Regents vote will not be reconsidered

Brad Hahn
The Daily Iowan

Last-ditch efforts to have Marvin Pomerantz confirmed for another term on the Iowa state Board of Regents were abandoned Thursday as it became clear that the votes for reconsideration were not there. Senate Democrats met in caucus

Thursday morning to discuss the situation. By the end of the day Pomerantz had even less support than before, Sen. Richard Varn, D-Solon, said.

Wednesday afternoon's confirmation vote found Pomerantz three votes short of serving another six years as a regent.

Immediately after Wednesday's vote officials in Gov. Terry Branstad's office said the battle was not over. All that was needed for a reconsideration vote was a simple majority, or 26 votes. There was also hope that at least one of the three Republicans who opposed Pomerantz would switch his vote.

But Varn, who supported Pomerantz, said it was clear by Thursday afternoon that even if the votes were there for reconsideration, Pomerantz would not have passed the confirmation vote.

"He's gone. He lost at least five votes," Varn said. "People didn't want him reconsidered. They thought the debate was there and people had heard plenty, besides the votes weren't there."

Although Democratic votes were split on the issue, Sen. Jean Lloyd-Jones, D-Iowa City, said by the end of the caucus the Democrats were more unified. Lloyd-Jones opposed the Pomerantz confirmation.

"There was resentment on the part of the senators at the tactics being used to confirm him. The implication was that some senators could be bought," Lloyd-Jones said. "Opposition just kind of grew and it gathered momentum as time went on."

Despite attempts to swing votes the other way, by midday the governor's office had given up, Varn said.

See related story, Page 4A.

"I saw someone from the office today and asked him what was going on," Varn said. "He said 'uncle,' and I don't think he's related to Marvin."

Disappointment was expressed by Branstad's press secretary Richard Vohs, who said Pomerantz was a great asset to Iowa education.

Vohs pointed specifically to strides the board has made under Pomerantz in keeping education affordable while recruiting and retaining top faculty.

"The governor feels that Marvin Pomerantz deserves our appreciation," Vohs said. "He is an effective leader and effective leaders create controversy."

In a written statement, Pomerantz

said he appreciated his time on the board, highlighted accomplishments during his term, and thanked the other regents and the governor.

"While the Senate action of April 14 was not a pleasant one for me, I have no regrets," Pomerantz said. "There is no doubt that, with the continued support of the people and the governor, higher education

Branstad lobbies for ethanol

DES MOINES — Gov. Terry Branstad on Thursday warned federal environmental regulators that confusing rules on alternative fuels would hurt ethanol use.

"It is time to develop a simple, clear, long-term strategy to use ethanol to benefit our environment, our farmers and the American people," Branstad said.

Branstad made his comments as a spokesman for the Governors' Ethanol Coalition, a group of 19 governors who have banded together to push for expanded use of the corn-based fuel.

Michigan judge refuses to transfer Jessica DeBoer

ANN ARBOR, Mich. — A judge refused to arrange the transfer of a 2-year-old girl to her biological parents from the Ann Arbor couple she lives with and said Thursday he probably never would.

Washtenaw County Circuit Judge William Ager said the request by an attorney for Daniel and Cara Schmidt of Blairstown, Iowa, was premature because an appeal is still expected in the long-running interstate custody case.

He suggested he might refuse to ever order the transfer, despite a Michigan Court of Appeals ruling that Jan and Roberta DeBoer give up the child.

CDC: Americans using more chewing tobacco

ATLANTA (AP) — Americans are using more chewing tobacco and snuff every year and the influence of baseball players is partly to blame, federal health authorities said Thursday.

"The use of smokeless tobacco by professional athletes . . . presents a constant negative role model," said Dr. Michael Eriksen of the Centers for Disease Control and Prevention.

The CDC said 5.3 million adults used chewing tobacco or snuff in 1991, the latest data available. About 4.8 million were men, equaling 5.6 percent of all men, compared with only 533,000, or less than 1 percent, of women.

Investigators criticize base closings

WASHINGTON (AP) — Congressional investigators found fault with Defense Secretary Les Aspin's leadership in choosing military bases to close and took issue with specific recommendations by the Navy, Army and Air Force.

In a 113-page analysis released Thursday, the General Accounting Office, Congress' auditing agency, said the office of the defense secretary "did not exercise strong leadership in providing oversight of the military services and defense agencies during the process."

Pomerantz complimented at UI while ISU celebrates

Brad Hahn
The Daily Iowan

While students at Iowa State University celebrated the unseating of Iowa state Board of Regents President Marvin Pomerantz, UI reaction was more subdued.

"It's an ambiguous position for me," UI Student Association President John Gardner said.

While he didn't agree with everything Pomerantz did, Gardner said he was sorry he didn't get the opportunity to work with him.

"I was looking forward to locking horns with him," Gardner said. "Anybody who's always making people angry also makes them think. At least where Pomerantz was concerned there was not a lot of apathy."

Despite the compliments, Gardner said there were many issues he disagreed with Pomerantz about.

"I'm sorry that I didn't get to see what Pomerantz is all about. But, See REACTION, Page 9A

OHIO STANDOFF CONTINUES

1 prison-riot hostage freed; another found dead

Cindy Benedicto
Associated Press

LUCASVILLE, Ohio — Inmates barricaded at the state's maximum-security prison for five days released one of seven prison-gate hostages Thursday night.

The hostage was released after an inmate complained about prison conditions in a live broadcast from the yard of the Southern Ohio Correctional Facility.

Prison spokeswoman Sharron Kornegay identified the hostage as Darold Clark, 23. He has been a guard since 1991.

Radio station WPAY broadcast the report from a table set up in the prison yard.

The inmate, identified only as George, said: "We either negotiate this to our liking or they will kill us. We are prepared to die."

After the broadcast, Clark was released. He walked out of the prison without assistance, leaving six hostages behind. The body of a seventh hostage was found dead earlier Thursday.

Clark was taken to Southern Ohio Medical Center in Portsmouth. He was stable but shaken, said a nursing supervisor who would not identify herself. A radio announcer described the event for listeners as it was happening.

The prisoner walked from the cellblock into the prison yard with the hostage, whose head was covered by a sheet. The prisoner carried a bullhorn.

As the two moved to a table where a microphone was set up, the inmate took off his shirt to show that he had no weapons. The inmate then took the sheet off the hostage.

"I know there's a lot on my shoulders right now. . . . I can't possibly remember all the demands," the inmate said in a hurried manner.

"We preferably would like to have an FBI negotiator," he continued. "We want to get away from this administration. They are oppressing us."

Other prisoner demands cited by the inmate included replacing Warden Arthur Tate, whom he referred to as "King Arthur," and restoring water and electricity that have been shut off since Sunday, when the riot began.

Graduate students consider unionizing

Dave Strahan
The Daily Iowan

Graduate students aren't usually known for forming unions. But, nevertheless, at the UI they may do exactly that.

About 120 graduate students met Thursday night at the Communication Studies Building to oppose what they consider unsatisfactory working conditions.

"It's sort of ridiculous that we are on the lower half of the pay scale among universities," said Louis Schwartz, a teaching assistant in film studies.

Schwartz said the UI is one of the few major universities that doesn't give their graduate students tuition waivers and that graduate students have to pay each semester for their health insurance.

"I thought these working conditions were really thoroughly unacceptable," he said.

The crowd applauded. Other complaints voiced by the students concerned the lack of affordable child care and job security.

Thursday wasn't the first time UI graduate students attempted to organize a union. According to history student Dennis Deslippe, previous attempts were made in the '60s, '70s and '80s.

In the past, Deslippe said, union attempts had been co-opted by the administration which appeased the graduate students with minor adjustments instead of major changes. He recommended that the current group avoid this trap.

"It's our right to have a union," he said. "Even if we get one or two little things, we should emphasize the fact that we're here for much more than that."

Not all students present at the Thursday meeting were in favor of a union.

"I'm here because I want to make sure that my rights are represented. See STUDENTS, Page 9A

REPORTS UNCONFIRMED

Srebrenica may have fallen under Serb fire

Robert H. Reid
Associated Press

TUZLA, Bosnia-Herzegovina — The beleaguered Muslim enclave of Srebrenica reportedly came under fierce Serbian fire Thursday, hours after the town's defenders blocked a U.N. evacuation of hundreds of civilians.

Serb forces closed to within about a mile of Srebrenica, sources in nearby Tuzla said. Town officials were cited in radio reports saying Srebrenica was on the verge of falling.

At the United Nations, Bosnian Ambassador Muhammed Sacirbey told reporters he had heard reports of the town's fall but was seeking confirmation. He said telephone lines to Srebrenica had been cut.

There was no independent confirmation of the reports and a Serb commander denied any shelling.

Bosnian state radio said three people were killed as Serbs tightened their noose on Srebrenica, launching infantry and tank attacks from the east and southeast.

Tens of thousands of desperate Muslims are stranded in Srebrenica, one of only three eastern Bosnian enclaves still held by Muslims. Its fall would be a severe blow to the government cause.

Earlier in the day, Srebrenica's defenders blocked a planned truck evacuation, demanding that 500 wounded Muslim soldiers be flown out first. U.N. officials say Serbs have not granted their request to make air evacuations from Srebrenica.

Croats and Muslims also clashed in central Bosnia for a second day.

In other developments Thursday:

■ Yugoslavia's Tanjug news agency reported a massacre of 17 wounded Bosnian Serb rebels by Muslim units in eastern Bosnia. There was no independent confirmation.

Large crowds expected at Greek Finale

The show is usually a sold-out performance.

The Daily Iowan

Fancy foot work, lots of chanting and a large crowd of people are what one can expect at the Greek Finale Saturday night at Macbride Auditorium.

According to UI junior Patrick Dyson, president of the UI National Panhellenic Council and a member of the Alpha Phi Alpha fraternity, the Greek Finale is a step show performed by the UI's traditionally black fraternities and sororities. This year, three sororities and two fraternities will participate using their bodies not only for movement, but also as their instruments.

"Stepping is rhythmic dancing," Dyson said. "It stems from our tribal ancestors in Africa. A lot of the steps we use in our show resemble the dancing they do in African dance. I think our organizations adopted stepping as a form of black pride."

The step show has traditionally been a sold-out performance, with all tickets sold at the door, Dyson said. Between three to five people will judge each show and one fraternity and one sorority will win. Although trophies are the only awards given to the winners, Dyson said the step show competition is beyond belief.

Lashundra Hill, vice president of NPHC and a member of Zeta Phi Beta said her sorority has been practicing for two hours every day for about three weeks.

"It's so much work because the steps are difficult and everything has to be in sequence and timed right," she said.

Dyson said one fraternity has been practicing since January for Saturday night's show.

A chapter's step show usually entails the women or men walking out on stage, doing a chant and then sometimes dancing with music, Hill said. The music then stops and the women or men on stage do steps with a variety of beats and rhythms. Some of the performances incorporate the use of canes into their dance, she added. After the Greek Finale, a party for people in the show and those in attendance will be held in the Triangle Ballroom in the Union. At the party, Dyson said people will be stepping around the perimeter of those dancing. Each chapter has steps they are known for and with which they identify.

"The Alpha organization has a step no other organization would dare to do because it belongs to us," he said.

The Greek Finale will be a performance worth experiencing, according to Dyson.

"It's a part of the greek community people should be aware of," he said. "It's an eye opener to our traditions and our culture."

URBAN LEGENDS COMPILED

Utah professor studies myths behind 'facts'

Tory Brecht
The Daily Iowan

It's a well-known fact. If your roommate commits suicide, the UI administration gives you an automatic 4.0 grade point average.

But before you decide to rub out your roomie and enroll in the honors program, there is something you should know: The "fact" is only a legend.

The "suicide rule" comes from a long line of academic folklore told on campuses across the country, according to Jan Brunvand, a professor of English and folklore at the University of Utah and author of several anthologies of urban legends.

Ask almost any student on campus how long you have to wait for a professor or teaching assistant to show up for class before UI policy dictates the class can leave and you're bound to get a different answer from each one.

"I think it's 10 minutes," UI sophomore Jeff Burke said. "It's in some book or something."

UI sophomore Jeannie Young heard differently.

"For a professor, I thought it was 15 minutes," she said. "For a TA I think it's 10. The professor gets more time because he might be busier."

The right answer? Well, there is none. In fact, there's no such rule.

"As far as I know, a waiting rule for late professors has never been made an official regulation by a college administration," Brunvand said.

Brunvand would know, since he has been compiling and tracking urban legends for three decades. He began collecting modern stories

"People are always interested in the strange or the horrible."

Harry Oster, UI professor to illustrate to his folklore students that oral culture is alive and well in the information age.

"Many of my students thought folklore was something from the past," he said. "I wanted to show them that they knew folklore too."

Brunvand's first book of urban legends, "The Vanishing Hitchhiker," was published in 1981.

According to Brunvand, the book elicited such great public response in the form of letters and calls that he decided to collect legends seriously.

"People like to be part of the action," Brunvand said. "Any group of people who get together tell stories."

Harry Oster, a UI English professor who teaches a course on folklore, said the most popular urban legends are those that tell of horrifying or extraordinary circumstances.

"What you usually hear are sensational events," Oster said. "People are always interested in the strange or the horrible."

A good example of this type of story is one going around at the UI Hospitals and Clinics. The story, according to Jim Haley, a research assistant in psychiatry, was related to him by a FOF, which stands for "friend of a friend" and is a key indicator that a story is really an urban legend.

According to Haley's FOF, a young man in the pathology department of the hospital goes to Chicago for a fun-filled weekend. As he sits in a bar drinking with his buddies, a young woman begins coming on to him. Being on vacation and relaxed, he encourages her and eventually goes back to her hotel.

The next morning, he wakes up in a daze with a pain in his side. When he looks down at his injury, he is astonished to see stitches. It seems that the young woman at the bar worked for a black market organ ring, seduced him, knocked him out with drugs and performed kidney-removal surgery.

This story is documented in Brunvand's new book, "The Baby Train and Other Lusty Urban Legends" as "The Kidney Heist" and is attributed to Felicia Strohhert of Stone Mountain, Ga.

