Lawyers file new trial motions in King case

LOS ANGELES (AP) — Attorneys for two policemen convicted in the Rodney King beating asked for a new trial Thursday, accusing prosecutors of using perjured testimony to win guilty verdicts.

At issue is the videotaped testimony of officer Theodore Briseno from the officers' 1992 state trial. Portions of it were shown to jurors in the federal civil-rights trial of the four officers accused in the videotaped beating.

Jurors on April 17 convicted officer Laurence Powell and Sgt. Stacey Koon. Briseno and officer Timothy Wind were acquitted.

Clinton plans sanctions of China over missile sales

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Clinton administration might impose trade sanctions on China if it determines that recent reports of Chinese missile sales to Pakistan are true, the State Department said Thursday.

"We have continuous bits of information and reports, mostly from human sources... that lead us to be concerned that China recently delivered M-11 missiles or parts of missiles to Pakistan," said one official, who spoke only on condition of anonymity.

Delivery of such systems would violate a commitment given by China last year to stop such sales and also would violate a U.S. law that seeks to stop proliferation of weapons of mass destruction.

Columbia mission ends amidst criticism

EDWARDS AIR FORCE BASE, Calif. (AP) — Clouds in Florida forced the Columbia space shuttle to land in California on Thursday after a 10-day German Spacelab mission that studied weightlessness and drew much criticism.

NASA, however, called the return of Columbia and seven astronauts "a significant milestone" because shuttles have now clocked a total of more than a year in orbit since the first one was launched in 1981.

The mission "demonstrates clearly the shuttle program can indeed support the nation's access to space," said Leonard Nicholson, NASA's shuttle manager.

Space policy analyst John Pike, however, wondered about spending hundreds of millions of dollars for another shuttle flight to test a robot arm and study the effects of weightlessness on astronauts and their cargo of fish, tadpoles, mushrooms, crystals and plants. Many of the 480 fish and tadpoles died.

UI officials think budget planning will run smoothly

Jon Yates
The Daily Iowan

After two years of budget reversions and special sessions, UI officials said Thursday they are pleased with proposed legislative increases and hopeful that this year's budget process will run more smoothly.

On Wednesday, the Iowa Legislature approved a $3.5 million increase in the UI's budget for next year, bringing the UI's state appropriations for fiscal year 1994 to $230.2 million.

Included in the increase is money earmarked for several of the UI's top priorities, including library acquisitions, deferred maintenance, and funds for undergraduate education.

"I think that, generally, everyone is pleased because this recognizes our top priorities," UI Vice President for University Relations Ann Rhodes said. "We are very appreciative of the state Legislature and the governor."

The UI must now iron out the specifics of the budget, a process that in the past two years has necessitated reversions and special sessions. UI officials envision easier going this year.

"I think it will go a lot more smoothly this year," Rhodes said. "The only glitch in this well-oiled machine is that we have yet to receive word from the regents as to when they want a preliminary budget."

The outline for the budget, which must now be approved by the governor, calls for $1 million to be earmarked for deferred maintenance on the UI campus, $515,000 to go toward library acquisitions, and $440,000 for employment of undergraduate education faculty and equipment for undergraduate education.

For UI librarian Sheila Creth, the allocations mean the university libraries will probably be able to avoid a cut in serials for the second straight year.

"We're obviously thrilled," she said. "We received no funding at all from the Legislature last year. I don't think there's any question

Postal sites targeted in shooting incidents

Larry Gerber
Associated Press

A fired postal worker wearing a "Psycho" T-shirt snuck into a California post office where he had been stalking a co-worker and fatally shot a letter carrier Thursday. Hours earlier, a disgruntled mechanic opened fire in a Postal Service garage in Michigan, killing one person before killing himself, authorities said.

Several hours after the California shooting, a woman believed to be the gunman's mother was found slain in her home. A dog also was killed at the residence.

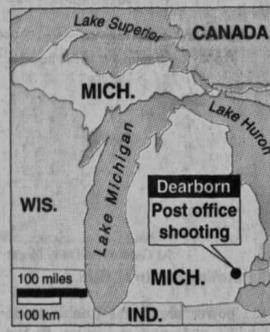

The postal mechanic in Dearborn, Mich., Larry Jasion, was apparently upset that a female co-worker had gotten a clerical job he wanted. The woman and his supervisor were injured when he shot up the garage with at least two guns.

Four hours later, a fired postal employee slipped into a post office in Dana Point, a tranquil seaside community 50 miles southeast of Los Angeles, and shot two male workers, killing one. He then drove off in a blue pickup with a kayak on top.

A hunt for the gunman, identified as Mark Richard Hilbun, 38, was under way.

Hilbun had been stalking a female employee at the post office and restraining orders had been issued barring him from the building, said U.S. Postal Inspector David Smith. She was not injured.

Hilbun had made harassing telephone calls to the woman, who returned to work Thursday after a leave of absence, prompting the post office to heighten security, Smith said.

AP/Wm. J. Castello

"We worried that that might happen, so they were locking the doors... the postmaster was going around double-checking, the supervisors were checking, employees were checking," Smith said.

Bruce Colin, who owns a bike shop behind the post office, said several employees ran into his business to report the shootings.

"This gal I know who delivers the mail to me comes flying in, screaming, 'Oh my God! Oh my God! There's this guy shooting people! Somebody just got shot!'" Colin said.

Postal Inspector Pamela Prince said Hilbun worked for the Postal Service for four years and was fired seven months ago. Prince said the gunman was wearing a T-shirt with "Psycho" written on it.

Smith said Hilbun was fired for discipline problems.

A woman believed to be Hilbun's mother was found dead in her home about three hours after the

Schlesinger predicts war of ethnicities

Victoria Forlini
The Daily Iowan

Reflecting on the increasing awareness of multicultural society in America, Arthur Schlesinger, Jr. historian and recipient of two Pulitzer Prizes, believes ethnicities could threaten to tear society apart.

Speaking to 300 people in the Main Lounge of the Union Thursday night, Schlesinger said the warfare of ideologies pitting liberal democracy against fascism and communism during the 20th century is being replaced by a war of ethnicities.

"Nationhood isn't easy to achieve nor to sustain," he said, pointing to ancient ethnic rivalries that have helped to tear apart the former Yugoslavia and parts of the former Soviet Union as well as other countries around the world.

Schlesinger, who lived in Iowa City as a young child when his father was head of the UI history department, said the United States is made up of individuals who came to escape some form of tyranny. Now, he worries that these individuals are being replaced by groups.

"The United States was conceived as a nation of individuals, not of tribes," he said.

Multicultural education is a "great step forward," Schlesinger said, because it shows the achievements of people that have been ignored throughout history and reflects on the inequalities within American society.

"This is not to say that the United States has lived up to its own ideals," he said, noting the former dominance of Anglo-Americans and

EUROPEAN ALLIES RELUCTANT

Clinton calls for action in Bosnia

Terence Hunt
Associated Press

WASHINGTON — Pressing harder for military action, President Clinton urged reluctant allies Thursday to "act quickly and decisively" with the United States against Serb forces in Bosnia after their rejection of a U.N. peace plan.

"America has made its position clear and is ready to do its part," Clinton said. "But Europe must be willing to act with us. We must go forward together."

But Secretary of State Warren Christopher was unable to report much support in Europe for bombing of Serb artillery or the arming of Bosnian Muslims. "We have not developed a consensus," said a senior U.S. official traveling with Christopher. However, the official said there were encouraging conversations with German, French and Turkish leaders.

Despite the continuing hesitation of the allies, there were predictions that force would be used, though not immediately. First, the United States will seek a new resolution for the international community to unite and to act quickly and decisively," Clinton said in a speech to a trade conference.

He said Christopher was exploring "tougher measures which can be taken collectively — not by the United States alone but collectively — to make clear to the Serbs that we are embarked on a course of peace and they are embarked on a costly course."

The president favors a dual approach of limited bombing strikes on Serb artillery and the arming of Bosnian Muslims. However, the allies fear that both approaches could widen the war, and Christopher acknowledged that Clinton may have to modify his proposals to win support.

There are divisions in Congress, as well. "I think the president would welcome a congressional resolution and we would certainly go for one if it was needed," White House communications director George Stephanopoulos said. He also said, "It's likely that a U.N. resolution is 5,000 troops in former Yugoslavia as part of the peacekeeping forces.

"Military strikes are much more likely than they were even a few hours ago, but not, I think, in the next few days," said Rep. Lee Hamilton, the chairman of the House Foreign Affairs Committee.

House Speaker Thomas Foley, D-Wash., said Congress would stand behind the president. "My overall presumption is, what the president requests, he will receive."

Christopher is due back in Washington late Friday to report to Clinton on six days of consultations in Europe and Russia.

"Secretary Christopher will be insistent that the time has come

MILLIONS AFFECTED BY PROBLEM

Fear of technology a treatable problem

Chris Pothoven
The Daily Iowan

You're sitting down to type in a paper at Weeg when suddenly it happens. Your palms become sweaty, your heart starts to palpitate and a massive headache begins to form. Could this be some new sort of computer virus which attacks humans as well?

No, of course not. There is no such thing. You're just experiencing the most severe level of technophobia, and you're not alone.

According to two California researchers, as many as one-third of the 14 million college students in the United States may suffer from some form of this fear, usually in less severe forms, because of the increasing use of technology.

"Computers certainly don't cause me any of the physical symptoms, but I'm still not completely comfortable with them," UI graduate student Tim Richards said. "I'm getting better, though. The first time I was in Weeg, I had no idea what I was doing, I feel a lot more comfortable than before."

Husband-and-wife team Larry Rosen and Michelle Weil, a psychology professor at the Dominican Hills campus of California State University, and a clinical psychologist and instructor at Chapman University, respectively, have spent several years studying technophobia. They have recently developed a treatment program for it, according to a recent article in the Chronicle of Higher Education.

According to Rosen and Weil, there are three levels of technophobia. An uncomfortable user may be slightly anxious or use some negative statements about computers, but is generally only in need of group therapy.

A cognitive technophobe, on the other hand, may need individual counseling to overcome the fear. On the surface these people appear calm, but inside they are full of doubts and frustrations, thinking "Everybody but me knows how to do this!" or "I'll hit the wrong button and mess up the machine."

At the extreme of technophobia is the anxious technophobe, who exhibits the classic signs of an anxiety reaction, as described earlier, when using computers. These individuals could need several weeks of one-on-one therapy. Chris Pruess, manager of the Weeg User Support Center, said most people who have problems with computers would probably fall into the uncomfortable user group. The majority of stress is probably caused by lack of time, she said.

"People come in two hours before a major paper is due and expect to be able to immediately get on a computer and type it in," she said. "A couple of days ago, a woman left here upset because she came in a half-hour before a 300-page paper was due and expected to get it done before then. The printing alone would take more than 30 minutes."

Although more than 10,000 people may ask the Weeg consultants for help each month, the center rarely sees people who fit the most extreme category of technophobia, Pruess said.

"We don't see that many folks any more that are actually afraid of the computers. The Macintoshes are pretty user-friendly," she said. "Of course, the typical person that walks into the consultant office is feeling a certain amount of stress, so we try to help them work the problem out and answer any questions."

UI junior Amy Kelly described herself as falling into the uncomfortable group, partly because of the ever-changing and advancing technology.

