Today last day for postcard registration in IC election

Today's is the last postmark date guaranteeing that eligible electors who register by postcard form can vote in the July 13 Special Iowa City Council Election. Change of address may also be made through the same form.

Postcard registration forms are available at 70 locations throughout the county in post offices, banks, libraries and numerous UI and other sites. Voters may also register in person at the Johnson County Administration Building, 913 S. Dubuque St.

Johnson County residents who are currently registered to vote do not need to register unless they have moved from the address on their current voter cards. Any questions can be answered at the Johnson County Auditor's Office at 356-6004.

Base commission ends meetings

WASHINGTON (AP) — A federal commission ended its fifth and final day of recommendations for a leaner military, tempering the devastating loss of Charleston, S.C., military installations by voting Sunday to place a high-tech naval center in the city.

But the panel wreaked new economic havoc on Washington's Virginia suburbs and struck again at the hard-hit San Francisco-Oakland area by voting to close the Oakland Naval Hospital.

2 Americans wounded in Somali attack

MOGADISHU, Somalia (AP) — Somali gunmen wounded two American soldiers Sunday in the second day of attacks on U.S. targets.

Maj. David Stockwell, a U.N. spokesman, said the U.S. Army soldiers were fired on about 10 a.m. (3 a.m. CST) while clearing debris from a road.

U.S. reprisal attack kills 8 in Baghdad

Iraqi raid termed a success by Clinton

Andrew Selsky
Associated Press

Iraqis dragged away their dead Sunday from the rubble of buildings wrecked by U.S. missiles while President Clinton said the raid was a successful reprisal for an alleged assassination plot against George Bush.

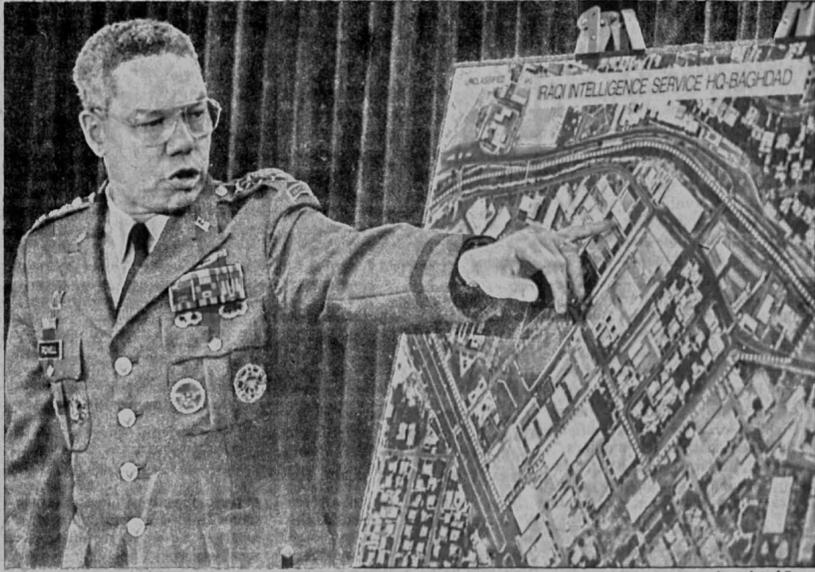

Iraq's intelligence headquarters in Baghdad was the target of the 23 Tomahawk cruise missiles fired from two Navy ships in the Red Sea and the Persian Gulf.

"Our preliminary assessment is that we hit the targets we intended and inflicted severe damage," said Gen. Colin Powell, chairman of the Joint Chiefs of Staff.

But three of the missiles — each armed with 1,000-pound high explosive warheads — went astray and hit near private homes, Pentagon officials said. The Iraqi government said eight people were known dead in the attack. Iraq's news agency put the total number of known wounded at 12.

After sunrise, rescue workers dug through the debris of buildings, looking for survivors and carrying away the dead. The limp body of a man was gently lowered onto a stretcher after being pulled from the debris of his home.

For residents of Baghdad, the attack was all too familiar. During the 1991 Persian Gulf War, a U.S.-led coalition had rained missiles on the Iraqi capital, striking military headquarters, communications centers, bridges and other targets. Saddam Hussein's troops had expected those attacks and tried to stop them with a hail of anti-aircraft fire. But this time the attack came out of the night without warning.

Associated Press photographer Jassim Mohammed, who lives near the target site, said he awoke early Sunday to the noise of the cruise missiles passing overhead.

"It was scary," Mohammed said. "We did not know what was going on, but everybody was rushing to take shelter."

As the missiles exploded in the fashionable Al-Mansour district of Baghdad — where the intelligence complex is located — residents of the capital were jolted from their beds.

"Many families were seen running from their homes, and there was a lot of panic in the streets," Angela Frier, an Independent Television News producer in Baghdad, told the British Broadcasting Corp.

Rescue workers picked through a ruined building that officials said had been the home of Leila Attar, an artist and the director of the Saddam Hussein Center for Arts.

The blast had sheared away the concrete wall, exposing twisted iron support rods.

The official Iraqi News Agency said Attar, her husband and maid were killed.

Hours later, a crowd thronged one of Baghdad's streets bearing the flag-draped coffins of some of the dead.

Robert Moore, Independent Television News correspondent in Baghdad, told the British Broadcasting Corp. that many floors of the Iraqi intelligence headquarters had collapsed in the attack.

The attack resulted in "the near complete destruction" of a wing of offices used by top Iraqi intelligence officials, Rear Adm. Michael Cramer told reporters at the Pentagon.

"It's clear that it was a success,"

Clinton said in Washington as he went to church. As for the casualties, Clinton said, "I'm sorry that happened, but I think we had minimal loss of life and we sent the message we need."

Bombing's political aftermath uncertain

Lesley Kennedy
The Daily Iowan

Saturday's U.S. bombing of Iraq may prove to be successful in terms of boosting President Clinton's domestic popularity, but its effect in bringing about change in Iraqi behavior is questionable, local experts say.

U.S. forces launched 23 cruise missiles Saturday against Iraqi intelligence headquarters in Baghdad based on evidence of a plot to assassinate former President George Bush, President Clinton said Saturday night.

"This is an attempt by the U.S. to reinforce the idea that Iraq's behavior is not acceptable in the international community," UI political science instructor Gerald Sorokin said. "An assassination attempt on the life of Bush is not something the U.S. is going to tolerate."

Sorokin said that Clinton felt the need to reinforce the idea that the U.S. is still tough in leadership. "He didn't want to just let it go," he said.

UI Associate political science Professor James Lindsay said the bombings may help Clinton's popularity, but won't have long-term effects.

"Perhaps the bombings will provide some domestic benefit to Bill Clinton in his need to overcome his vulnerability image on his behavior during the Vietnam War," Lindsay said. "But in long-term political interest, I doubt sincerely that this will prompt any change in Iraqi behavior."

