2 arrested in connection with twin-tower bombings

Rick Hampson
Associated Press

NEW YORK — A man described as a follower of a radical Muslim cleric was arrested Thursday in last week's World Trade Center bombing when he coolly tried a third time to reclaim a rental deposit on the van determined to have housed the bomb.

Other suspects were being sought in what prosecutor Gilmore Childres called "the single most destructive act of terrorism ever committed on America soil." The motive remained unclear.

"This investigation clearly is not finished, but a large first step has been taken," James Fox, FBI chief in New York, said at a news briefing Thursday night.

Mohammed A. Salameh, 25, was charged with aiding and abetting the bombing and a fire that followed, and with transportation of explosives across state lines. The Jersey City, N.J., resident was ordered held without bail and faces life in prison if convicted.

The arrest was a sudden, major break in the most notorious U.S. bombing in years. Just a day earlier, the FBI had said it could take months to crack the case.

The van Salameh rented was the one that carried the bomb, the FBI said in an affidavit filed with the court. Charred fragments of the van — including an axle with a traceable identification number — were recovered at the blast site.

The affidavit also said a search of a Jersey City apartment with a bomb-sniffing dog turned up bomb-making equipment including wiring and manuals on circuitry and electro-magnetic devices. On the rental agreement Salameh had given the phone number for that apartment; it wasn't immediately clear whether Salameh lived there.

Salameh, in federal court in New York City on Thursday night, appeared calm and relaxed as an interpreter read the charges to him in Arabic. The bearded man nodded to his attorney but didn't appear to speak. The court-appointed defense lawyer, Robert Precht, asked for $5 million bail.

Papers that the suspect presented the rental agency several days ago were covered with nitrates, a government source, speaking on condition of anonymity, told The Associated Press. Nitrates are found in some explosives; traces of nitrates were found at the blast site.

Friday's blast in a garage beneath the twin towers killed five people, injured more than 1,000, left one missing and sent fear through the nation's largest city. It caused a crater four stories deep. The 110-story towers — the world's second-tallest buildings, home to hundreds of businesses, more than 50,000 workers — aren't expected to reopen for a month.

One law-enforcement source, speaking on condition of anonymity, said Thursday the attack could have been in retaliation for the Persian Gulf War. The bombing came on the second anniversary of

STREET CASE

Criminal charges filed after accident

Police have summed up clues in the Street case.

Thomas Wanat
The Daily Iowan

The snowplow driver involved in the Jan. 19 accident that killed UI basketball player Chris Street was charged with speeding Thursday following an investigation into the accident.

Criminal charges were filed against both Charles Pence, the driver of the Johnson County snowplow, and Kimberly Vinton, a passenger with Street.

Pence was charged with speeding 52 mph in a 45 mph zone while Vinton was charged with failure to wear a seat belt.

The charges stemmed from a review of the investigation by Iowa City City Attorney Linda Gentry. Gentry's office reviewed all potential criminal charges as a result of the accident upon a request from Johnson County Attorney J. Patrick White.

Both charges will be filed as state charges, with the Iowa City Attorney's office acting as special prosecutor for the state.

Sgt. Craig Lihs of the Iowa City Police Department said charges against Street would have included failure to wear a seat belt and failure to yield at a stop intersection.

Lihs explained that police technical investigators determined the speed of the snowplow involved in the accident by taking a series of measurements at the fatality site.

"It's very technical," Lihs said, adding that skid marks, impact points, angle and travel after impact, road conditions, and drag factors were all figured into calculating the speed of the snowplow.

"It's exact to the point that it's a minimum speed of 52 mph," Lihs said. "They feel that they could prove in court that he was traveling at a minimum of 52 mph."

He added that police re-enacted the accident for further study.

Gentry said the charges could be used in connection with any future court cases.

"The fact that he was speeding is something that a judge and jury could look at later if they have to," Gentry said.

All charges filed in connection with the accident have been simple criminal misdemeanors in the form of traffic citations. No civil charges have been announced yet.

PROVIDES 6 MONTHS OF HELP

Clinton signs emergency-benefits bill for jobless

Karen Ball
Associated Press

WASHINGTON — President Clinton signed a $5.7 billion emergency jobless benefits bill Thursday that was rushed through Congress to avoid a cutoff of assistance. The measure also imposes a pay freeze on Congress.

"With this bill becoming law, 1.5 million unemployed Americans who need help making the rent and buying groceries and paying for school clothes will receive it," Clinton said as he signed into law the first piece of his economic revival plan.

"In the end, what we have to do is extend jobs and not unemployment," Clinton said. "That is our next great test."

The measure extends through Oct. 2 a program that gives jobless Americans up to another six months of assistance once they've exhausted their standard 26 weeks of benefits.

Without the extension, the program would have expired at midnight Saturday.

The pay freeze will keep lawmakers' salaries at $133,600 a year. The provision was overwhelmingly endorsed by both chambers so lawmakers can "show that they're going first" on sacrifice, said House Speaker Tom Foley, D-Wash.

Clinton pressed for the measure as the initial installment of his economic plan, arguing that keeping the jobless afloat during tough economic times is crucial to the recovery.

Democrats who pushed the bill — and shoved aside Republican arguments that it didn't merit emergency funding — said the recovery hasn't shown up yet in the jobs market.

Indeed, new government figures out Thursday showed a worse-than-expected jump in new claims for unemployment benefits in mid-February. There were 351,000 out-

RATE BELOW STATE PERCENTAGE

10.5% of Johnson County children live in poverty

Terry Collins
The Daily Iowan

The percentage of Johnson County children living in poverty is substantially lower than the rest of the state of Iowa, a recent study shows.

The study, conducted by the Iowa Kids Count Initiative, concludes that 10.5 percent of Johnson County children live in poverty, compared to the Iowa average of 14 percent, or one in every seven.

John Sopher, income maintenance supervisor for the Johnson County Department of Human Services, said the low Johnson County percentage is due to such places as Iowa City.

"Iowa City is a very prosperous town in comparison to several other areas of the state," he said.

However, Sopher said it is more difficult to live in Iowa City for lower-income people than in various other parts of the state.

"The difference can be attributed to if you're low income, then it is very hard to live here in Iowa City in terms of housing costs," he said.

Sopher added that within Johnson County there are quite a few families that receive assistance and are below the poverty level.

UI sociology Professor Lingxin Hao said Johnson County's relatively low poverty level is due to demographics.

"I recommend looking at this as a trend; the numbers are low but still alarming. It has the makings of being very substantial," she said.

When asked about the study's finding that nearly two-thirds of all households in the state of Iowa headed by women with infants and toddlers are at or below the poverty level, Hao said that the households headed by women in all probability earn less than those headed by men.

"Single-parent families headed by women are even more subjected to

PROPOSAL PRAISED

Clinton asks students to serve

Chris Pothoven
The Daily Iowan

Editor's note: This is the third in a series of three articles.

President Clinton wants you — to help him in his attempt to revolutionize the federal financial aid system so that all Americans can attend college.

"I challenge you to join me in a great American adventure — national service," Clinton told students in a letter faxed Wednesday to newspapers across the nation. "It is time for Americans of every background to work together to lift our country up."

The president officially unveiled his proposal to allow students to repay loans through community work in a speech Monday at Rutgers University. The $15 million pilot program would start with approximately 1,000 students this summer.

Clinton's so-called "Summer of Service" in which participants would serve in selected areas, while learning to lead and prepare children who are at risk for school, has generally met with praise from students and administrators.

"I think it's a fabulous idea," UI senior Margaret Gerber said. "Besides increasing the chances for people to go to college, this would be a great way for students to get more involved in the community and get a better perspective on what life is like for others.

"It sounds like there are a lot of questions to be worked out about the plan, but if Clinton can get this underway, more power to him," she said.

Clinton proposes spending $7.4 billion over the next four years, enlarging the program from 25,000 service slots in 1994 to over 100,000 in 1997.

"Through national service, thousands will have the opportunity to pay for college by rebuilding their communities," Clinton wrote. "But it will take time for these ideas to pass Congress and time to implement them. We must start now."

Many details of the program are still unclear, according to Clinton aides. One year of service would qualify students for two years of college loans, but many other questions about the national service plan remain unanswered.

While the president has received some criticism for scaling back the program from initial campaign estimates, most agree the less ambitious proposal is a realistic way to begin.

"Given the magnitude of the undertaking and the current budget constraints, I think a pilot program is the best way to go," said Alex Sachs, deputy press secretary to Iowa Sen. Tom Harkin.

But some higher education officials, like UI Office of Student Financial Aid Director Mark Warner, believe the president should work to increase funding for the Pell Grant program before undertaking such a proposal.

Some estimates show that as much as $8 billion a year could be needed to ensure that students eligible for the maximum grant would receive it.

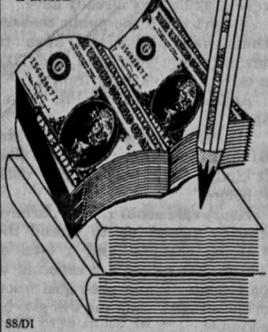

"It's very clear in my mind that if the Clinton administration is going to continue to support the Pell Grant Program, one of the first obligations is to fund the program at its full amount," he said. "I would be much more supportive of a national service program with a fully funded Pell Grant."

The service proposal will have to clear a number of barriers before it is implemented, the greatest of which is the current budget deficit.

"The thing is if there's no new money, you've got to pay for new programs with money that is currently supporting existing programs," Warner said. "It's going to take some strong convincing before people will start giving up funding to support these programs that are unproven."

Another source of resistance may come from people who are opposed

Iowa death-penalty measure thrown out by subcommittee

Mike Glover
Associated Press

DES MOINES — Gov. Terry Branstad's proposal to reinstate the death penalty suffered a blow Thursday when a House subcommittee rejected the legislation.

The subcommittee split 3-3 on reinstating the death sentence, with one member not voting.

Branstad's aides said they were disappointed but predicted more debate.

Legislative leaders weren't so sure. "It had what I felt was a fair hearing," said House Speaker Harold Van Maanen, R-Oskaloosa. "I would say it has had its day in the

"We're disappointed," Branstad aide Richard Vohs said.

The fight came during a meeting of a subcommittee of the House Judiciary Committee. The subcommittee has been quietly debating the death sentence for weeks and brought the issue to a vote Thursday.

The tie vote has the practical effect of not releasing the legislation for debate by the full committee.

The rejection makes restoring the death sentence an uphill climb because lawmakers are approaching a self-imposed deadline for bills winning committee approval to remain eligible for debate.

to such a significant change in higher education, Sachs said.

"If people come out of high school and participate in the program before going to college, it's a pretty radical change from how people are used to looking at higher education," he said.

Many also believe that young Americans will not answer such a call to service, Clinton wrote:

"They say you are apathetic, and insist that you measure your success in the accumulation of material things," he said.

Clinton urged students to become an "agent of renewal" by writing the White House with their ideas for the service program.

Public-relations professionals to speak at district conference

Lesley Kennedy
The Daily Iowan

Leading professionals from the public-relations world will gather in Iowa City this weekend for the 1993 Public Relations Student Society of America Central District Conference.

UI PRSSA chapter President Matt Feldman said the theme of the conference is "Celebrating Silver ... Going for the Gold."

"The silver is in celebration of the 25th year of PRSSA," he said. "The gold represents the level of excellence our members are working to gain in the future."

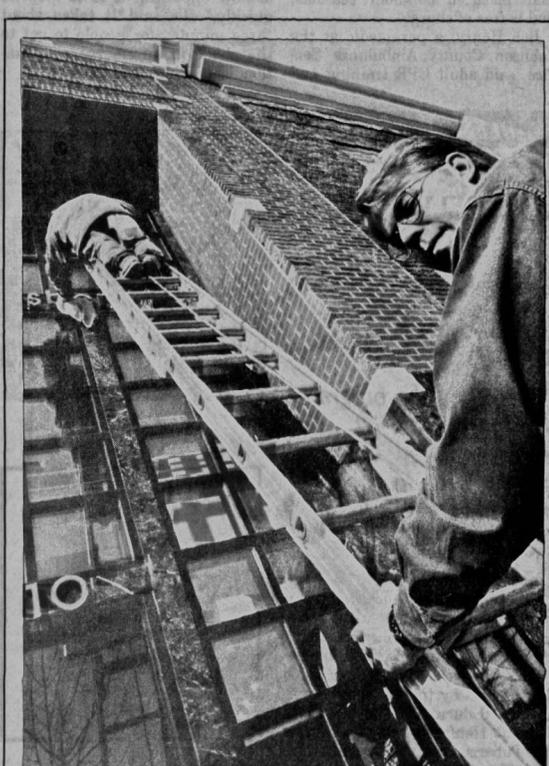

The theme of the conference is also tied into the Olympics because, as in the Olympics, the conference will bring people together in an effort to attain personal goals, Feldman said.