"I hate it when I learn one version and then they update the program, and I have to relearn it," she said. "I learn by doing, and that in itself can involve a certain amount of fear."

Besides having offered a treatment program for the three levels of technophobia, Weil and Rosen also advocate a different approach to using computers at colleges, schools and the workplace.

Instead of using computers for the first time under stressful conditions like deadlines, new users should allow time to explore the machines and experiment before incorporating them into their daily activities.

"People need the opportunity to play before they gain confidence," Weil said in the Chronicle. "That attitude would do a world of good for the existing technophobes, and it would also stop creating new ones."

TURBULENT WATERS TRAP ITEMS

Unusual collection captured by dam

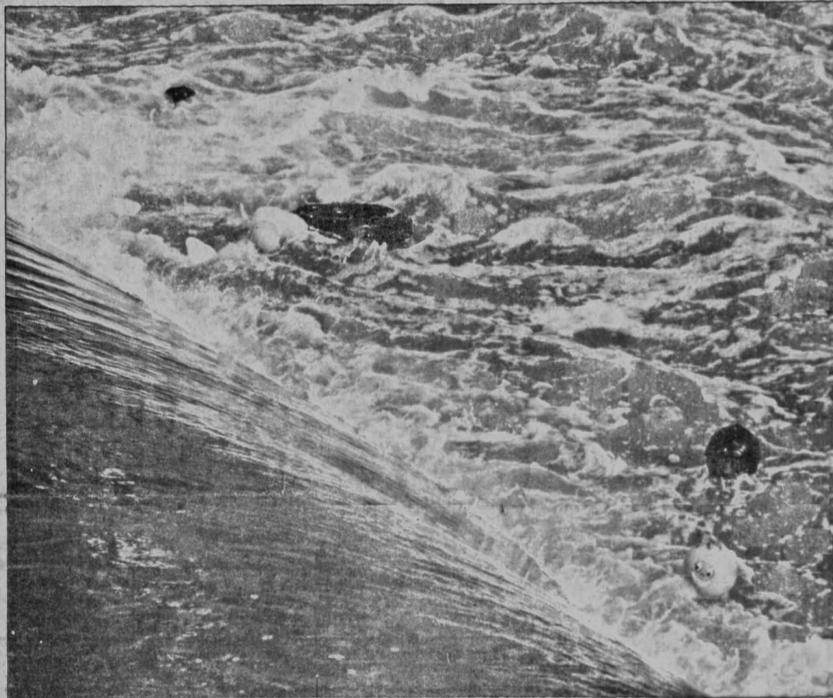

Sara Epstein
The Daily Iowan

Not everyone tries to rescue items that are whisked away by the ravaging current of the Iowa River. In fact, presently there are five balls — a basketball, a volleyball and three brightly colored children's balls — bobbing up and down just south of the Burlington Street dam. One can also see about eight chunks of styrofoam, a tire and a tree trunk repeatedly being pulled under the water and then shot back up.

UI Power Plant manager Ferman Milster said the large amount of water released by the Coralville Dam as well as the fast, strong flow allow for items to easily be "captured" near the dam.

"The dam can trap people just like it will trap these items," he said. "The water is very turbulent. It looks like it's boiling."

UI freshman Shelly Condos, who lives in Slater Residence Hall, said she and some friends thought the tree trunk was a dead body when they first saw it about two weeks ago.

Al Goldis/The Daily Iowan

Colored children's balls and other unusual items are often trapped near the Burlington Street dam.

"We watched it for a while and made sure it wasn't, but with the limbs sticking out and everything it looked like someone drowning," she said.

Milster said when the flow is high, water near the dam has more of a churning effect and is dangerous, but added that the dam doesn't always look so threatening.

"It looks very peaceful sometimes," he said. "One of the interesting things that amazed me when I started here is that when there was a low flow, I'd see a duck standing on the dam eating algae."

That means it's safe to perform maintenance on the boards on the dam, Milster said. Though this is normally done once a year, he said the power plant was unable to do so last year and is looking to the fall when the flow is usually lower.

UI freshman Debbie Hassman, who lives in Rienow Residence Hall, said she first noticed the balls about three weeks ago.

"I think there's more in there now though, maybe because of River-Fest they accumulated," she said.

UPHOLDING CONSTITUTIONAL PRINCIPLE

ICLU threatens to stop prayers with lawsuits

Roger Munns
Associated Press

DES MOINES — The Iowa Civil Liberties Union said Thursday it will sue to prevent graduation prayers and will seek damages against school officials who allow them.

"This is not something we're eager to litigate," said ICLU director Criss Farley.

"But we will not step aside. We are simply giving fair warning. From this point forward, our policy is absolute zero tolerance."

The ICLU went to court twice before on the issue in Iowa, successfully arguing in 1985 and again in 1989 that graduation prayers at public high schools violate the constitutional principle of separation of church and state.

Last year, the U.S. Supreme Court ruled prayers are not allowed at graduation ceremonies for public schools.

Farley said there are no exceptions.

The ICLU's statement was in response to a document sent to all schools in the country by religious leader Pat Robertson's American Center for Law and Justice.

The letter says schools can circumvent the no-prayer rule if students do the leading, not clergy or school officials.

Farley said that plan will not work.

"It is not out of their (school officials') hands. We will argue that it is the school district's obligation to instruct any speakers at a graduation ceremony that they are not to engage in any speech of religious content," she said.

Mary Gannon, director of policy for the Iowa Association of School Boards, said all public schools in Iowa have been advised to prohibit prayers.

She said speakers at commencements can't be told what to say, but neither can school officials conspire to get a prayer in the ceremony by using a student.

"It's a matter of intent," she said. "If a student shouts, 'Thank God, I graduated,' at the ceremony, I don't think we'll be in trouble."

Farley said the ICLU is not getting "picky-picky."

"The Supreme Court didn't think it was picky-picky, did they?" Farley said.

"The First Amendment encompasses 200-plus years of constitutional principles. One of them is the separation of church and state," she said.

"The government and its agents — and we sometimes forget that public schools are part of the government — cannot lend their authority to any particular religious point of view. They must remain neutral," she said.

The separation principle, she said, is essential to maintain religious freedom.

She said the group will seek restraining orders if it hears about a district set to offer a prayer.

They were supposed to spend Thursday tuning up for this weekend's Big Ten golf tournament at Finkbine, but two members of the Michigan women's golf team instead spent part of the day at the UI Hospitals and Clinics following a two-car crash at the corner of Governor and Washington streets.

Michigan golfers Shannon McDonald and Wendy Bigler sustained minor injuries when their van collided with another vehicle and then flipped over shortly before 1 p.m. Thursday.

The van, which was carrying the six-member team to the Old Capitol Center for some shopping, slid several feet on its top before coming to a rest near the sidewalk on Washington Street.

According to team members in the van, the driver of the van, coach Susanne LeClair, was attempting to turn left onto Washington Street from the right lane of Governor Street, a one-way street, when the van struck the vehicle in the left lane.

"She didn't realize it was a one-way, and she didn't see the car in the left lane," said Jenny Zimmerman, who was in the back seat of the van when it crashed. "Everyone in the back of the van saw the car and started yelling, but it was too late."

After the van came to a rest on its top, all seven passengers were able to climb out without assistance.

"I'm just so shocked that we walked out of there," Zimmerman said. "I thought it was on fire or something, because everyone was yelling 'get out, get out.' It was like being in a washing machine."

The driver of the car, Lorraine Ford, sustained no injuries in the collision.

Police reports show that LeClair will be charged with making an improper turn.

Members of the team said they were unsure whether they would compete in this weekend's tournament.

True to take over as vice president for finance and university services

Jon Yates
The Daily Iowan

After nearly a year and a half at the helm, Douglas True can remove the interim from his title, as UI officials announced Thursday that he has been named the university's new vice president for finance and university services.

True, who has served as interim vice president since Susan Phillips resigned in December 1991 to accept an appointment to the Federal Reserve Board of Governors, was chosen from a pool of 167 candidates.

True's appointment marks the second time in three weeks that the UI has chosen an internal candidate to fill an administrative position. On April 20, the UI appointed Judith Aikin as dean of the Liberal Arts College after she had served as interim dean.

UI Vice President for University Relations Ann Rhodes, who served on the search committee that chose True, said the appointment was a good one.

"He's going to be a great vice president," she said. "It's been a pleasure to work with him. He's very well thought of on this campus."

The Office of Finance and University Services encompasses planning and control of an annual budget of more than $1 billion.

True's appointment is now subject to approval by the Iowa state Board of Regents at their May 19 meeting in Ames. If approved, he will take over as vice president effective June 1.

SAFETY PRECAUTIONS TAKEN

Lightning bolt damages bricks on corner of EPB

Molly Spann
The Daily Iowan

Broken bricks on the ground and a chunk out of the building were left by lightning that struck the English-Philosophy Building during Thursday's early morning thunderstorm.

The lightning hit the southeast corner of the building near the top, and the area below was blocked off by yellow tape and barricades.

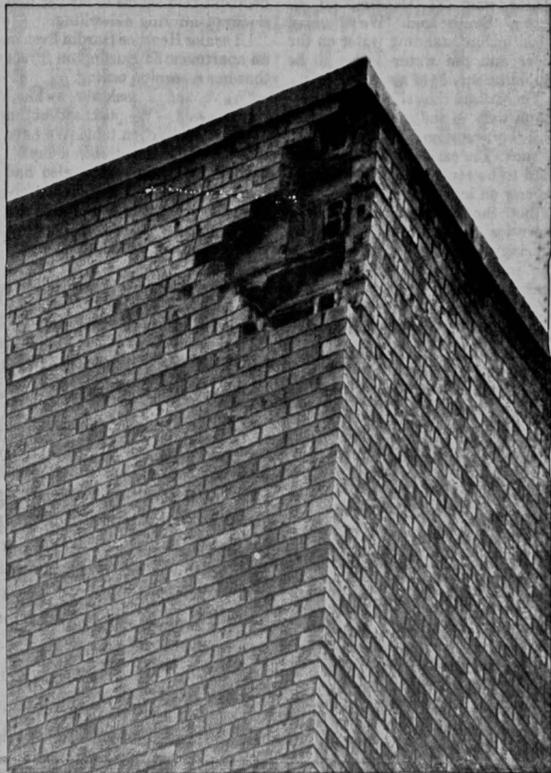

Jim Howard, associate director of building operations and maintenance at the Physical Plant, said the corner has been blocked off as a safety precaution.

"There are still some loose bricks at the top and we're in the process of taking them out," he said. "We're also going to drape plastic to reflect water from going through the opening."

Although the lightning damage was not as severe as it has been with some buildings on campus in the past, Howard said it will need a significant amount of reconstruction.

"It will take some repairs," he said. "We'll have to remove more brick and lay more brick. It won't cost just $100."

Howard said it is not unusual for lightning to hit campus buildings.

Lightning struck the English-Philosophy Building Thursday morning causing damage to its southeast corner.

Inmates of state penitentiary instigate riot ending in overnight standoff

Dennis Gale
Associated Press

SIoux FALLS, S.D.—A fiery riot that injured two guards and resulted in an overnight standoff between about 200 State Penitentiary inmates and a cadre of law officers ended Thursday with promises of vigorous prosecution.

"Some cases are going to be made and some people are going to be made to answer for this," said state Attorney General Mark Barnett, who told reporters he will supervise an investigation.

He said he did not immediately know the precise nature of the charges or how many inmates would be prosecuted.