Brunvand said the speed with which these legends travel around the country, and even the world, is remarkable.

The horrible stories may serve a purpose for the teller and the audience, Oster said.

"I suppose from a psychological view they bring out people's deepest fears," he said. "Expressing them out loud takes the edge off the fear."

It won't take the edge off your fear if you're Annabelle Garcia's roommate, though. Garcia, a freshman, has heard about the policy on suicidal roommates.

"If your roommate dies, you get a 4.0," she said. "I hope my roommate dies tomorrow."

Nancy Drew fans flock to UI for 1st historical conference

Sara Epstein
The Daily Iowan

Avid mystery fans from all over the country will descend upon the UI campus this weekend to take part in the first-ever Nancy Drew Conference.

Conference organizer Carolyn Stewart Dyer, associate director of the UI School of Journalism and Mass Communication, said more than 400 people have registered for the conference to reminisce about reading Nancy Drew books in their youth and to learn more about the history of the Nancy Drew series.

"These people are scattered all over — they're not coming from any one place," she said, adding that participants represent Canada and 29 different states, including Hawaii.

Dyer, who has been organizing the conference for more than a year, said the idea for the conference came about when a secretary in the School of Journalism and Mass Communication was cleaning alumni files and found the file of Mildred Wirt Benson. Benson, a columnist for the Toledo Blade in Ohio, was the first woman master's recipient in the School of Journalism and Mass Communication at the UI in 1925 and also the first author of Nancy Drew mysteries.

"The secretary lobbied to put Benson on the alumni hall of fame, which we did last year at the Fourth Estate Banquet," Dyer said. "We were besieged with people who wanted to come to the banquet to meet her and tell stories about reading Nancy Drew."

Dyer said she thought it was only natural that the UI bring together all these Nancy Drew fans for a conference. Aside from providing a chance for fans to learn more about the Nancy Drew series, the conference will look at some of the controversies surrounding the series, including concern about racial and ethnic stereotypes that appear in the books.

"Another controversy has been that children's book series, Nancy Drew in particular, are not particularly well-written," she said. "Some people say the time spent reading these series could be spent with something of literary merit. On the other side, people can say that if kids are reading anything it's a good thing."

Nonetheless, many people have fond memories of Nancy Drew, especially women.

Nancy Romalov, a UI graduate student on the conference steering committee, said many of the participants in the conference will be women in their mid-40s.

"Nancy Drew was a very, very important and pivotal figure in the decade that was so repressive to women," she said. "Nancy provided something the culture didn't."

Romalov said one of the good things about the conference is its broad appeal.

"It's so inclusive. People are coming from every possible interest area," she said. "We've also made efforts to involve children, and that's quite unusual for a conference to incorporate children's events."

Though the conference is almost full, Dyer said interested people may still register by contacting the

Discrimination, prejudice still problems Iowa's migrant workers face every day

Fernando Pizarro
The Daily Iowan

Editor's Note: This is the fourth of a four-part series on migrant workers and their impact on Iowa. Some of these interviews took place during the 1992 harvest season.

The quest for economic prosperity often forces people to look for new horizons. But the promised land does not always welcome newcomers with open arms.

Throughout time, that has been the case for most immigrants, and migrant workers' fate in Iowa is not any different.

According to Zoyla Sandoval, a migrant worker who grew up in the fields and in 1992 worked in a Williamsburg, Iowa, camp, the contact with native Iowans is only superficial. "They are nice," she said. "If you're walking down the street, you say hi, they'll say hi back."

However, there is still some degree of discrimination, according to officials who assist the migrant workers. Vy Gibson, head of Proteus' Muscatine staff, says the interaction between migrant workers and native Iowans varies considerably.

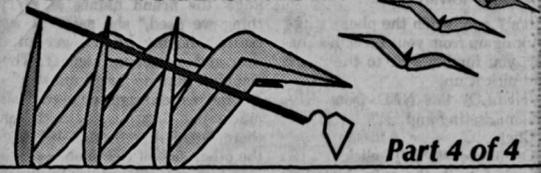

"Some communities accept them because they are adding to the agriculture and income of Iowa," she said. "In other areas it is well known that they don't want to interact with the migrants, so they in turn decide to keep a low profile."

There are many reasons for this, she added. The language gap is a big barrier to communication.

Jim Ramos, Division Director of Employment and Training at Proteus, says there are still many misconceptions throughout the United States about the migrant workers. "People think all migrants are illegals who come to take jobs away from Americans," he said. "There's also the fear of the unknown. Small-town residents in Iowa never see minorities, and suddenly they have dark-skinned people speaking a foreign language in their hometown."

UI law Professor Marc Linder, who

MIGRANT WORKERS IN IOWA

Part 4 of 4

in the past worked as an attorney for the Texas Rural Legal Aid office, thinks the deepest level of discrimination "goes to the fact that farmers and agricultural entities treat Hispanics and blacks in a way they probably wouldn't do with whites. They don't fully accept them as human beings."

In rural areas, said former Proteus ombudsman Adolfo Cisneros, migrants have a negative label that often results in some forms of harassment, such as sheriff deputies patrolling camps every 30 minutes. Or, as the migrants do not have checking accounts and cannot cash checks during normal banking hours because of their long shifts, sometimes small-town businesses charge them a $2 fee for cashing the checks.

"They feel discriminated against," Cisneros said. "As a contrast they say that 'when American kids on spring break go across the border to Matamoros, they don't go there to work, and they vomit, pee and pass out in our streets, and we still don't send the police to harass them.'"

Discrimination seems to decrease in larger urban centers, as there are more chances for frequent interaction between ethnic groups. Rosie Rodriguez, head of the Muscatine Center for Strategic Action, thinks there is still more discrimination than she is aware of. She said that "people who are bilingual don't get to witness as much discrimination as non-English speaking people, who are constantly having to deal with it."

To avoid unfairness at the labor level, a few years ago Proteus set up an ombudsman program designed to mediate the problems between migrant workers and their employers. In the past, companies were never sued for violating labor laws, but migrant workers began seeking legal assistance in Texas and filing lawsuits against the companies. The ombudsman program's funding comes from seed companies that use migrants, such as Pioneer Hi-bred, Northrup King and DeKalb.

"It's a win-win situation," says Ramos. "We see it as a service to the migrant workers and the companies. The ombudsman is in position to notice problems. Companies are made aware of them and then the program creates a resolution, instead of a lawsuit."

Linder acknowledges that the minimum-wage law has very low requirements. But still some companies fail to meet those requirements. "The chronic thing is that these companies could put these migrant legal services out of business just by abiding to the law," Linder said. "The companies are greedy."

The neutrality that ombudsmen are supposed to display as arbiters, Linder said, is lost the moment they are paid by the hiring companies. He thinks ombudsmen are not legally trained and only spot some of the problems.

Ramos agrees that Proteus' ombudsmen are not experts in the legal arena. "But they are equipped with a lot of resources," he said.

Texas Rural Legal Aid attorney Jeff Levin believes the companies have much to gain from the ombudsman program. "They cut off migrant workers' complaints and stop them from coming to offices like ours," he said.

Gambling restrictions unlikely to ease

DES MOINES—Hopes for easing state gambling laws this year are fading fast, Senate Majority Leader Wally Horn said Thursday.

Horn said the Senate has done its job by passing a bill to abolish casino betting limits and allow casino gambling at pari-mutuel tracks. The bill died last week without a vote in the House, which this week rejected a more limited gambling proposal.

With two scheduled weeks left in the legislative session, the Senate is unlikely to start another gambling bill, Horn said.

The state's riverboat casinos and race tracks are seeking relief from the state this year. Three riverboat casinos have left Iowa in the past year, saying the state's $5 limit on bets and $200 limit on individual losses is too restrictive.

Unofficial DI poll finds telemarketers unpopular

Jon Yates
The Daily Iowan

It's 7 a.m. when the phone rings. Waking up from your blissful slumber, you fumble over to the phone and pick it up.

"HELLO! I'm NED from KLA Telemarketing and..."

Click.

Or maybe "8*3*1," click.

Let's face it, the only thing less popular than telemarketers is, say, toe jam.

Well, it's close, anyway.

In a series of random calls by the DI to ask UI students how they felt about telemarketers, five of the 10 contacted weaseled out of commenting.

Popular excuses included "I'm heading out to class, otherwise I would talk," "Actually, I'm in the middle of something right now," and the ever-popular "No."

But, like most devoted telemarketers, we persevered. We called and called. We probed, prodded and, quite frankly, pissed off.

But we got people to talk about telemarketing. The response was less than flattering.

"I usually just hang up on them," UI junior Mike Van Heukelom said. "They usually call when I'm sleeping and I lose patience with all of them."

Others were more vocal.

"I hate them," UI senior Andrea Spiess said. "I really hate the ones that just read something and don't let you hang up — they say, 'oh, but wait, we have a special offer' and you're like 'I don't care.'"

"It's just a pain in the ass to get up and get the phone when you're not even going to talk," she continued. "I probably should have hung up on you."

Hmmmm.

Of course, what story about telemarketers would be complete without the Telemarketing Horror Story?

Everybody's got one. Take UI freshman Tracy Shale, for instance.

"Someone called and wanted to know the brand names of everything we used," she said. "It was really annoying. I had to get out an iron and a vacuum cleaner. They wouldn't take no for an answer."

What's often forgotten in the Telemarketing Saga is the fact that there is another human being on the other side of the phone.

In fact, with four major telemarketing companies in the Iowa City area, you are quite possibly living in the telemarketing capital of the world.

"It's a college town," said Mary Beth Rozmus, a human-resources administrator for MCI.

MCI, which employs around 300 telemarketers in the Iowa City area, has 22 centers nationwide, all of which are located in college towns.

According to Rozmus, not every call telemarketers make winds up annoying people.

"We're constantly getting letters from people saying we're doing a great job," she said. "It's really common."

Less common, yet equally amazing, are the number of relationships that develop through just one telemarketing call.

"We've had people move to New York after talking to someone on the phone just once," Rozmus said. "One guy spoke to a woman who was in the shower the entire time, talking to him on a cellular phone. She wound up buying MCI."

For those who are hard-of-hearing, a call from MCI can often be an adventure.

"We've had people think we were the FBI or MC Hammer, it's really weird," Rozmus said.

And what telemarketing saga would be complete without the complimentary Feel Good Story?

"We've saved people's lives who have had heart attacks in the middle of a call we were making," Rozmus said. "We ended up dialing 911."

State GOP leaders admit to legislative gridlock

Marvin Pomerantz's failed nomination was just one of the governor's more recent setbacks.

Mike Glover
Associated Press

DES MOINES — Republican legislative leaders Thursday conceded there is "a degree of gridlock" at the Statehouse as Gov. Terry Branstad suffers through defeats in the Legislature.

Democrats blamed Branstad's "miserable" leadership; Republicans blamed Democratic obstructionism.

Meeting with reporters, Republicans conceded many of Branstad's programs won't be enacted even though the GOP picked up seats in the Legislature in last year's election.

They blamed the narrow 51-49 GOP majority in the House and some troubles as Branstad and legislative leaders learn to work together.

"I think we'll have a smoother relationship with the governor to try and get a more focused agenda," said House Majority Leader Brent Siegrist, R-Council Bluffs. "I think it will run much smoother next year."

Branstad, a Republican, has seen his legislative program fall on tough times in the past week.

The confirmation fight over Branstad's nomination of Regents President Marvin Pomerantz was just one of several setbacks for the governor.

"To some people of Iowa, our accomplishment is to do very little," said House Speaker Harold Van Maanen, R-Oskaloosa.

Democrats, predictably, disagreed.

"I think free fall is a more accurate description," said House Democratic Leader Bob Arnould, D-Davenport. "Clearly, we will be working more closely with Branstad before the next session.

"Together, over the next seven or eight months, we'll be able to put together an agenda that has less rough spots," Siegrist said. "We've all learned our jobs."

Van Maanen said with the Senate controlled by Democrats, Branstad will have to understand there are limits to what can be accomplished.

"I think he realizes that since we do have a split legislative body, it's going to be difficult to get everything he wants," Van Maanen said.

"I wouldn't view it as gridlock, per se," Siegrist said. "Is there a degree of gridlock? Yes."

Siegrist rejected suggestions that Branstad has lost clout in the Legislature.

"The governor obviously still exhibits a lot of clout," Siegrist said. "It's a two-year session. Some of these things will be revived next year."

Their comments came as the House battled through its third day of debate over a $700 million education funding measure. Van Maanen blamed obstructionist Democrats.

"We set the agenda. The Democrats set the clock," he said.

"To some people of Iowa, our accomplishment is to do very little."

Harold Van Maanen, House speaker

Branstad's plan to curb special education costs was dropped, a bill allowing drug testing of workers is stalled and House Republicans have spent most of the week cutting the governor's education budget.

The governor's proposal to reinstate the death sentence has been rejected and one to require parental notification before abortions also failed.

"There is a degree of gridlock," Siegrist said. "But the bottom line is we're not adding to the deficit like they are in Washington when they are in gridlock."

appear to be rudderless at best."

Siegrist said Republicans have had trouble because they are not used to being the majority party. The November elections ended a decade of Democratic dominance.

Though legislative leaders held a retreat in December, they underestimated how hard it would be to reach compromises to keep all 51 GOP House members happy.

"The learning curve has been it's easier to get broad consensus with a group of 10 people than to sell it to the other 41," Siegrist said.

Siegrist said Republican leaders

CENSUS BUREAU RELEASES REPORT

Average Iowa family income drops in new rankings

Mary Neubauer
Associated Press

DES MOINES — Iowa's median family income did not keep up with inflation from 1979 to 1989, according to figures released Thursday by the U.S. Census Bureau.

Beth Henning, who works in the state library as Iowa's liaison to the Census Bureau, said that if Iowa's median family income would have kept up with the state's 1.676 percent inflation rate during the period, the median state income in the 1990 figures would have been $33,607.

Thursday's information shows that Iowa's 1990 median family income of $31,659 ranked 34th among the 50 states and the District of Columbia. That income is up from Iowa's 1980 average of $22,482. However, the state ranking tumbled from 20th in 1980.