DUBUQUE STREET SWAMPED

Saturday's downpour results in IC deluge

A weekend storm which produced just over half an inch of rain caused the Iowa River to overflow, but the floodwaters are expected to recede by today.

Jon Yates
The Daily Iowan

One big pain in the butt. That's how Iowa City Police Sgt. Cleve Keating described the situation after another weekend of heavy rains.

For Iowa City residents trying to get to Interstate 80 via waterlogged Dubuque Street, his description was not far off.

Over half an inch of rain in Iowa City and heavier readings north of town caused the Iowa River to overflow its banks early Sunday morning, forcing the closure of all four lanes of the street, and causing flooding in several homes near the river.

To UI senior Matt Jordan, whose fraternity house is located on Dubuque Street, Saturday night's rains meant a back yard full of water.

"I'm not real happy about it, because we can't go down there and do anything," Jordan said. "It's really brown and it's really disgusting."

And it may be around for a while. According to Randy Haas, supervisory park ranger for Coralville Lake, although water on the lake seems to have already crested, forecasts call for the possibility of more rain later in the week.

"We're going to have to wait and see," Haas said. "It's been kind of a rough summer so far."

At 1 p.m. Sunday, officials at the Coralville Dam's spillway at a rate of 10,000 cubic feet per second, a 25 percent increase from Thursday's output.

That could mean some minor flooding downstream, but Haas attributed most of Sunday's flooding to Saturday night's rain downstream, not the outflow of the dam.

Haas said he expected the flooding to recede by late Sunday or early Monday morning.

In addition, Haas said, he expects the lake not to overflow its wall, despite the fact that the lake's water level currently sits about 6 inches from capacity.

"We'll continue to monitor it, but the people making predictions had factored in (Saturday night's)

"We're going to have to wait and see. It's been kind of a rough summer so far."

rains," he said. "If it does go over later, it will be nothing dramatic. It wouldn't be a wall of water or anything, it would be more of a trickle. But it's hard to say, really; it's never happened before."

For those wanting to catch a glimpse of the water at the dam — and Sunday afternoon plenty of area residents did — Haas said drivers should be careful and cognizant of pedestrians.

"It's been extremely busy out here this weekend," he said. "People have to be careful when driving."

Sunday's outflow from the spillway was about 2,000 cubic feet per second less than the rate when flooding occurred two years ago. According to Coralville Lake Park Manager John Castle, at the current rate of outflow, City Park generally experiences substantial flooding.

David Greedy / The Daily Iowan

Saturday night's rain, combined with a reservoir near capacity, led to the closing of parts of Dubuque Street Sunday afternoon. Residents of Mayflower Residence Hall appeared to be trapped by the high waters covering the street, but could still gain access to the building from the sides.

RULES OUTLINED

Mail bomb rash spurs caution in UI staffers

Tory Brecht
The Daily Iowan

Recent letter-bomb explosions directed toward professors at the University of California-San Francisco and Yale University have prompted UI officials to create new safety guidelines for handling mail.

UI Associate Director of University Relations Tom Bauer said the UI had no cause for alarm, but that employees should use care with respect to incoming mail and package deliveries.

"We're just providing suggestions for safety guidelines," Bauer said. "Obviously, we don't anticipate any problems, but we wanted to distribute procedures for handling mail to university departments."

The added security measures come in the wake of a week in which a Yale computer science professor was seriously injured in a blast and a UC-San Francisco geneticist lost several fingers. The FBI has not determined a motive, but the last five years have seen a rash of mail bombings directed toward universities, officials said.

Norm Poppenhagen, a Linn County bomb-disposal officer, said letter bombs can often be detected if mail and packages are inspected closely.

"If an envelope is too heavy for its size, it is suspect," Poppenhagen said. "If it's an explosive, you should be able to feel the protrusion of the power source."

Unusual stains, no return address or illegible writing on the envelope or package are all signs to look for, according to Poppenhagen.

He dabbles in art, dazzles in the classroom

UI Associate Professor Fred Woodard can be found in classrooms on campus and his artwork can be in various spots around town.

Maria Hickey
The Daily Iowan

Associate Professor Fred Woodard returned to teaching last year after 10 years as the associate vice president for academic affairs. Today, as the chairman of the African-American World Studies Program, he feels he's never been a better teacher.

"I had a lot of time to mature and see the world differently," he said.

During his time in central administration, Woodard worked to personalize the UI. He preferred to emphasize the people that made up the institution rather than the bureaucracy.

"I emerged from administration with far, far more strategies for personalizing and interacting with people," Woodard said. He has carried this desire to personalize into his classes.

In the classroom, Woodard likes to give himself free range. Rather than standing behind a podium, he prefers to walk around and make contact with his students. He also likes to give his students intellectual freedom.

"It is heart-warming to say that in my classes, subject matter is subordinate to how students think about thinking," Woodard said.

Students should be able to defend their ideas, he said, and not always have to agree with him.

"Students are absolutely filled with ideas, and just because the idea doesn't fit the textbook notion, it doesn't mean we can't use it," he said.

Woodard came to the UI in 1967 when he was accepted into the Writers' Workshop. During the previous five years, he was a high-school drama and English teacher in Davenport. He continued at the UI as a teaching assistant for rhetoric and expository writing, and has been here ever since.

This summer, Woodard is teaching a course in advanced research for graduate students. He describes himself as the sounding board for the theoretical arguments by the class's three students. Woodard is also in charge of four students in independent studies. Although he is not being paid for either endeavor, Woodard has spent a lot of time with his students, guiding them in their research.

Although he has always loved teaching, Woodard said he especially enjoys undergraduate students.

"Undergraduates, in my experience, are relatively fearless," he said. "Particularly when you provide them with an open range; that is, the space to explore their ideas."

Students should not take his classes because they are filling requirements, he said, but because they want to explore the way they think. Woodard believes he relates to students because he understands how they learn.

"Students who have been brought up on television are differently oriented than their elders," he said, adding that he finds today's students much more visually oriented and willing to think about theoretical ideas if the ideas are presented in everyday terms.

"They sincerely appreciate having entry into the world of ideas in ways that they can understand," he said. "They understand the common-sensical is a doorway — a window into the larger complex theory."

David Guttenfelder / The Daily Iowan

Associate Professor and Chairman of the African-American World Studies Program Fred Woodard recently had an exhibition of his artwork at Iowa State Bank and Trust.

Like many of his students, Woodard is visually oriented. Currently, he has an exhibit of his art work on display at the Iowa State Bank and Trust building in downtown Iowa City. More of his works will be on display in the UI Theatre Building June 21-July 24.

Woodard said he has been "dabbling" in visual art for over 25 years, but when he lost his wife to a sudden heart attack four and a half years ago, he felt that he had little choice.

