1994 budget vetoed by UISA president

Lesley Kennedy
The Daily Iowan

The UI Student Association's Fiscal Year 1994 Class III budgets were vetoed Sunday by UISA President John Gardner in consultation with the UISA executive officers and Vice President Michah Hobart, signaling one of the first executive vetoes ever.

The budgets, in excess of $120,000, passed March 4. Due to widespread concern from senators and student groups, the executive cabinet reviewed and recertified the entire Class III budget file.

Gardner said the recertification was executed because of frequent errors, discrepancies and unaccountable inconsistencies between the recommended FY '94 budget from the previous administration.

"Groups prioritize their programs based upon what they want most and how many people it affects," Gardner said. "That plugs into a formula that the SABAC committee employs. Ninety percent of the errors occurred in the employment of the formula by the previous SABAC committee."

The recertification cannot rectify the shortage of FY '94 funds, but it will allow available funds to be distributed fairly, according to each group's original priorities and preferences, Gardner said.

"The reason we were unable to catch this sooner is because of the newly formed legislative fee committee, whose deliberations delayed the budgeting process," he said. "It should have been completed prior to our administration."

In addition, a bill for approximately $35,000 will be brought before the senate to use unspent FY '93 funds so that groups may not necessarily be punished in the process.

The use of the funds ultimately rests with the UI administration, Gardner said.

"The administration takes control of all of our money as of May 31 despite its public stance that we have autonomy," he said. "While we have no problem with that, on this occasion, based upon the fairness we are trying to reinstate in the process, we are asking for their support."

The executive cabinet is encouraging student groups to petition the administration on behalf of the FY '93 funds. Groups certified under the Undergraduate Collegiate Senate will not be affected.

If the bill is not granted by the administration, each Class III group will receive a line-item percentage cut distributed equally across all programs so that the budget passed will not be one of deficit spending.

"It is my personal feeling that there should be a formal investigation. See UISA, Page 8A

Man drowns near Coralville Reservoir

Police are still trying to determine the identity of a young man who drowned near the Coralville Reservoir Sunday afternoon.

The man was swimming at Tailwater West, a lake-like area under the Coralville Dam on the west side of the Iowa River, during a company picnic when he drowned, detective Bob Dolezal of the Johnson County Sheriff's Office explained.

"There is no current there, so at this time it is really unexplained why he went under," Dolezal said.

The man was working as a sales associate for New River Subscription Service out of Christiansburg, Va., selling magazine subscriptions across the country, Dolezal said.

Due to his use of a false name for employment purposes, officials are still trying to determine the man's identity.

"He's definitely from out of state," Johnson County Sheriff Bob Carpenter said, adding they suspect the man was a Louisiana resident.

Iowa-Illinois to eliminate IC, CR jobs

CEDAR RAPIDS (AP) — Iowa-Illinois Gas and Electric Co. plans to consolidate its customer service, accounting and credit operations, a move that will eliminate jobs at district offices in Cedar Rapids and Iowa City.

The Davenport utility has 105 employees at Cedar Rapids and 102 at Iowa City.

Officials said employees were notified Thursday that the company is considering several cost-cutting options.

Kim Koster, a spokesman for Iowa-Illinois in Davenport, said it will be several months before any changes are made.

Iowa boy drowns in creek

CHESTER, Iowa (AP) — A northeastern Iowa boy drowned in a creek near his house, according to the Howard County Sheriff's Department.

A sheriff's dispatcher said 22-month-old Leonard Bender of rural Chester was playing with a group of children near his family's farm when the accident occurred about 5:25 p.m. Friday.

Tom Bender, the boy's father, noticed his son was missing from the group when he went outside to check on the children. He found Leonard face down and not breathing in a creek that runs close to the family farm. The boy was pronounced dead at the Howard County Hospital in Cresco.

Senate committee to conduct field hearings on gay ban

Joe Taylor
Associated Press

NORFOLK, Va. — The Senate committee pondering the ban on gays in the military takes its inquiry to the decks of U.S. warships today, seeking the views of rank-and-file sailors out of earshot of Navy brass.

The senators have guaranteed confidentiality, but some crew members clearly regard the arriving Washington delegation as a minefield to negotiate with the utmost care.

"If they ask me, I'll tell them," said one veteran submariner whose boat is in port at the 130-ship Norfolk Naval Base, headquarters of the Navy's Atlantic Fleet. "But I'm not going looking for them." The submariner declined to share his opinions with a reporter.

Members of the Armed Forces Committee will visit the base for the first of two field hearings on the Pentagon's ban on gays serving openly, which President Clinton wants to lift. The second hearing is scheduled for May 17 at an as yet unannounced military base.

After the morning shipboard tours and interviews at Norfolk, the senators will hold a more traditional afternoon hearing, complete with facing tables, microphones and TV cameras, open to all military members and their families.

Far from encouraging openness, however, that session in a Naval Air Station auditorium is stacked against anyone who opposes the ban, asserts Lt. j.g. Tracy Thorne, a Navy flier until he disclosed his homosexuality on national television a year ago.

"I'm disappointed they've chosen this setting. It makes it very difficult for anyone to come out and testify to overturn the ban," said Thorne, who last week learned he was to be placed on inactive reserve while his case is reviewed.

Muslim-Croat truce broken; fighting reported in Bosnia

Robert H. Reid
Associated Press

SARAJEVO, Bosnia-Herzegovina — Fierce Croat-Muslim fighting broke out in Mostar on Sunday despite a general cease-fire in Bosnia, and U.N. officials accused Croats of rounding up and expelling hundreds of Muslims from the city.

Meanwhile, the first U.N. military observers reached the embattled Muslim enclave of Zepa on foot after their vehicles were blocked by a road barricade. A company of Ukrainian U.N. troops was reported blocked by Bosnian Serbs en route to Zepa, where the peacekeepers hope to begin implementing a plan signed late Saturday to disarm the town.

The demilitarization of Zepa and another eastern town, Srebrenica, was part of a cease-fire agreement signed by Muslims and Serbs. Bosnian Croats did not sign the pact, which went into effect at noon Sunday.

ENVIRONMENTAL MOVEMENT EMPHASIZED

UI professor attempts to 'personalize' class

Molly Spann
The Daily Iowan

When professor and UI geology department Chairman Dick Baker went to the University of Wisconsin for his undergraduate education, he felt like just a number. With this in mind, Baker said "personalizing" himself with his students became first on his list of teaching priorities.

Baker has worked in the department for 23 years and was elected chairman last fall.

"I really enjoy the personal contact. That's what's exciting to me about teaching."

Dick Baker, professor

because I didn't want to be stuck sitting behind a desk. We take the students out and show them, rather than just telling them, and let them work problems out in their own minds. It's a wonderful way of learning. You can read about it in books, but it doesn't really mean very much unless you get out and see it."

One of the first things Baker did as chairman was to hold meetings for undergraduates and graduates in which their concerns about the department could be expressed. He said this hasn't been done in the past.

"I try to be open to students," he said. "I want to see what the student's problems are and what they would like to see changed."

Peter Jaumann, a UI graduate student in the geology department, said he believes Baker is very sensitive to student needs.

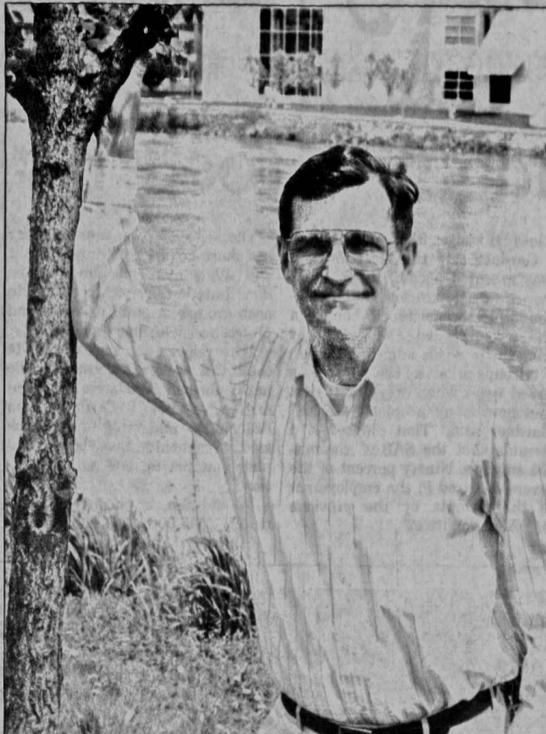

"He is really easy to work with and he has a good ear for the concerns of all students," he said. "He's always really friendly and open to suggestions and new ideas. He's also willing to put in the time necessary to make changes."

In another effort to bring the faculty and students together on a more personal level, a picnic for the department was held several weeks ago.

"We need to reinforce relationships between students and faculty by giving them a place to meet each other in an informal way," Baker said.

An important component of his work is the research he does outside of the classroom, he said. Besides contributing to the actual field of geology, Baker said his research allows him to bring back first-hand knowledge to the classroom.

Over the past four or five years, the number of students in the geology department has grown by about five times, Baker said, adding that the interest in the environment shown by these growing numbers is exciting to him.

"I can see that the interest in the environment has grown tremendously over the past 20 years I've been here," he said. "People are beginning to realize that these things are extremely important."

Getting students interested in the environmental movement through geology goes beyond keeping them awake in class, Baker said.

"It's critical to the future of the world," he said. "That's how important it is to get students excited about the environment."

What Baker enjoys doing when he's not in the classroom or out doing research does not stray far from his UI work.

He has been a board member of the state chapter of the Nature Conservancy, a group working to preserve natural areas, for 15 years. He also enjoys leading nature walks for community members, reading, being outside, gardening and looking at plants and geology.

"Although I'm not quite there and I'll probably never be all the way there, I'm on my way to becoming an old-time naturalist," he said. "I love to know about the natural world."

MEMBERS MOSTLY CROSS-DRESSERS

Police crack Midwestern check-kiting ring

Associated Press

MOLINE, Ill. — Suspiciously long fingernails on a store customer helped crack a major check-kiting ring believed to have operated in seven states.

The Secret Service and police departments in the Quad Cities arrested six people Friday and were seeking federal indictments for up to 14 others believed involved in the scam.

"Most of them are cross-dressers," said Bill Albracht, a special agent with the Secret Service.

Albracht said the ring is believed to have bilked banks in Illinois, Indiana, Iowa, Minnesota, Nebraska, Oklahoma and Wisconsin out of more than $1 million.

Neither local police nor the Secret Service reported any new arrests Saturday afternoon.

The Secret Service and police from Moline, Rock Island and the Iowa cities of Davenport and Bettendorf cracked the case after their investigation led them to a cache of phony IDs in Peoria.

In the scheme described by police, one member of the ring would open an account for a phony business using fake identification. Other members then would open personal accounts, also with fake identification, deposit worthless payroll checks from the nonexistent business, and write checks to buy merchandise, usually at chain stores.

The merchandise then was returned for cash at chain stores in other areas, police said.

Four banks in the Quad Cities lost sums ranging from $700 to $20,000 in the scam, authorities said.

Police do not believe the suspects ever used female identities to open accounts. But their penchant for wearing women's clothing helped police nab them.

Moline Police Department detective Pablo Reyna said his work on the case started out as a routine investigation into a bad check written at a business.

"The clerk alerted me that the check writer appeared to be a man dressed as a woman, with long fingernails," he said. "Then I found out that the name on the check belonged to a man in an Oklahoma penitentiary."

Reyna discussed the case with investigators from other Quad-City area law enforcement agencies and they realized they were after a large group of people — mostly transvestites.

Their investigation led them to the stash of phony IDs in a Peoria rental storage unit. One suspect, Dashielle "Dash" Blackwell, had identification with his photograph and 15 different names, police said.

Blackwell, who is reportedly from Milwaukee, was being held Saturday in the Peoria County Jail without bond, police said.

Police said the ring members hit the Quad-City area three times between late 1991 and February 1993. Recently, they opened accounts at three area banks and were writing checks to each other on them, police said.

Cedar Rapids man becomes dad, granddad on same day

Associated Press

CEDAR RAPIDS — A Cedar Rapids man says becoming a father and grandfather on the same day is tiring, but he's looking on the bright side.

"Look how much I saved on gas," Garry Birkicht said.

