Residents urge board to appeal ruling on case

Residents want a quarry owner to halt operations.

Lynn M. Tefft
 The Daily Iowan

More than 25 angry residents of Dingleberry Road told the Johnson County Board of Supervisors Thursday they want the case of Ernst vs. Johnson County appealed.

Ernst, owner of a quarry on Dingleberry Road, sued the county for the right to maintain operations at the site. Although county representatives argued that the quarry has not been functioning for almost 30 years and lobbied for a conditional operating agreement, Ernst and others were able to prove that taxes had been paid for the site, mining permits had been requested and some quarrying had taken place periodically during that time. The judge's ruling allowed Ernst to continue operations.

Residents of the area who are concerned about noise, pollution and the threat to safety arising from the quarry's operation told the board to appeal the decision. "It's the American dream to have a place like this," Randy Robertson said of his home on Dingleberry

Road. "To have a quarry come in, it's unbelievable. It causes problems for everybody out there."

Addressing the issues of potential damage to the road, pollution of the underground water system and decreasing property values, the residents asked Assistant Johnson County Attorney Anne Lahey what the chances were for a successful appeal.

"We have a viable chance in an appeal," she said. "It's about 50/50."

Supervisor Steve Lacina said the residents can be instrumental in the appeal process by providing much-needed testimony about the condition of the area and the possible consequences of the quarry's operations.

"We need to be brainstorming for arguments," he said.

Resident Tom Dvorsky said he doesn't feel the company is very trustworthy.

"When the board told them 'nothing goes in, nothing comes out,' they went ahead and did it anyway," he said, providing pictures of trucks entering and leaving the site.

Lacina said the board will meet in an executive session today at 8 a.m. to decide whether to appeal the ruling. It will announce its decision immediately afterward.

Abbout to receive award

Dr. Francois Abboud, head of internal medicine at the UI College of Medicine and UI Hospitals and Clinics, will receive the 1993 Robert Williams

Distinguished Chair of Medicine award today.

The award is given to the most distinguished medicine department head in the United States, as decided by the Association of Professors of Medicine.

Abbout was named director of the UI Cardiovascular Research Center in 1974 and head of internal medicine in 1976.

Among Abboud's accomplishments is a recent study that showed the rise and fall of blood pressure during sleep can possibly be linked to heart attacks.

He has also served terms as president of the American Heart Association and the Association of American Physicians.

North Liberty man injured after crash with police car

A North Liberty man suffered broken ribs and total damage to his car when a Coralville police officer struck him broadside Thursday morning.

Timothy Gerlits, 37, 209 Holiday Mobile Home Court, had turned from 10th Avenue to Fifth Street West in Coralville, and was turning south into the post office when the police car hit him.

The officer, traveling east on Fifth Street, was responding to a radio call at the time of the accident.

Gerlits was taken to Mercy Hospital in Iowa City.

Farm Aid ticket sales worth $1 million

AMES (AP) — Ticket sales for the Farm Aid concert totaled almost $1 million, and that's more than enough to pay for the show, a Farm Aid Inc. official said.

"Ticket sales will more than cover the cost of doing the show, so we can assure people who called in to make a pledge that their money will directly benefit farmers," Glenda Yoder said Wednesday.

Clinton celebrates 100 days with small victory

WASHINGTON (AP) — The House gave President Clinton a largely symbolic victory on his 100th day in office Thursday, voting to strengthen his hand slightly in the fight against pork-barrel spending projects.

The measure, approved 258-157, was an echo of last year's presidential campaign, when voters demanded that something be done about sky-high budget deficits and expensive projects lawmakers win for their home districts.

NEW DEFINITION INCREASES NUMBERS

AIDS report rate still rising rapidly

Laura Neergaard
 Associated Press

ATLANTA — The number of Americans with AIDS increased at a surprising rate during the first three months of the year, when more than 35,000 new cases were reported, federal health officials said Thursday.

Most of the new cases stemmed from a new definition of the deadly disease, but even cases not attributed to the broader definition increased by 21 percent, double the rate for the period last year.

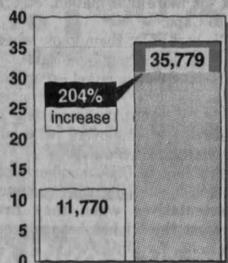

"That is higher than we expected," said Dr. John Ward, chief of AIDS surveillance for the Centers for Disease Control and Prevention. "Some of that 21 percent is a sign that the AIDS epidemic is continuing to grow."

It also means that people with HIV who have fought off AIDS with medication for several years are starting to get sick, said Lynora Williams, spokeswoman for the AIDS Action Council, a patient advocacy group based in Washington.

"The figures should definitely be read as a cause for concern," she said.

Since 1987, HIV patients were defined as having AIDS once they contracted certain blood infections, the skin cancer Kaposi's sarcoma or any of 21 other indicator diseases.

FEAR DIVIDES CONGRESS

Bosnian war troubling for Clinton

Terence Hunt
 Associated Press

WASHINGTON — Inexperienced in foreign affairs and facing what could be a no-win decision, President Clinton is being tugged in opposite directions as he weighs bombing strikes and the lifting of an international arms embargo in Bosnia.

He's hardly the only one who's torn.

Congress is divided between fears of a new Vietnam quagmire and the horror of "ethnic cleansing" of Bosnian Muslims by Serbs.

Pentagon leaders are split over whether air strikes will stop the Serbs' aggression or simply inflame them.

And, allies are reluctant to take tougher steps, fearing a widening of the war and a backlash against British, French and other forces taking part in U.N. relief operations.

"Everybody agrees that there is no clear, good course of action," White House press secretary Dee Dee Myers said Thursday. "There are costs and risks with every decision."

However, she said, "The one thing

that's clear is the president firmly believes we must take more action to stop ethnic cleansing (the systematic elimination of Bosnian Muslims and Croats) and to stop Serbian aggression in Bosnia."

The decision rests with Clinton, who is far more comfortable grappling with problems at home than with crises overseas.

"The only thing the president has ruled out is ground forces at this time," White House communications director George Stephanopoulos said.

OFFICIALS SEEK INPUT

Bicycle plan may alleviate problems

The plan will address such problems as inadequate parking areas as well as congestion.

Jon Yates
 The Daily Iowan

If you have a bicycle and you're having a problem parking it on campus, you're not alone.

Addressing what they view as a "bicycle rack problem" on the UI campus, UI officials announced Thursday that they will be working on a "bicycle plan" for the UI campus, and they're looking for input from members of the Iowa City community.

The plan, which will address such problems as inadequate parking areas on the UI campus, as well as congestion caused by bicyclists on UI sidewalks, is beginning to take shape this week, and should be completed this fall.

According to Larry Wilson, UI associate director of planning and administrative services, the plan has two main thrusts: First, to make conditions better for those who are currently riding their bikes to campus and, second, to encourage others to start riding.

"We're trying to increase bicycle use because we think it's important to the campus, but we're asking pedestrians and motorists what they think, too, because we're really trying to address the concerns of the UI community," Wilson said. "We hear all kinds of complaints from all sorts of sources."

To rectify the problem, the UI has enlisted the use of a consulting firm, Steve Clark Associates, Ltd. of Cushing, Wis., to assess the UI campus and develop a plan to make the campus more accessible to cyclists.

The UI is also handing out questionnaires to bicyclists, motorists and pedestrians and asking them to return the cards with their ideas.

Wilson said the biggest problem with bicycles lies in the Pentacrest area, where a lack of bike racks means cyclists often have to lock their bikes to trees and posts. Another problem is that many of the racks that are on the UI campus were made for chain locks, not the kryptonite, U-shaped locks that most cyclists use today.

Wilson said it will cost the UI about $14,000 to formulate a plan for the campus, with private donations to the university covering the cost.

Eric Anderson, a member of the three-man consulting team set up to develop the plan, said the UI may opt to make certain parts of the campus, like the Pentacrest, off-limits to bicycles. That option, though, is way down on the list.

"What we want to do is reach some kind of consensus on these issues," he said. "We'll look at such things as mitigating conflicts between pedestrians and bicyclists. We're really relying on the community to come up with some ideas."

A public meeting will be held at 7 p.m. Monday in room 100 of Phillips Hall to discuss bicycling on the UI campus.

WARM WEATHER INCREASES CITATIONS

Residents risk tickets if neighbors bothered

Terry Collins
The Daily Iowan

As the weather heats up, so do the number of disorderly houses that are reported to the Iowa City police as UI students open their homes to friends for fun and festivities.

However, many neighbors do not agree with such conduct and react by calling for intervention.

"Normally for this time of the year people are usually out and about looking for something to do," said Capt. Pat Hardney of the Iowa City Police Department. "Most wind up hearing music from the open windows at a house and figure it is a party and that's how it starts."

Hardney also said that the number of "keeping a disorderly house" charges double during the warm months of the year, but only half the violators are given citations.

UI student Patrick Moorhead, who was given a citation last weekend for having his stereo turned up too loud, said that it was no big deal until he thought about the costs involved.

"I wasn't mad initially," he said. "I assume one of the neighbors called me and my roommates in to the police. For one thing, the walls in our apartment are too thin."

Moorhead also stated that the time the police arrived may have had something to do with the citation as they showed up to his apartment around 5 a.m.

"On weekends, we play a lot of music to let off some steam," he said. "I'm going to get fined and I don't have any money."

For those receiving "keeping a disorderly house" charges, there is usually a penalty of $75.

"It's a hassle, especially as finals are approaching," Moorhead said.

Hardney said, "We usually try to give them a warning the first time, especially with a party, tell them to turn the noise down. But if more complaints come, we have to shut it down."

That was not the case, according to UI student Greg McMullen, who said that he and his roommates were charged with keeping a disorderly house for no reason.

McMullen said that the police came at 2 a.m. last Saturday because he and his roommates were having a gathering on his front porch.

"The cops came and gave us an ultimatum, to get everyone out or get a ticket," he said. "We yelled that the party was over, and everybody started to leave."

McMullen said that everybody was leaving the party. But as a friend of his, who was among the last to go, was shaking his roommate's hand saying good-bye, a police officer grabbed them both.

"The cop grabbed my roommate and friend all for standing on our front porch, that's what really stinks," he said. "We don't think disorderly house is shaking someone's hands when leaving."

McMullen said that the police think they can write a lot of tickets that are misinterpretations of a statute.

"The issue is that cops think it is implied that we won't take any action and get a lawyer," he said.

GOOD EXPERIENCE FOR MEMBERS

CSA to assist students with placement process

Jude Sunderbruch
Business Editor

Helping students navigate their way through the complicated job-search process is the goal of a relatively new student organization on the UI campus, Career Service Ambassadors.

Founded in 1991 with the help of a grant from Baxter Healthcare, CSA plays an active role in the placement process at the UI, according to Jill Arnold, a UI senior and member of the organization's board of directors.

"We are basically there to walk them through the steps," she said. CSA members spend much of their time assisting other students who have just begun looking for jobs, according to CSA board member Melissa Capo.

"We let them know about the placement services at the UI," she said. "It can be pretty confusing and hectic."

Students who want to participate in on-campus interviewing at the UI are required to register beforehand, a process that takes time and can be hard to understand at first, Arnold said.

Consequently, CSA tries to make students' introduction to the sys-

ISU students to protest housing restrictions

Associated Press

AMES — Iowa State students are planning a protest today to complain about a university decision denying family housing to couples of the same sex.

University President Martin Jischke this week said because of a shortage of family housing, ISU will continue to offer family housing only to married couples or single parents.

Students plan a noon march to Beardshear Hall, where the president has his office, according to a news release from the ISU Lesbian-Gay-Bisexual Alliance.

ISU's department of residence drafted a proposal expanding eligibility for family housing to couples of the same sex who met certain requirements.

tem as painless as possible.

"We help students through the on-campus registration process," Capo said.

Sarah Kobliska, a graduate assistant in counselor education who is CSA's adviser, explained that many students who join the organization have firsthand experience in looking for post-graduation employment.

"Most of the students who volunteer to be peer assistants are already registered for on-campus interviewing," she said.

Kobliska added that once students join CSA, they receive additional training so they'll be able to answer a wide variety of job search-related questions.

If they don't know the answer themselves, CSA members often know either who to ask or where to look for more information, according to Capo.

"We sort of let them know where they can go for help," she said.

CSA members also get experience with the other side of the job placement equation by serving as greeters for employers who are interviewing on campus.

According to CSA member Todd Hutchison, meeting with company representatives when they first arrive at the UI has been a great experience for him.

"I've gotten to meet a whole lot of employers and develop my presentation skills," he said.

In addition to helping others at the UI, CSA members also receive opportunities to head off-campus and examine potential career paths.

This spring, CSA took a trip to Des Moines for a job fair and to participate in a job-shadowing program held in conjunction with the Des Moines chamber of commerce.

Arnold, one of the event's principal organizers, said the trip afforded students the opportunity to learn what a job in their chosen field is really like.

"The purpose of the trip wasn't so much to get a job as to make contacts for future reference," she said.

Once she and other CSA members enter the workforce, Capo is convinced the time she has put into the organization will pay off.

"I've learned about how to plan and present projects," she said. "I've just gained a lot of technical skills I'll be using in a job."

Novelist visits UI to discuss book on Elvis

Dave Strahan
The Daily Iowan

With a body of eclectic work that spans both time and place, renowned novelist Laura Kalpakian considers herself one of the freest people on earth.

In this spirit, Kalpakian will visit Iowa for the first time today. She plans to speak to two UI classes during the day and give an on-campus reading at night.

At 11:30 a.m., Kalpakian will speak to Professor Peter Nazareth's "Elvis as Anthology" class in room 109 of the English-Philosophy Building. The popular Elvis course examines Presley, his music and those who influenced him, and includes Kalpakian's latest novel "Graced Land" on its reading list. Nazareth said the public is welcome to attend.

