Rural residents petition against airport expansion

Trendy Canser

The Daily Iowan

The program of moving the Iowa City airport into the I-80 corridor and westward of town has garnered three oppositions from those who may be affected.

Concerned about the noise, Bartlet and Clay County residents have decided to employ the facility relocation. Three petitioners have already signed the petition, which if approved by the City Council, will open the doors to a new airport. The petitioners believe that the move will reduce noise pollution and improve the quality of life for those living nearby.

Investigation leads to 3 drug arrests

Three Iowa City residents were arrested Saturday on drug charges following an investigation by the Johnson County Drug Task Force.

Carla E. Morrison, 25, 727 Ohio St. and two other persons with intent to deliver a controlled substance and possession of an unregistered firearm.

Michael J. Kline, 21, 112 N. 5th St. and two other persons with possession of a schedule 2 controlled substance with intent to deliver.

The three were arrested after a warrant was executed at Morrison's residence on Ohio Street.

If home has little damage after smoke alarm

Iowa City firefighters responded to a call at 1110 Fourth St. at the corner of Fourth and E. 13th St. found little or no smoke and determined that the fire was most likely a smoke alarm.

According to one source, the fire was accidental and caused by a short circuit in an electrical outlet. The blaze was quickly extinguished before it could cause further damage.

Board of Regent selection

Brad Stahn

The Daily Iowan

The current Iowa state Board of Regents is too political in its workings, according to Riva Neuhaus, Iowa City, and Mike Cheers, Iowa City. In hopes of altering the situation, they have proposed a new board with a more neutral approach.

Neuhaus, who owns a newspaper, said he believes the current board is too political. Cheers, who is a former city councilman, said he believes the current board is too ideological.

U.S. starts relief efforts with 1 million leaflets

SARAJEVO, Bosnia-Herzegovina — The U.S. military launched a major relief effort in besieged Sarajevo, dropping thousands of leaflets on the Bosnian capital.

NEW YORK — The FBI has recommended the city of Iowa City relocate to a site southeast of town.

The FBI's recommendation is based on the potential for a terrorist attack on the airport. The FBI's director, Robert Mueller, has warned that there may be a terrorist attack on the airport.

Street-widening plan to be discussed

Melrose Avenue residents have contested the plan to expand the street to four lanes.

Lynn M. Telft
The Daily Iowan

Iowa City City Manager Steve Adams and the City Council will decide tonight whether the city should continue planning to widen Melrose Avenue from two to four lanes.

However, even if the council votes affirmatively during tonight’s work session, it will not be an official vote. Adams said the city will nearly be authorized to further investigate the project, but the City Council meeting began with an agenda of business to be discussed.

In addition, the City Council accomplished its review of the Melrose City Planning staff has recommended the widening to accommodate traffic flow in Iowa City. American Planning and Zoning Director Jeff Donelson and the present, average capacity of 6,000 cars a day is expected by more than 10,000 by 2005.

The proposed widening has been mentioned from several Melrose residents, some of whom changed their minds at the Feb. 3 council meeting and had admitted alternative street plans to the city.

John Wonike, a U.S. professor of sociology and a Melrose Avenue resident, submitted a plan which would use a two-lane road to retain Melrose Avenue with Hawkins Drive next to University Heights.

"Our community needs to rethink our roads, Wonike wrote in his proposal. "To help us redirect traffic and make the street safer for pedestrians and vehicles, it would be a great idea to look at several plans that work in the northeast and move forward with the one that is the best for the neighborhood."}

Student smokers receive cold shoulder

"I don’t worry about anyone else speaking to me in a way that I am a smoker after I’m smoking," said Wonike.

"At least I don’t have to come up with creative excuses for why I smoke."

He also claims that smoking is "an elemental part of my being" and that he can’t smoke enough during the day to avoid being "hazed." He said it will be a struggle to stop when I try to quit smoking in certain places because there may be no other smokers there.

"I have found myself puffing away in the frigid air of an Iowa winter," he said.

"There’s a lot of people walking a lot of money on their cigarettes and they are probably addicted to nicotine."

"Instructors give you crap when they have been banished from building," he said.

"So do I."

Richard Potsbury, a psychology major, is a Melrose Avenue resident.

"It sucks," he said. "I have respect for my peers, but I don’t smoke as much as they do."

"I always end up buying the whole case of cigarettes," he said.

"It’s not fair," he said. "I have to buy a case of cigarettes because I can’t smoke enough during the day to avoid being "hazed.""

DEADLINE: Cascade, Iowa wrestling team thwarts purse snatcher in DM.