At 12:29 a.m. Wednesday, Birkicht's wife, Julie, delivered a daughter, Keegan Britney, at Mercy Hospital.

While Birkicht, 42, and Julie admired their newborn, he noticed his 23-year-old daughter from another marriage walk by their room about 1 a.m.

Jenny Birkicht was supposed to check in at 7 a.m., but she had contractions and came in early.

"I didn't expect Jenny to be here," Birkicht said. "I saw her walking by and said, 'What's going on here?'"

Jenny gave birth to a girl, Jordan Paige, at 9:17 p.m. Both babies were delivered by Dr. Mark Hogenson. Birkicht, who is the father of six children, didn't think there was much chance of having a child and grandchild born on the same day. Jenny's due date was April 26 and Julie's was May 10.

He said it's a good thing they're both girls, though. "They can be best friends."

Upper Iowa to offer 3-year bachelor's degree

Associated Press

FAYETTE, Iowa — In an age when it takes longer and longer to get a bachelor's degree, Upper Iowa University is offering a degree on the three-year plan for accelerated students.

"We have in place a program that allows a student to complete the requirements for a bachelor's degree in three years, in most of our majors, without sacrificing the quality of the educational experience," said Ralph McKay, Upper Iowa executive vice president.

College degrees used to take four years to obtain, but many colleges structure their classes so that it takes 4½ years or longer.

McKay said Upper Iowa's three-year option is the first of its kind in Iowa. The obvious incentive is cost — it will cost 25 percent less to get the three-year degree than one obtained in four.

Students entering Upper Iowa this fall will have the option of enrolling in ACE (Accelerated Curriculum Emphasis). They will attend classes in the traditional nine-month period, from late August to late May.

Academic requirements for the program include a minimum cumulative grade point average of 3.00 (based on the 4.00 scale) in a college-prep program at high school.

Iowa farmers cleaning up after violent thunderstorm

DES MOINES — Northwest Iowa farmers said they were lucky to be spared from violent winds that ripped down farm buildings, uprooted trees and toppled power lines around them.

William Reuter said he slept through the worst of the storms that hit his farm just after midnight Saturday morning.

Although the wind lifted a machine shed off its foundation and tossed it about 100 feet, Reuter said what woke him up were the lights going out.

"I just woke up right when the power went out because we've got night lights for the kids," said Reuter, whose farm is about 2 1/2 miles west of May City. "We figured we better come downstairs. We were just lucky nothing happened to the house."

Reuter said trees were uprooted, a barn roof was blown off and the shed damaged.

"All that I had was a lantern when I went outside and I saw two big beams and I thought, 'what the heck is that.'" Reuter said. "So I got the flashlight and there was mess everywhere."

The beams were two poles that had supported power lines and now are tipped at an angle.

Two vehicles inside the machine shed were untouched, but two cars parked on the farm were thrown by the wind and destroyed, Reuter said.

Diversity in curriculum focus of conference

Terry Collins
The Daily Iowan

It is continually listed among the UI's top priorities, but today and Tuesday the issue of diversity on the UI campus will take center stage in a conference titled "Make a Difference: The World is Within Reach."

The two-day conference, which will deal with issues such as whether to integrate difference into the curriculum and introducing students to culturally diverse materials, is viewed as a way to get students, faculty and staff to discuss a topic that is often difficult to discuss in the classroom.

Conference organizer Geeta Patel hopes that through workshops and round table discussions, questions like "what are the implications of adding new courses reflecting diversity?" will be answered.

"Our goal is to facilitate an ongoing discussion about academic freedom," she said. "It's a global economy. Much of the current curricula doesn't deal with the way one fits into this world and the implications for the classroom, for educational institutions and for the general public."

The conference, which is free and open to the public, runs most of the day today and from 8:30 a.m. to 2:30 p.m. on Tuesday in the Union.

The conference originated from a $100,000 grant from the Ford Foundation and comes a year after the UI instituted a new diversity requirement program for undergraduates.

Advantages from the grant include the UI English department expanding materials showing diversity in the Interpretation of Literature course, which is taken by nearly 4,000 undergraduates each year. In addition, the grant has added fiction and poetry by persons of color in the rhetoric department.

Kevin Kopelson, an assistant professor in English and a conference participant, believes it is important for both institutions and students to discuss cultural diversity.

"The issue of diversity should be at the forefront of liberal education," he said.

UI Assistant Professor Kathryn Henry, another conference participant, said she got involved because she views diversity as an important topic not just at the UI, but nationwide.

Topics of the symposium include: "Diversifying Diversity" which will address the results of prior efforts to incorporate gender and international materials into classrooms, and what areas need specific attention.

Should universities integrate diversity into class curriculum? If so, what are the political and disciplinary effects will be discussed in "Infusion vs. Separation."

Issues that are not often examined, such as how should materials on race, gender and people with disabilities be introduced in class constructively, will be the subject of "The Classroom as a Contested Cultural Site."

A discussion on the much talked-about issue of oral competency among teaching assistants will be targeted and will include talk of possible modification of their training programs as well as the teaching of foreign languages.

The diversity symposium is sponsored by the UI Office of Academic Affairs, Opportunity at Iowa, the Center for International and Comparative Studies, the Office of International Education and Services and the Project on the Rhetoric of Inquiry.

Those wishing to find out more information on the conference can call the Center for Conferences and Institutes at 335-3231.

DESPERATION PROMPTS ADS

Some taking unique approach in hopes of subletting soon

Students trying to get rid of their apartments are running short on time and becoming more likely to negotiate.

Lynn M. Tefft
The Daily Iowan

Large two bedroom, summer sublet / fall option. Rent negotiable in big one bedroom.

Please sublet!!!! No, you haven't mistakenly flipped to the classifieds — this story is about the people who run those ads full of desperation and anxiety.

It's crunch time, and while people scramble through their last few days of classes and finals, some have the added stress of trying to find somebody to sublet their apartment.

UI senior Kokkay Mun advertised his apartment with the word "luxury" in hopes of attracting more people, and began his search for subletters in early April.

"We've had many people look at it," he said. "It's interesting to see a lot of different people."

Kokkay said he and his roommates are more willing to negotiate on the price now that summer is closer.

"You have to give and take," he said. "It's up to the individual."

Iowa City resident Ron Troester started looking for a subletter about a week and a half ago.

"I've had two people call," he said. "One person didn't need a place until August, and the other thought my place was too far out," he said.

Complaints such as these — it's too far away from downtown, too expensive, not furnished, won't allow pets — are all too familiar to those searching for a way to get a lease off of their hands.

"Ours is completely furnished and I hope that helps," Kokkay said. "You don't see many like that."

But when desperate times start calling for desperate measures, some people find that unique offers bring faster results.

UI junior Amy O'Day offered a free 12-pack of beer to the person who subletted her apartment.

"I had an ad originally that was boring," she said. "I realized I needed something that would catch people's eyes, and that's when I came up with the beer idea. It's something any college person can relate to."

O'Day's apartment was subletted within a week.

"The girl who subletted it really liked our ad, and the beer was waiting when she moved in," O'Day said.

Meanwhile, the others who have placed the four columns worth of ads in the DI wait for the phone to ring, hoping each time that it's that special someone who wants to sublet.

"I think I'll get it subletted," Kokkay said. "I had a guy call me today and he was pretty desperate. We can probably negotiate a price."

South Dakota State Penitentiary riot found to be spontaneous event by probe

Dennis Gale
Associated Press

SIoux FALLS, S.D. — An investigation into the Wednesday night riot at the South Dakota State Penitentiary has determined it was not planned, state Corrections Secretary Lynn DeLano said Saturday.

"We do know that this incident was a spontaneous event. It was started by a few inmates who were intent on creating a disturbance," DeLano said in a statement to reporters. She would not answer questions.

Two inmates that state Attorney General Mark Barnett called "prime suspects" in the riot have been moved from the prison to the Minnehaha County Jail.

Two guards were injured in a fight with inmates as the disturbance started Wednesday evening, but no lives were lost. A vacant building was destroyed by fire, others were damaged and some prison property was trashed during a 12-hour standoff involving an estimated 200 inmates out of the 495 housed in the main prison.

The Department of Corrections is investigating the riot. DeLano said the probe is not complete but that she wanted to share preliminary findings.

"We do know this incident was not a planned event. It was not the result of any racial prejudice. We know it was not a result of overcrowding. It was not a result of inadequate staff training. And it was not a result of inadequate programs or services, including medical services," she said.

Among the 17 complaints issued by the rebellious inmates who took over a prison yard were calls for better education and better health care.

The penitentiary staff works hard to keep such incidents from occurring, DeLano said. Authorities were ready to use whatever force was needed to prevent any loss of life and further property destruction, she said.

Even with more guards, it's hard to prevent such situations from occurring in any prison, DeLano said.

Arson suspected in 3 Des Moines fires

Associated Press

DES MOINES — Des Moines officials said an arsonist is to blame for three downtown fires, including one at an apartment building.

Forty residents of the Hanwood Apartments escaped without injury early Saturday, but fire officials said they were lucky that no one was hurt.

"It burned up through the floor into one apartment and the hallway on the second floor. But we got it shut down real quick. We were lucky," said District Chief Lanny Williams.

The fire at the downtown apartment complex was one of three reported in 40 minutes just after midnight. The fires were near the site of a blaze a week earlier that destroyed a warehouse and forced an evacuation because of dangerous fumes. The cause of that fire has not been determined.

Transportation's future topic of recent forum in IC

Dave Strahan
The Daily Iowan

Do you ever pedal a bike, drive a car, ride the bus or walk anywhere?

If you answered yes, then last Friday's public forum regarding Iowa City and Johnson County's transportation future pertained to you.

About 40 concerned citizens showed up at the First National Bank Atrium to hear panelists speak and answer questions regarding transportation. The six panelists came from a variety of backgrounds and brought different concerns to the forum.

Despite their different backgrounds, all the panelists seemed concerned with decreasing the amount of private automobile traffic and increasing other modes of transportation.

"My interest is in promoting trails and greenways throughout Iowa City linking the park systems with the schools," said Casey Cook of the Iowa City Planning and Zoning Commission. The cost of the trails would be more than offset by the rise in property values and quality of life in Iowa City, he said.

Jeff Davidson, executive director of the Johnson County Council of Governments, was optimistic that "alternative mode planning" such as greenways and trails might become a reality as a result of a new federal regulation known as the Intermodal Surface Transportation Efficiency Act, or "Ice Tea."

"We are now being charged and given resources to do some of the alternative mode planning that we wanted to do for years, but we unfortunately have just not had the resources to do it," he said.

Gloria Marchman, past president of the Bicyclists of Iowa City, was concerned with promoting bicycle use as a means of transportation.

John Lundell, Manager of the Iowa City Transit System, said he wanted to extend the buslines to areas in the fringes of the community, and that public transportation could indeed become an alternative to the private automobile.

"It comes down to a decision by the elected officials on how much they want to pay to make public transportation an attractive alternative," he said.

Nancy Burns, Iowa Department of Transportation state bicycling and trails coordinator, said bicycling has a bright future in Iowa.

"The growing trend seems to be for integration of transportation and recreation," she said, adding that future planning should emphasize the fact that different types of bicyclists require different types of facilities.

Stan Miller, chairman of the transportation committee of the Iowa City Downtown Association, said he was concerned with promoting the overall atmosphere of the downtown area as an attractive place to live, work, visit and engage in recreation.

Once the panelists had explained their positions, the floor was opened up for questions. Audience members were also concerned with decreasing automobile transportation and increasing bicycle, pedestrian and public transportation.

Questions from the audience were concerned with what was being done to alleviate barriers to cycling and which types of cyclists would benefit from future change. The point was also made that panelists should concentrate upon making automobile transportation less desirable.

Toward the end of the forum, one audience member suggested a slightly different approach to implementing change.

"We do need to look at public policy as a way to change people's behaviors," he said. "I think public policy makers have to be pressured to think about the issues, and forums like today do a good job in doing that."

WASHINGTON — Sen. Clinton has not adequately addressed the policy of the vote in Congress for military action against Serbia.

"Ordinary members of the House Foreign Affairs Committee are really frustrated," Lee Hamilton, D-Ind., said. "They are crying out for information. They want to know the objectives and how they are articulated."

