Retailers say magazine industry thriving

Magazine distributors have expanded their markets, making a wider range of titles available.

Sara Epstein
The Daily Iowan

If you haven't found a magazine that truly satisfies your soul, you just haven't looked hard enough. According to several local magazine retailers, the magazine industry is flourishing right now while it's pumping out all sorts of obscure titles.

"Identity politics has definitely made its way into the magazine industry," said Lance Luckow, magazine buyer at Prairie Lights Books, 15 S. Dubuque St. "Just about every group you can think of has at least one magazine."

Luckow said distributors have expanded their markets, making a larger number of titles available to retailers.

"There are also more people who are, on a smaller scale, distributing magazines," he said.

Wendy Parker, assistant manager and buyer at the University Book Store, said the advent of desktop publishing has also contributed to the magazine industry boom.

"People are bringing in their own publications that are starting to look like something that I can put on the shelf," she said. "As a general rule we carry just about everything that is mainstream, but we're getting more and more into alternative press magazines."

Luckow said he keeps his customers' interests in mind when ordering magazines, but he is always open to suggestions.

"I like to give just about anything a chance," he said. "If a title would appeal to even one person in Iowa City, it's likely that I will try it."

Paul Valerio, owner of Moon Mystique, 114 1/2 E. College St., said he likes to keep in stock about 350 harder-to-find magazine titles, adding that they sell well.

"This is the age of the small press," said Valerio, who publishes his own magazine, Industrialnation. "Everyone can do it because you don't need as much money."

Nearly anyone with enthusiasm and skill can start their own publication, said Valerio, whose own magazine's circulation jumped from 100 to 7,000 in just a year.

"If the market shows a desire for it, it will happen," Valerio said. "People are getting on the bandwagon. If you can do it and do it right, it'll work."

Parker said she has noticed a larger selection of gay and lesbian magazines. Other successful magazine themes include national and holistic health as well as cyberpunk, Luckow said.

"You can get information through magazines that just isn't possible through mainstream publications or books, information that is not found in radio or television shows," Luckow said. "It's fun to buy a magazine — it's a self-indulgence, like buying an ice cream cone."

PET OWNER DISAGREES

Study says dogs' bark serves no purpose

Chris Pothoven
The Daily Iowan

According to a pair of Massachusetts behaviorists, Lassie didn't know what the hell she was doing.

"The whole idea that Lassie comes back, looks you in the eye, and barks to say 'Your friend is caught in a forest fire and you'd better get in your truck and drive out to rescue him' is fanciful," said Ray Coppinger, a behaviorist at the cognitive science department of Hampshire College in Amherst.

After six years of studying the question of why dogs bark, Coppinger and fellow behaviorist Mark Feinstein have decided that barking probably has no meaning — in fact, dogs themselves often have no idea why they are barking.

"It is repetitious, meaningless and functionless," Feinstein said.

According to the scientists' theory, the bark is actually an artifact of prehistoric domestication, a process which has left dogs forever locked in a teen-age state of development which includes barking.

Feinstein said their interest in studying why dogs bark arose from a number of different questions. "Why do they bark so much? That's a real puzzle. Dogs expend an extraordinary amount of time and energy barking," he said. "And wolves and coyotes, which are virtually the same species as dogs, rarely bark. Why is it that one type of animal does it so much and another doesn't do it hardly at all?"

To answer these questions, the two behaviorists studied the development of vocalization in dogs and analyzed the sounds the animals make in different circumstances, Coppinger said.

"The trouble is that dogs bark when strangers come in the yard,

Carl Bonnett/The Daily Iowan

Some researchers believe that dogs bark for no apparent reason. Some dog owners believe their animals are talking to them. Misty, above, is strangely reticent.

when they're hungry, when they want to go out. The bark means everything," he said. "Most animal vocalizations are very specific."

In one case, the pair observed a sheep dog in a Minnesota field barking for seven hours for no apparent reason, Feinstein said, while in Maine, another researcher counted 907 barks from a cocker spaniel in only 10 minutes.

"There's no other animal that would continue to vocalize like that for seven hours without any apparent reason," he said.

The two were also puzzled by the discrepancy between dogs and adult wolves, which hardly ever bark. But while studying the behavior of young wolves, they discovered that wolf and dog pups begin to bark at about the same age, during a period of experimentation with their vocal abilities, Feinstein said.

Unlike dogs, wolves stop barking about six to seven weeks after birth, he said.

"Dogs get stuck at this stage," Coppinger said. "They just keep doing it over and over, because the communication is never complete and no one ever knows what it means."

Dog lovers may disagree, however.

"My dog always barks for a reason," UI junior Suzy Swenka said. "When she's happy, she has a higher-pitched bark. She also has her stalking bark, her playful bark and her 'chasing-the-cat-while-it's-being-fed' bark."

Swenka said she has proof that her dog, Missy, actually knows why it's barking.

"She has two different types of 'Speak'! If I have food, it's a polite bark, but if I have a stick, she does a big, loud bark," she said. "Missy also uses a different bark for me than for my boyfriend."

But Coppinger said that just because barking is a genetic holdover with no inherent function doesn't mean it is completely meaningless.

"To say that the bark doesn't do anything doesn't mean they can't learn to do anything with it," he said.

"It's maladaptive behavior," Feinstein added. "Animals make use of what they've got. The dogs learn to use the barks for something else."

Although the scientists think they have found the answers to their questions, that doesn't mean they plan to stop studying the phenomenon, Coppinger said.

"I have to study it, because my life is full of dogs," he said. "My office, my yard, my house — they're all full of dogs."

Radio host Limbaugh evokes strong feelings

Dave Strahan
The Daily Iowan

Chances are, you either love him or hate him.

When it comes to popular radio talk-show host Rush Limbaugh, there don't seem to be many ambivalent feelings.

"He just polarizes his audience," said John Ganahl, programming and production manager at KCRG-TV, where Limbaugh's talk show is aired twice daily. "It doesn't matter what the age group is."

Of those who support Limbaugh, whose popularity blossomed under the Reagan administration, most are attracted to his conservative slant.

"It's a pleasant change from the often way-too-liberal positions held in Iowa City," said Rick West, a UI senior majoring in finance.

Eric Berkland, a UI senior majoring in journalism, agreed.

"It's an easy way for me to get the conservative viewpoint that you don't get from most papers," he said. "Limbaugh is very informed on a lot of stuff that I'm not. He has access to better information than I do."

West said Limbaugh shows more of the big picture.

"He points out all the little things that liberals don't want to tell you," he said. "Rush always seems to expose everything for what it is."

Despite their general approval of Limbaugh, both West and Berkland think he sometimes pushes his arguments too far.

"I agree with most of what he says, but not everything," Berkland said. "Sometimes he's a little farther right than I am."

West concurred.

"He gets carried away, but he's funny," he said. "I think he is the Campus Review for the country."

Others find Limbaugh less humorous and worthwhile.

"He thrives on getting a reaction out of people, whether it be agreement or disagreement," said Carrie Stidwell, a UI senior majoring in journalism. "He has a right to his own opinion, but I think he doesn't value the opinions of other people, and I don't respect people like that."

Jim Cook, a UI senior majoring in psychology, agreed that Limbaugh has a right to his own opinion, but that this "opinion" was often misinterpreted.

"It bothers me when people take Limbaugh's opinion as fact," Cook said. "His opinion is just his opinion."

"I think he's a good radio personality — witty, with good arguments," Cook said. "Nevertheless, he and I do not share the same basic ideology."

Stidwell believes Limbaugh can be thought-provoking to those who completely disagree with him, since they might spend time contemplating arguments to refute his.

UI professor investigates courtroom bias in study

Susan Kreimer
The Daily Iowan

UI law Professor Martha Chamallas recently participated in Iowa's first study to investigate both race/ethnicity and gender bias in the Iowa court system. The study was completed earlier this month.

The member Equality in the Courts Task Force was established by the Supreme Court of Iowa in December 1990 following indications that racial and sexual biases were affecting the interaction between attorneys and judges, and the outcome of court cases.

Chamallas was appointed to the task force, consisting of lawyers, judges, courtroom personnel and academics, by the Supreme Court of Iowa after a recommendation from the Iowa Women's Bar Association. She teaches and writes about anti-discrimination law.

Over a two-year period, the task force examined over 10 problem areas in the court system, including the availability of qualified interpreters, selection of a jury representative of the community's diverse ethnic groups, access of legal counsel to victims of domestic violence, and disparate treatment of criminals because of racial bias.

One year ago, the group completed a survey of 2,114 attorneys in Iowa, including every known minority and female working in the state. The task force also conducted telephone interviews with the general public and heard public testimony from 140 citizens on their perception of equality in the courts.

In the executive summary of its final report, which was submitted to the Iowa Supreme Court in early February, the task force acknowledged that "in most instances of the day-to-day court procedures and practice of law, biased conduct is not evident, and that most attorneys and judges rarely, if ever, exhibit overtly or intentionally biased conduct. Nevertheless, there is no question that some quantum of race and gender bias exists."

Martha Chamallas

But the report went on to say that "in many professional settings, women and minorities are vastly outnumbered and are likely to stand out as being 'different.'"

The task force also found that "there is evidence that gender and race may at times negatively affect the interest of certain classes of litigants," citing domestic violence victims — the vast majority of whom are women — and ethnic minorities who are not fluent in English.

REBUILDING EL SALVADOR

Relief caravan to make stop in IC

Chris Pothoven
The Daily Iowan

One of the 35 semitrailer trucks in a national relief caravan will stop in Iowa City today to collect supplies to assist the people of El Salvador in rebuilding their nation.

The arrival of "Building the New El Salvador National Caravan" here will coincide with local events sponsored by the UI Central American Solidarity Committee, including a rice and beans dinner tonight and a material aid drive.

According to Elizabeth Flannery, national co-coordinator of Pastors for Peace, this is the 12th caravan the group has organized for Central America and the sixth for El Salvador.

"This is the largest caravan we've done yet," she said. "It's a very direct, people-to-people alternative to other types of relief."

Thirty-five vehicles and 80 volunteer drivers are traveling in the caravan along 10 separate routes, making stops at 112 cities nationwide, Flannery said.

"At the stops the drivers hold press conferences, public events and material aid collections," she said. "It gives them an opportunity to spread the word about what's going on down there."

Early last year, the Farabundo Marti National Liberation Front and the Salvadoran government ended 12 years of civil war by signing a historic peace agreement which established the foundations for democracy and economic reforms in the country.

The material aid solicited by the national caravan is going to help rebuild the war-ravaged rural communities and to support the many grassroots organizations which are working to make sure the peace accords are implemented, Flannery said.

CASC member Laura Smith said the local group got involved through its work with the Midwest chapter of the Committee in Solidarity with the People of El Salvador, one of 12 other caravan sponsors.

"It seemed like a project we wanted to take part in," she said.