A median income is the middle income for the state. Half of Iowa's incomes are above the median and half are below it. The median is used so that extremely high and low incomes do not create an inaccurate average.

Willis Goudy, Iowa State University sociologist, said workers leaving the state and an increase in Iowa's population over 65 years old caused the state's ranking to drop.

"Those were the primary factors: age and out-migration. Another factor is that we do have a large rural population. And as you look at the county figures, you notice urban counties have higher incomes," he said.

Family incomes in Iowa City are the highest among metropolitan areas in the state, with an average of $39,606. That ranks the city 67th in the nation in metropolitan income.

Johnson County has the highest family income among counties in the state, with an average of $39,606. That ranks 218th among U.S. counties.

Linn County ranks second in family income among Iowa counties with an average of $38,142. It is followed by Polk ($37,669), Warren ($36,646) and Scott ($36,160) in fifth.

Decatur County ranks 95th in the state, with an average family income of $22,872. Taylor ($22,801) ranks 96th, followed by Appanoose ($22,683), Van Buren ($22,574) and Wayne with $22,175.

Officials to draft bill for emergency phones

A group that formed after Grinnell student Tammy Zywicki's murder suggested adding the phones.

Mike Glover
Associated Press

DES MOINES — A House committee Thursday asked officials to draft legislation for emergency phone service along interstate highways.

The move came after testimony from a group which was formed after the slaying of Grinnell College student Tammy Zywicki, who was abducted and killed after her car broke down along Interstate 80 in Illinois.

The phones, which would be installed at each mile marker along the 782 miles of interstate highway in Iowa, could be financed by a $1 surcharge on vehicle registration fees, leaders of the group said.

"It's much safer than sitting out on a highway for two or three hours waiting for a good Samaritan," said Kathleen Ely, a Grinnell College senior from West Des Moines.

After Zywicki's death, other Grinnell students formed a group called Fearless to promote highway safety.

Installing the call boxes along interstate highways would be a relatively cheap way to assure travelers they could quickly seek help if their car breaks down along the highway, said Portia Sabin, a Grinnell student from New York City.

The testimony came before the House Transportation Committee. Legislators said they would ask state transportation officials to prepare draft legislation.

The Legislature is in its final few weeks, and the issue couldn't be considered before next year.

There was considerable sympathy.

"I travel on the interstates a lot, obviously, in this job," said Rep. Art Ollie, D-Clinton. "I do have a cellular telephone, but that's an extremely expensive way to deal with it."

The issue is not without controversy.

Many police officials advise motorists not to get out of their car after a breakdown and installing call boxes would encourage motorists to do just that.

Betsy Dittmore, a lobbyist for the Department of Public Safety, said her agency has no official position but wants more study on the issue.

"We have concerns about people walking along the highway to call boxes," she said.

Sabin said the key is installing call boxes at regular intervals, to avoid a long walk.

"We feel the five minutes you spend walking from your car would be far safer," Sabin said.

The $1 surcharge on vehicle registrations would raise roughly $3.1 million, and Ely said that's a small price to pay for safer highways.

"It is the equivalent of one or two hours parking in downtown Des Moines," she said. "It is less than a gallon of gas."

While lawmakers agreed to seek draft legislation, they did not endorse the idea and said more study is needed.

"I know there are a lot of questions," Ollie said.

Program bridges gap for minority students

Faculty members pair up with students making career choices.

Terry Collins
The Daily Iowan

Opportunities for minority students to meet with UI faculty members to help make career choices will be the goal this weekend at the 17th annual "Bridging the Gap" conference.

The program's name comes from "bridging" the so-called information gap that many students have about the rigors of college, such as admission and financial aid.

"The purpose of the conference is to increase the number of minority students on campus by informing them about the various programs available," said Floyd Akins, associate director of Opportunity at Iowa.

This year's conference participation has shot up to nearly 300 students, almost tripling the attendance from 1992, and will bring in people from East St. Louis, Ill., to North Carolina.

"We will have a lot of students coming saying that they want to be a doctor or a lawyer, but do not get the proper encouragement. This program will give them that," Akins said.

The program, created by the UI College of Law specifically for students interested in the field, expanded to include other colleges — graduate, liberal arts, dentistry, education, business and medicine.

"As we keep growing, hopefully more colleges will participate," said Akins.

The conference will serve high-school students aspiring to go to college and current undergraduates with thoughts of getting a post-graduate degree in their respective fields.

High-school students will be broken into small groups during their afternoon session for a small classroom-type discussion where they will be paired with a UI instructor and two current UI students. They later will attend a panelist discussion about making the transition from high school to college.

"We have some uncommitted high-school seniors attending, so we want to show them that Iowa may be the place for them," Akins said.

Undergraduates will have workshops on how to prepare for examinations like the GRE, as well as a discussion called "A Glimpse from the Graduate School Portal: What's Involved?"

There will also be workshops on how students can get a fellowship or an assistantship.

Valesta Wiggins, a UI MBA student who will serve as a panelist, said that she will tell students to really focus on their career paths.

"I also will share some of my personal experiences as well as how to sharpen your professional skills and how to gain work experience," she said.

Pre-law students can expect workshops featuring a minority attorney panel to the discussion of the various organizations and journals within the UI College of Law.

Kina Nichols, a UI graduate student who will be attending the law component of the conference, hopes to gather an assortment of information.

"I want to receive more information on the joint-degree program of law and sociology in addition to the other programs the University of Iowa has to offer," she said.

Environmental problems will be addressed at Earth-Summit conference in Cedar Falls

Timothy Connors
The Daily Iowan

Community members, scholars and politicians from around the state will be gathering in Cedar Falls Saturday to bring home environmental issues raised last year at the Earth Summit in Rio de Janeiro, Brazil.

The conference, "Beyond Rio: Earth Charter Iowa," is sponsored by the Iowa City-based group United Nations Association. UNA has sponsored several community forums around Iowa. A large part of Saturday's conference will deal with these local issues raised. The day's events, including speeches, public comment and panel discussions, will take place on the University of Northern Iowa campus.

UI professors will handle the conference's opening and closing remarks. Civil and environmental engineering Professor Jerald Schnoor will open the discussions and law Professor Burns Weston will conclude the events.

Joan Martin-Brown, a U. N. representative who has been active in numerous U.N. environmental protection projects, will be the keynote speaker.

Nicole Barnes, a UI junior in global studies, has helped organize the events as a UNA intern.

"The key to any statewide action is to coordinate each region's needs," she said.

With several members of the state Legislature planning to attend,

Barnes said she hopes real action will follow Saturday's discussions.

"It will hopefully make people aware of what problems there are in the state," she said. "It's important to acknowledge these problems now, before they become insurmountable in the future."

Weston pointed out that lawyers are essential in achieving environmental improvement. Without effective laws, he said, environmental regulations are pointless.

In the big picture, he argued, effective laws are needed internationally to improve Iowa's environment.

"You're really talking about governing the global environment," he said.

PRESIDENT HOPES FOR COMPROMISE

Clinton to shave billions from jobs bill

Terence Hunt
Associated Press

WASHINGTON—President Clinton began pruning billions of dollars from his $16.3 billion jobs bill Thursday to make it more acceptable to filibustering Senate Republicans, whom he urged to help shape the package.

"I am willing to compromise so long as we keep the focus on jobs, keep the focus on growth, and keep the focus on meeting unmet national needs," Clinton said at a Rose Garden ceremony.

But as Clinton reached out to the GOP, there were new threats of Democratic defections that clouded his chances. Sens. Russell Feingold and Herbert Kohl, both from Wisconsin, raised their own objections to the program.

Two other Democrats, Sens. Richard Shelby of Alabama and Robert Kerrey of Nebraska, also have declared their opposition.

"Our opponents have been asking for a smaller package," Clinton said of the Senate Republicans. "And today I ask them to join me in determining exactly what kind and what size package Congress can approve that actually meets the needs of the American people."

Hoping to avoid his first major defeat in Congress, Clinton asked Senate Majority Leader George Mitchell of Maine and Senate Appropriations Chairman Robert Byrd, D-W.Va., to open talks with Senate Republican Leader Bob Dole.

"Let's see if they can talk it out," Clinton said.

Dole and Clinton talked twice by telephone on Wednesday. The senator said he told the president the two sides had "a fundamental difference" over how the measure would be paid for. Clinton wants to borrow the money, thus boosting the budget deficit, but Republicans want to pay for it by cutting other programs.

The Senate will vote on Tuesday on whether to cut off the Republican filibuster. Three earlier attempts failed when the Senate's 43 Republicans held their ranks. Sixty votes are needed in the 100-member Senate.

Clinton's program includes money for a wide range of projects, from summer jobs and childhood immunization to unemployment compensation, small business loan guarantees, community development block grants and student loans.

Associated Press

A women's choir keeps vigil outside the house of slain South African Communist Party leader Chris Rani Thursday. Government officials have vowed to crack down on the rioting that has followed Hani's death. At least seven people are dead and hundreds wounded, many by police gunfire.

S. Africa to deploy extra troops

The government said it would not tolerate further outbreaks.

Barry Renfrew
Associated Press

PRETORIA, South Africa — The government threatened a security crackdown and urged swifter progress toward ending apartheid Thursday after nationwide violence during memorials for slain black leader Chris Hani.

Senior government ministers said multiparty talks on sharing power with the black majority must proceed as quickly as possible.

But they said further unrest would not be tolerated.

"The current wave of violence... should immediately come to a stop," said Constitutional Affairs Minister Roelf Meyer. "Violence can make no contribution to the achievement of solutions."

Government officials said extra troops would be deployed and police would be given expanded powers of detention in areas hit by violent protests Wednesday. At least seven people died and hundreds were wounded, many by police gunfire.

Further violence is feared during weekend protests and at Hani's funeral in Johannesburg on Monday.

The African National Congress condemned the looting and violence, blaming it on "unruly elements."

"No region had actually anticipated the massive turnout and in many instances our preparations were inadequate," said ANC spokesman Pallo Jordan.

Black and white leaders are struggling to prevent anger over Hani's killing from derailing the talks to end apartheid.

The talks have been suspended for a week while the ANC copes with the killing of Hani, one of its top leaders and head of the Communist Party. But the government and the ANC have said they will press ahead with the power-sharing negotiations.

Meyer urged all political parties to tackle the talks with renewed zeal.

"It is the government's serious intention that a successful outcome to the negotiations should be made as soon as possible," he said.

A white right-wing extremist has been charged with killing Hani last Saturday in the driveway of his suburban home.

The violence hit five cities, with some protesters attacking and looting businesses and shops. But many protests were peaceful and the violence was relatively modest in a country where dozens of people die weekly in political and criminal violence.

At least 12 new deaths were reported Thursday in eastern Natal province, including seven people shot to death late Wednesday in the black township of Mphomeni. Police said they could not link any of the killings to the Hani assassination.

The government attempted to defend police who opened fire on protesters at a police station Wednesday in the black township of Soweto, killing four people and injuring some 260 others.

Police said the station was surrounded and officers came under fire from the crowd. But witnesses said the crowd was peaceful and had begun to disperse.

LA TRIAL

The American Dream on trial

All eyes are focused on Los Angeles, enduring the impatience until the jury of the Rodney King civil rights trial issues its verdict. It is perhaps the most intense watch modern society has undertaken. The LA Police Department is going through intensive riot training, the National Guard has taken up posts on the corner of everyday streets and Orange County residents are bracing for war.

While LA prepares for what most expect to be inevitable urban warfare, the rest of the country awaits a decision from 12 individuals. An appropriation of at least $1 million in federal funds was made to pay for the over 6,500 officers that have been policing some of the more volatile areas since jury deliberations began on Saturday. In addition, 5,000 guardsmen and 20,000 out-of-town police officers are on call from Southern California to report if violence erupts.

City officials have been forced to offer a free "rumor control hotline" to help squelch some of the rampant gossip around town. Many believe that if the verdict falls in favor of the police, gangs will be shot from the hip and go after the real money — not in their bombed-out neighborhoods, but in the posh suburbs. In fact, a young gang member admitted to targeting the affluent areas of Brentwood, Bel-Air and Beverly Hills on a radio call-in show.

What many fail to realize is that what Los Angeles is experiencing is not an anomaly. Washington, D.C., the South Side of Chicago, Miami ... are all facing the same societal illnesses as Los Angeles; drugs, guns, violence, poverty, hopelessness, the depletion of social services and the death of the American Dream. A German tourist was shot point blank in front of her children when she wandered off the interstate in Miami. Homicides in Chicago reached a record high in 1992. In Washington, D.C., two people are dead and four wounded after 10 drive-by shootings in seven weeks. These are not the actions of a healthy society.

This second Rodney King trial is simply the catalyst for many. After three years of recession, increasing unemployment to 10.4 percent countywide and as high as 50 percent in the inner city, Los Angeles is going through what many urban areas have been experiencing for many years. And after the Simi Valley verdict, we witnessed what years of neglect can do to a society's values.

If Los Angeles detonates again it will most likely set off a fire storm of urban unrest across the country. City governments have virtually ignored half of their constituents, and some watchdogs argue that local government in large cities hasn't worked for 30 years, forsaking social services and programs for higher profile issues. They point to the Cabrini Green housing project on Chicago's west side as an example. What was supposed to be the pinnacle of social housing is now a playground for drug pushers and gangs, all less than two miles from the city's illustrious Gold Coast. Parents in the project are fearful of sending their children to school because of seemingly random shootings. Incredibly, city officials have taken to body searches and metal detectors at the project's entrances to try to stem the violence. Unfortunately though, targeting civil liberties is not the way to cure the larger problem.

What is happening in Los Angeles is in no way particular to that city. America is losing its footing under an incredible weight that threatens to crush the American Dream before a generation can even fall asleep peacefully.

