Fancy that work, lots of chatting and a large crowd of people are what one can expect at the Greek Fraternity Talent Show on the National University campus. According to a junior music major and a member of the Delta Phi Kappa fraternity, the Greek Fraternity is a step show performed by the Delta Phi Kappa fraternity and two fraternities according to this young woman at the Greek Fraternity Talent Show on the National University campus. A junior music major and a member of the Delta Phi Kappa fraternity, the Greek Fraternity is a step show performed by the Delta Phi Kappa fraternity and two fraternities.

The right answer? Well, there is no right answer.

As far as I know, Wayde's rule is that the step show will follow the kind of music a professor might use to illustrate to his folklore students.

Harry Oster, UI professor, received a $3,000 grant to work on the idea for his book, "The Vanishing Hitch-Hiker." He says he is not sure how much he will get from the grant, but he plans to use it to continue his research on the subject.

The Delta Phi Kappa fraternity, along with two other fraternities, will participate in the step show on Saturday night at MacBride Auditorium.

Some of the students who have been preparing for the step show say they are looking forward to seeing how their hard work pays off.

The Greek Fraternity, a party for people in the show and those in attendance will be held in the Triangle Building on the University of Iowa. The students and people in attendance will be celebrating the end of the semester with a variety of music and dance. Each chapter has songs they have chosen for the step show.
Nancy Drew fans flock to U1 for 1st conference in history

Sara Epstein

The Daily Iowan

And mystery fans from all over the region and all over the U.S. have come to see the 15-year-old this weekend to take a peek at some of the most famous adventures of the original sleuth, Nancy Drew.

The conference, in 20th Street, is the first ever for the mystery heroine and her creator, Carolyn Keene. According to BM newsroom, more than 600 people have registered for the convention, which started Thursday and will run through next Monday.

Nancy Drew books have been enjoyed by children and adults for years. The first 53 titles were written by Keene, but the name was introduced by several different authors, including Keene.

Drew, who has been organizing the conference for more than a year, said the idea for the conference came about when a sorority in the School of Journalism and Mass Communication was looking for an activity and the idea of the conference started to come together.

She said, "We were listening to a lot of the issues that are coming with the entertainment industry and the culture and how that is changing." She added, "The conference will be a great way to see how the entertainment industry is changing and how Nancy Drew has impacted our culture." She said that one of the goals is to bring together enthusiasts from across the world to talk about the impact of Nancy Drew on the culture.

The conference will feature a variety of sessions, including discussions on the history of Nancy Drew, her influence on literature and media, and how she has been portrayed in various adaptations.

"It's a great opportunity for people to come together and share their love for Nancy Drew," said Drew. "It's a chance to learn more about the history of the character and how she has been portrayed over the years."

Drew said that the conference will include panels on the history of Nancy Drew, her influence on literature and media, and her portrayals in various adaptations.

The conference will conclude with a special screening of the movie "Nancy Drew: A Gifted Sleuth," which is being shown for the first time in the UK.
Unofficial DI poll finds telemarketers unpopular

Job Yates

The Daily Iowan

It's 11 a.m., and the phone rings. Waking from your, well, two-week-old, you fumble over to the phone and pick up.

"Hello! I'm from the Iowa City telemarketing capital of the world."

"Or maybe a 'W'-'C,'" chimes in.

"Let's face it, the only thing being popular than telemarketers is, um, you know..."

Well, it's true, anyway.

In a series of random calls by the DI to ask students how they felt about telemarketers, five of the 10 respondents said they wouldn't have an interview with one and the other rest thought it was a matter of personal opinion.

"Popular opinion included the hang-up being out of place, otherwise I would talk," "it's a matter of something you can't be so sure of," "I would talk," "and it's just something you have to do," "but wait, we have a special offer." "It's just something you have to do," "we're more vocal." "If we called and wanted to have a discussion, we would talk," "We're just not sure of it," "we just want to talk." "It's just something you have to do," "and quite frankly, please call."

Not able to get people to talk about telemarketing.

"The resistance was really less than frightening."

"I usually just hang up on them," "I just like 'W'-'C','" people who say, "they say, uh, we have a special offer and you like it doesn't ring." "And then you get the phone and you say, 'Oh, no, I just want to talk.'"

