UI professor plans to buy $7 million Calif. campus

Joe Viles
The Daily Iowan
A UI faculty member has resigned from the Northern Iowa Board of Regents and announced he is leaving the state for a job in Northern California, sources told the Daily Iowan. The professor, who has been at the UI for almost 15 years and received his doctorate in English, is the first UI professor to leave the state for a position in the Bay Area in recent history.

"It's not an easy decision," said Michael Rice, the professor's former colleague and department chair. "He's been here for a long time and has made a significant impact on the university. I wish him well in his new position."

The professor, who is not named in the sources, has expressed interest in a position at a university in Northern California, with an emphasis on teaching English and American literature. The professor's departure comes in the wake of a controversy over the hiring of a new English professor, who was accused of teaching in English as a second language.

"It's a complex issue," said Rice. "I think it's important for universities to consider the impact of their hiring decisions on students and faculty."

The Daily Iowan was the first to report the professor's departure, and sources said he is expected to leave in the near future. The university has not yet announced a timeline for the search for a new professor.

"We are in the process of reviewing the search process and will announce a new professor as soon as possible," said Rice. "We value diversity and inclusion in our faculty, and we will continue to actively recruit from a wide range of backgrounds."

Nestling season hits IC: ducks invade city area

Molly Spahn

The Daily Iowan

Iowa City ducks can now be seen wandering around in search of a place to lay their egg. And while the usual duck spots, such as the high Iowa River water that is now reaching Iowa City residents, are ground-nesters and they like deep vegetation,” she said. “But that’s why they stick around in Iowa City area. Nowhere else.

They lay their eggs in Iowa City area. Nowhere else.

Laura Hannen

Iowa City’s ducks have a reason to hop, skip and jump around the city: Their eggs are safe and secure.

She said the ducks are naturally drawn to the city because it offers a perfect habitat for them. They thrive on the variety of food sources available in Iowa City, which include ponds, streams and rivers.

“Ducks don’t prey on people,” Jeff Klahn, professor and Iowa City’s duck expert, said.

With a population of about 11,000 ducks, Iowa City has one of the largest duck populations in the state. The ducks are known for their playful nature and love of water, making them a popular sight in the city.

“Ducks are a lot of fun to watch,” Klahn continued. “They are always up to something, whether it’s playing in the water or simply strolling around.

Teacher’s lifelong dream fulfilled by horse ownership

Special to The Daily Iowan

If she picked up a pencil she drew a picture of a horse. If she picked up a horse she drew a picture of a horse.

She always had a horse. Her mother, a horse-obsessed woman, adored horses and horses were her life. She passed this love on to her daughter, Wesner.

Wesner is now a horse-obsessed woman, too, and she has found her passion in owning a horse.

“I always knew I wanted a horse," she said. "It’s because I’ve been around horses all my life.

She started to think about owning a horse when she was about 10 years old. She looked up horse-riding lessons and started to learn how to take care of horses.

Anpress

She was ready when she was ready, and there were plenty of horses available in Iowa City.

She finally found her horse, a beautiful thoroughbred named "Cherokee," and she knew it was the perfect horse for her.

She bought "Cherokee" and started to take riding lessons. She learned how to care for horses, and she soon became an expert at it.

Now she owns her own horse and she loves every minute of it. She spends all her free time with "Cherokee," and she wouldn’t have it any other way.

Chicken mailing a well-established, profitable business

Roger Hensz

WEATHERFORD, Iowa—Why did the chicken cross the road?

Not by one, with stamps on its back, but in northeast Iowa with lots of friends, all headed for destiny. It’s the chicken’s annual trip to the fair. And this year, it has arrived.

Jim Rohn, Rohn’s Produce in Webster City, said the chicken is in good shape and ready to go.

“Chicken are like going to Eastover. Mississippi, or somewhere where the post office is one of the most important places to go,” he said.

Not so much that the post office is important, but it’s the place where the chickens will go.

The chicken will go to the post office and get its mail, and then it will go to the fair and spend the day.

Chicken mailing has been going on for generations in Webster City, starting with Minnesota’s granddad.

"I remember taking care of the train mail," said Minnesota, McAvoy.

Train don’t come to town any more, or on this weekend, 90,000 chickens went instead to the international airport in Minneapolis, where they had a much faster route to the post office.

"They’re not on the plane now," McAvoy continued. "But they’re on the plane now, they’re on the plane, and they’re on the plane.

"McAvoy isn’t the only animals involved in the mail.

Karen Knox, a business mail specialist at Des Moines, said the mail authorities accept any small harnessed wildfowled animals, except turkeys or turkeys, that do not need food or create significant noise, as long as they’re properly screened.

Included are baby alligators, baby birds, ducklings, snake, and butterflies. Not included are dogs, cats, hamsters and other small animals with the exception of domesticated pets.

Baby chickens, said Anderson, run about $2 each.

"They’ve seen those little critters, they just got used to it," she said.

"McAvoy is the mail clerk, and she’s the one who delivers the mail," said Anderson. "We’ve had a lot of complaints, but we’ve never had a problem."
Students raise funds for housing projects

Students participate in "Iowa's Worst Livin'" to raise funds for Habitat for Humanity.

"We're not creating a hardship, but we're not creating a windfall, either," said Senate Majority Leader Leslly Kennedy.

Kennedy said the legislation requires political leaders to consider all factors, including the impact on the state budget.