Sen. Richard Lugar, R-Ind., said that the military options in the Balkans are very unclear. "Congress is very uneasy about the allies too."

"The American people need to hear from the president about the policy of the United States why our national interest, plan is, the fact that going to cooperate with Congress to back military action," Hamilton said. "I suspect not as of today. But I also the president asserts and he puts this in a security context that carry the day."

ASUNCION, Paraguay — Under sunny skies Sunday, Paraguayans chose a civilian president in the country's first truly democratic election in 182 years of dictatorship.

Many voters were appalled that the still-powerful military might step in if the party loses power.

But voting was generally free and there were no initial irregularities that had marred previous elections, such as ballot boxes and intimidation.

Several hours before the election, a radio station was damaged, apparently by a grenade, but transmissions were unaffected. No one was hurt and arrests were made.

The election will replace Gen. Andrés Rodríguez Francia's first civilian presidency nearly four decades ago. Rodríguez toppled long-time dictator Alfredo Stroessner in 1989 and stood for re-election.

The vote could end the military-backed Colorado Party's monopoly on power. Rodríguez has pledged to stand for an elected successor in August 15 in what would be the first transfer of power since the end of Stroessner's first transfer of power.

Congress not likely to OK Bosnia policy

Jim Abrams

Associated Press

WASHINGTON—Senior lawmakers said Sunday that President Clinton has not adequately articulated his Bosnia policy and lacks the votes in Congress for approval of military action against Bosnian Serbs.

"Ordinary members of Congress are really frustrated," said Rep. Lee Hamilton, D-Ind., chairman of the House Foreign Affairs Committee. "They are crying out for more information. They want to hear the roles, the objectives and the costs articulated."

Sen. Richard Lugar, R-Ind., joining Hamilton on NBC's "Meet the Press," agreed that the discussion on military options in Bosnia "is extremely vague, most members of Congress are very uneasy, perhaps the allies too."

"The American people, Lugar said, need to hear from the president of the United States why this is in our national interest, what the plan is, the fact that others are going to cooperate with us."

Asked if the votes were there in Congress to back military action, Hamilton said: "I suspect they are not as of today. But I also expect if the president asserts leadership and he puts this in a national security context that he would carry the day."

"(The American people) need to hear from the President of the United States why this is in our national interest, what the plan is, the fact that others are going to cooperate with us."

Richard Lugar, senator

Speaker of the House Tom Foley, D-Wash., said on CBS' "Face the Nation" that once the president finalizes a plan with allied and U.N. cooperation, Congress would go along.

"There's been no case in modern history where a president has gone to the Congress and asked for this authority, stating that the national interest was involved, where it's not been given," Foley said.

Under the 1973 War Powers Resolution, Congress must approve any decision by the president to involve American troops in hostile situations abroad. Those troops must be withdrawn after 60 days if Congress does not give its approval.

Senate Minority Leader Bob Dole, R-Kan., speaking on CNN's "Newsmaker Sunday," said he did not think Clinton would move without the approval of Congress. "We haven't prepared the American people. We have to go to Congress and tell the American people what the end game is," Dole said, stressing that any action must be multinational in nature.

The president, who attended church and toured the National Gallery of Art with his family Sunday, ignored questions about Bosnia that were shouted at him. He had planned a meeting Sunday evening with congressional leaders on the topic, but it was postponed until Tuesday.

Clinton has been frustrated by the reluctance of European allies to back either an end to the arms embargo on Bosnian Muslims or Western air strikes against Serbian military positions.

On Saturday, Clinton directed Secretary of State Warren Christopher, just back from a trip to Europe where his efforts to organize a unified position on Bosnia met resistance, to telephone allied foreign ministers to discuss how they could ensure that Serbian President Slobodan Milosevic fulfills his promises.

Milosevic has pledged to seal his country's borders and cut off supplies to Serbian allies in neighboring Bosnia.

"This is a chance to test Mr. Milosevic's sincerity in this regard," White House spokesman George Stephanopoulos said. "Clearly, this is something we want to pursue and want to test and want to make work."

European Community envoy Lord Owen, who with former Secretary of State Cyrus Vance has crafted a peace plan for Bosnia, said actions by Milosevic and other signs of a shift in Bosnian Serb positions were "dramatic" and "to go rushing into military action tomorrow or the next day would be, in my view, extremely foolish."

On European reluctance to take military action in Bosnia, Owen said: "I think we've got to be very careful against having Europeans thinking of the Americans as cowboys and Americans thinking of Europeans as wimps."

Speaking on NBC, Owen urged the United States to put 2,000 American troops into the U.N. force on the ground in Bosnia.

"This is primarily a civil war and the belief that you can deal with a civil war from the air is a delusion," Owen said. "You will not solve the problem at 10,000 feet."

Associated Press

ASUNCION, Paraguay — Paraguayans streamed to the polls under sunny skies Sunday to choose a civilian president in the country's first truly democratic election in 182 years of independence.

Many voters were apprehensive that the still-powerful military might step in if the party it backs loses power.

But voting was generally peaceful, and there were no initial reports of irregularities that had marred previous elections, such as stuffing ballot boxes and intimidating voters.

Several hours before the polls opened, a radio station was slightly damaged, apparently by a hand grenade, but transmissions were unaffected. No one was hurt and no arrests were made.

The election will replace President Gen. Andrés Rodríguez with Paraguay's first civilian president in nearly four decades. Rodríguez toppled long-time dictator Gen. Alfredo Stroessner in 1989 and did not stand for re-election.

The vote could end the 47-year monopoly on power of the military-backed Colorado Party. Rodríguez has pledged to hand power to an elected successor on Aug. 15 in what would be Paraguay's first transfer of power by ballot.

"We are right at the day we've awaited for months," said frontrunner Guillermo Caballero Vargas of the centrist coalition National Encounter, shortly before he voted. "I'm satisfied I did everything I could. Everything now is in the hands of the people."

The biggest fear is that the army would not permit former exile Domingo Laino, a leader of the human rights struggle under Stroessner, to take office.

In his campaign, Laino — the candidate of Paraguay's other traditional party, the Authentic Radical Liberal Party — portrayed himself as neutral regarding the military.

But Gen. Lino Oviedo, the commander of Paraguay's elite army corps, hinted publicly his troops might back any Colorado initiative to stay in power.

"There is a certain fear that if the governing party loses, there could be a coup. We could see tanks in the street once again," said Sixto Zaracho, a 53-year-old businessman. "The Colorado Party and the armed forces have been in power so long that they think it's only right ... that they stay in power."

The 45-seat Senate, 80-seat Chamber of Deputies, 17 governorships and several hundred municipal posts also were being decided on Sunday. There are nine presidential candidates on the ballot and hundreds for the other posts.

million people were eligible to vote. Preliminary results were expected late Sunday.

Observers from the Organization of American States, the Washington-based National Democratic Institute, and several European countries were monitoring the vote.

"For the first time in (our) history, I believe every political party has a chance to win," Rodríguez said hours before polls opened at 7 a.m. (8 a.m. EDT). "Never has that happened in the civic history of Paraguay."

The top presidential contenders were Caballero Vargas, 49, a wealthy businessman and political newcomer; Laino, 57; and civil engineer Juan Carlos Wasmosy, 54, of the Colorado Party.

All three are economic conservatives and political centrists.

From independence in 1811 through the end of the disastrous War of the Triple Alliance in 1870, Paraguay was ruled by three tyrants. During the next 84 years until Stroessner seized power in 1954, there were 44 presidents.

BOSNIA

Intervention: Do it properly, or not at all

As Europe and the United States inch closer to intervention in Bosnia-Herzegovina, the Serbs continue their program of conquest, expulsion and slaughter against Muslims and Croats. Even though the leader of the Bosnian Serbs seems to have seen the light and signed on to the Vance-Owen peace plan, and even though the government of Serbia proper has apparently cut off aid to the Bosnian Serbs, peace has not come to Bosnia. The Bosnian Serb parliament has again rejected the Vance-Owen plan, even in the face of Western intervention in the conflict.

What happens now? President Clinton is ready to launch U.S. aircraft against Serb targets in Bosnia, and has expressed a willingness to use U.S. ground troops to police a cease-fire, once and if one ever holds. Unfortunately, air strikes alone will not solve the problem. In 1965 the United States launched a limited bombing campaign against North Vietnam with the intention of inducing the Hanoi government to "come to its senses" and accept a negotiated peace. The North Vietnamese "came to their senses" many times. Each time they did the United States stopped bombing, and the North used the respite to rebuild its defenses and reorganize its forces for new offensives. We never learned our lesson in that war, and apparently the Clinton administration hasn't learned from it. To win a war you attack the enemy and keep attacking him without letup until he accepts the terms you dictate.

Our goal in Bosnia is peace and stability. The Vance-Owen plan means well, but it offers a dishonorable peace. The principal Serb objection to it is that the plan requires them to give back a third of the land they have taken — land that they had no right to take in the first place. If we intervene in Bosnia it must be to stop all the fighting, among all three ethnic groups. That will not be easy. It will require a large number of ground troops with orders to crush any and all resistance and impose peace. Once peace and order are restored, and the frontiers secured by NATO or U.N. troops, Serbs, Croats and Muslims could sit down and talk about their differences and work out a way to live together.

If we intervene in Bosnia, it will and must be for the long haul. We cannot delude ourselves into thinking that we can go in, put everything right in a few days, and then leave. President Clinton should learn the lessons of both Vietnam and Somalia — if you're going to go in, go in all the way or stay out. Getting involved in a civil war is always risky, but if we go about it properly we can succeed.

GUEST OPINION

The oft-heard cry of 'Never again!' — perhaps next time

There seems to be some confusion lately regarding the staying power of genocide. What with Hitler's treatment of gays, Jews and people with disabilities getting frequent airtime, Stalin's programs directed toward ethnic Eastern Europeans and central Asians enjoying a recent upsurge in popularity, the always provocative photos depicting pyramids of skulls from Cambodia cropping up from time to time, and recent disclosures that around 25 million natives of this land were erased within the first 100 years after the "discovery" of the "New World," some of our more egalitarian cohorts are frequently overheard decreeing (gazing tearfully skyward and shaking their open palms), the all too ubiquitous: "Never again!!!"

Nearly 50,000 Bosnian children alone have died of starvation, disease or exposure, or have been murdered outright. Approximately 50,000 women and girls, some as young as 5 have been raped and brutalized, and more than half of these remain in so-called "rape camps." Entire cities and towns are being ravaged and the inhabitants either exterminated or left to perish. Over 1,000 Mosques, schools and hospitals have been rocketed or demolished. Consider that between the first Hawkeye basketball game and our coveted "March Madness," 100,000 Bosnians died of starvation or exposure. And the worst of it is the destruction is accelerating.

News casts will ostensibly present "both sides of the story" by reporting alleged atrocities by Muslims aimed at Serbs. It is, however, a truly one-sided affair. The current arms embargo imposed by the United Nations on the former Yugoslavia, plays into the hands of the Serbs, since it is they who have inherited the arsenal of the former Yugoslav army. The Bosnian Muslims are left to confront armor and artillery with little more than hunting rifles. If this sounds hard to believe, just watch the national news from time to time, and ask yourself why it is invariably the Muslim women and children — in the dubious absence of their men — who are herded onto dump trucks to be shipped from their villages to refugee camps. Remember, also, that the pictures of a few news cameras may portray these events as isolated. The fact, however, is that not a single non-Serbian inch of Bosnia is being spared from destruction. It cannot be emphasized enough that these are desperate and extraordinary circumstances, so much so

Let us now praise maternal devotion

The importance of mothers simply cannot be overstated. We try pretty hard, it must be admitted. But not even our FTD Mother's Day bouquets, trips home for Sunday dinner, or every national hero in professional sports' mouthing of the words "Hi mom" as the camera pans the bench can bring us to overly praise maternitas.

Even clergy are aware of this. Despite all their best efforts to keep us cowed by God the Father, we know very well who wears the pants in heaven, as she does on earth. Mom. Period. God Himself would not deny it, because not even God likes getting smacked by mom. As maker of moms, God knows very well He would get smacked, too. So He tows the line.

What is the source of the strange sway held over us all by the mother? How can a figure who wields her greatest power while holding aloft a plate of warm cookies exert such immense control over the sweep of history itself? Do we love gnocchi that much? What price a kiss on a freshly applied Band-Aid?

