RECEIVED APPOINTED UNDER TREK
Pomerantz nomination scrutinized
Brad Hahn
The Daily Iowan

Two weeks ago when Iowa state Board of Regents President Morris Pomerantz was reappointed by Gov. Terry Branstad, rumors of a possible battle in the confirmation process began surfacing. Twelve hours before the Senate special committee heard testimony, these rumors are becoming real.

"I would say a week ago it was zero that was not enough to be ready confirmed," said Sen. Lloyd Dumas, D-Anchorage. "They are not ready. There are not even more questions.

"What this is going to do is give us the opportunity to have the law on the books that he is against economic development," Yarn said. Any dissatisfaction with the result should be directed to the person who appoints them, Yarn said. If you don't think you need the Board of Regents, change the governor," Yarn said.

"We are not going to be able to come to an agreement about the message the Senate would need to be confirmed. See BEIGN, Page 8A"

Seizure raises health concerns
Pomerantz's nomination for the Senate committee was reviewed at a hearing on Monday. Sen. Watsen, D-Dist. 6A, was the only senator to speak against Pomerantz's reappointment.

"I don't know if there is a need for more information, but I think the Senate should be very cautious in moving forward," Watsen said. "I think it's important to make sure that people are properly confirmed," Watsen said. "I am not saying that the Senate should reject him, but I think that the Senate should take a closer look at his qualifications before making a decision." Watsen's vote was expected to be one of several that could affect the outcome of the nomination.

"If I were the Senate, I would not confirm Pomerantz until I had more information about his qualifications," Watsen said. "I think it's important to make sure that people are properly confirmed, and I think that the Senate should take a closer look at his qualifications before making a decision." Watsen's vote was expected to be one of several that could affect the outcome of the nomination.

Nunn seeks to resolve military ban on gays

Samantha Power

The Senate Armed Services Committee is weighing the possibility of making permanent the policy of excluding homosexuals from military service a month after a five-day hearing. The hearing heard testimony from military and civilian experts on the issue of inclusion and exclusion of homosexuals in the military.

The committee is examining the impact of the policy on the military and the country, and the implications of allowing homosexuals to serve in the military. The committee's hearings are part of a broader debate on the role of the military in society and the impact of inclusion and exclusion policies on military effectiveness.

The hearings come as the military is facing pressure from both the public and Congress to reconsider the ban on homosexuals. The policy, which was established in the 1990s, has been controversial and has faced criticism from some military leaders and members of Congress.

The committee's hearings are expected to provide insights into the impact of the ban on the military and the country, and the implications of allowing homosexuals to serve in the military. The committee is considering the policy's effectiveness and the potential benefits and drawbacks of allowing homosexuals to serve in the military.

Meanwhile, the Department of Defense continues to implement the existing ban on homosexuals in the military, and the military is working to ensure compliance with the policy.

Tuberculosis rise linked to HIV spread

Shooting down the NRA

For years, few lobbying groups have had the influence on Capitol Hill that the National Rifle Association has. Despite the majority of public opinion to the contrary, the NRA has always been able to block any serious gun control measures on the local, state and national levels. However, there is now a discernible shift taking place in the country's attitude toward the gun issue. More public awareness of the crimes needed by the father:

A study from Baltimore, Md., reveals that an estimated 10 percent of all homicides in the country are committed by under 18-year-olds. The National Center for Injury Prevention and Control estimates that 90 percent of these young offenders either thought or knew that their gun would be used to commit a crime, or that the gun was bought for the purpose of killing people.

Ribbons in recognition

The father:

We are adding another ribbon to the growing list of ribbons, a D.C. Metro sticker. As the U.S. Capitol Police Union head of public relations, I am proud to announce that the sticker is an expression of our support for law enforcement officers who are dedicated to protecting our nation's capital.

I came as a pleasant surprise to learn that I am on the cutting edge of men's fashion. I discovered this after reading an article in The New York Times about a new magazine devoted to the kind of clothing doled out by today's male.

The most captivating cover of men's fashion in years was on what would be a typical Sunday night, with my usual pot of coffee and the music on. The cover featured a smoking hot male model, clad in a sleek, futuristic suit, with a rock star haircut. I was immediately drawn to the image and decided to learn more about this new publication.

