LOCAL

Have a nice break!

The Daily Iowan will observe the official UI spring break and will not be published during the week of March 22-26. We will resume publication on Monday, March 29.

Cars are not to be parked for more than 48 hours

UI students and Iowa City residents who are leaving town for spring break should remember the city ordinance which prohibits storing vehicles on the streets for longer than 48 hours.

The street-storage prohibition is routinely enforced when complaints are received, but because of planned street sweeping in the downtown area during the week of spring break, vehicles must be removed.

Streets to be swept will be marked with "no parking" signs. If vehicles are left on the street, they may be towed.

Aspin's pacemaker surgery called a success

WASHINGTON (AP) — Surgeons implanted a silver-dollar-sized pacemaker just below Defense Secretary Les Aspin's collarbone Thursday to control a worsening heart condition. Doctors said he probably would resume a full work schedule next week.

"It went perfectly well," said Dr. Al Soloman, who conducted the 90-minute operation at Georgetown University Medical Center.

Witness: Sergeant complained blows to King were 'weak, ineffective'

LOS ANGELES (AP) — The sergeant who directed Rodney King's beating complained afterwards that baton blows by Officer Laurence Powell were "weak and ineffective," a policeman testified Thursday.

Sgt. Richard Di Stefano also testified that the supervisor, Sgt. Stacey Koon, told his watch commander that he had used an electronic stun gun on King and that "the officers used a lot of baton blows."

Di Stefano, assistant watch commander at Foothill Station on the night of the beating, was called to the stand by the defense in an effort to show there was no cover-up of force used by officers.

Agents urge cult members to surrender

WACO, Texas (AP) — Federal agents made a surrender appeal Thursday night over blaring loudspeakers to David Koresh, the leader of an armed cult whose members have been besieged by law officers for 19 days.

But a defiant reply could be heard from the group's rural compound. "I am not coming out until my message gets out," said a voice heard on a loudspeaker by reporters over a mile away.

Another voice was heard to say, "David, we are not here to hurt you. We are here to help you." The same voice also reassured people inside the compound they would have "legal representation" upon surrendering.

5 hostages released in Costa Rica standoff

SAN JOSE, Costa Rica (AP) — Three gunmen who took over the Nicaraguan Embassy released five of their 10 hostages Thursday and agreed to resume talks to end the standoff.

The gunmen stormed the embassy on March 8 and took 25 hostages, but released nine shortly thereafter.

Committee OKs bill to reshape Board of Regents

Mike Glover
Associated Press

DES MOINES — A Senate committee has recommended reshaping the state's Board of Regents to assure the three state universities have representation on the committee.

The Senate State Government Committee approved a bill Thursday which would require that a third of the nine-member committee be made up of graduates of the three schools.

"That still leaves six out of the nine board members who could be graduates of the school of hard knocks," said Sen. Tony Bisignano, D-Des Moines. "That's my university."

The measure now goes to the full Senate, which already faces decisions yet this session about the Regents.

Under the measure, the Regents would have to include graduates from the UI, Iowa State University and the University of Northern Iowa.

The committee's composition has been controversial.

Gov. Terry Branstad this week appointed Regents President Marvin Pomerantz to a second six-year term. Pomerantz has come under fire from ISU advocates for pushing to sell university-owned WOI-TV.

They expanded their attack to charge that ISU hasn't had a graduate on the board for years. Partially to ease those concerns, Branstad named two ISU graduates to the Regents at the same time as he announced Pomerantz's appointment.

Bisignano said his plan was designed to assure that all three of the schools have representation on the committee at all times. He rejected suggestions that stacking the board with graduates would eliminate representatives from other segments of society.

"It's not like everybody is going to be a graduate of the universities," said Bisignano. "There's still room for diversification in the numbers."

The Senate must confirm Pomerantz. Both his critics and advocates concede he faces a tough battle.

MELROSE PLAN DELAYED

Environmental study to determine project

The repairs may be postponed until 1995.

Lynn M. Tefft
The Daily Iowan

Will Melrose Avenue ever be widened?

Iowa City city staff, UI officials, concerned residents and others will have to wait a little longer than they expected to find out the answer to that question, following an Iowa Department of Transportation request for an environmental-impact study on the area.

The IDOT has the authority to request the study since the city of Iowa City applied for state funds to complete the widening and repair of the Melrose bridge, and its decision is a result of letters it received from U.S. Rep. Jim Leach and Iowa State Historical Society Historian Lowell Soike.

Michaelanne Widness, president of the Melrose Avenue Neighborhood Association, said she approached Leach about the proposed Melrose project during one of his recent trips to Iowa City, prompting his involvement in the debate.

Leach's Press Secretary Joe Bender said one of the congressman's jobs is to advocate constituents who have trouble clarifying issues on their own.

Leach's letter asked the IDOT if an environmental-impact study was necessary.

"Mr. Leach felt the best way to clarify the issue in this case was to ask the DOT a specific question," Bender said. "And it looks like they replied expeditiously."

Widness said she was quite pleased with the IDOT's decision.

"We've asked all along for more public input and alternatives, and it looks like we're going to get them," she said.

She said the Historical Society's interest in the project was also instrumental in influencing the IDOT's decision.

"I'm very interested in how this process will proceed," she said. "I think when it's all said and done there will be a decision everyone can live with."

Iowa City City Manager Steve Atkins said he was surprised by the IDOT's request, since the environmental-impact clause in the application is traditionally waived when the proposed construction is repairing or improving an area that has already been developed.

"We're simply replacing what's there," Atkins said of the bridge.

Atkins said the study will delay the start of the project, if it is eventually approved, to the construction season of 1995. The cost of the study and inflation will also drive up the final price of the project, he added.

UI Director of Planning and Administration Dick Gibson, who has represented the UI's support of the proposed Melrose widening, was unavailable for comment Thursday.

NEW ERA ANTICIPATED

Gays have high hopes for Clinton

Yokota Masuo
The Daily Iowan

While African-Americans were fighting in the 1960s against the legacies of slavery, they sought a private life. When women stood up to break gender barriers in the 1970s, they looked for tolerance to their lifestyles. But gays and lesbians in the 1990s are gathering their political power to go beyond the gender borderline.

A new era for the gay civil-rights movement opened with the victory of Bill Clinton in the presidential election last year.

More than 70 percent of gays and lesbians, about nine million people, voted for Clinton. They were the third leading support group for Clinton following Jews and blacks, according to UI political science Professor Michael Jogerst.

"Clinton was the first leading presidential candidate who actively and openly courted gay voters," he said.

Linda Yanney, an independent political consultant in Iowa City, became dedicated to Clinton after he delivered a speech to about 600 gay civil-rights activists in Los Angeles last May.

In the speech, Clinton said, "We can't afford to waste the capacities, the contributions, the hearts, the souls, the minds of the gay and ton chose to go before a predominantly gay and lesbian audience and talked about our issues in a very personal way," she said.

Soon afterwards, Yanney said, she distributed several hundred copies of the speech to gay civil-rights and lesbian Americans."

Yanney said some people in the gay community wondered if Clinton would bolster gay civil-rights issues, since he seemed to be conservative to them. But, she added, his speech removed doubt from the minds of those who heard it.

"What was important is that Clin-

She said she received positive feedback from the gay community, because people felt reassured that the gay community could walk side by side with Clinton regarding their civil-rights issues.

CONGRESS GIVES SUPPORT

House approves Clinton's 5-year deficit-reduction plan

Alan Fram
Associated Press

WASHINGTON — The House moved to close the book on Reaganomics Thursday by embracing President Clinton's mix of new spending to create jobs plus long-term budget cuts and tax increases to whittle the deficit.

On a virtual party-line 243-183 vote, the Democratic-dominated chamber approved a deficit-reduction blueprint that would trim budget shortfalls by $510 billion over the next five years.

The savings — to be enacted in future bills — would be split evenly between spending cuts and tax increases, mainly on the rich and corporations. It resembled a plan the Senate was also debating.

"The one thing we need to do tonight is to say the Congress of the United States stands behind this young man," said Majority Leader Richard Gephardt, D-Mo. "We want to give him a chance. We want our people to succeed. We want a new day for this country."

The House then moved toward passage of a companion bill pumping $16.3 billion in new spending into community-development grants, small business loans and other job-creating projects. The administration says the measure would create 219,000 jobs this year and more later.

Clinton himself couldn't resist contrasting his own economic priorities with the call for smaller government that President Reagan brought to office 12 years ago.

"It is clear that the time has come to make a fundamental change in policy and direction," Clinton told Treasury employees as he headed a last-minute campaign to solidify support and make his victory an imposing one.

And as the president's triumph approached, he added a personal touch. His spokeswoman, Dee Dee Myers, announced that lawmakers of either party supporting his plan would be invited to a White House breakfast Friday morning.

With an 80-vote numerical advantage in their pockets, Democratic leaders had predicted that in a long day of debate, they would overwhelm Republicans and approve the two Clinton economic-recovery measures.

True to their word, party leaders showed they could hold their rank-and-file together.

On a tally of 295-135, the House killed a GOP budget that would have cut spending by $429 billion over the next five years — and dropped all of Clinton's tax increases. Just three Democrats supported the Republicans.

Lawmakers then turned aside, 409-20, a second Republican plan that would have eliminated $682 billion in red ink by combining spending cuts with Clinton's tax increases on the rich.

Also rejected was a package by the liberal Black Congressional Caucus adding defense cuts and tax increases to Clinton's plan and using the extra money to finance social programs. The defeat was by a 335-87 margin.

The Democratic measures flew in the face of Republican orthodoxy that has long called for tax cuts, reductions in social spending programs and a strong defense budget. That approach prevailed when Ronald Reagan swept into the White House in 1981. But both he and successor George Bush failed to deliver on their promises of a balanced budget.

"We've had no-pain presidencies for 12 years, and now the pain facing the American people is greater than anything we could have possibly imagined," said Rep. John Bryant, D-Texas. "A president that's willing to... say we need to make cuts and we need to increase taxes in certain areas is a president with courage who deserves to be followed."

Republicans warned that Clinton's priorities were wrongheaded.

"They think a large federal government is the answer," said Rep. John Kasich, R-Ohio. "We believe empowering the individual and getting government off individuals' backs is the answer."

Jaw disorder may affect students

Susan Winterbottom
The Daily Iowan

You've just finished your last midterm. You have a headache, your teeth are clenched and it may even hurt to yawn after that allnighter. But what may seem to be a post-test stress syndrome could be something more serious.

Temporomandibular disorder, sometimes referred to as TMJ, is a disorder of the jaw joint by the same name. The symptoms can include pain and a clicking or grinding noise, when chewing, a difficulty or inability to open one's mouth, tension headaches and neck pain.

According to Dr. Deborah Zeitler, director of the TMJ Clinic at UI Hospitals and Clinics, TMJ disorder affects three parts of the anatomy — the disc between the jaw and the skull, the muscles around the jaw, and the teeth.

"The jaw joint consists of the bone that moves, the skull above and a fibrous disc in between," she said. "The disc is supposed to move smoothly as the jaw moves and cushion things. Sometimes the ligaments that hold the disc in place stretch out and the disc slips forward... then ligaments get pinched."

The muscles around the jaw can also become inflamed and cause spasms, Zeitler said, while the teeth may no longer fit together correctly.

According to Dr. Steven Vincent, UI associate professor in oral pathology, radiology and medicine, TMJ disorder is similar to other joint problems.

"Most processes that can affect knees or hips can cause problems in one or both of the TMJs," he said. "Arthritis and dislocations of the discs can occur in the jaw just like in other joints in the body."

Students may be particularly affected by this disorder, Zeitler said, because stressful situations can worsen the symptoms.

"We do see a lot of students with this problem," she said. "It's not uncommon for us to see students at stressful points in the year, such as midterms and finals, where they're clenching more because they're under a lot of stress."

Stress is an aggravating factor in TMJ disorder but not a cause, Zeitler said.

"I don't think we know very much about what causes it," she said. "I doubt that stress is a cause... in most patients we don't really know what the cause is."

Vincent said most people experience a few of the symptoms of TMJ disorder at some point in their lives, but that doesn't mean they have a problem.

While there isn't always a cure for TMJ disorder, Zeitler said, there are several effective treatments including anti-inflammatory drugs, physical therapy, habit modification and surgery.

"It is not always curable but it's very manageable," she said.

IOWA PROSPERS

Economy predicted to grow steadily

The Daily Iowan

A report released Thursday by the UI Institute for Economic Research predicts steady growth for the Iowa economy in 1993 and 1994.

