said. "We will do everything in our power to ensure the safety of our students and faculty."
Iowa Legislature to look at motorcycle safety helmet law

Tom Seery
Associated Press

Iowa legislators are poised to become the first state legislature to look at mandating the wearing of motorcycle safety helmets for adults, following the lead of a handful of state legislatures in recent years.

The bill, sponsored by state Rep. Dave Loebe, D-Des Moines, would require adults to wear helmets while riding motorcycles if they are under 21 years old. The bill would also establish a task force to study the issue further.

"I think there's a growing recognition among lawmakers that safety is a concern," Loebe said. "We have a lot of good arguments on both sides, but I think we need to look at this seriously and make sure we're doing the right thing for the safety of riders."

It seems clear that Serbia is the aggressor nation in the war currently raging in the Balkans. When Croatia and Bosnia-Herzegovina were independent in the 19th century, Serbia, like all of the greater powers of that time, believed in a balance of power. When those powers were defeated, Serbia continued in the role of aggressor nation in world events.

Serbia has left itself no choice but to destroy the Serb minority in Croatia and Bosnia-Herzegovina. The International Court has stated that Serbia is guilty of aggression and the United Nations has made it clear that Serbia’s actions are illegal.

The world must ensure that Serbia stops its destruction of the Serb minority in Croatia and Bosnia-Herzegovina. Only then can the region find peace and stability.

"You can't just have the most powerful of this program, you can't just have a nuclear capability if you are not prepared to use it to deter aggression," he said as he continued a conference call plan for the day unveiled last Wednesday. Clinton said his new technology proposal includes more robust reprocessing programs for all defense and warfare purposes and a shifting of governance models and decision-making structures to improve control and reduce the risk of abuse or misuse of civilian sources like environmental protection.

"United Nations is revisited, the nuclear reactor never surrendered," the president said.
