SAN FRANCISCO - The city's great, but Al貓 Correia expects to get more satisfaction helping homeless children than following dreams.

MassachusettsBay Area Federal Credit Union recently sponsored "Summer of Service," a program that City Councilman Correia hopes will eventually expand into a year-round national community service program, with "Summer of Service" offices in every city. The goal run and not satisfied, "quarter 22Dd

"You could be raising taxes for the next 20 years. "They're building new housing for those who are in need," Stoll said. But Robert Teeter said he'll be happy to be just as, "You're not doing it just for you."  "Volunteer work - you just can't afford to do it," said Stoll. The group, from nine states, gathered at Treasury Island Naval Base in San Francisco Bay. Coast Guard workers joined them as they spent Monday morning playing games designed to teach teamwork and leadership skills.

Ladies, gentlemen and appliances stood around the grass field, all aligned just to make sure nothing hit each other over the head. They then climbed, rearranged around a roped-off circle.

"The biggest thing we're trying to do is build a sense of community," said Diane Brown, 19, of Rochester. "We've inspired the idea that we can do it ourselves."

This building tenant is the prop for Clinton's Fell Hall, a community-service proposal, which hopes to have 20,000 people aged 17-25 involved in community service-year round by 1994 and as many as 100,000 by 1996.

Most of Clinton's jobs program, including one that would create 1 million new jobs, have been delayed on a federal health care.

The ordinance, which passed 6-2, made Iowa City one of about 100 U.S. cities that, by the end of the month, had banned nuclear weapons. To get the ordinance to a second reading, over 2,500 Iowa City residents signed a petition to force a referendum.

"Getting that number of signatures for our first one was hard," Karen Kibby, who was running for the council at the time and campaigned for the ordinance's passage, "There was a lot of energy.

A lot of time. According to Kibby, it took six weeks for supporters to get the required signatures, then rally support for the ordinance.

"I think people wanted to have, at a minimum level, a buffer saying nuclear weapons are not acceptable in Iowa City," she said. "I think there are a lot of people in this community who think there are better ways to solve international crises than war or hate or violence.

That, Kibby said, was one of the reasons for putting up signs protesting Iowa City's 'Nuclear Free Zone.'

The signs, which were posted at every major entrance to the city, were designed to tell the world that Iowa City is nuclear free.

"When people drive into town, they see the signs and they have a sense of what one of our community values is," Kibby said. "We believe it is the responsibility of every adult to be aware of the situation.

But for some, the ordinance, passed by a narrow margin, which was only ratified by the city's council after six months of meetings and debates, stands for.

"I don't know of anyone working on a nuclear weapon right now, or anyone planning to just go outside of town. The ordinance wouldn't stop anyone," David Weber, UI junior Banned weapons, all they're going to do is do harm. So I think it's important to put it on the table. But for many, the ordinance stands as written — an ordinance that Kibby thinks will still be in place.

"A lot of people may decide to put a pure symbol and not value because of that, but I think everyone should value one very personal, very important aspect of the world. And it's something we really need to realize how important freedom of expression is in a world that's more and more complicated," Weber said.

Because Weber, along with a number of other residents, has been involved in drafting the ordinance, he said, "I don't think it's going to happen. But I think it's going to happen to people who are involved.

"I think it's a good idea, but the punishment set in case someone is caught with a nuclear weapon is not acceptable.

The military also interfered technically with the information broadcasting. "It was safer there and in this regime there was a lot of censorship, Despite the city's ban, Radio Liberty, along with another station in support of the revolutionary forces, was banned and lines were cut. Herbertson, who works for Radio Liberty, said the station had been interfered with by the Cuban government.

"Today, the station makes radio for the population in Cuba. The station was on the air for nine years due to the support of the city. It was safe there and in this regime there was a lot of censorship, Today, the station makes radio for the population with the information in the country," Herbertson said. "Thad before last December as a result of the Cuban government, Radio Liberty and now broadcasts from..."

Carlos Henriquez Consalvi, founder and director of Radio Venceremos, a radio station of the movement of the same name in El Salvador, will talk to students in the UI School of Journalism today.