The truth is that mothers are much more than potent symbols of the sustenance of food and affection. Mothers are by no means the syrupy, smarmy creatures portrayed in tedious Hallmark rhymes. Mothers are tough as all hell. They are capable of doing anything to make sure their children survive. Mothers teach us. The genetic predisposition of mothers to impart their wisdom to offspring is legendary, and they do it with a gut-busting toughness that makes marine sergeants look like June Cleaver. (June was a fakey Hollywood mom. Not nearly tough enough.)

The main mothering technique used to educate us little dullards is the practice of telling us all the terrible things that might happen to us if we don't do something. Sins of omission have dire consequences. "Are you kids sleeping outside tonight? You put cotton in your ears, or ants will crawl into your heads." This story always got us. Mother claimed to have read somewhere that some kid got his or her little brain invaded by ants while sleeping outside overnight and neglecting to bar the entrance provided by his or her little ears. We passed our terror on to other children, children whose mothers might have been less vigilant while perusing the odd news section of the paper. Maternal neurosis is a communicable disease.

Mothers are devoted to arresting the cultivation of foul language skills. Early in life, we were threatened with the insertion of bars of soap into our mouths or other bizarre punishments — for simple swearing. Lies, petty theft, lateness for lunch or dinner — no other crime of which we children were capable held such a staggering capacity for ferocious maternal retribution as using swear words. We learned the meaning of the word "wrath" the first time we swore. It was a lesson we never forgot. Some of us, in fact, learned it so well that we now utter vulgarities with a nearly pathological sense of delight.

Mothers are perhaps most notorious for the worry they harbor over the condition of their children's underwear. This is because, from the moment of birth, each mother carries in her brain a picture of her child terribly injured or dead. Thus, the condition in which she sends a child out into the world, on any given day, could be the final testament before God — and His mother — to her own mothering skills. "Are you wearing clean underwear? You be sure you're wearing clean underwear. What if you get hit by a car?"

The reasoning behind this veiled threat was tough to buy into, even for those of us who were especially gullible children. I tried to imagine the notes on the emergency room chart they would start on me when my shattered little body was rolled in on a gurney. Kimberly, a 9-year-old female with no particular affect at present, appears to have been flattened by a transit vehicle. Bone structure: looks like CoffeeMate in there. Loss of blood: critical. Posture: decerebrate. Underwear: Whoa. Bad. Very bad. Mrs. Painter should be visited by social worker ASAP to determine condition of siblings' undies. Really. It hardly seemed likely.

But mothers are the great architects of our lives. It is easy, once we are relatively safe and free adults, to look back and take shots at their technique. But we need to remember that they endured much. We have all scared our mothers half to death at least once.

One summer evening, as a toddler reluctant to submit to the rigors of the maternal scrubdown known as a bath, I ran naked into the front yard. Knowing that mother was angrily in pursuit, I communed with a form of wildlife sure to put her off. I sighted the yellow stripes of a garter snake, snatched it up by the tail and began to swing it around and around in the air above my head. To this day mother swears that the entire spectacle was performed in a gleeful manner that was horrifying, if not downright pagan.

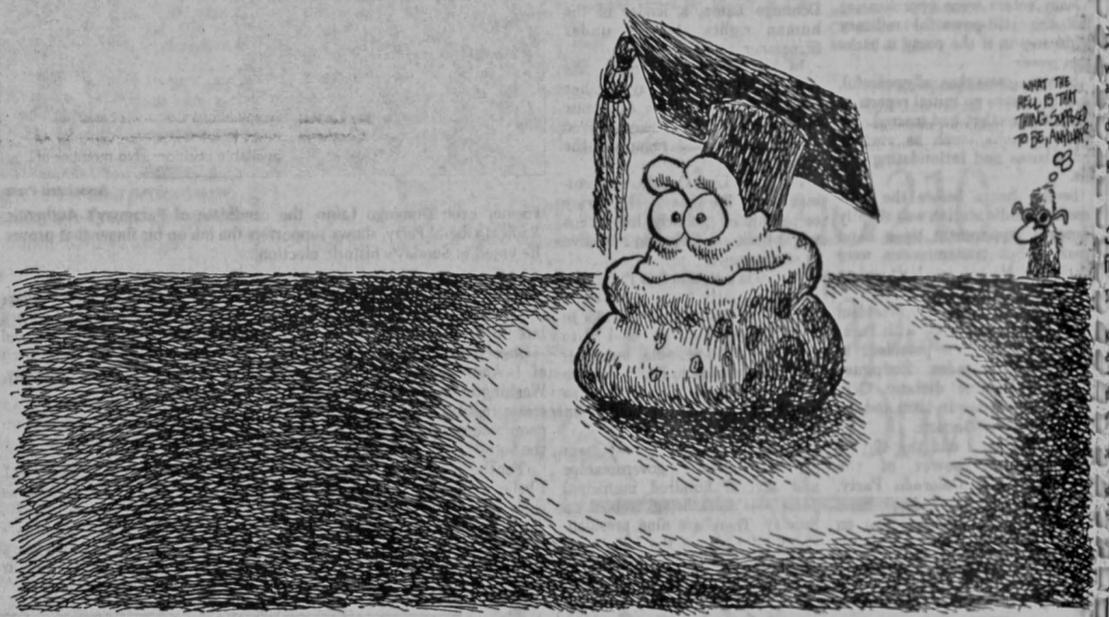

I think of that evening now and then, reconstructing it from something other than memory. A young mother stands in the brilliant grass of a July evening to confront her naked 4-year-old daughter, who dances and screams with joy as she twirls a snake over her head. The girl is conducting this rite because she does not wish to bathe. If I had been that mother, I would have been very, very worried. Not my mom. She waited me out. I got bored, let the snake go, and took a running leap into her arms. Perhaps she kissed the curve of my bare shoulder. She might have swatted my butt. Maybe she just laughed. Regardless, she definitely carted me back into the house so I could be scrubbed to within an inch of my life. After all, she was a mother. She had a job to do.

Display of ignorance and hatred

To the Editor:
I was greatly disturbed by the display case recently sponsored by The Campus Review in the basement of the Union. My response was primarily in regard to a T-shirt with the slogan "STOP AIDS" and a stick-figure depiction of two men engaging in anal sex. The display raises some questions.

Freedom of speech too valuable to limit

To the Editor:
Perhaps nothing in the government regulation of speech is more dangerous than prior restraint. It is precisely such restraint that Mr. Michael Murphy is advocating (April 30 D). Given what he calls misinformation provided by The Campus Review, Mr. Murphy suggests that the "UI" institute a policy to review the contents of students' speech in the Union, "with an eye for insufficient, incorrect and even dangerous health information."

The article published in The Daily Iowan on April 28, Jeff Renander seems to imply that they have some desire to educate people about AIDS by stating the medical fact that AIDS can be transmitted through homosexual anal sex. I don't believe that education is their goal. The message of the shirt seems to be that by stopping homosexuality, AIDS can be eradicated. This is simply untrue, and consequently far from educational.

It is fairly safe to assume that the designer of the T-shirt, its owner, and Jeff Renander are all heterosexual. This leads to my confusion. As heterosexuals, they are not seeking change in their own behavior, but the behavior of others. How do they intend to stop homosexuality? What methods would they suggest? In the past, efforts have been made to put an end to homosexuality through discrimination, harassment, violence and murder.

More frightening than the ignorance and hatred The Campus Review has put on display is the violence hidden behind them.

Rosalie Rippey

Supreme Court has struck down as violations of the First Amendment the federal Flag Protection Act, an Ohio statute that banned advocacy of crimes, and a St. Paul hate speech ordinance, and lower federal courts have invalidated three hate speech ordinances in Skokie, Ill., and the speech codes of the University of Wisconsin and the University of Michigan, just to name a few. In light of these facts, one can easily and properly label the above quote from Mr. Murphy's article misinformation, and I assume Mr. Murphy would not argue that misinformation about constitutional rights is unrelated to "public welfare." Should his speech be censored for this reason? Mr. Murphy's logic seems to compel an answer in the affirmative, but to me the answer should be a resounding "no."

The reason is simple: If the government should be permitted to adopt a proposal such as Mr. Murphy's, it would not be long before it enacts laws to review the contents of newspapers, books, TV broadcasts, films, etc., as has been happening in totalitarian countries, under the high-sounding pretext of "public health, safety and welfare" and guarding against "dangerous misinformation." An environment where debates on public issues are "uninhibited, robust and wide-open" would vanish.

Thomas Paine warns that an "avidity to punish is always dangerous to liberty" because it leads a nation "to stretch, to misinterpret, and to misapply even the best of laws." To counter that tendency, he reminds us: "He that would make his own liberty secure must guard even his enemy from oppression; for if he violates this duty he establishes a precedent that will reach to himself." Whether The Campus Review or Mr. Murphy is right is beyond the scope of this letter. If Mr. Murphy believes he is right, he is free, as he did, to present what he considers the correct information, but he cannot prevent others — as others cannot him — from speaking out what they regard as the truth. That is what the "marketplace of ideas" is all about. Let history make the final judgment as to who is right or wrong.

Mr. Murphy is right in saying that the freedom of speech is not absolute. But any restriction on such freedom must be supported by compelling reasons. The reason that Mr. Murphy offers is simply too tenuous to justify an infringement upon a fundamental right so dear to a free society.

Mr. Murphy is free to advocate any restriction on the freedom of speech, and to accept any truncation of his rights in order to ensure what he considers "the public welfare." But I hope the majority of the American people will not so easily give up a valuable right that remains but a tantalizing luxury for most people in the world.

Cross-partisan cooperation working

To the Editor:
It is a pleasure to extend a grateful "thank you" to the Student Assembly in the wake of the intense, yet somehow productive closure to the 1992-93 legislative session. In addition, I thank the many members of the public who not only came to address the body, but stayed through a long and periodically arduous meeting, bringing a perspective to the budgeting process which is long overdue. I would also like to thank the DI for its increased openness to giving space to UISA issues and events.

In a totally unexpected move, members of the UISA who would otherwise be at opposite ends of the political spectrum agreed to a radical amendment in favor of diversity in fiscal fairness. Members of the various international groups on campus had voiced their concerns over losses in their budgets which were perceived to have been caused by political groups taking the lion's share of the budget. A growing contingent of senators who have been doing the UISA a great service by answering my calls to get involved were ready to respond. They have been consistently struggling to increase the senate's sensitivity to a variety of social, fiscal and political issues.

Several of these senators affirmed the value of Public Access addresses to the body and fostered an amendment to take $12,000 of fiscal '93 funds which would have been spent on library acquisitions, day-care scholarships and refurbishment of Macbride Auditorium and divide it between the international groups present in order to rectify shortages in their cultural and informational programs, with the proviso that this money not revert back to administration discretion at the end of fiscal year '93. Amendment sponsors Tom Crandall, Donna Flayhan, Pat Gallagher and James Lewes solved a problem of unfairness and sent a message to the UI as a whole that this senate will fight for students' rights — regardless who is (or who is portrayed as) opposing them.

It was encouraging to see this amendment pass in all three senates. This is the kind of cross-partisan work to get beyond politics, support diversity and enhance the academic community at the UI which guides our efforts to lead the Student Association.

We still have much tension in the body — needless to say. It was disappointing to hear a comment on gender fairness be made by a senator of one gender on behalf of a senator of the opposite gender without allowing them to even speak on their own or their own gender's behalf by interrupting and talking over them. It was greatly disheartening to see senators withdraw their promised support for cross-partisan resolutions in the heat of debate. It was very hard to allow a major budget to pass by majority vote without individual consideration for requests made by affected groups in public access.

To that end, I ask all groups whose requests never reached to the floor to SEE ME AS SOON AS POSSIBLE for what can be done to meet their needs.

Tuesday night's meeting also proved publicly what I have suffered with since taking office: The budgeting process is unfair, confusing and biased toward student government insiders — it must be changed. One promise I made in my campaign is coming true because of this — people are recognizing the need to get involved. If I have to be devil's advocate to rejuvenate this organization, I'm happy to pay the price. With the promise to increase UISA becoming a reality, consider this my next one — a revised, user-friendly budgeting process next spring!