The main character in "Graced Land" is a young social worker named Emily, who has an obsessive Elvis fan as a client. Joyce is a fan by anyone's standards. She has an Elvis shrine, maintains her mood with "Elvis pills," and spends her time purchasing and mending clothes for the needy.

At one point in the novel, Joyce tells Emily that her desire is to carry on Elvis' work. "You want to be a rock 'n' roll star?" Emily asks. "That wasn't his work," Joyce said. "That was his job."

"Graced Land" illustrates the relationship between Emily and Joyce, and won the Pacific Northwest Booksellers Award for Excellence in 1993.

Although it is fiction, Kalpakian said her novel is based in truth. The idea grew from repeatedly passing an Elvis shrine when she lived in California in 1983.

"The shrine, I always thought, was really tacky," she said. "But there was something touching about it. I knew that a woman and her two daughters must live there."

Kalpakian was able to put the

shrine out of her mind when she moved, but said it resurfaced years later, while she was reminiscing with her mother in 1990. This time, she could not forget the shrine. The vision was too powerful.

"Finally the whole weight was so intense I had to put the other book I was working on away," she said.

Surprisingly, Kalpakian was not an Elvis fan when she began the book. That, she said, has changed.

"In the course of writing the book I learned a lot about Elvis and became a passionate fan," she said. Still, the book is not lacking the spirit of The King.

"I wrote the book to his music," Kalpakian said. "I listened to everything: early stuff, movie stuff, even gospel. His music is in that book."

"Graced Land" was the basis of the recent television movie, "The Woman Who Loved Elvis." The film was shot in Ottumwa, Iowa, and starred Tom and Roseanne Arnold.

At 2:30 p.m., Kalpakian will speak to Nazareth's English class, "Conrad and His Descendants," in room 218 EPB. The course focuses on the selected works of Joseph Conrad and draws upon Kalpakian's book "Dark Continent." The public is welcome to attend this class also.

Kalpakian said she did not intentionally write "Dark Continent" with Conrad in mind.

One of the most popular RiverFest events won't be on the river this year.

High waters have forced Iowa City's second annual Dragon Boat Races off the Iowa River, but race organizers are optimistic the event will still create the same fervor and excitement at its new location, Lake Macbride.

"We hated to move it, because it's a part of RiverFest and a lot of people were looking forward to watching it," said Dennis Corwin, president of the Coralville Morning Optimists, the group that is organizing the event. "Once we found out that the army corps of engineers wasn't going to lower the

Smith, who brought dragon boating to the United States eight years after searching for a way to increase participation in the Mississippi Annual Down River Adventure by Canoe race, a boating event similar to Iowa's RAGBRAI.

A friend in Taipei told her she might be interested in dragon boating, a popular sport in China, but one Smith had never heard of.

"She sent me a photo of a boat and I was awestruck," Smith said. "It was a very beautiful boat with a big dragon's head and a fiery mane. I decided right then that I was going to Taipei to be in one of these dragon boat races."

After persuading 25 people to plop down $1,700 apiece to make the trip with her, Smith and friends made the trip and became hooked on dragon boating. Striking a deal with the Taiwan Visitors' Association, Smith was able to secure a wooden dragon boat worth $20,000 in exchange for her guarantee that she would bring an American team to compete in an annual Taiwan dragon boat festival every year for three years.

The boat was sent to the United States and eight years later, the American Dragon Boat Association now has eight boats and races in five states.

Now, the dragon boats have come to Iowa City. According to Neil Larew, chairman of the Iowa City dragon boat race, the key to winning is not being big and strong, but working together as a team.

"The big thing is synchronization of the team," he said. "The people who are grunting and chanting sometimes do better because they're having fun and they're out there to win. The teams that aren't grunting and chanting may not be into it."

Dragon boating, a popular sport in China, has become a RiverFest tradition. This year, due to flooding on the Iowa River, the event has been moved to Lake Macbride.

KIDS BENEFIT

Food vendors doubling as fund-raisers

Susan Kreimer
The Daily Iowan

A handful of local food vendors will tantalize the taste buds of those coming out to Hubbard Park this Sunday for the 10th annual "Taste of Iowa City," which will benefit the local Ronald McDonald House.

This year a total of 21 establishments will offer items from their menus, compared to the average of 15 in previous years, according to UI sophomore Justin Schall, director of the event and a member of Acacia International Fraternity, which has sponsored it for 10 years.

Schall said vendors pay an $85 entry fee and have agreed to donate 50 percent of their proceeds from the event to the Ronald McDonald House, which provides low-cost housing to families of children being treated at the UI Hospitals and Clinics and Mery Hospital.

Two local bands will offer live entertainment. Jasmine, a five-piece contemporary band, is scheduled to kick off the event between 11:30 a.m. and 12:30 p.m. Murphy Sound will set up the sound and staging for a disc jockey to play tunes in the afternoon. The Shy Boys will hit the stage between 2 and 3 p.m., and perform until 5:30 p.m.

In past years, the Taste of Iowa City has raised an average of $10,000, and in 1990 it brought in over $14,000. This year the event may collect anywhere from $15,000 to $20,000, of which $3,000 to $7,000 will go to the Ronald McDonald House.

"The key factor in how much money is going to be raised is the weather," Schall said.

Randy Larson, the new co-owner of The Airliner, said he is looking forward to partaking in the event. "We're contributing to a good cause, having a nice day in the sun and showing people what we have."

The event, which will take place this Saturday and Sunday, will involve 15 teams of rowers competing in 40-foot fiberglass boats, elaborately decorated to resemble dragons.

The history of dragon boating dates back almost 3,000 years, but for those competing this weekend, all that will matter is the here and now.

"Dragon boat racing is really contagious," said Sue Smith, president of the American Dragon Boat Association. "There's nothing like this sport for bringing people together."

With 20 teammates rowing in sync, dragon boating requires both intense concentration and a concerted team effort. For Smith, the combination creates a high that is unparalleled in other sports.

. . . and in ancient Chinese fairy tale about popular suicidal poet

Jon Yates
The Daily Iowan

When the dragon boats hit the water at Lake Macbride this weekend, they'll be towing almost 3,000 years of history behind them.

Long, long ago in a country far, far away (no, this isn't Star Wars) there lived a wicked emperor who had a friend named Chu Yuan.

Now, Chu Yuan lived in a country called China, and in China there was a river called the MiLo (note: this is what we in the journalistic trade like to call foreshadowing).

Anyway, Chu Yuan, a scholar, statesman, poet and all-around good guy, was banned from the kingdom by the emperor after a nasty, deceitful colleague began spreading disgusting rumors about him.

This made Chu Yuan very sad.

So, after wandering the countryside despondently for years, Chu Yuan found himself one day along the banks of the mighty MiLo. Feeling particularly glum that day, Chu Yuan clasped a large stone to his chest and flung himself into the river.

He died.

But, while this may seem like a good place to end the story, it really isn't. You see, Chu Yuan was very, very popular with his countrymen (something like Arsenio) and when the local fishermen found out he had jumped in the river, they raced out in their boats to recover his body before it was devoured by the fish.

Banging pans and gongs to scare the fish away, the fishermen searched and searched for Chu Yuan, but were unable to find him (stick with me, here, we're getting to the good part).

Bummed by his death, Chu Yuan's countrymen began to gather every year and hold a festival to honor him. After several years, they began racing in boats shaped like dragons to symbolize the power of the emperor, and the dragon boat was born.

Today, dragon boating is the single most popular sport in China, and growing quickly in popularity in the United States.

POPULATION NEEDS COMMON FOCUS

Asian-American women's support group will be meeting place, discussion forum

Sara Epstein
The Daily Iowan

A UI graduate student has taken it upon herself to create a new support group for Asian-American women.

Amy Dorin came to the UI last fall from Minneapolis and was unable to find a single organization which specifically catered to the needs of Asian-American women.

"I thought there was a need for such a group, and for one of my classes I needed to develop a program," she said.

The support group will discuss issues such as identity, acculturation, intercultural dating and being Asian-American in Iowa City and greater Iowa. It will also provide a meeting place for Asian-Americans to meet other Asian-Americans.

Dorin said she thinks it's been difficult to access the Asian-American population in Iowa City because it is really dispersed.

"It's going to help Asian-American women with the myriad of problems they deal with when living in another culture..."

Kathleen Staley,
psychologist

"There doesn't seem to be a common focus for Asian-Americans to get together, except for churches, and also I want this group to focus on women's issues," she explained. "The needs of Asian-American women are very different from those of Asian-American men as far as sex roles and expectations."

Dorin said many Asian-American women come to this community when their husbands get jobs here. "The husbands already have an environment where they have a purpose," she said. "This will provide a place to explore these issues, essentially."

Kathleen Staley, senior staff psychologist at UI Counseling Services, is supervising Dorin's project.

"I think it's a very worthwhile and interesting endeavor," Staley said. "It's going to help Asian-American women with the myriad of problems they deal with when living in another culture, but they will also discover the joys and celebrations, the richness, of combining two cultures."

There will be an organizational meeting tonight at 5:30 at the Wesley Foundation, 120 N. Dubuque St. Dorin said she is hoping the group will continue to meet once a month.

Crop Walk to help alleviate hunger

Lesley Kennedy
The Daily Iowan

The days at the end of the month can be the longest — and the hungriest for millions of elderly, disabled or disadvantaged people in the United States.

Close to 250 people in Iowa City will help to alleviate that hunger this Sunday when they participate in the fourth annual Crop Walk to raise money for world hunger problems.

The community walk-a-thon, which has raised a total of $25,366 in the last three years, will be held at 1:30 p.m. starting at the Iowa City Recreation Center.

"This is a really fun event," organizer Jen Weeber said. "It's good to learn about hunger and to be able to help people out."

Weeber said 25 percent of the money gained through the walk goes to the Johnson County Crisis Center Food Bank, and the remaining 75 percent is distributed globally to meet hunger needs.

Ellen McCabe, director of the center, said support from the Crop Walk is vital to the center in its effort to end hunger at the local level.

"We give food to 300 households each week," McCabe said. "We need donated food and money to purchase certain types of food."

McCabe said the contributions the center receives from the walk help a lot.

"It is very valuable to concentrate on hunger-related issues through events like the Crop Walk," she said. "It serves as a reminder to ourselves that people are struggling right here in our area."

In addition to the donations, the 5K or 10K walk will also be an educational experience.

"Throughout the walk there will be different check-points dealing with local, national and international hunger issues," Weeber said. "We hope to have some fun with that and spread some knowledge."

A committee has been working with churches and civic and student organizations to get people involved in the event, she said.

"Someone in a group or organization gets their members to walk and they get pledges," she said. "Our main goal is to raise money but we also want to educate the walkers."

Weeber said most of the money goes to Church World Service unless donors specify their gifts to other approved hunger-fighting agencies.

Riverbank Art Fair to feature wide variety of crafts

Molly Spann
The Daily Iowan

Handcrafted jewelry, sculpture, pottery and stained glass will be some of the items sold by artisans from around the Midwest at the Riverbank Art Fair this weekend.

Although it is separate, the art fair is being held in conjunction with this weekend's RiverFest activities, UI Arts and Crafts Center Coordinator Blanca Bailey said.

"It's really great to come out and see all of the things people make," she said. "We usually have quite a crowd."

Bailey said that 77 people from Illinois, Wisconsin, Minnesota and Iowa will be selling items on the riverbank behind the Union.

Although it is larger in the spring, the riverbank fair also takes place in the fall. This is the 11th year the event has been held.

In addition to the craft tables, the fair will offer two special events.

A chess exhibition game will be held on Saturday from 11 a.m. to 4 p.m. Anyone interested can challenge Iowa State chess champion Kevin Burnett and Danish champion Martin Olesen, who will both play blindfolded.

On Sunday a painting table will be set up for children. Tie-dyeing and face painting will also be offered.

The fair will last from 10 a.m. to 5 p.m.

CORRECTION

The story titled "Teachers' English problematic for 90 percent of UI students, says poll" in the Thursday, April 29 edition of The Daily Iowan erroneously reported that a poll showed 90 percent of UI students have had problems understanding an instructor's English in at least one course. The poll actually showed that the number is 60.5 percent, with a 5.5 percent sample error.

Honors students give presentations; research projects cover array of topics

Chris Pothoven
The Daily Iowan

For many students, simply completing the normal assignments, experiments, projects and tests which make up a normal college career can be a daunting task. For others, however, this task is not. They choose to also complete honors research projects.

As a part of Honors Week at the UI, 11 of these student researchers have been making their presentations at the Shambaugh Honors House.

Most of these projects are done to partially fulfill the requirements for graduating with an honors degree, according to Honors Program Associate Director Sandra Barkan, who said close to 300 UI students graduate with honors each year.

Projects cover a wide variety of topics, she said. This year's presentations included such topics as senior Jeremy Freese's "Selected Social Dynamics of Virtual Communities," which dealt with electronic bulletin boards and users, senior Courtney Jenkins' "An Emerging Face: Creation of Dialogue by Feminists and Prostitutes During the Progressive Era, 1970s and 1980s," and senior Jane Sereg's project, which examined cockroaches.

"I'm extremely impressed with what our students have come up with in their projects," Barkan said.

UI senior Pat Burnett, a biochemistry and biology major who presented a project on "Transcriptional Control of the Pleiotropic Drug Resistance Gene PDR 5," said he got started about two years ago as a result of his interest in the research aspect of medicine.

"I've found that being involved in research helps me with my classes," said Burnett, who will be going on to Johns Hopkins Medical School. "At first I worried that it would take too much time and affect my performance, but I've learned so much in my research that it makes my classes seem almost simplistic sometimes."