Majority favor restrictions

To the Editor:

In early March, several members of the Hawkeye Hunting and Rifle Association picketed the Riverside Theatre to "protest" its staged readings of "Gunplay" — this despite the fact that none of them had seen or read the play. In this hallowed tradition of shooting first and asking questions later, HHRA's Todd Perdelwitz grinds out the standard NRA boiler plate in his April 7 guest opinion. In response, I would just like to make three points:

First, Perdelwitz's ultimate argument (i.e. "restrictive firearms laws succeed only in easing the life of a criminal by eliminating the possibility for victims to fight back") is predicated upon the fallacious notion that gun control necessarily means gun prohibition. Furthermore, it overlooks this central fact of the so-called "criminal" or "illegal" gun market: namely, that virtually every weapon in the hands of a criminal, minor or mentally unstable individual originated in the legal manufacturing and distribution sectors. Therefore, unlike with narcotics, one cannot artificially separate the "legal" and "illegal" gun markets, and those who exercise their Second Amendment rights in the former must assume responsibility for the latter — i.e. effective control of distribution patterns.

As for the Second Amendment, you can forget about the NRA's, Handgun Control's, Perdelwitz's, mine or any other reading of the Constitution: the only interpretation that ultimately matters is that of the Supreme Court of the United States, which has never ruled any regulation of firearms — state or federal, bans, waiting periods, whatever — unconstitutional. The NRA knows this, and therefore spends little time and money challenging laws in courtrooms, but instead dispenses great sums greasing the palms of elected officials to make sure those laws do not get enacted in the first place, as well as spreading propaganda about a mythical, unqualified "right to bear arms." Now Perdelwitz knows as well.

Finally, a few "reliable surveys" of "public opinion" on gun issues for Perdelwitz's edification: 81 percent of Americans favor the registration of all hand guns (Gallup Poll, 1990); 95 percent favor a national seven-day waiting period for handgun purchases (Gallup Poll, 1990); 72 percent favor banning semiautomatic assault weapons (Gallup Poll, 1989) — heck, a 1989 Harris Poll showed that even 48 percent of NRA members favored assault weapons bans. Still, the Gallup Poll and 50 cents will get you a ride on the Iowa City Transit System. The bottom line is that we will never see effective gun controls in this country until those poll respondents put their money where their mouths are, and support the work of organizations fighting the NRA's self-serving obfuscations and obstructionism.

Even the Beatles hated Tax Man

I've been feeling horribly Republican lately. It's not that I'm going to rush out and buy CNN's Operation Desert Storm video or anything. But sometimes I'm afraid I'll go on a GOP bender and wake up some morning with vodka gimlet on my shirt, a "Red Dawn" movie poster on my wall and Lee Greenwood on continuous playback.

I get a bad case of Elephantitis every year about this time. Heck, Bob Dole almost made sense to me the other day.

And it's all because it's tax time. Yesterday I jammed my tax forms into an overstuffed mailbox. And it hurt.

Struggling young journalist that I am, my income is less than the cost of a Hyundai. And, because I handled my withholdings with the acumen generally associated with sewer drippings, I owe several hundred dollars to the U.S. government. The fact that an unselfish, but poverty-stricken individual such as myself should pay taxes, any taxes at all, is a sickness that defies description.

For the last six months I have been stowing away little bits of money, getting the Toasted Oaties instead of the genuine Cheerios, watching the Partridge Family instead of going out to a movie, picking gum off the bottoms of chairs instead of buying a pack. You know, the little things. I was saving for something special. All through this gray winter, I found myself dreaming of a new bike. The bike I have now is old enough to be on a Wendy's chain's wallpaper. I saw myself soaring through the summer on a speedy two-wheeled chariot, the sun warming my bones and the wind whipping through what's left of my hair.

I even did some technical writing. In achievement test parlance, column writing is to the Waldorf Historia as technical writing is to Billy's Roadside Romp 'n' Snooze. My big project was an alumni newsletter. I wrote 1 inch biographies for several hundred ancient graduates of a rather religious all-women, all-Swedish college in Chicago.

Where are they now? Most of them did a few years of Third World missionary work, shepherding natives away from their indigenous religions! Now they are reaping the Lord's bounty down in Florida from what my reporter's instinct tells me are land speculation deals of dubious legality.

It was only with incredible self-restraint that I did not write a single sentence like: "In a coincidence that is fast growing to mystical proportions, Olga Cowindeharnson also has the loveliest grandchildren in the world."

Still dizzy from marginally profitable artistic prostitution, I finally looked at my W-2s on a gross day in February. I noticed a big white space in the box that says "Federal Withholdings." "Hey," I said in a sagely manner, "No wonder my checks seemed bigger this year!" I saw that new bike, its peddles spinning ghostlike, careening over a cliff of the Internal Revenue Service's making.

I didn't realize how much trouble I was in until I filled out the form. I hate the tax forms. They make you work hard so that you can give away money, which seems unfair. They always seem to be like this:

5. Add total taxable fiduciary income, including arable land dividends, Schedule F capital gains and riboflavin earnings (if total is more than 50 cents, you cannot use 1040 GR, but must use 1040 BL, Book Length).

6. But before you do that, subtract unfiduciary earnings from the 1991 tax return, the one you threw out.

So anyway, my bike money and the MasterCard payments are going straight to the IRS. I find myself thinking things like "Why should I give my hard earned money to a bunch of labzalls who don't want to work for a living?" Next thing you know I'll be screaming "Hey, Meathead, get outta my chair."

It makes me sad that I'm feeling this way, a moderate liberal such as myself. And I'm feeling this way now, when we have a president who cannot only chew gum and tour factories at the same time, but may actually address a few issues (issues that are going to cost a fortune). So instead of a PR strategy of firing White House staffers, I think he may have to move it up to ritual public sacrifices of IRS employees. And maybe also implementing Mitch's easier, more efficient tax form:

1. Enter total wages, salaries and tips; this should be in box 10 of your W-2 form(s).
2. Enter total wages, salaries and tips you were conveniently going to forget about.
3. Add lines 1 and 2.
4. Enter what you consider to be a fair and equitable percentage for use by the federal government.
5. Multiply line 4 by 3. This is the amount you owe.

JIM ROGERS

The poverty of the liberal moral vocabulary and social projects.

By and large, then, American conservatism speaks only with the pseudo-conservative voice of "classical" liberalism. In "After Virtue," Vanderbilt philosopher Alasdair MacIntyre similarly concludes that "modern conservatives are for the most part engaged in conserving older rather than later versions of liberal individualism. Their own core doctrine is as liberal and as individualist as that of self-avowed liberals."

This ideological commitment to individual autonomy impoverishes the lives of those who live upon social, political and economic cultures that attempt to live out the myth of autonomy — the myth that animates the modern, Enlightenment project.

With the rise of ideological individualism from its Enlightenment roots, commentators consistently warned of its steep social cost. In the 1830s, Alexis de Tocqueville argued in "Democracy in America": "I have shown how it is that, in ages of equality, every man seeks opinions within himself. I am now to show how it is that, in the same ages, all his feelings are turned toward himself alone."

Tocqueville writes that this modern individualism makes "every man forget his ancestors, but it hides his descendants and separates his contemporaries from him; it throws him back forever upon himself alone, and threatens in the end to confine him entirely within the solitude of his own heart."

This contrasts sharply with the nonmodern understanding that the good is a shared good, that is, it is expressed in community, as in Aristotelian friendship or Christian fellowship.

To be sure, if MacIntyre argued no more than this, then his book would scarcely deserve the wide notice it attracted. But MacIntyre drives the anti-liberal argument much further than this.

Recall that Tocqueville lamented not that individuals have their own opinions and make up their own minds — character traits that the major nonmodern traditions encourage. Rather he lamented the consequences of a man seeking his opinions "within himself." Tocqueville warned against the anomie resulting from individual autonomy: autonomy (self-law) means meaninglessness.

MacIntyre traces out the "Consequences of the failure of the Enlightenment project," from nihilism, to alienation and isolation, to the bureaucratization of life. Most importantly, however, MacIntyre advances the controversial thesis that that particular sort of autonomy defines the modern era, and that that autonomy results in the impossibility of moral judgement in the modern age. That is, we can no longer really claim that something is just or unjust, or good or bad.

We have lost the ability to engage in distinctly public argument. The individualist liberal project reduced argument over morality to argument over personal preferences. For all the heat generated by participants, moral argument no longer casts any light.

MacIntyre argues that it wasn't always so, and that it need not be so. Modernity has brought us to a dead end.

As Tocqueville pointed out, we lose the possibility of shared lives together and become confined to setting up our bellies as sovereign not by choice, but because of the ideological obliteration of our ability to understand and act in an authentic social realm.

For MacIntyre, that we still employ a moral vocabulary only mystifies the fact that we cannot employ it honestly or consistently: "Up to the present in everyday discourse the habit of speaking of moral judgments as true or false persists; but the question of what it is in virtue of which a particular moral judgment is true or false has come to lack any clear answer. That this should be so is perfectly intelligible if the historical hypothesis which I have sketched is true: that moral judgments are linguistic survivals from the practices of classical theism which have lost the context provided by these practices."

Attempts to replace this with "some alternative rational secular account of nature and the status of morality" have failed; "a failure perceived most clearly by Nietzsche." Nietzsche is the one honest philosopher who recognized the deep problem inherent in modern individualism and its attempts to generate a rational moral system. But Nietzsche, too, only "represents individualism's final attempt to escape from its own consequences."

Nietzsche exploded the possibility of a distinctly rational modern and liberal moral system. But Nietzsche does not address non-modern moral systems (although he thought that he did). And so, for MacIntyre, "the Nietzschean stance turns out not to be a mode of escape from or an alternative to the conceptual scheme of liberal individualist modernity, but rather one more representative moment in its internal unfolding."

Thus liberalism shares the will to power inherent in other 20th century modern ideologies. The Nietzschean "superman" is not set against liberal culture, but is a product of that very culture.

"Modernity" and "Enlightenment" are labels employed to support a certain ideology; as ideology that is, at its root, incoherent and destructive. The supremacy of the political is one of the consequences of the Enlightenment project. If we reject the modern political order, as MacIntyre argues we must, then we must reject also the fundamental commitment to individual autonomy that birthed the creature. In fact, it is rejected already, for it is an inhuman ideology within which humans cannot flourish, and thus the ideology cannot reproduce itself socially.

What the present course of action is, then, for a reactionary (properly defined as one who rejects the individual autonomy of Enlightenment liberal culture) is what I will discuss next week.

MacIntyre, however, gives a hint in the conclusion to his book: "What matters at this stage is the construction of local forms of community within which civility and the intellectual and moral life can be sustained through the new dark ages which are already upon us ... This time however the barbarians are not waiting beyond the frontiers; they have already been governing us for quite some time. And it is our lack of consciousness of this that constitutes part of our predicament. We are waiting not for a Godot, but for another — doubtless very different — St. Benedict."

TRIAL CONTINUES

Man Sick juror rejoins deliberations; judge criticizes press

Linda Deutsch
Associated Press

LOS ANGELES — A juror whose illness had halted deliberations in the federal Rodney King beating trial rejoined the panel Thursday for a sixth day of talks. The jury reached no verdict by day's end.

The federal jury now has deliberated longer than a state jury did last year before acquitting four police officers of most assault charges in King's beating. Since Saturday, the federal panel has deliberated for 33 hours, an hour more than the state jury spent.

Wednesday's deliberations were cut short when a juror fell ill and went to a doctor. No information about the illness was disclosed, and the jurors haven't been identified.

Sgt. Stacey Koon, Officers Lawrence Powell and Theodore Briseno and ex-Officer Timothy Wind, all white, are charged in the federal trial with depriving black motorist King of his civil rights during the March 3, 1991, beating after a traffic stop.

After the state verdict was announced April 29, three days of rioting left 54 people dead and caused $1 billion in damages.

To prevent another riot, community leaders have taken to the streets urging peace when the verdicts are read. Hundreds of additional police officers patrol the city and the National Guard is standing by.

Meanwhile, for the third time in two weeks, U.S. District Judge John Davies criticized reporters covering the trial and threatened for the first time to shut down the trial press room.

He contended a TV reporter violated a court order by broadcasting a closed-circuit press-room speaker feed of proceedings in the courtroom Wednesday. Unlike many state courts, federal courts don't allow cameras or recording equipment in trials.

Davies initially ordered media lawyers to show why the press room shouldn't be closed. But after KCBS-TV reporter Bob Jimenez and a lawyer met with the judge, Davies sent word that he had rescinded that order and would reinstate Jimenez' trial credentials, which he had lifted briefly.

Last week, the judge criticized reporters for saying he was concerned about a possible hung jury.

in the cellblock, also said the inmates had no intention of surrendering. "We're not going to give up... If we die."

Earlier Thursday, six military trucks and armed authorities moved closer to the cellblock. Five of the trucks were carrying armed troops; contents of the sixth truck, which was covered, could not be seen. Twenty-nine military personnel vehicles and 20 armed officers also entered the compound.

Activity around the prison increased after corrections officials announced that the body of a prison guard held hostage had been found. Seven inmates have died since the siege began, six of them beaten to death on the first day of rioting. The cause of death of the seventh hasn't been released.

The body of Robert R. Vallandigham, a 40-year-old corrections officer, was found in the prison yard outside the barricaded cellblock, Korneguy said. He became the first prison employee to die in the uprising.

An anchorman for WBNS-TV in Columbus, Bob Orr, was allowed inside the prison for about an hour and said he believed the standoff could end quickly.

tracked two unidentified aircraft in the prohibited airspace but could not intercept them. U.S. Air Force Maj. Steve Headley, a NATO spokesman, declined to say where or when the aircraft were spotted.

In a letter to the United Nations, Ambassador Dragomir Djokic of Yugoslavia said the influx of 655,000 war refugees, mainly Serbs, has strained his country's economy, already bruised by stiff U.N. sanctions imposed in May.

President Clinton's special envoy on Bosnia, Reginald Bartholomew, conferred with British officials but failed to resolve differences over arming Bosnia's embattled Muslims. America wants an arms embargo lifted for the Muslims if economic sanctions fail to shift the Serbs.

Britain and other European Community nations oppose ending the embargo on grounds it would worsen the fighting, alienate the Serbs' traditional ally, Russia, and end U.N. humanitarian relief operations.