According to the forecast, Iowans' real — or corrected for inflation — personal income at the end of 1993 will be 3.6 percent higher than it was at the end of 1992.

Institute Director Charles Whiteman said if realized, the 3.6 percent growth will be the strongest since 1989. "At that rate, living standards double about every 20 years. Growth at this rate is not as rapid as is typically seen in recoveries from recessions, but is about equal to the overall average we have experienced since the 1950s."

The forecast also suggests that in 1994 real personal income will grow an additional 2.8 percent. Nonfarm employment is predicted to grow nearly 2.4 percent during 1993 and to grow nearly 3.3 percent in 1994.

The forecast also predicts that state tax revenues are likely to grow 10.6 percent in the fiscal year ending June 30, 1993. Whiteman said the forecast includes the effects of the sales-tax increase enacted last June.

He also noted that this forecast is slightly higher than the official state forecast of 10.3 percent made in December, but that due to uncertainty in the revenue forecast, a prudent forecast is in the 10 to 10.6 percent range.

The state's Revenue Estimating Conference meets later this month to consider whether to change the official estimate.

SHARE's food-for-all work program brought to IC area

The program offers food in exchange for community service.

Tory Brecht
The Daily Iowan

SHARE Johnson County, a non-profit organization that supplies inexpensive food in exchange for community service, is coming to Iowa City. The program is aimed toward people whose pantries are bare but who feel like giving something back to the community rather than taking a government handout.

Participants in SHARE, Self Help and Resource Exchange, pay $13 and pledge two hours of volunteer service a month. In return, they receive about $35 worth of staple food items.

According to Father Harry Linnen-brink of St. Wenceslaus Church, 618 E. Davenport St., the program is meant for all kinds of people. "It is not a program just for the poor," Linnenbrink said. "It is for anyone."

St. Wenceslaus and St. Mary's are jointly running the program. Jerry Cilek, a parish member of St. Mary's, has been working to organize the first distribution of food.

"The main difference between this and other programs is that it creates a feeling of self-worth," Cilek said. "The participants know they are not getting a free hand-out."

The SHARE program was started in San Diego by a deacon from Iowa who was interested in getting people involved in helping others and making sure that those who could not afford food could eat well and feel good about themselves.

SHARE is now available to more than 350,000 families in 24 areas of the United States. According to Linnenbrink, even though SHARE gives food away, grocery stores are not threatened by the program.

"SHARE gives people staple foods; they then can go to the store to buy things they normally can't afford," he said.

Wholesalers are also big fans of the program, said Linnenbrink. "SHARE is the only program that buys all their wholesale groceries with cash," he said.

Registration for the first food distribution will be at St. Wenceslaus Church from 10 a.m. to 1 p.m. on March 20 and 27 and on April 3.

Linnenbrink said he is still looking for volunteers to help organize the distribution. That job will count towards the two hours of community service needed to qualify for food. For more information on the program, call St. Wenceslaus Church at 337-4957.

Unemployment benefits declined in February, signaling recovery

Jude Sunderbruch
Business Editor

Reflecting the slow but steady recovery of the nation's economy, slightly less money was paid out to jobless Iowans in the form of unemployment insurance benefits in February than in the previous month, according to state statistics.

The figures released by the Iowa Department of Employment Services indicated that unemployed workers in Iowa received $27.8 million in February, $600,000 less than in January.

Robert Schutt, a labor market research economist with the DES, said further declines this spring in benefit payouts will primarily be due to construction workers returning to the job after winter layoffs.

"It's very difficult to say what will happen in March," he said. "It really depends on the weather."

He said that even if temperatures warm up and workers return to construction sites in significant numbers, it's possible that March's statistics might not reflect this positive trend.

"The benefits will go up just because March is a longer month," Schutt said.

Tom Bullington, manager of the Iowa City Job Service office, concurred with Schutt's assessment and said he expects most construction jobs in this area to pick up next month, reducing the amount of insurance benefits paid out.

"During April it drops off significantly," he said.

Schutt said job creation in the rest of the economy is either holding steady or just barely increasing.

"We're showing low growth, which is typical of most of the nation," he said. "People are returning to work — it's a little here and a little there."

In the manufacturing sector, Iowa is experiencing little if any growth. In January, manufacturing employment in Iowa actually fell by 2,200 jobs. Locally however, Iowa City will soon benefit from the opening of a General Mills plant.

According to Bullington, employees will be hired in "waves of 20." The new plant is expected to help the local economy, but Bullington noted that the total number of employees hired will not be very large.

Al Goldis/The Daily Iowan

UI POLICY QUESTIONED

Students feel affirmative action should be economically based

Some UI students feel the problem with affirmative action programs is that they are racially based and discriminatory against whites.

Jon Yates
The Daily Iowan

Editor's note: This is the last in a series of articles about affirmative action at the UI.

Quotas. Reverse discrimination. Inequities.

Affirmative action has taken a beating in recent years. In editorial pages, company break rooms and at dinner tables the country over, it is a topic that often brews heated opinions.

The UI community is no exception. Although many students admit they know little or nothing about affirmative action, among those who do there has been some backlash to the controversial program.

For UI junior Keith Chiavetta, chairman of the student group Young Americans for Freedom, affirmative action is discrimination against whites.

"Giving someone a job based on the color of their skin is bigotry and wrong," he said. "I personally would feel discriminated against if I was told that a job I was in the running for went to someone else because they were black or a woman. It's cut and dry discrimination."

UI Undergraduate Collegiate Sen. David Mastio said he also has concerns about affirmative action. For Mastio, affirmative action programs are inadequate because they are racially based, not economically based as he feels they should be.

"The programs really don't help the people they're designed to help," he said. "The real bottom line is that the minorities that are already doing well in today's society are the ones being helped. We need to help those in the inner cities."

UI senior Kimberly Nelson, former chairwoman of the UI College Republicans, said she would like to see affirmative action programs more economically based.

"In a way, I think yeah, we should make up for the past," she said. "But current affirmative action programs don't do that. They help middle-class minorities. They should be economically based, not ethnically based."

Mastio agreed that a shift should be made from programs based on race to programs based on income.

"They would still help minorities because minorities are disproportionately poor," he said. "They would also make whites more willing to approve of the programs because they would appeal to whites' sense of fairness."

It is an argument that has been used nationwide. In a New York Times article by Fox Butterfield, U.S. colleges were said to be offering black high-school seniors scholarships, free trips to campus, tickets to rap concerts and football games and cash.

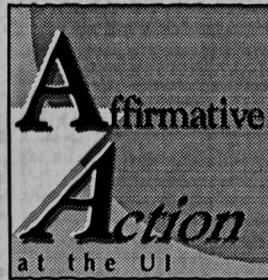

"Giving someone a job based on the color of their skin is bigotry and wrong."

Keith Chiavetta

The phenomenon of courting minorities based on their ethnic background and not their need can also be found at the UI, opponents of affirmative action argue.

"In the law school there are people who are on affirmative action scholarships that are one-sixty-fourth Indian and you can't even tell they're an Indian," Mastio said. "They look like a frat boy."

Chiavetta said the argument that affirmative action helps increase diversity is bunk.

"I'm tired of the UI taking that position," he said. "I'm tired of it being justified as diversity. The fact that one group of people have been discriminated against in the past doesn't make it right today."

And for UI students preparing to graduate this spring, the concept of affirmative action causes some to question the program's equity in the job market.

"In some cases I feel it is OK and in some I feel it is not," UI senior Samer El-Zein said. "For instance, let's say 100 people apply for a job and like 99 of the 100 are white, with one being a minority. Even if the 99 people are more qualified than him, it may be required that a minority will get the job. It is not fair to the rest of them."

But for El-Zein, affirmative action programs are a necessary evil.

"There are many companies that because you are a minority, they won't hire you," he said. "They won't even look at your resume."

That, some would argue, is why affirmative action is necessary. But as long as affirmative action is necessary, it will almost undoubtedly remain controversial.

WILDLIFE DISAPPEARING

Committee seeks funds to study Ralston Creek

Timothy Connors
The Daily Iowan

UI biology Professor Jeff Schabillon has lived along Ralston Creek for the last 10 years. He said it used to be impossible to walk through his backyard on a summer's afternoon without seeing several kingfisher birds or an abundance of damsel dragonflies.

But anymore, Schabillon said, he is lucky to see either. Through all of last summer, he said he saw only one damsel dragonfly and not a single kingfisher.

"Certainly there have been changes," Schabillon said.

Not enough is known about Ralston Creek to pinpoint the catalyst for change, Schabillon said, but he favors testing the creek for pollution.

"I think testing of the water is crucial," Schabillon said.

With trash along its banks and murky water, the Iowa River tributary which winds through the southeastern quarter of Iowa City is not necessarily pleasing to the eye, but Schabillon said one cannot tell simply by appearance if a water source is polluted.

"Not all polluted water looks polluted," he said.

Ron Vogel, a member of the Environmental Advocates urban pesticides committee, is trying to raise funds to test the pesticide content in the creek this spring.

"We think that's the reason the creek is so dead," Vogel said. "If the creek is dead primarily because of lawn chemicals, maybe we can bring it back to life."

Vogel said he hopes to have the tests conducted in late April or early May — a peak season for lawn chemical use. The tests could cost as much as $800.

Vogel said his suspicions are rooted in the fact that the use of urban pesticides has skyrocketed over the past 20 years.

"Nationwide, the use of lawn chemicals has gone up about tenfold since 1970," Vogel pointed out. "I think Iowa City has pretty much followed that trend."

Lynette Siegley is a fellow member of EA's urban pesticide committee. She said she has taken special interest in the Ralston Creek project because it is similar to her professional work. Siegley is a research geologist with the Iowa Geological Survey Bureau which tests and analyzes contents of water sources.

"We're just trying to get some base line information," Siegley explained.

She said the EA tests will provide only preliminary information.

"It's just getting an idea of what's being discharged into the creek," Siegley said.

After the original tests have been analyzed, Siegley hopes that state funding can be allocated for further testing to yield more concrete results.

A family displaced

Karla and Ron Loehr found themselves in a desperate situation last December. The house they were renting was sold and the family of five had to move out.

Karla, Ron, their 6-month-old daughter Clara and Karla's two sons, Curtis and Jonathan, moved in with Karla's brother. The stay was temporary, and after Christmas, without a place to rent that was within their budget, Karla and Ron turned to the Emergency Housing Project of Iowa City for help.

On Dec. 29 the family moved into the housing project for the homeless. The shelter, which is sponsored by various local and national organizations, provided Karla, Ron and their children with a room furnished with three beds, a dresser and a couch.

The five sleep in close quarters — Karla and Ron sleep in a single bed, Curtis and Jonathan in bunk beds, and Clara in her crib.

Because of inflated housing costs in Iowa City, Karla and Ron said that now, three months later, they are still having trouble finding a place to live.

"Housing in the area is just too expensive," they said. "We are still on the waiting list for aid from the Housing Authority and will be for at least two more months."

The Emergency Housing Project is providing time for Karla and Ron to find an affordable place to live.

Although the situation is tough, Curtis and Jonathan still find time to play and Clara receives the attention an infant demands.

Karla is a nursing student at Kirkwood Community College in Cedar Rapids. Commuting to classes on weekdays, Karla also works about 25 hours per week at an in-home health-care service.

Leaving the shelter at 7 a.m. and returning around 9:30 p.m., Karla spends her spare time taking care of the children. This leaves her with little time to study for classes.

"I usually study at the Iowa City Public Library," Karla said, "but sometimes I have to study late into the night. The room is the most private place in the house, and I often keep Ron awake while studying in bed."

Ron, who is unable to work because of an accident in which he injured his foot, tackles most of the child-care needs. He gets Curtis and Jonathan ready for school and prepares Clara's formula, diapers and other necessities for the day.

He spends his day working on cars in order to bring in extra money. He also receives Social Security disability funds.

The Emergency Housing Project has a checkout time of 7:45 a.m. and a return time of 5 p.m. Without access to the temporary home during the day, Ron said he is stuck outside.

"If we had our own place, I could keep Clara with me and save the money spent on a babysitter," he said.

Despite the stress, Karla and Ron refuse to give in to the desperation of the situation and hope for a brighter future.

ANNEXATION COULD OCCUR

Board OK's land plat for tenant subdivision

Lynn M. Tefft
The Daily Iowan

The city of Coralville is another step closer to annexing an island of land within its corporate limits, thanks to a vote Thursday by the Johnson County Board of Supervisors to approve the final plat of a residential subdivision on the land.