Barkan said the honors projects can be valuable for students, especially those going on to graduate school.

"So often the university is criticized for spending too much time on research, but we find students who participate in research with faculty members have benefited enormously," she said. "University of Iowa faculty members are great about working with students on research projects. There is a tremendous amount of one-on-one attention and interaction available for students who seek that attention."

Drug testing proposal approved by House; Marshalltown industry pleased with results

Mike Glover
Associated Press

DES MOINES — The House on Thursday approved a compromise plan giving businesses new authority to test workers for drug use.

"This achieves what we've been trying to do, have a more safe workplace and a drug-free work place," said Rep. David Millage, R-Bettendorf, main supporter of the measure.

The drug testing proposal was pushed hard by business groups and is one of Gov. Terry Branstad's top two economic development priorities.

And Lennox Industries, which has from Marshalltown to Ohio, has sought more authority to test workers for drugs.

Businesses can now test workers for drugs only if they have reason to think drugs are being used.

The bill approved Thursday allows a limited use of drug tests before workers are hired and after they finish substance abuse treatment. In addition, workers could be tested after a workplace accident, if there's reason to believe that a worker was involved.

While the bill is more limited than initially proposed, Lennox endorsed the plan.

A handful of critics continued to complain that the state already has a drug-testing law that works.

SESSION SCHEDULED TO END

Compromise on budget still not reached

Mike Glover
Associated Press

DES MOINES — Legislators searched Thursday for a budget compromise to end this year's session but instead found differences widening.

One tentative agreement collapsed when the Senate rejected a House-passed plan to use about $5 million in special funds to balance the budget.

That undermined compromises on a $704 million education spending plan and sent Republicans and Democrats back to the bargaining table.

"I think we could have finished up today if the wheels hadn't fallen off that cart," said Rep. Ron Corbett, R-Cedar Rapids, head of the House Appropriations Committee.

"We go through this every year. It's no big deal," said Sen. Jim Lind, R-Waterloo.

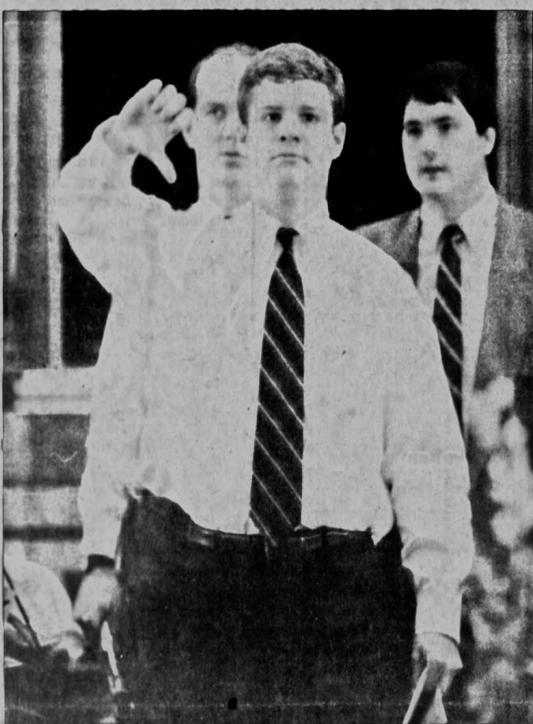

This year's Legislature is scheduled to end today, but many issues remained unresolved Thursday.

Legislators must approve four spending bills to complete the $3.6 billion state budget and approve a $25 million pay increase for state workers.

Linked to the budget issues were lighter gambling restrictions, tax breaks for businesses and expanded workplace drug testing.

The House and Senate also are supporting different versions of proposals to pay for the state's fiber-optic communications system.

There was little public action Thursday, as some legislators met

Associated Press

Rep. Chuck Larson, R-Cedar Rapids, votes no on an amendment to a bill this week on the floor of the Iowa House in Des Moines.

privately while others milled about and took a long lunch.

The Senate met briefly to deal with the special funds, something that generates little public attention but intense fighting at the Statehouse.

There are 27 funds, mainly from industries regulated by the state, and the House approved a bill putting those funds in the general state budget, using $5 million from them to balance the budget.

The Senate rejected that. "We're going to shut down, whether we get it done by Saturday is another thing," House Majority Leader Brent Siegrist, R-Council Bluffs, said. "If we have to come back next week to make better decisions, we will."

Reaching compromises has been difficult all session and didn't get any easier this week.

Tax portion of bill not supported

The investment tax credit of Clinton's job-creation bill has not been well received.

Jim Luther
Associated Press
WASHINGTON — The tax portion of President Clinton's job-creation bill appears headed for the same fate as his emergency spending plan.

Democrats on the House Ways and Means Committee, which will begin work next week on the president's tax program, told Clinton on Thursday that his proposed investment tax credit is in deep trouble. The same message was spelled out at a hearing before the Senate Finance Committee.

"I think the president realizes there are many members who are concerned with the investment tax credit," Rep. Dan Rostenkowski, D-Ill., chairman of the Ways and Means Committee, told reporters after the session at the White House.

"They don't see anybody enthusiastically supporting it. No cheerleaders out there," Rostenkowski said.

Nevertheless, a White House official said, Clinton is not giving up on the credit. "He would like to go forward on that," spokesman George Stephanopoulos said.

"It almost looks like we are in a position of forcing them (businesses) to take it," Sen. John Breaux, D-La., said at the Finance Committee hearing. He recommended that Congress save the $28 billion the credit would cost over five years and use the money to lessen the new tax that Clinton wants to impose on most uses of energy.

No member of the Finance Committee offered to support the credit. And even witnesses representing businesses were at best lukewarm toward the proposal.

"I like it all the less now," after hearing details, said Sen. Bob Packwood of Oregon, senior Republican on the panel.

"It will actually harm our economy," protested Sen. Bill Bradley, D-N.J.

Clinton called for the investment credit and $15 billion in emergency federal spending to spur the economy to create jobs. The spending plan was killed by a Republican filibuster in the Senate.

Rostenkowski's committee is considering the investment credit along with $265 billion worth of tax increases that Clinton has proposed for deficit reduction. Rostenkowski predicted Clinton will have to accept some modifications.

Cologne may have saved cult kids

Ken Sonobe believes his grandchildren were allowed to leave the Waco cult compound during the standoff because of a gift he had given to David Koresh.

Jaime Aron
Associated Press

WACO, Texas — Ken Sonobe believes the bottle of cologne he gave David Koresh in January saved the lives of his two young granddaughters.

The girls were inside the Branch Davidian compound Feb. 28 when a deadly gun battle broke out between members of the religious cult and federal agents, starting a 51-day siege.

Within hours, Angelica Sonobe, 6, and her 3-year-old sister, Crystal, became the first of 21 children allowed to leave.

When the standoff came to a fiery end April 19, scores of cult members were killed, including the girls' parents and an estimated 17 young children.

The sisters appear to be adjusting well to their new life.

"We don't ask them too much," Sonobe said. "But somehow we mentioned going back to Texas and they said 'Don't send us back.' I think what has happened is that they don't want to go back to the same life."

Sonobe, 69, and his wife, Molly, 60, watched television coverage of the raid from their home outside Honolulu about a month after they traveled to Waco for three days to meet their granddaughters for the first time. Now, the girls' safety is foremost for them.

"When the shootout began, we said, 'Boy, what are they going to do with the children?'" Sonobe said in a telephone interview from home.

State child-welfare authorities contacted the Sonobes soon after taking custody of the girls. Their father, Scott Sonobe, placed a note inside Angelica's coat pocket with the grandparents' names and phone number.

Sonobe often wonders why his granddaughters came out first. Each time, he thinks back to the bottle of cologne he gave Koresh and two T-shirts he sent the religious zealot's children during his visit to Waco.

"I think maybe because I treated him good he thought of us in return," Sonobe said. "That's the only reason I can think of why they came out so early."

Sonobe, a retired building inspector, said the girls are adjusting well, away from the only home they ever knew, apart from their friends and without their parents.

"They know more or less why they came with us. They know about the shootout. I don't think I was that intelligent at their age," Sonobe said.

The girls occasionally asked about their former playmates and other things related to the cult. Sonobe responds delicately. A counselor also works with the children once a week to help them cope with the trauma, he said.

"They say once in a while that they miss Momma and Daddy," Sonobe said. "I told them we can't see them anymore. I tried to tell them they died in a fire, but all I can say is that I'll explain it later, when they get older.

"They don't understand exactly what happened, but I think they know what it means," he said.

While remaining stoic for the children, Sonobe is hiding the pain of the loss of his son, the youngest of his two children, and his daughter-in-law, Floracita, 34.

Scott Sonobe, 35, met Koresh in Hawaii and followed him to California. Ken Sonobe visited his son about once a year, but the trips ceased when Scott moved to Waco. That is, until January, when Scott and his wife brought the children around to the grandparents' Waco hotel, returning to the compound at night.

"That vacation was a blessing," Sonobe said.

Sonobe said he had no interest in visiting the compound back then, but sent the gifts to Koresh and Koresh's children through Scott as a friendly gesture toward the man his son revered.

"I met him once in Hawaii," Sonobe said of Koresh. "It was just a 15- or 20-minute conversation. I thought he was just another guy."

With the girls scampering through the Sonobe's home these days, life is not the same.

There are new worries and other hassles, such as tending to the legal details of seeking permanent custody of the girls and trying to establish medical records, but Sonobe says it's all worth the effort.

"We're really running now," he said. "We're starting life new again. It keeps us hopping. They make us feel young. I thank the good Lord for them. They're beautiful girls. It's part of my son in there."

AMMAN, Jordan — King Hussein, who has long advocated a negotiated settlement of the Israeli conflict, warned Thursday that the U.S.-sponsored initiative under way in Washington is "last chance" for peace.

Hussein stressed in an interview with The Associated Press that a growing number of both sides realize peace is longer an option, but an impasse to avoid perpetual conflict in the region.

"I believe it to be the last chance," he said. The 57-year-old monarch has been at the forefront of efforts for more than two decades to bring peace to the Middle East since 1948.

Hussein said he feels encouraged by signs of progress in the most sustained peace talks in the Middle East since 1948. The monarch was interviewed three days before he will return to the throne, 40 years on the throne, 40 years during which he has survived an assassination attempt.

SAN JOSE, Costa Rica — A court freed 18 Supreme Court judges and five assistants Thursday in a four-day standoff, then captured by police as they fled the airport, officials said.

"All of the kidnapers have been arrested," President Rafael Calderón said in a live TV broadcast.

Security Minister Luis Frazier said he was "98 percent sure" that five gunmen, all Costa Ricans, acted alone. Earlier, government officials said four gunmen involved in the siege had been freed from the Supreme Court building.

There were no reports of deaths and Fishman said police fired one shot in the arrests near José's international airport.

The capture of the gunmen brought a dramatic end to Costa Rica's third hostage ordeal in months.

The siege began Monday when gunmen burst into the Supreme Court building. Over the next days, they released one just for health reasons, then two others hours at a time as apparent negotiations with authorities.

The gunmen had demanded $1 million — a demand they lowered to $8 million — the release of prisoners and safe passage to Brazil, which has no extradition treaty with Costa Rica.

Calderón late Wednesday vowed that Costa Ricans would pay "one single cent" in ransom. But Fishman said families of hostages had raised $11 million, which was delivered to his office given to the kidnapers. It appeared to be the motive for the kidnappings.

Fishman said unidentified "agents" from the United States and Colombia assisted Costa Rican police in the operation.

BALANCE SOUGHT IN MIDDLE EAST

King Hussein calls talks 'last chance' for peace

Ed Blum
Associated Press

AMMAN, Jordan — King Hussein, who has long advocated a negotiated settlement of the Arab-Israeli conflict, warned Thursday that the U.S.-sponsored initiative underway in Washington is "the last chance" for peace.

Hussein stressed in an exclusive interview with The Associated Press that a growing number on both sides realize peace is no longer an option, but an imperative to avoid perpetual conflict in the region.

"I believe it to be the last chance," said the 57-year-old monarch, who has been at the forefront of peace efforts for more than two decades.

Hussein said he feels encouraged amid signs of progress in the talks, the most sustained peace initiative in the Middle East since 1948.

The monarch was interviewed three days before he will mark 40 years on the throne, 40 years during which he has survived coup and assassination attempts and wars.

Criticizing Arab and Israeli leaders who have used the 45-year-old Middle East conflict for their own ends, Hussein stressed that a peace settlement would remove the ladder to power that many have used in the past and may use again if stability is not restored.

The ninth round of the peace talks, which began in October 1991, opened Tuesday in Washington after a four-month breakdown triggered by Israel's expulsion in December of more than 400 Palestinian Islamic fundamentalists.

Under U.S. pressure, the Israelis have made concessions to persuade reluctant Palestinians to return to the negotiating table.

These include the phased repatriation of hundreds of Palestinians to the occupied West Bank — which Israel captured from Jordan in the 1967 Mideast war — and the Gaza Strip.

The first batch of returnees are expected to go home across the Jordan River on Friday. Most have lived in Jordan since they were expelled, some for a quarter-century.

Looking past the peace process, Hussein warned there are other major problems facing the region, which unless addressed soon could trigger new convulsions in the region.

They include a burgeoning Arab population, inadequate food production, widespread poverty and a potentially explosive imbalance between rich and poor.

cancer — were added. So was a dip in the level of the body's master immune cells, called CD4s, to 200 per cubic millimeter, or one-fifth the level of a healthy person.

Between Jan. 1 and March 31, 35,779 new AIDS cases were diagnosed nationwide, a 204 percent increase from the 11,770 new cases during the same period in 1992 under the old definition, the CDC reported. Last year, under the narrower definition, cases increased about 10 percent every three months.

