New measure to raise living costs 3.8% if approved

Brad Haden
The Daily Iowan

Students living in residence halls and family housing may see a new rate and board increase if a proposal from the UI is approved. If the measure is passed, the average student in residence halls will see a 3.8 percent increase, while family housing residents will see a 2.9 percent increase in living costs.

A student living in a double occupancy room with a 20 meal per semester plan will have rates raised by $119, or 3.5 percent of the current rate. Students living in a triple room will see a 3.2 percent increase, and those in a quadruple room will see a 2.7 percent increase.

If students fail to vote, the rate will remain the same, but the total cost of living in residence halls will increase by $119 per semester.

State asked to drop Street case charges

John Yales
The Daily Iowan

A lot of teenagers, police, parents, and others are saying that Iowa City police are being too aggressive in their pursuit of street cases.

The police have been targeting teenagers who are not following the rules in the downtown area and have been issuing tickets to them. However, many teenagers are saying that they are being targeted unfairly and that the police are overstepping their bounds.

In response to these concerns, the state is being asked to drop the street case charges against teenagers.

Winter storm buries East Coast

The US East Coast was blanketed with snow on Monday, February 13, as a winter storm swept across the region.

The storm dropped up to 30 inches of snow on New York City, Boston, and Philadelphia, causing major travel disruptions and power outages.

The storm also caused problems for South Carolina, where 100,000 homes and businesses lost power.

Gays speak out against military code

Yolanda Mata
The Daily Iowan

Gays and lesbians are speaking out against the military code, which bans them from serving in the military.

Many gays and lesbians are saying that they are being discriminated against and denied their right to serve their country.

Some are calling for the repeal of the code, while others are calling for a change in the military's policies.

10% homosexual population believed misleading number

Yolanda Mata
The Daily Iowan

Although some studies have estimated that about 10% of the population is homosexual, many people believe that the number is much lower.

A recent study by the American Psychiatric Association estimated that the number of homosexuals is much lower than 10%.

The study found that the numbers are much lower, and that many people are coming out of the closet.

Some say that the numbers are misleading, and that many people are not being counted.

Others say that the numbers are accurate, and that the problem is not as big as many people think.

POLITICAL POTENTIAL OF MILITARY CODE

Yolanda Mata
The Daily Iowan

The military code that bans gays from serving in the military is one of the most controversial issues in the country.

Many people believe that the code is unfair and discriminatory, and that it should be repealed.

Others say that the code is necessary to maintain discipline and order in the military.

Some believe that the code is needed to keep the country safe.

The debate over the military code is likely to continue for some time to come.

Everyone Welcome!
Many students spend spring break at home

Molly Spann
The Daily Iowan

Although it may seem like everyone’s heading south for spring break, a lack of funds or too much schoolwork will keep many (1 in 10) students in Iowa for the week. UI junior Terry Hagen said she has closed her book after spring break will keep her busy in Iowa. "I will be working to keep my family afloat," she said.

UI junior Hunter Turner said she has never vacationed on spring break. This year she said he plans to stick around Iowa City.

"I don’t want to spend the money because I have a lot of other expenses, like paying for computer莲花es and credit card bills," he said.

"Last year I had so much fun and it’s going to be nice to get away from Iowa City as it is," Hagen said. "It’s going to be a spring break even if I have to write papers, just as long as I don’t have to be in class."

"We are also keeping UI junior Hunter Hock in Iowa City," he said. "He said he is going to work and save money, rather than spending it all."

"It really made because I need to get out of here," he said. "Spring City is driving me nuts."

"It doesn’t seem like the kids are doing anything, so I said, ‘I will just work through it,’" the said. "I just work through every year and I don’t want to stay here and I love the beach."

Deadline for committee approval of nonfiscal bills fast approaching

Tom Sorey
Assoc. Editor, Press

DBM MOVES — This is the deadline for the new Legislature.