Coralville Mayor Mike Kattchee said he has some reservations about the annexation, which is more likely to occur now that the Summit Hills subdivision has been approved. However, he said the land, which is located at the north end of Seventh Avenue, will be best utilized and maintained if it is incorporated into the city of Coralville.

"There's no question in my mind that this thing needs to be in Coralville," Kattchee later said.

The developer of the subdivision, William Nye, has offered voluntary annexation of his property. There are 12 other property owners in the area, however, and their approval would be necessary as well for a voluntary annexation to occur.

Coralville City Administrator Kelly Hayworth said if all residents could not agree on voluntary annexation, the option of involuntary annexation could be explored.

The land, originally developed in 1929 for industrial use, has been the subject of heated debate for the last decade. In a recent discussion Hayworth said if annexation does not occur for a while, having the land platted for development is better than leaving it as is.

Some of the supervisors questioned the need to consider annexation in deciding whether to approve the plat.

"We can deal with the annexation later," Supervisor Joe Bolckom said, voicing his approval of the plat.

Chairwoman Patricia Meade disagreed.

"I want to understand all the complications first," she said, referring to possibilities of annexation and the county's role.

The board ultimately voted 3-2 to approve the plat.

In other business, the supervisors discussed the county's solid waste policy, and ultimately voted to notify rural residents that the landfill-use program will be changing July 1, 1993.

SCHEDULE OF COURSES

Play by the rules

Mistakes are only human, and sometimes so are missed deadlines. Some mistakes are forgivable, but when a mistake affects thousands of people, someone must step up and take the blame.

The absence of the instructors' names from the Schedule of Courses for this summer is inexcusable. Over 10,000 students will be forced to choose classes without knowing who will be in the front of the classroom come June. Jessup Hall is not going to be able to sweep this one under the rug. Hard-working, tuition-paying students deserve the simple courtesy of knowing who their instructors will be. If this mistake is blamed on a bureaucratic mishap, and the paper tigers get off scot-free, a serious injustice will have occurred and the third-class status of students at this university will be proven once again.

If this mistake is blamed on a bureaucratic mishap, the third-class status of students at this university will be proven once again.

Those who are directly responsible aren't talking, which leads the rest of us to ask questions. A faculty member says that the teachers' names were left out because of a missed deadline. Who was responsible for getting the information in on time? Why was the deadline missed? And what precautions are going to be taken to ensure that this doesn't happen in the future?

This whole situation is kind of ironic, really. As students, we are taught time and time again that if we miss a due date, too bad. Life doesn't wait for anyone. We are expected to be responsible for our actions, and we should be. But so should the UI. And it's high time that the university starts playing by its own rules. If students are expected to face the consequences of their actions, somebody within the UI needs to stand up and say, "Whoops."

We can forgive people for trying to do their job. But let's face it, someone somewhere screwed up. If the deadline was missed for submitting instructors' names to the parties responsible for the Schedule of Courses, why couldn't it be postponed until all the information was present? This editorial is not asking for a lynching, just an explanation without any of the bureaucratic run-around. Don't students deserve some accounting of why they will now have to call individual UI departments and wade through the list of course offerings to learn the identities of their instructors?

It seems that all too often the UI gets away with murder. Not to say that it is run poorly, though. Keeping an organization as large and diverse as the UI moving forward is a tough job which commands complete and constant attention. But mistakes can be made, and when they affect us, the students deserve the common courtesy of being notified and given a full explanation of the circumstances surrounding the situation.

Things could be worse. At least we do have a Schedule of Courses to peruse. I'm just happy I'm graduating (read: "hopefully") in May. Of course, after Jessup Hall gets its eyes on this, who knows where my application could be "misfiled."

Who doesn't hesitate to vivisect . . .

To the Editor:

Regarding John Lyons' recent article (March 5 D) concerning the abuse of a dog by a vivisector (animal researcher), I would like to provide a bit more information.

The "father" of modern vivisection is Claude Bernard (1813-1878), who would slice and dice animals for basic knowledge. He had no sympathy for either suffering animals or his family, who he subjected to those animals' screams. In fact, he kept many tortured animals at home despite his family's complaints. Eventually his wife, Marie Françoise, an animal lover, helped establish a shelter for dogs saved from the tortures of vivisection and the first anti-vivisectionist group in France, whose president was Victor Hugo.

Dogs were very popular as "tools" of science in Bernard's time as they are today. The problem for the vivisector is that many people nearby are very upset to hear their pitiful cries for mercy when in the hands of a vivisector who also becomes irritated by the dogs' barking. This problem was solved in the early 1900s by "debarking" and "devocalizing" dogs (cutting their vocal cords). In Europe, severing the dog's vocal cords is widespread, but because it is illegal, no one admits doing it. In the United States it is not illegal, and vivisectors freely admit that it is routine procedure. Dr. Gunther Kraus of Roswell Park Memorial Laboratories at Buffalo, New York, addressed the practice of devocalization in The American Veterinary Medical Association Journal (Vol. 143, No. 9, Nov. 1, 1963): "In our own laboratory devocalizing dogs is necessary because of human patients in neighboring wards. We have used electrocautery for devocalization of more than 3,000 dogs." Electrocautery is a method wherein a hot cautery tip is used to burn the vocal cords. But a more "sophisticated" method was devised by Dr. Niles Skultety, associate professor in the division of neurosurgery at the University of Iowa College of Medicine. Instead of burning the dog's vocal cords, a part of the dog's brain is burned with electricity. According to Archives of Neurosurgery (March 1962), before the devocalization operation, the dogs were tested for their reaction to pain and the type of vocalization produced by pinching their tails with a Kocher clamp. After brain injury, most of the dogs were silent even when subjected to pain. This new method was fascinating to some American vivisectors, but not to animal lovers. Why? The description of one dog after the operation read: "It made no attempt to stand and did not eat or drink for the first 3 days after the operation. By the fourth day it could right itself and crawl about the cage. The hind limbs assumed a position similar to that of a crouching animal, and the fore limbs were flexed. It never regained proper balance till the day it was killed (the 16th day), and it could easily be knocked down with a slight push. When pinched painfully it attempted to get at the source of stimulation, but its efficiency was impaired." Years later, cruelty to animals in laboratories is still present.

The medical community will always proclaim its "humane" treatment of animals in laboratories, especially since many of the psychologists, trained in the vivisectionist mentality and owing their "scientific" standing to their vivisectionist activity, have much to lose should the truth become public.

No experiment carried out on one species can be extrapolated to any other, and this includes humans, because an experimental model of humans does not exist. For example: strychnine will kill humans, but is harmless to guinea pigs, chickens and monkeys; chloroform used in human surgery is poisonous to dogs; digitalis raises a dog's blood pressure, but lowers it in humans; withhold vitamin C from the dog, rat, mouse and hamster and they will thrive because their bodies can produce it, but withhold it from humans and they will die from scurvy; morphine will send a cat into a frenzy of excitement, but will make a human sleepy, and the list goes on. Every species, and even individuals of the same species, are different from each other (i.e.: allergies). There is no animal species which can be an experimental model for any other species.

One must remember the vivisection is done for the benefit of researchers rather than the benefit of humanity. The vivisectors have clear ideas about their goals, which are: career and money. To make a career, one has to become known, and to become known, one has to publish. But many of the publications soon disappear into the archives where they are seldom — if ever — read.

As George Bernard Shaw said, "Whoever doesn't hesitate to vivisect will hardly hesitate to lie about it."

Lockstepping toward the revolution

To the Editor:

As a fellow traveler, I was gratified to pick up The Daily Iowan this morning and learn from Dr. Klinzman's column that embers yet burn on the ash heap of history. I salute Dr. Klinzman on his wise observation that "It is time to unite against a common enemy, an economic system which exploits our labor for the benefit of a parasitic ruling class." We should try it one more time. With a renewed sense of hope we will ride our wooden barrels of ideology over the Niagara Falls of revolution to the worker's paradise that we know is at the bottom.

This time we won't need guillotines to decapitate the obsolete, reactionary, racist, sexist, cigarette-smoking, socially Darwinian, white, male, imperialist, fundamen- Christian forces of the status quo. We won't need violence to gut shoot the vicious lazy bourgeois parasites who grow fat on the blood of the proletariat like bloated red ticks on the neck of a noble hound. As Dr. Klinzman suggests, we'll just "patiently explain" that we want all that stuff they're hoarding. Together, like some divine mob, wielding the sacred battering ram of diversity, we will smash down the doors of power and open the great spigot on the fire hose of fairness. The world will watch in admiration as me and Comrade Klinzman shoot fairness in every direction, full blast. Our slogan shall be "Communism: Let's try it once more, and then if it doesn't work, forget it."

Vengeance is for God, not man, to impart

The low-key response of anti-abortion leaders to the slaying of a Florida abortion provider at the hands of an anti-abortion activist upsets many of the rank and file in the anti-abortion movement. Words like "regretful" do not come close to expressing the outrage many feel at the actions of an extremist.

The incident damaged the anti-abortion cause — as anybody with half a brain could have predicted — and has opened the movement even further to slander and anti-religious bigotry. Anthony Lewis, a columnist for The New York Times, has already painted the movement with the brush that "most" anti-abortionists approve of such actions.

The mass media have largely neglected the debate raging in the evangelical community over the tactics employed by the likes of Operation Rescue, let alone over the more abrasive tactics of sidewalk "counseling" and arson.

Most serious Christians recognize a duty to obey the magistrate in all but the most extreme of circumstances. While conservative churches recognize and oppose the injustice of abortion, many have decided that submission to God also means submission to the magistrates that he has set over them. Consequently, they oppose breaking the law.

The more extreme elements of the anti-abortion movement, as in the anti-slavery movement, condemn these law-abiding Christians as "compromisers." Many of the extremists have, in effect, made the anti-abortion movement their church, and have left regular churches.

Law-abiding Christians feel betrayed by the tepid response of the anti-abortion leaders to the Florida murder. At church on Sunday, and from many of my friends at other conservative and evangelical churches, I heard nothing but outrage at and condemnation of the murder, and little but anger at the minimizing response from many of the anti-abortion leaders so far.

Those opposed to abortion, including Christians, make a principled argument; First, that the being in the womb belongs to our species, Homo sapiens. This is a biological fact that even abortion-rights activists will admit. Secondly, that killing an innocent human — or species member — is wrong; that it is homicide.

Essentially the argument is one of equal protection: Homicide means killing an innocent human — an innocent species member — for no good reason. This principle of justice applies to everyone, whether they be in the womb or not.

If you grant that the being in the womb is a species member — that is, a member of Homo sapiens — and if you grant that no Homo sapiens should be killed without good reason, then you must oppose abortion, and oppose it on grounds that even the most secular of thinkers would agree to.

The only reason the issue smacks of a "religious" issue is because, since the Bible condemns homicide, Christians have been at the forefront of the movement advancing the public argument. But this is not new. Many churchmen were similarly involved in the civil rights movement, and in the movement to abolish slavery both in the United States and Britain.

The Christian's opposition to abortion must be nested within the much larger category of opposition to wrongful killing. Thus, the murder in Florida violates the same principle upon which the anti-abortion movement has been built, and therefore should be condemned just as vociferously.

Of course, some people on both sides of the issue wish to paint the course of anti-abortion logic as leading ineluctably to Operation Rescue-type actions, or even to murders such as occurred in Florida. They could not be more mistaken.

From Moses to Paul, God has claimed the sole prerogative to punish: "Vengeance is mine, I will repay," says the Lord. But God has not left his vengeance completely for the world to come. Rather he has ordained and granted power to the civil magistrate — to the government — which "is a minister of God, an avenger who brings wrath upon the one who practices evil" (Romans 13.4).

Paul writes that those who oppose the magistrate have opposed God himself.

For the Christian, the question then becomes: What happens if the magistrate does not perform God's task of insuring justice. Say the magistrate permits obvious murders to go unpunished, should the Christian step in and mete out the punishment? The obvious answer is no, because God has not ordained the Christian to that task (assuming he isn't a magistrate himself).

For the Christian to attempt to mete out God's vengeance outside of the office of the magistrate is for him to grab for the robe of God; that is, it is a positive act of rebellion against God's authority. This impatience in fact recapitulates the sin of the Fall. Thus Samuel tells Saul that "rebellion is as the sin of witchcraft, and insubordination is as iniquity and idolatry." These were sins punishable by death under the Old Covenant.