Authorities had no estimate of the damage the rioters caused.

Thursday morning, inmates agreed to return to their cells after a night of fires and vandalism centered in the recreation yard they controlled for 12 hours. Their list of 17 demands was read to a television crew shortly before 7 a.m., and the TV camera then monitored their return, as they had requested.

The demands included calls for greater religious freedom, better health care for prisoners and better education.

A U.S. flag was hanging upside down at half-staff from a prison flagpole during the riot.

Day by day in the minors

After 13 years of play as the Cincinnati Reds' single A baseball club, the Cedar Rapids farm team has made a change.

Its boss is now the California Angels. Its new nickname is the Kernels. And to further the allusion of an eastern Iowa "Field of Dreams," its logo is a baseball parting the husk of an ear of Iowa field corn — the tassels winding along the ball's seams.

Minor League baseball in general is a game of constant change and new faces. Players and coaches are cut and traded. One day athletes are training in Mesa, Ariz.; the next they are shivering from the rain in a Cedar Rapids dugout. Managers formulate a winning combination knowing they will have to start with a new crop of young men the next year. Fans pick a favorite player, and then he is gone.

Playing for single A clubs like the Kernels is just a starting point for some ball players. Many others, who never advance beyond the minor leagues, take a seat in the stands.

Baseball players live with uncertainty — and out of a suitcase — hoping for a chance at the major leagues, or just to continue playing the game they love.

"You just pack up and go play," says Kernel outfielder Michael Wolff. "No matter where you go, it's always going to be baseball."

Many of the Kernels who have made Cedar Rapids their home for the season have not adjusted quickly. They all admit their dislike of the cold weather after training in Arizona but add that they have been welcomed by the warmth of Midwestern people.

"The people of Cedar Rapids have given us all we want and need," says catcher Robert Tucker, "all except the pots and pans."

Many of the players are young men from the California coast, and young Cedar Rapids women wait giddily outside the fence after a game hoping to meet them.

Other players have brought their families along to Iowa. Outfielder Morisse Daniels, whose wife and baby daughter come to the games, has a different type of admirer on the other side of the fence.

"They're out in the stands rootin' me on no matter what I do," says Daniels. "My little girl is happy to see her daddy walking by whether I just struck out or scored a run."

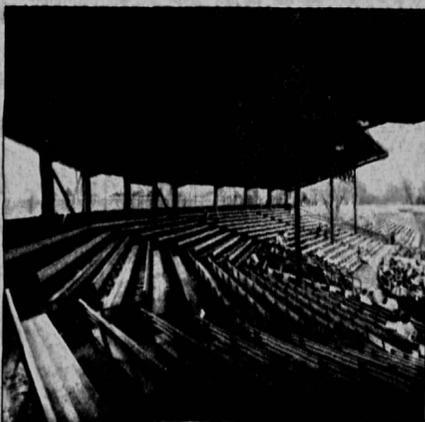

At Veterans Memorial Stadium, when the sun is shining, 2,000 or more fans show up to cheer on the Kernels. Anyone who might have an afternoon off comes to get a glimpse of future stars, to taunt the umpires and to have a beer or a frosty malt.

Although the Kernels have had a shaky start to their season, 7-14, people come to the stadium just to enjoy the tradition of minor league ball.

That much about the game of baseball hasn't changed.

Emma Goldman Clinic touts safe sex with weeklong condom sale: 12 for $1

Terry Collins
The Daily Iowan

Question: What could the Emma Goldman Clinic possibly have on sale that is inexpensive and could maybe save lives? Answer: Twelve condoms for a buck.

It's right, for only $1, you can get Lifestyle brand condoms with spermicide that help prevent the spread of sexually transmitted diseases.

In a weeklong promotion sponsored by the clinic, anyone can come in with a coupon that is displayed in advertising circulars around campus.

But there may be a small problem, according to Francine Thompson, the clinic's health services director.

"We usually try to go a week with the sale, but we wind up selling out in about three to four days," Thompson said.

The last promotion in October sold 6,000 condoms and also gave customers the opportunity to register to vote in the national elections.

"We try to have something unique and different each time," said Naveep Jassal, the clinic's community program assistant.

Jassal said information on the Freedom of Choice Act that is being reviewed by Congress is included with the purchase of the condoms this time.

The clinic's condom sale, which is in its third year, usually brings about 300 to 400 people to a booth that is set up outside the clinic when the weather is warm.

The ratio of males to females who buy the condoms is about 50/50, Thompson said.

"The men who are tentative coming to the clinic arrive in pairs — the buddy system," she said. "And the women just shove the coupon to whoever is at the booth."

Jassal said there is no limit to how many condom purchases a person may make as long they have the coupon.

UI student L.L. Lockhart said the sale of condoms by the clinic is an effective tool for practicing safer sex.

"Not only does it encourage safe sex for people who are sexually active, it also provides awareness to the dangers and consequences of unprotected sex," he said.

RISK STILL RELATIVELY SMALL

Rectal cancer may be associated with trihalomethane in Iowa's water supply

Timothy Connors
The Daily Iowan

By-products from the chlorination of drinking water can increase consumers' risk of contracting rectal cancer, according to a National Cancer Institute study that was assisted by UI researchers.

Dr. Ken Cantor, who has directed studies of cancer and environmental factors at the National Cancer Institute since 1977, presented a study of chlorination by-product effects in Iowa to an audience of 40 at the Advanced Technology Laboratories Thursday.

In the study, which concentrated on Iowa and four other states, researchers questioned thousands of residents on consumption of drinking water and measured the amount of trihalomethane in their water.

Trihalomethane is a by-product formed when chlorine is applied to water for disinfection and combines with organic material present in the water. It is easily traceable and provides a key indicator of relative quantities of other by-products in drinking water.

The study demonstrated that surface drinking water sources such as rivers or lakes produce more chlorination by-products than groundwater sources such as aquifers.

After comparing levels of trihalomethane consumption from the case studies with incidents of bladder, colon and rectal cancer, analysts concluded that a positive correlation exists between exposure to chlorination by-products and rectal cancer occurrences.

Cantor explained that trihathis study indicates a risk to tap-water consumers in the Des Moines area and several areas along the Mississippi, as well as in Iowa City.

"These communities tend to have higher levels of trihalomethanes," Lynch said.

However, the cancer risk from highly chlorinated drinking water is still relatively small compared to risks from a high-fat diet or smoking, Lynch said.

"It really now comes down to a cost-benefit level," he said.

In 1982, a national limit was set for trihalomethane content in drinking water at 100 parts per billion.

"It's going to cost billions of dollars across the country to reduce those levels further," Lynch said.

Iowa City Water Superintendent Ed Brinton said the chlorination by-product scare is not new to him.

Despite the limited risks, Brinton said he expects to see stricter trihalomethane regulations from the U.S. Environmental Protection Agency. He said further restrictions will force Iowa City to move its water plant.

"We are just able to squeak by today," Brinton said. "We will never be able to come close when they cut that number in half."

"It really now comes down to a cost-benefit level."

Chuck Lynch, professor lomalomethane could be the carcinogen by-product, but he believes it is probably something else.

"Trihalomethane is a good surrogate for whatever else is there as chlorination by-products," he said. "It's associated with trihalomethane, but that may not be the risk factor."

UI Department of Preventive Medicine and Environmental Health Associate Professor Chuck Lynch served as Iowa investigator for the study. He pointed out that

Witness identifies gunman during testimony

Associated Press

DES MOINES — A Drake law student testified Thursday that the man he saw shoot Cara McGrane behind the cash register at the Drake Diner is Joseph White Jr.

"The only thing that really went through my head at that moment was he's only here to rob, he's not going to shoot," Scott Birrer said. "But right as I was thinking the word 'shoot,' he fired. Cara jerked and fell very quickly, very hard."

Birrer, 26, said he and McGrane had dated and were friends. He was near the counter where McGrane, 25, and Tim Burnett, 28, were killed during a robbery.

White, 17, is charged with two counts of first-degree murder and one count of first-degree robbery in the Nov. 29 shootings at the Des Moines restaurant.

Birrer admitted he first pointed out another man to police. But he testified that he had doubts at that time and when police later showed him a photo lineup, he identified White.

Yugoslavia to cut aid to Serbs

This statement was issued after the Serb parliament rejected the U.N. peace plan.

Robert H. Reid
Associated Press

SARAJEVO, Bosnia-Herzegovina — Yugoslavia, the main backer of Bosnian Serb fighters, on Thursday said it would sever all aid to Bosnian Serb fighters except food and medicine.

If implemented, the embargo could deprive the rebels of their main source of fuel, weapons and ammunition, leaving them virtually isolated in their yearlong fight against Bosnia's Muslims and Croats.

Belgrade's move — the strongest action yet in its recent turn away from the Bosnian Serbs — came hours after the self-styled Bosnian Serb parliament defied pleas by Serbian President Slobodan Milosevic and other Yugoslav leaders to accept a U.N. peace plan to end the war.

President Clinton and other Western leaders condemned the assembly's decision, and Clinton said it must be dealt with "quickly and decisively." He is trying to drum up support among reluctant allies for military actions.

In Bosnia, meanwhile, defiant Bosnian Serb troops advanced on the eastern Muslim enclave of Zepa. Sarajevo radio said at least 130 civilians were killed when Serb troops broke through a defense line on the town's western side.

In a statement issued in Belgrade Thursday, the Yugoslav government said it acted because of the adverse effects of international sanctions on the Yugoslav economy and its people.

The sanctions, and the drain on finances caused by supporting the Bosnian Serbs, has been ruining the Yugoslav economy. Thursday's action was seen as an attempt to persuade the United Nations to lift the recently toughened sanctions.

Bosnian Serbs have discounted Western expectations that Milosevic would decide to cut the flow of their vital supplies. They say the Serbian leader would face almost insurmountable opposition from his ultranationalist backers if he tried that.

In its statement, the government expressed great concern over the Bosnian Serb parliament's rejection of the peace plan, and ordered strict implementation of its decision to cut off aid.

Bosnian Serb deputies rejected the peace plan after 17 hours of debate overnight Wednesday. They voted 51-2, with 12 abstentions, to instead put the peace plan to a vote in Bosnia's Serb-held territories, on May 15-16.

Milosevic stalked angrily from the hall after the deputies' vote.

The assembly's vote followed days of furious diplomatic efforts to get Serbs to accept the plan, already approved by Bosnia's Muslims and Croats.

Bosnian Serbs have opposed the peace plan because it gives them patchwork territories instead of contiguous ones. They also complain that the plan, which divides Bosnia into 10 provinces largely along ethnic lines, gives Serbs only 43 percent of the republic's territory. They now control some 70 percent.

Bosnian Serb leader Radovan Karadzic signed the plan Sunday, dropping months of dogged opposition, and on Wednesday implored his deputies to accept it.

On Thursday, Karadzic claimed the assembly had not rejected the plan, and he invited Clinton to visit Bosnia to examine the situation.

Clinton on Thursday urged reluctant Western allies to join in "tougher measures" against the Serbs and called the referendum a delaying tactic.

Karadzic said in an interview with CNN, "This is not a delaying tactic. It is our lives and our destiny. We have to decide this as a nation, as a whole."

There was little sign, however, that U.S. allies were ready to back Clinton's plans for bombing Serb positions or allowing weapons to flow to Bosnia's Muslim-led government.