"Somehow I had to reconcile myself, and one of the ways that I found some relief was to become expressive," Woodard said. "I found that in becoming expressive, I let out a great deal of energy that was bound up inside."

The work also helped others, Woodard said. His art reached other people, and although they saw something of what he saw in his art, they were also inventing their own ideas.

Just as he does not expect his students' thinking to remain static, Woodard thinks he will have learned more about teaching and human behavior in another 10 years.

"The way I see things at this moment need not be cast in stone, because sand is so much better," he said.

It looks like another bad week for Scorpios. And Libras. Actually, it's not looking too good for anyone's sign these days. Damn stars.

ARIES (March 21-April 19) Two words: renter's insurance. Pierce a body part this week. Fear dogs and itty-bitty squirrels. Wear something snazzy to work, something that tells the world "Hey, look at me, I'm not a complete bore. Really, I'm not. Seriously. Come on, look. LOOK."

TAURUS (April 20-May 20) Quit frying ants with your magnifying glass, it's cruel. No, wait, it's those damn Libras that are doing that, isn't it? We're sorry. All these horoscopes kind of run together after a while. All the visions from above get a little scrambled sometimes. Really, we'll get it straight next week, we swear.

GEMINI (May 21-June 21) Your skin will start changing colors about mid week and by Saturday you'll be a completely different shade, but it's okay. In fact, since Michael Jackson went on Oprah and revealed it could happen naturally, it's kind of become the hip thing to do. Of course, you have no control over the matter, so you might as well make the best of it.

CANCER (June 22-July 22) You will have a lot of energy this week; make sure it is not misguided into shenanigans. Instead, channel those energies into creating something beneficial to all mankind, something that will change the world, something like call waiting. Or just sit back, drink lots of beer and watch some Brady Bunch reruns. I mean, come on, there really isn't a whole heck of a lot you can accomplish in a week.

LEO (July 23-Aug. 22) There is something green in your refrigerator. Remove it — it's supposed to be brown. Try a debilitating drug. You will be haunted by the ghost of Richard Simmons. Whoops — he ain't dead yet. Sorry. Don't rush things.

VIRGO (Aug. 23-Sept. 22) Start a really nasty rumor about a higher-up at work — it may help you climb the corporate ladder. Mow your lawn barefoot (those wusses that say it's dangerous have never felt the cool softness of fresh-cut grass as it pokes against the ball of your foot, or the warm, smooth squish of a doglog as it oozes up through the cracks between your toes). Actually, come to think of it, wear shoes.

LIBRA (Sept. 23-Oct. 23) The world is your oyster! Unfortunately, oysters are pretty gross and smell bad. Come to terms with the fact that a degree from a major U.S. university doesn't mean a whole hell of a lot in this world. Basically, get your head in the game. And quit frying ants with your magnifying glass — it's cruel.

SCORPIO (Oct. 24-Nov. 23) You're not fooling anyone with that damn self-pity act. Everyone knows you're a conceited jerk, so you might as well start acting like one. People dig that stuff. Put off a major project and get plenty of sleep. Skip a class and tell your professor it's okay — your horoscope told you to. They'll understand.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 24-Dec. 21) Somewhere out there is a dog that wants to clamp onto your leg. Beware of this dog; it only wants to use you. Get some traveling in — this town is getting you nowhere. Strongly consider shaving off all of your body hair and, hey, why not sniff some of that funky glue stuff?

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22-Jan. 19) Fantastic week! Invest heavily in the stock market, Lady Luck is on your side. Ask that special someone out on a date, then wow them with your wit and charm. Your softball team will finally win a game despite the fact that they're woefully overmatched every week. You didn't fall for this again this week, did you? Wake up and smell the coffee, it's just going to be another boring week of eating, working and sleeping. Sheesh. You guys make us sick.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20-Feb. 18) Neighborhood activities keep you fat. Fire warning shots over the crowd to disperse them when they drag on past reasonable hours. Go to a lot of garage sales and buy, buy, buy. There's a lot of perfectly good junk out there that would look just great cluttering your garage.

PISCES (Feb. 19-March 20) All right, let's get one thing straight. According to your sign, you're a fish. Phliff! You don't even deserve a horoscope. Come on, you're a goddamn fish. Okay, sorry. Here's your horoscope: you will swim around a lot, then get eaten by a shark after your friends are made into processed fish sticks by the kind folks at Mrs. Paul and get eaten by a plumber and his wife in Toledo. Let's face it, you were born under a bad sign.

OFFICERS' RESPONSES POSITIVE

New UI bike patrol offers many bonuses

Eight bike-riding officers will be hitting the streets between now and the fall.

Thomas Wanat
The Daily Iowan

Mountain bikes are hitting the streets, sidewalks, walkways, nooks and crannies of the UI campus this summer with one important difference — public safety officers behind the handlebars.

"We have eight officers interested in riding bikes," said Director of UI Public Safety Bill Fuhrmeister. "They'll be hitting the streets as we get them trained, between now and fall."

Fuhrmeister said the bikes will allow Public Safety to better patrol the hard-to-reach areas of campus, save money and increase their availability and visibility, all at the same time.

But trails of paperwork ranging from the bidding process to purchasing had to be braved before the first Raleigh special-edition police bike hit the road last Friday. Fuhrmeister said the bike patrols should be worth the wait.

"We'll be going more places than we can with other vehicles," Fuhrmeister said. "It's faster than walking patrols and we'll be able to provide a safer environment for our community."

Detective Sgt. Don Challis, the first public safety officer to graduate from "Bike School" — taught by the veteran riders at the Iowa State University Public Safety Department — said that so far the response has been very positive.

"I've gotten a lot of strange looks," Challis said. "People aren't used to seeing us out patrolling on bikes yet."

On just the first day of riding around campus, Challis said he had noticed that people feel more comfortable talking to an officer on a bike than in a car.

"People who wouldn't flag us down in a patrol car will get my attention on the bike," Challis said, adding that being able to voice concerns to public safety officers is important.

"This is the best way to get out and meet the people, to make contact," he said.

Contact that some might not like. Challis explained that the bike patrols, which could run all three shifts, every day from April through November, will provide swift and almost totally silent response.

"These should be especially effective on late night patrols. You really can't hear them coming," Challis said, adding that all bike patrol officers will be equipped with pepper mace, nightsticks, handcuffs, radios, first-aid kits and the full array of necessary paperwork.

Detective Sgt. Don Challis will be the first officer to patrol the campus on his 21-speed special-edition police mountain bike.

"There's a big difference between us and the Iowa City volunteer bike patrol," Challis explained, adding that the UI bike patrols will answer the same calls as their patrol cars. "We give real tickets, and we can make real arrests. We'll send people to jail if we have to."

