Common ground on spending cuts found

Alam Fran

WASHINGTON — The White House and conservative House Republicans reached a compromise on President Clinton's deficit-reduction package — but only those three they believe can muster enough support.

One possibility now-conservative officials were pursuing: linking annual education spending reductions, except federal Security, with other cuts, before the rate of inflation.

Senator Republicans tried meekly to push the concept even further Wednesday, proposing that their deeper spending cuts pay for an expansion of unemployment insurance.

The biggest-cutTING strategy, which emerged from a meeting of conservative lawmakers and White House budget director Leon Panetta, did not lead off a possible rebellion. Finally, conservatives, Democrats who won Clinton's package out to KONOLY, Page 4.

WACO, Texas — Federal agents appeared to have waited in vain for a long time for the end of a standoff with a heavily armed religious cult led by a retired Marine lieutenant colonel who has taken over the church.

Two elderly women who lost their lives in the four-day standoff include a 61-year-old co-founder and a 13-year-old child, who had been his adopted son.

Negotiations continued Wednesday.

A day after Koresh had promised to immediately peace­fully end the standoff after a deadline statement by the federal agents, Koresh refused to honor his promise and has indicated he will keep his promise to come out only when he receives further instructions from God. FBI agent Jeffrey Williams was on the first floor for reports told that Koresh had been told he could come out but had left with no further word.

The siege began Saturday, and Koresh has threatened to kill a fellow member of his cult.

As night fell Tuesday, officials said Koresh had been negotiating for more than 100 followers and a "massive weapons cache" inside the fortified compound.

Program gives students safe walk home at night

Sara Epstein
The Daily Iowan

If you live in a west-side area of Iowa City, when you don’t exactly know how far your neighbors will be, or how late you will be, just walk home alone. Well, fear no more if you live in Iowa City. A new pilot program called SAFEWALK will provide escort for those downtown residents having to walk home late at night.

The Coordinator and IA Advisor, Michele Rivera, said that residents have volunteered to set an escort for those not wanting to walk home alone.

Pets make fur fly between tenants

Many renters want a furry friend despite what their leases say.

Karen West
The Daily Iowan

For many University housing pets isn’t a fairly easy deal, but most landlords aren’t too keen on the idea of the furry friends even if it is their way.

Michele Coleman has been a tenant at the Iowa City Commons for two years. She and her roommate, Val Blum, have a cat named Mike that was born during the summer of 2002. Mike was the only cat in the building until Blum moved in.

"We've only had the cat on campus for the second year, and he's never caused a problem," Coleman said. "We've had our cat since he was a kitten. We take him outside every day so that he doesn't cause any problems in the building."

Blum explained that in the middle of their time there, there was an incident where they had to remove the cat because it was not only a potential fire hazard, but also a potential danger to the tenants and landlords.

"We had to take Mike to the vet and keep him in a cage," Blum said. "We couldn’t keep him in the building."

Maytag seeks oldest washer for 100th anniversary

Associated Press

MAYTAG CORPORATION — Maytag Co. is seeking the oldest operating washer in the country to celebrate its 100th anniversary.

The company is offering a $1,000 award to the owner of the oldest operating Maytag washer. The winner will be selected through a contest.

"We’re looking for the oldest, well-loved Maytag washer that has been passed down through the generations," said Bob Berrard, director of marketing and communications for Maytag.

The contest is open to anyone in the United States who owns an eligible Maytag washer.

Maytag will select the oldest washer based on the age of the machine, the number of people who have used it over the years, and the history behind the current owner.

The winner will also receive a personal pick-up service for their washer to be picked up and returned for a special ceremony.

The contest closes on March 31, 2023, and the winner will be announced on April 1, 2023.

Aid-system change may hurt students

Chet Parsons
The Daily Iowan

The university's move to a merit-based system for financial aid programs should benefit middle-class families, many reviewers have said; therefore, many reviewers have said; the process changes might have a detrimental effect on lower-income families.

"I think this simplest answer to say right now is that the effect on lower-income families is going to be worse," Parsons said. "That's the problem is the deficit. The problem that Congress did not support us to have to pay for these increased costs.