On the eve of his return to Washington after a six-day tour of allied nations, Secretary of State Warren Christopher was unable to report much support for Western intervention.

In London, European Community negotiator David Owen, a co-author of the plan, called the Bosnian Serbs' decision "dangerous folly."

In Belgrade, opponents of Milosevic's ruling party condemned the Bosnian Serbs' decision. "We are now all doomed to hell," said Vuk Draskovic, leader of the main opposition party.

Mar... Crutsinger
Associated Press

WASHINGTON — Clinton insisted Thursday proposed free trade with Mexico remains a top priority, but his negotiator was told bluntly that the pact is in serious trouble in Congress.

U.S. Trade Representative Mickey Kantor and heavy opposition during a congressional hearing on the proposed North American Free Trade Agreement. Democrat Sen. Commerce Committee expressed strong reservations about the deal, while Republican warned Kantor that the support could melt if administration uses the agreement to impose new environmental regulations.

The agreement, covering the United States, Canada and Mexico, would create the largest free trade zone in the world, involving virtually all barriers to trade and investment between the three countries.

Doubts about Clinton's commitment to the agreement were raised last week when Clinton's director, Leon Panetta, interviewed that he could not meet a deadline for now in But Clinton is now trying to allay those doubts.

Speaking to a conference organized by the U.S. Export Bank, Clinton said he supports the agreement as the administration fulfills its negotiating commitments covering the environment, worker rights and such.

SOCIETY

What we need

We hear a lot these days about what the world — including our generation — needs. We're bombarded with slick mediated messages that we just need a good night's sleep, we need quick hemorrhoid relief, we need better pain relievers and we need clear soda and low-alcohol beer. These things are not items that society needs, these are items that it uses to deal with the daily trials and tribulations of living in the modern world. They don't address the mammoth problems that we are (and will be) facing, and they certainly don't bring us any closer to workable solutions.

Too many people who could be held responsible for their actions aren't. And it is as much our fault as it is anyone else's. We allow those in power free reign because we assume that they are pious and moral. But what we forget is that there are no outstanding, concrete moral codes to follow anymore. You and I both live within our moral and ethical constructs — which we create ourselves — and occasionally we project those onto others, forgetting that they too have their own personal codes of conduct. It's no wonder that many of my peers feel disillusioned at the prospect of entering the "real world" and even (could it be true?) attaining positions of power. Any rules of morality we had faint notions of while growing up have been exploited and corrupted to no end.

"Do unto others as you would have them do unto you." Now witness any fanatically religious organization (say, the far right of the Republican Party) and its treatment of any group working toward social change. Hell, we even had a failed UI Student Association presidential candidate (who aligned himself with the Christian church) refer to homosexuals and liberals as "campus refuse." Don't tell me individuals have respect for each other's opinions and ideas any longer.

"Follow the Golden Path." What was originally designed to entice people toward moderate living has been used to justify the grossest displays of financial and material hedonism. Not that there is anything wrong with getting ahead in the world; but it must be done with a conscious recognition of the Big Picture — the world around us. The question of needs and happiness have plagued humans for centuries: How much money, power, sex, fame, etc. does one need to be truly happy? Once again, where a code of conduct once stood, one no longer exists, because of past excesses.

Perhaps where society has failed my generation most is in its complete disregard for and unwillingness to take responsibility for its actions, no matter how heinous. Nobody seems to know where exactly the buck stops anymore. We are a society that is "falling into anal retentiveness" — a sociological phenomenon characterized by the endless transferring from office to office of a simple phone call. Very few people are willing to stand up and take the blame for a plan gone awry, but scores line up for credit when something works. For instance, when the first batch of UI summer schedules was printed without professors' names, no one was talking. But when the UI attracts a record amount of donations, everyone is looking for a pat on the back. This is not meant to underscore the amount of work, planning and people power that goes into a successful program, but when something fails, just say so and move on. Too much valuable time and energy is spent butt-covering.

What we need is not more of the same, but more responsible people who are able to live up to our expectations. A few exist (even here at the UI), but we need more. If you are not up to the challenge, then move out of the way and watch from the sidelines. It is not a hopeless case. If we can weed through all the crap that is fed to us daily, we will be able to begin constructing something that we can take pride in without compromising our ideals for faster, quicker, better headache relief, and we won't need it.

JIM ROGERS

Failures in modern Christendom due to a lack of Christianity

Liberal individualism — an ideology that spawns, in Alasdair MacIntyre's phrase, "bureaucratic individualism" — limits the capability of Americans to conceive of a public, yet nonpolitical realm in civil society.

When liberal ideology reduces the public sphere to mere politics, all other institutions of civil society — churches, families, nongovernmental schools, unions, corporations and the like — get shoved into the purely private realm where principle becomes nothing more than personal preference.

Philosopher Alasdair MacIntyre, now at Notre Dame, sketches some of the consequences of this shift for modern society in his 1982 book, "After Virtue." We live with the very practical consequences of this shift (consequences popularly pictured in last year's film, "Grand Canyon").

These include the increased degradation and poverty in urban America, a generation of latch-key children, increased teen-age suicide, drug abuse and criminal activity at a level drawing close to the brutality of Hobbes's State of Nature.

These social pathologies hit the weakest and most fragile of our culture the hardest; they are the people without the resources to survive intact when communities disappear, only to be replaced by the impersonalism of bureaucratic administration.

No policy seems to make any difference for these folk; the pathologies grow irrespective of whether the political administration rests in the hands of a "liberal" or a "conservative." Modern American pseudo-conservatives long ago capitulated to the reductionistic, politicizing vocabulary of Enlightenment individualism.

Yet how long will it take for us to realize that maybe attempts to find political solutions to these problems are bound to fail because these problems are not primarily political. (They nonetheless affect and are affected by the political.)

The better path lay in recognizing the abject failure of the modern project — that is, the failure of ideological individualism, and the critical need to reconstruct the

Ups and downs: a year in Viewpoints

As the final installment of my column for the '92-'93 year here at the UI, this seems as good a place as any to take an overview of the year in Viewpoints, a time to pay homage to the more noteworthy occurrences, both positive and negative.

On the positive side of things, after a jaunt to Des Moines for the Iowa Newspaper Association's awards banquet a few weeks back, The Daily Iowan's Viewpoints Page brought home second place in the state for "Best Editorial Pages" in the largest circulation category. This came as something of a surprise to me, as no matter how carefully I knotted the tie loaned to me by my managing editor, I couldn't escape the fact that I was the only one of my colleagues present at the banquet with hair long enough to tie back.

Two of the DI's editorial writers, Fernando Pizarro — the managing editor whose tie I borrowed — and Dan Dorfman, took the W. Earl and Reeves Hall Scholarship for excellence in editorial writing at this year's Fourth Estate Awards. Unfortunately, both are graduating and will be moving on shortly.

And — much to the chagrin of a fairly predictable group of about 20 or so people — columnist Byron Kent Wikstrom found himself honored by the Society of Professional Journalists with the first place award for "Best Columnist" in the Midwest region. Excellent justification for this award came in the form of Wikstrom's opening paragraph to his column of Tuesday, April 27, which read as follows:

"By whatever name you call them, and you've got a lot to choose from — bull, cop, heat, bobby, bacon, copper, gendarme, paddy, peeler, bluebottle, Dogberry, dogbreath, donutboys, jelly-roll, smokie, flatfoot, flathead, flatface, fuzz, feds, gumshoe, pig, piggie, oinkers — by whatever name you call them, law enforcement officials get little respect — especially from the media."

(That passage gets my vote for "Best Lead of the Year," too.)

During the UIA presidential campaign earlier this year our mail boxes were literally choked with traffic concerning the event and its candidates. As some may dimly recall, the actual elections occurred on a Monday and Tuesday, Feb. 15 and 16. And I decided to run every letter which crossed my desk concerning the election. The letter traffic received at The Daily Iowan was decidedly lopsided, with a large number of letters of support for the current — and new, as of the close of the election — UIA president and vice president, John Gardner and Micah Hobart. For legal reasons, the DI confirms the authorship of all Letters To the Editor and/or Guest Opinions. And — unfortunately — the single letter received in support of then-candidate Michael B. Clark, as the election's end neared, arrived so late in the day on Monday, Feb. 15 that by the time it was confirmed, the Viewpoints Pages had already been typed in, edited, copy edited, laid out, sent to our printers, pasted up and proofread. So while a few letters supporting Clark arrived earlier on, in the final days of the election Clark took a bit of a pounding in the Letters section, as the letters received at that point were almost exclusively pro-Gardner/Hobart.

I feel that I could have clarified the situation a bit, had I but included an Editor's Note stating that The Daily Iowan had included every Letter to the Editor which had been received and confirmed by my page's deadline that Monday.

Also on the down side — as I had feared — the use of an argument which I condensed from the hazy memory of a viewing of a friend's video copy of the PATV program "The Old Capitol Gang" — on an early Saturday morning after a late Friday evening — drew a bit of fire. What I condensed to read: "Some of us ... consider homosexual sex ... as equatable with rape," had, in a more full excerpt, read as follows: "Insofar as those who oppose homosexuality would say that both are instances of sexual perversion, there isn't that much of a difference ... Now I'm not saying that that's what I consider it, but I am taking what they say seriously ... that this is on par with any other sexual perversion, like a rape." That's a lengthier, but verbatim — from a tape I was able to re-obtain — and, for my records, copy thanks to the assistance of some very helpful friends. The reason for the condensation of the argument in the first place was an amusing transcribing half an hour of the recording "The Gang" tearing into Teresa Wagner in an on-again, off-again fashion for defending this position. As nearly as I have been able to tell from my conversation with her after the article, while defending this position insistently and personally (by use of the "I"), she did not necessarily hold the beliefs espoused by that position. Fine and well; I've done the same thing in arguments about pro wrestling.

On a more positive note, our Viewpoints election-day coverage back in November really shaped up well. This was due in part, believe it or not, to the prodding of DI columnist Mitch Martin. But the pages which appeared really owed a great deal to the College Republicans, University Democrats, Students against the ERA, and Students for the ERA, all of whom submitted guest opinions so that we might present as many sides to the election as possible. Editorial writer Tom Hudson, whose work also appears on today's Viewpoints Page, weighed in with a much-needed third-party endorsement; he chose to go to bat for the Libertarian ticket.

As the semester's brakes lock up and the UI school year skids to a halt, it's also time to bid farewell to former DI editor and (as of the close of the semester) former Viewpoints columnist Jay Casini. Also graduating and moving on will be editorial writer John Ertz, who only joined the Viewpoints staff this spring. All of the Viewpoints Page's staffers have contributed in some way to keeping these pages and the exchange of ideas flowing with vitality; it will be a shame to lose so many.

 required, and we expect one." Before any action, Clinton first would have to go before the nation to explain why using force was in the U.S. national interest. Clinton applauded the announcement by Yugoslavia that it was cutting off all aid to Bosnian Serbs except food and medicine. Belgrade has been the main backer of the Serbs in Bosnia. "That would be a good start,"

Clinton said. "We'll see. We're working today on a lot of options. I want to see what happens over the next few days."

Asked if military action was inevitable, Clinton would only say, "We'll see if anybody changes their conduct."

Defense Secretary Les Aspin and Gen. Colin Powell, chairman of the Joint Chiefs of Staff, briefed members of the House behind closed doors Thursday morning and met with senators in the afternoon.