The keynote speaker will be John Paluszek, president of Ketchum Public Affairs in New York City, which is part of Ketchum Public Relations, one of the world's largest public-relations firms.

His speech, "The Politics of Sacrifice," will concentrate on a recent poll regarding American's willingness to make sacrifices under the new Clinton administration.

Another speaker will be Diane Kay, former director of communication and community relations for the Marion Health Center in Sioux City, Iowa. She will discuss how she and her staff handled the public-relations crisis after the United Flight 232 crash in Sioux City.

DVIP attempting to raise funds for new shelter through auction

Sara Epstein
The Daily Iowan

The Domestic Violence Intervention Program is kicking off a new capital campaign to fund a new shelter this weekend with its sixth annual Fine Arts and Fun Auction.

The auction, which DVIP hopes will bring in nearly $20,000, will be held Sunday at 2 p.m. in the Union in the ballroom on the second floor. More than 80 artists and artisans will feature their artwork, ranging from watercolor to ceramics to jewelry.

Though tickets for the auction are $10, one can preview the artwork for free during a pre-auction "Gallery Walk." Several area businesses, including M.C. Ginsberg Jewelers, 110 E. Washington St., Iowa State Bank, Washington Street entrance, and the Iowa Artisans' Gallery, 117 E. College St., will exhibit the artwork Friday evening from 5 to 7 p.m.

Pat Weir, fund-raising chairwoman of the DVIP Board of Directors, said the proceeds of this year's auction will go directly towards the building of a facility three times the size of the current shelter.

"The shelter is so overcrowded. I thought maybe it was an aberration but there have been no variations," she said.

CPR Saturday provides education, certification

One of the main focuses of Saturday's event will be how to effectively use the 911 system.

Susan Winterbottom
The Daily Iowan

Increasing knowledge about cardiopulmonary resuscitation training, choking rescue and the 911 system is the aim of "CPR Saturday," a communitywide training day to be held this Saturday at Carver-Hawkeye Arena.

Seven health- and emergency-service agencies are participating in the event, which will be from 9 a.m. to 4 p.m. The training will take place in two-hour sessions, and is free of charge.

Bob Henry, a paramedic at the Johnson County Ambulance Service, said adult CPR training and choking rescue training will be administered Saturday. People will be able to receive certification if desired. Information on how to receive training for infant CPR and choking rescue will also be provided.

CPR is an important skill to know, Henry said, because it can be used in conjunction with emergency services.

"There's a span of time between calling the ambulance and when we do get there," he said. "We'd like to let people know what they can do in that time."

Elaine Mayer, CPR coordinator at UI Hospitals and Clinics, said a major focus of Saturday's event will be instruction on how to use the 911 system.

"We're trying to promote the idea of how important it is to respond quickly," she said. "It takes about three minutes for people to get to the phone in an emergency situation. That's just way too long."

Mayer said the purpose of the training day is not only to instruct people who have never learned CPR before, but also to help people review skills they already have.

"I don't think the public realizes that even physicians have to review every year," she said. "It's a skill that slips away from you."

Anyone can learn CPR, Mayer said. "The skills are easy to learn," she said. "I think that people will find it kind of fun if they've never done it before."

Henry said about 125 people have already signed up to attend the training sessions, and a total of 200 to 300 people are expected to participate. While pre-registration is encouraged, walk-ins will also be accepted.

This kind of event is something new to Iowa City, Henry said.

"This is the first time we've gotten together as a group of agencies to teach CPR," he said. "The idea came from our cardiac arrest statistics — people who did not have CPR or have a relative call 911 stood very little chance of surviving."

According to Johnson County Ambulance Service, their emergency teams treated 54 patients in 1991 suffering from cardiac arrest. Of those 54 patients, only 19 received CPR from family, friends or bystanders. Seven of those patients survived, while all the patients without CPR died.

Henry said that saving lives is the main purpose of the program.

"It's important because if you know what to do when an emergency happens, the chances of a loved one or even a stranger surviving are greatly improved," he said.

For information on how to pre-register for "CPR Saturday," call the Johnson County Ambulance Service at 356-6013.

UI students get healthful peer advice

The aim of the program is to make sure UI students follow up on their tuberculosis treatment.

Susan Winterbottom
The Daily Iowan

UI students are educating fellow students through a new peer-counseling service aimed at tuberculosis testing and prevention.

The peer-counseling program is coordinated by the Office of International Education & Services and Student Health Service as part of the Tuberculosis Prevention Program. The aim of the program is to monitor and control the spread of tuberculosis.

According to Dr. Mary Khowassah, director of Student Health Service, foreign students and health-science students are tested for the disease as part of the Tuberculosis Prevention Program. If they test positive, a chest X-ray is taken to determine if the disease is active in the body.

If the patient shows no active infection but still tests positive, preventive medicine is required for six months.

Khowassah said the risk of tuberculosis is higher for foreign students.

"Many of the students are coming from countries where tuberculosis is a greater problem than here in the United States," she said. "We make great efforts to communicate as clearly and as well as possible to the foreign students the importance of taking the medicine."

Peer counseling makes that communication easier, Khowassah said, because the counselors are mainly foreign students themselves who can speak the patient's native language.

"They help us to discuss with the patients what the meaning of the program is," she said. "They describe the importance of the skin test, the meaning of the chest X-ray, and the importance of taking the preventive medicine."

John Rogers, a foreign student adviser at OIES, said the peer-counseling program was created to fill the gaps left by the Tuberculosis Prevention Program.

"A lot of foreign students decided not to take the medicine," he said. "The students that agreed to take the medicine didn't really have a lot of follow-up support."

Rogers said the peer counselors are paired up with a student to monitor the use of the medicine and to answer questions the student may have about the process.

Meng-Shya Wu, a UI graduate student and peer advocate in the counseling program, said she is able to help students in a number of ways.

"Some people from different countries have different opinions of taking medicine, so we try to explain the importance of taking the medicine," she said. "I clip and save a lot of articles on tuberculosis to show my client and tell them how serious TB is."

"We can also translate all their questions, and sometimes we can help them express their feelings to Student Health," Wu said.

The peer-counseling program has been a very successful way to communicate with the foreign students, Khowassah said.

"Students tend to learn best from other students they can identify with," she said. "With peer counseling, we try to overcome the language barrier and other barriers that we in the medical profession may have."

Cutbacks at Boeing cause layoffs at Rockwell

Associated Press
CEDAR RAPIDS — An Iowa aerospace unit of Rockwell International Corp. said Thursday it is laying off about 80 of its 6,000 employees, reflecting fallout from major cutbacks by a big customer — the Boeing Co.
 Rockwell's Collins Commercial Avionics said that over the next two months it would lay off about 30 workers each at its Air Transport Division plants in Decorah and Manchester, 15 at Cedar Rapids and five at Sumner.

 The affected workers assemble electronic "black boxes" that control all computer operations in an aircraft's cockpit. Those workers earn from $8 to $11 an hour.
 Terry Francisco, a Collins spokesman, said the layoffs reflect projections that the number of aircraft built worldwide with Collins equipment would drop below 600 by 1994 from 870 in 1991.
 Boeing, the division's primary customor, said earlier this year that 27,000 jobs would be lost by 1994 as it cuts production by 35 percent.

 Of Collins' 6,000 employees worldwide, about 5,000 are in Iowa at plants in Bellevue, Cedar Rapids, Decorah, Manchester and Sumner. It also has a plant in Melbourne, Fla.
 Last October, Collins said it is closing a Mason City plant with 206 workers because of the downturn in the airline and aircraft manufacturing business. Since then, a Rockwell supplier — Filter Research Corp. of Palm Bay, Fla. — has agreed to buy part of the Mason City business, saving about half those jobs.

Pious claims occlude day to day abuses

"At about 9:30 a.m. on Feb. 24, 1993, my studies were disturbed by an unusual sound — the voice of a dog. In more than three years that I have occupied this office, the only voices I have heard have been those of colleagues and co-workers. This unusual voice led me down the hall to its source: a large gray and brown hound in a cage. Judging by its body, it had not always been fed well. Considering its build and friendly demeanor, it must have been a pound dog. Two men in surgical scrubs approached the room. As I passed by, one of them entered the room. "You're ugly," he said to the dog. Several minutes later, the same man sat, apparently waiting for his partner to return. I stood in the hall talking to one of my professors. The dog bayed and whimpered plaintively. Suddenly we heard a loud thud, like a fist on a metal table, followed by "Shut up!" The dog continued to bark and whine. Again the man yelled "Shut up! Be quiet in there!" Some time later the dog lay anesthetized on the table. This is a true story, about a real dog and a real researcher at the UI. It is sad not simply because it is about a small-minded professor insulting and yelling at a helpless animal, but because it so clearly contradicts the pious claims of the medical establishment . . . of the compassion and kindness of animal researchers."

Welcome to the world of animal research, where (we are assured) animal test subjects are treated not merely humanely, but well; where all possible steps are taken to avoid unnecessary pain and suffering in test animals; where vivisectionists genuinely care about the well-being of the test animals they will eventually kill.

The account with which this column began was handed off to me personally by a man who's work keeps him near one of the locations at the UI where animal research is conducted. He spoke to me on condition of anonymity. The reason: People who try to change the status quo within the vivisection community here, those who so much as speak out about even the worst of the aberrations which occur inside, face the very real possibility of being blackballed out of our fine university.

The man who mistreated that poor dog is somewhere on our campus reading this right now. To him, I must say: You are not alone, my animal-abusing professor — not at this university.

But you are unusual. The research community which surrounds you is filled primarily with genuinely compassionate people, researchers and assistants who really do try to eliminate as much pain as possible from their research. While I cannot support much of what their research consists of, they at least are not intentionally mistreating lab animals.

One friend of mine, who works over in the medical laboratories, has assured me that most of the people working there make certain that test animals go through no unnecessary suffering. But even there, there is one doctor who will not wait until his test subjects are dead to remove their eyes for ocular-damage studies; they're way under, having received the prescribed lethal dose, but are not yet dead.

Why does this go on, when it doesn't have to be this way? Why is our animal-abusing professor even allowed to get away with this abuse? And why can't my source even come forward?

Because the animal-research facility here is geared toward its status quo; a pro-status-quo committee (selected in-house) is its only real watchdog, a situation which Valerie Stanley, an attorney for the Animal Legal Defense Fund, referred to as: ". . . an unprecedented example of an agency just rolling over to the industry it regulates." Speak up about abuses, rock the boat, and it's so long, degree — bye-bye tenure track. Have a nice time trying to piece your life back together.

But perhaps there's a ripple on the surface of this sanguinary, vision-occluding sea; on Feb. 25, according to a report from the Associated Press, U.S. District Judge Charles R. Richey ordered a stiffening of regulations protecting lab animals from abuse in research facilities. As a result of a suit filed by the Animal Legal Defense Fund, he said that current rules and enforcement "seemed to be based on the almighty dollar" rather than the adage that "a dog is man's best friend."

So even a mainstream-oriented federal court has at least acknowledged the need to eliminate the sort of mistreatment our own Frankenstein wannabe dealt that defenseless dog at 9:30 a.m. on Feb. 24.

But real change, change which would reach animal abusers both here and elsewhere, is fought with a frothing, quasi-religious fervor. The Coalition for Biomedical Research took out a display window in the Union about a month back, and in it they included a phone number for curious people to call in order to become informed. One friend of mine, who is in fact a supporter of animal rights, decided to phone up and play dumb. She was informed of the following:

Animal-rights activists are all "people haters"; animal-rights activists want to see a deadly disease unleashed which would eradicate all human life on the planet, leaving animals in what was described as an Eden-like environment; and animal-rights activists are all terrorists.

Thanks for the education, Coalition.