In the meantime, we'll still have a lot of mistrust, suspicion and animosity to work through. We've shown we can set that aside for student needs which I know the administration will gladly support — I am confident we all will continue to do so. In spite of the intense atmosphere in the meeting, a growing resolve to radically reshape student government is under way. I thank the people at the political extremes for engendering it, I thank those in the middle of their patience and diligence in supporting the cooperative efforts fostered, and I ask, once again, that every student concerned get involved, fill senate seats, fill committees, and build upon the shaky new ground of problem-solving that is emerging from the chaos of previously deadlocked conflict.

John Robert Gardner
President
UISA

Getting things done right

To the Editor:
The stated purpose of John Gardner's administration was to "get things done." Unfortunately, in the process of "getting things done," Mr. Gardner and the University of Iowa Student Association have neglected fairness in favor of expediency. The UISA is charged with filling all student positions on UI committees, commissions and boards, a process which took place about one month ago. According to the UISA constitution, the vice president is to chair the Nominations Committee in the filling of these positions. It was the final responsibility of Maricar Tinio, the former vice president, to fulfill this duty.

The vice president's responsibility was to call all members of the Nominations Committee and set times to interview applicants for all available positions. No member of the UCS was called, and only two of the three UAS senators were called. According to the UISA constitution, the vice president chairs the committee, but it does not grant the vice president a vote — Robert's Rules of Order back this up. Despite a lack of committee involvement (or perhaps because of it), former Vice President Tinio decided to grant herself a vote on the committee and developed a numerical ranking system for applicants.

The interviews were compiled by Miss Tinio and up to three others, but at times Maricar was one of two interviewers. Amazingly enough, friends of the vice president received inordinately high rankings and were subsequently placed into their desired positions, while those with whom she did not agree received exceedingly low rankings. This discrepancy was strikingly obvious in the distribution of individuals on the University Lecture Committee, Human Rights Committee, and Student Judicial Court. When I became aware of the bias applied to committee assignments, I brought my concern to the attention of Micah Hobart and John Gardner, the new vice president and president. The bias of Maricar Tinio's appointments was so blatant that both felt it imperative to alter the rankings and rearrange the committee assignments. This was done without input by applicants or members of the Nominations Committee.

My concern with the manner in which the rearrangements were done centered around issues of equity and accountability. I pointed out to Gardner and Hobart that the only fair and logical way to repair the misdealings of the previous vice president would be to re-interview all applicants for disputed positions. At the time, both agreed that this would be the most equitable manner in which to deal with the problem.

As Vice President Hobart announced his intention to submit the existing recommendations at the meeting on Thursday evening, I asked for the reason that he had decided to continue despite the concerns with the interview process. His response was "There might be some bias in these, but I can tell you that they won't be done like this next year."

Douglas Anderson, who had been adamant in his demands for new interviews of all disputed positions only two days earlier, supported Hobart's decisions by saying, "I was one of the nominations people who were not called and I know that these were not done right, but we need to get on with things and get things done." Both Hobart and Anderson admitted that the interview process was done improperly and that appointments were based on personal and political bias, but decided that honesty and equity were secondary to expediency. Every individual who applied for a position on a university committee, commission or judicial board should register a complaint with the UI administration about this egregious breach of UI procedure.

Gardner and Hobart took office with a commitment of "getting things done," which is a noble goal, but if getting things done involves ignoring policy and refusing to address valid concerns of students, then priorities must be re-examined. Most positions were undisputed and would not require an additional interview procedure. The steps necessary to remedy the indiscretions of the past administration would have been minimal — interviews of applicants for just seven committees — but Gardner and Hobart decided to instead uphold the personally and politically biased nominations of the previous administration. Hopefully this administration will re-examine its priorities and focus less on "getting things done" and more on "getting things done right!"

Pope John Paul II denounces Mafia

Frances D'emilio

AGRIGENTO, Sicily — Pope John Paul II lashed out at Mafia bosses Sunday, warning they face the wrath of God unless they forsake their evil ways.

"God once said, 'Don't kill.' Man, any man, any group of men, the Mafia, can't change and trample this most sacred law of God!" the pope said in a voice shaking with rage, his face reddening.

The outburst at the end of his visit to this Mafia bastion was the Roman Catholic Church's strongest condemnation of organized crime. The tongue-lashing came in impromptu remarks at the close of an outdoor Mass beneath a hilltop cluster of fifth century B.C. Doric temples.

The pope exclaimed that people here have the right to live "without murder victims, without fears, without threats."

Referring to mobsters, the pope said, "these who have on their consciences the weight of so many human victims, must understand — must understand! — that they can't be allowed to kill innocents."

"I say to those responsible, 'Repent! One day the judgment of God will come,' he said.

John Paul urged Sicilians to reject "Mafia culture, which is a culture of death."

A decade ago, when the pope visited the island for the first time, hardly anyone in the Mafia fiefdom dared denounce Cosa Nostra openly. But public outrage over recent slayings of crusading prosecutors has changed that.

Earlier Sunday, thousands cheered when John Paul paid homage to those and other law enforcement heroes killed by the mob.

"During this latest visit in Sicily, I can't help but recall, with particular emotion, those who, in affirming the ideals of justice and law, paid for their commitment to the struggle against the violent forces of evil with the sacrifice of their lives," John Paul said.

He spoke to a cheering crowd outside Agrigento's cathedral from a balcony adorned with lemon and orange tree branches.

Later, the pope met privately with the parents of Judge Rosario Livatino, who was gunned down on a highway outside Agrigento in 1990. The Mafia allegedly ordered Livatino's slaying after he refused to let the Mafia sway him in issuing a sentence.

Last year's killings of prosecutors Giovanni Falcone and Paolo Borsellino — Italy's leading Mafia investigators — fueled anger against Cosa Nostra across the island. They were the latest in a long series of prosecutors, judges, police, journalists and politicians slain by the mob.

"They are martyrs of justice, indirectly of the faith," John Paul told Livatino's parents, squeezing their hands.

When John Paul went to Sicily in November 1982, becoming the first pontiff in six centuries to do so, he visited Palermo, the Sicilian capital. Since then, grassroots groups led by schoolteachers, priests in poor parishes and some politicians have blossomed there to challenge the Mafia's grip.

But such opposition pulses more weakly in Sicily's hardened heartland, where the pope, on a five-city swing, has brought his harshest denunciations of the mob.

Among other acts of mob violence in this southwestern city was the 1986 attack on a café where Mafia soldiers fatally shot six people.

In Agrigento, Mafia bosses are considered second in power only to the Palermo families and the Corleone mobsters under recently captured "boss of bosses" Salvatore "Totò" Riina.

That made Agrigento's enthusiasm and affection for the pope all the more remarkable.

"Viva il papa!" went up cries from the crowd lining the palm tree-ringed main square as the pope was whisked in a Mercedes-Benz to the cathedral.

From apartment balconies, embroidered white tablecloths usually reserved for four-course Sunday lunches flapped side-by-side in a warm breeze with yellow banners bearing the Vatican seal. Yellow and white are the colors of the Vatican flag.

Drug crimes increase prison population

Associated Press

WASHINGTON — An increase in inmates convicted of drug crimes helped boost the nation's prison population to a new high of 883,593 at the end of 1992, the Justice Department reported Sunday.

The total number of federal and state prison inmates was up 8,651, a 7.2 percent increase over the previous year, the Bureau of Justice Statistics announced. The federal prison population grew much faster than that of state prisons, up 12.1 percent to 80,259 inmates, while state prisons grew by 6.8 percent to 803,334, BJS said.

"Drug offenders were a major source for the increased number of prisoners," Acting BJS Director Lawrence Greenfield said in a statement.

Of all new court commitments to prison in 1990 — the last year for which BJS had available data — almost one-third were drug offenders, up from 11.5 percent in 1977.

Ensuring adequate prison space for violent criminals has been a particular concern of Attorney General Janet Reno, who knew from 15 years as Dade County, Fla.'s top prosecutor that prison overcrowding can lead to premature release of violent inmates.

"The most important problem in America today is violence, and people want those who hurt and maim and kill and brutalize put away and kept away for as long a time as they possibly can be," she told reporters recently.

The problem has led Reno to suggest the possibility of replacing some mandatory minimum sentences for nonviolent offenders with alternative sentences.

Federal prisons thus haven't had to free inmates early because of overcrowding, which has occurred in some state prisons.

"But... if we keep sending people to prison at the rate we're sending them to prison, we're going to have a tremendous shortfall in terms of monies necessary to open the prisons and then operate the prisons," she said.

The fighting was so intense it forced a U.N. Spanish battalion based in Mostar to pull back to surrounding hillsides, officials said.

By mid-afternoon, U.N. military observers reported anti-aircraft machine gun and small-arms fire in the city, which was shaken by regular mortar hits. Several buildings, including Bosnian army headquarters, were reported on fire.

John McMillan, a spokesman for the U.N. high commissioner for refugees in Sarajevo, said several apartment buildings in Mostar had been "ethnically cleansed" of all Muslim inhabitants. The agency had reports that Croatian forces were planning to deport Muslims to the towns of Zenica and Jablanica to the north.

Ten busloads of people, including children, were seen leaving the city under Croat guard, U.N. officials said, citing military observers. The civilians had earlier been herded into a soccer stadium.

Lt.-Gen. Lars-Eric Wahlgren, the U.N. commander in former Yugoslavia, demanded "active and urgent intervention" from Croatia's leaders, a statement from his office in Zagreb, Croatia, said.

In Sarajevo, U.N. spokesman Cmdr. Barry Frewer said Croatian President Franjo Tudjman had promised to try to bring calm.

At Zepa, U.N. observers had to walk the last three miles into town because trees had been cut to block the road, Frewer said.

They were the first U.N. observers to reach the Serb-surrounded town after several days of intensified fighting, which reportedly killed or wounded hundreds.

"They said the center of the town was being shelled, and people have been evacuated to surrounding villages," John Mills, a U.N. spokesman in Zagreb, said. The observers said "the majority of the houses are badly damaged, and there is a considerable need for shelter supplies," he said.

Manufacturers, said in an interview Friday. "We haven't felt the full effects yet."

Manufacturing is not the only part of the economy due to be hurt by shrinking Pentagon budgets.

Norman Saunders, the Labor economist who wrote the study, said service industries would lose 286,000 jobs between now and 1997; retail and wholesale trade would shed 139,000; and the transportation businesses would give up 62,000.

He says nearly every corner of the job market will feel some of the pinch. Aircraft manufacturing, missile makers, ship builders and manufacturers of navigation equipment are among the most obvious industries that stand to lose. But some jobs also will be lost in coal mining, hardware, refrigeration, autos, photographic equipment, apparel — even bars and shoe repair shops.

If Clinton's plan works, a portion of the economic resources freed from defense spending will create more work in other areas such as the environment and communications. Thus at least some of the effect of job losses would be offset.

Saunders bases his estimates on Clinton's proposal to cut defense spending to $192 billion in 1997 — about $100 billion less than was spent in the peak year 1987 — and military force levels to 1.4 million compared with 2.12 million in 1987.

Saunders estimates that the total potential job loss between 1987 and 1997 is about 2.8 million.

hostile to someone who would move from the status quo," he said. "It's difficult for any straight member to come out and testify against the ban without being implicated as being gay."

Last week, other details of the hearings provoked angry words between two committee members. Sen. Edward Kennedy, D-Mass., argued with Sen. Sam Nunn, D-Ga., the committee chairman, about the expertise of witnesses testifying about gays in foreign military forces, all of whom were American. Tempers have also flared at hearings held by the House Armed Services Committee.

The shipboard interviews were arranged to permit more private conversations away from superior officers, who will likely attend the afternoon hearing.

All concerned groups are strongly urged to attend an emergency meeting of the UISA to pass a recertified budget on Friday, May 14, at 7 p.m. in the Union, Gardner said. The location will be posted on the door of room 48.

The executive cabinet, in a release, said that in the future the budgeting process will be revised to include extensive support and assistance to all groups trying to understand the budgeting process.

Big Ten Sportsman of the Year Klas Bergstrom led the Hawkeyes to a fifth-place finish at the Big Ten Championships Sunday at Klotz Tennis Center. Minnesota won its second straight title.