Sixty percent of this year's increase, or 21,582 cases, was based solely on the new definition — a surge the CDC expected. These are people long infected with HIV who were never considered AIDS cases because of the definition's technicalities.

Ward attributed some of this year's extra increase to the publicity surrounding the new AIDS definition, which may have made doctors more aware of the indicator diseases and prompted them to test more patients.

But it's also probably due to patients succumbing to AIDS because AZT and other anti-viral medications work only for a few years, Williams said.

The AIDS Action Council also said some of the surge may have resulted from an attempt by cities to get more funding for AIDS prevention. The first of the year is when cities report their eligibility for federal AIDS funds under the Ryan White CARE Act, which disburses money according to how many cases each city has.

The CDC had predicted 90,000 new AIDS cases will be diagnosed in 1993, 40,000 of them from the new definition. The agency's latest report did not revise that projection.

Since 1981, 289,320 AIDS cases have been reported in the United States. The CDC estimates 1 million people are infected with HIV.

INTERVENTION

day with the Pentagon's Joint Chiefs of Staff, Defense Secretary Les Aspin and Secretary of State Warren Christopher. Powell said later it was "a full discussion of a wide range of military options as well as consideration of the current diplomatic situation. We haven't ruled anything off the table" other than the use of ground forces.

Christopher said the resumption of international peace talks on Bosnia will not affect Clinton's plans for tougher action against the Serbs.

"It does not change our plans at all," Christopher said. "The president's decision-making process is on track, it will go forward as it was intended to go forward. ... What we need from the Serbs, both the Bosnian Serbs and the Serbs in Serbia, is deeds not words."

On Saturday, Clinton will confer with all his foreign policy and national security advisers in what may be the final decision-making meeting.

Whatever he decides will be unpopular with some.

"Five-hundred-and-thirty-five members of Congress have almost 535 different ideas of what should be done because it is that frustrating and that complex," Sen. Patrick Leahy, D-Vt., said.

Former Defense Secretary Dick Cheney, appearing on NBC's "Today" show, said, "Lifting the arms embargo, I would support. I think that makes sense. Selective air strikes — I haven't heard yet a good rationale for how that's going to work. I think it'll be far tougher to take out those artillery sites than some think."

And British diplomat David Owen, who has been trying in vain to arrange a peace settlement, said he hoped Clinton would not take forceful action against the Serbs.

"If he does, he will put the United States on the side of the Muslims. He will become effectively identified with one of the combatants in the civil war," Owen said on the CBS program, "This Morning."

Rep. Ike Skelton, D-Mo., chairman of the House Armed Services subcommittee on military personnel, sent Clinton a letter urging him not to use military force.

"There is little the United States can do militarily to end the conflict that would not entail a willingness to commit the American people to a Vietnam-size force," said Skelton.

Although polls show that a majority of Americans oppose steps such as allied strikes, Clinton has decided that the United States should lead the way with tougher steps.

Stephanopoulos said Clinton would go before the American people at an unspecified date to explain "what he wants to do and how he wants to do it."

"One of the lessons obviously of Vietnam and other conflicts is that you need the sustained support of the American people in order to have a successful venture," Stephanopoulos said.

Clinton is believed likely to approve the bombing of Serb artillery sites, the lifting of an international arms embargo against heavily outgunned Muslims or the creation of "safe" enclaves.

Costa Rica hostage standoff ends; gunmen apprehended

Joseph B. Frazier
Associated Press

SAN JOSE, Costa Rica — Gunmen freed 18 Supreme Court justices and five assistants Thursday after a four-day standoff, then were captured by police as they fled to the airport, officials said.

"All of the kidnapers have been arrested," President Rafael Angel Calderón said in a live TV broadcast.

Security Minister Luis Fishman said he was "98 percent sure" the five gunmen, all Costa Ricans, had acted alone. Earlier, government officials said four gunmen were involved in the siege in the Supreme Court building.

There were no reports of injuries and Fishman said police fired only one shot in the arrests near San Jose's international airport.

The capture of the gunmen brought a dramatic end to Costa Rica's third hostage ordeal in nine months.

The siege began Monday when gunmen burst into the Supreme Court building. Over the next two days, they released one justice for health reasons, then two others for hours at a time as apparent liaisons with authorities.

The gunmen had demanded $20 million — a demand they later lowered to $8 million — the release of prisoners and safe passage to Brazil, which has no extradition treaty with Costa Rica.

Calderón late Wednesday had vowed that Costa Rica wouldn't pay "one single cent" in ransom.

But Fishman said families of the hostages had raised $150,000 which was delivered to his office to be given to the kidnapers. Money appeared to be the motive for the kidnappings.

Fishman said unidentified "technicians" from the United States and Colombia assisted Costa Rican police in the operation.

The magistrates showed up unharmed in the Ministry of Public Security for emotional reunions with loved ones.

The government had speculated the kidnapers had ties to the Colombian drug Mafia, but later identified two of the four as Costa Rican brothers, Gilberto Fallas, 30, and Guillermo Fallas, 29, both former Justice Department employees.

The kidnapers set a Wednesday deadline for their demands to be met. But that passed with no action, as had a deadline they set Tuesday.

On Tuesday, the gunmen freed Justice Jesus Ramirez for health reasons. Doctors said Ramirez was hospitalized for hypertension.

A day later, Justices Eduardo Sancho and Alfonso Chávez were freed temporarily, apparently to carry messages between officials and the kidnapers.

In previous hostage crises, Costa Rica has preferred negotiations to force, usually meeting some demands and allowing the attackers to leave.

Ramirez told journalists the hostages had been gagged and tied to chairs on the second floor of the 10-story court building. The hostages appeared to have explosives strapped to their bodies, he said.

Costa Rica, which has no army, has been an unusually stable and peaceful country compared with the rest of Central and South America. But political violence from other countries has spilled over in recent months.

On March 8, a group of Nicaraguans opposed to Nicaraguan President Violeta Chamorro invaded that country's embassy in San Jose and held 24 people hostage. The siege ended two weeks later after the Nicaraguan government paid $250,000 to the gunmen, who freed the hostages unharmed and fled.

Resisting the political temptations

In "Democracy in America," Alexis de Tocqueville argued that American individualism threatened to turn American society into a culture of selfishness. From this insight, though writing in the 1830s, Tocqueville predicted that bureaucratic administration would displace the "secondary powers," or mediating institutions, of civil society — institutions such as the church, families, nongovernmental schools, local governments, unions, corporations and others.

Picking up on this theme 150 years later (though without referencing Tocqueville explicitly), philosopher Alasdair MacIntyre argues in his 1982 book "After Virtue" that we have arrived; Enlightenment individualism, he wrote, has turned into bureaucratic individualism. But MacIntyre traces out a much deeper problem, one in which bureaucratic individualism is more a symptom than a cause.

Liberal individualism, which is the commitment both of modern liberals and modern conservatives, destroys the possibility of sustaining a community. It destroys it ideologically, and it destroys it as liberal ideology works itself out practically in politics, economics and society.

What's more, MacIntyre shows that the vocabulary of public discourse amounts to "linguistic survivals from the practices of classical theism which have lost the context provided by these practices." That is, participants in public discourse always talk past each other because they share no common moral vocabulary.

Within the framework constructed by liberal individualism, no persuasion can take place because no one can do anything but emote. The proposition "slavery is unjust" shares the same moral status as the proposition, "I like chocolate ice cream."

MacIntyre concludes, however, that all is not necessarily lost: "What matters at this stage is the construction of local forms of community within which civility and the intellectual and moral life can be sustained through the new dark ages which are already upon us."

In his conclusion, MacIntyre, perhaps unwittingly, again returns to Tocqueville and the Frenchman's insistence that the mediating institutions of civil society prevent individuality from turning into individualism and then into anomie.

But where to begin?

The late Eastern Orthodox theologian, Alexander Schemmann, argued for the central role of the church in civil society in his claim that the church is the nursery of culture. He observed that if a culture is to prosper and bloom, it must begin where souls are shaped — in the church.

If American society grows weeds, it is because the church first nurtured them. If hyperindividualism characterizes American society, it is because the church preaches and practices an individualistic, man-centered gospel.

To be sure, Americans grow uncomfortable with talking about church and religion. After all, religion is a "private" concern. But that claim is Enlightenment hubris; that belief is part of the problem, as MacIntyre argues.

There is undeniably an intensely personal dimension to religion, but that dimension is not the sole universe of religion's existence. The church is an institution in civil society; and civil society is not identical to political control and the state. That civil society means only the state is a totalitarian belief.

Christians need no longer play the patsy in the Enlightenment liberal's con game.

Although I will talk about the virtue of tolerance in Christian culture in my next column, let me note this about Iowa's recent travails with the Christian Coalition: By destroying the public, nonpolitical dimension of civil society, liberal individualism thus set the stage for the distorted communitarianism of the likes of the Christian Coalition.

The Christian Coalition's problem is that they believe the modern liberal myth and so conceive of public ends as being permissibly expressed only as political ends. Their political pathology, and their threat, is a function of their being far too modern and far too little Christian in their thinking, and thus committing political idolatry at the altar of liberal individualism. The solution is that the Christian Coalition needs to become more Christian and less modern in their thinking and acting.

More generally, modern individualism characterizes both fundamentalist Christians and liberal Christians in their approach to community. Outside of the "five fundamentals" — the doctrines that fundamentalists share with Catholicism, orthodoxy and historic Calvinism and Lutheranism — America's Christian fundamentalists and evangelicals run practical aspects of their theologies through the lenses of liberal individualism rather than through distinctly Christian presuppositions.

Although a revitalized church ultimately rests in a move of the Holy Spirit, the modern church needs to rediscover her heritage that bears directly on her ability to provide a cogent alternative to the miseries inflicted in this age by liberal individualism.

Particularly, there are three biblical doctrines that strike at the heart of the modern individualistic pretense, which is why the doctrines are so hated, and have been so hated in the Enlightenment tradition.

Each strikes at the heart of the myth of individual autonomy. They are: 1) re-emphasizing the church's sacramental life, particularly returning to the biblical practice of baptizing infants as well as adult converts; 2) the Augustinian doctrine of predestination (shared in Calvinistic and Lutheran circles, as well as in some Roman Catholic and some Baptist circles); 3) recognizing God's authority in human church authorities.

The effect of the church's biblical teaching on these matters is to dethrone the self, to wean the human away from the Enlightenment pretense — which is the pretense of the Original Sin — that we are god.

In my next column, I will conclude this series by discussing the Christian political temptation — that while Christianity has political ramifications, it cannot be practiced as a political project — and how it is that Christian culture is the only hope for preserving the virtues of liberal society.

DISPLAY WINDOW

Loathing masquerading as humor

Sometimes a joke can be taken too far. And sometimes, when that joke is opposed because it degrades others based solely upon race, creed, gender or sexuality, those who oppose it are referred to as being, among other things, politically correct.

This situation of a group taking a joke too far has been pushed out from under its traditional rock and into daylight with the emergence of The Campus Review's display window in the lower level of the Union. The window features, among other things, a circle-slash over a graphic of two males standing, engaged in anal sex; a "save the gerbils" flyer; and a variety of anti-gay buttons.

Far from compromising the Review's ethical standards, unfortunately, the display merely mirrors the traditional bilge of ignorant homophobia from the Review with which the UI community has become familiar. For an indicator of the ethical standards of the magazine which has been referred to as "Iowa City's premier hate tabloid," let's take a look at its past track record on the subject of AIDS and homosexuality, utilizing the magazine's own comments:

■ A "joke" directed at then-city council candidate Rick Graf, a man who had tested HIV positive, which read: "(Rick Graf) ... has just tested positive for HIV. The only question now is whether he should run for a two year rather than a three year seat on the council." — September 1991.

■ A maze which was featured on the back page of the Review depicting the 620 Club, underneath which a caption ran reading: "Untimely death due to undisclosed causes." — September 1991.

■ "A-I-D-S" was suggested as the title of a new Village People single. — May 1991.

■ Who could forget the "gerbil quilt," meant to make a mockery of the AIDS quilt, which was — and is today still — put together to honor the memory of all those who have died of the deadly disease.

And these comprise merely a small portion of the homophobic tripe spewed by the Review's learned editors and staff. The entire message put forth by this can be summed up with alarming simplicity: To the Review — and, apparently, its staff — AIDS is a funny kinda plague. People who will die from AIDS are found to be the worthy subjects of jokes: They're a bunch of queers who are going to die ... get it? In the end, the only reason to grant the Review any attention at all is this alarming continuity of pride-filled ignorance, of hate masking itself as humorous writing.

One can only hope that most passers-by, college-educated or otherwise, will prove themselves capable of seeing through this pretense of reason, this falsification of compassion. But such a hope is lost on the Review's staffers themselves, for they refuse to respect the line which separates conservative thought from outright bigotry, a line which could easily be made to stand between themselves and the Review.

In an interview with The Daily Iowan, Jeff Renander, editor of the Review, stated: "We're just saying that one of the major ways AIDS is spread is through homosexual anal sex. You can't deny it. It's a medical fact. What are we in trouble for — presenting a medical fact?"

The direct answer is "no": The only charge leveled here is that of appalling, arrogant ignorance.

GENERATION X

X me out

I don't know how many times I've heard that our generation is bored, stupid, lazy and downright uninspired. It is a viewpoint taken by the mass media as they attempt to pander their mindless products to us. We have been spoon-fed everything from music to knowledge, and personally I am sick of hearing that I'm part of this enigma that arbitrarily defines itself by age. Just because I happen to be twentysomething (a term coined by the media), doesn't necessarily mean that I really give a damn about coming of age in a Baby Boomer world, because I deal with it.