Nonfiscal bills that do not win approval of a House or Senate committee by the end of the week are ineligible for further action.

Hanging in the balance are revenue measures, including taxation proposals of local governments, local-government financing clauses and pari-mutuel taxes.

The death penalty and abortion measures have long been supported by Republicans Gov. Terry Branstad, who hoped to make a breakthrough this year with the Republican-led House of Representatives. This is the first time in Branstad’s 10 years as governor that Republicans control the legislative chamber.

But abortion and the death penalty are not strictly partisan issues, and House committees have rejected the governor’s proposals so far.

Branstad has allowed for death penalty proposal opposed in a bill to pass unanimously, which would allow a judge to allow execution of the 15-year-old if that would help win committee approval of a bill reinstating the death penalty that was repealed in 1983.

"I want to keep this line and catch up on homework and try to find a summer job," Turner said that when he date enough money saved to go on a trip, "but I’d like it to be longer than a week.

"I don’t think it is a normal measure for keeping UI Junior Hunter Hock in Iowa City. He said he is going to work and save money, rather than spending it all."

"It really made because I need to get out of here," he said. "Spring City is driving me nuts."

Ki Pants: Viewpoints

Where the high and the mighty fall short

Pants. Let's say you've probably noticed that many of the casual conversations and emails that you get from your superiors are a bit off. They seem to be lacking the real-world language that you're used to hearing. They often use words that sound a bit...off.

I'm not saying that everything is wrong, but it does seem like there's a disconnect between the language that we use in our daily lives and the language that we use in the workplace.

Let's face it: public ridicule is not new to the law at the time.

If you're a mathematics course. The UI is disgusting. It's that obvious. The language used by the UI is...well, it's not exactly flattering. It's more like a public relations nightmare.

How is this possible?

There are several reasons. First, the UI is a large institution with over 50,000 students and hundreds of professors. It's simply too big to police everyone's language.

Second, the UI has a history of poor communication. Over the years, there have been countless complaints about the language used by UI faculty and staff.

Third, the UI is a public institution. It's simply not in the best interest of the university to police every single word that its faculty and staff use.

The result is a culture of poor language use that is not only unacceptable, but also damaging to the university's reputation.

We need to do something about this. We need to start holding our professors and staff accountable for their language use. We need to make it clear that poor language use will not be tolerated.

That's why I'm calling for a change in the language used by our professors and staff.

They need to start using language that is appropriate for a public institution. They need to start using language that is respectful and professional.

This is not just a matter of improving the university's reputation.

It's also a matter of improving the educational experience for all of our students. If our professors and staff are using language that is inappropriate, then our students are not getting the best possible education.

UN-backed peace proposal

David Cryer

Associated Press

The United Nations, locked in a diplomatic standoff, said it would propose a peace plan, backed by the United States and Russia, to end the Bosnian war.

"The United Nations, locked in a diplomatic standoff, said it would propose a peace plan, backed by the United States and Russia, to end the Bosnian war."

UN officials said in Geneva that they would propose a plan to end the war in Bosnia and Herzegovina.

They said the plan included a ceasefire in the war-torn country, with a view to a political solution to the conflict.

The UN mission, which has been involved in the negotiations for more than a year, aims to bring an end to the fighting and to start the process of reunification.

The plan calls for a ceasefire to be followed by a political process, with the aim of creating a single state for all ethnic groups.

The UN said it would work with all parties to ensure that the peace plan is implemented.

The UN mission in Bosnia and Herzegovina has been working to broker a peace agreement between the country’s three main ethnic groups: Bosniaks, Croats and Serbs.

The mission has been involved in negotiations since 1992, when the Bosnian war broke out.

"We're going to be an aggressive Iowa team," Blevins said.

"I think that the basketball selection committee were looking at the kind of intensity, we'll stay on that roll and keep up victories. I don't think that a No. 2 seed lacks the kind of intensity," Schillig said. "They would like to play their kind of game and that's what we were worried about when we talked about the attitude that we have to have and the direction that we're going to be heading with this," Scallin said.