Without the office of the civil magistrate, Christians must wage war with spiritual weapons only (which, in fact, are most effective when employed properly), and send up the prayer, "How long, oh Lord, will you wait before you end the bloodshed?" The violent impatience of anti-abortion zealots does not do God's will, but is a positive manifestation of their disbelief and unfaithfulness. By taking the sword into their own hands they deny in a most practical way that they believe that Jesus is Lord.

Let me touch on one final point. If the Florida courts convict the man of murder, then he should be put to death. That an anti-abortion commitment logically entails opposition to the death penalty must be the most brainless equivalence in the current debate.

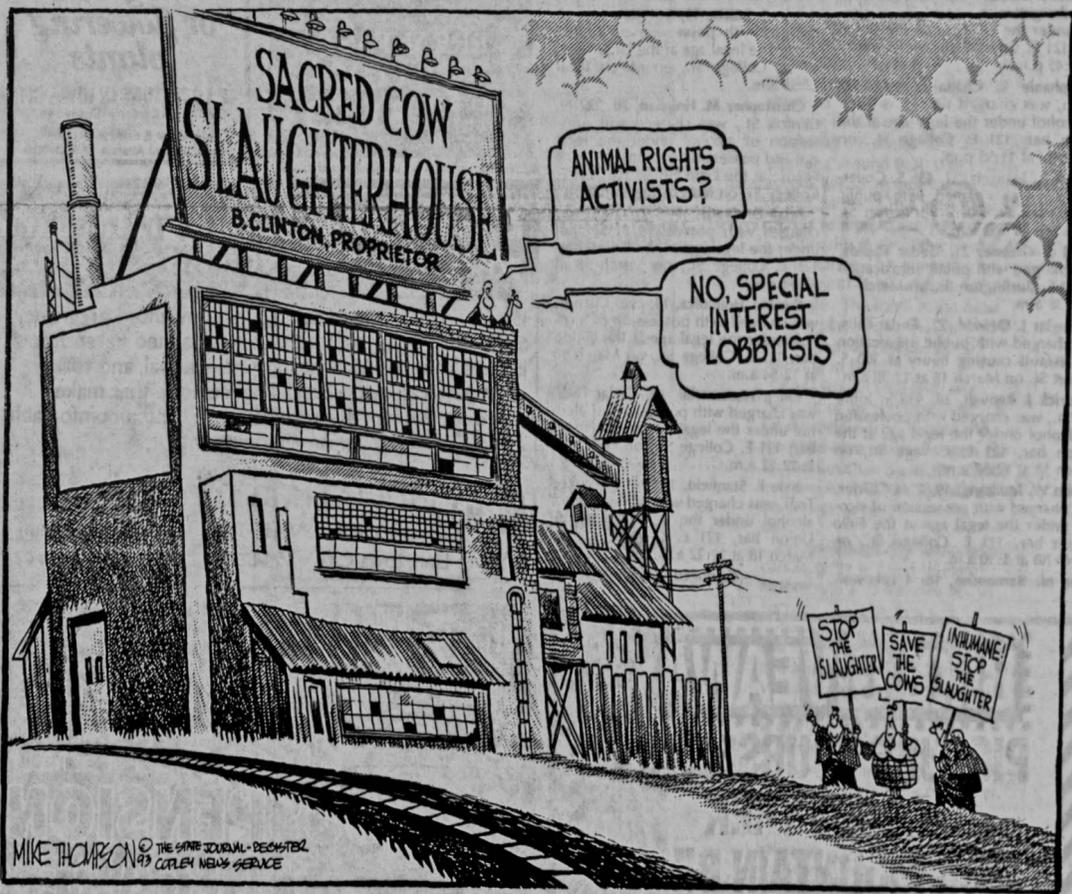

If capital punishment is equivalent to murder, then a police arrest is equivalent to kidnapping, a court fine is equivalent to theft, and jail is equivalent to the crime of false imprisonment.

It is because human life is precious that those humans who take it unjustly should be put to death: there is no other appropriate penalty. "Whoever sheds man's blood, by man his blood shall be shed, for in the image of God He made man." This is civilization.

The Florida murder represents a shameful outrage; it is a heinous sin. Christian anti-abortion activists must be clear and unequivocal in their condemnation of the action. Not because the abortion-rights activists will make political hay out of the tragedy, but because the murder repudiates the central commitment to justice at the heart of the anti-abortion movement.

Andorrans approve first constitution

1 ANDORRA LA VELLA, Andorra (AP) — Citizens of this tiny mountain enclave between Spain and France voted overwhelmingly this week to adopt their first constitution, ending a system of government that had been in effect since the Middle Ages. Every one of the country's 9,123 eligible voters cast ballots, approving the constitution by a margin of more than 3-1.

The referendum followed years of debate in this country known mainly for its skiing, tax-free shopping and 7-century-old political system. Andorra has been run jointly by two "princes" — the president of France and Spain's Bishop of Urgel. The constitution redefines Andorra as a parliamentary co-principality, and establishes a clear separation between legislative, executive and judicial branches of government.

Clinical trials on abortion pill planned in United States

2 PARIS, France (AP) — The controversial French abortion pill will be tested in clinical trials in the United States in about two months, said the drug's manufacturer, Roussel-Uclaf.

"The new American administration has shown interest in testing the pill," said Dr. Andre Ulmann, the firm's director of endocrinology. The pharmaceutical company is reviewing offers by "fewer than five" medical organizations in the United States to begin testing the pill, called RU-486, on American women, Ulmann said. Ulmann said the testing would proceed quickly. He would not identify the research groups under consideration.

The Clinton administration has expressed interest in making the drug available to American women, a turnaround from the hostility RU-486 encountered from the Reagan and Bush administrations.

Experts: Corpse found by Russians was not Hitler's

3 PARIS, France (AP) — French forensic experts say the charred corpse said to be Hitler's was not his body, and that experts falsified verification reports ordered by Josef Stalin to appease the Soviet dictator.

In a report published in the professional review Hospital Weekly, four forensic scientists concluded that the body actually was that of an unknown German male.

The article, published on March 11 and excerpted in France's national press this week, does not claim that Hitler survived and fled Germany, but rather that the body thought to be his was that of a German soldier.

The body was later apparently transported to the Soviet Union. Experts spent more than two years analyzing the autopsy reports prepared by Soviet coroners in 1945.

According to the Soviet autopsy, the body found outside the Berlin bunker where Hitler committed suicide with his wife, Eva Braun, had an extra tooth and only one testicle.

The French team pointed out that no German doctor who had examined Hitler before his death ever mentioned either anomaly.

War, drought create another African tragedy

4 AYOD, Sudan (AP) — A skeletal child lurched through searing heat toward the feeding center 50 feet away, then stumbled and fell. He got to his bony feet again, but the distance was too much.

After the second fall, a vulture came to rest on the frail figure, another casualty in the war-induced famines of Africa.

As the world works to save Somalia, fear is growing for the people of Sudan, where the Muslim government has been fighting a 10-year civil war with rebels in the Christian south.

The war has disrupted farming, and both sides have sometimes blocked relief shipments. Aid workers say 700,000 people are in danger of starving and another 800,000 need sustained aid.

Officials have warned that if major aid shipments do not come through soon, Sudan could become another Somalia, where 350,000 people died of starvation last year.

Death toll rises in Calcutta blast

5 CALCUTTA, India (AP) — Experts searching the rubble of two bombed-out buildings found 17 more bodies today but no evidence linking the explosions that rocked Calcutta and Bombay. The death toll rose to 64.

In Calcutta, police arrested two underworld figures on Wednesday, including one who lived in one of the two buildings. No charges were immediately filed.

Officials have not identified the type or cause of the explosion. One theory says the explosives were being stored in the building by criminal gangs.

It was the second huge blast in a major Indian city since March 12, when 13 bombs went off in Bombay, killing 317 people.

China to replace Hong Kong government after 1997

6 BEIJING, China (AP) — China will replace Hong Kong's local government after 1997 rather than accept Britain's proposals to expand democracy in the territory, Beijing's top official in charge of Hong Kong affairs said Thursday.

Britain and China previously agreed that the legislature elected in 1995 would continue in office until 1999 despite the territory's return to Chinese rule.

The official, Lu Ping, did not say how the move would affect businessmen who sign contracts with the local government extending beyond 1997, when Britain is to hand over its colony to China.

In a news conference televised live in China and Hong Kong, Lu attacked Hong Kong Gov. Chris Patten, accusing him of slamming the door on talks with Beijing.

"From the very beginning, the Hong Kong governor has had no sincerity for resolving differences through talks," Lu said.

In Hong Kong, Patten said, "I don't want to respond to that sort of remark. I'm concerned about the future interests and well-being of Hong Kong."

South Korea denies danger of war despite nuclear tension

7 SEOUL, South Korea (AP) — South Korean leaders tried to assure their people Thursday that the dispute over North Korea's nuclear program would not lead to war.

Tensions began growing last week, when the North unexpectedly announced that it was quitting the nuclear Non-Proliferation Treaty, thus releasing it from the obligation to allow international inspections of its nuclear sites.

The withdrawal reinforced suspicions that the hard-line Communist North is developing nuclear weapons, despite its denials. South Korea, the United States and other Western nations denounced the North's decision.

The North, in turn, blames rising tensions on the divided peninsula on U.S.-South Korean war exercises that ended on Thursday.

A South Korean newspaper reported Thursday that Seoul would be willing to discontinue the maneuvers if the North would rejoin the treaty, but the South's foreign minister said he knew nothing about this.

Japan: Veggie vendoland is here!

8 TOKYO (AP) — In Japan, where millions of vending machines dispense beer, cigarettes and porno magazines, something more wholesome is now on display in the lighted windows: fresh vegetables.

The machines, while reflecting a healthier trend in vended merchandise, also reflect a decline in ethical standards in Japan.

Roadside fruit and vegetable stalls, which once operated successfully on the honor system, were being ripped off in recent years.

"The machine has become a popular stop in our neighborhood," said Nobue Koike, a farmer's wife in Osaka whose machine offers a head of cabbage or lettuce for 85 cents.

The company Mitsubishi Agricultural Machinery introduced 10 experimental machines last November and will begin full-scale distribution next month. It hopes to sell 1,000 machines the first year.

Gov. Cuomo returns to trade center

Richard Pyle
Associated Press

NEW YORK—Gov. Mario Cuomo led tenants back into the World Trade Center on Thursday, using a white handkerchief to check for any sign in his offices that the complex had been bombed three weeks ago. He found none.

"This really is amazing," Cuomo, who has offices on the 57th floor of No. 2 World Trade Center, told officials of the Port Authority, which owns the 110-story tower, "I did not dream that you could get it this clean, this fast."

The explosion in an underground garage Feb. 26 knocked out power, ventilation, communications and other vital systems in the twin 110-story towers, the world's second-tallest buildings. Port Authority Chairman Stanley Bre-zenoff showed Cuomo the new systems replacing them.

"I will report to my people that they are free to come back and it will be safer than before," Cuomo said. "The building is still standing and so are we."

George Rossi, assistant director of the trade center, said the towers would reopen in sections, starting with the upper floors of No. 2, which was less affected by the blast and subsequent fire.

Cuomo found no soot in his offices — not on the windows and walls, not on his desk, not even in a closet. Workers told Cuomo they used special sponges to soak the smoke off the walls. The offices also didn't smell of smoke.

Cuomo wiped a painting with a handkerchief, and it was clean. He had workers open a ventilation duct to look for soot; they found none. He checked a book on a shelf and said it was cleaner than it had been for years.

Two men of Palestinian descent have been charged in the bombing and are being held without bail. On Thursday, a federal judge refused to set bail for a third man, Ibrahim Elgabrowni, who has been held since he allegedly elbowed investigators who searched his Brooklyn apartment after the explosion.

Judge John Sprizzo told defense lawyer William Kunstler to appeal to the 2nd U.S. Circuit Court of Appeals, saying there was not enough new information to make him reconsider another judge's bail decision.

Kunstler called Elgabrowni's detention "a total fraud," and accused the government of trying to fabricate a "mammoth Islamic conspiracy."

White House to protect them for the first time in 12 years, their efforts were doomed from the start. Taking no chances, Democrats even limited the number of amendments GOP lawmakers could offer, a routine tactic that nonetheless infuriated Republicans.

"We were royally zapped," Rep. Robert Walker, R-Pa., moaned in an interview.