The actual training, which Challis will be passing on to his fellow officers at the UI, includes riding a confidence course, balance, stops and even take-down procedures — providing the officers with training for all contingencies, even the hills. "That's what we've got the granny-gear for," Challis said, saying that the low gear on the 21-speeds is more than adequate to tackle the UI campus.

One concern Challis had was that public safety officers should set a good example of correct biking.

"We're going to follow all the rules," he said, adding that everything from hand signals to waiving their bikes across the Pentacrest would be included.

"It's up to us to set the way for others to follow," Challis said. "We can't expect others to do it if we don't ourselves."

And Batting Cleanup... — Johnson County Sheriff Bob Carpenter used a broom in an attempt to break the window of a car which apparently slid into a flooded ditch around 2 a.m. Saturday at the intersection of Highway 22 and Sand Road. The car was eastbound on the highway when it entered the ditch, submerging the car to the roof. Carpenter broke the window around noon on Saturday so that the car could be towed out of the ditch. The driver has not been identified and no injuries were reported.

MULTIPLE OFFENDERS STILL ON THE ROAD

Drivers defiant despite stiffer drunk-driving laws

Associated Press

DES MOINES — Iowa has cracked down on drunken drivers in recent years, but hundreds of drivers defy the law and remain on the road even after multiple convictions.

Leading the list of multiple offenders is Patrick Donnelly, 46, of Mondamin, who has 11 drunken-driving convictions. Since his last conviction on that charge in March 1992, Donnelly has been involved in two accidents in which officers believe he was intoxicated, and he was arrested on drunken-driving charges again in April.

A study by The Des Moines Register shows 30,052 Iowans have been convicted of drunken driving at least twice in their lifetimes. In that group are 1,228 drivers who have five or more convictions.

Fatalities involving drunken drivers have come down in recent years as laws and enforcement were strengthened. Last year, 157 died in accidents that involved alcohol, compared with 213 in 1989.

The study also shows that drunken driving is now Iowa's most common major crime. Statistics from the Iowa Supreme Court show that drunken driving accounts for more than 40 percent of criminal charges now filed by prosecutors.

People go to prison for drunken driving more than any other crime. In 1992, more than 390 Iowans served an average of 11 months in prison for this crime, costing taxpayers $10 million to house them.

But some drunken drivers say the threat of jail isn't a deterrent.

"Jail doesn't scare me or anyone else I know," said Bruce Whiting, 38, of Cedar Rapids. Whiting has eight drunken-driving convictions.

"That won't keep a guy like me from drinking and driving. If it did, I would have stopped long ago," he said.

GUN CONTROL

An answer, but not enough

Every so often, some event comes along that presents a major challenge to the way we Americans see ourselves. A recent Louisiana trial, in which a court effectively ruled that a homeowner was justified in killing a 16-year-old Japanese exchange student who knocked on the wrong door, seems to be one such event. Yet in all the navel-gazing over America's lax gun laws, a deeper problem is being ignored: the overwhelming level of violence in American society.

We have a rate of death via gun violence roughly 100 times that of nations like Japan, Britain, even Canada. Why? It's for multiple reasons, with the abundance and availability of cheap weapons being a key, though not exclusive, factor.

Other equally, if not more important causes include the relative economic deprivation among poor Americans. It's not so much absolute poverty as it is a sense of unfairness and hopelessness — and like Bob Dylan says: "When you ain't got nothin', you got nothin' to lose." Then there's the Wild-West, violence-solves-problems, vengeful cultural mythology that all Americans have grown up with. The same dynamic fuels both the death penalty and drive-by shootings. Another factor would be abuse of drugs, more legal and liquid than illegal.

Most victims of gun violence are outcasts of society in terms of race or economic class. The gun lobby, in contrast, is made up by and large of middle-class, white, rural and suburban Americans who seem less concerned about saving poor, urban minority lives than they are about protecting a vague threat to their own rights — a "threat" that's usually portrayed in false light on a slippery slope.

Gun control will not single-handedly prevent violent crime in America. It would be a major step away from the frontier mindset, and would to some extent limit the means of persons to commit violence (knives tend to be less lethal than bullets). It would certainly stop some crimes of passion. But the only effective way to reduce crime will be to significantly reduce the poverty of knowledge, money, hope, equality and opportunity among America's lower class. The methods for doing so are certainly subject to debate, but the point is beyond argument, and isn't a matter of "coddling criminals." Where there is more education, there is less crime. Where there are more jobs and dollars, there is less crime. And, one might add in most cases, where there are fewer guns in the hands of desperate people, there is less crime.

Solving these problems requires a long-term approach. It's likely to take a generation even if we were to start yesterday. That's longer than any term of office, and too few politicians have the long-range vision to make the short-range decisions and investments. But we have to do it, and do it now, because yesterday is too late.

CORRECTION

An error was made in the transcription of a Letter to the Editor which ran on the Monday, June 21 Daily Iowan Viewpoints Page. A sentence in the letter, written by Grace Trifaro, was transcribed as follows:
 "Suggesting that there were good guys (us meat eaters) and bad guys (Nazi German vegetarians) during World War II is not only childish and xenophobic, but quite stupid and highly inaccurate."
 Due to smudging on the original copy, the parenthetical remark, "(us meat eaters)," replaced the original "(U.S. meat eaters)."
 The Daily Iowan regrets this error.

KIM PAINTER

Mixed messages on coming of age

Recently, America's social conversation about sexuality has taken some interesting turns. The Catholic Church is re-examining its stance with regard to priests who engage in sex acts with minors. This after decades of silently shuffling assignments at the first rumors of misconduct, while at the same time using a five-year statute of limitations to stymie the investigation and punishment of such actions.

In a more temporal sphere, The Chronicle of Higher Education has reported extensively in recent weeks on institutional policies forbidding sexual fraternization between faculty and students. Such liaisons are verboten on an increasing number of campuses. The policies tend toward what can most charitably be termed an idealistically neat view of human relationships. Faculty deemed to be in violation are subject to dismissal with very little recourse or deliberation. In addition, there is almost never any official acknowledgement of the possibility of such a thing as uniqueness of circumstance. All such relationships are held to be degrading lapses into malfeasance until proven otherwise, yet there is no proving field available on which to demonstrate a relationship's decency.

The examination of these issues within the church and the academy has elicited strong public response. Unfortunately, this response often follows as subtle and complex a chain of logic as that engaged in by your basic mollusk. Complexity be damned: Priests having it off with their young charges or professors engaging in romantic entanglements with students are vile cads. They must be punished. There ought to be a law. "Larry King Live" does a couple of shows, the switchboards light up, and pretty soon we're drafting amendments to the Constitution. Can you say "cultural crisis management," boys and girls?

Let's talk about what we haven't heard on "Larry King Live," or any of the lowest-common-denominator national voyeur-pandering talk shows out there. It doesn't especially matter who you grow up to be; the topic of growing up is unique to each individual. Specifically, our growth from pre-sexual persons into sexual adulthood can take any of an infinite number of forms. These run the gamut from harmlessly pleasant to volcanically satisfying, and on to violent or even illegal.