Which some would say partially defines us: our uncompromising, lackadaisical attitude toward the world. I'm not disinterested in the events and people that shape the world around me — I'm just savvy enough to sort through the BS and take everything in stride. I don't need extensive and expert analysis of every little thing under the sun to help me put it in context. And I don't need Douglass Coupland, MTV or "The CBS College Tour" to prod me to a rallying point and tell me what I'm about.

I often wonder why anyone really wants to figure this generation out. They call us the "X Generation," or even the "13th Generation" (my favorite). We never read or hear about the "6th Generation" and their lack of common identity. Who really cares about the generation gap anymore? It's a holdover from a small group of people who felt alienated from their parents and their society. Well, I hope it's no revelation to anyone, but that's just a consequence of the culture we live in. We are alienated from our elders, from each other, from our world and from our ideas. But we deal with it and move on.

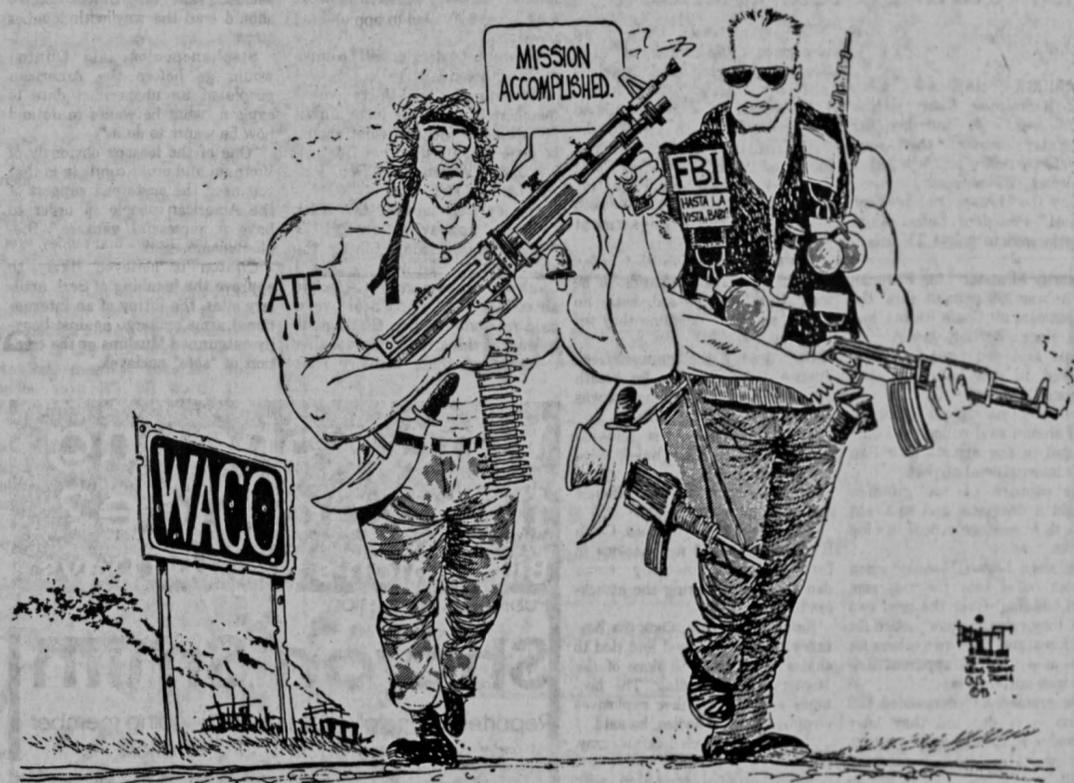

Christ, can anyone blame us? The media says we're indecisive and noncommittal because we didn't have a Depression, a Vietnam. We had the best of both worlds — Ronald Reagan. We had Iranian hostages, international terrorism, trickle-down economics, Iran-Contra, Ollie North, AIDS, Jim and Tammie Bakker, drug czars, Grenada, Donald Trump, Michael Milken and, of course, real Star Wars. Anything that we possibly could have unanimously supported blew up in our faces.

I don't need to watch the televised music revolution. I don't want to sit through another "The Big Chill" meets "Fast Times at Ridgmont High" movie. I don't care about mid-life crises. And I could care less if others are having a problem defining what my generation and I are all about. Deal with it. We do.

GUEST OPINION

Time to review dangerous misinformation

The latest barrage of hate-mongering homophobia and ignorance on the part of The Campus Review has been issued this week. Again the medium is one of the display cases in the basement of the Union. The material displayed was a contextual case for AIDS as a solely homosexual disease, and features a T-shirt with a depiction of a sexual act overlaid with a circle and bar and the words "STOP AIDS." The T-shirt is surrounded with anti-gay Campus Review covers, homophobia-promoting buttons, and the endlessly tiring "Save the gerbils" story.

I do not argue that The Campus Review has the right as a student organization to promote functions or political opinions in the display cases. That is a right protected under the First Amendment of the Constitution, a right I adamantly support and take advantage of to promote my political viewpoints. The officials of the Union administration have no policy limiting the contents of the display cases, and have adopted an absolute free-speech stance on the matter. However, that right is not absolute, and has been abridged in the past when the speech in question infringes on the rights of others. I refer specifically to public health, safety and welfare.

We are prohibited from yelling "fire" in a crowded theater, inciting

We are prohibited from yelling "fire" in a crowded theater, inciting a riot through the use of "fighting words," and using "hate speech" for these reasons. We, as Americans, have accepted a truncation of our rights in order to ensure the welfare of the public.

a riot through the use of "fighting words," and using "hate speech" for these reasons. We, as Americans, have accepted a truncation of our rights in order to ensure the welfare of the public — for the public good, if you will. This is central to First Amendment intent, use and Supreme Court interpretation.

I submit that the information presented by The Campus Review is detrimental to the public welfare. The fact is that AIDS is not a gay disease. According to the World Health Organization 75 percent of worldwide AIDS cases are among heterosexuals. AIDS is an equal-opportunity killer. The latest information from the U.S. Centers for Disease Control shows the greatest rate of infection to be among women, blacks, Hispanics and rural Americans, not gays. In addition, the age range of greatest risk is among sexually active 18- to 24-year-olds. This definition would in the interest of public welfare and student health? I say that it has the obligation to do so, and this obligation is met in similar health instances. The UI provides a student health service, a counseling service for mental health; requirement of measles and tuberculosis vaccines for incoming students; and mandatory student-health fees. Recently this obligation extended to the provision of 8,000 meningitis vaccines on UI property. Obviously the UI administration takes health issues and responsibilities seriously.

Now I am asking that you follow through with that obligation. I ask that the efforts of the UI to treat and educate on illness be extended to all disease, regardless of preconceived and inaccurate notions about those affected. I ask that the UI institute a policy to review the contents of the display cases in the Union basement, with an eye for insufficient, incorrect and even dangerous health information to students, faculty and staff. It remains to be seen whether the UI will answer this responsibility.

Michael J. Murphy is a junior at the UI studying art history. He served as the chairman of the fund-raising committee of the Quad Cities AIDS Coalition from 1991-92. He is active in the Gay, Lesbian and Bisexual People's Union, and is proud to be "practicing" homosexual.

Couple goes to court

PARIS, France — A couple that has evoked more than 40 years of court hearings and money.

A civil court heard two suits filed by the couple in Paris. The couple, who have been together since 1947, are now in court over a matter that has evoked more than 40 years of court hearings and money.

But Doisneau's lawyer, Jacques Lecoq, insists they are the couple in the world-famous 1951 film "Le Baiser de l'Hotel de Ville." The couple, who have been together since 1947, are now in court over a matter that has evoked more than 40 years of court hearings and money.

Women in combat? No Scandinavia

STOCKHOLM, Sweden — Danish women in military combat uniforms flying jets, serving on ships, and sailing off to the front.

So the U.S. decision to drop women flying combat missions in Vietnam seems old hat here. Denmark's Queen Margrethe II has announced that women will be allowed to serve in combat roles in the Danish military.

Portuguese 'General Tootsie' sentenced to jail term

1 LISBON, Portugal (AP) — A cross-dressing woman who took a bride and received loans from neighbors by masquerading as a highly decorated general was convicted of fraud Thursday and sentenced to three years in prison.

Teresinha Gomes, known since 1975 as the "sh-strapped war veteran Gen. Tito" because of her military medals, was ordered to repay the money she borrowed.

Gomes, dressed in a conservative tie and a double-breasted pinstriped suit, had one comment for a crowd gathered at the courtroom door: "Clothes don't make the man."

Gomes, a 52-year-old former secretary, said during her trial that she left home on the Portuguese island of Madeira in 1974 and resurfaced a year later in Lisbon dressed as an army captain.

Gomes' true gender and identity were revealed in February 1992 when she was arrested for failing to repay loans made by her neighbors.

Couple goes to court over 1950 'French' kiss

2 PARIS, France (AP) — A photograph that has evoked the romance of Paris for more than 40 years has come to this: a solemn court hearing over love, privacy and money.

A civil court heard two suits concerning the 1950 photo "Le Baiser de l'Hôtel de Ville" (The Kiss at the Paris City Hall) and is to rule June 2.

Denise and Jean-Louis Lavergne, both retired photographers, insist they are the couple Robert Doisneau captured in a seemingly spontaneous, passionate kiss amid a crowd of indifferent strollers outside Paris City Hall.

But Doisneau's lawyer, Jacques Marchand, said the couple in the world-famous picture were hired actors. An actress, Françoise Boret, filed a suit of her own against Doisneau for refusing to pay her part of the profits from the photograph.

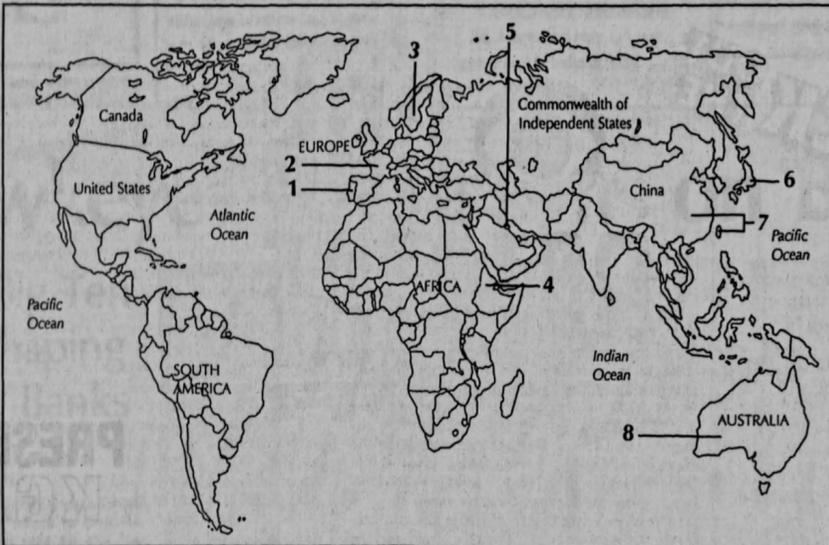

The black-and-white shot has been reproduced on posters, postcards and T-shirts. But the Lavergnes say they first saw it in 1988.

The Lavergnes claim the legendary photographer violated their privacy, and seek $100,000 in damages. But they say the bigger issue is recognition of their young love.

Women in combat? Nothing new in Scandinavia

3 STOCKHOLM, Sweden (AP) — Scandinavian women have been assigned to military combat units since the 1980s, flying jets, serving on submarines and sailing off to the gulf war.

So the U.S. decision to drop restrictions on women flying combat missions and serving aboard warships posts seems old hat in northern Europe, where Denmark's Queen Margrethe underwent combat training three decades ago as a princess.

Some of Scandinavia's female volunteers see combat duty as a natural part of their military careers.

"When it comes to flying an F-16, it makes no difference if you are a man or a woman," said 2nd Lt. Mette Groetteland, Norway's first female pilot of the F-16, a U.S.-made fighter jet.

Eritreans ratify rebel victory in independence referendum

4 ASMARA, Eritrea (AP) — Eritreans have overwhelmingly chosen independence from Ethiopia in a referendum that ratified a rebel victory in Africa's longest secessionist struggle, the provisional government said this week.

"Eritrea is now a sovereign country," said Isaias Afewerki, head of the provisional government since his Eritrean People's Liberation Front marched into the capital, Asmara, on May 24, 1991, after three decades of war.

Afewerki said independence would be formally declared next month on the second anniversary of the rebels' victory. Eritrea was expected to apply for membership in the United Nations then.

The U.S. consul to Eritrea, Joseph O'Neill, said the United States recognized independent Eritrea less than an hour after the results came through. Italy, Egypt and Sudan also extended recognition, he said.

Organizers of the three-day independence referendum, which ended Sunday, said 99.8 percent of Eritrean voters answered "yes" to the sole referendum question: "Do you want independence from Ethiopia?"

Americans remember loved ones who died for Kuwait

5 KUWAIT CITY, Kuwait (AP) — With muffled sobs and eyes welling with tears, this week some 200 Americans remembered relatives killed two years ago in the gulf war.

During a ceremony, it was a brave front until the roll call of the 96 servicemen and servicewomen. The crying grew louder, and men reached out to comfort grieving women as the names were read, each followed by a single piano note.

The relatives, who arrived in the emirate Sunday for a one-week tour, were flanked by U.S. military officers. Kuwaiti officials and U.S. Ambassador Edward Gnehm also attended the hourlong ceremony.

Darlene Elkins, of Panama City, Fla., who teaches at the American School of Kuwait, sung Bette Midler's "From a Distance."

As she sang "from a distance we're instruments marching in a common land, playing songs of hope, peace and songs of every man," Misty Daniels, of Rapid City, S.D., broke down in tears. Her husband, Michael, died in a helicopter crash over southern Iraq.