Behind the scenes, Clinton was at work. In phone calls and letters to wavering Democrats, he urged them to support his plan.

"He had all the details about jobs, all the facts and figures," said Rep. G.V. Sonny Montgomery, D-Miss., a conservative who said he got a call at home from Clinton at 10:20 p.m. Wednesday. "I just listened."

Montgomery and other conservatives were most troubled by the jobs package, which they complained would add to budget shortfalls that are already historically high. But they seemed all but ready to concede that the plan would go through.

"The president's made quite a few calls" to round up votes, said Rep. Charles Stenholm, D-Texas, a leader of the conservatives. Asked if the calls were effective, he said, "Yeah."

Just to be sure, Democratic leaders were piecing together an amendment trimming the jobs package by about $10 million. Its goal was to remove projects that Republicans had chided as ludicrous wastes of money: $3.2 million to produce atlases about fish populations and $800,000 to get America's white water canoeing team ready for the 1996 Olympics.

The Democratic aim was clear: win big and convince the public that gridlock is over.

"The goal here is to have the fewest number of Democrats defect," Rep. Philip Sharp, D-Ind., one of the party's vote counters, said in an interview. "We're interested in demonstrating we have the capacity to govern."

Republican Party indicated its narrow-minded and myopic viewpoint in the presidential election.

"They suggested in the Houston Republican convention that hate is the family value they are looking for," he said.

However, Steve Roberts, serving on the Republican National Committee in Iowa, pointed out that the more visible gays and lesbians become in the political field, the more eminently the counterpowers grow.

Keith Chiavetta, chairman of UI Young Americans for Freedom, agreed, saying that some people oppose any group that seeks "special rights," including vocal gay-rights activists.

Among the Republican Party, some members strongly hold up certain values, Roberts said.

"They support traditional heterosexual values which oppose other forms of lifestyles because other lifestyles are not preferred on the religious reasons," he said.

Iowa takes slim lead over Lions

Jay Nanda
The Daily Iowan

AMES — Anyone doubting the level of excitement at the 63rd annual NCAA Wrestling Championships Thursday night need not look much further than Dan Gable.

The Hawkeye coach's voice is bordering on laryngitis from encouraging his wrestlers, but the ability to talk is the only thing Gable is losing, as Iowa holds a slim 24.75-24.50 lead over top-ranked Penn State here at Iowa State's Hilton Coliseum.

The Hawkeyes trailed the Nittany Lions the entire tournament until the final second-round bout of the three-day session.

In the only head-to-head match thus far between the two schools, No. 5-seeded Hawkeye heavyweight John Oostendorp decided No. 12 Greg Troxell of Penn State, 4-1, giving the Hawkeyes the lead heading into today's quarterfinals at noon.

Iowa came into the tournament with nine wrestlers, while Penn State qualified all 10. But that didn't faze Oostendorp.

"Every match counts; you can't think about the team race," Oostendorp said. "We felt we had the firepower. It doesn't matter how many guys you bring here but what you do with them."

Oostendorp faces No. 4-seed Todd Kinney of Iowa State today.

Iowa advanced seven grapplers into the quarterfinals, suffering just two losses in the opening round. Kevin Hogan was pinned at 126 pounds by Willie Carpenter of Brown University, while 167-pounder Matt Nerem fell to No. 5 Billy Kumprey of Marquette, 10-4.

Looking strong for the Hawkeyes in particular are 118-pounder Chad Zaputil and the Steiner Brothers.

Zaputil, the top seed, had a scab come loose on his forehead just 17 seconds into his first match and had to wrestle the rest of the way with his head heavily-banded. But otherwise, he had no trouble in pinning Hofstra's Jason Wartinger and then winning by stalling disqualification over Joey Dansby of Cal-Poly Pomona.

Zaputil now collides with No. 8-seeded David Land of Maryland, but not without a few words of advice from his opponent.

"Zaputil, you better be ready," See WRESTLING, Page 2B

Hofstra's Jason Wartinger strains to stay off his back as he is pinned by Iowa's Chad Zaputil at 118 pounds in the first round of the NCAA Wrestling Championships in Ames, Iowa, Thursday.

MEN'S BASKETBALL

Hawks ready for Indians

John Shipley
The Daily Iowan

At the least, today's first-round NCAA matchup between Iowa and Northeast Louisiana should be fun to watch.

The 13th-seeded Indians have been blown out in their last two tournament games and upsetting No. 4 seed Iowa this season will be a formidable challenge. But if Northeast Louisiana is going to shock the Hawkeyes, they'll do it running.

"They've got a nice style; I like it. They get up and down the floor," Iowa coach Tom Davis said.

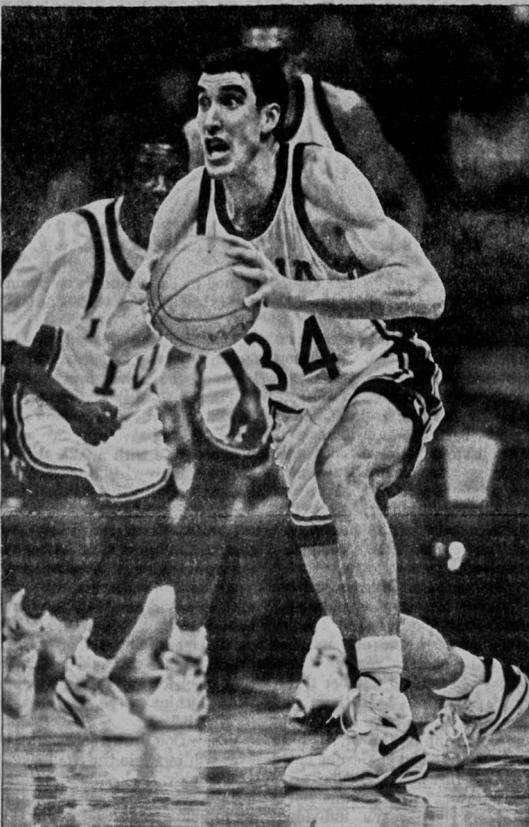

The Indians (26-4) will be making their fourth consecutive NCAA appearance when they tip off against Iowa in the Southeast Regional today at 2:05 p.m. Coach Mike Vining has made no secret about how his smaller Indians will attack the Hawkeyes (22-8).

"We feel that to survive we have to push the ball upcourt and get into a full-court game," he said.

That's fine with Davis, whose Hawkeyes are as comfortable running the floor as they are setting up in a half-court set.

"We don't change much. We do run, though we're not the flat-out running team that we've been at some points in the past," Davis said. "We're willing to run, though we're not really sure what to expect. I would guess it's going to be a pretty high-scoring ball game."

This year's Iowa team hasn't run as much as some of Davis' other teams, but it hasn't had to. With a frontcourt built around second-team all-Big Ten center Acie Earl, See MEN'S BASKETBALL, Page 2B

Wade Lookingbill and the rest of the Iowa Hawkeyes are looking for a first-round win today at 2:05 p.m. as they battle 13th-seed NE Louisiana.

WOMEN'S BASKETBALL

Old Dominion a new opponent for Iowa

Roxanna Pellin
The Daily Iowan

While many UI students depart for spring break vacations, the Iowa women's basketball team has a destination of its own.

The Hawkeyes will play Old Dominion for their opening game in the NCAA tournament at 6:35 tomorrow night in Norfolk, Va. The Lady Monarchs beat Tennessee Tech 77-60 Wednesday in front of a home crowd of 1,388 to advance to the second-round game.

Iowa coach C. Vivian Stringer said Old Dominion will be a good host. This is the first matchup ever between the Hawkeyes and the Lady Monarchs.

"I'll be glad if we go to Old Dominion because maybe they'll clear that snow up and we can get a chance to run a hike on the beach for a little bit first," Stringer said. "I've been in that part of the country before."

The Hawkeyes are the only seeded team in the tournament who will not host a second-round game because of a scheduling conflict at Carver-Hawkeye Arena. The rock group, Guns 'n Roses, will perform tomorrow night at Carver-Hawkeye Arena, which will not provide enough time to get the facility ready for a game.

Stringer said she hopes the Hawkeyes can turn the away game into something positive.

"I'm not pleased about it," Stringer said. "It's disgusting that it happened. But I'm not going to dwell on it anymore. I think that our key is that we have to deal with the cards that have been handed to us. Obviously, we worked hard and we deserved that and everybody else knows it. I think we can turn it around the other way.

"I hope that Guns 'n Roses doesn't cancel. That would be ironic."

The Lady Monarchs are making their ninth appearance in the NAAs, claiming a record of 14-8 in tournament play. The Hawkeyes enter the tournament with a No. 2 seed in the Midwest Regional for their eighth consecutive appearance. Iowa has not seen action since last Friday's 83-59 win over Minnesota at Carver-Hawkeye Arena.

Despite a No. 2 seed and having to travel for the second-round game, Stringer said the Hawkeyes believe they can win.

MEN'S SWIMMING

Big Tens offer time to relax

Curtis Riggs
The Daily Iowan

Now comes the reward for all the hard work and training put in this season. Several Iowa swimmers said that the trip to the NCAA Championships is a time to relax, have fun and not get psyched-out by the competition.

Indianapolis is the destination for six members of the Iowa men's swim team who will compete in the NAAs, March 25-27.

"There is not much pressure at this meet," said senior co-captain Eric Kirsh who will compete in the 50 and 100-yard freestyles.

"Once you are there, there is nothing to do but swim fast," Kirsh said.

To Kirsh, who will also be a part of the Iowa freestyle relay team, the toughest thing about the NAAs is getting there. "Once you are there it is all fun," he said.

Last year, the Hawkeyes placed 13th at the championship meet. Stanford came out on top with Texas placing second.

Coach Glenn Patton said that he hopes to let his athletes have their life-time best times, "... and let the strategy take care of itself."

The squad's other co-captain, Matt Smith, will be competing in the 100 backstroke, 50 and 100 freestyles, along with the relay teams. The senior said that the key to having a successful tournament is finding the proper balance between the excitement and common sense.

Patton said the performance of the relay teams at the Big Ten tournament, held earlier this month, was encouraging. The Hawkeyes won the 200 freestyle and took second behind Michigan in the other four relay events.

"That shows the strength of our top four guys on the relays," he said.

According to Rafal Szukala, who won an NCAA title in the 200 butterfly last year, the road to a championship will be bumpier this season due to last year's win.

"Rafal is in a good position to defend his title in the 200 and also challenge in the 100 fly," he said.

NCAA TOURNAMENT

Arizona dooms office poolers

Associated Press

The NCAA tournament got off to the kind of start college basketball fans love Thursday night: Santa Clara, a 15th seed, shocked Pac-10 powerhouse Arizona 64-61 in the opening round of the West Regional.

It ranked among the biggest upsets in tournament history. Only once before, in 1991 when Richmond beat Syracuse, had a 15th seed knocked off a No. 2.

It also marked another fold in the first round for Arizona. The Wildcats, seeded third last year, lost 87-80 to East Tennessee State in the Southeast Regional last March.

What made Santa Clara's upset at Salt Lake City even more remarkable was the fact that Arizona scored 25 straight points bridging the first and second halves. The Wildcats (24-4) took their biggest lead, 46-33, on a basket by Chris Mills with 15:26 left.

It would be their last field goal until Mills hit a 3-pointer to make it 64-61 with 8.4 seconds remaining.

Santa Clara missed four free throws from that point on, but Arizona was unable to capitalize. Damon Stoudamire's desperation 23-footer as time expired bounced off the back of the rim.

The Broncos (19-11), champions of the lightly regarded West Coast Conference, will face the winner of the Temple-Missouri game that was played later Thursday.

In other games, St. John's beat Texas Tech 85-67, Arkansas crushed Holy Cross 94-64 and Rhode Island beat Purdue 74-68 in the East Regional; Kansas topped Ball State 94-72, Brigham Young got past Southern Methodist 80-71 and Duke topped Southern Illinois 105-70 in the Midwest Regional; Florida State downed Evansville 82-70, Tulane edged Kansas State 55-53 and Western Kentucky beat Memphis State 55-52 in the Southeast Regional, and Illinois edged Long Beach State 75-72 and Vanderbilt ousted Boise State 92-72 in the West Regional.

In late games, it was North Carolina-East Carolina in the East, Seton Hall-Tennessee State in the Southeast, California-LSU in the Midwest and Temple-Missouri in the West.

SOUTHEAST

Tulane 55, Kansas State 53

At Orlando, Fla., Tulane (22-8) went ahead 54-53 on a three-point play by Matt Greene. Anthony Beane drove the length of the floor looking to tie, but Pointer Williams reached in and stripped the ball with less than two seconds left. Kansas State finished the year 19-11.