Powell made clear that any military action against the Serbs would not be as effective as the allied operation in the Persian Gulf War, congressional sources said. He indicated that U.S. aircraft would be lost and Americans would be killed, said the sources, who spoke on condition of anonymity.

Emerging from the first session, Rep. Hamilton said the United States was "at a real crossroads" as it chooses between diplomatic and military options. "Whichever of these paths we go down, we're going to have substantial military involvement," he said.

Rep. Ike Skelton, D-Mo., expressed deep reservations. "Militarily, I see no light at the end of the tunnel," he said.

In his speech, Clinton accused the Serbs of using delaying tactics to consolidate their war gains.

"The international community, I believe, must not allow the Serbs to stall progress toward peace and continue brutal assaults on innocent civilians," Clinton said. More than 134,000 people have been killed or are missing after a year of fierce ethnic fighting.

The U.N.-backed peace plan was shelved by the self-styled Bosnian Serb parliament in favor of a referendum by the Serb population of the republic.

SHOOTINGS

 post office shooting in her home in Corona del Mar, 10 miles north of Dana Point, said police Sgt. Andy Gonis.

California authorities wouldn't release the names of the 42-year-old letter carrier who was killed or the 44-year-old injured worker, who was treated and released for a minor head wound.

In Michigan, Jasion, 45, walked into the Dearborn garage about 9 a.m., carrying a handgun and a shotgun. As he opened fire, employees ran screaming into the street.

One man was fatally shot, a man and woman were wounded and another man suffered chest pains and a hip injury after falling while running away.

Jasion's body was found in the garage with a self-inflicted bullet wound in the head, authorities said.

Jasion, a 24-year postal employee, had filed a complaint with the Equal Employment Opportunity Commission over losing the promotion, but it was rejected about six weeks ago, officials said.

"A postal inspector sat down with him at that time and counseled him and told him he had other appeals," Postal Inspector Fred Van de Putte said.

The name of the worker who was killed wasn't immediately released.

The woman, Sandra Brandstatter, 32, was in critical condition with two gunshot wounds to the head and one to the back, said Dr. Paul Haydon, who works in the emergency room of Oakwood Hospital.

The man, Bruce Plumb, 43, the motor vehicle maintenance supervisor, was stable with multiple gunshot wounds to the back, Haydon said.

Authorities and co-workers described Jasion as eccentric and embittered. The windows of his house were painted white from the inside, obstructing views both in and out.

Shortly after a mail carrier killed 14 people at an Oklahoma post office in 1986, Jasion went to his boss and said "You're going to be next," Robert Fry recalled. Fry said he quit as garage supervisor in 1987 in part because he feared Jasion.

 that this support from the governor and the Legislature was connected to the support we received from the Board of Regents."

Inflationary costs had forced the libraries to cut subscriptions substantially two years ago, an action Creth said she would like to make up for this year.

"We're not sure how this is going to enable us to rebuild some of the collections that have been hurt in the past," she said. "We won't know until the bills start coming in this fall."

The bills are already in at the UI Physical Plant, where deferred maintenance costs totaled over $30 million when assessed three years ago. According to Jim Howard, associate director for building operation and maintenance, the $1 million earmarked for deferred maintenance at the UI will serve as a shot in the arm for several projects.

"One million dollars is going to help solve some of the bigger problems, but there's still a lot to do," he said. "We accumulated this deferred maintenance over many years and a lot of buildings could use help."

Howard said most of the money will be used to replace leaky roofs, to waterproof several campus buildings, and possibly to replace windows.

A final UI budget is expected to be completed by June 8.

Mystery disease strikes 10,000 Cubans

HAVANA, Cuba (AP) — A mystery disease that usually begins with a partial loss of eyesight has struck more than 10,000 Cubans in recent months, baffling the country's vaunted medical establishment and causing alarm among many Cubans.

The ailment also can cause a sharp pain in the head, arms and legs, and can reduce a victim's ability to move about.

Doctors say Cubans most prone to the disease drink and smoke too much. But there also has been speculation that the blame may rest with possible dietary deficiencies resulting from the country's acute economic crisis.

Dr. Hector Rodríguez Silva, deputy director of the Hermanos Almajeras Hospital in Havana, told reporters this week that malnutrition can't be ruled out as a cause.

Short pints have British beer drinkers foaming

LONDON, England (AP) — When an Englishman orders a pint of beer, he's serious about wanting a full one and may well demand that the glass be topped off if there's too much foam.

But under pressure from the beer industry, the government is quietly wavering on a pre-election promise to make every pint a full one, effective next year.

Brewers estimate that filling each glass full would cost about 400 million pounds or $628 million a year — a burden to thousands of pub owners who would get fewer servings per barrel. So the government says it will reconsider things as it throws out cumbersome and unnecessary regulations on business.

This does not sit well with British beer drinkers, who down 28 million pints a day.

Many pubs' glasses hold exactly one pint. If there is a head on the brew, there is less than a pint, which is 20 British ounces and 19.2 U.S. ounces.

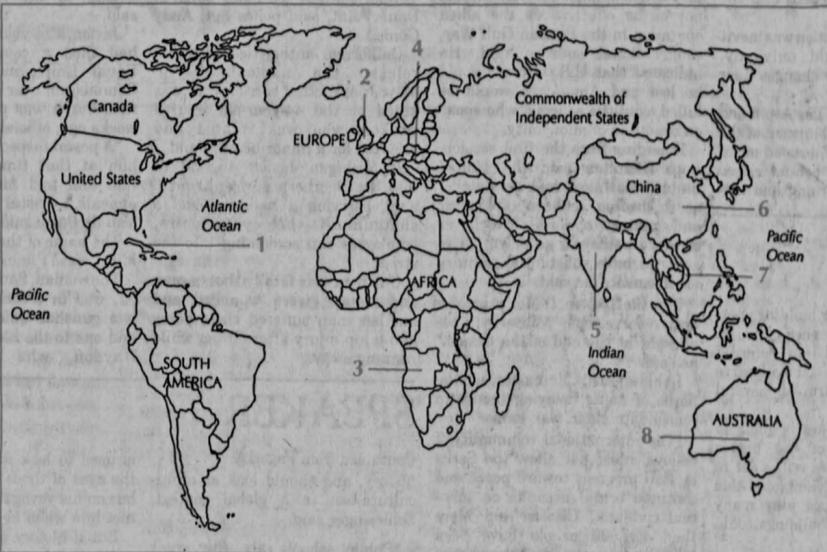

Drinkers advocate use of 22-ounce glasses with a line near the top marking off the 20-ounce pint, so bartenders could pour beer up to the line and the foamy head would not be counted.

The British pint is larger than a U.S. pint, which contains 16 fluid ounces that are measured slightly differently.

Thieves cash in on Angolan cholera epidemic

LISBON, Portugal (AP) — Doctors battling a cholera epidemic in Angola say thieves are systematically looting dwindling supplies of drugs as hundreds of people die every day of the disease.

"As fast as we carry drugs through the door of the cholera wards, they disappear through the window," said Dr. Vincent Bercruysse, director of Doctors Without Borders.

Thieves are also stealing cots, surgical tubing, hypodermic needles, gauze and even disinfectant, Bercruysse said Thursday in a telephone interview.

Andre Brandao, Angola's transportation minister, said the problem was "critical" and that corrupt police were involved in the thefts.

Much of the stealing occurs in Angola's ports, before the supplies even reach the hospitals.

More than 1,200 people a week were admitted to the city's cholera wards last month, surpassing the 850 per week registered in 1989 during what was then the worst epidemic in the history of the war-torn former Portuguese colony.

Intervention in Bosnia would be boon for Croats

ZAGREB, Croatia (AP) — If the West intervenes militarily against Serbs in Bosnia, nobody will be happier than the Serbs' deadly foes, the Croats.

By the logic of my-enemy's-enemy-is-my-friend, Croatia is likely to view Western action against the Serbs as support for Croatia's own war against Serbian forces. Whether the West will want to embrace Croatia as an ally is less certain.

Like the Serbs, although less frequently, Croat forces have torched homes, "cleansed" villages of rival ethnic groups, and slaughtered Serb and Muslim civilians in Croatia and Bosnia.

For that matter, there have been similar actions by Muslims against both Croats and Serbs.

Also of concern to the West is Croatia's ruling party, which is dangerously split between former Communists and extreme right-wing nationalists who hark back to the World War II Fascist regime that slaughtered Serbs, Jews and Gypsies.

Guinness records: Indians, freaks or heroes?

CALCUTTA, India (AP) — Could you grow a 7-foot, 10-inch mustache? Remain standing for 17 years? Write 1,749 letters on a grain of rice? Run across the United States backwards? Crawl 870 miles?

Each of these feats was accomplished by an Indian, and each made it into The Guinness Book of Records.

It's so prestigious that nearly one-fifth of all Guinness mail to its London headquarters is from India. The president of the Guinness World Record Holder Club of India changed his name from Harparkash Rishi to Guinness Rishi.

Some Indians believe these peculiar records stereotype India as a poor and backward country of freaks that has made little progress since independence from Britain 46 years ago.

Others say a Guinness record is held as a mark of heroic distinction in a developing nation that looks up to the Western world as it loses the old social ties of caste and extended families.

Call-in radio: China's latest hot item

BEIJING, China (AP) — It's 11:10 p.m. and "Life Hotline" is on the air, with our two hosts taking calls tonight on problems with romance.

With much of Beijing expectantly tuned in, a confused man phones for advice after making his wife "very unhappy" by divulging his secret ardor for an old sweetheart from the fourth grade.

Next up is a woman who breathlessly asks: "If a husband has too much contact with other women, what's a wife to do?"

"Life Hotline" and other live call-in talk shows are burning up the airwaves in major Chinese cities with discussions of social and personal problems rarely broached in public before.

The new shows are the product of an era in which the ruling Communist Party views quality of life as more important than ideology. Live talk shows, all-night music shows and more aggressive radio news programs are testing the limits of what's permissible.

Since it began March 1, "Life Hotline" has discussed mental health, women's role in society and a wide variety of sex topics: sex education, elderly sex and extramarital affairs.

U.S., Vietnam, Laos to discuss MIAs in Hanoi

BANGKOK, Thailand (AP) — Vietnamese, Laotian and U.S. representatives will meet in Hanoi, Vietnam, this weekend to arrange searches along the Vietnam-Laos border for the remains of Americans missing in action.

Lt. Col. David Jeraldson, who serves with the Pentagon's agency dealing with the MIA search, said Thursday that the three nations will set up procedures for searching remote border areas of Laos controlled by Vietnamese forces during the war. U.S. investigators have previously had difficulty organizing searches there because the border is not clearly marked.

"We hope these meetings will allow us to break through some of the roadblocks we've encountered," said Jeraldson, who works for the Joint Task Force-Full Accounting office in Bangkok.

No dates have yet been established for the border searches, he said.

Australian military urged to drop British traditions

SYDNEY, Australia (AP) — Australia's military should drop British traditions such as bagpipes, tartan kilts and portraits of Queen Elizabeth II in the officers' mess, a government report says.

The document said such images in the Australian Defense Force repel potential recruits from non-British backgrounds.

"The ADF should jettison some of its more British-orientated traditions and replace them with ones unequivocally Australian," it said.

It said the military does not fully reflect the ethnic diversity of Australia's 17.6 million population, which has been boosted by immigration from Asia and other places since World War II.