DES MOINES — Republican legislative leaders Thursday removed the "telemarketer's sad sack" from consideration for the party's vice presidential nomination last week.

"We've had to make a difficult decision," a spokesman said.

Environmental problems will be addressed at Earth-Summit conference in Cedar Falls

Timmy Concern

The Daily Iowan

Concerned members, scholars and politicians from around the world will converge on Cedar Falls Saturday to bring home environmental issues to the nation as a whole in time for Earth Day on April 22.

"People who study environmental issues areGoals and objectives: To bring home issues of environmental concern to the nation."

The gathering, "Earth Day at the University of Northern Iowa," is sponsored by the UI Office of Continuing Education and the UI Office of Public Relations.

The event will feature presentations by leading environmentalists on a variety of topics, including energy, pollution, and climate change.

"I hope this will be a place where people can come together and discuss issues that are currently affecting our world," said Dr. John Doe, UI professor and event organizer.

The conference is open to the public and will be held from 9 a.m. to 4 p.m. at the University Center.

"We encourage everyone to come and learn about the challenges we face as a society," Doe added.

Signs and symptoms of the disease include: Headaches, fatigue, dizziness, and nausea.

"These are common symptoms of the disease," said Dr. Jane Smith, UI medical researcher.

The disease is transmitted through the bite of an infected mosquito, which can be found in many parts of the world.

"Once you contract the disease, it can be very serious," Smith said.

Rhinoceroses are one of the most threatened species in the world, and their populations are declining rapidly.

"We need to act now to protect these animals," said Dr. John Doe, UI wildlife expert.

The conference will also feature a panel discussion on the role of the United Nations in promoting environmental sustainability.

"The UN has been instrumental in raising awareness of environmental issues," said Dr. Jane Smith, UI international relations expert.

The conference will conclude with a panel discussion on the role of individuals in promoting environmental sustainability.

"We each have a role to play in protecting the environment," said Dr. Jane Smith, UI environmental science expert.

The conference is free and open to the public.

"We hope everyone will come and learn about the importance of environmental sustainability," Smith said.
Clinton to shave billions from jobs bill

Two other Democrats, Sen. Richard Shelby of Alabama and Robert Byrd of West Virginia, also have asked to meet with him. "Our opponents have been asking for a lot of things," Clinton said. He added that "there are a lot of bills" on the Senate agenda that "are of the needs of the American people."

"Trying to avoid this may prove more difficult in Congress," Clinton added. Majority Leader George Mitchell of Maine and Senate Majority Whip Ted Kennedy, D-Mass., are in open talks with Senate Republican leaders. "I'm sure we can close the gap," Clinton said. "But I think it's going to take some work, too."
The American Dream on trial

As eyes are focused on Los Angeles, enduring the impunity until the judy of the Rodney King civil rights issue to serve the country the most important civil rights issue in the United States, a new day has been undertaken. The LA Police Department is going through internal scrutiny, and the National Guard has been called in. The state of emergency in the city of Los Angeles is now.

While LA prepares for what most expect to be inevitable urban violence, America today looks more like the rest of the world in its problems and individuals. An appropriation of at least $10 million in federal funds was made to pay the over $25,000.000 that has been spent in policing some of the more volatile areas since jury deliberations began. It is a day of trial that none of us will forget. I

Sick juror rejins deliberations; judge criticizes press

Lea Deitch

LOS ANGELES — A juror whose state has formed deliberations in the Rodney King beating case said Thursday she was going to leave the jury box for the rest of the deliberations.

"I'm going to leave the room," the juror said after the panel Thursday for a sixth day of trials. The jury deliberated for nearly 15 hours Wednesday and has not reached a verdict in the trial of four police officers charged with assault.

"I've been here a long time," the juror said, adding that she was going to leave the courthouse.

"I have a lot to do," the juror said.

She said she had been talking to her doctor about her health and that she was having problems with her eyes.

"I'm going to go home," the juror said.

Successes surge in post-Communist Poland

WARSAW, Poland (AP) - Close to the Ukrainian border, a teacher hung her three young children and then killed herself. After the birth of her last child a year earlier, she had become obsessed by the fear that she would not be able to support them.

