Refugee policy brought before Supreme Court

WASHINGTON — The Clinton administration won a major victory today in the long-running controversy over refugeepolicy. The justices said the administration has been overly cautious in its handling of the situation, and that it should beallowed to proceed with its proposed changes.

The Supreme Court agreed to hear arguments in the case, which is expected to be decided by the end of the term.

President Clinton signed the bill into law, after a long and bitter debate in Congress. Critics had charged that the law would do more harm than good.

The president said, "I believe this is the most important legislation I have signed. It will help to ensure that refugees are treated with dignity and respect." He also expressed his thanks to Congress for its support.

The bill extends the policy of allowing refugees to come to the United States for five years, while Congress continues to consider the issue. It also provides funding for resettlement programs.

BUILDING UP EXPERIENCE
IC students earn credits for construction

William Pepper
The Daily Iowan
When a group of Iowan students sat in a high school classroom not so long ago, they were not there simply to attend a lecture. Instead, they were part of a team working to build a house.

"Every year, Iowan students build homes for low-income families," said Mark Stadtlander, executive director of the University of Iowa Habitat for Humanity. "This year, the team is working on a house for a family in Coralville." The house is located on 30th Street near the University of Iowa campus.

The team consists of 10 students, each of whom is assigned a specific role. These roles include architect, engineer, business manager, and more. Each student is responsible for completing a portion of the house, such as framing or painting.

"It's a great opportunity for students to learn about construction," said Stadtlander. "They get hands-on experience that they can use in their future careers." The students work on the house approximately 2 hours per week, and they are paid $10 per hour.

The team is managed by Stadtlander, who is responsible for coordinating the project and ensuring that all the necessary tasks are completed. The students work in teams of three, and each team is responsible for one room in the house.

"It's a great way to get experience in construction," said Stadtlander. "It also helps students understand the importance of teamwork." The team is expected to complete the house in about six months.

The Daily Iowan thanks the University of Iowa Habitat for Humanity for their help in constructing this house.
Activities for Women's Month

Barbara Glaister, president of the Iowa State Federation of Labor, said the Iowa Federation of Labor has been active in the Women's Month celebration plan for the past few years in order to "raise awareness to the value of women to the economy and society at large." She explained that one of the main objectives of Women's Month is to "highlight those women who have contributed to society and to promote activities that support women's issues.

The Federation of Labor has organized a variety of events to promote Women's Month, including workshops, seminars, and cultural activities. These events are designed to educate and inform attendees about the contributions of women to society and to promote gender equality.

The Federation of Labor has also partnered with other organizations to support Women's Month, including the Iowa Women's Network and the Iowa Department of Corporate Services. These partnerships have helped to increase the reach of Women's Month activities and to promote collaboration among different organizations.

The Federation of Labor encourages all Iowa residents to get involved in Women's Month activities. Whether you are a labor union member or not, there is something for everyone at these events.

For more information about Women's Month activities in Iowa, please visit the Iowa Federation of Labor's website or contact Barbara Glaister at bglaister@federationoflabor.org.

Bike tax to raise funds for trails

Thad Westfall

The Daily Iowan

Death and bicycle—lost at least one in a near-wreck. If a kilometer in the state Senate is approved, the fee on bicycle tires could be required to pay for trail maintenance. The fee would not be based on the original retail value of the bicycle, according to former state Senator James O’Keefe, R-Davenport. He said the fee would be based on a monthly tire maintenance tax, starting at $8 per tire for bikes between $100 and $200 and $15 for bikes over $200. People without the special sticker could be fined $100.

On the other hand, if one were to think about the revenue that would be generated from such a tax, the potential benefits might outweigh the negative impact on bicycle riders. However, this is purely speculative and would depend on a variety of factors including the number of bicycle riders and the actual amount of revenue generated.

Iowa professors to develop courses

Susan Kreiner

The Daily Iowan

A team of five professors from the University of Iowa, State University of New York at Stony Brook, and the University of Minnesota–Twin Cities is working on the development of courses for those interested in learning more about Iowa. The project was awarded a grant from the Fund for the Improvement of Higher Education, and is aimed at developing courses that will be offered online.

The project, titled "Iowa: Exploring Iowa," will involve the creation of a website that will provide information about Iowa's history, culture, and landscape. The website will be organized around specific themes, such as "Iowa's First Settlers," "Iowa's Natural Beauty," and "Iowa's Cultural Diversity."

The project is being led by a team of professors from the three universities, and is supported by a grant from the Fund for the Improvement of Higher Education. The website is expected to be launched in the fall of 2023.

DM neighborhood evacuated due to poisonous gas leak

Associated Press

DES MOINES — Part of the neighborhood west of the city was closed Monday and residents were asked to evacuate a severely populated area when a hazardous gas began leaking from a truck.

Resident materials officials were called to the scene, where the truck was leaking a gas identified as chlorine.

Officials said the driver of the truck was traveling on Interstate 25 when he noticed the leaking gas at 1:13 p.m., police said. He was taken to a nearby hospital for observation.

The truck continued to leak Monday afternoon. Hazardous materials officials were deciding if they should go in and remove the 10,000-citizens of the gas or wait until the gas escaped and there was no danger.

"We have to evacuate the area," said one of the officials. "We can't take any chances with this stuff."