Florida State 82, Evansville 70

Charlie Ward, taking advantage of Evansville's decision to let him shoot, scored 15 points to lead the third-seeded Seminoles (23-9). "Ward really did a great job of hitting some shots. We were gambling he wasn't going to hit those shots," said Evansville (23-7) coach Jim Crews. The Purple Aces' leading scorer, Parrish Casebier, was held to 7 points — 13 below his average.

The Hawkeyes have been able to pound the ball inside all year long. Earl, who has perfected a virtually unguardable turnaround jumper, has been complimented inside by power players like James Winters, Russ Millard and Wade Lookingbill. Winters, a 6-5 junior power forward, is almost unstoppable when he gets the ball under the basket and Millard (6-8) and Lookingbill (6-5) have been reliable offensive rebounders who can mix it up with bigger players under the hoop.

That shouldn't be a problem this afternoon. The Indians are not the biggest team Iowa will have faced this season. Six-foot-6 center Maurice Stephens is the tallest starter, followed by 6-4 forward Ryan Stuart. The rest of the starting lineup is 6-2, 6-1, 6-1.

But Davis said that can be deceiving.

"I don't think they play small. From what I see, they play big," Davis said. "There are guys that are 6-8, 6-9 that we played against this year and they played small."

Stuart pulls down 9.6 rebounds a game and is the Indians' leading scorer at 21.2 points a game. Stephens and Louis Davis each average 13 points a game; all five starters score in double figures.

The Indians' biggest player is Anthony Smith, a 6-9, 214-pound junior who scores just under five points a game and averages 2.3 rebounds a contest.

"We're not that big ourselves," Davis said. "You look at Acie at 6-10, but after that we match up pretty evenly with their starting lineup."

Northeast Louisiana will likely press Iowa early. The Indians shoot better from the field than any other team in the nation (52.2 percent), primarily because of turnovers that turn into layups and dunks.

Iowa hasn't been bothered by a press all year. Point guards Kevin Smith and Mont'er Glasper generally dribble out of them easily. Wisconsin tried pressing and running with Iowa and lost by 26.

Davis, whose teams have always applied full-court pressure, doesn't think either team will go down with the press.

"I think both teams can do a good job against the press," Davis said. "Sometimes early in the year one thing might be an important factor in a game, but at this point in the year most teams have seen everything."

"I don't think either team will live or die with defensive pressure; I don't think you can afford to rely on one factor like that or you'll get yourself upset. Northeast Louisiana does a lot of things well, and defensive pressure is one of them."

Iowa will be tough to beat if senior Val Barnes can get it going. The 6-2 off guard has been up and down offensively. He scored 29 and 27 in wins over Michigan State and Michigan, and scored a career-high 33 against Penn State Feb. 22. Since then, however, he hasn't scored over 16.

"If one or two guys have an off night, we're going to be on a plane home Friday night. We have to have solid performances from everybody."

Land told the media. Troy Steiner, the defending champ at 142, gave up just two points en route to the 1992 title. The Hawkeye has picked up where he left off, scoring two shutout technical falls. He will now face No. 8-seed Marco Sanchez of Arizona State.

At 150, No. 2-seed Terry Steiner registered a pin and a technical fall and will now take on No. 10 Jason Hawk of Rutgers.

"I think a lot of the guys controlled their matches," Gable said. "But as a coach, I don't anticipate losing anybody. I always expect to win them."

At 142, true freshman Lincoln McIlravy showed no signs of nervousness in his first NCAA tournament, scoring 11 takedowns in a 24-9 technical fall over West Virginia's Matt Blair in the opening round.

McIlravy, the No. 5 seed, then rallied to hold off No. 12 Tom Barley of Millersville, 8-7.

At 177, transfer Ray Brinzer, the No. 4 seed, received a bye in the opening round before holding off Oklahoma all-American Quincy Clark, 4-2.

"I felt like I had the match under control," Brinzer said. "The win was by strategy. I have respect for his skills but it takes more than skills. You have to think out there. I felt like he was dangerous."

Finally, at 190, No. 3 seed Joel Sharratt scored a pair of five-point decisions and will now face Ovanes Oganisian of Nebraska, the No. 6 seed.

Sharratt has already received a boost in his quest for a rematch with top-seeded Rex Holman of Ohio State, as No. 2 seed Andy Foster of Oklahoma was pinned in the first round in 2:12.

After Penn State, the Cornhuskers are close behind with 24 points. Iowa State is fourth (19.75), followed by Michigan (16), giving every indication that this tournament should go down to the wire, and Saturday night's finals.

Moreover, the first day had its share of upsets, none any bigger than top-seeded Matt Lindland of Nebraska losing 13-4 to unseeded Earl Walker of Boston University at 158 pounds. It marked the first time in at least 15 years in which a top seed fell in the first-round.

The Hawkeyes are not represented at 158.

"Everybody kept their cool and everybody's still in the race," Gable said. Thursday's morning session drew 10,753 fans while 11,114 attended the evening session, setting a pace that could break the all-time record of 69,264 set in Carver-Hawkeye Arena two years ago.

ern Kentucky, the Sun Belt Conference champion, beat Memphis State (20-12). The Tigers had two chances to force overtime in the closing seconds, but Anfernee Hardaway missed the front end of a 1-and-1 and Rodney Newsome tossed an airball from 24 feet with 1.5 seconds left.

MIDWEST

Kansas 94, Ball State 72

At Rosemont, Ill., Rex Walters made all six of his 3-point shots and scored 23 points and the second-seeded Jayhawks (26-6) shot 56.3 percent. Ball State (26-8) was seeking to match its tournament success of 1990 when it upset Oregon State and Louisville before a 2-point loss to eventual champion UNLV.

Brigham Young 80, Southern Methodist 71

Brigham Young led all the way but allowed Southern Methodist to draw close several times before pulling out the victory. The Cougars (25-8) were led by Gary Trost's 26 points. Tim Mason paced the 10th-seeded Mustangs (20-8) with 18 points. SMU made just 36 percent of its field goal attempts and 50 percent of its foul shots.

Duke 105, Southern Illinois 70

The two-time defending NCAA champions extended their run of first-round routs to six, setting a school record for most points in an NCAA game. The Blue Devils (24-7) hit 14 of 19 from 3-point range and shot 63.2 percent overall. The 14th-seeded Salukis (23-10) were making their first NCAA appearance since 1977.

WEST

Illinois 75, Long Beach State 72

At Salt Lake City, Rennie Clemons hit consecutive one-handed driving layups in the final 1:23 for sixth-seeded Illinois (19-12). Deon Thomas led the Illini with 20 points and nine rebounds. Lucious Harris had 27 points for Long Beach State (22-10).

Vanderbilt 92, Boise State 72

Billy McCaffrey, in his first NCAA tournament game since helping Duke win the 1991 national championship, scored 20 of his 26 points in the second half to carry Vanderbilt. Boise State (21-8) trailed 35-27 at halftime and closed within 40-33 before the Commodores (27-5) used a 27-4 run to pull away.

Women eye top spot in Big Ten tournament

Karen L. Karaidos
The Daily Iowan

The Iowa women gymnasts travel to Ann Arbor, Mich., Saturday to compete in the Big Ten Championship meet, a competition that the team is looking forward to.

The meet will be hosted by the defending champion, Michigan, which is currently ranked No. 8 in the nation.

All event champions from last year's Big Ten meet will be returning to defend their titles, as well as all six finalists in the all-around competition.

"I feel very strongly that we have a shot at number one, so we're going all guns," Coach Diane DeMarco said. "This has been one of our primary goals. Everyone is psyched to go after it and we plan on having a great meet at Big Tens."

"We are so ready for Big Tens," freshman Jodie Gray said. "We're ready to go after it."

Junior Sandy Stengel believes that winning comes down to one thing: nailing routines.

"If you hit your set you're going to get a good score, so consistency is the key," said Stengel, who is from Fort Lauderdale. "It should be a good meet. If we hit we can be on top."

Freshman Kim Baker echoed Stengel's philosophy.

"We just need to work on consistency and on hitting all 24 routines, six on each event," the San Antonio native said.

DeMarco said she believes that the Hawkeyes have improved their consistency over the course of the season.

"We haven't put it together on all four events yet, but our hit percentage has gone up almost every meet," DeMarco said.

The Hawkeyes may be under more pressure to do well since earning a spot at the NCAA Regional meet will be contingent on how well they do at the Big Ten meet.

Competitive tourney next for men's team

Karen L. Karaidos
The Daily Iowan

The Iowa men's gymnastics team, which stands at 6-2 on the season and 2-2 in the Big Ten, will travel to Minneapolis, Minn., to compete in the Big Ten Conference Championships, Saturday and Sunday.

The host team, 4th-ranked Minnesota, has won each of the past three conference titles but will be challenged by Ohio State, the No. 1-ranked team in the nation. All Big Ten teams are among the nation's top twenty.

"Ohio State and Minnesota have to be the primary contenders," Coach Tom Dunn said. "They're ranked number one and number two in the eastern region. Michigan State is ranked number three, but of course we beat them and Minnesota, so we have a long-shot chance at winning the whole thing but I think a good chance at being in the top three."

Every event except pommel horse will have last year's individual champions returning to defend their titles. Hawkeye Rich Frye earned medalist honors on pommel horse last season with a score of 9.85.

Iowa has never finished lower than fourth in the 12 years Dunn has been at the helm. Iowa finished fourth a year ago after tallying 281.95 points, with senior Chris Kabat taking seventh place on the floor exercise with a 9.25 and fifth in the all-around. Senior Adrian Besanon finished sixth on the still rings after scoring a 9.6.

Dunn has also guided the Hawkeyes to 11 straight NCAA regional appearances, but this season, a berth in the regional meet will be contingent on how well the Hawkeyes do at the Big Ten competition. "We've got to do well or we're not moving on, so this is a real important meet for us," Dunn explained. "But, I think we're ready to perform well."

Senior Don Brown said the Hawkeyes will be up to the challenge.

"I think we're looking good, we've got the confidence now and I think we're going to do well at Big Tens and make it into regionals," Brown said.

Out of the bubble and off to California for softball

Kris Wiley
The Daily Iowan

The Iowa softball team is hoping to step up the level of its game when it moves out of its winter home in the bubble and onto the diamond.

"We think that will make a world of difference in our team," Coach Gayle Blevins said. "We have struggled and I really have to attribute a lot of that to the fact that we haven't had the luxury of being out on the field practicing yet."

Two days of practice have been scheduled to prepare for the team's Spring Break trip to California. Iowa faces Stanford in a double-header March 23.

"I really feel we'll be able to see some great progress in that double-header from having had the two days of practice outside and make the adjustments which we haven't been able to do in our indoor facility," Blevins said.

The 6-3 Hawkeyes have never played the 1-17 Stanford Cardinal — in only its second season as a varsity team. Blevins said that Iowa needs to be prepared to play their own style of game.

"I still want to see our team play with the focus and concern for executing our game goals," Blevins said. "We always have a number of game goals we review and that's exactly how we're going to approach preparing for the double-header."

For tri-captain Christa Davis, part of the challenge will be playing consistent defense.

"Setting the tone defensively is the key," said the senior from Souix City, Iowa. "The offense will take care of itself."

Blevins has been preaching the benefits of good defense and pitching to the Hawkeyes, who have struggled in those areas in a number of games this season.

"We have been suspect in the early innings of most of our ball games," Blevins said. "We have to get better defensively and pitching-wise in the first inning of the game to set a tone."

"It's trying to get ourselves to be ready and take charge and not let things happen," Blevins continued. "It's almost as if we have been responding to putting out the flame versus keeping it from getting started."

The Hawkeyes will finish their trip by participating in the National Invitational Softball Tournament hosted by San Jose State March 25-28 in Sunnyvale, Calif.

Iowa's pool consists of No. 15 New Mexico, Creighton and Pacific. Other ranked teams in the field are No. 8 California, No. 9 Michigan, No. 14 Sacramento State and No. 20 Utah State.

"We're a team that rises to the competition," Davis said. "We'll fair well in the tournament if we play at our level."

Blevins said the Hawkeyes will need to demonstrate their ability to play at consistently in order to compete with some of the best teams in the country.

"Obviously our goal is to be in the playoffs," Blevins said. "But what I'm going to look at more is not so much just looking at the final result, but again, is the method by which we play."