"Our goal is to get as many supplies as possible."

Smith said CASC is collecting medical supplies for rural clinics and rehabilitation and carpentry equipment for injured and disabled war veterans.

Agricultural tools and office supplies for community groups in the Salvadoran popular movement are also being sought, she said.

"We've had a good response so far, and we're hoping to get a good turnout on Friday," Smith said. "I think Iowa City has a great soliarity network."

CASC hopes to fill about one-eighth of one of the trucks, she said.

Following the U.S. tour, the trucks will convene in San Antonio, Texas, before departing for a journey through Mexico and Guatemala. They are scheduled to arrive in El Salvador March 19.

The trucks will be donated to Salvadoran organizations and the drivers will remain in the country to aid relief efforts for a period of time, Flannery said.

LATIN AMERICAN BAND TO PLAY

Benefit dance for Wen-Ling Wen planned

Susan Winterbottom
The Daily Iowan

The concern of a neighbor for a friend in need is how Corazón Latino, a benefit dance for Wen-Ling Wen this Saturday, got started.

Lillyam Arroyave, coordinator of Corazón Latino, said she organized the dance because of a personal tie to Wen-Ling, a UI graduate student in need of a bone marrow transplant.

"Wen-Ling Wen is my neighbor, so that's why we're doing Corazón Latino," she said. "I just wanted to help her in the name of Latin American students."

Wen-Ling was diagnosed with chronic myelogenous leukemia in March 1992 and needs to find a bone marrow donor by June of this year.

Wen-Ling's insurance will cover some of the costs of the actual transplant, but the expenses of searching for a donor, which could reach $50,000, are not covered. The dance proceeds will go toward those expenses.

The event, which is sponsored by UI Latin American students and the Association of Latin American Students, will feature Mexican food and the music of the jazz and salsa orchestra Alto Maiz. Arroyave said the evening should be a cultural experience.

"The band is the only band in Iowa that plays real Latin American music. They play salsa, merengue, calypso and samba," she said. "It's a good opportunity for people in the community to come and listen — they don't have to go to Puerto Rico to experience real Latin American music."

This is the second Corazón Latino fund-raiser. The first dance, which was held last fall for another cause, raised $800. Arroyave said she is hoping Saturday's event is even more successful.

"Last time there were only 300 people," she said. "This time we really hope to have 500 to 700 people, especially since this will be the last event."

Nancy Hauserman, ad hoc chairwoman of the Wen-Ling Wen Fund-Raising Committee, said that $37,000 has been raised so far. Hauserman added that other fund-raising efforts have been suspended for now.

"The committee's decision was that we would stop fund raising until we knew if Wen-Ling needed more," she said. "Whatever money ends up left over will go to people similarly situated."

City, state at odds over pesticide

Timothy Connors
The Daily Iowan

Iowa City City Council members say the state Legislature is out of bounds in its attempts to centralize pesticide regulation.

The Iowa Senate passed a bill Tuesday prohibiting local government entities from regulating the use, sale or storage of pesticide, or from mandating the release of information regarding pesticide ingredients and distribution. The bill would allow such regulations to be set only by the state and federal governments. Discussion on the bill is expected to hit the House floor in mid-March.

Iowa City Mayor Darrel Courtney said if the bill is passed into law, it would be one of many examples of the state taking away the rights guaranteed to municipalities under the Iowa constitution.

"It flies in the face of home rule, which is something that we're supposed to have," Courtney said.

City Councilor Karen Kubby agreed. With balanced budgets and reasonable debts, the cities are in a better position than the state to enforce such regulations, she said.

"They're saying they can take care of people better than we can," Kubby said. "If you look at the record, that's not true."

Kubby, who is also a member of Environmental Advocates, said she fears the state's regulations will be softer than local regulations could be.

Chemical manufacturing companies entered the Iowa City City Council's ear-and-a-half-long debate on adopting lawn-care pesticide restrictions tougher than those of the state because they feared other communities would do the same, Kubby said.

Chemical companies, along with lobbyists from landscaping nurseries, lawn-care companies and farmers, introduced the bill to the House's agriculture committee, according to Committee Chairman Rep. Russell Edie, R-Mason City.

Although attempts to adopt a stricter ordinance in Iowa City were unsuccessful, they fueled arguments for adopting the bill before it was voted out of committee, Edie said.

Committee Vice Chairman Rep. James Meyer, R-Odebolt, commented on action by the Iowa City City Council, saying "I think it was a focusing point that something needed to be done."

Responding to environmentalist concerns about potentially softer state regulations, Meyer, who is a farmer, said, "I kind of resent the attitude that we have to have clean air and clean water no matter what the cost."

Sen. Agriculture Committee Chairman Berl Priebe, D-Algonia, said he introduced the legislation to the Senate floor because he hopes to prevent confusion that could be caused by varying regulations from city to city.

Senate agriculture committee member Patricia Judge, D-Albia, was in agreement on the need for more centralized regulation.

"We felt that local government regulations could vary so much that there really needed to be a standard," Judge said.

Boeing cutbacks threaten local employees

Jude Sunderbruch
Business Editor

The recent decision by Seattle-based aircraft manufacturer Boeing to scale back the size of its workforce nationwide could have repercussions for some local employees of Rockwell International, according to Rockwell spokesman Tom Hobson.

Hobson said that while it was impossible to speculate exactly how Boeing's decision will ultimately affect local workers, the announcement was certainly not a positive sign.

"Boeing's vitality does affect us," he said. "It doesn't look bright."

Rockwell's Cedar Rapids-based Collins Avionics division supplies communication and navigation equipment for nearly all the models in Boeing's line of commercial aircraft. In addition to avionics, Rockwell manufactures a variety of aerospace products.

Boeing's announcement last week that it will be forced to lay off about a fifth of its employees in the next two years was attributed to slackening demand from airlines around the globe for the company's products.

The near-collapse of the U.S. airline industry from price wars and high fuel costs in recent years has forced many carriers to abandon options they held on new Boeing aircraft.

"We kind of get the secondary wave of things like that," Hobson said. "The airlines have losses, then Boeing doesn't make aircraft, and then we don't supply parts or equipment."

Despite this potential for lost business, Hobson said the company is diversified and not completely dependent on Boeing for all of its business.

"Boeing is our prime customer, but it's not our only customer," he said.

Hobson said the company has already been affected by the slow-down in commercial aircraft construction and will close a factory in Mason City, Iowa, by March 31.

"Throughout Iowa in the past year, our employment figures are down about 400 people," he said.

While Rockwell employees in Cedar Rapids who are involved in the manufacture of commercial avionics could be affected by Boeing's decision, workers in Coralville will probably not witness any direct changes.

"Coralville is basically on our defense side of the house," Hobson said. "They supply parts for a different market."

Another factor that will help soften the blow on contractors like Collins Avionics is that their services will still be needed in the upkeep of existing units, according to Andrew Nocella, an analyst with Arlington, Va.-based industry watcher Avmark, Inc.

"Those systems are so complicated I think the manufacturer will always be required," he said.

House votes for 6-month suspension on licenses of teens buying alcohol

The bill represents a substantial increase in the penalty for minors who use altered IDs to buy alcohol.

Mike Glover

DES MOINES — Youngsters who use altered driver's licenses to buy alcohol could lose driving privileges for six months under the terms of a bill the House approved overwhelmingly Thursday.

The bill tries to slow down what lawmakers said was an increase in the use of false IDs and growth in youth drinking. Some legislators said efforts would be better directed to changing a society that's flooded with alcohol and alcohol promotion.

"If you watch TV, every show that's aimed at young people you see Budweiser ads," Rep. David Schrader, D-Monroe, said.

"It looks like we're getting tough on our kids, but we're not willing to look at the real cause, which is the prominence of alcohol in our society," Schrader said.

"The bill will be a deterrent to an underage person using an altered driver license," said House Majority Leader Brent Siegrist, a Council Bluffs Republican. "I teach high school seniors, and I hear them talk every day about drinking."

The House approved the bill 85-11, sending it to the Senate.

The bill would increase the license suspension from 30 days to six months when an altered license is used to buy alcohol.

The issue got attention earlier this year when Gov. Terry Branstad's eldest son, Eric, was charged by police with using an altered license in an attempt to buy beer at a Des Moines convenience store.

Legislators said the bill approved Thursday had nothing to do with Branstad's troubles.

"This is something that is happening all across the state," said Rep. Greg Spenner, R-Mount Pleasant.

MARIJUANA

Legitimate medical uses

Since the demise of Zoe Baird as Bill Clinton's nominee for Attorney General, Garry Trudeau has had to dig through his files for a story line. The Clinton administration's honeymoon ended with the State of the Union Address and "Doonesbury" had to drop its courting of the new president. Illegal aliens and Social Security delinquents are no longer headlines. Trudeau has had to move on to tackle the less newsworthy but still controversial marijuana-brownie issue.

It all stems from a 70-year-old San Francisco grandmother affectionately referred to as "Brownie Mary" Rathbun. She faces felony charges because she was baking brownies laced with marijuana for area AIDS patients at a friend's house when Drug Enforcement agents busted through the front door. It turns out that the friend, Steven Rider, was being investigated for selling pot and other illegal drugs to minors and accepting sexual favors from some in lieu of payment.

However, "Brownie Mary" had nothing to do with Rider's activities. Perhaps she is guilty of choosing her friends badly, but surely nothing else. She was there just using the oven to bake some laced brownies with her two-and-a-half pounds of herb — something she had been doing for quite awhile. "Brownie Mary" then would deliver the special treats to only 15 home-bound AIDS victims (because that's all she can afford on her $650 monthly Social Security check).

Rathbun's activities had even been recognized by the San Francisco Board of Supervisors, who declared a "Brownie Mary Day" for her efforts to legalize marijuana for medicinal use. She was awarded a key to the city by City Supervisor Terrence Hallinan at the National Organization for the Reform of Marijuana Laws annual conference where she was a guest of honor.

In "Doonesbury" things are a bit simpler, but Zonker is in about the same position as "Brownie Mary." Both are trying to relieve the pain and suffering of AIDS victims. Many doctors and health professionals claim that marijuana eases the pain and nausea of AIDS treatment and stimulates the appetite of many AIDS patients, reducing the extreme weight loss that sometimes accompanies it. However, the U.S. Public Health Service last May turned down 28 applicants for marijuana therapy, leaving only 13 people nationwide who may legally use the herb to relieve AIDS, glaucoma or cancer treatment complications. Even with the endorsement of a nationwide galley of doctors, the DEA still insists that marijuana "has no currently acceptable medical applications."

Now it's true that millions of people use and abuse pot, just like cocaine or any other controlled substance. If the federal government did legitimize the use of the drug for medical purposes, there would always be abusers. But that doesn't change the fact that certain drugs do have medical applications, even with the stigma of being thought of as illicit.