According to current reports, the Federal Pell Grant, which is the primary federal grant program, is drawing all $41 billion shortfall for the 1995-1996 academic year.

"A concern with the shortfall is that the only way it is eating away at the Pell Grants and affecting the number of people who can get aid, but it is also affecting the ability of people to get other education and financial aid initiatives going," Parsons said.

Although the Higher Education Amendments authorized an increase in the maximum size of the Pell Grant from $1,200 to $2,500 for the most academic, Congress only appropriated a maximum of $2,500 per grant, down $100 from last year.

"Even though the movement of 60 cents down or up the matter is there was no problem with those cost," Parsons said. "We do see in the introduction future is light at the end of the tunnel, such that there is a growing of give away between the maximum $3,100 Pell Grant and what has been appropriated.

Changes in the federal-aid programs also came as eligibility requirements for Pell Grants were increased.

"You've got more students qualifying for the Pell Grants, so it's going to impact someone," said the president. "The question is they are going to drop down the number of people who are qualified with that to the number of, in the future, is the lower limit of the fiscal grant.

The possibility of smaller Federal Pell Grants would negatively affect a lot of students, and less senior Torres said. "But it's unfair for the government to reduce the amount of our Pell Grants, because the students receiving them must on the money to pay for their college expenses," she said. "It's on the students.

3-D movies offer new method for teaching surgery

Victoria Felton

Back in the '80s, watching three-dimensional movies was all the rage. Friday night, now by watching 3-D movies, surgeons may be able to look at the inside of a patient's eye without having to undergo surgery.

"We're getting closer to performing surgery without having to do surgery," said Brad Hahn, professor of surgery, relates to the use of 3-D imaging. "Our ability to have an accurate view of the eye is important," he said.

In order to learn eye surgery, a physician must have a treatment for diseases of the eye, but a corpuscular method of seeing the eye is much better than a traditional technique.

"If we were to have a treatment for diseases of the eye, we could then test to get a more realistic view of the eye," he said.

According to current reports, the surgery is improved in the eye, but instead of cutting through a microscope that magnifies the eye itself, the surgeon is now performing the surgery through a 3-D microscope that magnifies the eye.

Ernest Horn school plans playground renovation

William Pepper
The Daily Iowan

As part of the school's playground and park facilities for Ernest Horn Elementary School in the Heights community, the Horn Elementary School PTO is undertaking an extensive fund-raising project.

This fall, the PTO received a $25,000 donation from a retired teacher and former Horn Elementary student. The donation was the result of a request made by Harvey Sunderrush, who has been a resident of the Heights for 40 years. Harvey said the PTO may also grant funds to the community.

The PTO is also seeking grants from various government agencies and foundations. The goal is to raise $50,000 for the renovation project.

The Horn Elementary School PTO is made up of parents, teachers, and community members who are dedicated to improving the school's playground facilities.

The PTO has set up a website for the project and is utilizing social media to promote the renovation efforts. They are looking for community members to volunteer and support the project.

The project is scheduled to be completed by the end of the school year.
Official found guilty of violating public access law

Judge Rod Dunlap, Iowa County jury foreman, asked Dunlap at a March 19 hearing about job advertisements she believed violated Affirmative Action guidelines. During his testimony, Dunlap said he had been covertly meeting with the public, which was not allowed under Iowa Code, which concerns examination of public records by delaying job applicants. When Dunlap was called to the stand, the Iowa County jury foreman told the judge he would make public the records available in his office. When asked why she did not keep the records, Judge Rod Dunlap ruled he was guilty of violating the public access law.

The single-payer care

A trend in American health-care systems is the move towards single-payer care. It's argued that this approach can provide better health outcomes at a lower cost than the current multi-payer system.

However, critics of single-payer systems argue that they would lead to reduced access to care and increased bureaucracy. The debate continues as lawmakers and policymakers grapple with the complex issue of health care reform.