The ways in which we experience this growth are as different as our particular emotional strengths, circumstances and acquaintances. Consider one man's coming-of-age story. He is a friend of mine in the business world. He is cherished by many as a person. He is held in the highest of professional esteem. To use the technical term, he is a sweetheart. He recently told me a story of his young life that struck me as both disturbing and gorgeous.

He was introduced to sex at the age of 13. I know, I know — I said the very same thing. However, it was a magnificent experience for him. I know this because he told me. He swore to me (I made him hold his hand over a baguette, a solemn oath if ever such there was). He claimed with certainty that he knew what was going on and what he wanted out of the situation.

As he told it, his first partner gave him a tremendous amount of pleasure while remaining careful to the point of reverence with his body. That which was done, was done in a spirit of love for the sake of physical joy and in no way harmed him.

He went on to add that this first partner was a Catholic priest. Well. What does one do with a story like this from a deeply devoted married man over chablis and veggie quesadillas?

The personal response is the least important. Mine ran along the lines of, "Gosh, gee. Where was the nun with my number sewn into the hem of her habit back when I needed her?"

The more important response is the collective one we are formulating now. We are all participating, even if we remain silent. The legislation frenzy has begun. It will gather speed with or without us. Congressional hearings are probably being planned even as you read.

As a nation revered for an especially timeless set of founding legal documents, we make too many legislative decisions based on the appalling, sordid stories that Geraldo, Phil and Oprah keep us up on. This may be the best we can do in some instances. For the sake of anything like effective legislation, we may be doomed to group all sex involving people regarded as "unequal" into the same category. We may have to do so regardless of whether the exchange's impact was positive or negative. We must, after all, take some decision. Recent press coverage has led to a typically American stampede of righteous indignation laced with politics and religion. The last thing we're going to do now is stop and think.

But what about these other stories? What of the eternally unsettling mélange of life and growth, the menacing adult sexual terrain we are all drawn to? It is a landscape where confusion and pain intersect with ecstasy. It seems we mean to pretend we can legislate all of that away. It seems we will do so without knowing whether our choice will result in social benefit or personal loss.

We all know the simple truths. Rape is rape. Improper use of power to coerce a subordinate into a sexual relationship is criminal. Determining who gets fellowships or tenure on the basis of their willingness to fall into bed with us is unconscionable. But as surely as we know the simple truths, humanity has always been profoundly moved — both disturbed and elated — by the more complicated truths we also know.

We know that it is possible for a very beautiful love to emerge, despite all of our best intentions, within the confines of other relationships. Such relationships often make the acceptance of this emergent love unwise. But when has love been wise? When have we ever asked so much of poor, old, weak-in-the-knees love? We are fools if we pretend that professors never fall in love with students. We know better than to decree that any instance of a young person being introduced to sex by an adult is inherently profane. Most importantly, we are fools if we think there is any way to eliminate the potential for a painful coming-of-age process.

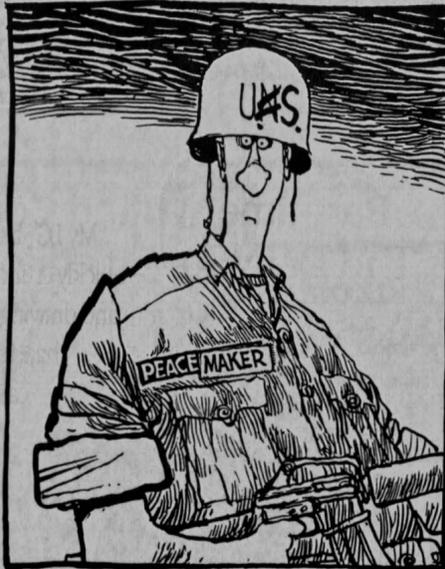

As long as we can see no farther than denial — to "forbid" consensual faculty-student relationships (or deny their possibility altogether, as some have done), or encourage the Catholic Church to resurrect the auto-da-fé without statute of limitations in cases of priestly escapades — our efforts are no match for that which we would combat. We should at least listen to the sound of the stories that had happier outcomes. Otherwise, our efforts at reform are at least as misguided and unnatural as anything they try to remedy, and are doomed to failure.

The Changing UN Mission:

Bulls' celebration should be a mandatory gas

If it were up to Monica Grayless, a schoolteacher, there would have been no mass rally in downtown Chicago to celebrate the Bulls' championship.

Instead, there would be only a candlelight vigil to mourn those who died or were injured during post-game disturbances, and to protest the violence.

"I have been a teacher for 25 years and I am just shocked that there is a rally," Ms. Grayless said.

"This rally is a reward for the violence. So many of these people looting were teenagers. Having a celebration reinforces that bad behavior."

"If there is going to be any kind of ceremony, there should be a candlelight vigil ..."

While I respect Ms. Grayless for having so sensitive a social conscience, I don't share her distress and sorrow, and I'm not about to light any candles.

Yes, there was some looting, rioting, violence and the usual post-championship carnage. And it is possible that two or three people died as a result of it, although that isn't a certainty.

But consider the numbers.

Chicago is the heart of a metropolitan area of about 7 million people.

Out of 7 million, about 700 were arrested. That's not one percent. It's not even one-tenth of one percent. It's about one-tenth of one-tenth of one percent. Or something like that.

It amounts to one person out of every 70,000 being pinched.

So for every goofball who got himself or herself or itself arrested, 69,999 didn't.

Actually, the post-victory disturbances probably reduced the normal crime rate in Chicago.

There were so many cops on duty and visible that the gangbangers, head-busters, porch-climbers and window-crawlers were unable to engage in their usual hot summer night activities.

Instead of robbing, raping and pillaging, they were diverted by the Bulls' victory and the massive show of force, and most were unable to do anything more malicious than bust a few store windows and toss objects at the cops.

Who knows how many more serious crimes were prevented by channeling these idiotic instincts into old-fashioned street disturbances? Maybe we should have riots every Friday, Saturday and Sunday night. It might be a safer city. At least we will know where the boobs are. Better that they should be leaping about in the streets than slinking down your gangway or lurking in your hallway.

Nor is there any reason for collective civic guilt, as a West Coast radio person suggested to me.

"Do Chicagoans feel embarrassed because of the disturbances?" he asked. Since we weren't on the air, I told him that was a crock of something or other, and hung up.

Why should anyone who did not commit a crime feel guilty because of what a relatively small number of morons did? On any Monday morning, I can check out the weekend crime statistics: several murders, numerous rapes and robberies, a few hit-and-runs and the usual number of pea-brained parents dropping their kids out of a window or into a pot of soup.

Should I feel guilty? Should you? Of course not, because we don't spend our leisure time murdering, robbing, raping, drive-by shooting, or treating our own kids like lab rats.