"Brownie Mary" and Zonker are not the criminals here, and neither are the patients using pot to relieve their pain and suffering. It's difficult to call for the outright legalization of marijuana, but the medicinal benefits do deserve a closer look, if not for the estimated thousands it could help, then at least for Zonker's peace of mind.

Death penalty not the answer

To the Editor:

In John Ertz's Feb. 8th editorial he advocates the death penalty against "liberal" and "leftist" long-standing arguments against it. He says, "The real question is not one of logic." Oh heck no, the last thing I would want to do is consider logic when we make laws that determine whether or not someone lives or dies!

He adds, "It is not a matter of the physical protection of society from the harm that criminals do." Here, Mr. Ertz is not so far off the mark. Killing these people will make us no more safe than if they served their life terms.

Finally, Mr. Ertz rests his case on the following argument. "(Ted Bundy's) death not only removed a physical threat to society and satisfied the intellectual process of the law, it also satisfied the emotional need to see a killer suffer the same ordeal he put his victims through, and helped the families of his victims start to put their losses behind them." Killing Ted Bundy satisfies a need for revenge only, a word curiously missing from his little essay. We needn't be basing our laws upon physical protection or logic, we need to be basing them on revenge. I guess we haven't come so far from the Romans or the French and their guillotines. Please reread Dickens' "A Tale of Two Cities" and then tell me how you feel about capital punishment.

Finally, I would like Mr. Ertz to consider that murderers probably suffer MORE when they serve out their life terms. Many would rather be killed than face the rest of their natural lives in jail dealing with the atrocity of their own crimes.

Thirst for knowledge leads to quest

Somewhere in the not-too-distant future.

UI sophomore Brian Bonhomme thirsted for knowledge. His bright young eyes shone with a zest for learning. He woke up every morning eager to have his horizons expanded like Marlon Brando's waistline.

Well, OK, this may be stretching it a bit. Often Brian only thirsted for beer. But he wasn't a total loser or anything. He went to classes, enjoyed several of them and actually seemed to be learning something. While home for the summer, he had remarked during the Olympics that Dick Enberg was the 8th plague.

"Oh goodness, my little Brian is making biblical references," his mother had said with a mixture of pride and separation anxiety.

What with him being able to read and all, Brian was an English major. One semester, he was unable to actually take any English classes because of that grim reaper of academic fate known as the Social Security number. Therefore, the best course he could get was "Macroeconomics and Shamanism; Intersections."

Brian had not wanted to take that course because his father had been killed by a deranged Keynesian economist in a polar-bear headdress. It brought back bad memories. But it was either that or two solid months of rock climbing.

Brian woke up one morning after sleeping for only two hours. He had been up writing a paper called "Prestige Addiction," in which he was comparing the UI's strategic plan to supply-side economics and other mysticisms. He was comparing the Reagan administration's theory that support of the rich would eventually trickle down to the lower strata of society with the university's support of money-attracting academic enterprises.

Brian wasn't sure he had it right, though. So he walked out into our icebox of a world to go see his professor. He sprinted across campus, feeling his nose crystalizing. He wanted to make office hours.

Brian was elated to see no one waiting outside the door. His hopes were dashed, however, when he saw a laser-printed piece of paper on the professor's door:

NO OFFICE HOURS TUESDAY, FOR I HAVE GONE A-SEMINARING.

Brian knew there was only one person who could help. He went to the department office. A woman in her 30s was sitting at the desk. Brian knew that departmental secretaries were more powerful than anyone — even God. So he timidly walked up to the desk and asked, "Can you tell me when Professor Natural will be back?"

"No, I cannot," she said, her eyes revealing their cosmic power.

"Thank you."

Brian was dizzy with disappointment. He walked around, going from building to building, looking for a professor to talk to. He saw a woman with a scarf in her hair, but before he could ask her if she was a professor... "Oh geez, I just gotta write this thing. Hold on and I'll just whip this off — you're my 12:30, right? Just give me a few and —" she said, disappearing into her office.

Brian began to feel like he was in one of those episodes of "Cheers" or "Star Trek" where everyone keeps disappearing until there's only the one person left.

He took to walking around the university, wailing "PROOOOOOofessOOORRR... PROOOOOofessOOORRR..."

Exhausted, Brian sat down and watched workers putting the finishing touches on the business building. Brian thought it looked pretty.

He got up after a while and, in his aimlessness, walked down to another building. It looked like someone had left several large geometric objects from an IQ test behind a bronze egg. It was the Laser Building, aka the Technology Center.

He wandered inside. On the third floor, he found what he believed was a professor. He had a beard. The man was looking intently at a high-definition television screen as he adjusted the vertical hold.

"Hello, who's there?" the man asked, not turning around.

"Bill Jacobs, PCQ Industries," Brian said.

"Well, just a second and I'll give you my undivided attention," he said.

Just then, a Bill Moyers Special called "The Reagan Years" flickered on the television. Bill was just then giving a homily on the trickle-down theory. In measured tones, Bill explained taxing policy, capital investment and job creation. It cleared everything up for Brian.

Walking back to his apartment, Brian enjoyed the warming air. He had been sad — depressed even — but now he knew he was living in a world of opportunity. "Wow," he thought, to himself. "Undergraduate education and research really are compatible."

Cooked numbers jog infrastructure figures

Part of President Clinton's unshakeable confidence that "the government must do more," as he put it in his Wednesday, Feb. 17 speech, stems from his belief that the nation's infrastructure is crumbling and in crisis. Hence the need for more "public investment."

In his Wednesday night speech, Clinton asked Congress to appropriate over $30 billion for "jobs to rebuild our highways and airports, to renovate housing, to bring new life to rural communities," among other things. Clinton motivated the need for this spending however, in his Monday, Feb. 15 speech.

On Monday night, Clinton flashed a graph on the screen that showed "public investment" declining from 4.5 percent of the gross domestic product (GDP) in the 1960s to 2.6 percent in the 1980s. Clinton argued from the graph, "as you can see, while the deficit went up, investments in the things that make us stronger and smarter, richer and safer were neglected." Particularly, there was "less investment," Clinton said, in "transportation."

Yet Clinton cooked the numbers for his Monday speech. His game is an old ruse, one that will cost Americans money that otherwise would be used to invest in real production and to create real jobs.

Clinton's numbers don't really show that the nation spends less today on infrastructure than it did in the 1960s. In fact, the nation does not spend less today on the infrastructure: Clinton's ruse requires that he use his words differently than most people use them.

When regular people talk about spending less, they mean that they spend less money: When Jane says she spent less on rent this year, she means that she found an apartment for $400 a month instead of $450.

That's not how Clinton uses the words. The way he explains it, the nation could spend more money than ever (in constant dollars) on infrastructure and he could still say that we are spending less.

Clinton turns more into less by reporting the spending in terms of percent of GDP. Here's how it works: Say the nation has an economy of $500 billion and spends $50 billion on infrastructure. That means it spends 10 percent of GDP on public investments.

Say that over the next decade the economy grows to $1 trillion and the nation spends $75 billion on infrastructure. That means that the country spends $25 billion more on infrastructure than it did at the beginning of the decade; the country increased its spending by a full 50 percent.

Yet even though spending on infrastructure clearly increased during the decade, Clinton's way of reporting change would show a decrease in spending from 10 percent to 7.5 percent. And if the nation spent exactly the same amount of money on infrastructure, Clinton could report that spending decreased by a full half. Nice trick.

Clinton cooks his numbers to "prove" that "the government must do more." Well, the national government need not do more when it comes to spending on the nation's infrastructure.

Trinity University urban administration Professor Heywood Sanders points out in the winter issue of The Public Interest, that the "idea of a vast and pervasive national infrastructure crisis has been built on very few statistics and a number of myths. America's public works are not falling apart."

The nation spent a huge amount of money in the 1960s building the interstate highway system. After its completion, spending naturally declined in the '70s.

During the '80s, however, spending again turned upward, and not only on interstate highways. Sanders reports that in all "basic categories of infrastructure," spending totals today equal (in constant dollars) the highest figures from the 1960s.

What happened was that the economy grew so much during the last 30 years that the nation could spend the same amount of money on infrastructure and have even more left over than before. But, Clinton notwithstanding, that is good, not evidence of decline.

Take Jane again. If she spent $500 on an apartment when she earned $1,000 a month, she would spend 50 percent of her income on housing. If she received a raise so that she earned $2,000 a month and kept the same apartment, then she would now be spending only 25 percent of her income on housing. That's good: She can spend her extra $1,000 however she wants.

Clinton's way of interpreting the numbers would have us believe that Jane is worse off spending 50 percent of her income on housing than when she is able to spend only 25 percent of her income on housing.

The government properly coordinates the provision of public goods like roads and dams. When needed, these sorts of expenditures help the economy grow; it's just that the market cannot coordinate their provision. But normal economic criteria must be applied to their provision: Spending on public goods can be inefficient as well as efficient.

Inefficient government spending is not simply an economic wash: It means that children must eat less, some teenagers can't go to college, and some young couples can't buy a house. Even if the tax money comes from rich people — since they have the highest rates of job-creating investment — inefficient public spending means that poorer folks are going to be worse off.

Clinton's knee-jerk "the government must do more" rhetoric belies the "New Democrat" image he so carefully constructed during the campaign. If Clinton is no more careful than his cooked numbers on infrastructure would imply, then "the government must do more" means that America — rich and poor alike — gets less.

Fidel Castro suggests he may step down in 5 years

1 SANTIAGO, Cuba (AP) — President Fidel Castro says he would like to step down in five years if Cuba's faltering economy improves.

Castro was asked during a two-hour news conference with foreign reporters late Wednesday if he expects to be president in 1998.

"I hope it will not be necessary. We will have to see what life will say," said the man who has dominated Cuba since the 1959 Communist revolution.

Castro spoke after the country's first popular elections in Parliament since the revolution, balloting in which no candidate faced an opponent or disagreed with the Communist Party line.

Cuban officials said today that Castro, facing a popular election for the first time, won 99 percent of the vote in his national assembly district.

Hinting Wednesday he might not run again, Castro said: "Time passes and marathon runners get tired. This has been a very long race, too long."

In his news conference, which covered a wide range of topics, Castro said the more than 30-year U.S. trade embargo remains Cuba's biggest problem and indicated he would not be stepping down as long as it remains in effect.

Haitians demand democracy at mass for Haiti ferry disaster victims

2 PORT-AU-PRINCE, Haiti (AP) — A funeral Mass on Thursday for victims of Haiti's ferryboat disaster turned into a political rally demanding the return of elected President Jean-Bertrand Aristide.

One radical Roman Catholic priest, the Rev. Gerald Jean-Juste, told 2,000 worshippers at the heavily guarded cathedral that the deaths of hundreds of Haitians aboard the ferry Neptune would be avenged. He said leaders of the army's September 1991 ouster of Aristide should be forced to compensate the victims.