Working with both those who are concerned with the well-being of nonhuman animals and those within the research community is the only solution to the problems of abuse and unnecessary suffering. And if nothing short of exaggeration and untruth is the order of the day from pro-vivisectionists, Judge Richey's decision will have no real results.

The research community follows procedures which are designed to insulate and sugar-coat incidents of abuse and suffering; they pretend that these incidents do not exist; call an attempt to eliminate unnecessary suffering "fanaticism"; paint those concerned with animal rights as "people haters" and flacks; and the good ship Vivisection continues on its cruise, undisturbed on a sea of blood, corpses, and unnecessary suffering.

Steady as she goes . . .

TOWER BOMBING

Coming to America

What happened last Friday afternoon in Lower Manhattan is commonplace in some parts of the world. That is, if one can call exploding cars common. The Middle East, Northern Ireland, London, some parts of Greece and Italy all appear on datelines more often than not with stories of gruesome destruction of people and property linked to a vehicle packed with high explosives. Most of us were not naive enough to believe that the United States was immune to such acts of terrorism, but we never imagined it happening in one of the most crowded city blocks in the world. Nevertheless, it did.

Investigators now estimate that both of the World Trade Center towers could be closed for up to a month while they pick through the pieces of wreckage. This means one of the world's largest financial centers will be paralyzed, forcing over 100,000 workers and hundreds of businesses to temporarily relocate. Just the structural damage alone is estimated to be as much as $100 million. The cost of interrupting commerce could easily run into the billions of dollars as well.

Obviously, the perpetrator(s) knew what they were doing. By parking the vehicle packed with about 200 pounds of explosives in the underground concrete garage beneath the Vista Hotel, the towers themselves became part of the bomb, amplifying the ground-level structural damage and touching off hundreds of fires on the floors above.

Given the limited evidence available currently, experts are beginning to form hypotheses as to the identity of the terrorists. While a few believe it could have simply been a disgruntled employee, many are pointing to Balkan terrorists. Numerous callers who took responsibility for the bomb hours after its detonation claimed to represent many different Balkan organizations, including the Serbian Liberation Front, Bosnian Muslims and Croatian militants. Adding fuel to the fire is the fact that a bomb was found and defused near the U.S. Embassy in Zagreb, Croatia also on Friday.

Terrorism has its history in many Balkan countries. World War I began with the assassination of Archduke Ferdinand and his wife in Sarajevo by a Serbian. In 1975, Croatian nationalists were suspected of placing a bomb at New York's La Guardia Airport which killed 11 and injured 75. In 1992, a TWA jet bound from New York to Chicago and eventually ending up in Paris was hijacked by Croats. According to reports, 20 acts of terrorism in the United States have been attributed to Croats from 1976 to 1980. Serbs have also had their share of terrorist activities. About six months ago, when our Western European allies were deliberating whether or not to intervene in the former Yugoslavia, Serbian nationalists threatened to bomb nuclear facilities in Western Europe.

Some experts don't rule out Iraq- and Iran-lead terrorist groups, most notably Hizballah. Even though Iraq has been relatively quiet since Bill Clinton took office, last month marked the second anniversary of the Persian Gulf War.

The most frightening element of this bombing, perhaps, is not necessarily who is guilty, but that for the first time a terrorist attack has struck boldly and effectively within the United States. The hypertension of the Cold War brought with it heavy security, concrete walls and hidden bunkers. Governments began to relax with the fall of the Berlin Wall and the breakup of the former Soviet Union. But it seems now that the world is a more volatile place than ever.

Capital punishment 'wrong'

To the Editor:
In John Ertz's editorial (Feb. 8 DI), he downplays pragmatic or logical arguments for capital punishment, asserting instead that executions satisfy an "emotional need" which purportedly then confers on society the "right to choose" the death penalty as an appropriate punishment. The implications of this idea are disturbing, to say the least. Whose emotional needs will the decision be based on? I have an emotional reaction of abhorrence whenever I hear of an execution. Why should my emotional needs be less valued than the "needs" of those who support capital punishment? Further, where does society gain this alleged "right" to choose death as the just fulfillment of such needs? The right of society to deprive criminals of their freedom is well-grounded, since it is the so-called

"social contract" of laws which makes freedom possible in the first place. Society grants freedom, and society justly takes freedom away when violations of the law threaten its existence. But it would be absurd, from either a secular or a religious viewpoint, to suggest that society or the state is responsible for granting life itself. If it were, society would indeed have the right to snuff out not only murderers, but anyone who was deemed threatening, or whose death would satisfy an emotional "need." In reality, however, the "right" which Ertz alludes to is no right at all, but an illegitimate extension of state power to essentially totalitarian lengths. Consequently, capital punishment is a "wrong" of society, regardless of how many "needs" it may fulfill or how many poorly written editorials can be amassed in support of it.

Long-term dependence Pander Bear's target

Before a council of mayors and again in his (all but) State of the Union address, President Clinton reiterated his campaign promise to reform welfare. This commitment remains one of the few policy holdovers from Clinton's days with the moderate to neoliberal Democratic Leadership Council.

In his Feb. 17 speech, Clinton told the congress, "I want to offer the people on welfare the education, the training, the child care, the health care they need to get back on their feet, but after two years they must get back to work, too, in private business if possible, in public service if necessary. We have to end welfare as a way of life and make it a path to independence and dignity."

Taking a page from the GOP playbook, Clinton knows that welfare reform plays big in Peoria — and Clinton rarely misses an opportunity for good politics.

Clinton has proven adept at throwing rhetorical sops to quiet whichever group he fears may yap too much at his proposals. Going to raise taxes and increase the size of government? Then talk big about welfare spending, and so throw a sop to the conservatives. Too few Americans yet understand that Paul Tsongas didn't label Clinton as "pander bear" for no good reason.

Yet in spite of Clinton's talk, the most serious obstacles blocking his reform proposals come not from Congress, but from within his own administration.

Donna Shalala, Clinton's secretary of health and human services, gave the proposals decidedly lukewarm lip service when asked to comment on them. Along with the Children's Defense Fund connection of Hillary Clinton and Marian Wright Edelman, the three form a triple axis committed to defending business as usual for the welfare system. And business as usual means touting the notion that nothing ails the welfare system that more money cannot solve.

Edelman, not laboring under any official connection with the administration, owes no obligation to minimize her public opposition to welfare proposals. She argues bluntly that the nation should reconcile itself to support not only those who cannot work, but those who by "training or acculturation," are "unwilling" to work. Her voice dripping with righteous indignation, she holds forth that "we could recognize that it is more important to our society that every child has enough to eat than that every parent be forced to work."

Clinton, a notorious compromiser, will have to weather rhetoric like that in order to see his proposals implemented. He hardly stands a chance under such a withering assault from those closest to his presidency.

Yet after spending hundreds of billions of dollars on welfare transfers since the '60s, Democrats as well as Republicans, and liberals as well as conservatives, recognize that the nation needs to rethink its current welfare superstructure.

Harvard poverty analyst David Ellwood calls the central problem ignored by the programs and rhetoric left over from the '60s and '70s that of the "helping conundrums." Economists and insurance analysts call the problem by its more general name of the problem of "moral hazard."

The essence of moral hazard is that you always get more of what you subsidize, and that sometimes introduces perverse dynamics into human behavior.

Analysts first identified the problem in the realm of private insurance. They discovered that by insuring against auto accidents you decrease the costs of accidents to drivers. But since the cost of accidents provides an incentive for drivers to drive more carefully, by insuring against accidents you in fact induce drivers to drive more recklessly at the margin, and thereby increase the total number of accidents. More insurance means more accidents.

The same dynamic works with the social insurance system that we call welfare. Neoliberal Mickey Kaus summarizes the perverse incentives introduced by the welfare system: ". . . that material security may discourage work, that stigmatized support for single mothers may encourage single parenthood. Tough-minded liberals like Kaus and the DLC are now facing the hard truth: ". . . the possibility that a root cause of the poverty culture is welfare itself."

Clinton draws upon this central insight in advocating his two-year limit on welfare payments. In campaign speeches last year, Clinton motivated his proposal as an attempt to "break the permanent culture of dependence which embraces 20 to 25 percent of those on public assistance."

The Great Society Democrats of the '60s tried to mix economic paternalism and social liberalism. In so doing, they ignored the sometimes subtle connections between economic and society: They ignored the central insight that people respond rationally to incentives and to changing mixes of incentives.

Proposals like Clinton's represent a shift among liberals away from the 1960s oversight, a shift away from ignoring the injury to America's poorer citizens of the perverse combination of economic paternalism and social libertarianism.

While the new proposals do not necessarily represent the best policies, they are better more informed policies. Terming welfare proposals like Clinton's as the "new paternalism," New York University political scientist Lawrence Mead writes, ". . . the new paternalism is not a pleasant policy," but "it is preferable to the alternative, which is continued destructiveness in poor communities."

France: Video games blamed for 30 epileptic attacks

1 PARIS, France (AP) — Video games have caused about 30 epileptic seizures in France, and as many as 4,000 French children may be vulnerable, a government commission reported this week.

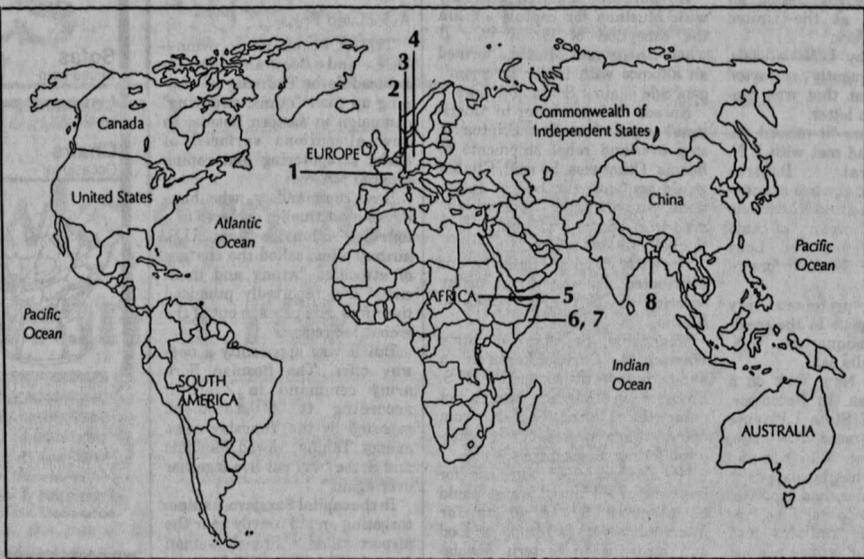

Jean Terquem, president of the Consumer Safety Commission, which began an investigation of video-game safety last month, urged manufacturers to place warning labels on the games.

Doctors say prolonged exposure to flickering lights and small flashing figures, as well as the eye movement required in playing video games, can cause epileptic seizures.

In Japan, a survey of hospitals showed that 121 people had suffered seizures while playing video games, Kyodo News Service reported in January. Several children in Britain reportedly also suffered from seizures.

The French report said video games have caused about 30 epileptic seizures. Terquem estimated that some 2,000 to 4,000 French children who are epileptic could be sensitive to the games.

Nintendo Co., the world's largest video-game maker, said in January it would place labels on all its games sold in Japan warning epileptic users of the potentially harmful effects.

Marine faces court martial for Mogadishu shooting

6 MOGADISHU, Somalia (AP) — The first court martial hearing of Operation Restore Hope began Thursday in a dusty, flyblown room where Gunner Sgt. Harry Conde faced charges for shooting a 17-year-old Somali who snatched his sunglasses.

Conde, 33, a radar technician based in Twentynine Palms, Calif., could be charged with the military equivalent of an aggravated assault for wounding the teen-ager as well as a bystander hit by buckshot from Conde's gun.

A 13-year veteran, Conde could face up to 10 years in prison if the court martial proceeds.

A power generator provided a droning background to the testimony from nervous Marines in the room at Mogadishu's airport. Their words frequently were blotted out by the roar of planes taking off and landing.

Somali women strive for leading role in reconstruction

7 MOGADISHU, Somalia (AP) — Widowed by civil war, and struggling to care for their children amid famine, Somali women are demanding a voice in rebuilding a country ruined by the battles of men.

Women's delegations organized by the United Nations plan to take part in an aid conference and peace talks this month in Addis Ababa, Ethiopia.

A U.N. aid package proposal lists women's issues, but so far earmarks only $500,000 in funding for women's groups.