Serbs, Muslims and Croats have been warring for more than a year over Bosnia's secession from Serb-dominated Yugoslavia. More than 134,000 people have been declared dead or missing, and 2 million have been displaced.

The U.N. Security Council has given the Serbs until April 26 to sign a peace plan already accepted by Muslims and Croats. The Serbs reject the deal because it denies them land links to Serbia and Serb-held areas of Croatia.

Trade, transport and communications sanctions were imposed on Yugoslavia in May for its role in instigating the bloodshed.

This dissent brought up the issue of having unity among departments. For many students, unity was important.

"My guess is that most of the people here are from the so-called liberal arts," said Spanish-Portuguese student Steven Mathews. "One of our major efforts should be to connect with people across those lines."

Further concerns were voiced for students not able to attend the meeting, students whose needs weren't necessarily being represented. International students and students with day-care needs were especially noted.

Toward the end of the meeting, committees were set up to organize the cause, including publicity, goals, correspondence, research, finance, and internal communication committees.

The next meeting was set up for April 26.

Vohs said there has been no discussion as to who Branstad will appoint now. Because the Senate session ended Thursday, the new appointee will serve on the board until next January without being confirmed by the Senate.

Although he's finished as a regent, Vohs didn't count out the possibility of Pomerantz serving on another board or commission.

"I would hope there's always a spot for people like Marvin Pomerantz," he said.

if we had been together for a year, I may be happy that he was out," Gardner said.

Gov. Terry Branstad's appointment of Pomerantz for a second term on the board infuriated many in the ISU community. Students, faculty and alumni were upset with Pomerantz's support to sell the ISU-owned WOI television station.

The WOI rallying point created intense lobbying against Pomerantz from all over the state.

While he didn't agree with the WOI sale, UISA Vice President Micah Hobart said he hoped Pomerantz would be confirmed.

"I was disappointed that he wasn't confirmed," Hobart said. "I thought he had done a decent job; we still have an excellent education at an affordable price. In that aspect he's done a good job."

UI Vice President for University Relations Ann Rhodes said the outcome caught her off-guard, and the administration is waiting with everyone else to see what will happen now.

"I'm surprised. I really thought he would be confirmed," Rhodes said. "Now we're just watching closely to see what will happen. No one has really thought that far ahead."

Car bomb kills at least 11

BOGOTA, Colombia (AP) — A car bomb exploded Thursday at a crowded shopping mall, killing 11 people, injuring more than 100 and heavily damaging about 30 businesses.

President César Gaviria, citing intelligence reports, blamed fugitive druglord Pablo Escobar for the bombing of the Centro 93 shopping center, five miles north of downtown Bogotá.

He called an emergency National Security Council meeting Thursday night to discuss the bombing.

There was no claim of responsibility. Police have blamed Escobar's Medellín cocaine cartel for recently setting off 10 bombs in Bogotá and other Colombian cities, killing 50 people and wounding more than 600.

Four people were killed instantly in Thursday's blast and seven died in hospitals.

Euro Disneyland still in the red, but getting popular

PARIS, France (AP) — After cutting prices and bridging culture gaps, Euro Disneyland finally has the locals wearing Goofy hats as they munch their fast food. But the thrill of profitability has yet to arrive in the Magic Kingdom.

The theme park marks its first anniversary Monday and business is booming — thanks to mild springtime weather plus winter discounts. First-year admissions surpassed 10 million and the 11-million mark could be passed within weeks.

The French press — which once dubbed the park a "cultural Chernobyl" — seems to have calmed down, as have rifts with labor unions over dress codes that prohibit jewelry and facial hair for park employees.

But Euro Disney SCA, the park's operator, lost $36 million in its first fiscal year ending Sept. 30, and further development is on hold. Analysts predict a loss of up to $185 million this fiscal year.

The No. 1 complaint of the French is that the park is simply too expensive. It costs at least $200 a day for a family of four, and easily can cost more.

Norwegians face storm over resumption of whaling

MOSKENES ISLAND, Norway (AP) — Mariette Korsrud was reading to her son and was stunned to find that the story described whalers, like her husband, as "worse than murderers. People repeatedly call my husband a barbarian, my children barbarians," she said.

Those are signs of the storm about to break over Norway, which has enraged many conservationists with its decision to resume commercial whaling in May despite an international ban imposed in 1986. Up to 800 minke whales could be killed by the end of summer.

Radical environmentalists threaten more sabotage. Some Norwegians fear the jobs saved in northern fishing towns will not be worth the protests, the tourism cancellations and a possible boycott of the 1994 Winter Olympics in Lillehammer.

Opponents argue that harpooning is cruel, whales should not be killed under any circumstances and Norway's defiance of the ban could cause other countries to resume whaling.

The government insists nothing would stop either the start of the annual research hunt on April 15 or commercial whaling in May.

Trade frictions sour European relations

COPENHAGEN, Denmark (AP) — Western Europe's courtship of eastern Europe's new democracies is souring. Trade spats are developing across the old Iron Curtain, putting a wedding date on hold.

Since 1989, the European Community has pumped some $5.5 billion in technical and food aid into eastern Europe, including the former Soviet Union.

But at a two-day, 30-nation economic conference that ended Wednesday in Copenhagen, eastern European delegates insisted they need trade more than aid.

The meeting produced a declaration on the need for open markets and investments — but no firm pledges to that effect.

Foreign Minister Geza Jeszenszky of Hungary said his countrymen and people throughout the former Communist countries feel the West is ignoring them.

Suicides surge in post-Communist Poland

WARSAW, Poland (AP) — Close to the Ukrainian border, a teacher hangs her three young children and then kills herself. After the birth of her last child a year earlier, she had become obsessed by the fear that she would not be able to support them.

The number of suicides has reached an all-time high in Poland, 14.3 per 100,000 people.

Psychiatrists attribute this to disillusionment and despair from unrealized, and largely unrealistic, expectations following the toppling of the Communist regime in 1989.

The suicide rate surged like this once before in the overwhelmingly Roman Catholic nation, during 1982 and 1983, the two years after the Communists declared martial law and crushed the Solidarity movement.

This time, the experts say, hopes are being dashed by reality: Poland's transformation to a democratic, capitalist country will be neither quick nor painless.

Instead, a troubling uncertainty has settled over the country, and for some, it has been too much to bear.

Yeltsin orders tougher control of nuclear plants

MOSCOW, Russia (AP) — President Boris Yeltsin has ordered stricter control over all nuclear facilities, including defense plants, following an explosion at a secret weapons complex, according to a decree published this week.

The decree is Yeltsin's first official response to the explosion a week ago of a tank of radioactive waste at the Siberian Chemical Complex near the city of Tomsk-7.

The international environmental group Greenpeace has accused Russia's nuclear establishment covering up the severity of the accident and has demanded an investigation by independent experts.

Yeltsin's decree appeared aimed at that kind of criticism by ordering the government to provide "timely, full and reliable" information to the public in all nuclear accidents.

It says all nuclear facilities are to be inspected by Dec. 1 and commands government agencies to exercise greater control of the facilities, although it does not specify what measures this would entail.

Bush says Clinton will fight aggression

KUWAIT CITY, Kuwait (AP) — Endorsing his successor on foreign policy, George Bush told Kuwaiti Parliament members today that he believes President Clinton will continue to defend countries against aggression.

"Certainly, I can tell you from the bottom of my heart that I am convinced that he will stand up for the principles of freedom," Bush said, drawing a standing ovation. "He will stand up against aggression wherever it occurs around the world."

Bush, in Kuwait at the invitation of the emirate, was greeted by the cheers of thousands of grateful citizens when he arrived Wednesday. He is here for leading the military coalition that evicted Iraqi troops more than two years ago.

In Parliament, Bush conceded that the U.S.-led Desert Storm operation to oust Iraq from Kuwait did not eradicate the "evil" of Baghdad's invasion.

He was referring to President Saddam Hussein's continued rule, which some critics have blamed on Bush's decision to halt the war even as Iraq's army was in full retreat.

G-7 hopes aid will boost Yeltsin

TOKYO, Japan (AP) — Seven of the world's richest nations gave Boris Yeltsin a solid vote of confidence Thursday by offering a $28.4 billion aid package to promote his chances in a leadership referendum and push Russia toward a free-market economy.

Although the Group of Seven did not formally tie the aid to Yeltsin's victory in the April 25 nationwide referendum on his policies, Secretary of State Warren Christopher pointedly said, "The world will be a considerably more dangerous place if President Yeltsin does not prevail."

Foreign Minister Andrei Kozyrev praised the aid plan and the fact that Moscow and its former enemies are meeting "each other midway."

The aid will come from development agencies such as the World Bank and International Monetary Fund.

SI honors Tar Heels

CHAPEL HILL, N.C. (AP) — Sports Illustrated's first commemorative issue of North Carolina's 1992-93 national championship season were presented to coach Dean Smith and his five seniors Thursday.

It was the third such venture for the magazine. SI also released successful commemorative issues this year after Alabama won the national football championship and the Dallas Cowboys won the Super Bowl.

"I'll take this only symbolically because it represents us all," Smith said after receiving a plaque with the issue centered from publisher Don Elliman. "We are very happy and certainly appreciate Sports Illustrated in making this team special. We know they are and now you put it into focus."

About 200,000 issues featuring Smith on the cover cutting down one of the nets after his team's 77-71 victory over Michigan hit newsstands across the Southeast on Thursday, Elliman said.

Buckeye women's coach nearing Ayers in pay

CLEVELAND (AP) — Ohio State women's basketball coach Nancy Darsch may soon have a contract that approximates that of men's coach Randy Ayers.

Darsch, who makes $55,524 a year, guided Ohio State to the NCAA title game before losing to Texas Tech, 84-82. Even though her contract does not mention a bonus based on performance, she will receive a $20,552 bonus, Ohio State Athletic Director Jim Jones said.

Both Jones and OSU President E. Gordon Gee speak favorably of raising her pay closer to Ayers' annual salary of $96,384.

No women's basketball coach in the Big Ten draws the same salary as the men's coach at her respective school, according to salary figures obtained from league members in 1991.

Based on figures obtained from Big Ten schools in 1991, Darsch's salary ranked second behind Iowa coach Vivian Stringer's $78,900 among the conference's women's basketball coaches.

BASEBALL

Strawberry, fan at odds

LOS ANGELES — Darryl Strawberry was furious because he believed a fan got in his way as he leaped into the right field seats to try and catch what turned out to be a home run by Gerald Perry.

The fan, Dr. Mark Perez, was escorted from his seat and moved to another location shortly after the incident in the seventh inning on Tuesday.

The three-run, pinch-hit homer gave the St. Louis Cardinals an 8-lead over the Los Angeles Dodgers in their home opener and the Cardinals went on to win 9-7.

The fans around Perez booed, then threw ice and cups.

However, the replay — shown several times by local TV stations — seemed to indicate the ball had passed Strawberry's glove when it landed in a mitt held by Perez.

"I'm disappointed Darryl reacted that way," Perez said.

"I've always thought he was a terrific player and looked up to him. He made a great effort, but he just missed. I don't understand why he did it to me."

SI honors Tar Heels

CHAPEL HILL, N.C. (AP) — Sports Illustrated's first commemorative issue of North Carolina's 1992-93 national championship season was presented to coach Dean Smith and his five seniors Thursday.

It was the third such venture for the magazine. SI also released successful commemorative issues this year after Alabama won the national football championship and the Dallas Cowboys won the Super Bowl.

"I'll take this only symbolically because it represents us all," Smith said after receiving a plaque with the issue centered from publisher Don Elliman. "We are very happy and certainly appreciate Sports Illustrated in making this year special. We know they are and now you put it into focus."

About 200,000 issues featuring Smith on the cover cutting down one of the nets after his team's 77-71 victory over Michigan hit news stands across the Southeast on Thursday, Elliman said.

Buckeye women's coach nearing Ayers in pay

CLEVELAND (AP) — Ohio State women's basketball coach Nancy Darsch may soon have a contract that approximates that of men's coach Randy Ayers.

Darsch, who makes $55,524 a year, guided Ohio State to the NCAA title game before losing to Texas Tech, 84-82. Even though her contract does not mention a bonus based on performance, she will receive a $20,552 bonus, Ohio State Athletic Director Jim Jones said.

Both Jones and OSU President E. Gordon Gee speak favorably of raising her pay closer to Ayers' annual salary of $96,384.

No women's basketball coach in the Big Ten draws the same salary as the men's coach at her respective school, according to salary figures obtained from league members in 1991.

Based on figures obtained from Big Ten schools in 1991, Darsch's salary ranked second behind Iowa coach Vivian Stringer's $78,900 among the conference's women's basketball coaches.

Strawberry, fan at odds

LOS ANGELES — Darryl Strawberry was furious because he believed a fan got in his way as he leaned into the right field seats to try and catch what turned out to be a home run by Gerald Perry.

The fan, Dr. Mark Perez, was escorted from his seat and moved to another location shortly after the incident in the seventh inning on Tuesday.

The three-run, pinch-hit homer gave the St. Louis Cardinals an 8-7 lead over the Los Angeles Dodgers in their home opener and the Cardinals went on to win 9-7.

The fans around Perez booed, then threw ice and cups.

However, the replay — shown several times by local TV stations — seemed to indicate the ball had passed Strawberry's glove when it landed in a mitt held by Perez.

"I'm disappointed Darryl reacted that way," Perez said. "I've always thought he was a terrific player and looked up to him. He made a great effort, but he just missed. I don't understand why he had to mad."

Batter up: Gophers next

Curtis Riggs

The Daily Iowan

The Iowa baseball team may have something to prove this weekend.

After beginning Big Ten play by taking three out of four games at Illinois and splitting with defending conference champion Ohio State in Columbus, the Hawkeyes have tumbled.

In its first home conference series last weekend, Iowa dropped three of four against Indiana, then struggled to beat Division III Upper Iowa Tuesday, 2-1.

It doesn't get any easier for the Hawkeyes this weekend as conference leader Minnesota visits Iowa Field for a pair of doubleheaders Saturday and Sunday. KRUI FM (89.7) will broadcast all of this weekend's contests, with the first game starting at 1 p.m. both days.