Of the about 1,000 people aboard the ferry when it sank on Feb. 16, 275 bodies have been recovered or sighted, leaving about 500 people missing. About 300 were reported to have survived.

"The Haitian people will not die. Haitians will rise!" said Monsignor Willy Romelus, the pro-Aristide bishop of Jeremie, the southwestern port where most of the victims lived.

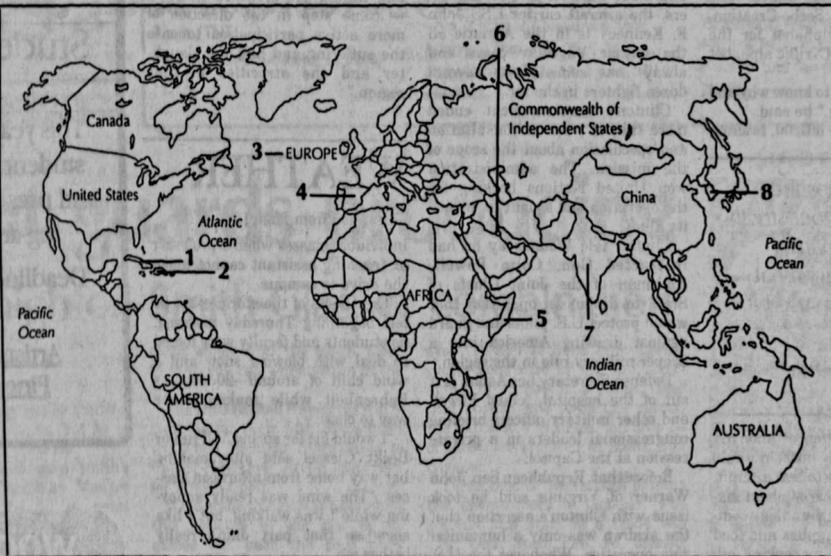

The crowd burst into applause, and chanted "Aristide or Death!" Aristide militants tossed photographs of their leader into the air.

Survey: Most eastern Europeans disillusioned with democracy

3 LONDON, England (AP) — A survey of eastern Europeans indicates most are deeply disillusioned with democracy and half believe they were better off under communism.

Lithuanians are the happiest, while one-third of Russians expect the nation to revert to dictatorship.

The Gallup organization, which released results of the 18-country survey on Wednesday, interviewed 18,700 people between Oct. 30 and Nov. 17.

Although only one in five are satisfied with democracy, however, the survey found clear majorities to favor economic reforms and the privatization of state-owned industries.

The poll included Russia and the former Soviet republics of Lithuania, Latvia, Estonia, Ukraine and Belarus, as well as Romania, Slovenia, the Czech Republic, Slovakia, Macedonia, Bulgaria, Hungary and Poland.

Albania, Armenia, Georgia and Moldova were also surveyed but with less success due to polling difficulties in those countries.

After Olympics Barcelona has high debt to pay

4 BARCELONA, Spain (AP) — Six months after the summer Olympic Games ended on a dazzling high note, the host city suffers from a nagging hangover.

No one disputes the fact that the games were probably the most successful ever held. The Barcelona Olympic Organizing Committee closed its books with a modest $3 million profit.

But that's just a small part of the story, since the games themselves accounted for just 9.4 percent of the $9.3 billion spent by government agencies and private investors to ready Barcelona for the extravaganza.

But now it's time to pay the bills, and in a period of bankruptcies, rising taxes and record unemployment, residents are grumbling.

The city of Barcelona and the regional government of Catalunya are scheduled to pay off their $2.1 billion of combined debt by 2010.

U.S. soldiers fire at snipers; warlord's men surrender

5 MOGADISHU, Somalia (AP) — U.S. Marines and Nigerian soldiers pounded at snipers with machine guns and grenades for five hours Thursday, shutting down relief activity in this devastated city with the heaviest shooting in weeks.

One Somali was killed and three U.S. Marines and two Nigerian soldiers were wounded in the firefight in an area rocked by anti-foreigner rioting Wednesday that left at least five Somalis dead.

Sniper fire hit the hotel where most foreign journalists stay. U.N. headquarters three blocks from the battle and a relief agency a half-mile away also reportedly came under fire. Most of the shooting came from the Nigerians, who fired without restraint at any niche they believed might harbor a sniper.

In the southern port of Kismayu, about 2,300 U.S. and Belgian troops combed the city for weapons and rounded up fighters loyal to warlord Mohamed Said Hirsi, known as Gen. Morgan. He faces a midnight Thursday deadline to move his forces north of Kismayu or face Western attack. At least 60 sullen fighters in dusty civilian clothes surrendered in Kismayu.

Kuwait struggles 2 years after gulf war

6 KUWAIT CITY, Kuwait (AP) — Two years after U.S.-led forces drove Iraq out of Kuwait, the tiny emirate is struggling with political troubles at home, alienation in the Arab world and fears of another Iraqi attack.

Kuwait held low-key ceremonies Thursday on the second anniversary of the Iraqi withdrawal from Kuwait City, shunning big celebrations in deference to 650 Kuwaitis believed still held in Iraqi prisons.

The oil-rich emirate, insecure as long as Saddam Hussein remains in power, wants desperately to keep alive the allied coalition that ousted the Iraqi leader.

But it cannot meet the demands of all 33 countries that helped free Kuwait and now want to sell it weapons, sign work contracts and clinch economic pacts.

Kuwait has lost credibility in the West for lagging on promised democratic reforms, including improvements in the status of women.

Its standing in the Arab world also suffered because many Arabs came to admire Saddam's defiance of U.S. military might and U.N. sanctions and abhor the economic hardships suffered by the Iraqi people.

India's capital under siege as police stop rally

7 NEW DELHI, India (AP) — Riot police fired tear gas and chased protesters from dawn to dusk Thursday to stop tens of thousands of Hindu militants from massing for a rally to demand the government's ouster.

At least 88 people were injured and more than 2,800 people were arrested, city police chief Mukund Behari Kaushal told reporters at his makeshift headquarters behind barricades on the Parliament grounds.

The government's success in preventing the rally was a boost for Prime Minister P.V. Narasimha Rao, who was accused of indecisiveness in dealing with religious riots that engulfed India after Hindus tore down a Muslim mosque in December in the town of Ayodhya.

The incident sparked Hindu-Muslim riots in December and January that killed 1,940 people.

The Bharatiya Janata Party, the right-wing group that called the rally, has been gaining strength ever since, and India's multiethnic, multireligious democracy is in danger.

South Korean president sworn in, wants summit

8 SEOUL, South Korea (AP) — Kim Young-sam was sworn in as president of South Korea today and immediately challenged North Korean leader Kim Il Sung to meet and discuss unification.

"The world is moving away from confrontation and into an era of peace and cooperation," said Kim, the nation's first president without a military past in 32 years.

North and South Korea, enemies since partition in 1945, signed a reconciliation pact last year. But implementing the accord has been stalled by disputes over whether the Communist north is developing nuclear weapons.

The University of Iowa Carver Scholars Program

$3,600 Scholarships

If you have "...literally pulled yourself up by your bootstraps and lived the American dream," you may be eligible for a $3,600 Carver Scholarship.

The Roy J. Carver Trust has made a number of two-year, $3,600 scholarships available to students who have persevered through unusual circumstances that normally might have held a student back from receiving a degree.

To be eligible you must:

- ★ Have persevered through unusual circumstances
- ★ Have completed at least 60 hours with a 2.8 or above cumulative GPA
- ★ Be starting your junior year at The University of Iowa in August of 1993
- ★ Have graduated from an accredited Iowa high school
- ★ Be a U.S. citizen

Financial need is considered; applicants must file a Free Application for Federal Student Aid (FAFSA) in addition to completing the Carver Scholars Program application. The application deadline is April 1, 1993.

To obtain the Carver Scholars Program application (which includes application procedures), contact your undergraduate college or the Scholarship Department, Office of Student Financial Aid, The University of Iowa, 208 Calvin Hall, Iowa City, Iowa 52242-1315, (319) 335-1458.

would be coordinated with existing United Nations relief efforts.

But he said later in answer to a question, "We've had several volunteers." He did not elaborate.

Asked why the mission was worth undertaking, he said that in addition to the humanitarian aspect, "we think if we do it we will be able to create a somewhat better climate for negotiations" in the former Yugoslavia.

A senior Pentagon official, speaking on condition of anonymity, said the supply-drop was designed to be "of short duration." But bad weather or problems with accuracy of the drops could add to the time, he said.

The aircraft used would be slow-flying C-130 "Hercules" transports. To protect the pilots, the planes are supposed to fly at high altitudes — such as 10,000 feet — to avoid the possibility of anti-aircraft fire from forces on the ground.

However, the higher the flights occur, the less accurate the drops are.

The flights are supposed to direct supplies to the varied ethnic groups — Muslims, Croats and Serbs — in order to counter any charges of favoritism.

There will be a leaflet drop in advance, the official added. The leaflets will be in Serbo-Croatian, using the Latin alphabet for the Croats and the Cyrillic alphabet for the Serbs.

"We want people to know why and when we're coming," he said.

A second defense official, briefing reporters on condition of anonymity, said each supply mission would include about three to five aircraft. Each plane will carry about sixteen 2,000-pound bundles composed of medical supplies and food staples such as flour, cooking oil, coffee beans, rice and some pre-cooked meals termed "Meals Ready To Eat."

The official noted that even though the operation will not include a protective "air cap" of fighter aircraft to ward off possible attackers, the aircraft carrier USS John F. Kennedy is in the Adriatic off the former Yugoslav coast and always has some of its several dozen fighters in the air.

Clinton's announcement ended more than a week of consultation and speculation about the scope of the mission. The administration won United Nations backing for the operation and sought to involve its allies.

Clinton said Wednesday he had instructed Gen. Colin Powell, chairman of the Joint Chiefs of Staff, to design an operation that would protect U.S. pilots and guard against drawing America into a deeper military role in the region.

Defense Secretary Les Aspin, just out of the hospital, joined Powell and other military officers briefing congressional leaders in a private session at the Capitol.

Before that, Republican Sen. John Warner of Virginia said he took issue with Clinton's assertion that the airdrop was only a humanitarian operation. Whenever the U.S. government sends forces into areas of the world where there are hostilities, "that has military connotation," he said.

Senate Democratic Leader George Mitchell of Maine supported Clinton, calling the proposed effort "a welcome step in the direction of more active participation to ease the suffering and halt the slaughter and the atrocities in that region."

individual classes when a professor or teaching assistant cannot make the drive to campus.

The effects of the storm could be felt beginning Thursday morning, as students and faculty were forced to deal with blowing snow and a wind chill of around -20 degrees Fahrenheit while making their way to class.