Like several other former British colonies, Australia has retained Britain's monarch as head of state. But Prime Minister Paul Keating has outlined plans to give the president the queen's role in 2001.

OVERLAND PARK, Kan. — The field for the NCAA Division I women's basketball tournament will be expanded from 48 teams.

A number of changes in tournament formats were announced Thursday following a year-long study by the NCAA Executive Committee.

The Division I men's soccer tournament will expand from 32 teams, the Division I volleyball championship will increase from 32 to 48 and Division I women's soccer will go from 20 to 32 teams.

Expansions were also announced for track and field, swimming and tennis.

Baseball team forfeits playoffs for exams

NEWARK, N.J. (AP) — Rutgers University-Newark baseball team forfeited its New York Athletic Conference playoff Thursday because the players had something more important to do — take exams.

The forfeiture means Rutgers Newark is out of the playoff picture.

Rutgers-Newark and Tr State tied for the fourth playoff spot and needed to face each other to determine the qualifier for the four-team tournament. The conference champion receives an automatic bid to the NCAA Division I tournament.

"They tell us he's feeling better. It's very encouraging," said Finks' wife, Rusty Kasmiersky, as Finks was moved to a private room on Wednesday. Finks entered the hospital on Monday after the NFL draft.

Finks had complained of respiratory problems for several days and was too sick during the week to talk to reporters. Doctors diagnosed Finks, a heavy smoker, with lung cancer after he was taken to Southern Baptist Hospital where he underwent a series of tests.

Lions sign James Jones

PONTIAC, Mich. (AP) — The Detroit Lions signed unrestricted free agent running back James Jones Thursday. Jones made his first-round draft pick in 1983.

Jones, 32, was the Seattle Seahawks' starting running back last season. He caught 22 passes for 190 yards but did not score.

Jones played with the Seattle Seahawks in 1988 when he was traded to the Seattle Seahawks. He led the Lions in rushing in 1985-87.

PONTIAC, Mich. (AP) — Unrestricted free agent running back James Jones signed Thursday with the Detroit Lions, the team that made him a first-round draft pick in 1983.

Jones, 32, was the special teams captain for the Seattle Seahawks last season. He caught 21 passes for 190 yards but did not carry the ball.

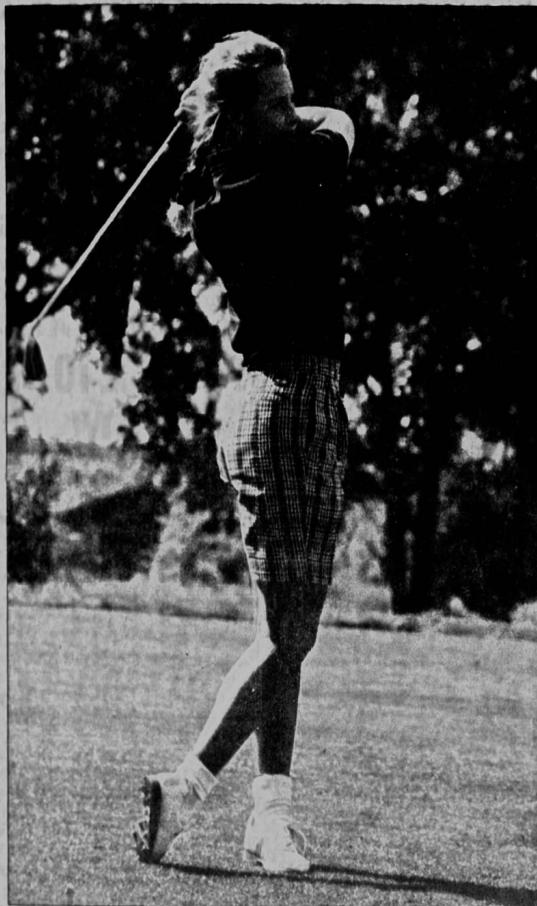

Jones played with the Lions until 1988 when he was traded to Seattle. Cornerback Terry Taylor. He led the Lions in rushing from 1985-87.

Baines on 15-day DL

TORONTO (AP) — The Baltimore Orioles placed outfielder-designated hitter Harold Baines on the 15-day disabled list retroactive to May 5 on Thursday and recalled outfielder Mark Leonard from Rochester of the International League.

Baines strained a rib cage muscle while checking his swing in a game at Minnesota on May 4. The injury occurred in the same game in which Baines tied a club record by reaching base for the 13th consecutive time with eight hits and five walks.

Hawkeyes hoping home-course advantage will hold true in 12th annual championships.

The Daily Iowan

The 12th annual Big Ten Women's Golf Championship begins today at Finkbine Golf Course, where the Hawkeyes hope some home-course advantage can propel them into contention for the team title.

The first round gets underway at 8 a.m., with threesomes teeing off every 8 minutes from the 1st and 10th tees. Round two will commence 30 minutes after the opening 18 holes are played.

Iowa's top six players tee off beginning at 8:48 a.m. and will be paired with golfers from Minnesota and Illinois, two other teams in the hunt for the championship.

According to Iowa coach Diane Thomason, four-time tournament champion Ohio State and defending champ Indiana will be the teams to beat this year.

"I think it's going to come down to a race between Ohio State and Indiana," Thomason said. "Wisconsin, Illinois, and Minnesota should also be in the hunt — they're all good teams. For us to compete with that group, we have to play the best we've ever played and have a lot of scores in the 70s."

The Hawkeyes proved they could post those types of numbers two weeks ago at the South Alabama Intercollegiate Championship, where Judy Bornholdt, Stacy Boville and Jenny Nodland all shot below 80 in Saturday's round. Boville shot a 77 the day before for her lowest total of the season.

"The potential is there for a high finish, if we all can put together the good scores we're capable of. This is our home course, and we know it better than everyone else."

Judy Bornholdt

Iowa's team of six will include Bornholdt, Boville, Jennifer McCullough, Nodland, Lynette Seaton and Tanya Shepley. Bornholdt, who leads the Hawkeyes with an average of 82.5 strokes per round this spring, believes Iowa has the ability to surprise the favorites on their home course.

"The potential is there for a high finish, if we all can put together the good scores we're capable of," Bornholdt said. "This is our home course, and we know it better than everyone else."

All 11 teams know this week's deluge of rain will make the par 73, 5,950-yard golf course that much longer. However, Thomason believes the weather won't affect the outcome of the tournament.

"The course is just swamped, so everyone's scores will be higher because they won't get any roll out of their shots," Thomason said. "Whatever the course is like, we've all got to play on it, so I don't see the wet weather giving us any more of an advantage than anyone else."

Iowa finished seventh at last year's conference tournament, which was hosted by the University of Illinois. The Hawkeyes were led by Mary Jo Rollins, who tied for 17th with a four-round total of 333. Bornholdt finished six shots behind Rollins, finishing in 27th place.

Fans planning to attend today's rounds should note that the Iowa threesomes will make the turn from the front to the back nine beginning at approximately 10:30 a.m. The Hawkeyes will finish their first rounds nearly two hours later and will tee off for their second 18 holes at approximately 1 p.m.

All three days of the Big Ten Championship are free to the public, and fans are welcome to follow the event on all 18 holes. Tee times for Saturday and Sunday's 18-hole rounds is 9 a.m.

Knicks eliminate Pacers in overtime

Seattle ties Utah with 93-80 victory

Associated Press

INDIANAPOLIS — The New York Knicks advanced to the Eastern Conference semifinals with a 109-100 victory over Indiana as Doc Rivers hit three 3-pointers in overtime Thursday night.

The Knicks, who won the best-of-5 series 3-1, will play Charlotte in the opening game of the conference semifinals in New York on Sunday. The Hornets are coming off a first-round victory over Boston in their first NBA playoff appearance, while the Pacers are now 0-6 in postseason series.

New York overcame a 33-point effort by Reggie Miller, who had 126 points in the four games.

The Pacers never were ahead in overtime after leading by as many as 14 points in the first period. Patrick Ewing, who had 28 points, put the Knicks ahead to stay, 96-94, after missing the potential winning shot in the closing seconds of regulation.

Detlef Schrempf's free throw made it 96-95, but Ewing responded with another basket.

Rivers, who had 21 points and 11 assists, gave the Knicks a 101-97 lead with his first overtime 3-pointer, with 2:41 to play. After Schrempf turned the ball over with a bad pass, Rivers hit another 3-pointer to put New York ahead 104-97 with 1:16 remaining.

His final 3-pointer gave New York a 107-98 lead with 44 seconds left. Rivers tied the game 89-89 with a 3-pointer with 2:48 left in regulation. He then hit a jumper to give the Knicks a 91-89 edge.

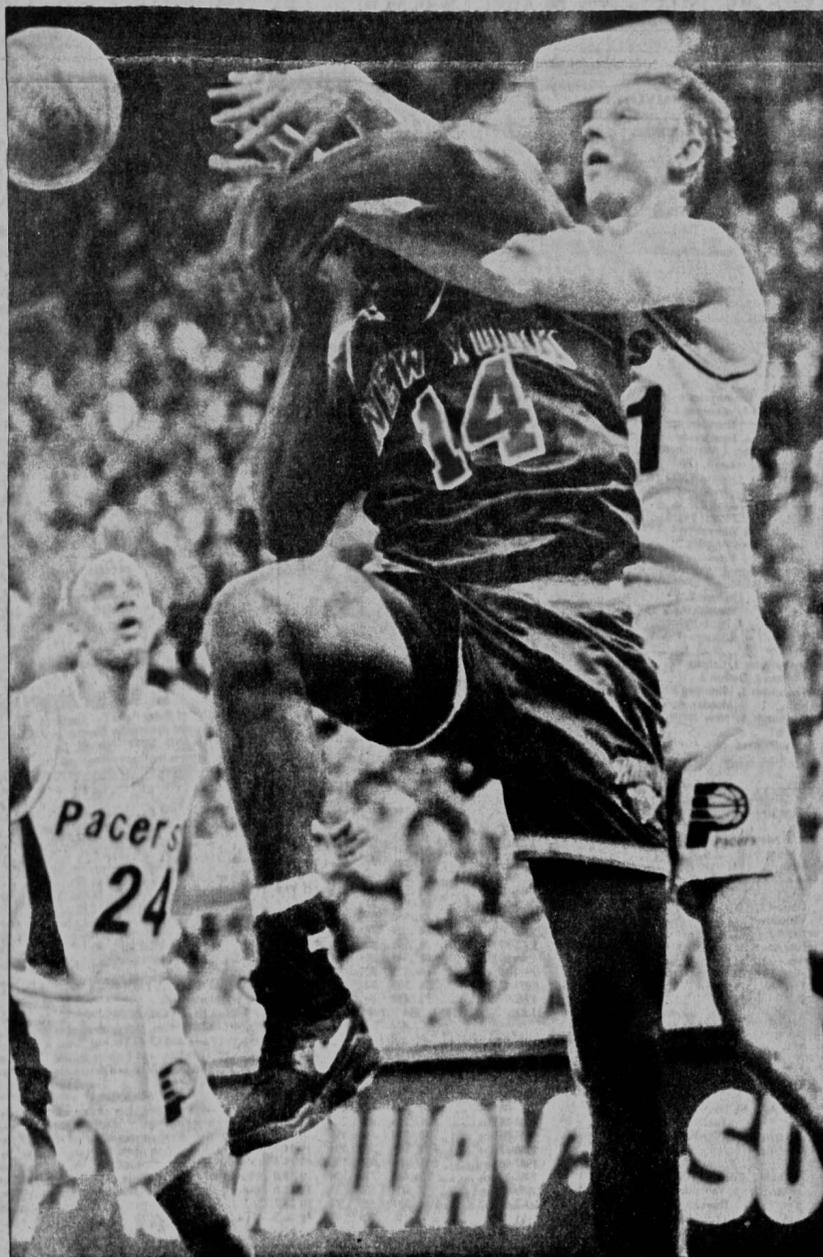

With Charles Smith ineffective and Charles Oakley in foul trouble, Anthony Mason came off the New York bench to score a playoff career-high 25 points in 43 minutes, shooting 11 for 13 from the field.