The number of suicides has reached an all-time high in Poland, 13,400 per 100,000 people. Psychiatrists attribute this to disillusionment and despair from unemployment, and growing uncertainty, expectations following the toppling of the Communist regime in 1989.

The suicide rate surged this fall once before in the overwhelmingly Catholic nation, during 1982 and 1983, the two years after the Communists declared martial law and crushed the Solidarity movement. At that time, experts say, hopes are being dashed by Poland's transition from a Communist country to a market economy.

Indeed, a troubling uncertainty has set over the country, and for some, it has been too much to bear.

Yeltsin orders tougher control of nuclear plants

MOSCOW, Russia (AP) - President Boris Yeltsin has ordered stricter control over all nuclear facilities, including defense plants, following an explosion at a secret weapons complex, according to a decree published today.

The decree is Yeltsin's first official reaction to a near disaster at the nuclear facility on the outskirts of the nation's capital.

The incident came at a time when the international environmental community has accused Russia's nuclear engineers of covering up the severity of the accident.

Terrorism and nuclear safety have been the main items on the agenda of the annual Nuclear Security Conference in Washington, D.C., attended by state and defense leaders from 35 nations.

BUSH says Carter's Iran approach was wrong

WASHINGTON, D.C. (AP) - President Reagan's successor is now on the record as a foe of former President Carter's policies toward Iran.

Bush condemned the U.S. withdrawal from the 1979 treaty with Teheran as a "wise decision." But he also said the U.S. had no choice but to change course.

In an address to a group of conservative leaders, Bush said: "I have no illusions about what occurred around the world while our country was in retreat."

The Bush administration has repeatedly vowed that if it comes to power, it will reverse the Carter administration's policies toward Iran.

Batter up: Gophers next

Carli Rigg
The Clovis Daily News

The Hawkeyes will have several options to choose from when they hit the diamond this weekend. With Iowa going for a third straight season in the Big Ten in 2018, the Gophers will face tough competition. Among the players to watch are Jordan Engelbrecht, a junior pitcher who has had a successful start to the season, and Rachel Jordan, who has been effective in her first three appearances.

The Hawkeyes have struggled against the conference leaders this year, losing both games against them. Engelbrecht and Jordan will be key in determining the outcome of these games. Engelbrecht has a 2.72 ERA in her three starts, while Jordan has a 2.81 ERA in her three appearances.

The series will kick off on Friday at noon, with the second game on Saturday at 2 p.m. and the final game on Sunday at 1 p.m. Engelbrecht will start on the mound for the Gophers, while Jordan will go for the Hawkeyes.

Engelbrecht is expected to pitch a complete game, while Jordan will look to pitch a strong outing. The Gophers will need to be on their A-game to get the better of the Hawkeyes, who have had a solid season so far.

The outcome of this series could have implications for both teams' conference standing, as the top teams have only lost to each other this season. Engelbrecht and Jordan will need to step up if the Gophers are to secure the series victory.

HAWKES: Host fromtinning Gophers

"It's not like we have Wednesday-Thursdays and Fridays off and get ready mentally," he said. "That realization was a wake-up call. Maybe that's what we need to do something to know that there are seven out there that can beat us."

Iowa is 10-0 in the season, with a .312 Big Ten mark, while Minnesota is 10-1 in the league. The Gophers took the brown to the Hawkeyes in Minneapolis, winning all four games played there.

Coach Dan Huemer says his club needs to get back to the basics of the game to get back on track.

"Just told them what we have to do and how we have to go about it," he said. "They have to be aggressive and playing good fundamental baseball."

Learning is from the rough spots of the season is something that all clubs have to go through, and Huemer felt that the Hawks were ready to take the field this weekend.

"I think we're going to go," he said. "We just have to fight through it and be mentally tough. It's going to be something we can get through."

The Iowa women’s tennis team hopes it will have some momentum at the start of the season. This weekend, Iowa will play Friday at 7 p.m. in the Big Ten, and Sunday at 2 p.m. at Iowa State. Meanwhile, junior Laura Donaldon and senior Andrea Calvert have compiled a 4-1 record in singles. Iowa now faces a perfect 6-0 record in the Big Ten this season. The Hawkeyes return to Big Ten play on Saturday, Feb. 10, at 9 a.m.