"I would die for spring," UI junior Becky Giessel said after making her way home from afternoon classes. "The wind was really annoying while I was walking, but I like snow so that part didn't really bother me."

The snow accumulation also led to slicker streets and highways, causing some minor fender benders, the Iowa City Police Department said.

Hawke to coach U.S. Indoor Championships

Iowa runners Tracy and Marlene Poole and Lisa Van Steenwyk will lead the USA National Indoor Field Championships at York's Madison Square today.

Poole will run the 400-meter dash, while Morris will run the 3,000. Poole finished her fifth best time in the 24.59 clocking at the State Invitational Feb. 6. Morris owns the four-minute time in the 3,000, 9:29.83 at the Nebraska Invitational Feb. 6.

Van Steenwyk's top time is 6:14 in the 10th in the shot put at the indoor NCAA Championships.

Gymnast receives

Iowa senior gymnast Sheldon received the 1992 Medical Research Committee / American Association of Clinical Research / American Society of Sports Medicine weekend at the association's annual conference in California.

Sheldon, of Winona, Minn., presented the abstract "Endothelial Retraction: Active Contraction, Stressed Relaxation or Both," written by Dr. Michael Shasby, Professor of Medicine in the UI College of Medicine. She was the only graduate presenter among medical students.

Sheldon, an NCAA Athlete, has worked on the project for two years. She was the only biology major to be accepted into the physician's assistant school at Emory University in Atlanta. She will enter the University of Iowa next week.

Student-athletes face decision-making

A panel discussion on the cross-section of the student-athlete will be held in Rhedey Quadrangle Hall Wednesday, March 3, at 7:30 p.m. on choices affecting students, including academic, career decisions, alcohol use, sexual activities, values and making the college life.

Athletes scheduled to include football player Bielema, wrestler Chas basketball player Neumann and gymnast Becky Sheldon.

Hockey club ready for playoffs

The University of Iowa Club ended its regular season by defeating Wisconsin-Madison 16-2 and 6-3.

The club, 10-1-1 overall, will attempt to win the straight Midwest Western Hockey Association title with the playoffs in Peoria, Ill.

Gymnast receives award

Iowa senior gymnast Becky Sheldon received the Western Student Medical Research Committee / American Federation of Clinical Research Award last weekend at the association's annual conference in Carmel, Calif.

Sheldon, of Winona, Minn., presented the abstract "Endothelium Retraction: Active Contraction, Stressed Relaxation or Both," written by Dr. Michael Shasby, Professor of Internal Medicine in the UI College of Medicine. She was the only undergraduate presenter among graduate and medical students. The first-place presentation was the highest-graded abstract for the sub-specialty of pulmonary.

Sheldon, an NCAA Scholar-Athlete, has worked with Shasby on the project for two years. The biology major has been accepted into the physician's assistant school at Emory University in Atlanta. She will interview with The University of Iowa's program next week.

Student-athletes to discuss decision-making

A panel discussion featuring a cross-section of the student body will be held in Rheder Lounge in Quadrangle Hall Wednesday, March 3, at 7:30 p.m., focusing on choices affecting all college students, including academics, career decisions, alcohol and drug use, sexual activities, personal values and making the transition to college life.

Athletes scheduled to speak include football player Bret Bielerma, wrestler Chad Zaputill, basketball player Nicole Tunsil and gymnast Becky Sheldon.

Hockey club readies for playoffs

The University of Iowa Hockey Club ended its regular season by defeating Wisconsin-Milwaukee 16-2 and 6-3.

Point guards producing Davis high on Smith-Glasper combination

John Shipley
The Daily Iowan

Kevin Smith may not be starting for the Iowa Hawkeyes, but he is currently starting for them.

Coach Tom Davis gave Smith's starting job to freshman Mon'ter Glasper after the junior point guard missed some classes following Iowa's loss at Minnesota Feb. 13. Since then, Smith has been playing some of the best basketball of his career.

"Sometimes I'm more relaxed coming off the bench; then I can see things first," said Smith, who scored eight points in Iowa's 58-38 win over Penn State Wednesday. "I hate to feed Mon'ter to the wolves, but I can see things while he's out there."

"Coach (Davis) is the point guard coach, so he's always over there telling you little things. You can really adjust from the bench, more so than you can when you're in the game."

The 18th-ranked Hawkeyes will be gunning for their fifth consecutive win when Michigan State comes to Carver-Hawkeye Arena Saturday for a noon tipoff.

"One of the things that has helped this ballclub in the last couple games has been the good point guard play we're getting," said Davis, whose team hasn't lost since the Minnesota game.

Since being relegated to the bench, Smith has dished out 12 assists and turned the ball over just four times. During what Davis calls his team's "second season" — games since the death of Chris Street Jan. 19 — Smith has compiled 35 assists to just 13 turnovers, a 1.4 per game average.

Since Iowa's overtime win at Michigan State Jan. 28, the Hawkeyes (18-6, 7-5) have been taking pretty good care of the ball, averaging 14 turnovers a game. Over that stretch, the team has turned the ball over 118 times, but only 23 of those are credited to Smith and Glasper.

Davis credits Smith with helping the development of Glasper, who got his first start in a 68-54 win over Ohio State Feb. 16, dishing out a game-high five assists.

"One of the reasons Mon'ter is adjusting as well as he is because Kevin is so good at working with him and being patient," Davis said. "He does all the unselfish things that you want your point guard to be doing — not looking out for his own welfare, but willing to help his teammates."

Glasper started seeing significant playing time when Davis decided to use Val Barnes strictly at off

Junior point guard Kevin Smith says there are advantages to losing a starting job. "Sometimes I'm more relaxed coming off the bench," he said. "It gives me a chance to see things."

WOMEN'S BASKETBALL

Iowa out to send message to MSU

Roxanna Pellin
The Daily Iowan

Michigan State's Breslin Center does not hold fond memories for the Hawkeyes.

The Iowa women's basketball team has won two of the last four games played at East Lansing. Not a bad road record for most teams, but significant considering the Hawkeyes have lost only four conference road games in the past three seasons.

Iowa women's basketball Coach C. Vivian Stringer said she hopes to prove that her second-ranked Hawkeyes are not the vulnerable team the Spartans may think they are when Iowa hosts Michigan State at 7:30 tonight at Carver-Hawkeye Arena.

"Anyone who has watched us play against Michigan State knows that they think we're a very vulnerable team," Stringer said. "But that's not typical of our team. For some reason, we just don't play well."

Iowa will try to hold on to its perfect Big Ten mark of 13-0 and 21-1 overall record, while the Spartans will try to improve on their 8-13 and 4-8 record.

Stringer said there may be two possible explanations for the Hawkeyes' lackluster performances against the Spartans, who lost 88-51 to No. 7 Ohio State and 87-54 to No. 6 Penn State last weekend.

"Michigan State has to be that one team that we consistently do not play well against at Michigan State," Stringer said. "It always seems to be 1) a television game, and 2) it seems like we eat a lot of spaghetti, pancakes, steak and everything else before we play. We seem to be sluggish, out of sync."

The Hawkeyes return to Carver-Hawkeye Arena for their last full weekend of conference play at home after winning at Purdue 63-55 and at Indiana 68-46 last

Al Goldis/The Daily Iowan

Coach C. Vivian Stringer and the No. 2-ranked Hawkeyes will be out to prove something to Michigan State when they host the Spartans tonight at 7:30.

Stringer said she was impressed with the Hawkeyes' recovery after a struggle at West Lafayette.

"I liked what I saw against Indiana and I say that because I thought we sputtered a bit at Purdue," Stringer said. "Not that I thought that we didn't take good shots (at Purdue), we made good shot selection. It was that our shots were falling short. I think in spite of playing poorly, we still did a nice job of winning."

"The key was the way we responded the following game against Indiana. It was nice to see us rebound and play well on the road," she added.

Iowa will host Michigan (1-20, 0-12) at 2 p.m. Sunday. "We need to be careful because they will be trying to (win)," Stringer said of the Wolverines. "I think that they have an outstanding player in Trish Andrew. She is certainly one of the league's best."

"They are going to be a force to be reckoned with, but maybe not this year," she said.

SOFTBALL

Hawkeyes begin season at Arizona State Classic

Kris Wiley
The Daily Iowan

Coach Gayle Blevins and the Iowa softball team don't know exactly where they stand, but they'll find out this weekend when they open the season at the Arizona State Classic in Tempe, Ariz.

"It doesn't make our season or break our season," Blevins said of the tournament. "But what is important for us is to see how we do, in fact, measure up defensively and offensively and what areas are strong suits for us and what areas we need to work on."

The Hawkeyes take the field today, facing Sam Houston at 2 p.m., followed by a game with San Diego State. Iowa then faces Washington and Arizona State on Saturday before taking on Washington and Sam Houston Sunday.

"We haven't been out on the dirt yet, but I think we're prepared as well as we can be," said senior Jenny Roe, a team tri-captain with fellow senior Christa Davis and sophomore Dawn DeVore. "This weekend will show us where our starting point is. I think we're ready."

The Hawkeyes are also trying to erase the memory of the 0-4 road-trip to Arizona State that opened the 1992 season. But senior outfielder Kim Davis said it shouldn't be a factor in the outcome.

"The older people may have it in the back of their minds," Davis said. "But there are so many new faces and the teams are not the kind of caliber we faced last year."

Beginning her sixth season at Iowa, Blevins said her team may not be as ready to start as they would like to be, but are at a better point than they were at this time last year.

"It's always been a really good week of competition for us," Blevins said. "Our key is for us to come out and play, and play our game every game we step on the field."

The Hawkeyes finished last season with a 34-20 record and second in the Big Ten at 21-7. Iowa could have sealed a conference championship with a win over Ohio State in the final game of the season, but lost 1-0 in 10 innings.

While Blevins picked Michigan,

Center fielder Kim Davis

Northwestern and Ohio State as the teams to beat for the conference title, she said Iowa shouldn't be ruled out.

"I think we'll be in the hunt," Blevins said. "I definitely feel this will be a team that will compete for the conference championship."

Davis also believes the Hawkeyes have a shot at the Big Ten title. "We'll be right there at the end," she said. "Experience is what we need now. We need to be able to play consistently."

The Hawkeyes will be banking on the leadership of top returning hitters Kim Davis, Roe and Christa Davis. Big Ten Freshman of the Year Karen Jackson and junior transfer Alisha Nelson will provide pitching with sophomore Stacey Harrison behind the plate.

Iowa's infield consists of Christa Davis at first, senior Amy Murphy at second, Roe at shortstop and freshman Melissa Wielandt at third.

Kim Davis leads the outfield with juniors Heather Bryant and Jenni Stotmeister, sophomores DeVore and Katy Morgan and freshman Tasha Reents vying for positions.

Blevins said her team has taken a different approach to practicing this season.

Davis said the key is to stay positive.