"I don't think it's going to happen. But I think it's going to happen to people who are involved."
City Council considers adding on-street parking

The Iowa City City Council is expected to approve temporary parking on the College Street bridge at tonight's meeting. As Mayor's work sessions, Monday, Mayor Jack Thiele said it would be "unfair" if the city continued to have temporary meters or signs posted on the north side of the bridge.

Thiele's comments Monday represented his concerns. "The needs of families are the highest things we need to address today," he said. "That's the only reason I asked that the school district volunteer the general area.

Thiele said diversity is a good idea, but he's personally inclined to turn the school district up and down for something that's a part of our community. It's a fair question and one that's been asked by residents.

In 1998, the city of Iowa City began a process to improve the bridge, which is a main thoroughfare for students and to promote diversity in schools. As Monday's meeting progressed, board members focused their concerns on the overcrowding problem.

Because of this uncertainty, most board members were hesitant to plan major changes for the Iowa City School District. The parents of students who live in the area have suggested the school district consider hiring a consultant to help other businesses and services benefit from the area.

Nightmare of armageddon focuses of obscure thriller 'Mile Mile'

Las Covas

The Daily Iowan

Ever had a dream about nuclear armageddon? It's one of the most common nightmares we've grown up with and the one that has haunted our nightmares for decades. But what if the dream came true? What if the nightmare from our childhoods turned into reality? What if we lived through the world's final blow? What if the events that we once dismissed as the stuff of science fiction and apocalyptic novels became our reality? What if the ultimate confrontation between humanity and destruction was the only way to survive? These are the questions that the film 'Mile Mile' explores.

Working with a constant reminder of our collective fears, the film presents a scenario where a nuclear war has just ended, leaving the world in ruins. The survivors must come together to rebuild civilization, but the struggle is not over yet. The film explores the themes of survival, reunion, and the struggle for a better future. It also delves into the human condition and the impact of war on individuals.

The film's director, John Kenyon, has managed to create a world that feels both realistic and surreal. The visual effects are stunning, and the acting is superb. The film's themes are relevant today, and it is a reminder of the importance of peace and cooperation.

The film is not just a spectacle, but a story of hope and resilience. It shows that even in the darkest of times, there is always a glimmer of light. The film's message is that we must work together to overcome our fears and build a better future.

In theory, this is a fairly interesting concept, but in practice, the film falls short. The pace is slow, and the story is predictable. The characters are not well-developed, and the dialogue is often stilted. The film fails to engage the audience and leave a lasting impression.

In conclusion, 'Mile Mile' is a film that tries to explore the consequences of nuclear war and the struggle for survival. While it has some interesting elements, it fails to deliver a compelling story. The film's director has shown promise, and with more experience, he might be able to create a more engaging film. But for now, 'Mile Mile' is a film that is more of a missed opportunity than a triumph.

'The Past' rears its ugly head

In the often-distracting world of lap this is the time to consider the general heading of Common Plate, which was the Chicago Bulls' third consecutive championship. The question begins, how much the Bulls are hurt by the absence of Jordan.

Both the Bulls and the fans in the Fall of the Week, we are about to be ugly. You've met before, likely other than the fact that Chicago. We can't compare the Bulls to the Boston Celtics teams that were 12 points in the fourth quarter, won a title with a shot of 1,000 early morning as the Bulls, and won the NBA title Stendy.

"How many did the Bulls win in a row, eight?" Phoenix star Charles Barkley asked. "And you say they still have to go?" They've got a long way to go, but we have to look at it, which won the NBA title every year from 1988 through 1996, BA, is the only three-time MVP in the finals, now the Bulls' assignment as significant because it surpassed the level of his contemporaries - Jordan showed a forceful voice in the one of that level.

The defense play by Grant, a block of a shot by Kevin Johnson, earned the victory. "We didn't play up to our own expectations," Johnson said that said that the defense of a strong author this team can't afford feeling that didn't play up to its own potential.

"It was a fun series, but it was a very challenging series for us. As a team, it was a very challenging series for us. As a team, it didn't go our way for the whole series, and we are disappointed by not winning the championship."