In the first poll of the season, the Hawkeyes have landed in a tie for No. 20 with Utah State. But catcher Stacey Harrison said the ratings don't mean much at this stage of the season.

"I think the ranking is fine," said the sophomore from Waterford, Mich. "But it's not where you start, it's where you end up."

Blevins said Iowa needs to show the composure and confidence to move up in the rankings.

"I really believe we'll make that kind of progress on this trip," Blevins said. "We'll come back at a really good starting point for the Big Ten season."

Men's tennis team looks to take care of business

Joel Donofrio
The Daily Iowan

The Iowa men's tennis team is headed to California for spring break, but not for a week-long party. The Hawkeyes are looking to take care of business, as they compete in dual meets against Yale, Dartmouth, UC Riverside and Nevada-Reno.

The trip should provide Iowa with a much-needed break in its brutal spring schedule. The Hawkeyes stand at 3-4 after five straight dual meets against highly-ranked tennis teams. Iowa ended that stretch last weekend with a 7-0 setback at Minnesota.

Iowa coach Steve Houghton stressed that while the spring trip is always an enjoyable break from the dreary Midwestern weather, there's a lot of work ahead for his team.

"This is definitely some serious competition we're facing. It's a take-care-of-business trip," Houghton said. "However, it's always a fun time. The guys really enjoy spring trip. Who wouldn't like to get out to some warmer weather?"

"Of course we're all looking forward to it," Marino said. "It will be nice to spend nine or ten days in California, nice and relaxing. The teams we're playing won't be quite as tough as our past few meets, so the matches should go better for us."

Houghton wasn't so confident that Iowa's competition will be easy prey.

"Yale's good, and so is Dartmouth. These Ivy League schools always seem to be out there the same time we are and they always give us tough, close matches," Houghton commented.

"The main reason we go on this trip, obviously, is to get some outdoor play in before the rest of our Big Ten meets," the Coach added. "Playing outside is much, much different than being indoors, and theoretically, the rest of our matches this season will be outside."

For the spring trip, the Hawkeyes are allowed to bring an extra player along, which will allow freshman Ville Nygard to travel with the team and attempt to play through his wrist injury. Also making the trip will be seniors Klas Bergstrom and Eric Schulman, juniors Neil Denahan, Carl Mannheim, Marino, and Todd Shale, and sophomores Bryan Crowley and Naguib Shahid.

All the Iowa baseball players hone their skills in a little sun from mother nature. Coach Banks hopes to get his club off to a fast start by heading for the warm spring when he guides the annual spring trip.

As far as scouting the opposition, Iowa coach Micki knows little about the squad. Pawkeyes will face Houghton given the level of tennis team is playing, she is confident that the Hawkeyes will be better this season's 8-1 dual record.

Baseball team plays in Florida sunshine

Curtis Riggs
The Daily Iowan

All the Iowa baseball team needs to hone its skills is a little help from mother nature. Coach Duane Banks hopes to get his club some relief from the relentless Midwest spring when he guides it south for the annual spring trip.

"Baseball is a game meant to be played outside," Banks said. "The Florida trip gives us an opportunity to practice and work on the things that need to be done outside."

The Hawkeyes (4-2) after splitting with Kansas last weekend, will travel to Ft. Myers, Fla. for the second year in a row for their spring ritual.

Youngstown State will be Iowa's opponent Saturday. The rest of the schedule will include Bucknell, Vermont, Northeastern Illinois, Central Connecticut State and Youngstown State again. The Hawkeyes split in their two games against Central Connecticut State in Fort Myers last season.

Second baseman Cory Larson said the squad needs to get used to hitting outside and fielding on natural turf to get ready for the conference opener at Illinois, March 27 in Champaign.

"We need to get outside to try and develop some consistency," Larson said.

Banks said while preparing for the Big Ten season will be a priority on the Florida trip, he is also just looking for improvement from his players.

"We just want to be better coming out then going in," Banks said. "We need to find out where the players are and go with it."

Banks said that the pair of double-headers with the Illini will be tough games. Although, the outcomes of conference games usually comes down to who gets the breaks.

"Illinois is one of the favorites in the Big Ten," Banks said. "But we won't be bad ourselves."

Larson said it would help the Hawkeye effort if they get off to a good start in the Big Ten. Last year, the Illini took 3 out of 4 from the Hawkeyes.

"If we get a couple at Illinois, it would be good for us," said the senior from Newton, Ia., who is batting .350 on the season.

Larson said the upper-classmen on the club don't want a repeat of the last couple of seasons.

"All of us have learned from the past. This season the team is more of a team," he added. "We found out that losing is not fun the last couple of years and are dedicated to go out as winners this year."

Larson also said team unity as a key to a successful spring.

"Definitely this team is a closer knit unit than the ones I've been associated with the last two years," he added.

Banks said that he likes what he has seen from the Hawkeyes so far this season.

"The kids are really focused and have played well in the six games this season," Banks said. "If we continue to play with the same intensity throughout the season that we have had early, we will be very successful."

Trip to Arizona gets women on the course

Joel Donofrio
The Daily Iowan

The Iowa women's golf team gets back into the swing of things over spring break, heading to Tucson to face the Arizona on March 23. The Hawkeyes are looking for the desert sunshine to provide that elusive opportunity to get out of the indoor driving range and back on the green of the links.

Against the Wildcats, Iowa coach Diane Thomason hopes her club can simply adjust to being back outside and to renewed competition.

"The main purpose of this trip really is to get some practice, because we really haven't been outside yet," Thomason said. "Arizona has already played three tournaments this year and we've played none, so it should be real interesting."

Because of Iowa's winter workouts indoors, Thomason said her team's swings should be in good shape, but that doesn't mean the Hawkeyes won't be a bit rusty.

"I think what will be rusty about them is their course management and the mental part of the game," Thomason said. "What's tough to do right away is to have a good feel for the short game — short shots to the green, putting, that sort of thing.

"To be honest with you, I'm more interested in how we do mentally," the Iowa coach continued. "That's what we've been working on this winter: how do you handle frustration on the course and your anger at a bad shot."

The two Hawkeyes that were consistently among the team's top scorers last fall are sophomore Jennifer Baker-Nodland and senior Judy Bornholdt. The two Minnesota natives led Iowa in scoring most of the fall, a trend Thomason hopes can continue.

With four tournaments following the spring trip, all of the Hawkeyes hope to be in top form for the Big Ten meet, which will be played at Finkbine Golf Course in May. Thomason said that while their mental game may need work, her team is never lacking in competitive spirit.

"The motivation is always there. These kids are always very competitive and I don't have to worry about getting them fired up for tournaments," Thomason said. "My job is to get them to calm down, because it's real easy to get down on yourself on the golf course."

Women's tennis team headed for San Diego

Joel Donofrio
The Daily Iowan

The Iowa women's tennis team heads out west this weekend, heading to San Diego for a week of outdoor tennis meets. The Hawkeyes will face Auburn on March 21, Oregon on March 22 and Colorado on March 24.

As far as scouting the opposition goes, Iowa coach Micki Schillig knows little about the squads the Hawkeyes will face. However, given the level of tennis that her team is playing, she is said she is confident that the Hawkeyes can better this season's 8-1 dual meet record.

"All three of those teams have good records but I don't know much else about them," Schillig said. "We've really been playing well lately, so I'm expecting to win all three matches and build some momentum for the rest of the season."

The Hawkeyes are looking to get used to playing outside again — a tough order under the volatile weather of Eastern Iowa. In addition, the trip will be a homecoming for freshmen Sasha Boros and Nikki Willette.

"It is a fun trip for us," said Schillig, who played collegiate tennis at San Diego State herself. "We will work hard while we're out there though — we'll get some good practice in outside to get ready for our Big Ten season, which is supposed to be outside."

Outside of Sasha Boros's season-ending knee injury, the Hawkeyes are relatively healthy going into the home stretch of their schedule. Schillig said that sophomore Cara Cashon and junior Miyuki Moore have "basically recovered" from earlier injuries.

Men hope to be a pepper in Fort Worth tournament

Karen L. Karaidos
The Daily Iowan

The Iowa men's golf team will have a busy spring break, as it travels to Fort Worth, Texas, March 22-23, to participate in the Dr. Pepper Baylor Invitational. The team will then travel to Lexington, Ky., to compete in the Johnny Owens Invitational, March 26-28.

The 13-team field at the 54-hole Dr. Pepper Baylor Invitational includes Kansas, North Texas, Wyoming, Colorado State, and Southwest Missouri State.

"A lot of those teams have been outdoors and playing and we haven't, so I think it will be a good, competitive tournament for us," Coach Lynn Blevins said.

With the Hawkeyes earning a

14th-place finish with a 339 at their first spring outing March 12 at the Fripp Island Invitational, Blevins said that the tournament will "serve as a wake-up call for them before we get rolling on the rest of the spring."

Senior Jon Frommelt said the team wasn't mentally focused but should be ready to go next week.

"Basically, I think it's all psychological and we just have to get our minds back on track and go out and do it this next week," said Frommelt, who was the first Iowa golfer to receive the Big Ten Freshman-of-the-Year award.

"We've practiced so much indoors and as anxious as they are to get outdoors and play, I think it will help," Blevins said. "We need to play everyday as much as we can."

TOURING SHOW ARRIVES IN IC

Collection of original Valiant art makes stop at local comic shop

Artists featured include Frank Miller, Steve Ditko and Jim Lee.

Tasha Robinson
The Daily Iowan

Whether you're familiar with comic art from buying a dozen titles each month or you haven't looked at a comic since you were a child, Matt Gibson has something he thinks will interest you.

The Valiant Traveling Art Show, opening today at Gibson's store, Iguana's Comic Book Cafe, is a touring collection of original works which Gibson said will both "show people the pop culture of the day and expose them to comic books in general."

Today through March 28, Iguana's, at 123 N. Linn St., will be home to 20 original artworks by popular comic artists Frank Miller, Steve Ditko, Barry Windsor-Smith, Jim Lee, Walt Simonson and Bob Layton, just to name a few.

Iguana's is one of 16 comic stores nationwide that will be hosting the show, a collection of original covers, interior pages, and one original design sketch from such Valiant comic titles as "Eternal Warrior," "Solar," "H.A.R.D. CORPS," "X-O," "Archer & Armstrong" and "Harbinger."

Gibson said he wanted to host the show for two reasons: "One, because Valiant are some of the top comics, top-selling and most-liked, in the business right now. And two, I wanted people who aren't into comics to come into the store and check out the art and see how it's changed since they were kids."

"I don't think people realize, when they think back to comics in the early '80s, the '70s, the '60s, how dramatically comics have changed. The quality of paper, of ink, the colors, the time that goes into them — every aspect has improved dramatically," he said. "Once people see what the art looks like today, they'll want to pick up comic books and read them."

The show officially opened today, but there will be a reception on Saturday, March 19, featuring refreshments, general information on the artworks and an auction of some limited-edition, signed and original art. Gibson said there will also be information available on Valiant investment opportunities. "It's a hot ticket right now," he said. "They have books that came out two years ago that sold for $2 and are now selling for $150 to $250."

The reception will run from 11 a.m. to 5 p.m., with the art auction beginning at 2 p.m.

Allen cleared of sex abuse charges

Woody Allen was accused by former companion Mia Farrow of molesting their adopted daughter.

Strat Douhat
Associated Press

NEW HAVEN, Conn. — Woody Allen said Thursday that psychiatrists have cleared him of Mia Farrow's allegation that he sexually abused their adopted 7-year-old daughter.

Allen, 57, was accused of molesting the child, Dylan, in August at the Bridgewater home of Farrow, Allen's companion and favorite leading lady for 12 years before a bitter split last summer.

As part of a state police investigation of the allegations, Dr. John Leventhal, director of the Yale-New Haven child sex abuse clinic, had been meeting with Allen, Farrow and Dylan since Thanksgiving. Allen and Farrow met for 2 1/2 hours with Leventhal and other psychiatrists Thursday. Allen then proclaimed to a small army of reporters and photographers that he had been cleared.

He said the psychiatrists' report found that "I never ever used my daughter, that no sexual abuse took place."

Allen said he intended to seek custody of Dylan and his other children immediately. "I believe this will turn everything around," he said.

Farrow wouldn't comment on the report, except to say, "I'll always stand by my children."

Her attorney, Eleanor Alter, said Farrow felt the psychiatrists' findings were "incomplete and inaccurate."