Bad hamstring hampers Jackson

Associated Press

Be Jackson's return to baseball has been like the departure, Playing for the Los Angeles Dodgers - doing something he loved - and trying to get better at it, he worked extra hard at physical therapy, going out twice as often as a Chicago Cub for a hamstring injury Wednesday.

"I wasn't supposed to go," general manager Jim Schaffer said of Jackson, who had pulled a muscle Friday.

In his first at bat against White Sox starter Jamie Broyhill, Jackson slipped coming out of the box and hit a ground ball to the left side. He pivoted around to field the ball and was taken down by the rapier.

"That was enough," Jackson said. "I don't cut the legs on the left side. I hit one about a foot off the ground."

Jackson went 0 for 1 and had to end his night. He underwent a replacement for an injury sustained playing baseball like the Los Angeles Angels two years ago.

"I can't hang in longer than these hours," Jackson said, "but I'll be back."

The White Sox have until March 15 to decide whether to pick Jackson back on its roster for the 1993 season. In the meantime, Jackson agreed to a $100,000 major-league salary for 1993.

At Port Charlotte, Fla., the Indians announced that Tim Cottrell and Jeri Rohde, the Cleveland Indians' top two minor league manager, have been named to lead the Gulf Coast League teams.

Green, who hit .306 in home runs with 47, had asked the Braves to keep him for two more years, after having made $600,000 but considering one of the game's best-hitting numbers.

In Baltimore, Orioles owner Eli Fishman was invited to make an opening pitch at the April 1 game against the Orioles.

Jim Brown, who has 36, has given his fans the time to select one of the game's best-hitting numbers.

Green continued internal heat. Although Ron Schueler, the owner of the North Stars, and Wednesday's Only Minnesota Twins owner, will or will not, according to the reports, will make the team.

Until this date, there is nothing to select one of the game's best-hitting numbers.

"When they will be ready, I don't know if they will be able to come up for today's opener or not," Brown added. "But they will still be on the front page for the rest of the season."

Jackson has spent much of the past year trying to restructure his finances in negotiations with handshakes and attorneys, having completed on more than the $4 million in loans and personal guarantees he had.

His Baltimore County home recently was sued and at an auction, and there is a possibility that selling the Orioles is the only way he can pull himself out of debt.

After testing positive for steroids, Canada's Ben Johnson was stripped of this 1988 Olympic gold medal, which was then awarded to American Carl Lewis, notes left. According to a Toronto newspaper, Johnson may have taken another drug test in January.

Dr. Ignaczak may ban Johnson for life

Associated Press

LONDON - Ben Johnson could be banned for life by the governing commission of world's track and field governing body, which will meet in Paris on Friday to discuss his latest alleged incident of drug cheating.

Johnson, stripped of the gold medal he won for 100 meters in Seoul in 1988 after testing positive for steroid metabolites, reportedly failed a test on Thursday.

The International Amateur Athletic Federation governing commission, which was formed to discuss several cases, includes a positive test for steroids on Johnson, who won the Olympic 100-meter race last year.

Johnson, 24, finished second to former Olympic 100-meter champion Ben Johnson, 45, in Toronto.

The Canadian athlete said he was tested in the Olympic village in Seoul, he denied knowingly using any banned substance, sparking the two-year saga that has engulfed the Canadian sprinter.

Johnson at 1988 Olympic Games. "Over 50 and 60 meters, he was 0.04 seconds off world records and his 200-meter time was 0.37 seconds off world mark. It was a tremendous display, but we're not sure how much of the performance was due to being drug-free, because we don't have enough evidence to say that. But we're confident we have the key to his third year with the team, and we won't let out in any of the games we've won. We won't let it go."

As far as his feelings about possibly missing their Olympic inspiration, the team said, "It's not a pretty sweet win," says O'Brien. "It doesn't mean much, but we'd be nice because it's something we've won, and worked hard for."

Tom Dressen, 22, hockey club player

"Everyone else in our league has money, and money to carry their team. We're in a different boat."

"It's never been very important to carry a club, but when you can't, it's something we've won, we've worked for."

Grammy Award-winner Laura Williams, who recently starred in the critically acclaimed musical "Rent," will be on campus this week to head a marathon dancing competition.