"We've opened our eyes now; we want to be decision-makers and throw some of those men out of their positions," said Falhada Abullahi Noor, whose face is drawn and sad, older than her 32 years.

She lost her husband to civil war, her eldest son was killed by bandits and she still has eight young children to feed in Bardera, one of the cities worst-hit by famine.

Bangladesh Communist party turns away from Marxism

8 DHAKA, Bangladesh (AP) — The country's largest Communist party announced this week that it has decided Marxism is obsolete and that it will become a liberal democratic organization.

"Communism is no more suitable to the needs of our society," the party's general secretary, Nurul Islam Nahid, told reporters.

"We have decided to turn the party into a democratic organization to fight for national development and social justice," he said.

Dutch museum finds rare Laurel and Hardy films

2 AMSTERDAM, Netherlands (AP) — Rare silent films starring Stan Laurel and Oliver Hardy in solo appearances have been restored and will be shown in May at a convention in honor of the comedians.

The Netherlands Film Museum announced Thursday that Laurel's "Get 'Em Young" and Hardy's "A Bankrupt Honeymoon" were donated last year by private collectors. The nitrate reels were made in 1926, said museum spokesman Rene Wolf.

The museum's copy of "A Bankrupt Honeymoon" is the only one known to exist, Wolf said. He said one other copy of "Get 'Em Young" was found in the National Film Archive in Prague, but segments were damaged and the Dutch film has been used to fill in the gaps.

The "Get 'Em Young" find is significant because it is Laurel's first film in which he puts on his famous crying face, the spokesman said.

Both reels have been preserved on modern acetate film and will be shown for the first time in late May at the European Laurel and Hardy convention in Kerkrade, Netherlands.

Ford unveils its first 'world car'

3 GENEVA, Switzerland (AP) — Battling to rebound from its worst-ever loss, Ford Motor Co. this week unveiled a risky new venture — its first "world car" to be produced simultaneously in Europe and the United States.

The Mondeo, as it will be known in Europe, will compete in the midsize sector hotly contested among European, American and Japanese automakers. A name has not yet been chosen for the car in the U.S. market.

Its introduction comes at a crucial time for Ford, smarting from a $7.4 billion loss worldwide in 1992 — the worst performance ever for an American corporation except for GM's $23.5 billion loss.

Ford officials seemed genuinely excited by the Mondeo. "It's the best car we've made," said Ford of Europe President William Fike.

The Mondeo resembles the cars it replaces — the Ford Sierra in Europe, the Ford Tempo and Mercury Topaz in the United States — but with sleeker lines and a more aerodynamic design.

Rampages by German skinheads on the rise

4 BERLIN, Germany (AP) — Neo-Nazi thugs appear to be ending their winter hibernation by returning to a regular weekend ritual: attacks on refugee homes, brawls with leftists and chants of "Heil Hitler."

Violence by right-wing extremists, routine since Germany reunited in 1990, dropped sharply after the widespread outcry over the arson deaths in November of three members of a Turkish family in the west German city of Moelln.

Tougher crackdowns by police, stiffer prison sentences and bans on some radical groups were credited for the decrease. But some experts pointed out that skinhead attacks typically tail off in the winter months.

U.S. diplomat urges aid to curb Sudan's famine

5 NAIROBI, Kenya (AP) — Hundreds of thousands of sick and starving people could die in southern Sudan unless they are sent more food and medicine soon, the U.S. ambassador to Sudan said Thursday.

Ambassador Don Petterson said the suffering in the southern part of Africa's largest nation was comparable to that of neighboring Somalia, where a U.S.-led military force intervened to restore order and guard aid shipments.

He said Sudan needed an urgent infusion of humanitarian aid first — and then "more active" intervention by the international community to end the 10-year-old civil war that has killed hundreds of thousands and displaced millions. He did not spell out what he meant by intervention.

Petterson spoke at a news conference in Nairobi, Kenya's capital, after a five-day trip to several government- and rebel-controlled towns in southern Sudan.

"I was horrified by the suffering I witnessed and by the human cost of this struggle for dominance over that devastated and too-often forgotten part of the world," he said.

"We saw walking skeletons, children and other people on the verge of death, vacant stares, people riddled with diseases — all the sights and smells of deprivation and despair."

Serb leader's threat worries Clinton

The warning of terrorism came in a letter addressed to the American people.

Barry Schweid
Associated Press

WASHINGTON—President Clinton said Thursday a Serbian leader made a "terrible mistake" when he warned that U.S. relief deliveries to Bosnia-Herzegovina could expose the American people and all mankind to Armageddon.

Clinton and other administration officials reacted sternly to the assertion by Radovan Karadzic, the Bosnian Serb leader, in an open letter to the American people. "The State Department said his comments were 'irresponsible and disgraceful.'"

Clinton, asked during a photo opportunity about Karadzic's warning, said, "If that's what he meant to do, he made a terrible mistake and it was something that I view with grave concern and real disapproval."

Similarly, State Department spokesman Richard Boucher said, "Anytime anyone raises the specter of international terrorism we are all concerned."

Boucher said Karadzic "is supposed to be here negotiating for peace" in talks at the United Nations in New York.

Assailed also by U.N. officials, Karadzic subsequently retracted the implied threat that was contained in his open letter.

He told reporters "it missed the point" after he had met with U.N. Secretary-General Boutros Boutros-Ghali and the two international mediators on the Yugoslavia conflict, former Secretary of State Cyrus Cyrus Vance and Lord Owen, a former British foreign secretary.

The officials "protested very strongly" to Karadzic in the meeting at U.N. headquarters, U.N. spokesman Joe Sills said.

Karadzic is in New York on a limited travel visa. In December, then-Secretary of State Lawrence S. Eagleburger said Karadzic, President Slobodan Milosevic and Rado Mladic, the Bosnia Serb military commander, had "political and command responsibility" for atrocities in the Balkans and should be tried for crimes against humanity.

In the letter, Karadzic accused Muslims of staging murders of innocent civilians and the press of the "utterly foundationless myths" of mass Serbian rapes. He said Serbs had lived peacefully with Muslims for centuries, with the exception of World War II when Croats and Muslims formed an alliance with Hitler to commit genocide against Serbs and Jews.

Karadzic's "open letter to Americans" urged President Clinton to stop overland relief shipments to Bosnia. Otherwise, he said, Clinton would be "with the best of intentions, unwittingly exposing the American people and mankind to the hell of Armageddon."

The letter was dated Saturday and distributed Tuesday to reporters covering the U.N. negotiations on Bosnia.

Meanwhile, Secretary of State Warren M. Christopher said a hand grenade attack on the U.S. Embassy in Belgrade would not deter the United States "from doing what's necessary" in shattering former Yugoslavia.

He also criticized Karadzic for implying the United States could be targeted by terrorists for intervening with airdrops of food and medicine to eastern Bosnia-Herzegovina.

A hand grenade thrown from a car exploded outside the Belgrade embassy on Wednesday, shattering windows but causing no injuries.

Officials report ethnic cleansing

Associated Press

TUZLA, Bosnia-Herzegovina—U.N. and Bosnian officials accused Serbs Thursday of stepping up their "ethnic cleansing" campaign in eastern Bosnia, as new allegations surfaced of Serbs slaughtering and raping Muslim refugees.

Serb commanders, who have devastated Muslim enclaves in a four-day offensive near U.S. airdrop sites, called the charges of atrocities "wrong and malicious" and reportedly promised their foes safe passage out of the embattled region.

But it was apparently a one-way offer. The Bosnian Serb army command in Zvornik, according to a statement reported by the Yugoslav news agency Tanjug, vowed Muslims and Serbs "will not live together ever again."

In the capital Sarajevo, a sniper targeting an aid convoy near the airport killed a French woman from the Equilibre relief organization and injured two Polish aid workers, said U.N. peacekeepers' spokesman Barry Frewer.

BOMBING

The U.S. ouster of Iraq's army from Kuwait. But a Clinton administration source said evidence of Mideast terrorist involvement was "iffy."

The arrest came after an army of investigators spent the past week combing through piles of rubble at the blast site, fielding thousands of phone calls and pursuing scores of leads. Detectives systematically checked garage payment stubs and viewed videotapes of entering vehicles.

The suspect had rented the van from a Ryder truck agent in Jersey City on Feb. 23 and returned less than two hours after the explosion Friday afternoon to say it had been stolen from him in Jersey City, said Paul Mascitelli, owner of a car dealership that shares an office with the Ryder agent.

The man wanted his $400 cash deposit back but was told he would need a police report of the theft, Mascitelli said. He said the suspect returned Monday without the police report and again was turned away. On Thursday morning, the man called the Ryder office — and spoke with an FBI agent posing as a Ryder official, said Patrick Galasso, the truck rental agent. "He didn't have a clue as to what was going on," Galasso said. "He thought he was talking to a Ryder rep."

The man returned to the rental office, was given $200 back, and was arrested by eight to 10 agents as he left the office, Galasso said. "He didn't want to give up that $400. He just wanted that money," Galasso added.

The man was accompanied by another man when he rented the truck, but was alone on subsequent visits, Galasso said. He said he didn't remember what the second man looked like.

Both Mascitelli and Galasso said the suspect didn't behave nervously in any way. Mascitelli described him as short and frail with a beard and a thick accent.

of-work people filing new claims during a one-week period, an increase of 26,000 from the week before.

Moreover, a National Association of Manufacturers survey released Thursday showed that while restructuring of the factory work force — that has cost millions of jobs — is nearing an end, manufacturers do not plan to increase their payrolls this year.

The House voted 247-156 to approve the sections of the bill relating to extended unemployment benefits. A separate 403-0 vote adopted the Senate-added language on the pay freeze.

The Senate had passed the measure on Wednesday.

In both chambers, Republicans complained that the jobless benefits extension was a $5.7 billion run-up in the deficit and Congress needed to start taking a pay-as-you-go approach.

They said it was an omen of things to come, and that Clinton and his Democratic allies in Congress weren't really serious about reining in the deficit.

"Where's the beef? Where's the funding so we don't continue to put burdens on our children?" said Rep. Rick Santorum, R-Penn.

But Democrats argued that the extended benefits would be paid for by Clinton's overall economic plan to cut spending and raise taxes.

Hawks gun for 20th in a row

Meet doesn't have clear-cut favorite.

Jay Nanda

The Daily Iowan

It doesn't matter to Hawkeye John Oostendorp that the rest of the conference heavyweights will be gunning for him today at the 79th annual Big Ten Championships.

That's the price one pays for being a defending champion. And Oostendorp wouldn't trade that feeling for anything.

"If anything, it helps you mentally more," said the No. 3-ranked Oostendorp. "All that's forgotten once you step on the mat."

But another title would be nice. "I'll be disappointed if I don't win it this year," he said.

And so will the Hawkeyes, to whom winning the Big Tens has been as customary as 1-2-3. Or better yet, 19.

Iowa goes for its 20th straight title this weekend at Ohio State's St. John Arena. If successful, the Hawkeyes will tie the Indiana men's swimming team (1961-80) for the longest string of Big Ten titles.

But unlike recent years, the No. 3-ranked Hawkeyes (14-1-1) are not the odds-on favorite. If anyone, that honor belongs to league-newcomer Penn State — the nation's No. 1 team.

"We realize the challenge that's before us," Coach Dan Gable said.

