J hostile, ban on gay partners

A University of Iowa faculty member has renewed his proposal to add a ban on gay partners to the university's policy on domestic partners.

This proposal, which has been rejected by the Academic Senate, is aimed at providing health-care benefits to gay and lesbian employees.

Pomerantz reappointed to Iowa state Board of Regents

Brad Hahn

The Daily Iowan

Iowa state Board of Regents President Karen Pence was appointed to another year term on the board by Gov. Terry Branstad.

This appointment was not surprising, as Pence has been one of the board's most vocal supporters, and her appointment was widely expected.

The reappointment did not come as a surprise to many, as it had been widely speculated that Pence would serve another term.

"We're not surprised about Mr. Pomerantz," UI President Venard K. T. Pomerantz said. "He's always been willing to do his part to move forward, and the board is glad he's on board."

WARM WEATHER EVOKES SPRING FEVER IN SOME

Molly Spowe

The Daily Iowan

While Mother Nature tosses Iowa with seemingly unreasonably warm temperatures, some students are feeling the fever for spring.

"I've really had a tough time," said Brien Ries, a junior from Indianola. "I've been out of town, and when it gets warm I can't take my robe and walk around outside, so I get really cold and want to go home and start seeing the leaves grow, too."Ries, who is majoring in industrial engineering, said he enjoys the weather but still has work to do.

"I can't just sit around outside and enjoy it," he said. "I still have to do my homework and work on my thesis."Ries is currently completing his thesis on the design and implementation of a new computerized system for a local manufacturing company.

In addition to spring fever, some students are also looking forward to the upcoming graduation season. "I'm really excited to graduate," said Richard Smith, a senior from Altoona majoring in accounting. "I've been working hard for the past four years, and I can't wait to finally get my degree."Smith is currently working on his senior thesis, which focuses on the effects of government regulations on the accounting industry.

Some students are also looking forward to the upcoming spring sports season. "I can't wait for baseball season to start," said Jennifer Johnson, a junior from Clive majoring in biology. "I'm a huge fan of the Iowa Hawkeyes, and I can't wait to see them play."Johnson is a member of the Iowa Women's Basketball Team and is looking forward to the upcoming season.

In conclusion, while some students are enjoying the warm weather, others are looking forward to the upcoming graduation season and the spring sports season. "I'm really excited to see what the future holds," said Smith. "I'm ready to start my new journey and see where it takes me."

Law students help answer questions about the penal code

Susan Kreiner

The Daily Iowan

At 8 a.m. on Monday, Elisa Boungaree asks her fourth- and fifth-grade social-studies class to take out a handful on the penal code for burglary and trespassing.

"We're going through" Trooper Kevin Knepper's lecture on the penal code in the local kitchen. Boungaree then passes the book, which contains several case studies on how judges and lawyers handle crimes.

Not. Boungaree, a transfer at Lincoln Elementary School, instructs the class to mark down the date and the name of the "law violators" in their social-studies book.

By the time the class is over, Boungaree has asked students to do a second round. This time, she asks the students to lay out the penal code for various crimes.

One student says the penal code is confusing, while another student says it is easy to understand.

"Legally" written by the students, the penal code is easy to understand. But rather than simply laying out the code, the students explain why it is confusing and why it is easy to understand.

"I don't think it is the easiest thing in the world to understand," said Erin Ryan, a student in Boungaree's class. "But rather than just laying it out, we decided to explain why it is confusing and why it is easy to understand.

At the end of the class, Boungaree asks the students to lay out the penal code for another set of crimes.

"I think it is a good idea to have the students do this," said Boungaree. "It helps them understand the penal code and why it is difficult to understand."
Iowa woman's son arrested in Egypt

Associated Press
BUFFALO CENTER, Iowa — A southern Iowa woman said Monday she has been unable to talk with her son, who is being held for questioning in Egypt, after she was notified by her government that he has been held on a human rights charge.

Elizabeth Eckhardt of Iowa City, one of five employees of an American company who are being held by Egyptians on suspicion of providing assistance to Muslims in Egypt, said the treatment of her son, Ryan, was incomprehensible.

"They were handcuffed to chairs. They were denied the right to have a lawyer at a hearing. They did not have an adequate defense," Eckhardt said through tears.

The charges of espionage are "absurd and incomprehensible," she said.

The charges were based on information that was handed to the government by what she said had been told by an international organization. She said she had been unable to talk to her son, whom the embassy was not being forthcoming as to the charges.

Industrial Systems and Component, a Waste Management, Inc., owned Egypt, a management company, released a statement that was signed by the Egyptian authorities that gave the Egyptian government official notice of its receipt of the charges.

"We represent business that is considered," she said.

Ed Eckhardt said his information was based on what had been told by an industrial systems organization. He said he had been unable to tell his son, whom the government was not being forthcoming as to the charges.

Patria has a funny way of working. One day somebody is a hero and the next he is a traitor. The situation is certainly taking place right now in Boris Yeltsin's Russia. The fact that he despises and rejects democracy, today finds himself hardly holding onto it. Now someone is talking about the deconstruction of the society, nothing more than a page in the history books. The United States was not the first to start this process of deconstruction and started preparing for the next Russian leader.

It was August 1991 when Yeltsin was termed, by the group leaders who were trying to take the then-Soviet Union back into the Communist fold, the Yeltsin, the first freely elected Russian leader, was successful in rallying the people into the streets, and soon after the coup fell defenestrated. It was not only a defeat for the Yeltsin and the Russian people, but a victory for democracy as well. Subsequently, Mikhail Gorbachev was put back into power, albeit for only a few months, as the tide of democratic freedoms demolished the Soviet Union, thereby signifying Russia on its way.

