Shabazz speaks of new challenge for future leaders

Terry Galvin

The Daily Iowan

Judgmental eyes and probing thoughts came from all directions when first lady Hillary Rodham Clinton made her way to town during the Fourth Estate Banquet on Friday, the final event of the National Association of Black Journalists media conference.

The daughter of Anna Raoul LaFond, former first lady, and the widow of slain civil rights leader Malcolm X, addressed the students as young intellectuals and future leaders who need to be nurtured and instilled with a sense of history.

"You will never fail to understand the challenge of world leaders," she said. "We expect the thought of hearing world leaders without your own orientation.

Shabazz said change cannot occur without action. When she received a question from a student at the event, she added that experience is needed for change.

"At the top of the menu was brought," Shabazz told the audience not to be turned off by the term change, but instead to find ways to implement it.

Shabazz also said that racism is a product of this generation.

"We're so used to rise in racism and the rise in racism from the three fronts within the forest," she said. "We are psychologically prepared to accept the changes of our lives or the changes we have been made.

Shabazz told the audience that they have to be dealt with from the root of the issue, that the issue of racism cannot be lived by what they do in their jobs.

She said that it is extremely important for people to learn to be open to racism.

"Malcolm and we are who we are because of it," she said.

Film prompts council to review procedures

Rawlings said while the film did not in itself reflect upon the fact that it was not in violation of UI policy, the question was raised about what they were going to do with the situation.

The council has asked the student to be involved in the new council and the student to take the suggested policy change to the faculty in their college.

The charge to the committee is in response to a film which contained elements of homophobia, and the film was shown in a classroom in a public school.

The new council will review current procedures and recommend policies, said the Administrative Committee member.

They will then report to the dean of the college, and the student will take the suggested policy change to the faculty in their college.

The problem in the university is that it is not in violation of UI policy, but the question is whether they should be involved in the new council.

New fashion trends influenced by 1970s

Popular apparel reminiscent of the 1970s is returning to the fashion scene of the 1990s.

Sara Epstein

If you want to get acquainted with the styles of the '70s, you should pay a visit to some old shops. The atmosphere is quite different from the new ones. At some stores, the shoppers are hipsters and are looking for something new. At other places, the clothes are a throwback to the '70s era. The price range is also quite different. In some cases, you can find clothing that is similar to what people wore in the '70s.

While these fashion icons of the past are being rediscovered, some young shoppers say they are interested in the styles of the '70s. They feel that the '70s were a time of innocence and freedom. The young shoppers are looking for a sense of adventure and fun.

For us senior Daisy Burner, an advertisement in "The Iowan," for "Colette's" in Coralville, was a taste of the good old days. I was just a little girl when I used to go there with my mother. They had a special menu for kids. I remember eating roast beef and potatoes. I was in love with those dishes.

"It’s all been updated, just influenced by that period. There are a number of different interpretations of the clothes items as body suits, bell-bottoms and bell sleeves."

Iowa lawmakers can't compromise on smoking policy for Statehouse

Mike Glover
Associated Press

The Iowa Senate on Thursday decided to ban smoking in the Rotunda, the area tourists visit, and in two other areas of the statehouse.

The Iowa House did not act on the similar measure, and the two chambers have not yet set aside designated smoking areas.

That would be where the issue would end, except there are some areas of the Statehouse which are largely controlled by the House and Senate. These include the Rotunda, where lobbyists and tourists gather each day, and a dizzying room reserved for lawmakers.

Since the session opened, negotiations over a comprehensive bill to ban smoking in the Statehouse have been ongoing. There are no smoking rules for the Rotunda, but some have set aside designated smoking areas.

There is more than one reason to ban smoking in the Rotunda, sending that proposal to the Senate. There's more than one reason lawmakers have been searching for a compromise in the past. Iowa House Speaker Hal Blakely has decided to insist on some sort of process for the Senate, which has not set aside designated smoking areas.

The Cow has adopted tough rules banning smoking in all areas of the statehouse. The House has not set aside designated smoking areas.

A wild idea

Iowa's nongame wildlife is sustained almost solely through the Lighting of a few dollars that is the Iowa Department of Natural Resources Nongame Program is almost entirely dependent on funds received through the voluntary Chickadee Checkoff on state tax forms. Other Midwestern states fund their programs through a percentage of sales and service transfer fees, vehicle registration fees or the general fund. The nongame program is intended to maintain diversity in Iowa's natural species, create public awareness, appreciation and understanding of nongame species, attract additional habitat, reduce the tax dollars fast approaching, should not forget to note the following.

The Chickadee Checkoff is in its 11th year with donations from Iowa residents. The program is currently in support of efforts to help maintain Iowa's nongame wildlife, which accounts for over 80 percent of all animal species in the state. It is often the insignificant species that decline, perhaps attributable to the economic problems of the past decades. More recently, attempts were made to include the nongame contributions with the general fund or eliminate the tax checkoff altogether. No bill has been introduced or suggested which would limit or eliminate the Chickadee Checkoff, however, and all donations continue to fund the nongame program.

The program has contributed to the revital of the Silver Eagle Program. Silver Eagles, or the Little Brown Flying Squirrels, were included as part of the program in 1982. Participation in this program has increased over the years. The program supports other efforts, fuel, fish and amphibians through companion programs such as those supporting the diabetic, truffle and bumble bee. Benefits to the entire state, as well as to the nongame species, have been associated with the program.