Iowa Lineup

Here is the lineup the Hawkeyes will field today and Saturday at Ohio State, as they go for their 20th consecutive Big Ten Championship, featuring weight class, ranking, name and record:

118 — No. 1 Chad Zaputill (16-0)
 126 — Kent Streicher (8-4)
 134 — No. 1 Troy Steiner (25-1)
 142 — No. 12 Lincoln McClravy (15-1)
 150 — No. 1 Terry Steiner (25-0)
 158 — Daryl Weber (18-5)
 167 — Matt Norem (12-9)
 177 — Ray Brinzer (9-0)
 190 — No. 3 Joel Sharratt (23-3)
 HWT — No. 3 John Oostendorp (13-1)

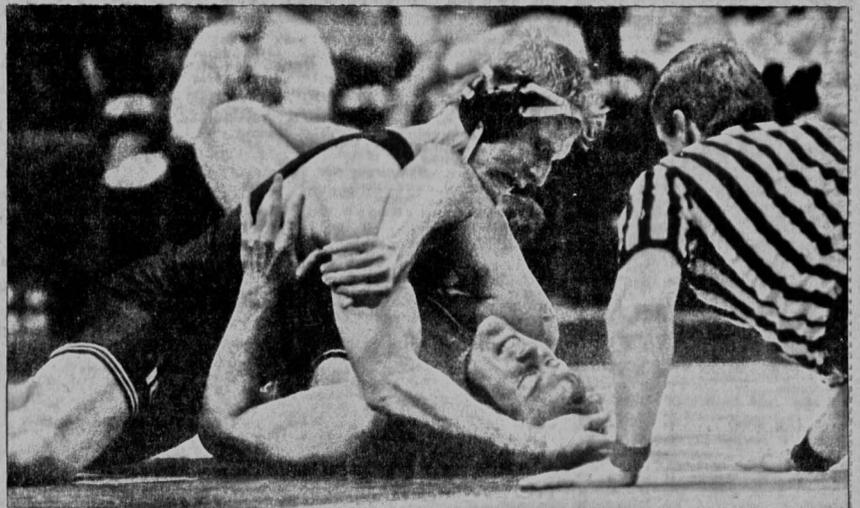

"We're gonna have to wrestle very hard and earn hard-fought decisions. We're not going to be placed in brackets where we're going to get the easier guys in most weight classes.

"That's the challenge of it — to be able to step forward and rise to the occasion."

Along with Oostendorp, top-ranked 118-pounder Chad Zaputill and No. 1-ranked 134-pounder Troy Steiner are defending champions who should be the top seeds at their respective weights.

No. 1-ranked 150-pounder Terry Steiner (25-0) will be seeking his first crown.

"There's no two better kids that I've coached," Gable said of the Steiners. "That's what they mean to me and what they've done for the program and what they've represented. For them to be able to be successful in this last part of their senior year, it's very important to them and to me and the program.

conference champion, as the Hawkeyes head into today's Big Ten meet at Ohio State.

"All they have to be is aggressive and they'll be fine."

But according to Gable, each of the 10 weight classes is up for grabs — especially when No. 5-ranked Michigan, No. 7 Minnesota, No. 8 Ohio State and No. 10 Wisconsin cannot be counted out in this, the tightest conference race in recent memory.

Besides the trio of Hawkeyes, the Buckeyes possess the other two returning champions in 177-pounder Kevin Randleman and top-ranked 190-pounder Rex Holman, the two-time Big Ten Wrestler of the Month.

"The issue is at every weight this year," Gable said. "Penn State is very capable of qualifying all 10 (for the NCAA meet), and so are we. How high are you going to place? That's the key. Anybody that doesn't get in the top six — that's possibly the team that is going to get knocked off.

"Anybody's capable of beating anybody. Ohio State, Minnesota, Michigan. They've all got people on their squad that are capable of making a difference on who wins the championship."

One of the most intriguing weight classes could be 177, where Ray Brinzer will represent the Hawkeyes with a record of 0-0. A sophomore transfer and former Big Eight champ from Oklahoma State, Brinzer defeated Greg Stiltner by a count of 16-4 in a wrestle-off last Monday for the right to go to Columbus.

Kent Streicher at 126, freshman Lincoln McClravy at 142, freshman Daryl Weber at 158, sophomore Matt Norem at 167 and No. 3 190-pounder sophomore Joel Sharratt round out the Hawkeye lineup.

Last season, Iowa had nine finalists and six eventual champions, scoring 185 points in blitzing second-place Wisconsin (104) and the rest of the field. The 81-point margin was the third highest in league history.

But the Hawkeyes don't expect that kind of domination this time around.

"It's gonna be a dogfight," Oostendorp said. "There's going to be some good teams in there."

WOMEN'S BASKETBALL

David Greedy/The Daily Iowan

Penn State's Shelby Thayer and the Hawkeyes' Molly Tideback, right, should be in for another battle tonight as No. 2 Iowa visits the No. 8 Lady Lions. Iowa tips off at No. 4 Ohio State on Sunday.

Undefeated mark on the line

Roxanna Pellin
The Daily Iowan

To Iowa women's basketball coach C. Vivian Stringer, traveling to Penn State's Recreation Hall is kind of like a trip to England.

"It's an extremely difficult place to get in and out of, as I can tell from our itinerary," Stringer said. "We're going to leave at 9 a.m. from Iowa City and we'll probably get into Penn State at 9:30 at night. It's kind of like going to England, France or some place like that."

The second-ranked Hawkeyes will try to keep its hopes for an undefeated Big Ten season alive as Iowa plays at No. 8 Penn State today and at No. 4 Ohio State Sunday. Iowa stands at 15-0 in the conference and 23-1 overall.

Ohio State ranks second in the league at 12-2 and 20-3. Penn State stands at 11-3 and 19-4.

A win over the Lady Lions tonight will guarantee the Hawkeyes a share of their sixth Big Ten title in the last 10 years.

Senior forward Toni Foster led the Hawkeyes with 22 points and 10 rebounds in a 84-59 win over then-No. 4 Penn State Feb. 7. The last time Iowa played at State College, the Hawkeyes lost 82-62.

Despite a 25-point margin in their last meeting, Stringer said the win did not hurt the Iowa-Penn St. rivalry with Lady Lion coach Rene Portland.

"It didn't damage it at all," Stringer said. "I have good sense to know that she's a good coach and that they're a great team. Twenty-five points means absolutely nothing. If it were not so, we wouldn't have spent the kind of preparation time that we have. We don't normally look at tapes more than four or five minutes. We spent 45 minutes alone looking at the first half, breaking it down."

The Buckeyes own a 13-game homecourt winning streak. In the Ohio State game earlier this season, Foster scored 23 points in a 79-62 win.

Stringer said she expects a sellout crowd will welcome the Hawkeyes. The Buckeyes rank fourth in the nation in attendance, averaging 5,206 per game.

"At Ohio State, they sold the game out," Stringer said. "I've been there and coached there too many times where I am talking to my team less than two feet away and I can't hear myself speak. That place rocks when the Hawkeyes come. There's something about the black and gold that attracts fans."

"I think what we want to do is to convert the cheering that is against us, as actually cheering for the Hawkeyes. That's all part of it, the mental and physical separation that's necessary to be successful."

Foster said she has little concern that the Hawkeyes will be ready for this weekend's competition.

"I have no problems with us being up for the games because we know those are tough places to play at," Foster said. "I don't have any concerns because I have a lot of confidence in my teammates. I just hope everyone comes to play and we have to know what time it is. What I mean is, we have to go out and play intense basketball and if the game's close, so what? We have to just keep playing our game for 40 minutes."

Junior forward Tia Jackson said the Hawkeyes need to continue playing like they have been. Iowa has won its last 17 games.

"I think we need to relax and play focused," Jackson said. "Don't put any burdens on our shoulders that are not needed. I think we need to play like we have been playing and play with a great deal of confidence, believe in each other."

Keady tries to ward off loss to Wildcats

John Shipley
The Daily Iowan

When asked how he was doing Thursday morning, Purdue coach Gene Keady replied, "Better."

Such is the relief of a man whose basketball team just won its first game since losing to Northwestern at home.

The Wildcats beat the Boilermakers, 62-59, last Sunday for their first Big Ten road win in 60 tries, the perfect finale for a terrible week in West Lafayette. Prior to that, Purdue lost at Illinois in double overtime, 78-70, and was clobbered at Indiana, 93-78.

But the No. 24-ranked Boilermakers (16-8, 7-8) bounced back Wednesday at friendly Breslin Center in East Lansing, Mich., knocking off Michigan State, 61-58. Though the win gave Purdue's NCAA hopes a jumpstart, Keady seemed more interested in putting the loss to the Wildcats behind him.

"All we really did was get the Northwestern loss back," he said.

No. 15 Iowa will try to hand Purdue another home loss Saturday at noon. The game will be televised regionally on Raycom and can be seen locally on Channel 2.

"They're always a very competitive team. They're a great rebounding team, they always shoot a lot of free throws and they press a little," Keady said of the Hawkeyes, who will meet Purdue only once this year. "It's a unique preparation for us. I'm glad we have two days to prepare for them instead of one."

The Hawkeyes (19-7, 8-6), who had a five-game winning streak snapped Tuesday at No. 4 Michigan, are virtually guaranteed a spot in the 64-team NCAA tournament. Wins in its final four regular season games can realistically help Iowa earn a regional seed as high as No. 3. The Purdue game could loom large: the Boilermakers are the only ranked team Iowa will play the rest of the season.

For the Boilermakers, their final three regular season games are must-wins if they're to earn a tournament bid.

"We've said that before all of our games," Keady said. "We said it before the Northwestern game and it didn't sink in. We said it before the Michigan State game and were able to do something with it."

At Michigan State, the Boilermakers were led by freshman phenom Glenn Robinson, a 6-foot-8 forward from Gary, Ind. His 18 points led the team but were six below his season average.

Robinson is leading the Big Ten in scoring (24.2) and rebounding (9.5) in only his first season of action after sitting out last year under Prop 48.

"He's one of the most unbelievable players you'll ever see," Iowa coach Tom Davis said. "When Robinson's cooking they beat anybody."

Keady's not so sure. "I don't know if that's true," Keady said. "When Glenn Robinson's playing real well, the team isn't playing well. When the team's playing well, Glenn Robinson's not playing well."

"But that's because we're a young team. But people don't want to hear that; they don't want us to be young."

The Boilermakers will start only one senior, point guard Matt Painter, and one junior, center Ian Stanback. The rest of the starting lineup consists of Robinson, sophomore Cuzno Martin and freshman Porter Roberts.

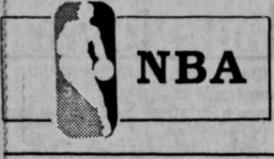

Of the 15 players on Purdue's active roster, 10 are freshmen or sophomores.

Martin, a 6-6 forward, is the Boilermakers' second-leading scorer (12.2 ppg.), shooting 83 percent from the free throw line and hitting 57 percent of his shots from the field.

Hawks feeling bubbly about season-opener

Curtis Riggs
 The Daily Iowan

Several members of the Iowa baseball team are suffering from a case of cabin fever. Or should it be bubble fever?

Because the Hawkeyes have been practicing in the UT's indoor practice facility since the beginning of the semester, many of them wonder if they will recognize the crack of the bat when they hear it outside.

They'll get the chance when they travel to Springfield, Mo., to take on Southwest Missouri State in a pair of doubleheaders Saturday and Sunday.

"The bubble is a great place for a workout, but after you have been in there for six weeks you want to get out and start playing," Iowa pitcher Dave Weillbrenner said. "Everybody is getting spring fever," senior shortstop Steve Eddie said. "We've been cooped-up for too long."

Buckner hired by Mavs

Jackson finally signs, will see action tonight

Jaime Aron
Associated Press

DALLAS — The Dallas Mavericks took two major steps toward rebuilding Thursday, hiring former college and NBA player Quinn Buckner as coach and signing first-round draft pick Jim Jackson.

Buckner, a college standout at Indiana before playing for several NBA teams, is an analyst for NBC on league telecasts. He will take over as the fourth coach in the Mavericks' 13-year history next season after signing a five-year contract.

"I went and got me a brand new hat out of the box today," Mavericks owner Don Carter told a news conference at Reunion Arena.

Buckner, who has no coaching experience, called the chance to revamp the struggling Mavericks a "tremendous opportunity."

"We will win," he said. Interim coach Gar Heard will remain on the sidelines this season as the Mavericks (4-50) plod toward the NBA's futility record of 9-73 set by the 1972-73 Philadelphia 76ers.

Buckner inherits a team filled with mostly unknown, inexperienced players. The only solid veteran, 31-year-old guard Derek Harper, has asked to be traded.

But the surprise signing of Jackson — to a six-year deal — moved the team's rebuilding efforts forward. Jackson is a high-scoring shooting guard from Ohio State around which a franchise could be built.

"Surprises are everywhere," general manager Norm Sonju said. Financial terms were not released on either deal.

Jackson's contract includes this season, for which he will be paid in full. He will see limited playing time Friday in a home game against Houston.

Jackson had vowed he would neither sign with the Mavericks nor accept a trade. That would have enabled him to re-enter next year's draft.

"I'm sorry it took so long, but I'm looking forward to the future," he said. "They want to build with youth — I'm young. I think the difference was ... commitment from the top. Quinn and I talked on the phone and he reassured me."