"Rent," the musical, was written by Williams and her husband, Jonathan Larson, who passed away last year during the production of the show.

Williams will be on campus to head a marathon dancing competition, which she described as a "danceathon" of sorts.

"I'm really excited to be here," she said. "I've always been a fan of the show and I'm really looking forward to working with the students."
ARMY WANTED
NO 'EVIL DEAD III'

Director Sam Raimi takes a lighter, campier approach in his third film with the "hero"

Ash
John Shipley
The Daily Iowan

This time, the hero is a full-fledged greenhorn. He's a Charley's Angels from Outer Space who's found himself in the library of a very scary house.

The hard work of director Sam Raimi's two "Evil Dead" pictures may be characterized by his name in the series: "Army of Darkness." It is not in the writing, but in the production. The hero is a solution.

Raimi has said the third "Evil Dead" was a somewhat academic exercise in over-the-top horror, calculated as much to make money as to mean anything. "Army of Darkness" is not in that vein. Its hero is a character created by Raimi to boost his production company.

The story is told from the viewpoint of Ash Williams, played by Bruce Campbell. Ash (the hero from the previous two films) returns to find the house of his ancestors' skeletons and the evilBook of the Dead that caused the first two movies to explode.

The film's opening scene, of Ash and his sidekick, is a nod to the horror movie "The Exorcist," and the film's closing scene is a homage to "The Rocky Horror Picture Show." The film is filled with memories of the past, including a reference to the director's first degree of theater and film. The film is primarily a campy horror movie, but it also contains elements of comedy.

The film's central plot involves the heroes' battle against Evil Dead, a force that seeks to conquer the world. Ash and his friends must confront the forces of darkness to save humanity.

The film is a blend of horror and comedy, with many laughs throughout. The film uses a variety of methods to entertain, including visual gags and clever editing.

The film's strongest points are the actors, who deliver memorable performances. Bruce Campbell, who plays Ash, is particularly impressive and delivers a range of emotions with precision.

"Army of Darkness" is a fun, campy horror movie that is sure to please fans of the genre. It is a worthwhile addition to the "Evil Dead" series and a testament to Raimi's ability to create entertaining and memorable films.

Gram Parsons biographies, CDs pay tribute to country-rock father

John Kuperan

The Daily Iowa

Though they may not know it, many New Country fans owe their appreciation to a dead Georgia- born singer songwriter and musician named Gram Parsons.

Parsons was born on November 7, 1946, in Tallahassee, Florida, but grew up in Iowa City, being raised by his parents, Eleanor (nee Parson) and William "Bill" Parsons. Parsons' mother grew up in Des Moines, and his father was a shipyard worker. Parsons was the only child of his parents. He attended West High School in Iowa City, where he was a talented athlete and musician. Parsons also attended the University of California, Los Angeles, and later graduated from the University of Southern California. Parsons began his career as a singer songwriter, and he is credited with being one of the pioneers of the country-rock genre.

Parsons' influence on the country-rock genre cannot be overstated. He was one of the first to incorporate elements of folk and rock music into his songs, and his use of both acoustic and electric guitars contributed to the genre's unique sound. Parsons is often credited with popularizing the use of pedal steel guitar in country music, and he was the first to prominently feature the pedal steel guitar in his music. Parsons' use of spacey, atmospheric guitar tones and his ability to create memorable melodies and hooks earned him the respect of both fans and fellow musicians.

Parsons' career was cut short when he died in a plane crash near the Grand Canyon on November 19, 1973. Despite his short career, Parsons is remembered as one of the most influential musicians of the country-rock genre. His music continues to inspire and influence musicians today, and his legacy lives on through his recordings and the many tribute albums that have been released in his honor. Parsons' music is a testament to his talent and his ability to create music that is timeless and unforgettable. His influence on the country-rock genre cannot be overstated, and he is revered by many as one of the greats of the genre. Parsons' music and his legacy continue to inspire and influence musicians today, and he will always be remembered as one of the most influential musicians of the country-rock genre.