KXIC AM (800) will air the second game each day.

Iowa pitcher Tom Pasko sees playing aggressive baseball in this series as the key to not only beating the Gophers, but also as a way to return to the type of baseball the Hawkeyes were successful with a few weeks ago.

"We've got to want to come into Minnesota just wanting to tear them up to get to where we were before," said Pasko, who has a 2.81 earned run average through six games this season. "We've got to play well, play as a team and let everything work itself out."

Dropping three out of four to Indiana may be just the kick in the seat the Hawkeyes needed to get on with the rest of their season, according to outfielder Bo Porter, who hit a solo home run to seal the

Sparky collects 2,000th triumph

Associated Press

DETROIT — It was classic baseball. It was Sparky Anderson's kind of game.

Anderson notched his 2,000th victory Thursday. And he did it the way he loves best. Right to the end, he was pushing all the right buttons, moving players like pieces on a chessboard.

Finally, Chad Kreuter's pinch-hit double in the ninth inning drove in Skeeter Barnes and the Detroit Tigers beat the Oakland Athletics 3-2, putting Anderson in a class with the elite.

The only names ahead of his on the list of baseball's winningest managers are Leo Durocher, Walter Alston, Joe McCarthy, Bucky Harris, John McGraw and Connie Mack.

"When I started, I never believed I'd win 2,000 games," Anderson said. "The first one is the only one I really remember."

Anderson, who won his first game April 6, 1970 when Cincinnati beat Montreal, will soon pass Durocher, who is sixth on the list with 2,010 wins.

"We beat Montreal 5-2 at home in Crosley Field, and Jim Merritt pitched for us," Anderson recalled. "I didn't remember anything about 1,000 until (Tigers' publicist) Dan Ewald told me about it."

"You saw the best manager in baseball," Oakland's Tony LaRussa said. "He made the moves, switching people around and getting people where he wanted them. It was fitting that this was his 2,000th win. He was so heavily involved."

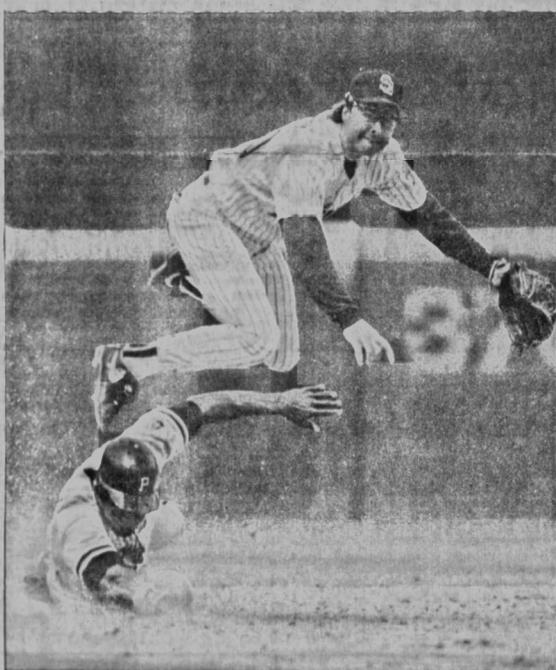

"It takes a little bite out of the loss to be here to see it, for a guy I admire so much."

A's reliever Rich Gossage faced Kirk Gibson in the sixth inning for the first time in Tiger Stadium since Gibson's dramatic homer in Game 5 of the 1984 World Series against San Diego. This time, Gossage struck Gibson out on three pitches.

DENVER — Considering the recent futility of their bullpen, the Colorado Rockies needed right-handed starter David Nied to not only pitch a strong game, but last until the late innings.

San Diego's Tim Teufel avoids Al Martin of the Pirates, but the Padres couldn't prevent their sixth straight loss to the Bucs, 5-4 in 13 innings.

Rockies history

He threw a six-hitter and Freddie Benavides broke out of a 1-for-18 slump with a two-run bloop single.

The Rockies (3-5), ending a three-game losing streak in the final game of their initial homestand, scored four runs in the first inning, highlighted by Benavides' hit, and Nied (2-1) made the early lead stand up, outduelling Dwight Gooden (1-2) in a rematch of the opening-day starters last week.

Nied, the first pick in the expansion draft, struck out six and walked none.

"David Nied's heart is THAT big," Colorado manager Don Baylor said, holding his hands at shoulder width. "I know he was a little bit tired, but I decided the only way I was going to take him out was if it was a tie game. It was his game to lose."

Pirates 5, Padres 4 (13)

SAN DIEGO — Carlos Garcia drove in three runs, including the go-ahead single with one out in the 13th inning, and the Pirates beat the Padres for the sixth straight time this season.

The Pirates swept the four game series and gave manager Jim Leyland his 600th career victory.

Dennis Moeller (1-0) pitched two perfect innings for the win and Stan Belinda pitched the 13th for his fourth save, despite giving up Fred McGriff's leadoff homer.

Padres reliever Gene Harris was one out from his second save in the ninth when his wild pitch with the bases loaded allowed Kevin Young to tie the game 3-3.

Buckeye setback is history

Kris Wiley

The Daily Iowan

When the Iowa softball team lost the last game of the 1992 season to Ohio State, 1-0 in 10 innings, the Hawkeyes also lost the Big Ten title. Coach Gayle Blevins says what's past is past.

"That season is history," Blevins said. "We're at a very different spot and this is a different year."

The No. 9-ranked Hawkeyes begin a 12-game road trip this weekend when they travel to Columbus, Ohio, for two doubleheaders with the Buckeyes. Games are scheduled for today at 2 p.m. and Saturday at noon.

Although Iowa will not return to the Hawkeye Softball Complex until April 30, Blevins said being on the road is just part of the game.

"Our season is too long to worry about those kinds of things," Blevins said. "We start every season on the road so our group at this point knows where they're at. We have a good routine set up and that's how they prepare."

Iowa leads the Big Ten with an 8-0 record and a 25-6 overall mark. The Hawkeyes have out-hit their conference opponents, 368 to 148, and both Alisha Nelson and Big Ten Pitcher of the Week Karen Jackson post 4-0 records on the mound. But Blevins doesn't feel the pressure of being at the top.

"You play to improve your game daily and not to get into the numbers game," Blevins said. "You deal with what's in front of you and our team understands the process."

Inexperience keeps Hawkeyes on edge

John Shipley

The Daily Iowan

Not sure what to expect from Iowa football next fall? You're not alone.

"It's going to be interesting," quarterback Paul Burmeister said. "We're wondering how it's going to work out just like everyone else."

The Hawkeyes, who struggled to a 5-7 record last season, lost 29 players to graduation. They return only two offensive starters, and that's if you count Burmeister, who started only three games.

It's not quite as bad on defense, but there are still some pretty big names missing from last year's squad; names like Carlos James, Doug Buch, Teddy Jo Faley, Bret Bielema, all of whom started at one time or another.

"This is the most inexperienced football team from a returning starter standpoint since I've been here," Coach Hayden Fry said. "That makes this year's spring football season more important than it has been in quite a while."

"We should have the most competitive spring since I've been here," Fry said, "with the possible exception of the first year, when we didn't know anything about the players."

That pertains mostly to the offensive side of the ball, where Iowa must replace nine starters and many second-unit players. Gone are fullbacks Lew Montgomery and Paul Kujawa, tight ends Alan Cross and Matt Whitaker, tailback Marvin Lampkin, quarterback Jim Hartlieb and wide receiver Danan Hughes. Also missing is the entire offensive line.

Said Fry: "We've got to replace practically everyone."

He and his staff will do that by intensifying spring football, which started April 5 and runs through April 24, when the team will play an intrasquad game at Kinnick Stadium at 1 p.m.

"We're missing the most important factor in order to win, and that's experience," Fry said. "That's got to be developed in an awful hurry against one another."

Fry said he and his staff will conduct scrimmages to determine which players make the two-deep. Once that's done, the top two will battle for the No. 1 spot. Eventually, Fry wants to pit the No. 1 defense against the No. 1 offense.

"We haven't done that for years and years and years — put the first team defense against the first team offense," Fry said. "But we'll do that this spring to see just how tough and how good these kids really are."

Most of those battles will take place on offense.

"It's going to be a lot different from the last few years, when we've had a lot of veterans in there," Burmeister said. "This year there will be a lot of new guys, like myself; I've only started three games."

"Hopefully the guys are anxious to play and are going to work hard. Maybe that will make up for our lack of experience."

Alisha Nelson

"Our preparation has been what I have said all along, and that's taking care of ourselves and seeing what we personally want to do. Each time you step on the field, there are new challenges."

After its first conference games of the season at Indiana, Ohio State stands in second place in the Big Ten with a 3-1 record under fifth-year head coach Gail Davenport. Junior Krinon Clark leads the Buckeyes with a .434 average, including 33 runs, 19 RBIs, and two home runs. Senior Stacy Dickens heads up the pitching staff with a 5-4 record and a 2.08 ERA. Senior Belinda Cernava is 6-7 with a 1.82 ERA.

"They're a good hitting ball club," Blevins said. "They have the ability to score runs. But what we have seen is a high percentage of errors in their defense. We have stressed how important it is to put the ball in play because that's where we have seen mistakes being made."

Blevins said that after struggling to gain offensive consistency early in the season, the Hawkeyes have improved in their last outings.

"We have seen some good progress there," Blevins said. "We've seen tons of different pitchers and we have become more effective with the off-speed pitchers in the last several games. In the Bradley game, we saw good execution in creating scoring opportunities and then bringing them home."

Inside Baseball

ARLINGTON, Texas (AP) — Strikeout king Nolan Ryan's farewell tour was put on hold Thursday as he underwent surgery for torn knee cartilage that will sideline him three to six weeks.

Dr. John Conway, orthopedic consultant for the Texas Rangers, said the arthroscopic procedure on the right knee lasted about 40 minutes.

"I feel that the surgery went well," Ryan, 46, said in a statement from Harris Methodist Hospital in Fort Worth. "I'll start my rehabilitation as soon as the doctor gives me clearance to do so."

"I'll be back as soon as possible and should be better and stronger physically as a result of the surgery," Ryan said.

Conway said Ryan could start riding a bicycle Friday and resume his regular training when he felt comfortable doing so.

"I just left him," Conway said. "He was in good spirits but he was really hurting this morning."

The surgeon said the operation was done under local anesthesia, with the doctors explaining the procedure to Ryan as they progressed.

An MRI was performed Thursday, revealing a tear in both the medial and lateral cartilage, the knee's shock absorber. About one-third of each cartilage was removed.

"I'm optimistic he is going to recover quickly," Conway said. "I think it would be unreasonable to expect he will be back before three weeks. I'd say three to six weeks would be the window I'm hoping for."

Ryan, who is on crutches, was being processed for release from the hospital shortly after surgery. Conway said Ryan would not be in a brace of any kind.

The doctor was asked if the rain and wet grounds in Wednesday night's game, when Ryan lasted only four innings, was a factor in the injury.

"If he had pulled a hamstring, I'd say yes," Conway said. "But it was a cartilage tear. That can happen when it's hot or cold."

Ryan is beginning his 27th and final season. Conway was asked if Ryan gave any thought to ending his career right now.

"Oh, no, no," he said. "His whole focus is to be able to play the rest of the season."

"Best case, he misses two or three starts and comes back and throws another no-hitter. Worst case, he's out three or four months and misses most of the season — I don't expect that at all."

Ryan said he felt pain in his knee during a workout Monday but decided to pitch against Baltimore on Wednesday night because it was feeling better. He felt discomfort during his warmup and was bothered by pain during the start in which he led 6-5 to the Orioles.

Ryan allowed eight hits and six runs in four innings and was later covering first base on a routine grounder. He limped noticeably afterward and when covering a bunt later in the game.

Ryan was not available for comment after the game, nor his normal practice after a victory or a loss.

This is the 14th time Ryan has been on the disabled list and the first time he has been sidelined with a knee problem.

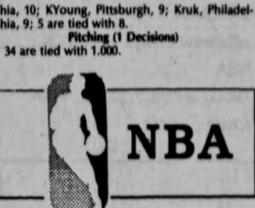

He is 1-1 with a 2.70 ERA in two starts this season. He is baseball's career strikeout leader at 5,677.

Ryan had an all-time free spring training and beat the Boston Red Sox 3-1 in the opener.

Last season Ryan missed six starts because of injuries and lasted less than three innings three other times because of physical problems.

With Ryan out, infielder Manuel Lee, sidelined since March 22 with an injured rib cage, was expected to be activated for Friday's game in New York.

ARLINGTON, Texas (AP) — Strikeout king Nolan Ryan's farewell tour was put on hold Thursday as he underwent surgery for torn knee cartilage that will sideline him three to six weeks.

Dr. John Conway, orthopedic consultant for the Texas Rangers, said the arthroscopic procedure on the right knee lasted about 40 minutes.

"I feel that the surgery went well," Ryan, 46, said in a statement from Harris Methodist Hospital in Fort Worth. "I'll start my rehabilitation as soon as the doctor gives me clearance to do so."

"I'll be back as soon as possible and should be better and stronger physically as a result of the surgery," Ryan said.

Conway said Ryan could start riding a bicycle Friday and resume his regular training when he felt comfortable doing so.

"I just left him," Conway said. "He was in good spirits but he was really hurting this morning."

The surgeon said the operation was done under local anesthesia, with the doctors explaining the procedure to Ryan as they progressed.

An MRI was performed Thursday, revealing a tear in both the medial and lateral cartilage, the knee's shock absorber. About one-third of each cartilage was removed.

"I'm optimistic he is going to recover quickly," Conway said. "I think it would be unreasonable to expect he will be back before three weeks. I'd say three to six weeks would be the window I'm hoping for."

Ryan, who is on crutches, was being processed for release from the hospital shortly after surgery. Conway said Ryan would not be in a brace of any kind.

The doctor was asked if the rain and wet grounds in Wednesday night's game, when Ryan lasted only four innings, was a factor in the injury.

"If he had pulled a hamstring, I'd say yes," Conway said. "But it was a cartilage tear. That can happen when it's hot or cold."