Posters, fences used to oust foreigners from Japanese parks

6 TOKYO, Japan (AP) — First came swastika-embazoned posters demanding the ouster of "delinquent foreigners." Then the city put up fences, to physically force them out.

Both the posters and fences, erected in a Tokyo park this week, target 4,000 Iranians who gather each Sunday for conversation, haircuts and barbecues in the park nicknamed "Little Teheran."

Now many foreigners worry that the hostility may spread to other nationalities.

With its emergence as an economic power, Japan is attracting increasing numbers of outsiders — from Filipino bar hostesses to Iranian mechanics. The sudden and visible influx has provoked a backlash of animosity.

The country has become even less hospitable as its current economic slowdown eliminates the dirty, dangerous jobs previously reserved for illegal foreign laborers.

For years, Americans and other outsiders have complained of frequent harassment and problems in finding housing. Koreans, the country's biggest minority group, report widespread discrimination.

China, Taiwan: Old rivals pledge cooperation

7 SINGAPORE (AP) — Delegates from China and Taiwan drank a champagne toast to closer ties today after signing four documents paving the way for official talks to end their once-bitter rivalry.

The opening of such a high-level dialogue could lead to the reunification both sides say they favor.

The three days of negotiations in neutral Singapore marked the countries' first formal meeting in 44 years.

Koo Chen-fu, chairman of Taiwan's Straits Exchange Foundation, said the meeting marked "the opening of a new chapter of exchanges between people on both sides of the Taiwan Straits."

Officially, Beijing refuses to recognize the authority of the Taipei government, and Taiwan bars political relations with China.

The Nationalist followers of the late Chiang Kai-shek took refuge in Taiwan in 1949 after being defeated by Communists in a civil war. Both nations consider their governments the legitimate representatives of China.

Aussie policeman reprimanded for snake centerfold

8 SYDNEY, Australia (AP) — A policeman was reprimanded this week for posing as the centerfold of a women's magazine swathed only by a 10-foot snake.

Jeff Jarratt, New South Wales state assistant police commissioner, said the officer failed to get permission from his superiors before the photographs were published last October in Australian Women's Forum magazine.

The 28-year-old officer used a false name and described himself as a dancer in an article that accompanied the photos.

Hawks invited to USA Trials

Iowa's Toni Foster and Cathy Marx and former Hawkeye Shanda Berry will try out for the USA national women's basketball team in Colorado Springs May 20-23. They are among 60 players invited. Others include Nebraska's Karen Jennings, a native of Persia, Iowa, who played at Neola Tri-Center High School, and Texas Tech's Sheryl Swoopes, the 1993 Final Four MVP.

Foster, a senior, led Iowa in scoring and rebounding this season and was the Big Ten's Player of the Year. Marx, a junior, was the top reserve for the Hawkeyes, who reached the Final Four this year.

Berry, a 1989 Iowa graduate, played for the United States in the 1987 Jones Cup competition and in the 1985 Olympic Festival.

Men's track signs recruit

Mike Bakker, a state runner-up in both cross country and track in Aurora, Co., will attend Iowa to compete in both sports.

Bakker holds the state's fastest times in both the 800 and 1,600 this spring. He also anchored the 4 X 800 relay unit that claimed the state title.

Women's golf signs three

Lynne Carothers, Candy Schneekloth and Summer Szymczak have signed national letters of intent to play golf at Iowa next fall. Coach Diane Thomason announced Thursday.

Carothers, of Owatonna, Minn., plans to study communications at Iowa.

Schneekloth, of Long Prairie, Minn., is a five-time all-West Central Conference selection who plans to study physical therapy, while Szymczak, of Crown Point, Ind., is a 1992 Duneland Conference MVP who will major in mathematics.

The 6-foot-8 Serb is the center for Panionios of Athens, which was playing in the semifinals of the Greek Championships.

Waving his arms in disbelief that he had fouled out, Jankovic moved toward the backboard and rammed his head against the cement blocks supporting it. He bounced back and slumped to the floor in a pool of blood.

Hawkeyes have sights on Boilermakers

Wild Big Ten race shaping up for Banks

Curtis Riggs
The Daily Iowan

Coach Duane Banks uses the word "wild" when he wants to describe how he sees the race for the Big Ten Tournament shaping up.

The 25-11, 10-8 Hawkeyes host 28-13, 12-8 Purdue for a pair of doubleheaders Friday and Saturday. The start time for the first game is set for 1 p.m. both days. Radio station KRUI FM-89.7 will air all four games, while KXIC AM-800 will broadcast the second contest each day.

Iowa heads into this weekend in fifth place in the conference standings, percentage points behind Northwestern (9-7). Minnesota is on top of the Big Ten with a 12-2 conference mark, followed by Ohio State at 11-5 and Purdue.

"It is going to be wild right down to the end," Banks said. "It will be typical and come down to the last weekend to see who gets into the tournament."

The top four teams in the conference advance to the double elimination Big Ten Tournament that will be played in Battle Creek, Mich., May 20-23. This is the first year the tournament will not be played on the home field of the

Carl Bonnett/The Daily Iowan

Hawkeye Matt Kraus lays down a bunt in last weekend's series with Michigan State. Iowa (25-11) will try to gain ground on Purdue (28-13) regular season champion.

Iowa outfielder Jay Polson says that this weekend will be a prime opportunity for the Hawkeyes to make up ground on the Boilermakers.

"It's a big series for us because they are percentage points ahead of us going into the Big Ten Tournament," said Polson, who is batting .286. "It would be nice to take three out of four from them and jump ahead of them."

Polson says that the Hawkeyes need to keep the same upbeat attitude that they have shown in other Big Ten series.

"Everybody needs to stay pumped up and excited," he said. "We play the best when everybody has the adrenaline flowing."

The Hawkeyes helped themselves last weekend by taking three of four from Michigan State. The parity of the Big Ten this season leaves no room for a poor series, according to Banks.

"All of the Big Ten is equal from top to bottom. You have to be on the top of your game every weekend," Banks said. "You fall on your face a couple of weekends and you go to the Big Ten Tournament as a spectator."

Banks admits that the timing of the Purdue series makes this weekend even more important.

"All weekends are really big the closer it comes to the end of the season and if you are still contending, they are more important," Banks said.

Banks adds that there is little time for last-minute pep talks at this juncture of the season.

"Our kids know what's at stake," he said. "They will just try to play hard and try to win."

Stieb gets best of ex-Hawk Boddicker

Associated Press

CHICAGO — Dave Stieb made it back to the mound on Thursday, and showed in his debut for the Chicago White that he still can get major league batters out.

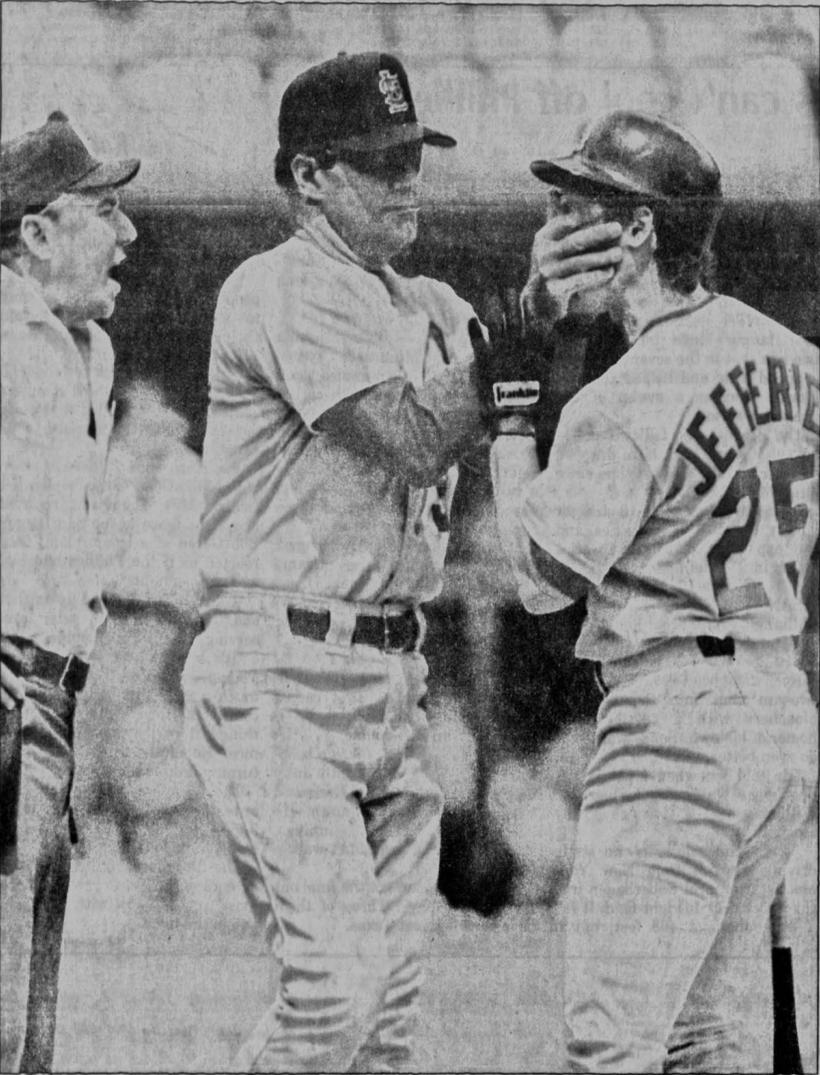

"I was around the plate most of the time and I had pretty good control," Stieb said after beating the Milwaukee Brewers 7-4. "But five walks and three earned runs in six innings were a disappointment."

Stieb, who began the season on the disabled list, topped former University of Iowa pitcher Mike Boddicker in a battle of comeback pitchers. It was Stieb's first start since last Aug. 8, when he injured his right elbow. He spent his previous 14 seasons in the major leagues with the Toronto Blue Jays, then signed with the White Sox as a free agent last December.

Stieb, a 35-year-old right-hander, allowed four runs and five hits in six innings. He struck out seven and won for the first time since a relief appearance last July 23. It was his first victory as a starter since last May 26, also against Milwaukee.

Boddicker, acquired by Milwaukee on Monday from Kansas City, was making his 300th career start, his first since last July 21. He started the season on the disabled list following arthroscopic knee surgery on March 3. Boddicker gave up five runs and 12 hits in six innings, struck out three and walked none.

Iowa softball counting on home cooking vs. 'Cats

Kris Wiley
The Daily Iowan

It's home sweet home for the Iowa softball team when it returns to the Hawkeye Softball Complex after a 12-game road trip.

"We're all really excited that we're home again and that we can play in front of our family and friends," said Big Ten Player of the Week Jenny Roe.

The Hawkeyes begin an 11-game homestand today when they face Northwestern in a Big Ten doubleheader at 3 p.m. Another twinbill is scheduled for Saturday at 1 p.m.

Iowa is one of three teams with only three losses in the Big Ten. The Hawkeyes stand at 14-3, while Michigan posts a 9-3 record and Minnesota 8-3. Iowa, 33-9 overall, is ranked ninth in the country.

While this may appear to be a crucial point in the season, Iowa is approaching the weekend from the same perspective it has had throughout the season.

"I don't want to say this is a more important part of the season," Coach Gayle Blevins said. "It's not like we're suddenly going to change things."

The Wildcats are fifth in the conference with a record of 8-6 and an overall mark of 23-20. They are coming off of a four-game sweep of Penn State — 5-2, 6-0, 5-0 and 7-1. Anne Carpenter leads the offense with a .325 average, followed by Susan Harrelson (.298).

On the mound, Beverly Stiglbauer stands at 9-7 with a 1.43 ERA. Michele Hawkins comes in with a 13-13 record and a 1.65 ERA.

"We have to take advantage of our scoring opportunities," Blevins said. "What we're gearing for is playing the first game and keeping that game to game approach."

Last year, the teams split a pair of doubleheaders in Evanston, Ill., with Iowa winning 3-2 and 2-0, while Northwestern won 1-0 and 2-1. The Wildcats lead the overall series, 28-16.

The Hawkeyes finished their road trip with a 9-3 record, losing their last game to Minnesota on Tuesday, 2-0.

Roe, who leads the conference with 12 RBIs and nine doubles, said the team has to work on becoming offensively consistent and to take control of each game.

"As long as our offense comes out strong that helps the other parts of our game," said Roe, Iowa's career RBI leader. "We have to get out there and start hitting the ball. We all know we can do it."

The Hawkeyes lead the Big Ten in team batting with a .372 average. Iowa boasts four of the top five conference hitters, with freshman Tasha Reents leading the way with a .397 average.

She's followed by catcher Stacey Harrison at .396 and center fielder Kim Davis, who is batting .393. Freshman Melissa Wielandt comes in fifth at .378.

Hawkeyes advance at Big Tens

Joel Donofrio
The Daily Iowan

The Big Ten Championships are beginning to look a lot like the regular season for the Iowa women's tennis team. The No. 6-seeded Hawkeyes opened the conference tournament by shutting out Purdue 5-0 Thursday afternoon in Bloomington, Ind., repeating their 9-0 blanking of the Boilermakers on April 18 in Iowa City.

Iowa coach Micki Schillig was impressed that her team came to play hard against Purdue without looking past them.

"Everyone was very focused and concentrated when they took the court today, we knew what we had to do and we did it well," Schillig said. "When you've just beaten a team easily two weeks ago, it's easy to take them for granted, but we didn't."

"We played well today, did our business and got off the courts before the rain hit," Schillig added. "We saved ourselves a lot of time by playing well and winning in straight sets, because it poured soon after we finished and all the other matches headed inside."