Stylish ending for Bergstrom

Sportsman of Year leads Hawks to 5th

Joel Donofrio
The Daily Iowan

The 1993 season ended in fine fashion for the Iowa men's tennis team. Led by seniors Klas Bergstrom and Eric Schulman, the Hawkeyes topped third-seeded Michigan State 4-3 Sunday to claim fifth place at the Big Ten Championships at Klotz Tennis Center.

Minnesota beat Northwestern 4-0 for its second straight conference title.

After Neil Denahan defeated Spartan Jayson Bedford at No. 5 singles, the team score was knotted at 3 as Bergstrom and Brad Dancer began the third set of their grueling match. After the two seniors split a pair of brilliantly-played 7-5 sets, Bergstrom prevailed with more hard-paced winners to win the final set 6-1.

"He was up 5-3 in the first set and I played four of my best games to win that set. Then in the second set we had a really big game at 6-5.

I had four chances to break him and I couldn't do it," Bergstrom said. "In the third set I felt my legs cramp up after the first game, but after I got that I played well and kept the ball in play for the rest of the set."

The victory was thoroughly enjoyed by Iowa coach Steve Houghton, who ran onto the court to congratulate Bergstrom along with the rest of the team in a spontaneous celebration after Dancer's last shot sailed long. Following the victory, conference coaches named Bergstrom the Big Ten Sportsman of the Year.

"That was an unbelievable match — with so many ups and downs, and it's fitting that the two seniors won their last matches," Houghton said. "It's classic for Klas to cap off his career in this way. The meet goes down to the wire, he's playing a real good senior all-Big Ten guy and he came through in the clutch."

Besides their wins in singles, Schulman and Bergstrom both played inspired doubles matches in their final Iowa meet.

Bergstrom paired up with Denahan at No. 3 doubles to defeat Kevin Seckel and Mashiska Washington 8-6, while Schulman and partner Naguib Shahid were at match point leading 7-5 at No. 1 when their match was suspended. The halt in play came as a result of Bryan Crowley and Carl Mannheim's point-clinching win at No. 2 doubles.

"We don't get to 3-3 without Denahan and Schulman winning their matches," Houghton said. "The other thing that's easy to forget is that if we don't win the doubles point, we lose. That was the best doubles by far we played the whole year, because Michigan State is very strong in doubles."

With modesty taking over a player who went 9-1 in singles during Big Ten dual meets, Denahan downplayed his role in Sunday's win.

"Klas pretty much carried me in today's match; he played great and I didn't play too well," Denahan said. "He kind of put me on his back and carried the load in doubles, and then just kept playing great in singles to win it for us."

On Friday, the Hawkeyes fell into the consolation bracket following a 4-0 loss to Indiana, but bounced back Saturday morning with a 4-1 triumph over traditional conference power Michigan. After running away with the doubles point, Iowa sealed the victory with wins by Denahan, Mannheim, and Todd Shale in singles.

PHOENIX, Ariz. — Call them cocky, call them lucky, call the Phoenix Suns escapees from the greatest upset in NBA playoff history.

The Suns, pushed by Charles Barkley's 31 points and 14 rebounds, slam-dunked the Los Angeles Lakers 112-104 in overtime Sunday to become the first team to rebound from two home losses to win a best-of-5 series.

The Suns escaped as a winner after scoring the first seven points of overtime as Barkley and center Oliver Miller grabbed every loose ball in sight.

Barkley's strong finish after a stuttering start would have meant nothing without Miller's monstrous overtime — nine points and five rebounds — after scoring only eight in regulation. Miller finished

"I wasn't going to let anything get in my way," said Miller, a 6-foot-9, 300-pound rookie who reached a peak of 340 pounds before going to a weight-loss clinic in midseason. "If I had lost the weight to begin the season, I could have played this way all year. I didn't do as much as I could have in the first half, but I came back in the second and worked my butt off."

"The team was worried about Miller's weight problems during the season," Barkley said. "There were a lot of times he wanted to give up, but we stayed on him. All the anxiety he caused us, he's making up for now."

Richard Dumas and Cedric Ceballos double team the Lakers' James Worthy in the Suns' 112-104 overtime win in Game 5.

The Suns, who meet San Antonio in the second round starting Tuesday, made good on coach Paul Westphal's bold guarantee of victory after they lost the first two games at America West arena.

"They were fantastic and they just showed what they were made of," Westphal said of the Lakers. "We are very fortunate to get past them."

"I'm not gloating at all. I feel very humble to be able to escape with this win. The reason I said it (the guarantee) was because I believed we had a better team. They didn't make it easy."

The Lakers, the only team in the playoffs with a losing record, had three chances to knock off the team with the league's best record and become the first No. 8 seed to beat a No. 1 seed.

Led by James Worthy's 24 points, the Lakers had a shot right down to the end of regulation, but Byron Scott's 3-pointer with the score tied 95-95 bounced off the rim.

lot better," said Iowa's Jennifer McCullough, who finished in 41st place with a total of 334. "Conditions kind of had a little bit to do with it, but it's our course so probably, we should have played a lot better on it."

But Hawkeye head coach Diane Thomason said that playing at home has its disadvantages.

"You know the course better than anybody else, so you've already now, with young players, put that added pressure that I should play well here," Thomason said. "There is a lot of distraction when you play at home. You get out of your normal routine."

After 36 holes, the Hawkeyes were in sixth place, but they moved down to ninth after Saturday's total of 344.

"We were trying to get back into seventh for sure and maybe sixth if we could, but we put ourselves in a bad position yesterday," senior Judy Bornholdt said.

Bornholdt, Iowa's top finisher, shot an 81 in her first and last rounds for 27th place with a score of 327.

Ohio State took the team title with a combined score of 1,240. Indiana placed second with a 1,241, followed by Minnesota and Illinois, which tied for third at 1,250, and Wisconsin, which finished fifth with a score of 1,265.

Renee Heiken of Illinois grabbed the individual title and Big Ten Player of the Year honors with a total score of 300. Indiana's Angela Buzminski placed second at 302 and Tami Dougan of Ohio State finished third with a score of 303.

Iowa's best round was a 322 for the second round on Friday which, according to Thomason, should have been an average score for her team.

Grace's bat not enough; Sox atop AL West

Associated Press

CHICAGO — Mark Grace didn't quite picture that one of the best days in his career would end this way.

Grace hit for the cycle Sunday, but it wasn't enough as the San Diego Padres held on to beat the Chicago Cubs 5-4.

Grace hit a three-run homer off reliever Rich Rodriguez with two outs in the ninth inning to complete the cycle. He also doubled in the first, singled in the third and tripled in the seventh.

"Unfortunately, the Padres won," Grace said. "You're supposed to win when you hit for the cycle. It was bad planning on my part. I'll probably never do it again. I don't hit that many triples."

The triple was his first this year and only the 19th in his six-year career.

The first baseman became the first Cubs player to hit for the cycle since Andre Dawson on April 29, 1987, against San Francisco.

White Sox 6, Indians 5
CHICAGO — George Bell singled home Ozzie Guillen in the ninth inning, giving the surging White Sox a sweep of their three-game series with the slump-ridden Cleveland Indians.

Robinson Ventura drove in three runs for Chicago, which won its fourth straight game and 10th in its last 12. The loss was Cleveland's fourth straight and sixth in a row on the road.

Brewers 6, Red Sox 0
MILWAUKEE — Mike Boddicker, using an assortment of off-speed pitches to keep Boston off balance, allowed four hits in 7 1/3 innings.

Boddicker (2-1) allowed a double to Ernest Riles and infield single to Carlos Quintana in the first. The Red Sox didn't get another hit until Mike Greenwell's two-out single in the sixth.

Yankees 11, Tigers 2
DETROIT — When the New York Yankees took a 7-2 lead over the Detroit Tigers on Sunday, they knew they couldn't relax.

After all, New York had blown six-run leads in the first two games of the series, and they didn't want to complete the hat trick. They didn't.

"This was a great win for us," said Spike Owen, who had a three-run homer, drove in four runs and scored three. "We've been slugging it out with these guys, so we knew not to let up."

Bob Wickman (4-0) won his seventh straight decision.

Wickman, who allowed two runs on 12 hits with four strikeouts and four walks while pitching eight innings plus, is 10-1 in his career. That start — including a loss to Chicago last Sept. 14 — is second in team history behind Whitey Ford's 16-1 beginning.

Orioles 4, Blue Jays 3
TORONTO — Damon Buford — who homered earlier — singled in the winning run with two out in the ninth inning as Baltimore rallied to beat Toronto.

Braves 12, Rockies 7
DENVER — David Justice homered twice and drove in a career-high five runs, and the Atlanta Braves disappointed Colorado's one millionth fan by roughing up the Rockies for a four-game sweep.

The Rockies became the fastest team to draw one million, doing it in 17 dates and surpassing Toronto's mark of 21 dates last year. A crowd of 70,786 gave the Rockies an average attendance of 59,863.

Phillies 6, Cardinals 5
PHILADELPHIA — Even though all-time saves leader Lee Smith was pitching, Mariano Duncan felt pretty confident. He was right.

Duncan hit a grand slam in the eighth inning to give the red-hot Phillies a three-game series sweep. "I know I hit him well but I didn't know my average was that good," said Duncan, 8-for-15 lifetime against Smith. "As soon as I hit it, I knew it was out of the ballpark."

The victory tied the Phillies' best record ever after 29 games as they were 22-7 in both 1911 and 1913.

Marlins 6, Mets 4
NEW YORK — Manager Jeff Torborg realizes it's already getting to the point when the season might be lost for the New York Mets.

The Mets lost for the 11th time in their last 13 games as Walt Weiss had three hits and drove in two runs to help the Florida Marlins.

The loss dropped the last-place Mets 11 1/2 games behind first-place Philadelphia in the NL East, and three games in back of the expansion Marlins. Florida (14-16) has won two of three in the four-game series against New York, and seven of its last 11 overall.

"I know we're falling out of the race," Torborg said. "Right now, I can't worry about Philadelphia."

Mariners 6, Twins 4
SEATTLE — The Seattle Mariners continued their early-season power binge, getting home runs and three RBIs apiece from Tino Martinez and Ken Griffey Jr.

Martinez and Griffey made it 11 home runs in four games for Seattle, which moved into a tie with Detroit for the most homers in the majors with 36.

Pirates 6, Expos 5 (11)
PITTSBURGH — The Pittsburgh Pirates, who went a month without hitting hardly any homers at all, suddenly have mastered the art of the dramatic late-inning homer. Just ask Montreal closer John Wetteland.

Andy Van Slyke, who hit a two-run homer earlier, singled in the winning run in the 11th inning as Wetteland blew a ninth-inning lead for the second straight day.

"I was pumped up to be in there again," Wetteland said. "It just didn't happen for us, and that's disheartening."

Dodgers 6, Giants 4
SAN FRANCISCO — Consecutive home runs by Darryl Strawberry and Tim Lincecum in the sixth inning rallied the Los Angeles Dodgers.

The Dodgers got three homers off Jeff Brantley (2-2), and Orel Hershiser (4-3) struck out a season-high eight to give LA a 2-1 series victory. The right-hander improved to 18-6 lifetime against the Giants.

Angels 7, Athletics 6, (10)
ANAHEIM, Calif. — Torey Lovullo's third clutch hit of the game, a double with one out in the 10th inning, gave the California Angels a victory.

Rangers 2, Royals 1
KANSAS CITY, Mo. — Juan Gonzalez hit a two-run homer and Kevin Brown pitched his league-best fourth complete game as the Texas Rangers beat David Cone.

Brown (4-1) lowered his earned run average to 1.27, best in the majors. He gave up six hits and retired the last 12 batters.

Wheeler encouraged with Hawkeyes' effort

In its final tune-up before the Big Ten meet May 21-22, the Iowa men's track squad traveled to Indianapolis Saturday to compete in the Indiana Invitational and came away with some encouraging results.

"We had an outstanding meet," Coach Ted Wheeler said. "But, you're never completely pleased."

Hawkeye standout Anthuan Maybank continued his winning ways as he took crowns in both the 200- and 400-meter invitationals in 20.82 and 45.48 seconds, respectively.

"His performance was again outstanding," Wheeler said. "But it took a lot of hard work on his part."