"If we aren't successful in our first trip, we have to remember that we'll get better as the season goes on," Davis said.

Robertson swapped for Woolridge

Associated Press

MILWAUKEE — The Milwaukee Bucks obtained forward Orlando Woolridge from Detroit for guard Alvin Robertson in a trade subject to the players passing physical exams, the Bucks announced Thursday.

The 6-foot-9 Woolridge, 33, a sixth-round draft pick of the Chicago Bulls out of Notre Dame in 1981, is still recovering from surgery to repair a broken bone in his right hand. He sustained the injury in a game with the Miami Heat Feb. 17.

Obtained by the Pistons in an August 1991 trade with the Denver

Nuggets, Woolridge played in 132 consecutive games before the injury. He is expected to be sidelined until the middle of March.

The 6-foot-4 Robertson, 30, missed 14 games in January because of a bulging disc in his lower back, but returned to action Feb. 1.

He has averaged 8.7 points in 39 appearances, including 32 as a starter.

Bucks coach Mike Dunleavy said Robertson no longer fit into the team's young corps of guards, while Woolridge gives the team "more size and athleticism at our forward spot."

Woolridge, in his career, has played for the Bulls, New Jersey Nets, Los Angeles Lakers and Denver Nuggets before joining the Pistons.

Robertson, a first-round draft pick of San Antonio out of Arkansas in 1984, played for the Spurs before being obtained by the Bucks in a May 1989 trade.

In other trade news, the Golden State Warriors dealt journeyman forward Ed Nealy to the Chicago Bulls for a conditional second-round pick in the 2001 NBA draft.

guard, where it's been easier for him to score. It's been a good strategy: Barnes has responded with some tremendous scoring efforts, including games of 29, 27 and 33 points in wins over Michigan State, Michigan and Penn State, respectively.
The move has also helped the natural point guards.
"After we made the commitment to move Val to the second guard, they've been getting better and better," Davis said.
The move has been particularly beneficial to Glasper, who vowed to bring leadership to the team as early as Media Day last Oct. 29.

"Most of the players are starting to listen to me a little more. They used to look at me as a freshman, now they're starting to look at me as more of a strong leader," Glasper said. "I feel good about that."
Michigan State is coming off a tough 65-62 loss at Wisconsin Wednesday. In their last meeting with Iowa, the Spartans (14-8, 6-7) blew a 15-point lead in the final 3:30 and eventually lost in overtime, 96-90. It was the Spartans' third straight home loss.
Barnes led the Hawkeyes with 29 points, including an NBA-range

3-pointer that tied the game in regulation. Acie Earl added 27 points and 13 rebounds.
It was the first game for Iowa after the team lost Street in a car accident.
Freshman forward Kenyon Murray was apparently all right after going down hard on an aborted ally-oop early in the second half of Iowa's win over Penn State Wednesday. Murray asked Davis to re-enter the game, but trainer John Streif kept him out for precautionary reasons.
"He wanted to go back in but John decided it would be better to rest him," Davis said. "You just never know with those things. Right now they're hopeful that it's just a bruise and he responds to treatment."

The Penn State win made Davis the second-winningest coach in Iowa men's basketball history with 147 wins. He trails only Lute Olson, who earned 168 victories between 1975-1983.
Davis is currently in his seventh season at Iowa City. He was named Associated Press national and Big Ten coach of the year in 1986-87 after posting a 30-5 record in his first season at Iowa.

Murphy sent from Oilers to Blackhawks

Associated Press
EDMONTON, Alberta—Joe Murphy, Edmonton's free-agent holdout, was sent to the Chicago Blackhawks on Thursday in a trade that has been rumored for months.
In return, the Oilers received defenseman Igor Kravchuk and junior forward Dean McAmmond, Chicago's top draft choice in 1991, currently playing with the Swift Current Broncos of the Western Hockey League.
Murphy, 25, a right-wing whose desire and confidence finally caught up to his awesome speed last season, blossomed last year with 35 goals and 47 assists for 82 points.
He was seeking $900,000 a year based on comparisons drawn up by his agent, Mark Hall, with Pittsburgh's Kevin Stevens and Chicago's Jeremy Roenick.
The Oilers said he wasn't worth that much based on one season's performance and pledged last September to trade him. Murphy has been sitting out ever since, skating and practicing in a Detroit suburb.
Roenick's salary is $800,000 this season and Chicago general manager Bob Pulford is reported to have made it clear Murphy would not be paid that much.

But the Oilers players said they admired Murphy for sticking by his guns in the salary dispute and Oilers coach Ted Green said Murphy will inject some offensive punch into the Blackhawks lineup.
"I think Joe deserves to be back in the game," said Green, who has seen his top line from last season — Murphy, Vincent Damphousse and Bernie Nicholls — traded away.
"It's got to be a nice day for him because he's a quality player in this game. For Joe, I'm happy. He's going to do a lot of things for Chicago."
Kravchuk, 26, is just coming off an injury that delayed the deal. He's mobile and talented, but his acquisition brings to nine the number of defensemen in the Oilers camp.
McAmmond is a player for the future. But the Oilers, eight points out of a playoff spot in the Smythe Division and among the league's lowest scoring teams, need offense.
"Certainly something has to give here; you can't have nine defensemen in your lineup," Green said.
Oilers general manager Glen Sather said other player moves are likely but he chastised reporters for continually mentioning $1-million-a-year rearguard Dave Manson in speculative stories.

The most recent rumor had Manson being traded to the Quebec Nordiques for forward Valeri Kamensky. Sather called such reports damaging to the player and the team.
He said he's happy the Murphy deal is finally done after months of rumors concerning the future of the No. 1 overall draft choice by Detroit in 1986.
Sather said the deal with Chicago was the best he could make and he dismissed questions about why he didn't trade for a high-scoring forward instead.
"Kravchuk is a world-class player; he's going to help us a lot. I expect that he'll be here for a long time. I've been working on this deal for six months almost."
"You can't really move a player like Murphy and get another player like Murphy. Teams just aren't willing to move those kinds of guys."
Chicago general manager Bob Pulford was en route to Tampa Bay for the Blackhawks game Thursday night against the Lightning, and was unavailable for comment.

IOWA GYMNASTICS

Time ticks away for Hawkeyes

Karen L. Karaidos
The Daily Iowan

Knowing that the team score needs to increase in order to qualify for regionals, the 11th-ranked Iowa men's gymnastics team will have added pressure tonight when it hosts No. 6 Michigan State at 7 in the North Gym of the Field House.

After losing to Penn State Feb. 20 and dropping to 0-2 in the Big Ten, the Hawkeyes believe that they may be running out of time.

"It's going to be very tough to qualify for the regionals now," Coach Tom Dunn said. "Michigan State is one of our primary competitors for a berth in the regionals, and they're ranked ahead of us, so this is a critical meet."

"We're a good team waiting to show it. If we put it together, we'll do well against Michigan State," Dunn added.

Junior Garry Denk, out of Northbrook Ill., agrees that the team needs to improve in order to advance to the regional competition.

"I think we all realize that the meets are running out now and we realize that in our next three meets we'll definitely have to bring up our hit percentage and get our scores up," said Denk, who is ranked third on the rings and 12th on the parallel bars.

"Pommel horse has been a tough event for the Hawkeyes and has caused them problems in previous meets."

"We've been so close in the last two meets to having a really good team score and in the last two meets it came down to pommel horse," Denk said. "So if we hit pommel horse we should be in good shape this week because all our other events are getting stronger each meet."

Dunn is confident that the team is continuing to improve.

"We just have to keep doing what we're doing," Dunn said. "We're making progress and hopefully it won't be too little too late and we'll finish the season here with a few good meets."

Denk feels that although the Spartans are ranked higher than Iowa, the Hawkeyes will end up winning when it really counts.

"They're ranked ahead of us but in the last two years that I've been here, they've always been ranked ahead of us and when it comes down to the Big Ten Championships and regionals, we've always ended up beating them," Denk said. "They're a good team but I think our team is better."

Friday's meet will be the only home co-ed meet for the Hawkeyes, with the women facing North Carolina State at the same time.

"It should be a very exciting meet with the girls competing also," Denk said. "It should be a real loud and exciting meet, probably one of the best meets here at the Field House."

Women entertain Wolfpack

Karen L. Karaidos
The Daily Iowan

After placing last out of four teams in their last outing, the Hawkeye women gymnasts hope to improve their team score when they compete against North Carolina State tonight at 7 in the Field House North Gym.

The Hawkeyes then travel to Ames Sunday to compete against intrastate rival Iowa State at 1 p.m.

On Feb. 19 at Southeast Missouri's Cap'n Crunch Invitational, Iowa's effort was highlighted by season-best team finishes on the balance beam (47.00) and in the floor exercise with a mark of 47.75. Freshman Kim Baker set her third school record when she scored a 9.8 on vault.

The Wolfpack stand at 10-4 overall after defeating Rhode Island, North Carolina and the Air Force in their own Hearts Invitational last weekend.

"They're pretty strong but basically we're pretty comparable to them," junior Michelle Myers said. "It should be a very close and exciting meet."

The Hawkeyes, concerned about qualifying for regionals, say that consistency will be important in order to bring up their scores.

"We realize we're running out of time and if we want to qualify for regionals, we have to hit every one of our routines this Friday and in every meet after that," junior Meredith Chang said.

Besides adding difficulty into their routines, the Hawkeyes have been focusing on being consistent in practice.

"We've been trying to increase our difficulty in our routines and basically trying to get more consistent when we do our routines," Myers said. "We've been doing a few more routines, a few more repetitions of trouble skills and I think that will help us a lot."

"We've been hitting really well in practice and we just have to substitute practice for a meet situation," Myers added.

The Hawkeyes remain confident that they will perform better than they have in the past few meets.

"We're going into this meet looking really good, feeling really good, and it should be a great meet and the Hawks should win," Myers said.

Coach Diane DeMarco also believes that the team will be ready to compete.

"We are fired up and we are determined to put it together on all four events," DeMarco said.

Myers and Chang say that it will be an advantage competing in their home gym due to crowd support.

"I think it's an advantage simply because we have the home crowd around us and we'll have more people rooting us on," Myers said.

"I know that Southeast Missouri had 4,000 fans there and it seemed to give them some confidence, so it would be great if we could get as many people into the Field House as possible," Chang said.

Celts' Parish given second chance

Rob Glover
Associated Press

WALTHAM, Mass. — The judge who heard Robert Parish admit to marijuana possession said he was treating him the same as any other offender — but added that the Boston Celtics center has a special responsibility.

"You have an extra burden of great fame and notoriety," Waltham District Court Judge Paul Cavanaugh said Thursday as Parish admitted there were sufficient facts to warrant the charge. "The people of this area place a vast reservoir of good will in you. I hope you can put this behind you and repay that trust."