So there is no reason for anyone except the guilty to feel guilty about Sunday night's outbursts of madness.

Especially since the guilty feel no guilt. If you ask some yahoo who looted a store, took a shot at a cop, or tossed a brick or a bottle, if he regretted his behavior, he would look at you like you are a nut. Regret? To do anything less than loot or shoot or toot would not be manly. He would get sneers from all his peers.

To expand on the old Western movie line — a man's got to do what a man's got to do, even if it's really stupid.

If I have any criticism about the modern tradition of celebration by riot, it would be directed at the methods used by the police.

Their approach is to contain and limit the rioting with a huge show of force. They don't want to shoot people or crack their skulls because that would be insensitive, disrespectful and the ACLU would sue to protect the right of an individual to window-shop by walking through the window.

And I agree with this approach. Killing rioters just causes hard feelings.

But I'm sure we could borrow a few helicopters from the military. And I'm also sure that there is some sort of nonlethal gas that could be sprayed on the looters from above. Something that would knock them out but do no permanent harm.

Then, when they had all swooned and collapsed, the police could move in and strip them of their earrings, watches, pin earrings, sports team jackets, Air Jordan shoes, firearms, and any other valuables in their pockets.

These assets could then be turned back to the city treasury to help cover the cost of maintaining order. Sort of an on-the-spot riot tax.

It would turn civil disorder into a virtue. Even the mischief-makers might find that they like it. Later, if they were asked to contribute to a charity, they could honestly say: "Sorry, but I already gave at the riot."

TOMAHAWK ATTACK

Making Iraq the victim ill-advised

The attack on Iraq shook the world's sleepy news weekend Saturday afternoon, as 23 Tomahawk cruise missiles, launched from U.S. warships, hit the headquarters of Saddam Hussein's intelligence agency.

President Clinton, addressing the nation on a live broadcast a mere hour after the attack, explained that the strike was in retaliation for an Iraqi plot to assassinate former President Bush during an April visit to Kuwait.

Clinton will surely have the bipartisan support of all members of Congress that he has not enjoyed for his domestic initiatives.

U.S. allies also reacted positively to the attack, Great Britain being the most approving and Egypt wishing that Washington had reacted in the same way in Bosnia.

According to Pentagon sources, the attack was a total success in all aspects. The Iraqi facilities were destroyed, "forcing a lot of office redecoration on Monday," in the words of Rear Adm. Michael Cramer. But most importantly, the message was sent clearly to Saddam Hussein that the United States will not sit idly by in the face of terrorism.

But while the attack was justified, and will hopefully prove useful in impairing Iraq's intelligence and terrorism-generating capabilities, will the strike reap the desired deterrent effect?

Just like during the Persian Gulf War, when smart bombs missed many of their targets, the Pentagon admitted that four missiles did not make direct hits and three others entirely missed their objectives, landing on residential areas.

Saddam Hussein's government will undoubtedly take advantage of their claims that several people were killed in the attack. The only images the media has seen of the aftermath have shown the private homes and civilians hit during the attack. At press time, Western news crews had not been allowed near the intelligence agency's compound, but eyewitness reports on CNN said the complex, though badly damaged, did not suffer total destruction.

In addition to the collateral damage and loss of civilian lives, Iraq will surely make good use of the point that the assassination attempt never took place and no one was hurt. Sure, it was promptly discovered by Kuwaiti agents, but the fact is that the U.S. strike will not be counterweighed by a plot that was foiled in time.

The bombing will surely alienate Muslim fundamentalists even more, as they will see it as a unilateral response to something that never really happened. In the eyes of many Arabs, Iraq has again been the victim of uncalled for Western aggression.

Unfortunately, while this attack will give Clinton a credibility in foreign affairs he desperately needs after so many domestic blunders, it will also give anti-American terrorists just one more reason to strike against U.S. lives.

Pigott recommended in city council race

To the Editor:
The July 13 election to fill a vacancy on the Iowa City City Council is important to all Daily Iowan readers because the council's decisions constantly impact our lives. The seven-member body makes (or refuses to make) policy on everything from affordable housing to traffic. Each year the council spends $65 million in taxes, money we provide through property taxes (directly or indirectly through rent payments) and through the many city fees for services.

Bruno Pigott won the June primary and is now one of two candidates who will be on the July 13 ballot. A program officer for the nonpartisan Stanley Foundation, Bruno organizes national and international policy conferences. He is a member of the city's Committee on Community Needs and an active member of the Democratic Party.

Bruno is taking voters seriously by taking clear, specific stands on the issues. His general themes are open government, thoughtful growth, and making Iowa City more affordable. Differences he has with his opponent include Bruno's support for volume-based garbage rates, Bruno's opposition to raising bus fares, and Bruno's belief that there really IS a parking problem in Iowa City.

Bruno's opponent has said the fact that Bruno is a tenant somehow indicates a decreased commitment to Iowa City. That is outrageous and divisive. Our community will not benefit from pitting homeowners against tenants.

Whatever you do, please vote in the July 13 election.

Making a killing

To the Editor:
OK, now let's see if I've got this right: A seriously rich geezer who got his start running a flea circus in Scotland swoops down on a dinosaur dig in Montana and bribes two knowledgeable "experts" on dinosaurs to come and have a look around his Pleistocene Ponderosa just off the coast of Costa Rica. Once there, he's certain they'll be so impressed that when they get home they'll leap before the television cameras and squeal "I'm going to Jurassic Park!" after the next big bone find.

Unbeknownst to our two experts, Pops has managed to 1.) find the ultimate picnic pest encapsulated in amber and buried in the earth's bowels; 2.) assemble a team of scio-technicians who've perfected the art of cloning long-dead organisms from a drop of blood; 3.) build a surprisingly flimsy combination animal-friendly zoo and "all you can eat" buffet; 4.) raise herds of these formerly extinct animals to adulthood; and 5.) keep all of this a secret from our heroes before they're so elegantly invited to set foot on his property to gaze in slack-jawed wonder at the world's ultimate tourist attraction.

OK, OK, so it's only just a movie; destined to be the biggest blockbuster of all time.

Not that the movie bothers with many of these insights. It glories in the materialism inspired by such attractions, both within the movie plot and as part of the awesome merchandising campaign supporting the release. At first appearances, we get a tricked-up slasher flick dressed in dinohyde.

Even if we take seriously the major assumption that it's possible to clone dinosaurs, doesn't the fact that some kindly old granddad with more money than sense could actually do it, and that such profound creation could be done secretly without anyone — other than his "investors" — knowing anything about it, say something sinister about the economic system that would support such an undertaking?

Doesn't the movie's portrayal of a complete absence of contentious scientific debate — other than the musings of a single mathematician focused more intently on getting the girl than thinking through the issue — say an awful lot about a society that reveres its junk-bond salesmen more than its scientists in the quest to unlock the mysteries of life?