It now seems apparent that it is only a matter of time before Yeltsin's beliefs is nothing more than a page in the history books.

The first time since 1917, The Cold War was officially over, and real hopes emerged for the future.

Unfortunately, as far as Yeltsin is concerned this story has no happy ending. While Yeltsin brought Russia out of a political and economic impasse, he could not reverse the damage his administration did. He did all the things he attempted to implement in terms of Russian economics but, the "shock therapy" measures such as killing price controls, did not work. In fact, Russia experienced unprecedented inflation during the bleakdest days of communism. The Russian currency is worthless, goods have been devalued, and basic foodstuffs are no longer affordable. However, the goods are still in quality in the queues. Adding these factors together, it is no wonder that the Russian is in trouble. The depths of his problems were displayed last week in the Russian People's Deputies.

The government was able to strip a large portion of Yeltsin's authority. Yeltsin was so emasculated that he stormed out of one of the sessions. He has done all he could do for the Russian people, as he popularly used to be anywhere in the streets. It was now all down to a permanent, unnecessary and unaffordable. However, the goods are still in queue in the queues. Adding these factors together, it is no wonder that the Russian is in trouble. The depths of his problems were displayed last week in the Russian People's Deputies.

George Bush made the mistake of hanging onto Gorbachev for too long, which led to endless relations with Yeltsin. Yeltsin was now forced to come into power. Russian leaders should not make the same mistake as they did with Gorbachev. The Yeltsin leader believes in democracy, and is willing to work with the Communists. However, the Communists will not be satisfied unless they're not allowed to stay in power. To effect a smooth prop up Yeltsin and ignoring the hammering on the wall is not an option.

The Cold War is over, and it's time to end. Neither country, any world is safe in a position to go back.

The issue of abortion is perhaps the most emotional and passionate issue in American political discourse. It is a battle that has raged for decades, and shows no signs of abating anytime soon. The issue of abortion is one that has been the subject of much debate and controversy, and continues to be a source of conflict and division within the American political system.

Throughout history, the issue of abortion has been a significant topic of discussion and has been the subject of many legal and political debates. The debate over abortion has been characterized by passionate and often polarized positions on both sides. The pro-choice movement argues that women should have the right to choose whether or not to terminate their pregnancies, while the pro-life movement maintains that abortion is morally wrong and should be illegal.

The issue of abortion is also tied to broader social and cultural issues, such as women's rights, sexual liberation, and the role of religion in society. These factors have played a significant role in shaping public opinion on the issue, and have contributed to the ongoing debate.

Despite the significant controversy surrounding the issue, the public's views on abortion have evolved over time. Public opinion polls indicate that opinions on abortion are increasingly divided, with many Americans holding mixed views and supporting different positions on the issue.

In conclusion, the issue of abortion remains a contentious and emotionally charged topic in American politics. It is a complex and multifaceted issue that continues to provoke passionate discussion and debate. The evolving nature of public opinion on the issue underscores the ongoing need for continued dialogue and understanding in order to address the complexities and challenges presented by this important issue.

Henson's top coach

Curtis Henson, who had led the 1992-93 Missouri Valley Conference champion Illinois State basketball team since 1988, has resigned to accept an offer to coach the University of Illinois men's basketball team.

Henson was named Illinois State coach in 1988 after serving as an assistant coach for the previous five seasons. He helped guide Illinois State to the 1989-90 NCAA tournament and a second-place finish in the Missouri Valley Conference.

Henson said he was offered the Illinois job after coaching for 15 years and decided it was time to move on.

"I'm very excited about this opportunity," Henson said. "I've had a great deal of success at Illinois State, but I think it's time for me to take on a new challenge."

Henson will replace Lou Henson, who announced his retirement last month.

A kind of break for the head.

It's Friday, and I am, as usual, in the midst of the usual: typing away at a computer, scanning the mailbox, monitoring the news. When you're a journalist, particularly one who writes about computers, you spend a lot of time online.

What happened to you when you were a kid? Do you remember when you first got a computer? How did you use it? Did you have a computer growing up, or did you have to wait until you were an adult to have one?

The Hawkeyes scored two runs in the top of the seventh, only to have the Gophers score a runback in their half with three runs. Iowa's center Gwen Bals quickly pleased with the way she did rebounded after popping the first game by an out. "It was a good way to bounce back," Bals said. "Jay Polson played very well and we had very strong pitching." The Hawkeyes had their chances to come out on top to the opener.

Early Italian tomb structures, art to be subject of history lecture

The Daily Iowan

The UI Art History Society will present a lecture by Dr. Nancy Mortensen, a noted authority on tomb architecture, of the University of Iowa. The event will be held at 7:30 p.m. on March 16, in the Hancher Auditorium.

Mortensen is a recognized authority on tomb architecture, and has published numerous articles and books on the subject. She has also conducted extensive research on the ancient structures, and has been involved in the conservation and preservation of many of them.

The lecture will focus on the significance of the early Italian tomb structures, and will highlight the unique architectural features and artistic elements that characterize these ancient tombs. Attendees will gain a deeper understanding of the historical and cultural context in which these tombs were built.

The event is free and open to the public. It is sponsored by the UI Art History Society and the Hancher Auditorium.

To attend the lecture, please register in advance by visiting the UI Art History Society website. Parking is available in the Hancher lot.

For more information, please contact Dr. Nancy Mortensen at nancy.mortensen@uiowa.edu.