In addition to donating through your tax form, you are being actively involved in the nongame issue through thenongame checkoff. It is important for us to support efforts to maintain our nongame wildlife. We should be proud of our participation in this program and work together to ensure the future of Iowa's nongame wildlife.

Dear City Council Members

As I am sure you are aware, the Iowa City Community Center is facing a financial crisis. The State of Iowa has recently announced that they were improperly left off of the city's property tax bill, which is a direct hit to the AV and bridge reconciliation.

In regard to the impact this has on our neighborhood and on the community as a whole, I strongly believe that the people who reside here should be aware of this situation. We have worked hard to maintain a sense of community and I am concerned that this may be at risk.

I urge you to consider this issue further and to take any necessary steps to ensure the future of the Community Center.

Sincerely,

Beliefs should not be winning in elections

I have a distinct impression that we are becoming a country where beliefs are not only ignored but considered as a skid mark on the road to becoming a better country. I believe that people should have the right to believe whatever they want, but that does not mean it should be forced on anyone. I believe that no one should be forced to believe anything, and that everyone should have the right to their own beliefs.

Strip-farming leaves nonrenewable topsil

To the Editor:

Recently, you have covered the topic of strip-farming in your paper. I am concerned that this method of farming is not sustainable and that a better, more environmentally friendly solution is needed.

I believe that strip-farming is not a viable option as it relies on the use of nonrenewable resources, such as fossil fuels, to power the machinery used in the process. This not only has a negative impact on the environment, but also on the economy as these resources are finite and will eventually run out.

I urge you to consider the benefits of alternative farming methods, such as organic farming, which rely on renewable resources and have a lower impact on the environment.

Sincerely,

In the letter to the editor, Hudson petitions for full justice for Palestinians. Hudson claims that these individuals are not considered human and have been subjected to systematic violations of their human rights. He argues that the Bush presidency was responsible for these violations, and that the war in the Middle East only serves to perpetuate violence and terrorism.

Critique of Hudson's argument

Mr. Hudson's argument is flawed in several ways. First, he does not provide evidence to support his claim that Palestinians are not considered human. Second, he conflates political ideology with the protection of human rights. Granting persons in occupied territories the same legal rights as those in a sovereign state is not equivalent to granting them the same status as citizens of a sovereign state.

Bush is owed an apology

I recently read an article about Mr. Bush's response to the attacks of September 11th. In the article, Mr. Bush apologized to the people of America for the loss of life and property that occurred in the attacks. However, Mr. Hudson seems to have forgotten that Mr. Bush is not responsible for the actions of the terrorists who perpetrated the attacks.

Fighting over gun control heating up

John King
Associated Press
WASHINGTON — With an eye on the White House for the first time in years, gun control advocates are stepping up their political organizing, emboldened by the survival of the state battle with a gun lobby once considered invincible. The tenacity of the state battle, which President Clinton played up Monday with paired criticisms of the National Rifle Association, will test the NRA's absolute opposition to restrictions that could place armed forces at the front of line in the states' impending political struggle. For example, some Virginia House members complained about the NRA's absolutes and what they considered strong-arm tactics before adopting a measure last week to limit handgun purchases. With Clinton's support, heavily armed weapons could soon become

Gun Control Proposals

In some examples of state gun control proposals:

- At least 13 states have enacted "two strikes and you're out" disenfranchisement laws. At least six states now have measures that would limit gun purchases for图案的controls.

- Each state has its own gun control laws, but many have similar provisions.

- Some states have enacted "no-go" zones where firearms are prohibited.

- The federal government has enacted the Brady Bill, which requires background checks for gun purchases.

- The National Rifle Association has been fighting back with lawsuits and other tactics.

The Wolverines trailed 16-14 with 11:31 left in the period, but Iowa couldn't put together a sustained run, "The Wolverine" says.

Michigan sees playing with Foster and Iowa. "What I've heard is that Iowa is a team that can be beaten," Foster said. "When we played them this year, we were able to contain them."

The Wolverines will be facing a tough opponent in Iowa. "We've got a man hurt and artery, then inflating a tiny plastic then we had to clear out the obstruction .

The best run we put at them, they handled and went on their own run, "Iowa led the game over 113 times but lost in the end. Webber had scored at least 19 points in 29 straight games, but had to sit out this game.

But Marci is a better rebounding player than chocolate, so in a majorcba, we will be able to win the game.

Hurley set to break assist mark

David Dorenbak
Associated Press

DURHAM, N.C. — All-Bobby Hurley fans will have to be patient Wednesday night and for the next three games.

The Duke point guard, however, has been anything but patient in the last three games. Hurley made 11 assists against Maryland to break the mark of 1,197 set by North Carolina's Ed Cota in 1986. Hurley and Cota share the ACC record.

Hurley and Cota are the only two players in ACC history to record more than 1,100 assists.

Hurley, averaging 11.5 assists per game, has been the ACC's assist leader since his freshman season in 1989-90. He has scored more points than assists in just two games.

"I have responded to 10 and 15 points in his last three games," Cota said.

Hurley, the all-time NCAA scoring leader and ACC tournament MVP, had his second career assist on a left-handed pass to Hurley at the top of the key, thus sparking more passing teams.

"I have responded with 10 and 15 points in his last three games," Cota said.

"That record really reflects the kind of season we've had and how the rest of the team has scored. We've scored as much as any other team in the last three games." Hurley said.

Hurley will be the NCAA's all-time leader, Chris Corchiani holds the mark with 1,197.

Duke point guard Bobby Hurley (15) looks for an open teammate against Maryland to break the ACC record.