Iowa advances to the second round where it will face third-seeded Wisconsin today at 9 a.m. The Hawkeyes are hoping to fare better today than they did on April 24 against the Badgers, when Iowa followed its Purdue blowout with a 7-2 setback in Madison, Wis.

The Hawkeyes' only points in last weekend's dual meet came from Laura Dvorak's 0-6, 6-4, 6-2 win over Amanda Gregory at No. 1 singles. Rhonda Fox and Nikki Willette also came away with a 6-3, 6-4 victory over Shannon Tully and Lauren Gavaris at No. 2 doubles.

However, Schillig believes the Badgers are a good matchup for her squad and she feels confident the Hawkeyes can upset Wisconsin the second time around.

"Even though we lost 7-2, five of the matches were three-setters, so if we can pull out a few more critical games we'll be right with them in singles," Schillig said. "It's not going to be easy, not at all, but I've got a great feeling about tomorrow after seeing how well we played today."

Iowa 5, Purdue 0

Singles: No. 1 Laura Dvorak (U) def. Ifeoma Okorali 6-1, 6-3; No. 2 Andrea Calvert (U) def. Alyssa Kohl 6-2, 6-3; No. 3 Nikki Willette (U) def. Dana Degyanski 6-1, 6-3; No. 4 Rhonda Fox (U) def. Nan Smith 6-2, 7-5; No. 5 Amy Jahn (U) def. Jennifer Salisbury 6-0, 6-4; No. 6 Cara Cashon (U) vs. Lesley Hubbell (P) stopped in progress.

Winning 60 games during the NBA regular season certainly doesn't hurt a team trying to get to the NBA Finals, but it's hardly a guarantee. Thirteen times in NBA history, a team has won 60 or more games but failed to advance to the Finals.

MAJORS: Padres can't cool off Phillies

"I did not walk anybody which is what I always strive for," Boddicker said. "The problem was, they just kept finding the hole."

With 12 wins in April, the White Sox have tied the club record for most victories in the first month of the season, set in 1980.

Cardinals 5, Rockies 2
DENVER — This time, Colorado Rockies manager Don Baylor has only himself to blame.

Bob Tewksbury gained his first victory of the season, helping his cause with a two-run single. It was just a year ago that Baylor was the Cardinals' hitting coach.

"Don spent some time with me working on my hitting," Tewksbury said. "He helped me try to take advantage of some things. Any time a pitcher can contribute and produce some runs, it is only going to help. I was fortunate to put the ball in play."

Baylor doesn't recall Tewksbury getting such immediate results from the tutoring.

"I was with them last year and he got one hit (actually 6 hits in 70 at-bats)," Baylor said. "Today he got two."

Tewksbury (1-3) allowed both runs and eight hits in 6 1/3 innings, struck out two and walked none.

Astros 5, Cubs 4
HOUSTON — Craig Biggio's home run snapped a sixth-inning tie.

Pete Harnisch (2-0) pitched six innings and gave up four runs and six hits for the win. He also scored a run.

With the score 4-1 in the sixth, Biggio homered off Greg Hibbard (1-2) over the left-field wall. Hibbard allowed five runs and 10 hits in six innings.

Biggio had three hits and drove in two runs.

Marlins 6, Braves 5
ATLANTA — Dave Magadan's first homer since last July, a two-run shot in the seventh inning, snapped a tie and helped give the Florida Marlins a sweep of the two-game series.

The Braves, who fell two games below .500 at 11-13, have dropped five in a row for the first time since June 14-18, 1991.

It was the Marlins' third straight victory and fifth in six games, and the expansion club's first series sweep in its brief history.

Giants 10, Mets 5
SAN FRANCISCO — After Matt Williams' first-inning homer was measured at 432 feet, teammate Barry Bonds took it as a challenge.

Even though he followed Williams' two-run shot into the left-field bleachers with a 382-foot solo homer of his own, Bonds wanted to do even better.

"He told me when I got in the dugout he was going to beat it," Williams said. "That guy's my idol."

Bonds came close in the sixth, driving a pitch from New York Mets starter Bret Saberhagen into the upper deck in right field. It fell a little short at 408 feet, but it moved Bonds into a tie with Williams for the NL lead in homers with seven.

"Bonds belongs in a higher league," declared beleaguered Mets manager Jeff Torborg.

All three homers came off Saberhagen, who has given up six long balls in five starts.

Orioles 11, Twins 0
BALTIMORE — Mike Mussina extended the Minnesota Twins' losing streak to seven games, scattering five hits in his fifth career shutout.

Glenn Davis homered for the Orioles, who had lost six of seven before outscoring the Twins 19-4 in a two-game sweep. Baltimore had not won a game by more than three runs prior to the series.

Minnesota, mired in its longest losing streak since a seven-game skid in April 1991, next faces Detroit — a team that scored 45 runs in a three-game sweep of the Twins last weekend.

Tigers 3, Rangers 1
ARLINGTON, Texas — John Doherty just missed his first career shutout and Chad Kreuter hit a homer and an RBI-double.

Doherty (3-1) didn't allow a base-runner to reach third until Julio Franco scored on Jose Canseco's two-out double in the ninth. He allowed five hits in 8 1/3 innings, struck out three and didn't walk a batter.

Mike Henneman got the final out for his fifth save. Three of them have come against Texas.

Saints president Finks treated for cancer

Mary Foster
Associated Press

NEW ORLEANS — Jim Finks, who helped build the first winning teams in the history of the New Orleans Saints and was nearly elected NFL commissioner in 1989, is being treated for cancer, the team announced Thursday.

The 65-year-old Finks, the Saints' president, had complained about respiratory problems for several weeks. He was hospitalized Monday after the NFL draft.

Three days of tests revealed the cancer, Saints owner Tom Benson said during a news conference.

The team said it did not have details of where the cancer is located.

"All cancer is serious. We're worried about Jim and his family. We have no idea about his future with the club. That's not what we're worried about right now," Benson said.

Dr. Charles L. Brown Jr., a cancer specialist and one of the team doctors, confirmed the diagnosis and is consulting with specialists.

Finks is a heavy smoker.

Finks, a quarterback for the Pittsburgh Steelers during the 1950s, was instrumental in building the Minnesota Vikings who played in four Super Bowls during the '70s and the Chicago Bears' team that won in 1985. He spent a short time with baseball's Chicago Cubs before joining the Saints in 1986.

In 1989, after Pete Rozelle resigned, he was the choice of a six-man selection committee to become the NFL commissioner. However, he was able to get only 18 of the 21 necessary votes and the job eventually went to Paul Tagliabue.

Tagliabue immediately made Finks chairman of the league's competition committee, the body that recommends rules changes.

Benson, who hired Finks when he bought the team, was obviously shaken. His voice trembled and he wiped his eyes several times.

New Orleans owner Tom Benson gets emotional during an announcement that Saints president and general manager Jim Finks has been diagnosed with cancer.

He said Jim Miller, the team's vice president, will handle negotiations with this year's draft choices and free agents.

"Jim's a very hard working man. He takes his job very seriously. The recent weeks have been very tiring and very stressful, with the draft and the free agents," coach Jim Mora said.

Hawkeyes have 'nothing to lose'

Karen L. Karaidos
The Daily Iowan

The Iowa men's golf team has plenty to gain and nothing to lose when it competes in the 20-team Michigan State Intercollegiate Tournament on Saturday and Sunday.

The Hawkeyes need to win their next two tournaments in order to earn a bid to the NCAA Regional.

"I think we're kind of like the underdogs now," senior Jon Frommelt said. "We have nothing to lose now in these last two tournaments, so we're just going to go for broke and try to win these last two tournaments and make it to Regionals."

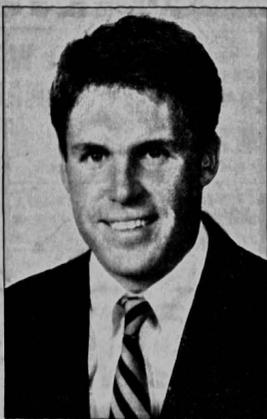

Sophomore David Sharp realizes that it's now or never for the defending Big Ten champion Hawkeyes to get back in top form.

"I think we're definitely on our last string," Sharp said. "We've put ourselves in a really bad situation to where we need to do really well these last two tournaments."

MEN'S TENNIS

Iowa hopes to end season with two wins, higher seed

Joel Donofrio
The Daily Iowan

The Iowa men's tennis team ends its regular season on the road this weekend with dual meets Saturday at Indiana and Sunday at Ohio State. The Hawkeyes hope to improve on their 5-3 conference record in order to secure a higher seed for the Big Ten Championships they host next weekend.

Iowa is tied for fourth in the Big Ten with Penn State, one-half game ahead of Ohio State (4-3) and one-half behind Indiana (5-2). Coach Steve Houghton noted that the race for third through sixth place is wide open.

"Indiana and Ohio State are two tough teams with very strong doubles lineups and solid singles players," Houghton said. "They'll both be tough tests for us, especially since we're all competing for a higher tournament seeding."

For the first time this spring, the Hawkeyes are having success in doubles. Iowa took five of six doubles matches last weekend at Illinois and Purdue behind the lineup of Naguib Shahid and Eric Schulman at No. 1, Bryan Crowley and Carl Mannheim at No. 2, and Klas Bergstrom and Ville Nygard at No. 3.

"We did have a good weekend in doubles, but they know they have to get better not just for Indiana and Ohio State, but for Big Tens," Houghton said. "I think they will, too, as everybody gets used to the teams. Bergstrom and Nygard in particular have to get used to working together as doubles partners."

The Hoosiers were one of the teams expected to challenge first-place Minnesota for the conference title. Indiana holds a 30-12 lead in the series with Iowa, and has four seniors back from last year's 14-7 squad.

"We'll have our hands full with them," Houghton said of the Hoosiers. "They're very strong in doubles and were a pre-season favorite. Still, they're definitely a team we can beat if we play up to our potential."

Ohio State has yet to lose a doubles point in Big Ten play this season. The Buckeyes are led by senior Gabor Kovacs, an all-Big Ten member the past two years. Iowa leads the series with Ohio State 17-12, although the Buckeyes prevailed 5-4 in last year's meeting in Iowa City.

IOWA TRACK

Women head to ISU for tune-up...

Doug Cappel
The Daily Iowan

Fresh off of a solid Drake Relays last weekend, the Hawkeye women's track squad returns to central Iowa Saturday to compete in the Iowa State Invitational in Ames. It will be Iowa's final meet before the Big Ten Championships May 22-23 in East Lansing, Mich.

Though the event won't attract a large amount of schools, Coach Jerry Hassard is looking forward to the meet.

"It's important to get into a meet and to stay active," he said. "Though it won't be an overpowering meet, it will be a chance for us to tune up some of our athletes in some of the shorter events and move some people around." The Hawkeyes will be looking to better some of the times they posted in Des Moines.

The sprint medley team of Marlene Poole, Tina Floyd, Yolanda Hobbs and Amy McReil took third in a time of 3:56.15, while the 4 x 100 team of Sheri Van Der Hart, Poole, Hobbs and Floyd took fifth in 45.64, a time that was good enough to provisionally qualify them for the NCAA Championships.

After the finals of the 4 x 100, Poole was disappointed, but encouraged.

"I thought we could have done better," she said. "But as long as we execute our handoffs more efficiently, that will be the key for us in the future." Hassard was pleased with his latest NCAA qualifiers.

"I think that was a very good race for them," he said.

In the field, shotputter Denise Taylor came away with a third place finish, throwing 47'6 1/4".

...men take on Nebraska, Gophers

Wheeler's squad looks to continue momentum from successful Drake Relays.

Doug Cappel
The Daily Iowan

Coach Ted Wheeler and the Iowa men's track squad head north Saturday as they take on Nebraska and host Minnesota in a triangular meet.

The outing will be the first for Iowa since last weekend's Drake Relays in Des Moines. In that meet, Anthuan Maybank took home two individual titles — the long jump and the special invitational 400-meters — and set a bevy of records in the process.

In the long jump, Maybank's winning leap of 27'6 1/4" was disallowed because of the wind, but his first jump of the day was 27'1" and that was good enough to break the longest standing record at the meet. It also broke the Hawkeye record.

In the 400, Maybank made up for a sluggish start out of the blocks and came on in the homestretch to take the title in 44.99. That time, one of the 10 best in the world this year, broke Maybank's own school record by just a few tenths of a second.

After the meet, Wheeler had nothing but praise for his standout.

"What we witnessed was probably one of the top performances ever in track and field at Iowa," he said. "Anthuan's efforts were truly the most remarkable I've ever seen."

Other Hawkeyes that caught the coach's eye after the Relays were Rajeev Balkrishnan and Audwin Patterson.

"Patterson is really starting to come into his own," Wheeler said. "And Balkrishnan is a class hurdler who is really starting to develop."

After Iowa's recent success, Wheeler can't help but feel optimistic about Saturday's triangular.

"Everything is just about on schedule," he said. "We need to work on our relays, and we're looking forward to our sprinters doing even better. Everybody is confident and we have no reservations."

IOWA PLAYWRIGHTS

Hemp pro in 'Home'

On a cursory glance, what do you expect a play called "Homegrown" to be about? I'll drop a little hint for the dull-witted: try to sum up the story line — Ohio farm family is in danger of going bankrupt, when an out-of-state cousin from California shows up and teaches them how to grow hemp... well, it ain't corn, say that much.

Curious that my editor chose out of all his staffers to write a play that would appear to be a big pot (I'll let you draw your own conclusions about that corn-kids). But after talking with playwright and the guest director as well as seeing a bit of rehearsals, I was forced to look deeper than I first expected. Richard Block, creative director of the Westbeth Theatre Company in New York, is the director writing "Homegrown."

He explained that "the reference point growing it are really the medium through which the play was written." He went on to say that the play is about what people do to themselves — to their minds.