Parish, a nine-time All-Star, will have the charge dismissed if his record is clean for the next six months. Following the normal procedure for a first-time offender in Massachusetts, Parish did not formally enter a plea but admitted the validity of the charge and waived his right to a trial.

Parish, at 39 the oldest player in the NBA, did not speak during the five-minute hearing other than to answer "yes" and "no" to questions from Cavanaugh. He refused to speak with reporters outside the Waltham District Court building.

His lawyer, Harry Manion, said Parish already had "accepted his responsibility and made his apologies" after being charged earlier this month.

Parish, who is in his 17th season and is known throughout the NBA as "Chief," will have to pay a $30 court fee.

The hearing took place three days after Parish's teammate, Alaa Abdelnaby, pleaded innocent to a marijuana charge in Milwaukee and requested a jury trial in the case.

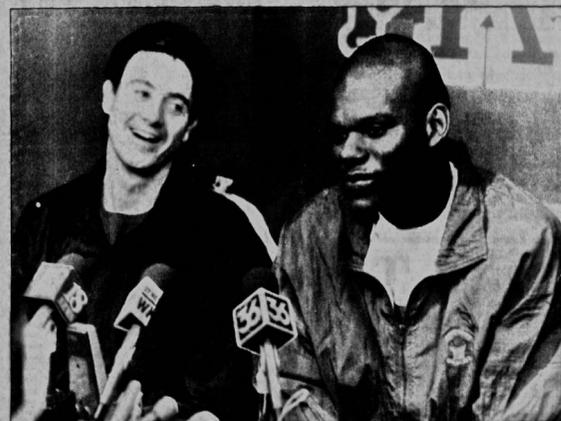

Parish and a companion, Heather Graves, were charged with possession of marijuana when authorities intercepted a package addressed to the player they said contained two ounces of the substance. A Feb. 11 search of his home found an additional three ounces.

Graves is expected to be arraigned Monday.

Marijuana is not among the substances included in the NBA's anti-drug policy and players are not tested for it. Parish has not missed any games since being charged, and had 13 points and 16 rebounds Wednesday night in a 103-88 win over New Jersey.

About a dozen people calling for the legalization of marijuana marched with signs outside the courthouse.

COLLEGE BASKETBALL

Associated Press

Kentucky coach Rick Pitino shares a laugh with star forward Jamal Mashburn on Thursday, as the junior Wildcat announced he will be eligible for the NBA draft after this season.

Mashburn to skip final year at Kent.

Mike Embry
Associated Press

LEXINGTON, Ky. — Jamal Mashburn, the key player in Kentucky's return to national prominence, is headed for the NBA after this season.

"It seems like I won't be coming back next year to University of Kentucky basketball," Mashburn said at a news conference Thursday with coach Rick Pitino at his side. "It seems like I'm ready."

Most players keep their college status in limbo and wait until the end of the season before making the announcement to turn pro.

Shaquille O'Neal waited until April 3 last year to announce his departure from Louisiana State for the NBA. O'Neal earlier had denied he would leave LSU before graduation.

Pitino has said all season this would be Mashburn's final year in a Kentucky uniform. He said that was to keep fans from getting their hopes up and then leaving a "bad taste in their mouths."

"We've been very honest from Day 1," Pitino said. "We said if Jamal is one of the top picks, he's going pro. I think everybody has a good taste in their mouth because they haven't been misled."

Mashburn, a 6-foot-8 junior forward, signed with Kentucky after the school was placed on probation by the NCAA and banned from postseason play.

"There was no rhyme nor reason for Jamal to come to Kentucky," said Pitino, adding that Mashburn could have found quicker fame at another elite program.

Mashburn averaged 12.9 points in helping the Wildcats to a 22-6 record as a freshman. Last season, he led the team to a 29-7 mark and the NCAA East Regional final, averaging 21.3 points.

This season, Mashburn is averaging 22.0 points and 8.5 rebounds for the second-ranked Wildcats (20-3).

"He's been a security blanket," Pitino said of Mashburn's value to the program. "This is a proud moment for me, because he's going to the highest level."

Pitino, a former coach of the New York Knicks, said Mashburn was "mentally and physically ready to go pro."

Mashburn said his Kentucky teammates weren't surprised by his decision.

"They knew it was coming," he said. "They just wished me well."

Mashburn said he and Pitino had discussed the NBA all season, but only decided this week to make the final decision.

Pitino believes Mashburn will be among the top three selections in the draft.

"You have to strike when the iron is hot, and his is hot," he said.

"He's going to make an outstanding pro," Vanderbilt coach Eddie Fogler said. "I respect what Kentucky is doing, and that's doing what's best for him."

When asked if there were any lessons to be learned from Ohio State's Jimmy Jackson spurning an offer from the Dallas Mavericks in the last draft and remaining unsigned, Pitino joked, "If Jamal Mashburn gets offered $7 million, he'll take it. And if he doesn't, there'll be one dead agent."

Mashburn said the first thing he will do with his first pro paycheck is purchase a new home for his mother, Helen, who lives in New York City.

"She's excited," Mashburn said. "She wants me to graduate and I'll do that also."

Mashburn hasn't thought about the riches that await him as a pro.

"I don't have it now, so I don't understand what it means to be a millionaire," he said. "I can't really touch it right now."

ALBUM REVIEW

Bettie Serveert's Palomine obscure grab bag of punchy pop, grunge

John Kenyon
The Daily Iowan

Bettie Serveert is a band perched on the edge of obscurity, a step up of sorts for everyone involved. The band's bassist and lead guitar player were at one time part of the Dutch combo De Artsen. That band released one critically acclaimed LP, Conny Waves With a Shell, an album that sold nearly four copies. They split in 1991.

A former sound engineer and a roadie for that band got together with the De Artsen ex-patriots — and Bettie Serveert was born. The name can roughly be translated as "Bettie served," a tribute to Dutch tennis sensation Betty Stove, or so they say.

Names, cover art, modes of dress — all are of little matter. The music matters and Bettie Serveert delivers the goods. A potent mix of Amerindie guitar rock, Brit shoe-gazing and grungy pop, the band's debut LP, Palomine, is a gem.

The guitar playing alternates between punchy pop and murky grunge, at times fusing the two, often for maximum benefit. The one factor setting Bettie Serveert apart from De Artsen is vocalist Carol Van Dijk. Van Dijk, unlike the fragile-sounding Harriet Wheelers of the world, belts out the tunes when needed, while keeping dynamics in mind.

In spots the songs sound like old

Dinosaur, with raging guitars hiding pop hooks for which to die. Other times Bettie Serveert comes across as a punked-up version of such lightweight chick-pop as the Sundays or Curve.

The best tracks on the LP are fine-crafted grungy pop tunes, much like a less-pouty Teenage Fanclub with female vocals. Tunes like "Tom Boy," "Ballentine" and "Palomine" all build on familiar foundations, but screw things up just enough to keep it interesting.

Bettie Serveert will not become the temple of rock that, say, Winger has become, but this retooled offspring of De Artsen will delight dozens of record buyers worldwide. Enjoy.

Van Damme knife victim gets damages in court

Associated Press

FAYETTEVILLE, N.C. — A jury has awarded a man $487,500 in damages for injuries he sustained while filming a scene with actor Jean Claude Van Damme.

The lawsuit was brought against the actor by Jackson "Rock" Pinckney, a former soldier at Fort Bragg.

Pinckney says he was injured during the filming of the movie "Cyborg" in Wilmington four years ago. Pinckney, a bodybuilder who was hired as an extra for the movie, was struck in the left eye by a prop knife while filming a fight scene with Van Damme.

Lawyers for Pinckney say Van Damme was trying too hard to make the scene look realistic. The actor's lawyers say the injury was an accident.

The jury awarded Pinckney the money Thursday for compensatory damages.

Beyond Zebra brags, but delivers little talent

Tim Rissman
The Daily Iowan

It reminds its listeners of a familiar plot to a movie. A bad movie. Not as bad as some of our art students here at the UI are forced to watch, but bad.

A man enters. He's beat, and he's out of smokes with no means of getting more. His wife, bandanna in hair, starts shouting about what little Jimmy did in his absence. The man exhales, and without another word turns on his heel and walks out, never to be seen again. Curtain. A smattering of applause.

For music listeners, it will be a "plot" of equal depth tonight as Minneapolis band Beyond Zebra makes a stop at the Iowa City Yacht Club, 13 S. Linn St.

It's not that the music is bad (although a lot of it is). It's not that the vocals stink (even if they occasionally force you to sew your tests shut). Rather, it's just not very pleasant to listen to. It does have its moments, of course. A few of the songs from their Twin / Tone debut, Gone Today, Here Tomorrow (tooth, what a twist on words!) can be recommended. Whether or not a person can stomach the whole mess live is another story.

Their album rocks by numbers through the first side and into the second, before some of the monotony is finally released by quirky little songs like "Red T-Shirt" and "Not Anyone." By the time these rockers come along, you're tearing your hair out for even a decent B-side.

The mood of "My God, I've made it through!" was my emotion on finally finding these songs. And the album actually did close with something of a climax: a 1966

Nordic folk song that reminds me of spilling beer and friends slobbering on each other and shouting, "Oh, the times we've seen together, good friends and fools!"

Now I might be wrong, but my guess is that somebody in the deal to book this band did a little... shall we say, fibbing? Bands, I would guess, are not any more or less prone to exaggerating anything they have done than your typical job searcher. The fry-cook at Wendy's who supervises the spuds becomes the "Production Supervisor: Edibles," much the same way a college graduate with a 2.76 has a three-point.

So Beyond Zebra must be the premier band in Minneapolis, filling each bar they play with screaming hordes of hopped-up music lovers who walked two miles down Chicago Avenue in three-foot snow to see the band play music or drink milkshakes at Ember's. I mean, these guys have a following!

Really, they're not bad. But they're not so damn hot either, and I think they must know it. They seem to have a sense of humor about their music, whether it be titles of their songs ("The Monkey Brain Song"), the fun little story of their existence inside the jacket of their cassette ("After sending out thousands of promotional llamas we finally began to disgust this album for real") or their press release, which talks of how they went years changing members to get this sound, when you know damn well these absent members ran for the hills.

They might just surprise everybody and play a good show. But the smart money will go for other reasons and hope the music is adequate.

MUSIC

Kantorei to perform with choir tonight

Tim Rissman
The Daily Iowan

Kantorei and the University Choir, two choral groups from the UI School of Music, will share a concert tonight at 8 in Clapp Recital Hall on the UI campus.

Kantorei, the School of Music's premier vocal ensemble, will be conducted by William Hatcher, director of choral activities at the UI. The University Choir will be conducted by James Nowack, a graduate student in choral conducting. Graduate student Douglas O'Neill will be piano accompanist for both groups.