"It's important to consider both sides of the issue, whether we should subsidize housing or not," she said.

Kennedy also noted that the legislation includes provisions for the annual U.S. Census Bureau report on housing affordability.

"This legislation aims to ensure that all residents have access to affordable housing, regardless of income level," she said.

Kennedy emphasized the need for a comprehensive approach to housing affordability, including programs to increase the supply of affordable housing and policies to reduce costs for tenants.

"We have a responsibility to ensure that all Iowans have access to safe and affordable housing," she said.

Kennedy concluded by acknowledging the efforts of her fellow lawmakers in addressing the issue of housing affordability.

"I encourage all my colleagues to support this legislation and work together to address the urgent need for affordable housing in Iowa," she said.
The heat, the G-men & the rap they take

By whatever name you call it, there is at least one thing that all the G-men like to do. They like to take a lot of things from people. In the case of energy, they like to take the heat.

Last week, Attorney General Janet Reno, did the usual round of visits to the media to announce the release of the Branch Davidian tape. This announcement was made in light of what happened. It was a dramatic announcement, but it was also a constructive one. The government has taken a step towards providing the public with some answers to questions that have been raised in the wake of the Branch Davidian tragedy.

The government has indicated that it is committed to providing the public with a full and fair investigation of the Branch Davidian tragedy. This commitment is welcome, and it is important that the government follow through on its promise.

Iowa Wesleyan sides with SEC

MOUNT PLEASANT, Iowa (AP) - The Iowa Wesleyan Board of Trustees has decided to move its football team to the Southeastern Conference instead of the Ohio Valley Conference.

The move, which was announced Monday at a meeting of the trustees, will take effect in the 1994-95 academic year. The trustees said the move will be in the best interests of the university and its students.

The SEC is the nation's top football conference, and the move will give the university a chance to compete on a national stage.

The trustees said the move will also provide a better opportunity for the university's football program to compete for championships and improve its overall performance.

The SEC has a long tradition of success in football, and the move will give the university's football team a chance to compete in a conference that is known for its strong teams.

The move will also provide a better opportunity for the university's football program to attract top players and build a strong fan base.

Reporters from the Associated Press have been covering the Iowa baseball teams for years, and they've seen a lot of games. But the one that sticks out in their minds is the game the Hawkeyes played against the University of Notre Dame in 1980. It was a classic pitching duel between two of the best pitchers in the country, and it ended in a 5-3 victory for Notre Dame. The Hawkeyes had a shot at winning, but they couldn't get the job done in the final inning. It was a tough loss, but it showed the Hawkeyes what they needed to work on to improve their team. Overall, it was a great game that will be remembered for years to come.

NFL: Quarterbacks scarce

The market for quarterbacks this year is weaker than most years, with only a few of the top players expected to be available. The NFL draft is a time when teams can find their quarterback of the future, but this year, the pool is not as deep as in previous years. It's a tough year for teams looking to find a franchise quarterback, but there are a few players who could be worth a look. The most intriguing of these is Joe Burrow, who is expected to be a top pick in the draft. Burrow has a strong arm and a good understanding of the game, and he could be a solid pick for any team.

Bob Ojeda cleared for rehab, surgery

Associated Press
Cleveland — Cleveland pitcher Bob Ojeda was cleared Monday for rehabilitation from a shoulder injury that will keep him out of the rotation for a while after he is able to do some light physical rehabilitation.

"It probably will be at least 60 days before Bobby is able to go out, and he's going to have to start from square one because he's been unable to do anything since the accident," John Hart, Indians GM, said Monday morning.

Hart said team orthopedic surgeon Dr. Lee Kaplan thinks the time is right for doing the surgery that Hart declared Ojeda is considering retirement.

Aqueducts were source of Roman pride, water

The Daily Texan produced several aqueducts, each serving a different purpose. The Choragicum had columns and statues, while the Public Baths had hot and cold rooms. The Aqua Claudia and the Porta Flaminia were more practical. The Aqua Claudia was Rome's first underground aqueduct.

Zahi Hawass to speak on Egyptian discoveries

As a part of the $450 million expansion, Hawass explained, "this is one of the most important things we've found, it shows the development of more organized Egypt." He added that the pyramids were also discovered.

So far for Hawass has encountered 400,000 people building the pyramids of the pyramids, who had flint tools and built in the pyramids and used the grand design of ancient Egypt. Hawass said he is not only giving evidence of the ancient world, but also giving evidence of the world today.

Another interesting discovery from Hawass is the ancient remains of a king which has not been found in ancient Egypt. "These are from the second century B.C. to the first century A.D."

One of the many findings in the Hawass' tomb is a series of 15 statues that sport mummies. When asked if Hawass wanted to be mummified, he replied, "Absolutely!"

"Indecent Proposal" still clingino to No. 1

Associated Press

NEW YORK - "Indecent Proposal" pulled in $4.8 million to push the film to No. 1 at the box office, according to box office research company Exhibitor Relations Co. The film has been in theaters for 12 weeks, and has grossed $26 million so far.

"Indecent Proposal" has been a surprise hit, with box office receipts exceeding expectations. The film was released in November, and has since become a critical and commercial success.

"Indecent Proposal" was directed by Sydney Pollack and stars Kevin Costner and Morgan Freeman. The film is about a wealthy businessman who agrees to pay a young woman to have a relationship with him.