The author of the play, Cleveland, a first-year master of fine arts playwright from Cleveland, added that the play explores people do these things to themselves, and how the family is seduced by the "new opportunities" to get back in their feet.

Hemp provides hope in 'Homegrown' play

On a cursory glance, what would you expect a play called "Homegrown" to be about? I'll drop a little hint for the dull-witted and try to sum up the story line — an Ohio farm family is in danger of going bankrupt, when an outlaw cousin from California shows up and teaches them how to grow and harvest... well, it ain't corn, I'll say that much.

Curious that my editor chose me out of all his staffers to write up a play that would appear to be about a big pot (I'll let you draw your own conclusions about that comment, kids). But after talking with the playwright and the guest director, as well as seeing a bit of their rehearsals, I was forced to look a bit deeper than I first expected.

Richard Block, creative director of the Westbeth Theatre Center in New York, is the director who is telling "Homegrown." He explained that "the references to pot and growing it are really just the medium through which the play was written." He went on to say, "the play is about what people do to themselves — to their bodies and their minds."

The author of the play, Rick Cleveland, a first-year master of fine arts playwright from Chicago, added that the play explores why people do these things to themselves, and how the family is seduced by the "new opportunities" to get back on their feet, both financially and on a personal level. At its heart, the play really doesn't dwell on the politics of drugs and drug use at all. According to Cleveland, the play could be construed to have an "anti-substance abuse/anti-drug war" subtext. But he explained that when the play was first read at the Eugene O'Neill Theatre Center's National Playwrights Conference in 1991, the people in the audience who used pot thought it was anti-drug and the nonusers thought it was pro-hemp. Go figure.

The cast, which includes Cleveland, has fun with the well-constructed dialogue — the exchanges between Dick Cook (Cleveland's character) and Don Hocker (Doug Steckle) are brilliantly timed, resulting in some genuinely masterful humor. And there's hidden humor as well in Cleveland's monologues about his stint in Vietnam, so listen carefully.

Don't expect a lot of posturing and speeches praising or devaluing hemp oil and alternate energy sources. If there's a message about hemp in "Homegrown," it takes a back seat to the exploration of a handful of souls and their last stand against moral and financial ruin.

"Homegrown" is part of the Iowa Playwrights Festival, and will be performed in Theatre A of the UI Theatre Building on Sunday at 5:30 and 9 p.m. Tickets for the performances are $6 ($5 for UI students).

Popular Czech opera to open tonight at UI

Sonja West
The Daily Iowan

It's the story of a woman who is traded back and forth between two men — one whom she loves and one who is rich.

No, it's not "Indecent Proposal." It's the popular Czech opera "The Bartered Bride," by Bedrich Smetana, and it will be performed this weekend by the UI Opera Theatre.

Set in a 19th century Czech village, "The Bartered Bride" follows two young lovers, Marenka and Jenik. To their dismay, Marenka's parents have contracted for her to marry the shy, clumsy — but rich — Vasek. Desperate, Jenik slyly outwits the town marriage broker to win his bride.

"The Bartered Bride" climaxes with the arrival of a traveling circus, humorous complications and what has been called one of the most colorful scenes in opera.

The scenes of village existence are also given life with Czech folk dances, choreographed by UI graduate dance student Marc Kotz.

A pre-performance discussion will be held in the Hancher Greenroom before both performances. At 6:30 p.m. Friday, Czech native Jitka Sonkova, Max Naxera and director Beaumont Glass will discuss "The tale behind 'The Bartered Bride.'" At 1 p.m. on Sunday, Glass will discuss the opera. The discussions are both free and open to the public.

The show will be under the stage direction of Glass, the director of the UI Opera Theatre since 1980. Glass was the leading opera coach of the Zurich Opera and the Festival of Aix-en-Provence for many years. At the UI, he has staged 24 major productions and provided his own translations of many of the operas. His authorized biography of the great soprano Lotte Lehmann was published in 1988.

The University Orchestra will be conducted by James Dixon, conductor of the orchestra since 1954 and a professor in the UI School of Music. He studied conducting at the UI under the late Philip Greeley Clapp and as the protégé of Dimitri Mitropoulos, conductor of the Minneapolis Symphony Orchestra and the New York Philharmonic. In 1989, he was selected as the Philip Greeley Clapp / Carver Distinguished Professor of Music.

Jennifer White

In the April 30 production, UI voice faculty member Scott McCoy will play the tenor role of Jenik along with soprano Jennifer White as Marenka. In the May 2 show, tenor Krisor Husted and soprano Kerri Rosenberg will portray the lovers. The role of Vasek will be played in both performances by tenor Rich Probert.

Performances of "The Bartered Bride" will be tonight at 8 and Sunday at 2 p.m. in Hancher Auditorium. Tickets are $18 and $13 for adults, $14 and $10 for UI students and senior citizens. Tickets for youths 18 and under are $9 and $6.50 for the Sunday performance only. All tickets are available in advance from the Hancher Box Office which is open 11 a.m. to 5:30 p.m. weekdays, 11 a.m. to 3 p.m. Saturdays and 1 p.m. to 3 p.m. Sundays. Tickets may also be purchased by calling 335-1160.

'93 SEASON ENDS TONIGHT

"The Nekkid Percussionists," made up of Brooks Peck, John Smick, Josh Peskay and Shannon McCorkick, left to right, will be one of several groups of performers in tonight's "Best of No Shame" show.

'Best of No Shame' hits stage

Brent Dey

The Daily Iowan

Buying a ticket to No Shame Theater is a bit like purchasing things out of a mail-order catalogue — you don't really know what you're getting until the goods arrive at your doorstep.

Every week No Shame is different, so there's no way of telling what to expect. Sometimes it's incredible and you talk about it for weeks. Other times it's bad — so bad that you've got no choice but to sit through a bunch of turkey skits hoping you'll see something worth the $1 admission you paid to get in.

No Shame Theater is an Iowa City institution, originated in 1986 by UI theater then-undergraduate Todd Ristau. In its eight years of existence, No Shame has grown from a weekly gathering in a parking lot — where skits were performed in front of the headlights of Ristau's pick-up truck — to a popular, weekly happening in Theatre B of the UI Theatre Building.

No Shame is put together every Friday at 10:30 p.m., when scripts are collected from the audience for the 11 p.m. show. The only rules are:

1. No Shame works must be original.
2. No Shame works should be no longer than five minutes (that's flexible) and
3. There must be courtesy and respect for the space (in other words — don't trash the stage!)

On any given week, the audience can be treated to an eclectic mix of comedy, music, drama, performance art and poetry.

The only time No Shame can be predicted is at the end of the semester, when the No Shame Board compiles the best pieces from the semester for the annual "Best of No Shame" performance. This year's "Best of" will be tonight at 11 in Mable Theatre. Admission will be $2.

Although there will be a heavy emphasis on comedy, tonight's performances will run a wide gamut — there will be concept pieces, stream-of-consciousness poetry, monologues, music and dramatic readings.

best."

Clint Corley, who will also be performing tonight, insists that a lot of thought goes into the pieces that are chosen for the "Best of" show. At the end of the semester, the No Shame Board reviews the semester's scripts and takes suggestions from the audience as to what some of the best pieces were.

"It's not an easy race," Corley said. The skits are judged for originality, style and audience response.

Caldeen and Corley agree that "Best of" is an ideal opportunity for people who aren't familiar with No Shame Theater to get involved. Those who have been inspired to bring in their own work in the past have been easily hooked, becoming regular participants. Corley likes it because "it's nice way to get out some creative juices," while Caldeen likes it because it gives her "something to do besides look for chocolate — and it's infinitely more satisfying."

Tonight's performance will be the last chance for No Shame fans to get their fix of eclectic, unrestricted theater for while. No Shame will be closing its doors for the interim, and won't be back until fall.

Lawrence takes break from show, producer

Associated Press

LOS ANGELES — Vicki Lawrence says she's stressed out and taking a break from her talk show on her doctor's orders.

Lawrence said Wednesday she was suffering from colitis and heart palpitations brought on by her combative relationship with Derk Zimmerman, president of Group W

Productions, which produces the syndicated "Vicki!"

"Life is too short to go on working with someone like this," she said. "Vicki!" premiered in August and is seen in more than 160 markets nationwide.

Lawrence was a featured player on "The Carol Burnett Show" in the 1960s and '70s and went on to star in a spin-off series.

THIS WEEKEND

Live IC includes UI sax

Tad Paulson

The Daily Iowan

Riverfest, indeed, will be a grand, festive day of music and fun for a large crowd of students and faculty alike. It's a day of down all those exotic food items and going nuts over the music.

well... some of the best music will be at Hubbard Park. Hell, it's also frisbee about 500 of those new through the air at Hubbard Park. Innocent people on the bank making them drop their into their baby carriages.

It's a wonderful sight spring has thankfully arrived staying inside, putting shriveled legs and watching reruns. It's time to go outside and enjoy the sun.

But hey — dat's not all. The wonderful IC event. Let's see what other good things are in store.

The Iowa Saxophone Ensemble, a group of UI faculty and three-quarter-time students, will give a free concert at 8 p.m. in Clapp Recital Hall. The program will consist of the saxophone quartet — the Russian composer Alexander Borodin's "Pieces en Quatuor," "Willy Rag," by Robert Bar

UI School of Music organist Delores Bruch will give a free concert at 8 p.m. at St. Mary's Cathedral. Soprano Sara perform with Bruch on concert is part of a series anniversary of composer visit to Iowa. The program by Dvorak, Johannes Rheinberger.

Dave Zollo, lead singer of the Bands, will play two solo at 405 S. Gilbert St., tonight. Zollo will be joined by Iowa Saturday night.

Gabe's, 330 E. Washington, will host a "Liverfest" gala at 8 p.m. Bands playing will include High and Lonesome (a local band), Captain Barney and Saturday night reggae band the Landing Crew will be on hand. Always be relieved.

Battle of the Bands will get down and right at the Iowa City Yacht Club. The Y.C. will host Kevin Blues Investigators and the blues mastery on Saturday night.

The Mill Restaurant will host piano player tonight and Saturday night (with no cover), and guitar.

Again, that's all I've heard. The truth, it's enough to sincerely apologize, but college student fighting. By the way, don't forget to buy tickets on Saturday night at 7:30 p.m. in Des Moines. Arrested Development (local), Primus, Fishbone, Chains, Front 242, Babes Against The Machine, the nearest Ticketmaster out

THIS WEEKEND...

Live IC music includes Zollo, UI sax quartet

By Tad Paulson
The Daily Iowan

RiverFest, indeed, will be huge tomorrow—a grand, excessive day of beer-swilling amidst a large crowd of students and families, grubbing down all those exotic foods at the international tents and going nuts over Lonnie Brooks and... well... some of the other bands playing at Hubbard Park.

Hell, it's also frisbee season, so there'll be about 500 of those neon suckers soaring through the air at Hubbard Park, whacking innocent people on the back of the head and making them drop their burritos and gyros into their baby carriages.

It's a wonderful sight—a sure sign that spring has thankfully arrived. Now we can quit staying inside, putting skin lotion on our shriveled legs and watching "Ren & Stimpy" reruns. It's time to go outside half-naked and scream.

But hey—the dat's not all going on this weekend on the wonderful IC entertainment circuit. Let's see what other goodies are on the slate:

- The Iowa Saxophone Quartet, one-quarter UI faculty and three-quarters UI graduate students, will give a free concert on Saturday at 8 p.m. in Clapp Recital Hall. The group's program will consist of three original works for saxophone quartet—the Quartet, op. 109, by Russian composer Alexander Glazunov, "Pieces en Quatuor," by Jean Absil, and "Willy Rag," by Robert Bauer.
- UI School of Music faculty member and organist Delores Bruch will give a free recital of 19th century organ music on Saturday at 8 p.m. at St. Mary's Catholic Church, 220 E. Jefferson St. Soprano Sara Jones Krumm will perform with Bruch on the program. The concert is part of a series celebrating the 100th anniversary of composer Antonin Dvorak's visit to Iowa. The program will include works by Dvorak, Johannes Brahms and Joseph Rheinberger.
- Dave Zollo, lead singer and keyboardist for Battle of the Bands champs High and Lonesome, will play two solo gigs at The Sanctuary, 405 S. Gilbert St., tonight and Saturday night. Zollo will be joined by local legend Bo Ramsey on Saturday night.
- Gabe's, 330 E. Washington St., will hold its annual "Liverfest" gala tonight starting at 5 p.m. Bands playing will include Divin' Duck, High and Lonesome (a long weekend for these guys), Captain Barney and The Meanies. On Saturday night reggae lords Tony Brown and the Landing Crew will take the Gabe's stage, and can always be relied on to provide a killer live show.
- Battle of the Bands runner-up Funkfarm will get down and righteously thumpy tonight at the Iowa City Yacht Club, 13 S. Linn St. The Y.C. will host Kevin "B.F." Burt and the Blues Instigators and their brawling, thunderous blues mastery on Saturday night.
- The Mill Restaurant, 120 E. Burlington St., will host piano player Radoslaw Lorkovic tonight and Saturday from 9 p.m. to 1 a.m. (with no cover), and guitarist Chris Proctor on Sunday night.
- Again, that's all I've heard about, and, to tell the truth, it's enough. If I missed you, I sincerely apologize, but I'm just an ignorant college student fighting against objectivity.
- By the way, don't forget to get your Lollapalooza tickets on Saturday morning for the June 28 show in Des Moines—which will feature Arrested Development (who should be incredible), Primus, Fishbone, Dinosaur Jr., Alice in Chains, Front 242, Babes in Toyland and Rage Against The Machine, to name a few—at the nearest Ticketmaster outlet. Dat's all folks.