Team officials sent Jackson their proposal last Thursday. He looked over the offer Friday and verbally agreed Saturday.

No. 1 pick Jim Jackson of Ohio State ended his holdout with the Mavericks, agreeing to a deal which coincided with the hiring of Quinn Buckner as Dallas' new coach.

The deal with Buckner was finalized Monday.

"One of the things that pleases me the most is the chance to coach Jim Jackson," Buckner said.

Dallas, which has dropped its last 12 games, has not won on the road in 26 tries, including Wednesday's 125-97 loss to the Chicago Bulls. The Mavericks grabbed an NBA season-low 24 rebounds in the contest.

Buckner will become the first person to play for Indiana's Bobby Knight and be named an NBA coach. Buckner, who starred on the Hoosiers' undefeated 1977 national championship team, has remained close to Knight.

Buckner's hiring had been long rumored. Team officials reportedly asked him if he was interested in the job last summer, then resumed discussions following the Jan. 13 firing of Richie Adubato.

Buckner's tie to the Mavericks is his long friendship with Rick Sund, Dallas' vice president of basketball operations and a former Bucks' official while the guard was in Milwaukee.

The Bucks made Buckner their first pick in the 1976 draft, then he joined the Boston Celtics, where he won an NBA title in 1984. His career ended after playing for the Indiana Pacers in 1986.

NBA Tonight

San Antonio at Chicago (7 p.m.). The Bulls, the second team to reach 40 victories this season, play host to the Spurs, losers of two straight and 2-6 since winning 18 of 19. San Antonio took the first meeting, 103-99 at HemisFair Arena on Jan. 24.

STARS

Wednesday
Charles Barkley, playing against his former team for the first time since a June 17 trade, scored 18 of his 36 points in the first quarter, sending Phoenix past Philadelphia 125-115. Barkley also had 17 rebounds and nine assists. Steve Smith, who hit 12 of 15 from the floor, had a career-high 30 points for Miami, which tied a franchise record with its fourth consecutive victory, 125-106 over Washington.

SWEEPING THE GLASS

Rony Seikaly had an NBA season-high 34 rebounds, four more than the entire Washington team, as the Miami Heat beat the Bulls 125-106 Wednesday night. Seikaly's 34 rebounds were 10 more than his previous career and franchise high and seven more than this season's NBA high of 27 by Dennis Rodman on Dec. 23. Rodman had 34 rebounds in an overtime game against Indiana last season, making him the first NBA player since Charles Oakley in 1988 to grab that many in a game. Oakley, then of the Chicago Bulls, had 35 rebounds. ... The Mavericks had just 24 rebounds, an NBA season low, in Wednesday's 125-97 loss to Chicago. Cleveland had 25, also against the Bulls, on Feb. 13. It was the first time the Bulls won in their last six games without Jordan in the lineup.

STICKY FINGERS

Washington's four turnovers was the second lowest in NBA history and tied a franchise low.

SORRY

With Wednesday night's 125-97 loss to Chicago, the woeful Mavericks tied a franchise record with their 26th consecutive road loss. They are 0-26 on the road and 4-50 overall this season, with 12 straight defeats.

WOMEN'S TENNIS

International talent awaits Iowa

Joel Donofrio
The Daily Iowan

After three weeks of practice, the Iowa women's tennis team returns to action this weekend. The Hawkeyes travel to Des Moines to take on Drake today at 2:30 p.m. and battle Oklahoma State at 3:30 p.m. Saturday.

Both teams should be tough opponents for the Hawkeyes. The Bulldogs are four-time defending Gateway Conference champions and feature Vera Vitels at No. 1 singles. Vitels, a sophomore from Russia, won the Rolex Championship in the fall season and was ranked No. 26 in the nation.

"Drake is a much-improved program; they beat us for the first time last year, and I do not intend to lose to them again," Iowa coach Micki Schillig said. "We're definitely a stronger team than we were last year, but we can't take Drake for granted."

Oklahoma State has won the Big Eight conference 11 of the last 12 years, and is a team the Hawkeyes have never beaten. Like Drake, the Cowgirls have some talented international players, with singles players from Italy, Columbia, and Mexico.

"Oklahoma State is one of the top teams in the nation," Schillig said. "Playing them is a great chance for us to play top-ranked players with lots of experience. Win or lose, it will be good experience for the girls to play against different styles of play and tough competitors."

The Hawkeyes have been tough competition themselves, bringing a 5-1 dual meet record into this weekend's matches. In their last match on February 14, they opened the Big Ten season by defeating Ohio State 8-1 at the UI Recreation Building.

Schillig feels that her team's confidence is high going into the rest of the spring season.

SPEAKING OF DRINKING

HIGH RISK DRINKING

When people drink until they are out of control, so they are a nuisance to others and putting themselves in danger.

High risk drinking is drinking in excess or abusing the alcohol.

Drinking for the purpose of having fun. Mixing beer and hard liquor can cause problems.

ADVICE FOR DRINKERS

If you drink, give the car keys to someone who is not drinking. Save a life.

Put limits on yourself and stick with them. Don't be afraid to say I'm not drinking tonight. Don't drink if you don't feel like drinking.

A careful drinker knows when enough is enough. You shouldn't have to make mistakes in order to realize alcohol can lead to trouble.

CASUAL DRINKING

My idea of drinking is not getting drunk and losing control, but more towards sitting down with a group of close friends and having a drink or two.

Drinking in a social situation, like having two drinks with dinner or while at a party.

Drinking for no special reason, just being social with friends. Drinking without the intention of getting drunk.

IOWA TRACK

Hawkeyes chase Big Ten crown

Doug Cappel
The Daily Iowan

After having successful seasons, the Iowa men's and women's indoor track squads head into their respective Big Ten Championship meets today and Saturday.

The men travel to Madison, Wis., while the women head to Bloomington, Ind.

The Iowa men will be looking to improve on a seventh-place finish a year ago, and several Hawkeyes will be expected to step up to the challenge.

Leading Coach Ted Wheeler's Hawkeyes will be Anthuan Maybank, who won the long jump title last year and will be a favorite to repeat. Other events that Maybank will be looking for top finishes in are the 200-meter dash and the 4 x 400 relay, which he will run with Rajeev Balkrishnan, Audwin Patterson and Baylor Goode.

Balkrishnan will be another Iowa sprinter called upon to lead his team. Balkrishnan has had team-best times this season in both the 55-meter hurdles and the 400-meter dash.

In the middle and distance events, Patterson and Bill Branigan will be expected to carry the team in an area that is not as deep as others. Patterson has had a team-best time in the 600-meters, while Branigan holds that distinction in the 800-meter and one mile runs.

Coach Ted Wheeler

In field events, Chad Ohly will be expected to place well in the pole vault, as will Jason Joens in the shot put and Scott Hudek in the high jump.

"I've seen an awful lot of improvement from our team as this season has progressed," Wheeler said. "Now we need to translate that progress into results at the conference meet. We've got a number of individuals who could place high in the meet."

On the women's side, Coach Jerry

Hassard is expecting big things out of his women, maybe even a championship.

"I would consider us a contender," said Hassard, "but I am concerned about our lack of depth."

An area Hassard isn't concerned about is the 5,000-meter run, where senior Tracy Dahl Morris is the defending champion. Morris competed February 26 and 27 in the USA National Indoor Track and Field Championships in New York City, placed fifth in the 3,000-meter run and set a new school record as well.

The competition Morris ran against was some of the best in the world, including the top two runners in the 3,000.

Two others who competed with Morris and will be relied upon heavily are Lisa Van Steenwyk in the shot put and Marlene Poole in the 200-meter dash.

Van Steenwyk has been steadily improving throughout the season and seems poised to win the championship. She finished ninth in New York City and is the current leader in the Big Ten with 50'2 1/2".

Poole, who ran a season-best time of 24.84 in the 200 at the national meet, will anchor the sprinting corps along with Tina Floyd and Angela Chadwick. Backing up Morris in the distance events will be Tina Stec, who narrowly missed finishing first in the 1,000-meters in her last outing.

Besides Van Steenwyk, the field event chores will be handled by, among others, Denise Taylor, also competing in the shot put, and Yolanda Hobbs in the long jump.

As far as the team competition is concerned, Hassard feels it will be a fight for the top spot.

"I think some of the same teams are coming to the forefront," Hassard said. "One is Wisconsin, and another is Illinois. I would have to call those two teams the favorites."

IOWA GYMNASTICS

Women host ISU in rematch

Karen L. Karaidos
The Daily Iowan

The Iowa women's gymnastics team will be looking to achieve another season-high team score when it hosts Iowa State tonight at 7 p.m. in the North Gym of the Fieldhouse.

The Hawkeyes will then travel to Norman, Okla., on Sunday to compete against Oklahoma, Missouri and Texas Women's University at the Lloyd Noble Center.

Iowa defeated Iowa State Feb. 28 in Ames, 189.00-186.95. Junior Sandy Stengel tied with Iowa State's Nikki Peterson for first place on balance beam with a 9.70. Stengel also tied for first place in the all-around with Cyclone Kristin Moore, after tallying a 37.85.

"We did really well (at Iowa State) and I think that we can do really well again on Friday," freshman Jodie Gray said.

The Hawkeyes recorded their season-best team score, 190.25, March 2 versus Missouri and North Carolina State in Columbia, Mo.

"We hit our 190 mark Tuesday and we just want to keep going up from that and just get a good team score," said Gray, a native of Winnipeg, Manitoba, Canada.

"I think we just have to concentrate on what we have to do — not only worrying about winning, just concentrating on what we all have to do and just come together as a team," Gray added.

Coach Diane DeMarco agrees that winning isn't always the most significant aspect of gymnastics.

"More important than a win-loss record is having a stronger seasonal-average qualifying score for NCAA Regionals," DeMarco said.

The Hawkeyes say the higher scores are giving them confidence.

"In the last couple of meets we just seemed to build the momentum that the team needs," said Gray, who was a two-time member of the Canadian World Championship team. "The team is just getting more and more confident for the next two meets that are coming up."

Being consistent is an important element in qualifying for regionals and is something that has been improving for the Hawkeyes.

Men take on 'strong' Gophers in home finale

Attempting to qualify for regionals remains Iowa's main focus.

Karen L. Karaidos
The Daily Iowan

The 14th-ranked Iowa men's gymnastics team takes on No. 4 Minnesota in the Hawkeyes' last home meet of the season, Saturday at 3 p.m. in the Fieldhouse North Gym. Minnesota leads the all-time series 37-29. They defeated the Hawkeyes 280.65-279.05 last season in Minneapolis.

"They're going to be pretty strong," senior Chris Kabat said. "They're going to put their Big Ten lineup up against us. So all their guns are going to be pointed at us, so we've got to answer back."

"It should be a great one. It's going to come down to the wire and I think it should be fun to watch."

Qualifying for regionals remains a top priority for the Hawkeyes as they strive to increase their team score.

"Tensions are a little high since it's been so long since we haven't qualified," Kabat said. "To keep the tradition going we want to do better."

Coach Tom Dunn said even though the team is capable of making it to regionals, it won't be easy.

"I'm happy that we're improving, but I'm disappointed that we're not where we want to be," Dunn said. "Qualifying for regionals is going to be a real chore. We have one more chance to improve our home score (this) weekend against Minnesota."

According to Dunn, inconsistency has kept the team score lower than it should be, but feels that changes in the lineup may help resolve the problem.

"Luckily we have some depth," Dunn said. "We might try some new people this week in order to gain some much needed consistency. We're only hitting about 63 percent, but we have to be hitting closer to 80 percent to really stay in the thick of it."

Kabat feels that the Hawkeyes need to come together as a team and have everyone hit their routines on Saturday.

"We just haven't been able to put together a great meet yet," Kabat said. "We've had some pretty good ones, but not great, which they need to be. Hitting routines, that's what is going to make us win."

Kabat, who will be competing in the Fieldhouse for the last time, said it will be to the Hawkeyes' advantage to compete in their home gym.

"It's a big advantage," Kabat said. "We're on our home equipment, we get our hometown crowd and hopefully it will help us."

Kabat's goal is to finish up his last home meet in style and to nail all of his routines.

"I want to hit however many routines I'm doing," Kabat said. "I want to hit them all and go out with a bang since it is the last one."