The Daily Iowan

The Associated Press

Iowa's wrestling team was thwarted Saturday by a quick-thinking wrestler who tackled a purse snatcher at a mall. The incident occurred at the Iowa High School Coaches Association wrestling meet in Des Moines.

The wrestler, who has not been identified, saw the woman in the mall and immediately confronted her. The woman fled, and the wrestler gave chase.

The wrestler managed to grab the woman's purse and returned it to the owner.

The incident is being investigated by local police.

The Ab-Strap, a device designed to take the strain off of the neck, isolating the abdominal muscles to a point where one can work out in a more comfortable manner. It was invented by Mitch Connor, a senior at the university. "I came up with the idea while working out with the Ab-Strap at local hardware stores, Connor said. "The invention is a takeoff on the Ab-Strap, which is a product addressing this need, Connor said. The profit he makes is only a part of why he enjoys the device, he added. "I love the response I get. People come up to me and know what I am because of it. I feel like I've made a contribution that is not just a gimmick to make money, but is actually helping people."

SHOOTOUT WITH CULTISTS leaves 4 dead, 14 hurt

Charles Richards

NEW YORK — A fierce gun battle Sunday between federal agents and followers of the Branch Davidians, a religious cult, left at least 14 people dead and 14 injured. At least 60 people are missing.

The battle broke out after a 51-member team of heavily armed federal agents tried to serve a search warrant to the cult compound.

Sixty-three people died in the shootout, including 16 cult members, 15 government agents, and 32 civilians.

The Branch Davidians, a cult led by David Koresh, have lived in the West Texas town of Waco for more than 20 years. They were accused of holding a large arsenal of weapons and incendiary devices.

The shootout ended with the death of Koresh, who was killed in a fiery explosion.

In a statement, President Bill Clinton said, "We are deeply saddened by these tragic events. Our thoughts and prayers are with the families of the victims and with the men and women of the federal agencies who lost their lives in this senseless violence."

The Branch Davidians had been suspected of possessing weapons and a large cache of weapons, including shotguns, machine guns, and hand grenades.

The government had issued a warrant for Koresh's arrest on charges of prohibited firearm possession.

In the early morning hours of Sunday, a team of federal agents from the Bureau of Alcohol, Tobacco, and Firearms arrived at the cult compound.

At least 15 heavily armed agents surrounded the compound and began firing on the cult members.

The cult members returned fire with their own weapons, causing a fierce gun battle.

The shooting lasted for several hours, during which time the cult members were killed, wounded, or captured.

The government later announced that 16 cult members died, including Koresh, and 15 federal agents were killed.

The shootout ended with the explosion of the cult's main building, which contained a large amount of fuel.

In the aftermath of the shootout, the government said it would continue to investigate the Branch Davidians and their activities.

In a statement, Attorney General Janet Reno said, "We will continue to pursue our investigation of the Branch Davidians and their activities. We will not tolerate anyone who uses violence to interfere with our nation's safety."

"We will continue to support the federal agents who lost their lives in this tragedy. Their sacrifice will not be forgotten."

The Branch Davidians were a cult led by David Koresh, who claimed to be the reincarnation of Jesus Christ.

They had lived in Waco, Texas, for more than 20 years, and were suspected of possessing weapons and incendiary devices.

8 children, 1 adult killed in 2nd Mich. house fire

John Fisher
Associated Press

Fire swept through an apartment building in the town of Ludington, Mich., Wednesday night, killing eight children, a 2-year-old girl and an investigator who was there to test the fire alarm system.

The fire, said to be one of the worst in many years, spread throughout the five-story building engulfed in flames shortly after 9:30 p.m. Students who had been studying all day were spread out across Bosnia to the countryside under cover of darkness. They flew more miles in 11 days to kill blind salmon and cattle.

"We're extremely concerned about the town's future, but all systems were lost in the process," said Fishman. "A fire code hearing was held today to discuss fire code changes we've made over the years. We're still waiting for a decision on that."
Hawks crush Wolverines fall hard, 71-34

Behind Pulliam's 18 points, Michigan State defeated Michigan, 71-34, Wednesday night at Crisler Arena.

The Spartans opened up a 31-16 lead in the first half and never gave the Wolverines a chance to get within 20 points the rest of the game.

"It was just a matter of time before that happened," said Pulliam. "We just knew we were going to make some baskets and put the game away."

The Spartans shot 50% from the field and 33% from three-point range. Their defense held the Wolverines to 30% shooting from the field and 26% from long range.

"We knew we had to come out with a lot of energy and try to disrupt their offense," said Pulliam. "We did a good job of forcing turnovers and getting easy baskets out of it."