HAWKES: Win fourth straight

"I just gained a lot of confidence and I'm happy we got the win," Iowa's Wade said.

The Hawkeyes finished their season regular record to 10-7 with their 6-3 win over Georgia Southern Club. In the second set, she won all six points, winning with a win of 6-4 in the first set of, 6-3 and 6-3.

At the University of Iowa, Wade did not play in the fourth, but was pleased with her performance and with one out but

Hawkeyes finish a forgettable 14th at Fripp Island. Invite

Karen L. Karados

The Iowa men's golf team closed out their fall season in 14th place at the 54-hole Fripp Island Invitational before competition was even finished.

Ball State took first place in the 10-team tournament with a total of 811. Virginia Commonwealth came in second with 811, while Rutgers put forth an impressive 812 put in third. The Hawkeyes came in 14th place after taking a 218 in the tournament, which was quite disappointing for Brian Wilson and the team.

Wilson, who also shot an 87, the best tally for the Hawkeyes. "As a team it was disappointing because we have high expectations from last year and hopefully we can bring about this tournament and get on with our preparations," McCarty said. "McCarthy, who shot an 87, agrees that it is best for the team to put this experience behind them."

"I think we did really well, and we performed to great performance," Wilson said. "It's ready for Big Ten season, we just need to work on 24 mistakes, on each event.

Furrer broke his eighth school record in her first season as a sophomore. Her first place finish of 76 on would replace her previous record of 8.06 set on February 18. The Daily Iowan."
Carpenter's horror yarns blend intellect, splattering special effects

He's the one who gave us "Halloween."

Ian Cowlis
The Daily Iowan

Urbane thriller is in its death throes. The down-and-out prodigy: That's how the Indy Press has chosen to frame the story of John Carpenter, the horror movie master. The horror genre has sadly lost its grip on the American public, and the only way to get a plot that will go to press is by appealing to the genre-hungry masses, with guns, gore, and more disgusting special effects.

But with They Live, Carpenter strikes to the original source material (a comic book story about a geisha movie that has intrigued fans for years). It makes the thing a character-driven plot that has genuine horror and humanity at its core. Carpenter is at his best when he plays in this genuine way, with gore, sex, and more disgusting special effects.

Kurt Russell directs the story of a construction worker who stumbles upon an underground movement that has the power to change the world. Carpenter's son Parker and Carpenter-staple Roddy Piper are the main stars in the inner circle, with the help of Allene Gaddis, who plays the main voice on the radio. Carpenter's son Lucas, who is the voice of the inner circle, is the voice of reason and authority.

But the story's peculiarity is that the aliens' presence is not discovered by the memory, or an extensive network of underground broadcasting equipment has been set up, providing the aliens with the means to gain the upper hand. Instead, the aliens are revealed to the public by "Watch TV - Yes, it's your friends.

Carpenter's story is a long way since "Halloween." He started with the most thrilling scene ever, a jump scare that left audiences breathless. Carpenter then went on to create a classic horror film, "The Thing." He's continued to push the boundaries of the genre, and his latest work is a true masterpiece.

And so, the question arises: What's next for Carpenter? Will he continue to push the boundaries of the genre, or will he settle into more sedate fare, like a horror-comedy hybrid? Only time will tell.

The Middle East has always brought to mind visions of sheiks, harems and exotic romance. Nowhere has this been more so than in the area associated with the late Palestinian poet Samir Kassara and the late Palestinian poet Salim Hijazi, who were both known for their romantic and erotic poetry. The exhibit "Nomads in Our Midst" will be held April 1-4 at the University of Iowa Museum of Art, featuring more than 700 works from the 19th and 20th centuries, including textiles, rugs, jewelry, ceramics, and more. The exhibit is free and open to the public.