Alter said the psychiatrists at Yale had declined to meet with people who could have given critical testimony in the case, such as some of the older children in the family.

Farrow, 47, and Allen have one biological child, Satchel, 5, and two adopted children, Moses, 14, and Dylan. Farrow has eight other biological and adopted children, some from her marriage to composer-conductor Andre Previn.

Allen announced last August that he was romantically involved with Soon-Yi Previn, 22, one of the children adopted by Farrow and Previn.

Farrow has since moved to void Allen's adoptions of Moses and Dylan on grounds of fraud because he failed to disclose his "virtually incestuous relationship" with their sister.

CONCERT PREVIEW

Robert John/The David Geffen Company

Slash, W. Axl Rose and Duff McKagen (left to right) of Guns N' Roses will be thundering and howling it up Saturday night at Carver-Hawkeye Arena.

GNR to slam-dunk at Carver-Hawkeye

Thomas Wanat
The Daily Iowan

Gilby, Duff, Matt, Dizzy, Slash and Axl are coming to town.

Far from some kind of bizarre entourage of six dwarves, these guys make up what is quite possibly the single most kick-ass heavy metal bands in the universe: Guns N' Roses.

When these rock 'n' roll giants open up sometime around 8 p.m. Saturday night, the only thing that can be expected is not knowing what to expect.

Notorious for being up to two or three hours late for their own shows, GNR has proven they put on one of the most exciting and unpredictable concerts around, once they get started. At least when the crowd cooperates.

In St. Louis, which has now become lead-singer Axl Rose's least favorite city, a riot erupted after Axl jumped off stage into the crowd following the taunts of a biker in the audience with a camera.

Which brings us to Axl's Golden Rule No. 1: No cameras at the concert. He means it.

The crowd at the New Orleans Superdome can vouch for the second rule, since Axl threatened to give their money back because they didn't look like they were having a good time.

Axl's Golden Rule No. 2: Don't be lame. If you want to sit down and watch GNR, do it at home on the couch as you watch their two new concert video tapes.

Axl's Golden Rule No. 3: Don't hurt the band.

Axl and the boys left mid-concert at New Jersey's Giants Stadium after Axl was hit in the crotch with a lighter during a ballad.

Their current "Skin N' Bones Tour" will cover each of their three previous albums and EP, and is guaranteed to have something for everyone — as long as everyone is in the mood for gut-wrenching lyrics of anger, pain, self-destruction, rebellion, healing and growth.

Critics have called them everything from "racist" to "homophobic" to even "self-indulgent spoiled brats," but they have never been called lazy.

From GNR Lies, the band's second release, the song "One in a Million" sparked controversy by using the words "faggots" and "niggers" in the lyrics.

In the summer of 1991 the band made news again with the dual-album release of Use Your Illusion I and II. Songs such as "Get in the Ring" vented some of the anger that the band felt from misleading and inaccurate press coverage.

Axl is what one reviewer called a "nuclear explosion on stage."

He always speaks his mind, and fans love it.

At their Iowa City appearance, GNR's only stop in the Midwest, ex-Queen guitarist Brian May and his band will be opening at 7 p.m.

Geffen Records publicists say the band has a new format, toned down from previous concerts, and will be doing some new songs and even some acoustical work.

Fans should go anticipating the anarchy that comes with a GNR show with a hunger for mayhem and, last but not least, because they love the band.

Tasha Robinson

The facts of the case are simple. In 1975, a party of Army aviators driving back from a mission in the Sitgreaves-Apac Forest saw a strange, glowing, illuminating the woods. They investigated, they saw the light, they identified, according to the Chicago Tribune, as a 15-foot diameter, about 8 feet long, looking like "two pieces of wood" upside down, hovering 100 feet above the ground, glowing all over — white.

The loggers said that in 1975, a 22-year-old member of the group, got out of the woods, moved closer to the object, he was struck by a flash of bluish light and fainted. The others searched for him, but he was never found. The others searched by a party of helicopter pilots, on foot, and with trained dogs, but no sign of the missing man was found. The fact that five of the loggers passed lie-detector tests, uncovering a hoax or just one of the mysteries in "Fire in the Sky," detailing the events of the abduction case, which Pictures says is "one of the most mysterious mark cases in any UFO phenomena."

'Fire in the Sky' works if you're a believer

Tasha Robinson
The Daily Iowan

The facts of the case are as follows: In 1975, a party of Arizona loggers driving back from a day of work in the Sitgreaves-Apache National Forest saw a strange glowing light illuminating the woods. On closer inspection, they saw something they identified, according to the Chicago Tribune, as "15 feet in diameter, about 8 feet high" and looking like "two pie pans, one upside down, hovering about 15 feet above the ground. . . It was glowing all over — a yellowish white."

The loggers said that when Travis Walton, a 22-year-old member of the group, got out of the truck and moved closer to the object to investigate it, he was struck by a "bolt of bluish light" and fell over as if dead. The others panicked and drove away. When they returned 15 minutes later, Walton was nowhere to be found. A three-day search by a party of 50 men in helicopters, on foot, on horseback and with trained dogs failed to find any sign of the missing man.

The fact that five of the six men passed lie-detector tests aimed at uncovering a hoax or conspiracy is just one of the mysteries explored in "Fire in the Sky," a docudrama detailing the events of the Walton abduction case, which Paramount Pictures says is "one of the landmark cases in any discussion of the UFO phenomena."

"Fire" stars "The Cutting Edge's"

D.B. Sweeney as Walton, "Terminator 2" villain Robert Patrick as angst-filled buddy Mike Rogers, and James Garner as the sneering, skeptical lawman out to prove that foul play, not little green men, are responsible. For the most part, the movie's about what you'd expect of a documentary — slightly slow pacing, focus on character rather than on dramatic action, internal rather than external battles, no great revelations, no great resolution. In other words, level realism — if you can buy the central premise, or are at least willing to temporarily suspend disbelief.

If you can't, don't bother. As a straight fictional work, "Fire" is just a slow science-fiction movie with very little action and no point.

In many ways, "Fire" resembles Philippe Mora's 1989 film "Communium," purportedly the true story of how aliens repeatedly kidnapped writer Whitley Strieber and many other people for study and painful experiments. "Communium," starring Christopher Walken, is chilling and interesting, if accepted as an even remotely, possibly true story.

Those who believe aliens exist found "Communium" a frightening revelation; for those who do not believe in aliens and will never allow themselves to be convinced, it's a long, wandering movie that goes nowhere. But for those who don't believe, but are at least willing to listen to the argument, it can be an effective piece — compelling, if not convincing.

Paramount Pictures' "Fire in the Sky," which is based on the heavily documented true story of an Arizona logger's abduction by a UFO.

And "Fire" is much the same. The writing is fairly true-to-life, except for one ludicrous scene in which Rogers takes on all of his detractors during a town meeting in the local church. In a scene borrowed from "Harper Valley P.T.A.," Rogers lectures the entire town, calling people by name and asking them how they could possibly believe he would hurt his good ol' buddy Travis. The scene, during which Rogers announces his intention to take the lie-detector test, is supposed to be something of a climax for the everyone-thinks-Walton-was-murdered story line, but it hits a shrilly defiant false note more befitting an adolescent fantasy than a small-town conflict.

Patrick, the stony-faced T1000 Terminator from "T2," does a decent job with this very different role; he may have Rugged Screen

Idol in the Making stamped all over his tanned face, but he's still more interesting to watch than veteran actor Garner, who is consistently annoying in his one-note bad-guy role. Industrial Light and Magic, the old science-fiction standby, produces some surprisingly believable and interesting effects; director Robert Lieberman is mostly unobtrusive, except in his spotty insertion of truly obnoxious hand-held cam work. For the most part, "Fire in the Sky" is an average film, and one most likely to leave audience members with precisely what they went in with — anything from amused skepticism to horror to apathy. The facts of the case are there. What viewers do with them (and whether they're willing to shell out $5 to see those facts presented) is all up to the individual.

HÜSKER DÜ
EVERYTHING FALLS APART AND MORE

Hüsker Dü re-release an early, energetic LP

John Kenyon
The Daily Iowan

To hear just how far Bob Mould has come as a tunesmith, one need look no further than the re-release of Hüsker Dü's first proper studio album, Everything Falls Apart and More.

The crunching guitars and howling vocals Mould occasionally unleashes with Sugar were de rigueur during his time with Hüsker Dü. But that angst has given way to a cleaner, more layered pop sound, as evidenced by Copper Blue.

But way back in the early 1980s

Hüsker Dü was just another thrash band, albeit one of the most melodic and fastest around. With this release, all the pieces of the puzzle fall neatly (and loudly) into place. The band's 1982 EP Everything Falls Apart, first and second singles and assorted odds and ends are included on this Rhino Records release. What it presents is an early energetic outburst from one of the country's premier bands.

Fans of Hüsker's early output such as Land Speed Record and Metal Circus would do themselves a favor by checking this out. While this serves best as a historical document, it does make for a bracing listen. Songs such as "From the Gut," "Blah Blah Blah" and the title track all hold their own against more well-known Hüsker anthems.

The real finds on this CD are the two singles and the odds and ends. The first single, "Statues" / "Amusement" is less frenetic than the music the band would record less than a year later. Grant Hart's "Statues" is also presented in an eight-minute unedited form for the first time. The second, "In a Free Land" / "M.I.C." / "What Do I Want?" picks up the pace, and offers Hüsker's first real fist-waving political treatise in the first track.

Fans of Sugar, or even Hart's Nova Mob, may cringe at the thought of plunking down hard-earned rent money on a "thrash" record, but fret not sweet punker. For all the thrash-pop polarity references to Mould's past and present, this release is far from unlistenable.

The most wonderful part of this release, excepting the simple fact that this once-forgotten music is available at Sam Goody once again, is how well-packaged it is. The track listing is painstakingly annotated, listing sources for each song.

Logger's alien abduction story faces renewed doubt

Associated Press

PHOENIX — Travis Walton, whose UFO abduction story is told in the movie "Fire in the Sky," says he's hounded by people who doubt him and seven fellow loggers.

"I hope people come out of the movie more open-minded," he said Wednesday in a telephone interview from his home in Snowflake, Arizona.

Walton, 40, was a logger in north-eastern Arizona when he said he was lifted into the sky by an extraterrestrial beam of light on Nov. 5, 1975. He said he reappeared five days later.

The movie, starring D.B. Sweeney as Walton, opened last weekend, prompting a new attack on Walton's claims by the Committee for Scientific Investigation of Claims of the Paranormal, which debunks supernatural claims.

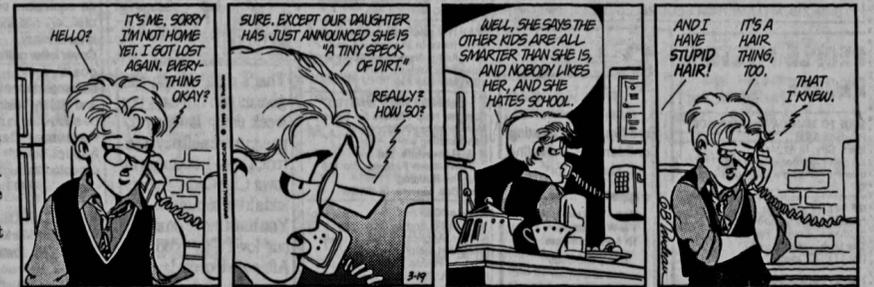

A member of the organization, Philip Klass, said in a 1983 book that Walton and logging crew leader Michael Rogers concocted a hoax to win a National Enquirer UFO sighting contest and to manufacture an excuse for missing a logging contract deadline.

Walton, Rogers and six other loggers split a $5,000 prize, but have denied any hoax.

Seeing the movie was tough at first for Walton.

The Procter & Gamble Company has established a separate, nonprofit foundation in Iowa City, made possible by the Ovation Center's $2 million fund-raising effort. A variety of renovation projects are being planned for Hancher.

To date, individuals and organizations have committed $1.25 million to the center, and the National Endowment for the Arts has awarded a $500,000 grant for the effort.

Fire causes damage to house

A fire caused an estimated $40,000 damage Sunday to a house garage at 813 S. Ave., destroying the contents of the garage including a vehicle and motorcycle. A vehicle in the garage was also damaged.

The Iowa City Fire Department responded to the call at 10:15 a.m. and extinguished the blaze in 15 minutes. No injuries were reported, but acting Battalion Chief Jim Humston said there was damage to the house due to smoke exposure and that the power lines were down. The cause of the fire is still under investigation.