Kantorei will preview a program that they will present in San Antonio March 6 at the National Convention of the American Choral Directors Association. They will perform the "Tafellied" of Brahms, "Echo" by 20th-century French composer Georgy Sviridov, "Litany for Courage and the Seasons," composed in 1988 by David Maslanka and "Liberte" from the cantata "Figure Humaine," by 20th-century French composer Francis Poulenc.

Student soloists in the program will be Amy Butler and Barbara Buddin, altos; and Timothy Corday, tenor. The Maslanka piece will feature instrumental soloists Laurie Matzko, clarinet; and Jerry Carpenter, vibraphone.

The University Choir will perform Ralph Vaughan-Williams' "Serenade to Music" and the "Kyrie" of Felix Mendelssohn with the UI Chamber Orchestra. They will also perform the "Exultate Deo" of Alessandro Scarlatti and "Three Choral Settings" from "Alice in Wonderland" by Irving Fine.

The "Serenade to Music" will feature student soloists Jennifer White, soprano; Marie von Behren, alto; tenor Corday; Jeffrey Fields, bass; and guest artist Pamela Weest-Carrasco on harp. Graduate student Terri Snyder will be soprano soloist in one of Fine's "Alice in Wonderland" settings.

Kantorei was founded at the UI in 1973. Most of the 34 singers in the group are graduate students earning master's or doctoral degrees in choral conducting or voice.

Kantorei was selected to perform for the 1993 ACDA convention. A total of 35 choirs were chosen to perform during the three-day convention.

10th 'Wild Women' showcases Iowa talent

Sonja West
The Daily Iowan

Like fine wine, the acclaimed "Wild Women" variety shows promise to get better with age. The 10th "Wild Women" performance, "The Greatest Show on Earth," will be Saturday at Riverside Theatre, 213 N. Gilbert St.

The three-year-old concept offers a unique venue to show off some of the finest women artists Iowa has to offer. "The Greatest Show on Earth" features a completely new lineup of artists. The show includes Middle-Eastern dance, poetry, puppetry and several musicians.

The five acts in "The Greatest Show on Earth" are:

■ Deb Marguart, a classically trained former heavy-metal singer who will also perform rhythm and blues and original jazz poetry. Her vocals will be backed by multi-instrumentalist Peter Manesis. Marguart is also half of the duo "The Bone People."

■ Mary Swander, an award-winning poet whose books include "Driving the Body Back," "Succession" and "Parsnips in the Snow." Her past readings covered topics like condoms, natural insecticides and cows jumping on cars.

■ Marie Wilkes (a.k.a. Maleeha), a purveyor of the art of Middle-Eastern dance or "Danse Orientale." In addition to being a dancer, Wilkes is a touring artist and an educator.

■ Barbara Boyle and Laurie Haag, a musical duo that combines the contemporary folk of reggae diva Boyle with the multi-instrumental talents of Haag.

■ Monica Leo and Teri Jean Breitbach, puppeteers and founders of Iowa City's Eulenspiegel Puppet Theatre. Through Eulenspiegel, Leo and Breitbach have taken their art of puppetry throughout Iowa, the United States and overseas.

Susan Shore, "Wild Women" producer and founder, will emcee the show and perform an eclectic set of country and various other acoustical song styles.

Shore said the idea to organize a vehicle for local female performers came up casually a few years ago.

"A friend gave me the idea to have a concert with just women musicians," Shore said. "I said 'That's a great idea,' and promptly forgot about it."

Eventually she did organize a small "one-time only" show in February 1990 at Wild Bill's Coffee Shop.

"We had no idea what to expect," Shore said. "It was overflowing, people were waiting in the hall. It was all unexpected, a complete surprise."

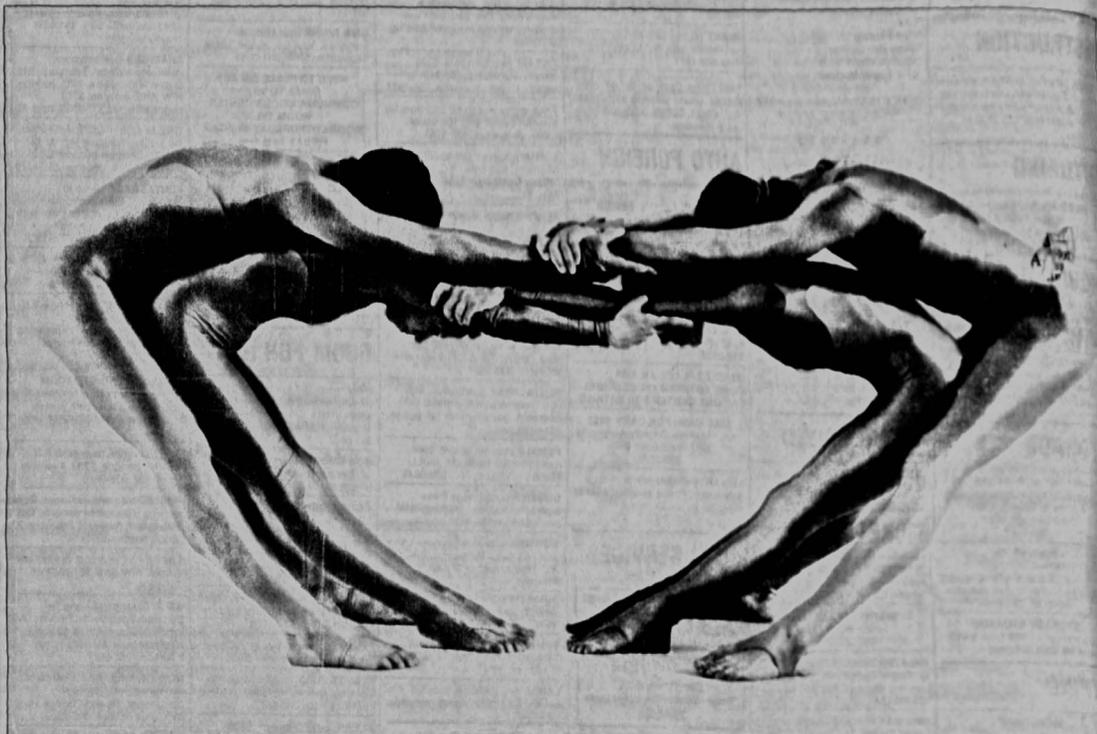

After two standing-room-only shows, "Wild Women" was moved to Riverside Theatre to allow more room for the audience.

Shore said the popularity of the shows, despite the limited advertising, demonstrates the public's interest in supporting female artists.

"There's always been a lot of support by the community for this show," Shore said. "I think there's a lot of support here for very strong women performers."

Performances of "The Greatest Show on Earth" will be held Saturday night at 6 and 9 at Riverside Theatre. Tickets are $7 and may be reserved by calling 338-7672.

HANCHER

Clemens Kalischer/Bonus

Both Pilobolus Dance Theatre and Hancher Auditorium are entering their third decades, and the two will celebrate their anniversaries together with a program that will include the world premiere of "Rejoyce — a Pilobolus Finnegans Wake" tonight at 8.

Pilobolus' 'Finnegans Wake' premieres tonight

Michelle-Therese Forcier
The Daily Iowan

If you've quivered at the thought of tackling James Joyce's "Finnegans Wake," perhaps you could warm up to the idea by seeing the Pilobolus Dance Theatre's premiere performance of "Rejoyce," at 8 p.m. Saturday at Hancher.

"Rejoyce," according to Jonathan Wolken, founder and one of the artistic directors of Pilobolus, is a loose interpretation of the Joyce book.

"Those who know the book will recognize it and those who don't will not miss something," he said.

Wolken said he believes the book "represents the culmination of a lot of Joyce's work."

"It represents a quest object, a strange attractor," Wolken said,

"if you're not thrown back by its density and impenetrability."

According to Wolken, the first task of the company in creating "Rejoyce" was to digest Joyce's book and understand it. The next task was "how to Pilobolize it."

Pilobolize. There is no other way to describe what this theater company does. The company even has its own terms for moves.

"Our work spans such a wide swath of stuff — abstract, architectural, sculpture (of the body), classic, theatrical, ingenious and naive. We don't base moves on traditional ballet," Wolken said. Regular terms in ballet would simply not fit much of what this group does.

Many call these dancers gymnasts or acrobats, and wrongly so, Wolken said. "We're not gymnasts, we're airborne — and often we do things that are upside down or very physical." Many make this mistake, Wolken added, because "a lot of dance is 'delicate.'"

Airborne? Yes, airborne. During "Rejoyce" the dancers will use suspension devices to make use of the space above the stage as well as on it — but Wolken would say no more, wanting to prolong the surprise until opening night.

"People who come to see the show should come with an open mind and an open eye," he said.

In addition to the "Finnegans Wake" premiere, which will rule half of the evening, the Pilobolus Dance Theatre will also perform an early signature piece titled "Pseudopodia," "The Particle Zoo" and the 1990 work "Clandestiny."

In conjunction with the premiere, a symposium on Joyce's "Finnegans Wake" and "Rejoyce" will be held today at 3:30 p.m. in the Terrace Room of the Union. Speakers will include Jonathan Wolken and Robby Barnett, the artistic directors of Pilobolus, and Jean Kimball, a Joyce scholar in the English department at UNI.

Discussion at the symposium will focus on the examination of self in "Finnegans Wake" and the interpretation of the book through dance.

"Rejoyce" incorporates excerpts from the book and distinct Irish music by Paul Sullivan. The costumes are by Fred Voelgel, lighting by Jane Reisman, and sets by Neil Peter Jampolis.

Tickets for Saturday's performance are available through Hancher Box Office.

Mayor to drop charges against Pickett

Associated Press

TEANECK, N.J. — Wilson Pickett has agreed to perform for free in exchange for Englewood Mayor Donald Aronson dropping charges that the singer threatened him while drunkenly driving across the mayor's lawn.

Pickett, who is Aronson's neighbor, said Wednesday in Teaneck Municipal Court that he would perform as his community service. The case had been shifted to Teaneck because Aronson appoints the judge in Englewood.

The Teaneck judge, James Young Jr., was satisfied with the agreement but said it must gain final approval from the Englewood court.

Pickett, best known for singing "In The Midnight Hour" and "Mustang Sally," was charged in May 1991. He still faces drunken driving and disorderly persons charges.

Press here for a great data processing career.

The right time. The right place. State Farm is hiring.

If you're a senior with a data processing, computer science or math background, there may be a very special career opportunity waiting for you in one of the largest corporate data processing facilities in the country.

There are actuarial and auditing jobs open, too.

Blue chip. Green light. State Farm is one of America's leading insurance companies. Through innovative marketing and a proud service tradition it has become the nation's leading auto and homeowner's insurer, and one of the top life insurance companies in the country.

You'll receive expert training. You'll work on state-of-the-art data processing equipment. You'll go as far and as fast as you can.

You couldn't have a more solid base to build a career on.