Ryan is beginning his 27th and final season. Conway was asked if Ryan gave any thought to ending his career right now.

Hawk men host Open...

In its final meet before next weekend's Drake Relays, the Iowa men's track squad hosts the Cretzmeyer Open Saturday at the Cretzmeyer Track.

Field events are scheduled to begin at 11 a.m. Saturday, with running events beginning at 11:45. The meet is free to the public.

The Open marks Iowa's second consecutive home meet of the season and will feature squads from Iowa State and Northern Iowa, though other teams may enter individual athletes.

Last weekend at the Iowa Invitational, Coach Ted Wheeler's men ran away with the team title, racking up 195 points to runner-up Northern Iowa's 137.3. Augustana took third with 100, with Drake (65.3), Morningside (31) and Wisconsin-Platteville (19.3) rounding out the field.

Individually, Anthuan Maybank continued dominating his competition as he ran away with the titles in the 100 and 200 in 10.6 and 20.7 seconds, respectively. He also anchored the winning 4 x 100 (41.04) and 4 x 400 relays (3:12.8).

Other title winners for Iowa included Rajeev Balkrishnan in the 400-meter hurdles (52.01), Chad Ohly in the pole vault (15'0"), Darren Smith in the long jump (24'6 1/2"), Rod Renko in the 1,500-meters (3:59.5) and Audwin Patterson in the 400-meters (47.73).

Overall, Wheeler was happy with the way his Hawkeyes performed. "I was very pleased with our performances last weekend," he said. "Darren Smith did very well in the long jump and Anthuan Maybank was again outstanding."

But the Iowa mentor isn't about to have his team rest on its laurels. "We have to build on the times we set and get ready for Saturday," he said.

...women off to KU Relays

Doug Cappel
The Daily Iowan

The Iowa women's track squad heads west this weekend for the Kansas Relays, in Lawrence, Kan.

Traditionally one of the top meets in the midwest, the Jayhawks will also be hosting Iowa State, Michigan, Nebraska, Arkansas State, Arkansas, Illinois State, Missouri and Drake. Team scoring, however, will not be kept.

In the Hawkeyes' last outing, split squads attended the Jim Duncan Relays in Des Moines and the Sea Ray Relays in Knoxville, Tenn.

In Des Moines, team captain Tina Stec led Iowa as she took first in the 1,500-meter run in 4:33.13, and second in the 3,000-meter run in 10:07.80.

In Knoxville, Lisa Van Steenwyk got closer to returning to the NCAA Championships as she took fourth in the shot put with a toss of 49'7 3/4". The throw was good enough to provisionally qualify her for the NCAA meet. Denise Taylor finished right behind with a throw of 46'8 3/4".

In the discus, Jodi Peterson took fifth with a throw of 136'10". Van Steenwyk took seventh with a 129'9" throw and Taylor finished 10th with a toss of 125'5".

In running events, the 4 x 200 team came in eighth with a time of 1:37.90, which broke a five-year school record, and the 4 x 100 team placed 11th with a time of 47.04.

Individually, Marlene Poole took sixth in the 200-meters with a time of 24.90 and Tina Floyd was the top finisher for Iowa in the 100-meters, finishing 24th with a time of 12.41.

The Hawkeyes tied for 20th, with Alabama taking the team title.

The Kansas Relays will mark the final tune-up for the women before the prestigious Drake Relays in Des Moines April 23-24.

IOWA TENNIS

'Cocky' Illini visit Schillig's Hawks

Joel Donofrio
The Daily Iowan

The Iowa women's tennis team hosts its final home meets of the season this weekend, facing Illinois at 8 a.m. Saturday and Purdue at 9 a.m. Sunday at Klotz Tennis Center, weather permitting. Otherwise, both meets will be held in the UI Rec Building.

The Fighting Illini are tied with Indiana for first in the Big Ten with a perfect 5-0 mark. Illinois is led by Lindsey Nimmo, who has compiled a 39-6 overall mark at No. 1 singles. At No. 1 doubles, Nimmo and sophomore Lissa Kim-mell own an 11-4 mark.

"Illinois is going to be very tough. They're a team that has given us a lot of trouble in the past with their attitude on the court," Iowa coach Micki Schillig said.

When asked to elaborate on Illi-nois' attitude, Schillig recalled an incident from the last time the Illini were in town.

"They're a really cocky team, frankly," Schillig said. "I think our players remember two years ago when they walked in and turned on their ghetto-blaster and tried to take over our home court. I don't think that will happen again. If they do bring it, we will be using it to motivate us."

Iowa sophomore Cara Cashon said that the Hawkeyes haven't been fazed by anyone this season.

"We're so much tougher than last year. No one is intimidated before they step on the court," Cashon said. "We feel we can beat anybody this year, and that confidence makes a big difference."

The Purdue Boilermakers are in the midst of a tough season, bringing up the rear in the Big Ten at 0-4. The Purdue squad consists of many freshmen players whom Schillig feels are getting tougher as the year goes on.

"The Boilermakers have had a lot of rebuilding this season," Schillig said. "I know they haven't won a lot of matches, but they have been close in a lot of their meets, so they are definitely an improved team."

This weekend's action will be the final home meets for Iowa's two-time captain, senior Andrea Calvert. The native of Greenwood, Ind., winner of last year's Tennis All-Around Athlete award, will graduate next month with a degree in physical education and sports studies.

Danny Frazier/The Daily Iowan

Hawkeye captain Andrea Calvert, right, shown here with doubles partner Laura Dvorak, will make weekend versus Illinois and Purdue.

Calvert holds a 66-36 overall mark in doubles, while she and Laura Dvorak have compiled a 35-15 record over the past two years at No. 1 doubles.

Iowa men entertain Wisconsin, Wildcats

Joel Donofrio
The Daily Iowan

Wisconsin and Northwestern invade Iowa City this weekend for a pair of men's tennis meets against the Hawkeyes. Iowa hosts the Badgers at 2:30 p.m. Friday and the Wildcats at 1:30 Sunday at Klotz Tennis Center and/or the UI Rec Building, depending on the weather.

The Hawkeyes return to Big Ten action with an 8-7 overall record, 2-2 in the conference. Iowa trails the overall series with both teams, with the Badgers holding a 41-26-2 edge and the Wildcats a 40-21 record over the Hawkeyes. Iowa fell to both teams on the road last year.

On Tuesday, the Hawkeyes went down to defeat at the hands of Notre Dame, 5-2, in the Rec Building. Bryan Crowley and Carl Mannheim notched singles victories to tally Iowa's two points, with Crowley becoming the first Region IV player to defeat Notre Dame's Will Forsyth.

However, both coaches believed the scorecard failed to dis- evenly matched the teams.

"We competed really well with Notre Dame; they're obviously a better team than us but not by a whole lot," Iowa coach Steve Houghton said. "In doubles, we were actually up a break in two of the matches, so we really had a shot at winning the doubles point."

The only doubles match where the Hawkeyes never led was No. 1 doubles. Facing the 10th-ranked duo of Forsyth and Chuck Coleman, the Hawkeye tandem of Eric Schulman and Naguib Shahid fought back from a 3-7 deficit to force a tiebreaker before losing.

Their effort was not lost on Notre Dame coach Bob Bayliss.

"In doubles, Iowa came at us with everything they had. All three doubles matches were nailbiters, and the No. 1 match was really well-played," Bayliss said Tuesday. "We feel very fortunate to get out of here with a win. Iowa is a very good team who on the right day I feel can beat anybody in the Big Ten."

Million-dollar man instant star

Bill Vogrin
Associated Press

BLOOMINGTON, Ill. — No NBA agents are calling for Don Calhoun Thursday. Everyone else did. The $5-an-hour salesman was celebrating his first day as a millionaire after flinging a basketball 75 feet into a Chicago Stadium net before a standing-room-only crowd that had come to see the Bulls play Miami Wednesday night.

But Calhoun ended up being the star.

"I didn't get any sleep last night," he said Thursday as he joined family and friends in Bloomington. "My heart was beating too fast."

The salesman and part-time student had one try to hit the shot from the opposite foul line — three-quarters the length of the basketball court.

One try was all it took. "I thought it was going in when it left my hands," he said as he celebrated with his parents, both janitors, at Illinois State University, where his mother works.

"I just wanted to get a good shot off," he said.

"I'm still shook up and shocked and everything else," said Calhoun's father, Homer Calhoun, 50, who watched his son's shot on TV. "I had a fit! I never dreamed of anything like that."

Calhoun's family reported non-stop calls from media and well-wishers. His employer ordered pastries and planned a weekend promotion to congratulate him.

"It's just fantastic," Calhoun's boss, Ron Koehler, said. "Don's an outstanding individual. He's always been involved in the boy's club, the men's club. He's one of the nicest guys you'll ever meet." Everyone, it seemed, wanted to rub shoulders with the man who had been chosen at random from the crowd when his bright yellow athletic shoes caught the eye of a promotions staffer.

Calhoun said he intends to keep his job at Reliable Office Superstore and finish classes at Heartland Community College.

As for Wednesday night's game, the Bulls ran past the Heat 119-92.

Even so, Bulls Coach Phil Jackson grumbled, "I don't like those kind of distractions. I'm glad it was not a close game."

The shot was part of a 20-game promotion by a local restaurant chain and a soft-drink manufacturer. Calhoun will receive $50,000 each year for the next 20 years.

"I wish they'd give me a shot at that," said Jordan, whose eight-figure annual income hasn't jaded his love of prizes. "For a million bucks, I'd love to try."

"Maybe I can get a loan to pay off my fine," said Scott Williams, assessed $6,000 for fighting in Monday's game at Detroit.

Iowa women take to the links at Intercollegiate in Georgia

Joel Donofrio
The Daily Iowan

The Iowa women's golf team heads for the warmer weather of Athens, Ga., this weekend to compete in the Women's Southern Intercollegiate Championship on Saturday and Sunday. The 20-team field includes Big Ten opponents Illinois, Indiana, and Ohio State.

Last season, the Hawkeyes finished 15th in the tournament with a team total of 997, 81 strokes behind tourney champ San Jose State. Iowa's Stacy Boville finished 50th overall, shooting a 244 over three rounds to lead the Hawkeyes to the scoring table.

According to Iowa coach Diane Thomason, a tournament with many tough teams gives the Hawkeyes experience for the season-ending Big Ten Championships at Finkbine Golf Course.

"What we try to do is play in big tournaments. We look for a tournament schedule where you're going to see lots of different people," Thomason said.

The Hawkeyes have competed against Ohio State and Indiana in their respective invitationals the past two weekends. Last weekend, the Hawkeyes placed 10th in the 54-hole Lady Buckeye Invite, while finishing seventh in the Indiana Invitational on April 3-4.

Senior Judy Bornholdt has led Iowa this spring with an 84.2 average score over five rounds. Freshman Tanya Shepley is close behind at 84.8 over the same span.

"We're not playing as well as we're capable of as a team," Bornholdt said after last weekend's action.

BOOK REVIEW

'13th Gen' a searing look at post-boomers

Brent Dey
The Daily Iowan

You've seen it in the papers, you've read about it in the magazines. We're America's 13th generation, "Generation X," and we're no good. For years we've been taking jabs from older generations and swallowing hard. You know what they've been saying — we're dumb, we're lazy, we can't make changes, we can't find Canada on a map, we listen to crappy music and we're doomed to lives of ruin and despair. Of course we've had our side to the argument too, but we haven't been able to express it, because we didn't control the media — the "boomers" did.

All of that is changing now. Douglas Copland's book "Generation X," an apocalyptic handbook for anyone born between 1961-81, started a wave that's been carried through in cover articles in The Atlantic, Time, Newsweek and on a special report on MTV. The latest to pitch in on the argument are Neil Howe and Bill Strauss, two baby boomers who have compiled an amazing book about our generation called "13th Gen."

What makes the book so amazing isn't the mass collection of groovy quotes on the sidebar of each page, or the book's easy to follow, user-friendly format, which is more akin to scanning on a Macintosh than flipping pages. What makes it so amazing is that it offers a somewhat unbiased view of both sides of the argument.

And what is the argument? From a boomer's standpoint it's that our generation is lazy, unimaginative and destined for ruin. From the "13er" standpoint there really isn't an argument. We're doing the best we can. All we're trying to say is "lay off," admit your generation wasn't as great as you always say it was, and please don't tell us about Woodstock one more time.

What makes "13th Gen" different from the magazine articles you've been reading is that the authors care enough to try to find out where the problems we're plagued with are coming from, and they have enough guts to point their fingers at themselves. Howe and Strauss admit something we 13ers have known for a long time — the baby boomers are the most selfish, narcissist, hypocritical generation ever to walk the face of the earth, and we 13ers are their fallout.

"13th Gen" takes the nurture over nature approach to human development. Its running undercurrent is that if boomers and older generations aren't happy with the way this generation is turning out, they only have themselves to blame. The 13er generation learned early to fend for itself, without the help of their parents. Children growing up in the '70s and '80s came from the largest percentage of broken homes in U.S. history.

"13th Gen" also shows how the older generations have made a habit of slamming doors in our faces. Job prospects have dwindled, the real wage rate has dropped and we have been left with a federal deficit that is spinning out of control. Even the hedonistic escapes of yesteryear have turned sour, as illustrated in R.J. Maston's cartoon, where a happy-looking hippie proudly displays the '60s anthem "Sex, drugs and rock 'n' roll" on his T-shirt, while a disillusioned 13er looks on with a T-shirt reading "AIDS, crack, punk and rap."

Divorce, unemployment and generational tensions aren't the only topics covered in the book. Racial issues, political correctness, historical events and the Brady Bunch are all addressed in tidy, bite-sized pieces which make for fun and easy reading — perfect for the student on the go. There's a lot of information, but the articles are short enough that they can be consumed while killing time between classes.

The best reading for those short on time are the quotes posted in the sidebars, however. Howe and Strauss have gathered compelling remarks about our generation from journalists, actors, politicians and students. Great quotes abound, like one by The Seattle Weekly's Julie Phillips: "The '60s for me are like one of those stories where nobody laughs, and you say, 'I guess you had to be there.'"