Mason also had 10 rebounds, seven on the offensive end where New York posted a 19-11 advantage. Overall, the Knicks had a 64-45 rebounding margin with Ewing and Oakley each getting 13.

Schrempf scored 25 points for Indiana, which was making its fourth consecutive playoff appearance. Rik Smits had 21 for Indiana and he and Dale Davis each had 12 rebounds.

Ewing missed a 21-footer in the closing seconds of regulation with the score tied 94-94. John Starks grabbed the offensive rebound, but his wide-open layup at the buzzer rolled off the rim.

There were eight lead changes and five ties in the fourth quarter.

Associated Press

The Pacers' Detlef Schrempf fouls New York's Anthony Mason in Game 4 Thursday night at Market Square Arena. The Knicks eliminated Indiana in overtime and will face Charlotte in the next round.

Miller did most of his damage in the first and third quarters and had only one basket in the fourth.

SALT LAKE CITY — The Seattle SuperSonics, with Eddie Johnson scoring 13 of his 24 points in the fourth quarter, regained homecourt advantage against Utah, tying their playoff series at 2-2.

The Sonics outscored the Jazz 23-16 in the fourth period after taking a 70-64 lead into the final 12 minutes.

The outcome sent the two teams back to Seattle for a fifth and deciding game Saturday. The winner will enter the second round of the playoffs next week against either the Houston Rockets or the Los Angeles Clippers, who also are tied 2-2.

Shawn Kemp and Derrick McKey scored 16 points each for the Sonics, who were tied at halftime. Karl Malone scored 21 points and Jeff Malone 14 for the Jazz, who gained homecourt advantage in the series by winning Game 2 at Seattle.

BIG TEN TENNIS

Indiana up first for Iowa

Joel Donofrio

The Daily Iowan

First-round action at the 1993 Big Ten Men's Tennis Championships gets underway today at Klotz Tennis Center, where the fifth-seeded Hawkeyes take on No. 4 Indiana at 1:30 p.m. Both teams finished 6-4 in conference play, but the Hoosiers prevailed 5-2 in Bloomington last weekend to earn the higher seed.

Despite having difficulty with Indiana, Iowa coach Steve Houghton is confident his club will rebound to beat the Hoosiers when it really counts.

"Last weekend's match was actually quite close, we nearly won at No. 1 doubles to win the doubles point," Houghton said. "If we win that point, it changes everything going into singles, so I feel we have a good chance this time around."

One of the bright spots versus the Hoosiers occurred at No. 1 singles, where Klas Bergstrom outplayed fellow all-Big Ten player Nigel Russell for a 1-6, 6-1, 6-2 win. This weekend's matches will be the last collegiate tennis for senior co-captains Bergstrom and Eric Schulman, both of whom believe the Hawkeyes will be poised for the upset.

"We can beat Indiana but if we're going to do it, everyone has to be at the top of their game," Schulman said. "No one can afford to get down on themselves — we all have to stay positive and keep playing hard because you never know if your match could be the deciding one."

Should the Hawkeyes beat the Hoosiers, they would most likely face 25-3, 10-0 Minnesota. The Golden Gophers, ranked 19th nationally, will play the winner of the Wisconsin-Michigan match held late Thursday night.

While acknowledging that his team received a difficult draw, Houghton believes his team can compete with anyone.

"We won every meet we were supposed to win this season, but we didn't have a breakthrough win. Hopefully we'll get that great performance this weekend," Houghton said. "The league is extremely balanced this year, and I believe we can compete with anyone even though we didn't get any breaks from the seeding committee."

Major League Roundup

ATHLETICS 6, Red Sox 3. BOSTON — Mark McGwire is hitting home runs in bunches. McGwire, who has hit two or more home runs in 26 games during his career, did it for the third time this season, and second against the Boston Red Sox.

dating back to April 27 at Oakland, when the A's hit four in one game, two by McGwire.

HOUSTON — Reggie Sanders hit a two-run homer — the second of the ninth inning off relief ace Doug Jones — and the Cincinnati Reds scored all their runs in their final at-bat.

NEW YORK — Scott Sanderson doesn't think he has anything to prove after 15 years in the big leagues.

Chili Davis hit a tie-breaking two-run homer in the eighth inning as the California Angels defeated the New York Yankees behind Sanderson's strong pitching.

Sanderson, who played for the Yankees the previous two seasons, had New York off balance throughout the game. He gave up five hits, walked none and fanned four in eight innings, improving to 4-0 lifetime against the Yankees.

"I don't want to say anything less than special things about the Yankees," Sanderson said. "I have good feelings. I wouldn't give less than my best no matter how I'm pitching against."

Sanderson (4-1) and Mike Witt put on a marvelous pitching duel for seven innings. Witt, making only his third start of the season following right elbow rehab, gave up one run, six hits and one walk in seven innings.

"I'll be satisfied when I get a win," said Witt, who pitched for the Angels from 1981-1990 before being sent to New York for Dave Winfield. "I pitched well enough to keep us in the game. You never forget how to pitch."

California manager Buck Rodgers played the game under protest, arguing that the Yankees' Bernie Williams was allowed to bat after catcher's interference was called in the third inning. But since the Angels won, it didn't matter.

Stripper Topsy-Turvey ran onto the field in the fourth inning and tried to hug Witt, who wanted no part of it. She was run down by security.

CLEVELAND — The statistic that sets Randy Johnson apart is strikeouts. It's also the stat that concerns him the least.

"I don't even think about that right now," the Seattle left-hander said after he boosted his major league-leading total to 54 by striking out seven.

"Last year, I was chasing (Roger) Clemens and (Melido) Perez, but you can't think about that sort of thing," Johnson said. "It's the same as with a hitter. If you start thinking about home runs, you won't hit them. You just have to let it happen."

Alvaro Espinoza and Albert Belle homered for the Indians, Belle hitting his major league-leading 11th.

Blue Jays 10, Orioles 8. TORONTO — Joe Carter and Darnell Coles had two-run homers, and Ed Sprague a tie-breaking solo shot.

Four homers — including a solo shot by Pat Borders — accounted for all of Toronto's six runs against Baltimore starter Ben McDonald.

After Damon Buford hit his first major league homer to null the Orioles' even at 5-5 in the fourth, Sprague responded in the bottom half with his third of the season.

Danny Cox (2-0) in relief of rookie Scott Brow, pitched 4½ innings, allowing three runs on four hits with one walk and three strikeouts. Duane Ward got the final three outs for his ninth save.

NBA

O'Neal rookie of year

Associated Press

ORLANDO, Fla. — Shaquille O'Neal, the Orlando Magic's backboard-smashing center and most celebrated player to enter the NBA in a generation, easily won the NBA rookie of the year award Thursday.

"I hope I can get an NBA championship trophy to go along with it," O'Neal said, "so that when I retire and have children, I can tell my 'I was bad.'"

The 7-foot-1 center received 96 of a possible 98 votes from a nationwide panel of sports writers and broadcasters who regularly cover the NBA — three from each league and 17 representing the national media.

Center Alonzo Mourning of the Charlotte Hornets received the other two votes.

O'Neal, the No. 1 pick in last year's draft out of LSU, was the only player in the NBA's top 10 in four statistical categories.

He averaged 23.4 points, 13.9 rebounds and 3.53 blocks per game and shot .562 from the field, leading all rookies in each of those categories. He was second in the league in rebounding and shot blocking, fourth in shooting percentage and eighth in scoring.

"I was just doing what I was supposed to do," O'Neal said. "At 303, you're supposed to go out there, dunk, rebound and battle. I was just doing my job."

O'Neal was the first rookie since Buck Williams in 1981-82 to grab more than 1,000 rebounds. In 20 of the team's 82 games, he had at least 20 points and 20 rebounds.

"I can't imagine there's anybody in the league who doesn't think he'll be an absolutely great player," said Jerry Reynolds, player personnel director of the Sacramento Kings. "There hasn't been anybody coming into the league who has caused this kind of stir in a long time, maybe since (Kareem) Abdul-Jabbar."

With O'Neal's help, the Magic set their best record (41-41), 20 games better than a year earlier. It was the biggest improvement in the NBA this season.

He set single-season team records for total points (1,893), rebounds (1,122) and blocked shots (286). He became the Magic's all-time leader in blocked shots after just 28 games.

What was the highlight? "When I ripped the backboard down on my head," O'Neal said with a laugh, referring to games against Phoenix and New Jersey when his monster dunks required new rims. "There have been a lot of highlights. . . . The whole season was fun."

He said his goal in the offseason is to improve his outside shooting and free throws. But celebrity engagements will limit his time on the court.

His schedule for the next few weeks includes making a rap music video in New York, appearing in a basketball movie with Nick Nolte, and touring in Europe and Japan to promote Reebok and Pepsi.

"I just have to stay focused to not get caught up in all this. I have to remember what my real job is," he said. "But every time I get a good business opportunity I'm going to take it. These deals don't come along every day."

MEN'S TRACK

Hawkeyes journey to Indiana

Cross country all-American Kevin Herd will compete for the first time since the Drake Relays.

Doug Cappel
The Daily Iowan

The Iowa men's track squad heads into its final full month of action Saturday as it travels to Indianapolis for the Indiana Invitational.

Fresh off of a strong performance in Minneapolis last weekend, the Hawkeyes will send a full squad to meet with a couple of important additions.

Cross country all-American Kevin Herd will compete for the first time since a disappointing finish in the 5,000-meters at the Drake Relays last month and Chad Ohly will rejoin the team, hoping to better his season-best mark of 16'0" in the pole vault.

"Our training is going better than ever," Coach Ted Wheeler said. "And if Herd can come around, we'll be very excited."

Unfortunately for the Hawkeyes, not every event is fitting on all cylinders, according to Wheeler.

"We're working to improve both of our relays, but we're really really looking to improve our 4 x 100 team," he said.

However, Wheeler feels several individuals are coming into their own.

"We feel that Rajeev Balkrishnan can move up into the top three (in the Big Ten) in both the 110- and 400-meter hurdles," Wheeler said. "And Darren Smith has been improving quite a bit in the long jump and we think he might be a potential Big Ten champion."

"Plus, Sean Gale and Matt Gerard are really coming into their own in the steeplechase," he added.

Another bright spot for the Hawkeyes in the last week has been Anthon Maybank's selection as the Big Ten Men's Track Athlete of the Month — an honor that came as no surprise to Wheeler.

"We really kind of expected it," Wheeler said. "He has been long deserving of the honor."