MAJOR LEAGUES

Owners ready massive changes

Ronald Blum
Associated Press

PHOENIX — Baseball owners drew plans for changing the landscape of the sport Thursday, giving preliminary approval for expanded playoffs, interleague play and splitting each league into three divisions.

The moves could be in place by 1995.

In a pair of straw votes that were overwhelming but not unanimous, the owners approved doubling the playoffs from four teams to eight by adding an extra round, and splitting each league into two divisions of five teams and one division of four.

They also asked schedule-makers to include 10 to 20 interleague games per season for each team, taking natural rivalries into account. The only interleague play this century has been in spring training, the All-Star game and the World Series.

"I think there is a great possibility the landscape is changing," said Milwaukee Brewers president Bud Selig, chairman of the ruling executive council.

"We're in a very competitive business with a lot of forms of entertainment," he said. "There's no industry that can afford to sit back."

The changes were sparked by a six-month examination of baseball's future following commissioner Fay Vincent's forced resignation last Sept. 7. Many owners are worried about finances, and see expanded playoffs as a way of adding revenue by creating more games for television and pennant races.

"It will add attendance in September," said Peter Magowan, the new managing general partner of the San Francisco Giants.

Baseball has been the most conservative of the major team sports. The National League, which started play in 1876, and the American League, which formed in 1900, sent their champions directly to the World Series before dividing into divisions for 1969.

Traditionalists have ridiculed the NFL, NBA and NHL for their extended playoffs, which, some say, lessen the significance of the regular season.

"When baseball doesn't do anything, they say these guys are staid, they're living in the 19th century," Selig said.

Twelve of 28 teams make the NFL playoffs; 16 of 27 make the NBA playoffs; and 16 of 24 make the NHL playoffs.

"I think eight teams out of 28 is not an excessive number of teams," Selig said. "And while I don't want to comment on the other sports, it's less than the other sports."

Possible Realignment

At owners meetings Thursday, Philadelphia Phillies president Bill Giles proposed the following realignment for Major League baseball:

NL East — Florida, Montreal, New York Mets, Philadelphia, Pittsburgh.

NL Central — Atlanta, Chicago Cubs, Cincinnati, Houston, St. Louis.

NL West — Colorado, Los Angeles, San Diego, San Francisco.

AL East — Baltimore, Boston, Cleveland, New York Yankees, Toronto.

AL Central — Chicago White Sox, Detroit, Kansas City, Milwaukee, Minnesota.

AL West — California, Seattle, Oakland, Texas.

The changes must be approved by the Major League Baseball Players Association and could be tied to a change in the collective bargaining agreement. While drafts with the changes will be prepared for 1994, owners said starting the following year was much more realistic.

"It's a very important step," said John Harrington of the Boston Red Sox, who made the proposals in his role as head of the schedule-format committee. "Now we have to put our shoulder to the wheel and develop some schedules."

The exact makeup of the divisions hasn't been determined.

Harrington asked for two straw votes at these meetings, the owners' seventh in six months. The first authorized him to draw up schedules for three divisions in each league, and the second gave the go-ahead for three divisions and interleague play. Selig said there was little opposition.

Harrington said a survey of about 11,000 season-ticket holders showed 55 percent were in favor of expanded playoffs, including two-thirds of fans aged 18 to 34. Harrington's group must now come up with drafts for both balanced and unbalanced schedules, and decide whether to propose that the regular season be shortened from 162 games.

"It remains to be seen whether a schedule can be made," Chicago White Sox chairman Jerry Reinsdorf said. "That's a big IF in everybody's mind. They want to see the schedule."

On other matters, Selig said new initiatives on minority hiring and mandatory directives on speeding up games will be announced within two weeks.

There was no action taken on the report by the restructuring committee, which, according to several owners, recommended that the next commissioner be stripped of authority over the current labor negotiations. Selig said he thought the report would be discussed at a special meeting next month.

Teams agreed to share financial data among themselves. The resolution was urged by Richard Ravitch, the chief labor negotiator, who is trying to get the bigger clubs to share more of revenue with the smaller teams.

Jackson's hip takes first test

Associated Press

Baseball's most famous hip was put to an important test on the first day of the exhibition season. And Bo Jackson, who knows many things, still doesn't know how well he can run.

"It's just the first game," he said Thursday. "I think you guys are expecting too much."

Jackson, playing for the first time with his artificial left hip, went 1 for 4 with an RBI single as the designated hitter for the Chicago White Sox. He left after five innings of an 11-10 loss to the Pittsburgh Pirates at Sarasota, Fla.

The 30-year-old slugger never needed to run all out. And that's just as well because he also is hobbled by a sore right hamstring. So he did what any mortal would — he limped on the bases.

Jackson was not on the team's travel roster for Friday game's at Lakeland, Fla. He said he thought he'd be ready for Saturday's game against Texas.

"There's no need to play every day," he said. "I don't need to be the DH every day. I don't need to play first base every day."

Even so, he will need to do enough to convince the White Sox that his plastic-and-metal hip can stand the rigors of a full season.

The White Sox have until March 15 to either pick up his contract, which guarantees him $910,000 and has another $1.5 million in incentives, or pay $150,000 to release him.

Jackson has not played in a major league game that counted since the final month of the 1991 season for the White Sox. However, the club has built a ticket campaign around his return. They just don't know, and neither does anyone else, whether he can make it back.

In other news, some Cincinnati Reds players aren't surprised general manager Jim Bowden said he would trade a star player eligible for free agency rather than lose him without compensation.

Pitchers Jose Rijo and Tim Lincecum, second baseman Bip Roberts and third baseman Chris Sabo are eligible to be free agents after this season unless the Reds sign them to long-term contracts.

Bowden said this week that he would trade one of the four by opening day if he cannot sign one to a long-term deal. The Reds' winter loss of free-agent starter Greg Swindell to Houston has made Bowden wary.

"It's certainly not news to me," Belcher said of Bowden's statement. "I've earned the right to choose where I'll work, and who I'll work for. Cincinnati is certainly high on my list. It's not a decision I'll take lightly."

There's now an ironic twist in the Kelly Gruber saga. The California Angels, mainly manager Buck Rodgers, screamed foul after Gruber was forced to undergo shoulder surgery last month. But Luis Sojo, the other party in the Dec. 7 deal between the Angels and Toronto, has a sore left wrist.

While test results showed no damage, the Jays say Sojo had "instability" in a small joint in his left hand.

When informed of Sojo's status, Gruber said: "I hope I can come back and have them (the Jays) complain even more."

Dodgers pitcher Ramon Martinez displayed newfound command of his mechanics by pitching three strong innings in a minor-league camp game.

Gonzo biographers relate tales of true hell

Dana Kennedy
Associated Press

NEW YORK — E. Jean Carroll's voice rises to a near shriek when she describes the ordeal of interviewing Hunter Thompson for her new biography, one of three due this year on the aging Doctor of Gonzo Journalism.

During two separate weeks spent at Thompson's legendary Owl Farm in Woody Creek, Colo., Carroll downed LSD, fended off his sexual advances, hoped his many loaded guns wouldn't go off, developed cold sores from stress and lost five pounds from excitement.

"You're in the house, he's shoving acid down your throat, he's giving you major drugs. Throughout the house on every surface is a loaded firearm; on the countertop in the kitchen, he has bombs; he has bows and arrows, swords," says Carroll, who includes these details and more in "Hunter: The Strange and Savage Life of Hunter S. Thompson" (Dutton, $25).

Thompson, 53, author of the classic "Fear and Loathing in Las Vegas" and "Hell's Angels," among others, is one of those rare few who live their art, according to Carroll.

"Say you make it through the day and you haven't been shot dead. Then he backs out the car to go to dinner in town, he goes down these mountaintops at 125 mph. I would get in the car and roll up in a ball. If you look like you'll cry, he might stop. You know, he's been drinking all day and he's driving."

Carroll, a 40-ish journalist who was the first woman contributing editor at Playboy, met Thompson in the early 1980s at Elaine's, the same East Side restaurant where Woody Allen was introduced to Mia Farrow.

Thompson wheeled around to look at Carroll at an adjoining table and couldn't stop staring. Carroll knew why. She looked just like his ex-mistress.

"I whispered the name of the mistress and he went (nuts)," Carroll says.

Carroll, who lives alone in Nyack, N.Y., made two pilgrimages to Woody Creek in 1991 to gather material for her book. She also met with Thompson on his forays to Manhattan. When she details the chaos that surrounds Thompson, she uses dialogue that could be lifted from one of his books.

"At Hunter's ranch, he has peacocks. They make bull elephants sound quiet. Hunter screams all the time. It's a bloodcurdling scream," says Carroll.

"While he's working, he'll have two young, juicy succulent assistants by his side, there'll be porno movies going all the time and peacocks going and Hunter losing his temper. I watched 'Caligula' 'til I nearly died. His line is he can't work without distraction."

Paul Perry, 42, author of "Fear and Loathing — The Strange and Terrible Saga of Hunter S. Thompson" (Thunder's Mouth Press, $22.95), and Peter O. Whitmer, 46, whose "When the Going Gets Weird: The Twisted Life and Times of Hunter S. Thompson" (Hyperion $21.95) comes out in April, also had memorable encounters with Thompson.

"I felt Hunter's creativity was so unusual — I wanted to know what kind of crucible this thing crawled out of," says Whitmer, who interviewed Thompson in the middle of a tornado in the Florida Keys in 1983.

Thompson's last books, "Generation of Swine," and "Songs of the Doomed," failed to generate the critical acclaim or sales of his earlier work. Holed up in Woody Creek, where he has stubbornly maintained a lonely vigil against the "Just Say No" generation, Thompson is thought to either be hopelessly past his peak or just saving the best for last.

He's under contract to Random House for a novel called "Polo Is My Life." Carroll is sure he'll finish it; Whitmer muttered darkly that Thompson will never write it.

Perry, who lives in Scottsdale, Ariz., is a former editor of Running magazine and Whitmer, of Princeton, Mass., is a clinical psychologist and author of "Aquarius Revisited."

Neither Carroll, Perry or Whitmer know why all three came out with books this year.

Perry's book is an earnest, straightforward account; Whitmer's is an exhaustively researched psychobiography (including such details as the topography of Thompson's hometown of Louisville, Ky.).

Carroll's is an odd hybrid of fictionalized whimsy and absorbing oral history. Her interviews with Thompson's ex-wife, family and friends tell a sharper, more emotional story than the other two books. Carroll is the only one who goes into detail about Thompson's sometimes brutal relationship with his alcoholic mother and his history of beating women.

Some chapters involve her alter ego, Laetitia Snap, an ornithologist

Paul Harris/Outline
Dr. Hunter "Gonzo" Thompson, pictured here in his Owl Farm kitchen, is the subject of several new biographies to be released this month and in April.

who visits Thompson's ranch to see his peacock collection. The fictional Snap is seduced by Thompson in his hot tub.

Though Carroll gave Details magazine the impression she had an affair with Thompson, she now says they kept it platonic despite Thompson's aggressive overtures and the fact that he's "very sexy." But Carroll insists all the sexual details about Thompson are true since she interviewed many of his girlfriends and ex-wife.

The three writers don't know what Thompson thinks of the books. Thompson kicked Carroll out after her last visit when the two had a fistfight. She hasn't heard from him in several months.

Whitmer got a menu in the mail of Thompson's favorite haunt — the Woody Creek Tavern — with the words "PUBLISH AND DIE" written on it.

"Hunter's really one of the last wild men in America untouched by biography," says Perry, who reports being somewhat "stonewalled" by Thompson, as were the other authors.

"He's very much an anarchist. There's an anarchist core in everyone. Certainly, there's one in me." Perry worked with Thompson off and on while at Running magazine. But the two "went on different roads" in 1988 and haven't been in contact since.

Whitmer met Thompson when he was at the University of California, Berkeley, in the 1960s. His "Aquarius Revisited" was a study of the counterculture heroes he met at Berkeley — William Burroughs, Ken Kesey, Timothy Leary, Tom Robbins, Allen Ginsberg, Norman Mailer, Thompson.

The chapters on Thompson in "Aquarius Revisited" got the most reaction, and Whitmer decided to do a full-length book.

"He's an episodic individual," says Whitmer. "He's a binge eater, a druggie. When he's funny, there's nobody funnier. When he's nasty, there's no one nastier."