Another Hawkeye who had a successful meet was Rajeev Balkrishnan, who took home the title in the 110-meter high hurdles in 14.39. He was a victim of a bad lane assignment in the 400-meter hurdles, according to Wheeler, and ran ninth in 53.91.

"We were disappointed with the lane assignment in the 400, but it was still a big meet for him," Wheeler said. "He really can become an outstanding technical hurdler."

Kevin Herd, who has missed most of the season to injuries, showed why he has been a cross country all-American after taking second in the 5,000-meters in 14:22.03 — narrowly missing a personal best in the process.

"He really could have run faster and won it," Wheeler said. "But the main thing is that he is once again at full strength."

Another event being targeted for scoring possibilities is the 3,000-meter steeplechase, where Matt Gerard continues to make impressive showings. He took sixth on Saturday with a time of 9:05.46.

"Matt just keeps coming into his own," Wheeler said.

Other Hawkeyes that placed high on Saturday included Audwin Patterson (second in the open 400-meters, 47.22); Jerry Fisher (fourth in the 100-meter dash, 10.83); Scott Hudek (second in the high jump, 6'10 3/4"); Pete McDowell (second in the open 5,000-meters, 15:07.43); Jason Joens (seventh in the discus 150'1"); and Joe Estes, who took second in the long jump at 22'3/4".

MEN'S GOLF

Tourney slips away from Iowa

The Daily Iowan

After playing two rounds at the Wolverine Invitational on Saturday, it looked as if the defending Big Ten Champion Iowa men's golf team had returned to its winning spirit.

The Hawkeyes were tied for first place going into the last round, but a lack of team effort dropped them to fifth place in their last tournament before the Big Ten Championships.

Ohio State took medalist honors with an 862. Kent State finished three strokes behind to earn a second-place finish. Minnesota took third, followed by Michigan State.

"I'm disappointed that we were in position to win a really big tournament and we just fell flat on our face," Coach Lynn Blevins said.

Senior Jon Frommelt said that the lack of mental focus on the last day is what caused the Hawkeyes to fall to fifth place.

"Other than me shooting a 69 and Brian Wilson shooting a 74, all our other scores were high and on the last day you've just got to go out and do anything you can do to shoot a good score," Frommelt said. "We just didn't go out and do it and the other teams did and that's why we got passed up."

Blevins feels that he contributed to the disappointing outing as much as the players did.

"I think as a coach I've done a horrible job at teaching this team the difference between winning and losing and how to win," said Blevins, last season's Big Ten Coach of the Year. "I have to take responsibility for that and whatever I'm doing as a coach obviously isn't working."

Frommelt has his own theory as to why the Hawkeyes aren't as successful as they were last year.

"It's just our own personal goals and how much we want to compete and how much we want to win individually," said Frommelt, who led the Hawkeyes with a 215. "I have a desire to win individually, but I think the rest of the guys on our team, besides Sean McCarty and Brian Wilson, are kind of just shooting to avoid a bad score and relying on the other players to help them out instead of going out and playing for themselves and trying to win a tournament for themselves."

NHL PLAYOFFS

Toronto gets to Joseph, Blues

R.B. Fallstrom Associated Press

ST. LOUIS — The Toronto Maple Leafs proved that Curtis Joseph is human, after all.

"Hopefully, the stone wall is going to break down sooner or later," Dave Andreychuk said Sunday after his second-period rebound goal helped beat the St. Louis Blues and their red-hot goaltender 4-1 in Game 4 of the Norris Division final.

Joseph saved 152 of 158 shots in the first three games of the series for a .962 percentage. He played well again, but just wasn't up to that supreme level and got frustrated by contact around the net as the Maple Leafs evened the best-of-7 playoff series at two games apiece.

"Maybe I lost my focus a little bit," said Joseph, who angrily lashed out at Toronto's Mike Foligno early in the second period. "But it's not going to happen again."

Blues defenseman Garth Butcher accused the Maple Leafs of trying to rough up Joseph since they've had trouble scoring against him.

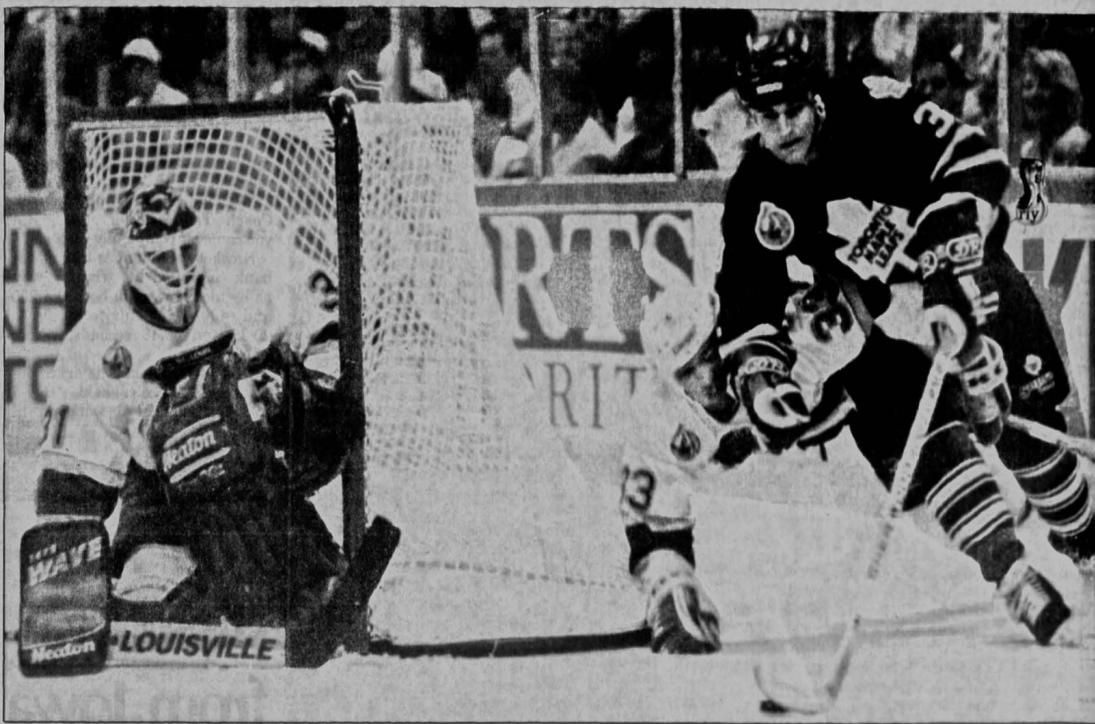

"They talk about protecting the stars of the game, but to me Curtis Joseph is the best player in the playoffs," Butcher said. "Maybe they should think a little now about protecting him."

Maple Leafs coach Pat Burns said his rookie goaltender, Felix Potvin, clearly outplayed Joseph.

"I thought both goaltenders were good," Burns said. "I'm not taking anything away from Curtis, but I thought Felix was the best goalie in the game."

as Toronto became the first team to win by more than a single goal in the series. The first two games went to double-overtime.

Gill scored from the right point as the puck trickled between Joseph's pads at 12:55 of the third period.

Toronto, which had 99 points in the regular season — 14 more than the Blues — wore down St. Louis with solid positional hockey to reclaim home-ice advantage in the series. Game 5 is set for Toronto on Tuesday night.

The Blues outshot Toronto 10-8 in the third, but couldn't get the puck past Potvin as the Maple Leafs frustrated a standing-room crowd of 17,948. St. Louis has been held to a single goal in each of the Toronto wins.

"Toronto played about a perfect road game," Blues coach Bob Berry said.

Wendel Clark also scored for the Maple Leafs and Doug Gilmour had two assists, while rookie Denny Felsner scored for the Blues. The Maple Leafs shut down the Blues' Brett Hull, limiting him to three shots and only one at even strength. Hull had nine shots and got his seventh goal of the playoffs in Game 3.

Craig Janney, who had five assists in Game 2 and 3, also was held scoreless.

Clark got the Maple Leafs off to a fast start when he stole a clearing attempt from Blues defenseman Stephane Quintal and scored unassisted with a high shot at 2:58.

The Blues tied it on Felsner's power-play goal at 14:59. Felsner was alone at the left side of the net for a pass from Kevin Miller, which deflected off the stick of Toronto's Mark Osborne. It was the Blues' first power-play goal in 11 chances in the series.

Butcher saved a goal when he kicked the puck out of the crease during a Maple Leafs' power play late in the first period.

Magic returns to hardwood

Scores 28 in victory over Finnish team

Stephan Nasstrom Associated Press

HELSINKI, Finland — Magic Johnson used the first half to warm up, then led an NBA all-star team to a comeback victory over YMCA of Helsinki.

"I had a wonderful time out there," Johnson said Sunday after scoring 28 points and getting seven assists in a 119-117 win. "It was fun to play with my old teammates again."

Playing competitively for the first time in almost seven months, Johnson started slowly. He turned the ball over several times and finished the first quarter with two points.

He got his game going midway through the third quarter and brought the crowd of about 5,000 at Helsinki's hockey arena to its feet with two straight skyhooks that tied the game 74-74 after the all-stars trailed 63-56 at the half. He added three assists and another skyhook that helped his team build a 90-81 lead after three quarters.

Johnson, who retired from the Los Angeles Lakers last year after announcing he had contracted the virus that causes AIDS, arrived in Finland on Saturday night. The long trip may have affected his early play.

"Well, I've been here a lot longer than he has and I'm still having trouble adjusting to the time change, the food and everything," said Kurt Rambis, one of Johnson's three former Laker teammates on the team.

The YMCA team, last year's Finnish champions, had three national team players, including former Kansas center Pekka Markkanen.

The Finns came back in the fourth quarter and took a 117-116 lead on Timo Vertio's 3-pointer with 51 seconds left. But Johnson, the NBA career leader with 9,921 assists, tied the score with a free throw before Moses Malone of the Milwaukee Bucks scored on a tip-in with 13 seconds left. Markku Larkio missed a 3-point attempt for the Finns with two seconds to go.

Malone, one of only two active NBA players on the all-star team, finished with 33 points.

"It was fun playing with Moses Malone for the first time," said Johnson, who played 42 minutes. "I think you always would like to play with everybody in the NBA at least one time. Now I got a chance to play with Moses, who dominated our team so many years so many times."

Rambis scored 22 points and Bob McAdoo, a former NBA scoring champion who also played with Johnson, added 17 points.

"It was a lot of fun playing with Magic again," said Rambis, who plays for the Sacramento Kings. "The Finns have a good ball club. They've been playing together for a long time. They had their strategy down. And they were very good shooting the basketball as well."

Michael Cooper, who also played with Johnson for the Lakers, scored five points.

Tero Anttila led the Finns with 30 points and Sakari Pehkonen had 28.

The all-star team travels to the Netherlands and Belgium for four games this week. Johnson is scheduled to play in one game in each country.

Henke overtakes Price to win Atlanta Classic

He wins his third career tournament and first since the Phoenix Open two years ago, taking home the $216,000 top prize.

Ed Shearer Associated Press

MARIETTA, Ga. — Nolan Henke birdied three of the last eight holes Sunday for a 5-under-par 67 to capture the Atlanta Classic over fading third-round leader Nick Price.

Henke broke out of a tie with Price on the 15th hole when the PGA champion took the first of two consecutive bogeys.

Henke finished with a 72-hole total of 17-under-par on the hilly Atlanta Country Club course to post a two-shot victory over Price, Mark Calcavecchia and Tom Sieckmann.

Price, who began the day with a one-shot lead over Calcavecchia, missed three consecutive greens beginning at No. 15, managing to salvage par only on the No. 17 when he made an 8-footer.

After falling into a tie for third place, Price moved back to share second when he birdied the final hole.

Calcavecchia, who has missed eight cuts so far this year, closed with a 72 and Sieckmann had a 69.

Henke's previous victory came in the 1991 Phoenix Open. His only other victory in a five-year career was at the 1990 B.C. Open.

Henke earned a first prize of $216,000. He was only 72nd on this year's money list with $89,675 entering this tournament, having posted only one top 10 finish — a tie for seventh in the Hawaiian Open.

Henke played a bogey-free round after starting the day four shots off the pace. He birdied the first and sixth holes, then moved into striking distance with a birdie on No. 11 that put him one shot behind.

Henke also birdied the 15th and parred the next two holes before closing the round with a tap-in birdie on the par-5 finishing hole.