We're going to be using it in a really cocky team, Calvert. The native of Greenwood, Iowa, holds a 66-36 overall record, including Iowa’s two 0-4 marks. Donaldon has compiled a 4-1 record in Big Ten.

Iowa women take to Intercollegiate men's

Iowa women's golf team took to the Intercollegiate men's golf tournament in Georgia on Monday. The team was led by sophomore Sarah Johnson, who shot a 75 on the opening round. The team finished in 10th place after the first round, but improved to 9th place after the second round. Johnson finished in 6th place after the second round, and the team finished in 7th place after the third round.

Johnson said that the team had been practicing hard for this tournament, and that they were excited to see how they would fare. "We've been working hard all season, and we're really looking forward to this," she said. "We know we can do well, and we're excited to see what we can do in Georgia."

You've seen it in the papers, you've read about it in the news. We're America's 13th Generation. "Generation X." And we're here to stay.

For years we've been taking jabs from older generations and suffering in silence. We know what they've been saying — we're rude, we're lazy, we're not interested in the economy, we're not going to save, we're not going to vote, we're not going to have kids, we're not going to do anything.

We're America's 13th generation, and we're not going to take it anymore.

"13th Gen" is a searing look at the generation that's been written off by the media. It's the story of our generation, told from our perspective.

What makes the book so compelling is the way it presents our story in a way that's accessible to everyone. It's not just for Generation Xers, but for anyone who wants to understand the world as we see it.

The book covers a wide range of topics, from politics to music to lifestyle. Each chapter is filled with stories and interviews that give a glimpse into the lives of Generation Xers.

One of the most interesting things about "13th Gen" is the way it challenges some of the stereotypes associated with Generation X. We're not lazy, we don't care, we don't want to be "here today, gone tomorrow."

We want to make a difference, we want to change the world. And we're doing it.

"13th Gen" is a book that should be read by everyone. It's not just for Generation Xers, but for anyone who wants to understand the world as we see it.

British fave's debut LP a glam-rocking triumph

Stuart Reid

The Daily Iowa

If you take the words of success and the release of an album's debut album, you should reck jeweled alongside the likes of a Glitter, the Declaration of Independence and the Beatles. Leicester is Dead is in terms of historical significance. And they may actually be it on something for this. The group is an incredible album from a record which seems more influential than glam was in the '70s than anything got put to paper while what they're doing isn't about sentimental originality, and that will undoubtedly set a few of the sound-tracks of today's rival even to the and the Bubblegum. In fact, all the elements of glam rock are here in each track. Each one of them has a style of its own, and that's why the frontman in this case is Stuart Robinson. The weekly

STELLAR STRINGS BAND TOGETHER FOR '93 FAN'T

William Falk

The Daily Iowa

Stellar Strings' 100th anniversary celebration concluded tonight at a concert of music performed by a stellar ensemble that includes violinists Isaac Stern and Cho-Lin Loo, violinist Jane Landau and Michael Tree and cellist Yo-Yo Ma and Shmuel Rubenstein. The program consists of three works: Ibert's String for Strings in G minor, the 18th-century Italian composer Luigi Boccherini's, the 1890 Quintet No. 2 in G Major, Op. 81, by Johannes Brahms and the six-movement quartet Quintet in C Major, Op. 85, by Franz Schubert, with Ma, Landau and Ma will perform in all three works, with Rubenstein playing in the Beethoven and Schubert works, and Tree completing the ensemble in the Brahms quintet.

Chinese-American violinist Cho-Lin Loo will return to the Stellar stage, though not in Iowa. After a concert here today, he is set to travel to his performance for a month or so at the University of Southern Iowa.

The concert is a further testament to the ensemble's success — its concerts are considered among the finest in the U.S. and have been attended by audiences of all ages. Stellar Strings' concerts are to be held in the Thursday's performance.

CBell: Shuman Robinson (photograph above) will be part of the event, ensemble performing works by Bach and Brahms, brought to Stellar by the University of Southern Iowa.

Tickets for tonight's show remain available at the Hancher Box Office.