Carroll agrees — on both counts. "Hunter is one of the most fun people," says Carroll, almost wistfully. "The hair on my legs grew much faster when I was around Hunter. You'll never have more fun with anyone in your life than with Hunter. He sets you free. But then you pay big."

Nathan Leopold (Craig Chester) lies on his bed "Swoon," Tom Kalin's retelling of the 1924 Leopold-musing on murder and playing with dead birds in Loeb murder case, playing this weekend at the Bijou.

Kalin's 'Swoon' not very effective, despite plot's compelling message

Tasha Robinson
The Daily Iowan

In Chicago in the early 1920s, two teen-agers kidnaped and murdered a young boy in a case that dominated headlines and shook the community. The murderers were intelligent boys from wealthy families, with no apparent need for the money they planned to get by demanding ransom from the victim's parents.

They were also lovers, a fact which guaranteed media fascination and which became a central point for and against them in the eventual murder trial.

Alfred Hitchcock's "Rope" (1948) and Richard Fleisher's "Compulsion" (1959), both highly rated films, dealt with this case, but Tom Kalin's debut film "Swoon" has a new approach, arguing that the couple's homosexuality was absolutely incidental to the murder, despite the sensationalism implying a direct link.

The film, starring newcomers Daniel Schlacht and Craig Chester as Richard "Dickie" Loeb and Nathan "Babe" Leopold ("Angel-face" and "Mastermind," to the press) can be difficult to follow for someone not familiar with the real-life story. The plot is rarely straightforward, with obvious anachronisms, deliberate, distracting departures from realism, minimalist sets and grainy, often-muddled black and white cinematography giving the film a distinctly surrealistic tone.

The characters can also be hard to follow, as the film's point of view changes frequently: the audience gets to see how the two appear to each other, to themselves, to the court, to society, and to other criminals, all in fairly short order. Weaving together a cogent understanding of the true personalities of the murderers is impossible, despite Kalin's apparent attempt to present a more realistic and honest view than past portrayals have.

In fact, Kalin's interpretations provide the most divergent and interesting material in "Swoon." Those shocked and horrified by the now-infamous art-class video had better steer clear; while not graphic or exploitative in its depictions of gay sex (unless men in white boxers offend you), the film's thrust seems to be that the community's opprobrium, ostensibly aimed at the murder of Bobby Franks, is merely a thin veil covering an overwhelming sense of disgust and outrage over the pair's sexuality. This same veil facilitates an unnervingly cold cover-up that allows another murder, albeit one with less tabloid-filling prurient interest attached, to go unpunished. This message may hit a little too close to home for some.

As an ideological concept, this point is interesting; as a historical revelation, it is shocking; but as a cinematic twist, it's too little too late. The long, muddily shot trek through the crime, the capture and the subsequent trial shines only when diverging significantly from the historical, as in the scene where the pair engage in a marriage ceremony while alone in a burned-out house, or in the jarring but amusing phrenology segment, which pokes fun at analysis of a person's personality through superficial means.

Overall, "Swoon" is interesting as an exercise in historical revisionism and an exploration into sensationalism, homophobia and prejudice, but it doesn't make for a particularly compelling story. With "The Crying Game" and "Reservoir Dogs" currently in town, there are better choices available.

"Swoon" is playing at the Bijou tonight at 8:30 and 10:15 and Saturday at 6:30 p.m.

Diverse 'Percussion Day' at UI to feature state performers, lecture

The Daily Iowan

The Iowa chapter of the Percussive Arts Society will hold its 1993 "Day of Percussion" today at the UI.

All of today's activities will be held in Voxman Hall in the UI Music Building and will include concerts, workshops and lectures on percussion instruments. All of the activities are free and open to the public.

The Percussive Arts Society is an international organization for percussive performers, with local chapters in all 50 states and in countries around the world.

The "Day of Percussion" is an annual event for the state chapter and rotates each year between the three state universities and Drake University. UI graduate student Mark Dorr is state chapter president this year and organized today's events.

A highlight of today's schedule will be a lecture by Lawrence Kaptain, the percussion instructor at the University of Missouri/Kansas City Conservatory of Music. Kaptain, an internationally known expert on the Marimba music of Mexico and Central America, will speak on "The Wood that Sings — The Marimba in Chiapas, Mexico" at 10 a.m.

Percussion groups from six Iowa colleges and universities will perform, including a concert at 2:30 p.m. by the Grinnell College Gamelan Orchestra — an ensemble of southeast Asian gongs, drums and percussion instruments.

Other "percussive" events scheduled for today will include:

■ A concert by the UI Percussion Ensemble, directed by Thomas Davis, at 9 a.m.

■ A concert by the Iowa State University Ensemble, directed by Barry Larkin, at 1:30 p.m.

■ A concert by the University of Northern Iowa Percussion Ensemble, directed by Randy Hogancamp, at 3:30 p.m.

■ A tribute to the Brazilian samba by the combined percussion ensembles of Coe College and Kirkwood Community College, directed by Alan Lawrence and Jim Drier, at 4:30 p.m.

Guitarist Todd Seelye to give recital

The Daily Iowan

The UI Center for New Music will present guitarist Todd Seelye in a free recital on Sunday at 8 p.m. in Clapp Recital Hall on the UI campus.

Seelye is a member of the music facilities of both Grinnell College and Iowa State University. He has made appearances throughout the United States, including a featured recital at the Guitar Foundation of America in New Orleans and performances on the Kilborn Series of the Eastman School of Music and the Village Variations Series in New York.

Seelye's program of contemporary music will include Richard Swift's "A Stitch in Time," which was written for Seelye, and Robert Morris' "To the Nine" for guitar and electronics. Other selections include "The Behaviour of Mirrors" by Roger Reynolds, "All in Twilight" by Toru Takemitsu, "Changes" by Elliott Carter and "Echo" by Robert Moevs. The program will conclude with Leo Brouwer's "Le Decameron Noir," which combines elements of Latin-American, East-African and East-Indian music.

The recital will be free.

The Saturday concert, titled "From Berlin to Bernstein," will include the best of Broadway tunes, from Irving Berlin's "Alexander's Ragtime Band" to Leonard Bernstein's "Candide" and "West Side Story." Sunday's program, titled "The New York Pops Goes to the Movies," will feature popular melodies from "Beauty and the Beast," "Chariots of Fire," "Alfie," "Breakfast at Tiffany's," "Gone With the Wind" and many other films.

Henderson has long been a fixture on the American musical scene, directing music for the "Today" and "Tonight" shows, writing arrangements for Cole Porter and Irving Berlin, and accompanying such Hollywood legends as Judy Garland, Frank Sinatra and Bing Crosby. In a career spanning more than five decades, Henderson has also conducted the major orchestras of America, Europe and Australia.

A decade ago Henderson brought together many of New York's finest musicians to found the New York Pops, an orchestra that has become a New York institution.

The Pops' annual series of concerts in Carnegie Hall is always sold out, and the orchestra presents many programs to introduce children to the orchestra. In 1991 Henderson took the orchestra on its first international tour and conducted its first recording "From Berlin to Broadway."

Tickets for the Saturday and Sunday New York Pops concerts are $36, $34 and $31, and are on sale at the Hancher Box Office. UI students and senior citizens receive a 20 percent discount, and tickets for people 18 and under are half-price. For more information, call 1-800-HANCHER.

BANDS

Daniel Corrigan/A & M Records

Soul Asylum, which will play tonight in the Main Lounge of the Union. The group's latest album, Grave Dancers Union, has been quite successful on college and national music charts.

Grungy funksters Soul Asylum to blow apart the Union Sunday

Jon Yates
The Daily Iowan
Screw Seattle.
The true music capital of the United States is right here in the Midwest, just north of Albert Lea and a little south of Coon Rapids.
This Sunday in the Main Lounge of the Union, grunge-funksters Soul Asylum will once again show why, when it comes to music, Minneapolis (The Replacements, Jayhawks, Trip Shakespeare, etc.) is king.
With 10 years of experience under their belt and nine albums in the tow, Soul Asylum is teetering on the precipice of becoming Really Big (whatever the hell that means).
They've played Letterman, had an MTV Buzz Clip and gotten spiffed up for Clinton's inaugural ball, all in support of their latest album, the critically acclaimed Grave Dancers Union.
And while the band has been called "the greatest live band in America," there are some who say their latest album betrays their ragged charm, that it fails to capture the flavor and fever of the band's live performances, that it is overproduced.

Well, they're right.
But while Grave Dancers Union fails to catch the true spirit of the band in the way their previous album Soul Asylum and the Horse They Rode In On (recorded live in the studio) did, it is still a very solid album.
I mean, Rolling Stone magazine did give it their complimentary three-and-a-half stars.
Sure, the writing is solid, from the infectious "Somebody to Shove" and latest release "Black Gold," to the upbeat but lyrically depressing "Without a Trace." Frontman David Pirner has penned some of his best tunes to date.
But to truly appreciate Soul Asylum, they must be seen live.
A former Gabe's staple, Pirner et al. played Iowa City twice in support of And the Horse They Rode In On in 1990, one a raucous, sold-out show at Gabe's, the other a more subdued free show at Hubbard Park for Riverfest.

To this date, their latest Gabe's show still goes down as one of the greatest live shows I have ever seen.
The Riverfest show, on the other hand was, well, less than inspiring.
Pirner seemed drunk and the outdoor venue failed to capture the excitement you can only get when 1,000 college students squeeze into a small room, become inspired by loud, funky music, and start shoving.
Mmmmm. Memories.
If recent reports are any indication, the band has trashed their all-out grunge-rock set in favor of one peppered with a number of acoustic tracks, allowing the band members to better showcase their kinder, gentler side.
Whatever the case, Soul Asylum continues to be one of the nation's premier live rock bands, and Sunday's show should prove to be no exception.
The boys in Seattle can just go hungry.

King's off-Broadway 'Tapestry' sounds wonderful, looks boring

Many of the show's songs were lifted from King's 1971 mega-hit bestselling album Tapestry.
Mary Campbell
Associated Press
NEW YORK — "Tapestry," a revue of songs composed by Carole King, has opened off-Broadway. It's a joy in one way, a disappointment in another.
The joy, in the show that opened late last month at the Union Square Theater, is that King's songs — often about friendship or romance — have held up so well. Some in the audience lived their adolescences and did their courting to her songs. What a pleasurable vindication of taste that the songs, some from the early 1960s, sound as fresh and meaningful as they did when they were new.
The disappointment is in the presentation. Six singers move around a stage with some ramps on it in studied, self-conscious, elaborate attempts to be casual. Maybe when they're more used to the stage, they'll actually be casual.
"Tapestry," of course, is the name of King's 1971 record album, which made musical history by selling more than 10 million copies in two years.
Lawrence Clayton sings well, projecting a Luther Vandross-style romantic masculinity. Once, he would have been compared with Billy Eckstine. Frank Mastrone has a folk-rock feel, with Mandy Patinkin's way of shading with falsetto. Jim Morlino sounds like he could step into a Broadway musical.

The women fare less well. Patti Darcy Jones sounds as though she strained her voice in rehearsals; she has almost no singing voice left. Mary Gutzki went from pianissimo to drama in her singing but she worked too hard, sounding as though she wanted listeners to think of her as sensitive or a diva. Singing the song so that it, more than the singer's attitude, reaches the listener is more effective.
Vanessa A. Jones gets it right. She's a fine soul singer who stands out without pushing to stand out.
Jeffrey Martin directed. He kept the singers moving, which gave variety, but sometimes covered individual songs in "business." We kept remembering a King concert at Carnegie Hall in which she sat in one place to accompany herself on piano and the songs spoke as songs.
Musical arrangements by John Kroner are good. All the music is by King; lyrics are by Gerry Goffin or both of them.
The songs are wonderful, presented in 90 minutes without intermission. An "early years" medley was particularly enjoyable. Those songs were churned out, for other performers, in the Tin Pan Alley tradition.
They were simple but don't sound silly even now, though the performers poked a bit of fun at some of them. They included "Don't Say Nothin' Bad (About My Baby)," "Will You Still Love Me Tomorrow?," "I'm Into Something Good," "Take Good Care of My Baby" and

"One Fine Day."
And of course the revue has the big hits written by King, "A Natural Woman," "I Feel the Earth Move," "Up on the Roof," and "You've Got a Friend."
Choice new music.