Maybank's performances at the Drake Relays also set a new milestone not only in Iowa track and field, but in the world. After running 44.99 seconds in the 400-meters and jumping 27'1" and 27'6 1/2" in the long jump, Maybank became the only man in history to leap 27 feet and run the 400 in under 45 seconds.

"His performances at Drake were really beyond reality," Wheeler said.

'Diversity in Dance' spotlights cornucopia of artists, works

Tasha Robinson
The Daily Iowan

"Diversity in Dance," the title for this year's Space/Place Concert is an extremely apt name, considering the scope of the program being presented. Virtually all of the 13 pieces in this weekend's concert are modern dance works, but the variety of styles is as wide as the variety of choreographers — 11 in all.

According to dance faculty member and "Diversity in Dance" co-adviser Linda Crist, no two pieces are at all alike. "It's a real variety of modern dance," she said. "There are some that are rather humorous, there are others that are very light, some are dramatic — there's no one specific style at all."

Ya Hui Lo, who is dancing in four of the pieces to fulfill the performance requirement for her dance master of fine arts, says that the pieces she performs range broadly from Chinese folk to classical ballet to completely modern. Her fourth piece, "Longing, Alone, Lonely," is the only one of the four that she herself choreographed — and it's in yet another style, which she herself created and which she describes as a synthesis between Chinese folk and modern dance.

"They are all emotional dances," she said of the similarities between pieces. "I need to concentrate very hard, put feeling into the dance."

"Link," a work choreographed by Charles Bach, is a modern piece utilizing extremely bright costumes and a set of magician's silver linking rings. The rings, which Bach said represent the individual self of each performer, are used in a variety of ways to represent relationships and connections between people. Infatuation, successful and unsuccessful relationships, and one person's control over another are all symbolized through the choreography and the rings. Overall, the piece is light and cheerful, a fast-paced, airy romp.

By contrast, Lisa Kneller's "Misericordia" is a dark and dramatic piece in which five women's movements are set to a somber hymn. And Tammy Bullington's untitled work is a disjointed, minimalist piece, set to the dialogue of two dancers.

According to Crist, pieces for the Space/Place Concert are selected through staff adjudication of existing pieces, and the top-ranked works are selected. "Anyone who's interested in submitting a piece is allowed," she said. "They could be a graduate, an undergraduate, a student, a nonstudent, a faculty member. Anyone can submit a piece for adjudication. The faculty view all of the pieces and then they rank them, and that's how we determine what the program is going to be."

As a result, the program depends entirely on what pieces are submitted and how they're ranked for quality; subject, tone, and style are not part of the consideration process. "Most of our program this year is in varying styles of modern dance," Crist said. "There's only one balletic piece in it. But that will vary from year to year depending on what works are submitted for adjudication."

Time, however, is an important factor; the faculty tries to include as many of the top-ranked pieces as possible, but is subject to time constraints. Currently, Crist said, the show is about 90-105 minutes long with one intermission.

With only quality and time considerations as constraints, the "Diversity in Dance" program is likely to be a striking and entertaining show. Crist herself encourages people who aren't familiar with dance or who are intimidated by the idea of a dance concert to show up. "I think it's a good kind of performance to bring your family to," she explained. "It's something anyone could enjoy."

"Diversity in Dance" will be performed May 7 and 8 at 8 p.m. in Space/Place Theatre in North Hall. Admission will be $4 at the door.

IOWA PLAYWRIGHTS FESTIVAL

Wallace's 'America' examines gulf war

Tad Paulson
The Daily Iowan

What do we, as American citizens, really know about what happened in Iraq during Operation Desert Storm? Are homosexuals in the U.S. military equally entitled to the opportunities afforded to heterosexual soldiers? And why would someone actually want to be a part of the sprawling, all-powerful American military in the first place?

UI graduate playwrighting student Naomi Wallace tackles these controversial, rather large questions, among others, in her new play "In the Heart of America," the fifth major production of the Iowa Playwrights Festival. It will be performed tonight at 5:30 and 9 in Theatre B of the UI Theatre Building.

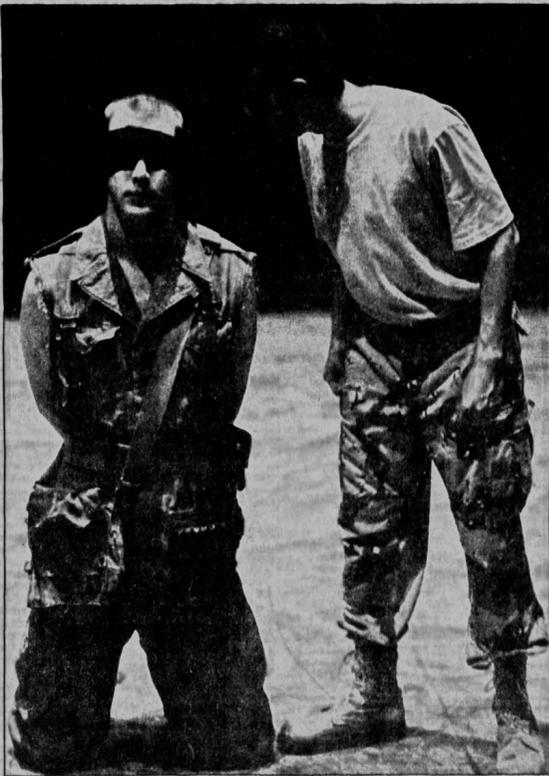

"America" takes place in Saudi Arabia before, during and after the gulf war of 1991, and deals with the love relationship that develops between two soldiers, Remzi Salameh (Samir Saboura) and Craver Perry (David Guerdette). Salameh is a Palestinian-American, which, according to Wallace, creates "links between racism and homophobia" in the thematic scheme of the play.

The love story is revealed largely through flashbacks involving the two soldiers and Salameh's sister, Valentina (Margie DuBe), who attempts to solve the mystery of Salameh's disappearance after the war.

"America" is directed by UI graduate directing student Pauline Tyer, said the love between the two soldiers is a "hopeful, universal thing."

"What these two have found is that passion for life and care for each other that's so real — and it's all in the face of brutality and chaos," Tyer said. "I think Naomi's written about something very honorable between two men."

According to Wallace, "America" examines "the language and ideology that links recent U.S. wars," including the gulf and Vietnam wars. She noted she was particularly interested in the "clean" war the American public witnessed on television during Desert Storm, and how the military censored information on the actual casualties and damage inflicted in Iraq.

"The gulf war happened so quickly, and it seems now long gone and over," Wallace said.

Wallace spent a year researching and observing the gulf war and interviewing actual conscientious objectors. She drew upon this research to write "America."

Another character in the play conjures up a war in the not-too-distant past still lingering on the conscience of the American public — Vietnam. The "Vietnamese ghost" Lue Ming (Martina Paris), a casualty of the My Lai Massacre, wanders through the scenes of the play searching for an American soldier named Boxler, played by Brant Peitersen. "Lue Ming is a very representative soul of the voice of the victim that we always forget," Tyer said. She added that Boxler represents an ethnocentric side of the military — those who, through their ignorance, fear "anything different" and have a very "black and white view of what's right and wrong."

While Tyer suggests that audience members must make up their own minds about who the main character is, the love between Salameh and Perry seems to be the axis upon which everything else revolves in "America."

"It has to do with those things that are good in all of us — the 'white light' in us all," Tyer said.

Tonight's 5:30 show of "In the Heart of America," to be held in Theatre B of the UI Theatre Building, is sold out, but tickets are still available for the 9 p.m. show at the theatre box office.

'Greater Good' a chaotic journey

Tasha Robinson
The Daily Iowan

According to director and master of fine arts candidate Mark Hunter, life is essentially a trip through chaos — a trip that everyone has to make, if with varying degrees of success.

His latest directing project, "A Greater Good," touches on this theme. The play, which is the final production in this year's Iowa Playwrights Festival, was written by master of fine arts candidate Keith Huff. It outlines one person's choices in life and, in so doing, offers both hope and direction for other people.

"The play is about the journey of a woman over the course of 25 years of her life," Hunter said. "It's the journey of a woman who is in some respects a very ordinary person, but in other respects is quite extraordinary, because she has the capacity to make bold and dramatic decisions that determine the course of her life. She's also someone who's dedicated to the proposition of making the world a better place."

Hunter said that the journey involves an "entrenched suburban housewife" who gives up her safe niche in the process of coming to terms with the limitations of her own marriage and family life.

"It's an emotional and intellectual roller coaster," Hunter said. "It's a journey which involves her participation in a utopian community, and it's a journey which ultimately involves a reunion with people from her past, and her coming to some basic understandings about the nature of the process which has informed her life."

That journey is more than a physical trip through places and events, however; it's also series of decisions that together form a specific path through life. "I've come to think of this play in terms of the journey through chaos," he said. "And I say chaos both in the sense of the kind of generic meaning — a state of confusion, in which expectations are frustrated — but also in almost a scientific sense of chaos, a sense in which there are patterns that keep being revealed the more that you strip away the external layers of a particular experience or phenomenon, patterns that suggest some form of order, and therefore some potential for harmony."

In this case, some of the experiences the character is dealing with are related to the failings of the political system, and the deep frustrations these failings engender in people who care about other individuals.

But the message is not a dark or cynical one. "I think ultimately it's a production that offers hope," Hunter said. "Even in the face of oppression, repressive political systems, racism, sexism — whatever forces conspire to prevent people from achieving what they want to achieve — there's something about the process of making an effort to live your life with integrity, to live your life creatively, that is itself rewarding... I think that's potentially a very rich and rewarding insight."

Hunter said that specific production choices highlight the conception of the play as a trip through chaos — the scenic and lighting design was inspired by chaos theory, and the audience will be seated arena-style on all four sides of the stage, in an effort to heighten the sense of community.

The production is also chaotically fast-paced, Hunter said, with six of the shows' eight actors playing a total of 24 roles.

Both Huff and Hunter are UI master of fine arts candidates. Huff has had several of his plays produced in regional theaters and has just had a libretto commissioned by the Minnesota Opera, while Hunter spent the last nine years as artistic director of Playmakers Theatre.

"A Greater Good" will be performed Saturday night at 5:30 and 9 in Theatre A of the UI Theatre Building. Tickets will be available at the door one hour before show-times.

Man drowns near Coralville Reservoir
Police are still trying to determine the identity of a young man who drowned near the Reservoir Sunday afternoon.
The man was swimming in the water West, a lake-like area near the Coralville Dam on the side of the Iowa River, during a company picnic when he drowned, detective Bob Johnson of the Johnson County Sheriff's Office explained.
"There is no current information at this time it is really unclear why he went under," Johnson said.
The man was working as an associate for New River Construction Service out of Chrisman, Va., selling magazine subscriptions across the country, Johnson said.
Due to his use of a false name for employment purposes, police are still trying to determine the man's identity.
"He's definitely from Iowa," Johnson County Sheriff's Office spokesman Carpenter said, adding that the man was a Louisiana resident.

Iowa boy drowns
CHESTER, Iowa (AP) — An eastern Iowa boy drowned in a creek near his house, a Howard County Sheriff's Department spokesman said.
A sheriff's dispatcher notified 22-month-old Leonard B. Bender was playing in a group of children near the creek when the accident occurred about 5:25 p.m. Friday.
Tom Bender, the boy's father, said he noticed his son was missing when he went to check on the children. Leonard face down in the creek that runs through the family farm. The boy was pronounced dead at the County Hospital in Creston.