Somehow, while compiling these quotes, Howe and Strauss must have got their hands on a Living Colour album and thought it was really cool, because almost every other page has a lyric from a Living Colour song. If you flip the pages fast enough, the lyrics to "Type" hover before your eyes. This is kind of strange, considering that 13er cultural demigods like Bono, Spike Lee and Michael Stipe aren't even mentioned, but it does give an indication that maybe the authors don't know as much about us as they think they do.

Ian Williams, a 25-year-old computer hacker from Chapel Hill, S.C., is there to set the authors straight whenever their representations fall short of the mark. He interrupts their correspondences via modum, "crasher" style, providing some of the best dialogue between boomers and 13ers to date. The dialogue Williams creates shows what should, by now, come as common sense: no matter who is involved, and no matter how modern and open-minded the players are, every generation has its gap.

National art exhibit explores paper, fiber

Michelle-Therese Forcier

How many different types of artwork can you think of that are made of paper or fiber? Right, you probably can't think of them all. Well, fortunately, there just happens to be a national juried exhibition of paper/fiber art right here in Iowa City.

"Paper / Fiber XVI" will be on display at The Arts Center through April 29 and yes, it is quite a diverse show. The exhibition features paper and fiber art from around the country chosen by artist/juror Lillian Elliott of Berkeley, Calif. What constitutes paper and fiber art? Anything from stretched gut to weaves.

According to Debra Liu, coordinator of the show, Elliott had to choose work from six carousels of slides. Unfortunately, Liu said, "pieces that didn't photograph well didn't make it."

The result of the artists' work is really quite remarkable. For example, a piece titled "Bird Memorial: Target Series II" by Jon Sontag from Ames received an honorable mention. It is both whimsical and touching. Two guns face upward, the butts resting against a target. In front of this target is a bird, wings spread. There are also birds resting lightly on the guns and one on top of the target peering out beneath a bit of cloth. The piece looks solid and sturdy enough to be made of stone or wood, but in reality it's made of paper and is feather light.

"The exhibition features very diverse things, from beadwork to tapestries," said Liu. This is evident in the juxtaposition of the pieces, which range from "Gorilla Spirit Figure," by Kathleen Trenchard of San Antonio, Texas, which features paper cut as intricately as lace, to Davenport resident Rowen Schussheim Anderson's "Cuzco Lights" tapestry, which masquerades as sunrise and sunset in flaming colors.

Although the exhibition became national in 1983, Liu stressed how different one year is from another because each year features a different juror. "Lillian Elliott is very experimental... she pushes the idea of multimedia," said Liu. "Paper / Fiber XVI" reflects what's going on in the rest of the nation.

"Paper / Fiber XVI" is on display through April 29 at The Arts Center, which is located on the lower level of the Jefferson Building, 129 E. Washington St. Admission is free.

Jackson family reunion show might not include Michael

Associated Press

ATLANTIC CITY, N.J. — The often squabbling Jacksons — Michael included — are said to be planning a reunion show in December.

The Jackson Family Invitational Music Benefit and Awards will be held in December, said Thomas Carver, president of the Casino Association of New Jersey, a sponsor of the event. The Associated Press, quoting an unidentified association source, reported Wednesday that Michael Jackson would take part.

However, Richard Rubenstein, a publicist for the event, said he could not confirm that. He said negotiations were still going on. The show would mark the first time since the clan's 1984 tour that the brothers have performed together.

Carver and association chairman Nicholas Ribis said the show's proceeds would benefit several major charities, which they did not specify.

Jackson family reunion show might not include Michael

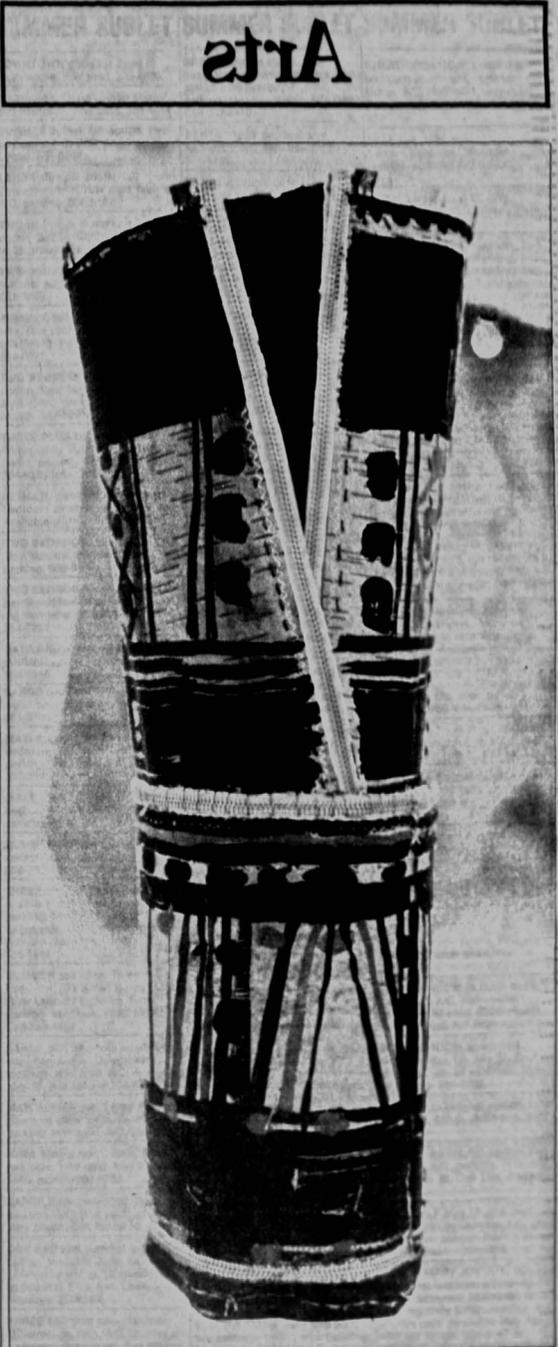

Associated Press

ATLANTIC CITY, N.J. — The Jackson family reunion show planned for the weekend of Dec. 11-13 in Atlantic City might not include Michael Jackson, according to a source familiar with the situation.

The Jackson family reunion show, which is being held in Atlantic City, N.J., is a major event for the family. It is expected to draw a large audience of fans and family members.

Michael Jackson, the youngest child of the family, has been a controversial figure in the media. His recent behavior and legal issues have led to speculation about his participation in the reunion show.

The source mentioned that the family is currently in discussions with Michael regarding his involvement in the event. It is unclear if he will ultimately decide to attend.

The piece by Lillian Elliott titled "Morocco" is part of the national exhibit "Paper/Fiber XVI", currently on display at The Arts Center.

Artists from across the United States and abroad have contributed to the exhibit. The works range from traditional Japanese paper lanterns to contemporary fiber art installations.

The exhibit is open to the public from 10 a.m. to 5 p.m. on Saturdays and Sundays. Admission is free. For more information, contact the Arts Center at 1111 University Ave., Iowa City, IA 52242.

'13th Gen' a searing look at post-boomers

By Brent DeWitt
The Daily Iowa

You've seen it in the papers, you've read about it in the magazines. We're America's 13th Generation. "Generation X," and we're no good. For years we've been taking jobs from older generations and wailing about it. You know what that's like? We're saying — "we're dumb, we're lazy, we can't make changes, we can't find Canada on a map, we're lousy at carpentry and we're doomed to lives of ruin and despair. Of course we've had our share of the argument too, but we haven't been able to express it, because we didn't control the media — the "boomers" did.

All of that is changing now. Douglas Coupland's book "Generation X," an apocalyptic handbook for anyone born between 1961-81, started a wave that's been carried through in cover articles in Time, Atlantic, Newsweek, and on a special report on MTV. The latest piece in the argument is to pitch in and change the world. Bill How and Bill Strauss, two baby boomers who have compiled an amazing book about our generation called "13th Gen."

What makes the book so amazing isn't the mass collection of groovy quotes on the sidebar of each page, or the book's easy to follow, user-friendly format, which is more akin to scanning on a Macintosh than to reading a Macintosh manual.

And what is the argument? From a boomer's standpoint it's that our generation is lazy, unimaginative and destined for ruin. From the "13er" standpoint there really isn't an argument. We're doing the best we can. All we're trying to say is we want to be great as you always say it was, and please don't tell us about Woodstock one more time.

What makes "13th Gen" different from the magazine articles you've seen in the past is that the authors have been reading it to find out where the problems were plagued. They're trying to find out where there are enough clues to point their fingers at themselves. How we live is a St. Ignace something we 13ers have known for a long time — the political events and the Brady Bunch are all addressed in tidy, bite-sized pieces which make for fun and easy reading — perfect for the student on the go. There's a lot of information, but the articles are short enough that they can be consumed while killing time between classes.

The best reading for those short on time are the quotes posted in the sidebar, however. How and Strauss have gathered compelling remarks about our generation from journalists, actors, politicians and students. Great quotes abound, like one by Seattle Weekly's Julie Phillips: "The 80s for me are like one of those stores where nobody laughs and you say, 'I guess you had to be there.'"

Somewhat, while compiling these quotes, How and Strauss must have got their hands on a Living Color album and thought it was really cool, because almost every other page has a lyric from a Living Color song. If you flip the pages fast enough, the lyrics are "Type" over your eyes.

This is a kind of strange, considering that 13er cultural demigods like Bone, Spike Lee and Michael Stipe aren't even mentioned, but it does give an indication that maybe the authors don't know as much about us as they think they do.

Ian Williams, a 25-year-old computer hacker from Chapel Hill, N.C., is there to set the authors straight whenever their representations fall short of the mark. He interjects their correspondence via medium, "crasher" style, providing some of the best dialogue between boomers and 13ers to date. The dialogue Williams creates shows what should, by now, come as common sense: no matter who is involved, it's not about how modern and open-minded the players are, every generation has its gap.

Divorce, unemployment and general national tensions aren't the only topics covered in the book. Racial issues, political correctness, heterosexual events and the Brady Bunch are all addressed in tidy, bite-sized pieces which make for fun and easy reading — perfect for the student on the go. There's a lot of information, but the articles are short enough that they can be consumed while killing time between classes.

How many different types of work can you think of? Right? Well, fortunately, there just happens to be a national exhibition of paper, fiber and art in Iowa City.

"Paper, Paper, XPT" will display at the Arts Center from April 29 and you, it is a diverse show. The exhibition features paper and fiber art created by Lillian Elliott of artist Lillian Elliott of artist Lillian Elliott. What constitutes a paper, fiber, art? Anything and fiber art? Anything attached but to wove.

According to Doris Liu, coordinator of the show, Elliott has chosen work from six categories: "pieces that didn't photograph, didn't make it."

The results of the artists' work really quite remarkable. For a piece titled "Bird Men" Target Series II by Jon S. from Ames received an honor mention. It is both whimsical and touching. Two runs face up, the better resting against a light in front of this latest is a

SEASON ENDS TONIGHT

Stellar strings band together for '93 finale

William Palik
The Daily Iowan

Hancher Auditorium's 20th anniversary celebration concludes tonight at 8 with a concert of string quintets performed by a stellar ensemble that includes violinists Isaac Stern and Cho-Liang Lin, violists Jaime Laredo and Michael Tree and cellists Yo-Yo Ma and Sharon Robinson.

The program consists of three works: the Quintet for Strings in E Major, Op. 13, No. 5, by prolific turn of the 19th-century Italian composer Luigi Boccherini; the 1890 Quintet No. 2 in G Major, Op. 111, by Johannes Brahms; and the sublimely spacious Quintet in C Major, D. 956, by Franz Schubert. Stern, Lin, Laredo and Ma will perform in all three works, with Robinson joining in for the Boccherini and Schubert works, and Tree completing the ensemble in the Brahms quintet.

Chinese-American violinist Cho-Liang Lin is the only newcomer to the Hancher stage, though not to Iowa (dedicated recital hounds fondly recall traveling to his performance a dozen years ago at The University of Northern Iowa).

The other participants in Friday's concert are familiar names to UI audiences as to the world at large. Isaac Stern's career has spanned more than 50 years, and the legendary violinist has amassed a discography of more than 100 releases. Yo-Yo Ma earlier this season stunned a Hancher audience with a truly awesome solo cello recital. Jaime Laredo and Sharon Robinson, a husband and wife team that forms two-thirds of the Kalichstein-Laredo-Robinson Trio, and Michael Tree, founding violist of the famed Guarneri Quartet, are

British fave's debut LP a glam-rocking triumph

Stuart Reid
The Daily Iowan

If one were to take the British press at their word, the release of Suede's self-titled debut album should rank somewhere alongside the Magna Carta, the Declaration of Independence and The Smiths' The Queen is Dead in terms of historical significance. And they may actually be on to something this time.

For a debut, Suede is an incredibly diverse, well-polished record which seems more influenced by the glam rock of the 1970s than by anything put out over the past 10 years. So while what they're doing isn't actually all that original, it sure sounds original, and thus will undoubtedly set off a wave of sound-alike label signings to rival even the My Bloody Valentine pyramid scheme.

In fact, all the elements of glam rock are very much here — the emphasis on guitar and vocals over bass and drums, the instantly memorable chorus, and yes, even the occasional appearance of a tambourine or clapping hands. The last key ingredient is, of course, the frontman — in this case, Brett Anderson, who succeeds in making Curve's Toni Halliday and David Bowie look like Roseanne Arnold on a date with Marvin Pomerantz.

This is a record where excerpting a portion of the lyrics is nothing less than a crime against all other lines, but, clearly, bits like "the delights of the chemical smile" and "You're a water sign/pumped up on Valium, could you get me some" will serve to reinforce the overall image of the sexually indecisive, angst-ridden, chemically dependent cover star. In short, all the things we demand of our media darlings.

The tracks likely to make the quickest impressions on the listener include "The Drowners," one of the most upbeat songs about incest since, well, I don't know when, and "Metal Mickey," which features the chorus "She sells heart, she sells meat." But the quieter, more introspective tracks are the ones carrying the most emotional weight.

Suede is all the things that popular music hasn't been in recent years — sexy, controversial, intelligent and image-conscious.