Jurassic Park is a scary movie all right. But the blood dripping from the dinosaurs' mouths isn't red — it's green.

Bicycling coexistence

To the Editor:
Three cheers to the Iowa City police for finally enforcing laws prohibiting bikes on sidewalks. As an avid biker and bicycle commuter for more than a decade, I have been appalled at the City's lax enforcement of regulations for biking. I urge them to continue strict enforcement of these rules, especially in areas of heavy pedestrian traffic.

I agree wholeheartedly with Mr. Breitbach that cycling offers an efficient and environmentally protective mode of transportation, especially in a community the size of Iowa City. I do not agree with him that bikes and pedestrians should "share common areas." By law, bicycles have the same rights and responsibilities as automobiles. That means bikes should operate on the street and observe the traffic laws. I'm sure Mr. Breitbach is old enough to ride in the streets.

If Mr. Breitbach truly enjoys the virtues of bicycle commuting, I urge him to join us in promoting this activity. There are a growing number of us working to develop biking corridors and commuter lanes as well as safe, convenient bicycle parking. We need the help of everyone in the Iowa City and UI communities with this project.

Statistics abused

To the Editor:
Kim Painter's columns are one of the highlights of Monday's Daily Iowan. She is an excellent writer and her clear exposition always challenges us, even when we disagree with her views. Although she made several good points in the column "Gay Rights: Painting by Numbers" (May 3 D1), there are two issues that we would like to comment on from our perspective as Christian theists and statisticians.

First, we are disturbed by the matter-of-fact statements, in this column as well as in nearly everything written on gay rights, that the opposition is from "militant Christians." It is, unfortunately, true that the statements and actions of the "Christian Right" concerning this subject are sometimes anything but Christ-like. The "God hates fags" signs Ms. Painter alludes to are non-Christian, non-Biblical, and simply untrue. The simple fact of the matter is that God loves us all.

However, Ms. Painter's inferences that one's sexual orientation and behavior are no more significant than one's eye or hair color are simply not accepted by a great many Americans across a broad spectrum of religious traditions. In fact, although the existence of "sin" is not a subject of polite conversation, many individuals sincerely believe that lesbian, gay and bisexual lifestyle choices are "wrong." Unfortunately, many of the individuals crusading the hardest against the gay lifestyle are less concerned about other issues that are also defined as "sin" by Christians, such as greed, slander, theft, economic injustice, adultery, etc. In our opinion, this university would be a better place if the creators of the repugnant anti-gay display in the Union would direct some of their righteous fervor at other types of "sin," since we are all "sinners."

Our second concern relates to the use and abuse of statistics. As statisticians, we have long wondered about the basis of the "one-in-ten" statistic that has so often been stated as a fact. Although civil rights should never be linked with prevalence, the "one-in-ten" argument was often used in this regard. We first saw this statistic publicly questioned in Newsweek (Feb. 15, 1993). It has now been apparently discredited by the recent Alan Guttmacher Institute study. It should be disturbing to all of us engaged in research that, as Newsweek reported, "ideology, not sound science, has perpetuated a one-in-ten myth."

Lindsay said in terms of domestic politics, the bombings make Clinton look tough, causing many Americans to feel the retaliation was a success.

"But if the objective of the bombings is to teach the Iraqis a lesson and to get them to change, it doesn't make a dime's worth of difference," he said.

It is still difficult to tell if the bombings will have a positive effect for the U.S., Sorokin said.

"It is not clear if Iraq can retaliate short of terrorist attacks," he said.

have been found only in devices linked to Iraq and not in devices used by any other terrorist groups," she said at an emergency session of the Security Council.

Albright said the United States was not asking for the council's endorsement. There was no vote or resolution.

Iraqi Ambassador Nizar Hamdoun called on the council to condemn the U.S. attack. Iraq denies its intelligence agents tried to kill Bush and says Washington fabricated the plot to justify the use of military force against Baghdad.

mail, Poppenhagen said, they will usually only explode if opened and not as a result of being jostled or dropped.

The guidelines distributed to UI faculty and staff include the warning signs mentioned by Poppenhagen, as well as suspicious foreign

"We just want to make people aware of the problem," he said. "Just being cautious is the best precaution."

against his life a threat to U.S. sovereignty.

Bush had led the multinational force that ousted invading Iraqi troops from Kuwait in 1991, embarrassing Saddam, who had claimed that the Persian Gulf War would result in a bloodbath for U.S. troops.

Although his troops were the losers in that war, Saddam himself remained in power, and has been a thorn in the side of the U.S. leadership.

Asked whether further action was possible, Defense Secretary Les Aspin told CNN: "I think we'd better not say."

Doonesbury

BY GARRY TRUDEAU

SO WOULD YOU BE COME AFTER YOU WERE LORNA DOONE, BOOPSI? CATHERINE OF ARAGON, HENRY VIII'S FIRST WIFE... I REMEMBER HAVING A WEIRD FEELING ABOUT THAT MARRIAGE GOING IN — A KIND OF PREMONITION? PREMOMITION? YEAH, I JUST FELT SOMETHING BAD WAS GOING TO HAPPEN. LIKE I'D BE BEHEADED OR SOMETHING. GOOD LORD... WHY DIDN'T YOU BACK OUT? CONFLICT OF INTEREST. I KNEW I'D BE COMING BACK AS HIS SIXTH WIFE.

Doonesbury

BY GARRY TRUDEAU

JOANIE? HEY, JOANIE! ANDY... IS THAT YOU? YUP! HOW YOU BEEN? WANT TO GO OUT AND GRAB A BITE? GRAB A BITE? RIGHT, THERE'S A LITTLE DINER AROUND THE CORNER. BUT, ANDY, YOU'RE DEAD! SO I'M A CHEAP DATE. GRAB A COAT.

I was bored today. I went outside and walked around. I walked by a guy washing his car. A suntan lotion ad was playing on his radio. When I got home I tried to figure out the notes to the suntan lotion theme on the piano.

Young singled with the bases loaded as Pittsburgh rallied for two runs in the 10th inning off Mitch Williams (1-0).

Pete Incaviglia's broken-bat sacrifice fly gave the Phillies a 3-2 lead in the top of the 10th off Stan Belinda (3-0), but Slaughter immediately tied it.

Jay Bell singled, Lonnie Smith sacrificed, Jeff King was intentionally walked and Young hit a drive over a drawn-in outfield.

HOLYFIELD-STEWART

Ex-champ can't win respect

Ed Schuyler Jr.
Associated Press

ATLANTIC CITY, N.J. — Evander Holyfield won the fight, but may have lost ground in his bid to regain the heavyweight title.

Holyfield easily outpointed Alex Stewart at the Convention Center in a dull bout that didn't end until early Sunday morning.