UNION plans to replicate student loans

John King
Associated Press

PARK CITY, Utah - President Clinton pledged Monday to revitalize student aid, promising to create "savings bonds" to help students pay college bills and "repayment certificates" to replace student loans. The plan is an attempt to create a new generation of savers as well as a new generation of debtors. Clinton's plan is designed to boost vocations Federal student opportunities - and to reduce the number of students who need to work while attending college. Clinton, speaking in White Sulphur Springs, W.Va., also announced that the government will loan students up to $15,000 per year, with interest rates and repayment terms to be announced later. The president said his plan will replace current student loan programs and borrowing to students. The president set the bill to be signed into law this year. Clinton's plan includes the following:

- A "savings bond" program that allows students to save and invest in their education.
- A "repayment certificate" program that helps students pay off their loans.
- A "scholarship" program that provides financial assistance to students.
- A "loan forgiveness" program that allows students to have their loans forgiven after a certain number of years of teaching in certain fields.

Clinton's plan also includes the following:

- The plan would provide financial assistance to students who are attending college full-time.
- The plan would provide financial assistance to students who are attending college part-time.
- The plan would provide financial assistance to students who are attending college for the first time.
- The plan would provide financial assistance to students who are attending college as a second or third college.

The plan would also include the following:

- The plan would allow students to save money for college by investing in a government savings bond.
- The plan would allow students to save money for college by investing in a private savings bond.
- The plan would allow students to save money for college by investing in a mutual fund.
- The plan would allow students to save money for college by investing in a bank account.

In a report to the U.S. House of Representatives, Clinton said the plan would create "a new generation of savers as well as a new generation of debtors." The plan would also create "a new generation of financial aid as well as a new generation of financial aid." Lunacy and terror

Lunacy and terror are the targets of a two-week crusade, called "Lunacy and terror," launched by Congress. For 1992, 100 million resources needed for other important work were assigned by the Board of Regents at the University of Iowa. That year, the Board of Regents tried to satisfy its political supporters, and the Iowa Senate passed the bill. Because the Board of Regents is owned by the state, the governor and the legislature can control the budget, which is why the Board of Regents is owned by the state.

PARKING TICKETS, VIDEO OFFER LEADS IN BOMBING

An analysis of the event by the New York Times.

The blast, on Tuesday, March 2, 1993, occurred at 7:20 a.m. in the underground garage of the World Trade Center, near the south tower.

The bomb, which was set off by a tape recorder, exploded in a plastic bag, killing six people and injuring over 1,000 others.

The blast caused extensive damage to the center, including the collapse of the garage.

Several witnesses reported hearing a loud noise before the blast, and others described seeing a flash of light before the explosion.

The New York Times reported that the bomb was set off by a group of followers of the Islamic militant group, the Islamic Jihad.

The group had been previously linked to a series of attacks in the United States, including the bombing of the World Trade Center in 1993.

The blast was the deadliest恐怖袭击 in U.S. history at the time.

The investigation into the bombing was led by the Federal Bureau of Investigation (FBI), which spent over a year investigating the case.

The investigation led to the arrest of Ramzi Yousef, a member of the Islamic Jihad, who was later convicted of multiple counts of terrorism.

The FBI's investigation also led to the discovery of a second bomb that was set to explode in a different part of the garment district.

The second bomb was never detonated, but the discovery of both bombs helped officials understand the scale of the threat.

The investigation into the bombing led to a significant increase in security measures at public buildings and transportation hubs.

The blast was a major setback for the United States, which had been hoping to emerge from the shadow of the Cold War and the threat of terrorism.

The blast was also a wake-up call for the United States, which had been slow to respond to the threat of terrorism.

The United States responded with increased security measures and a focus on international cooperation in combating terrorism.

The blast was a turning point in the United States' approach to terrorism and helped set the stage for the creation of the Department of Homeland Security in 2002.

The blast also had a major impact on the world, as it was one of the first major terrorist attacks in the United States and served as a reminder of the threat that terrorism poses to the U.S. and the world.

Iowa men's basketball coaches are happy about this year's schedule.

The Hawkeyes, currently riding a five-game winning streak, face the challenge of playing against some tough opponents in the Big Ten. But Davis wants his team to understand that every game is important in generating buzz for the upcoming NCAA tournament.

The Lady Vols are coming off a tough loss to Tennessee, but they are still considered one of the top teams in the country. Iowa needs to make sure they are prepared for the challenge.

The Big Ten tournament is scheduled for March 21-25 in Chicago. The winner will be guaranteed a spot in the NCAA tournament.

"It's hard to believe that," added Davis, "but we've got the combination of players, the league, the people, the ball, the way we're playing. We're as good as we've been in a while, and I don't think that's a bad thing at all."

and Florida State had some talented players, but, in the end, Wilbekin has shown he can make the difference when he needs to.

davis has been a key figure in helping Florida State reach the tournament. Davis, who averaged 16.9 points per game last season, has been a key player for the Seminoles throughout the season.

"I think it's going to be a great game," Davis said. "I think we're going to play our best game and give the best shot we can. But at the same time, I think we're going to have fun and enjoy the experience."

The Seminoles have a chance to make some noise in the tournament. With Davis leading the way, they have the talent to make a deep run. But they also know they need to play well to have a chance to advance.

Steinbrenner returns to Yankees

Ben Walker

FORT LAUDERDALE, Fla. — The New York Yankees are making a decision on their managers this week.

With an air of impending barb, Yankees GM Brian Cashman spoke about how things are in the stands early for his arrival, George Steinbrenner, back in baseball Monday.

"It's a great moment," Cashman said.

Steinbrenner, whose team is in fifth place, said he was "very impressed" with the team's first week in spring training, but he added that he had some "concerns" about the team's performance.

Cashman said Steinbrenner's return is "a great moment for the Yankees and baseball fans." He added that Steinbrenner was "very happy to be back in the game."