Fulton Allem posted a 66 earlier in the day to finish alone at 274 for fifth place and another shot back was Mike Springer with a 72.

'Generation X' author, visionary Douglas Coupland to read Tuesday

Brent Dey
The Daily Iowan

What Andy Warhol did for art and Campbell's Soup, Douglas Coupland has done for literature and shampoo products. His second book, "Shampoo Planet," blurs the lines of mass culture and mass consumerism. It's a document of pop culture.

"To pop culture is like oxygen," Coupland said. "The culture is the world. As the larger ideologies disappear, it's what holds us together."

Coupland will read from his work Tuesday night at 8 at Prairie Lights Books, 15 S. Dubuque St.

Coupland's favorite documents to pop culture are the TV shows "Seinfeld," "The Kids in the Hall" and "The Simpsons." His favorite bands are New Order, REM and Morrissey. He's got his favorite soaps, detergents and hair-care products like everyone else, and he's got his pop culture dream. He wants to work at McDonald's — but he's having a hard time getting hired.

"If you go in there and you're 31 and English is your first language it's like, 'Why are you doing this?' They get really suspicious."

Despite the suspicions, Coupland has filled out several applications and is waiting for a reply. "I told them I'd worked in a gas station, which I did. They asked me if I had a jail record, and I said 'No.' They asked me why I wanted to work there and I said 'Well, I was hoping to work my way up to the management staff,'" Coupland said smugly. "My goal was to work there until I made employee of the month, so you get your colored photo on those plaques with your name engraved, or I was going to work there until I got fired."

Coupland really doesn't need to work at McDonald's. His first book, "Generation X," has become nothing short of a cult sensation,

"Shampoo Planet" was another best seller and his writing style has drawn comparisons to Woody Allen, Jack Kerouac and J.D. Salinger. He just wants to work at McDonald's so he can research an upcoming project.

He doesn't really want to say too much about that project ("I don't want to jinx it"), but he will be reading from his latest, yet-unpublished work Tuesday night.

"It's fairly personal stuff," Coupland said. "The new book, like the other two, deals with things people his age are going through, but he hesitates to call it 'generational.'"

"I could write a book about refrigeration units and it'd be like 'A Generation Looks at Refrigeration Units,'" Coupland said, "but if you look at what people write, they always write about people their own age, so 90 percent of writing is really 'generational.'"

"Generation X" and "Shampoo Planet" were both books that dealt with the horror of being a "twentysomething." "My worst years were from '84 to '87," Coupland said. He refers to the "mid-20s crisis" as "the black hole of my life."

According to Coupland, the mid-20s crisis usually comes right after college graduation. "Part of the big thing about being in your 20s is that you don't know what you're going to do with your life... you haven't committed."

Coupland, who is aware that he will be reading four days before the UI's 1993 graduating class is unleashed on the world, has this advice for the seniors: "The scary thing about life is it's really expensive. It costs a lot to live, but whatever you do, don't do it for the money. Do what you like to do. Don't do something just because it pays the bills, because if you do you'll be miserable for the rest of life."

As for Coupland, there are 85 McDonald's in his native Vancouver. One of them will pull through for him.

UI Museum of Art lauds MFA projects

Michelle-Therese Forcier
The Daily Iowan

Diversity and individual vision are the themes for the "Master of Fine Arts Exhibition 1992-93," showing through June 20 at the UI Museum of Art.

The exhibition features thesis projects from graduate students from the summer and fall semesters of 1992 and the spring semester of 1993.

According to Wallace Tomasini, director of the School of Art and Art History, the reason for this exhibit, now in about its 15th year, is for the student "to be publicly exhibited and accountable... it attests to the quality of the program."

"I think that it's a very good exhibition and presents people with fine quality pieces," Tomasini said.

The exhibition in the Carver Gallery of the UI Museum of Art presents fine works ranging from printmaking to photography to sculpture from the new UI alumni.

"Four Stations," an intaglio by Russ Bailey, is a religious, moving, brooding piece. It features people in a kind of macabre ritual-type dance around a cross.

Philip Portoghesi's cast-iron work titled "Being and Becoming," is continuously in transit from an amorphous slab to a being. Both are connected by a cord reminiscent of the evolutionary chain.

The three-dimensional work "(To) No (More)," by Frank Evans, is an oil on silk, Plexiglass and canvas. The work gives viewers the feeling that if they were to reach out and try to touch the raspberry, orange and white sherbert before them, the hand would float through the piece.

Margaret Rochelle's "Untitled" oil on linen is a collection of six pieces of varying sizes, all leading the viewer into the same room on different planes of reality. The depth she accomplishes is really quite remarkable.

"The Hieroglyph Paintings," an acrylic on canvas by Beth Krumholz, is a colorful and ambitious (and large) work. Upon its many pieces Krumholz writes the legend, "Suppose there was only one tree left in the world and one person and one ax. The person cut down the tree with the ax but the one tree fell and killed the one person. Who would be left to tell the tale?" The story is told to the viewer in a way it has never been told before. Go and experience this piece.

After the exhibit closes on June 20, the thesis projects will become part of the rental thesis gallery. Through this gallery, offices around Iowa City will be able to rent the works.

This untitled oil on canvas by Buddy Plumlee is one of many works by UI master of fine arts students now on display at the UI Museum of Art.

Billy Joel urges new graduates to keep music fresh, creative

Associated Press

BOSTON — Billy Joel urged music-college graduates to create new forms of music and take risks when composing.

Speaking to 490 graduates of the Berklee College of Music, the singer-songwriter and six-time Grammy Award winner said Saturday that young musicians should get away from the mainstream.

"When you listen to the radio, you hear the canned, frozen, processed flutter being dished to the world as the American kind of music today," Joel said, speaking on his 44th birthday.

"For all the millions who buy this stuff, who like this stuff, there are millions more who don't like it, who are looking for something else."

Joel also told the graduates that being a musician is "a real job" just like being a doctor or teacher.

He received an honorary doctorate in music at the ceremony, as did Grammy Award-winning composer Johnny Mandel.

'Manhattan' perfect for IC's boring summer nights

Ian Corwin
The Daily Iowan

It's that time again, kids!

The world's favorite season is descending rapidly, and soon the UI campus is going to look like a summer camp for the sleep-deprived. The familiar tableaux that we become used to during the school year will disappear — no more meatheads kicking the shit out of newspaper machines, no more women in formal dresses doing the "technicolor yawn" down on the Pedestrian Mall. The one minus about losing the student population during these next three months is in four weeks the supply of pedestrians will run low, which means no more "bumper tag" when I'm driving downtown (normally, pedestrians are worth 20 points, but students are worth a cool 70).

So what do we do now that the books are burned for another three months? Well, the days are easy enough to fill — give me a bicycle, lots of sun and plenty of controlled substances, and I'm sure I'll never grow bored. But what about summer nights?

If you're in my shoes, you're sick of the bar scene and all the bands that play the circuit here in town are beginning to look and smell like month-old Brie. Usually, summer evenings for me degenerate to "What should I drink, and what should I amuse myself with?"

I've got a perfect summertime flick to help pass one of those humid nights, and it's timely to boot.

What does one think of when one hears the name? Surely, the words "red-headed geek" come to mind, followed closely by the words "Mia," "lawyer" and "she's not that young."

With all the hype surrounding the finishing flourishes of the media circus that has become Woody Allen's life, I thought it appropriate to pull people's attention toward a film from 1979 that is sadly overlooked in Allen's pantheon of self-absorbed whimsy.

Manhattan is more than just a barometer of Allen's sexual preferences — I happen to think it's the best movie he's ever made.

Put simply, it's a 90-minute valentine to the City That Never Sleeps. Woody and cinematographer Gordon Willis chose to do most of the principle photography during the spring and summer months, adding a vibrant flair to the black & white visuals. Couple these with a flawless selection of Gershwin tunes as a soundtrack and New York has never looked so inviting. Now add the story and the characters and you will be charmed beyond retrieval.

Allen plays Isaac, a comedy writer who hangs out with some very cerebral people at places like Elaine's and the Guggenheim. His brainy friends are impressed with his current relationship, which happens to be with a 17 year-old Mariel Hemingway (OK — besides the obvious implications, I had to bring that up, as her performance is one of the best in the film).

Conflict rears its ugly head when Woody becomes smitten by the charms of an uptight academic, played annoyingly (and perfectly) by Allen's ex, Diane Keaton. He quits his job, starts working on a book, and his personal life begins to fail.

There's no way I could mention all of the good things about this film in two paragraphs. The major pluses are Allen's scenes with the two female leads, Hemingway and Keaton — he gets to argue with Diane and charm the pants off Mariel, and he's good at doing both. Watch for the scene between Allen and Hemingway when they're eating Chinese food in bed and watching TV. It's a charmer. And Woody's sense of humor is still well-honed in this one. When describing Keaton's intellectual friends:

"That's an interesting group of people, your friends... like the cast of a Fellini movie."

But the most unusual thing about this film is something that you've got to think about. When was the last time that you saw a Woody Allen flick that made you feel good? Think on it. He may have made you laugh, but when has he ever given you a life-affirming message?

He does it in this one, and he does it with style. As the camera goes wide on the sun setting behind a row of Park Avenue apartments, the Gershwin swells on the soundtrack, and when the credits roll, I guarantee you'll have a smile plastered on your face for a week.

Isn't that all you really need to have a good summer?

SAGA TO END SOON

Judge to decide soon on Allen-Farrow case

Samuel Maull
Associated Press

NEW YORK — They've made their case in court, and in the media. Now the actress and filmmaker must wait for a judge to decide Farrow vs. Allen.

Did Woody do it? Is Mia a fit mother? Who gets the kids?

After months of media salvos and seven weeks of often painful testimony, the celebrity child custody battle is in the hands of a judge who described himself as the "least qualified" person to make the decision.

Justice Elliot Wilk heard Allen admit he doesn't know his children's birthdays. Farrow said on the witness stand that she called a lawyer first after suspecting 7-year-old daughter Dylan had been sexually abused.

Dueling cadres of psychotherapists presented opposing views. Lawyers blasted the motives and shortcomings of the other side.

How can there be a winner? Here's a quick review:

Farrow and Allen, who never married, had a child together during their 12-year relationship and are fighting over custody of him and two adopted youngsters. Farrow has eight other children as well.

In January 1992, Farrow found nude snapshots of 22-year-old adopted daughter Soon-Yi Previn in Allen's apartment. Allen admitted they were lovers.

In August, Allen sued for custody of Dylan, 15-year-old Moses and his biological son, 5-year-old Satchel. Allen called Farrow an unfit mother, eight days after she accused him of molesting Dylan.

Farrow moved to nullify Allen's adoption of Dylan and Moses. The filmmaker's contact with the children was limited to supervised visits with Satchel.

Friends on both sides told their stories to newspapers and magazines. Allen appeared on the cover of Time magazine, granting interviews to deny the child abuse allegations and defend his affair with Soon-Yi.

After testimony from about 30 witnesses, including psychotherapists, social workers, a nanny and family friends, Wilk said he remained unsure whether Allen molested Dylan.

A panel of sex-abuse experts from the Yale-New Haven Hospital, appointed by Connecticut authorities to investigate, said they did not believe any abuse occurred.

Woody Allen arrives in court last week in New York, where lawyers for Allen and estranged lover Mia Farrow gave their final arguments to the judge hearing the couple's fight for custody over their three children.

Farrow's lawyer asked Wilk to bar all visits between Allen and Dylan, whom he has not seen since August; to leave Allen's supervised visits with Satchel at twice a week, and let Moses decide custody for himself. Moses refuses to see Allen.

Allen's lawyer asked for custody of the three children at least half the time or unsupervised visitation. Farrow's effort to reverse Allen's adoptions is pending.

Wilk, who is expected to decide the case in about a month, repeatedly asked professionals what he should do. No one had a clear answer.

Allen's side tried to downplay the romance with Previn, but Wilk wouldn't let it die, repeatedly questioning witnesses about its significance.

In her testimony, Farrow called the affair "virtually incestuous." Allen said, "Maybe I screwed up."

Psychotherapists seem omnipresent in the lives of Allen, 57, and Farrow, 48. Allen has been in analysis for more than 30 years and at least five therapists treated the family.