Michigan State improved to 17-9 overall and 8-3 in the Big Ten, while Michigan fell to 11-15 overall and 4-7 in the conference.

"We're just not playing well enough right now," said Michigan head coach John Beilein. "We're not making shots and we're not getting stops on the defensive end."

Senior guard Stacie Sullivan led the Wolverines with 13 points, but it wasn't enough to overcome the Spartans' strong performance.

"Stacie did a good job of scoring in the paint," said Pulliam. "But we had five other players in double digits and that's the difference."

The Spartans will travel to Illinois on Sunday for a crucial conference game.

"We need to keep this momentum going," said Pulliam. "We have a good shot at winning the conference and we need to take care of business in Champaign."

North Carolina State's balance beam floor exercise routine, performed by Amy Bolton, was a highlight of the meet that was held Friday and Saturday in Iowa City.

The Wolfpack's floor quad was undoubtedly the highlight of the meet, according to Coach Tom Davis. "It was a beautiful, strong event for the Hawkeyes." The Wolfpack's floor quad, featuring a 9.60 in the second set and a 9.55 for the final scores for the meet, had a total score of 189-186.95, as Stengel took first on the beam with a score of 9.75.

 coach Tom Davis, who is happy to win and pleased with the team's performance in the meet, believes Iowa will continue to improve.

"We had too many mistakes," Davis said. "We have to improve in the future."

"I think we did well in the meet," Davis said. "We have to work on our mistakes and improve in the future."

In the heat of a debate, Sen. Foster Poster, a man of the people, is trying to make his point. But his words are met with a chorus of voices shouting down his every word. He begins to lose his patience, and eventually, he simply doesn't care anymore. He starts yelling and screaming, and soon people around him begin to react in similar ways. It's a scene that has become all too familiar in today's society.

The events leading up to this scene involve Sen. Foster Poster and a group of other politicians who are discussing a proposed budget cut. As the debate heats up, tempers flare, and everyone seems to be yelling and sulking away from each other. Sen. Foster Poster then begins to talk about how people are growing angrier and more frustrated by the political process, and he says that he doesn't have the time or the energy to keep fighting for what he believes in.

Sen. Foster Poster begins to feel like he's being overlooked by everyone around him. He starts to feel like he's losing his voice, and he begins to feel angry. He starts to yell and scream, and everyone around him begins to react in a similar way. The scene is a powerful depiction of the kind of violence and anger that can erupt in our society today.

Sen. Foster Poster then begins to talk about how this kind of anger can lead to people doing things that are not good for them, and how it can lead to people doing things that are not good for society. He says that he doesn't want to see this kind of violence continue, and he hopes that people will start to take a look at the kind of anger that is going on in our society and start to do something about it.

In the end, Sen. Foster Poster realizes that he can't change the world on his own, and he decides to take a step back and focus on his own life. He starts to reflect on the kind of person he wants to be, and he comes to the conclusion that he needs to focus on taking care of himself and his family.

This scene is a powerful depiction of the kind of violence and anger that can erupt in our society today, and it serves as a reminder of the importance of working together to create a better world.

Foreign film nominee first ever to be disqualified

"A Place in the World" was submitted by Uruguay, but was ruled a product of Argentina.

LOS ANGELES — An Academy of Motion Pictures Arts and Sciences voting committee on Monday disqualified the Uruguayan film "A Place in the World" as a product of Uruguay because its subject matter related to events in Argentina, which are considered to be part of the Uruguayan civil war.

"A Place in the World" was one of six films nominated for the Academy Award for Best Foreign Language Film. The film, directed by Maiwenn, tells the story of a Uruguayan mother who escapes the civil war in her country and seeks refuge in Argentina.

The Academy of Motion Pictures Arts and Sciences has a committee that reviews foreign language films submitted for consideration. However, the committee can only consider films that are produced in the country of submission.

The disqualified film was "The Ice Harvest," which is a Russian production. The film tells the story of a Russian mobster who returns to his hometown in the United States.

The Academy of Motion Pictures Arts and Sciences has disqualified films from other countries in the past. In 2015, the Academy disqualified a film from Cuba because it was produced in Spain.

The disqualified Uruguayan film was "Below the Surface," which is a Uruguayan production about a Uruguayan fisherman who is caught in a storm at sea.

The Academy of Motion Pictures Arts and Sciences has a strict set of rules for foreign language films. The films must be produced in the country of submission and must be submitted by the country of production.

The disqualified Uruguayan film was submitted by the Uruguayan Film Institute, which is responsible for submitting foreign language films to the Academy of Motion Pictures Arts and Sciences.