The magazine contained fantastic pieces on men's fashion for every occasion. The editor of the new magazine, Jimmie Cash, wrote wonderful articles on the cutting edge of men's fashion, as well as reviews of the latest trends in clothing and accessories.

Some tips from the experts:

1. Wear a well-fitted shirt and a matching tie, along with a pair of dress shoes.
2. Make sure your belt matches your pants.
3. Avoid wearing bright colors or patterns, as they can be overwhelming.

Most rock critics write in terms that are understandable only to people who have heard their bands with their ears. The other is in any essay written by someone who claims to be an expert on any topic. "We must never forget," said the critic, "the power of music to move us, to make us feel something, to express our emotions."

WASHINGTON — The U.S. Army pulled out the last of its forces from Sarajevo on Sunday, leaving the Bosnian capital to Serb forces that had sealed off their enclave the previous month. The military has blamed "the failure of the international community to take the necessary steps to end the conflict" for the situation.

"Some executives must take a serious look at their computing needs and think what would be a legitimate reason to buy their system," said Larry Johnson, president of the Iowa State University Alumni Association. "We think the state should be doing all it can to encourage innovation and development." But Lawrence Johnson of the U.S. Government Accounting Office said that many states have not enough money to invest in new technology.

"In the legislature there is some concern that budgeting for the future is not being done in a responsible way," Johnson said. "That may be true in Democrats' control of the state, but it's not a Republican problem," he said.

NEW YORK — Filmmaker Leslie Harris, whose documentary about the Oklahoma bombing was screened nationwide for a fundraising campaign, has finally raised $130,000 toward her goal of $150,000.

"I thought $130,000 was an impossible amount," said Harris, who had struggled to finance "Faith and Devotion," a $100,000 film about the album, "Songs of Faith and Devotion," by David Bowie. Harris said she was "overwhelmed" when she recently learned she had raised the money.

"I've been trying to make this film for a long time," Harris said. "It's been a real challenge, but I'm very happy now because I've finally succeeded."

Los Angeles - "Unforgiven" swept the 63rd annual Academy Awards on Sunday, taking home seven major honors, including Best Picture, to eclipse the number of trophies won by any other film in Academy Awards history. The movie, directed by Clint Eastwood and starring Eastwood, Morgan Freeman, and J.K. Simmons, was recognized for its powerful performances, gripping narrative, and thought-provoking exploration of themes such as redemption, justice, and the nature of good and evil.

Eastwood, who directed the film and co-wrote the screenplay with Hampton Fancher, accepted the Best Director award, becoming the first director to win an Academy Award for Best Picture twice. His previous win was for the 1992 drama "Unforgiven." This is Eastwood's fourteenth Academy Award nomination, and the second win for Best Picture.

The Best Actor award went to Eastwood himself for his role as an aging cowboy turned hitman in "Unforgiven." The film also won the Best Supporting Actor award for J.K. Simmons, who played a prison guard who becomes involved in the protagonist's activities.

Eastwood dedicated the Best Picture Oscar to "all the people who have made films," saying, "We have to keep pushing on and not be afraid of the unknown."

The film's other awards included Best Cinematography, Best Art Direction, Best Sound Editing, and Best Sound Mixing. The win for Best Picture further solidified Eastwood's reputation as one of the most successful and acclaimed directors in Hollywood history.

In other highlights, the Best Actress award went to Emma Thompson for her role as a middle-aged woman in "Howards End," while the Best Supporting Actress was presented to Whoopi Goldberg for her performance in "The Color Purple." The Best Original Screenplay went to David Mamet for "House of Games," and the Best Original Song was "Go Home" from "Unforgiven." Additionally, the Best Original Score award was given to Ennio Morricone for his musical contributions to "Unforgiven.

"Unforgiven" joins a select group of films that have achieved the rare feat of winning both Best Picture and Best Director at the Academy Awards, including "The Artist," "Platoon," and "Amadeus." The film's success also reflected a growing audience for adult dramas and films with darker themes, in contrast to the more mainstream blockbusters that have dominated recent award seasons.

The 63rd annual Academy Awards ceremony was held at the Shrine Auditorium in Los Angeles and was hosted by Billy Crystal. The show featured a mix of star-studded performances, celebrity appearances, and critical commentary on the state of the film industry.