Holyfield saw his performance as the kind of patient, controlled effort that would enable him to regain the title he lost on points to Riddick Bowe Nov. 13. Many ringers saw it as something else.

"I'm very good at assessing fighters and I'm assessing Holyfield as a shot fighter," said Rock Newman, manager of heavyweight champion Bowe. "I would encourage Evander Holyfield to retire."

Holyfield, of course, disagreed.

"I thought I fought a pretty good fight," said the 30-year-old Holyfield, who wants a rematch with Bowe in November.

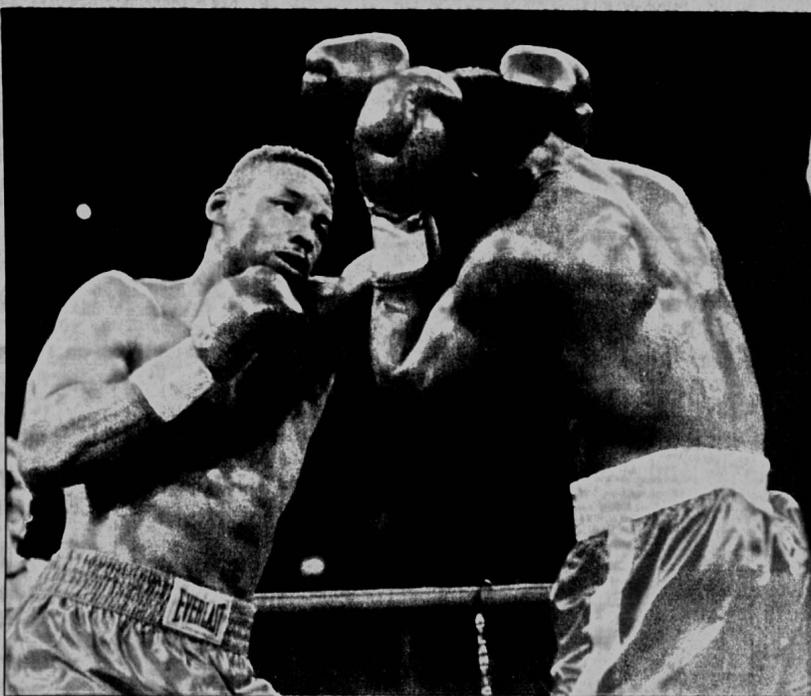

Bowe will fight Nov. 5, Newman said, "but I think it's fairly slim that it will be against Holyfield."

Newman would like Bowe's second defense to be against Tommy Morrison, a decision winner over George Foreman June 7.

There has been talk about Morrison challenging Lennox Lewis for the WBC title in February. However, most fans want to see Bowe, recognized as champion by the IBF and WBA, fight Lewis.

"If we had our preference, we'd fight Lewis next," Newman said.

The two camps, however, have spent more time charging each with ducking one another than they have negotiating seriously.

"I think Evander is entitled to a rematch, because Rock and Riddick Bowe agreed to give him one," promoter Dan Duva said. "All you ask is for people to keep their word."

"Sometimes you make a deal and it doesn't turn out to be the best deal, but you still keep your word."

Bowe watched part of the long pay-per-view card, but left the arena a little more than an hour before Holyfield's fight to watch it on television.

A lot of fans started leaving after the 10th round of the match ended at about 12:45 a.m. Sunday.

"I came out and fought a fight that it will take to win the heavyweight championship of the world again," Holyfield said.

His performance, however, was sluggish. He looked old and tired, sometimes almost disinterested.

Holyfield's winning margin of 10 points on one official scorecard and eight points on the other two cards owed as much to what Stewart didn't do as to what he did.

Stewart had fought courageously with a bad left hand when he was stopped on a cut in the eighth round by Holyfield in an action-packed fight Nov. 4, 1989.

"Today, my offense just wasn't there," said Stewart, who turned 29 Saturday.

Holyfield, who earned at least $2 million, weighed 218 pounds, the heaviest of his career. Stewart, who got $400,000, weighed 228 pounds.

CAMPANELLA DEAD AT 71

'Greatest Dodger of them all' dies

Beth Harris
Associated Press

LOS ANGELES — Roy Campanella, the power-hitting Brooklyn Dodgers catcher whose Hall of Fame career was ended by an automobile accident after the 1957 season, died Saturday night at age 71 of a heart attack.

Campanella joined the Dodgers in 1948, a year after Jackie Robinson broke baseball's color barrier. In 1969, Campanella again followed Robinson, this time as the second black player elected to the Hall of Fame.

During a 10-year major league career with the Dodgers, Campanella was named the National League's Most Valuable Player in 1951, 1953 and 1955. He set major league records for catchers with 41 homers and 142 RBIs in 1953.

Campanella died at his home in suburban Woodland Hills, according to a spokesman for the Los Angeles Dodgers.

"No one had more courage than Roy Campanella," Dodgers owner Peter O'Malley said. "To me, he was the greatest Dodger of them all. My thoughts are with his loving wife Roxie and his family."

While Robinson pioneered the difficult desegregation of baseball, Campanella was no less a popular figure. As a measure of his appeal, the Dodgers and New York Yankees drew an unprecedented 93,103 to the Los Angeles Coliseum for a Campanella benefit game in 1959. Thousands more were turned away from what is still the largest crowd ever for a major league game.

Son of a black mother and father of Italian descent, Campanella was born Nov. 19, 1921, in Philadelphia.

In his early teens, he was considered a child prodigy.

At 15, after a $15-a-week stint with the Bacharach Giants of Brooklyn, he left school to join the Baltimore Elite Giants of the Negro National League. Nine years later, he was still there at $3,000 a season, but playing the rest of each year with Latin league teams.

It wasn't easy work for Campy. In one memorable day with the Baltimore Elites, he played four games — a daytime doubleheader in Cincinnati and a twi-nighter in Middletown, Ohio.

In 1945, a week before the Dodgers made Robinson the first black player signed by a major league team, Brooklyn mogul Branch Rickey asked Campanella to "play for me." The language he used led Campanella to refuse in the belief that Rickey was referring to a Negro club he was rumored to have formed. The club was fictional, invented by Rickey as a cover for scouting black players.

Brooklyn Dodgers catcher Roy Campanella poses with his playing gear and the 1951 National League MVP Award. His career was cut short by an auto accident in 1958. He died of a heart attack Saturday at age 71.

The next season Rickey repeated the offer, in clearer language, and this time Campanella signed a contract with the Dodger organization.

With pitcher Don Newcombe, Campanella was sent to the Dodgers' Class-B New England farm team in Nashua, N.H.; another farm club had rejected non-white players.

Both Newcombe and Campanella became instant stars at Nashua, working for the New England League's maximum salary of less than $200 a month. Local fans, though, gave Campanella chickens when the team won — sometimes as much as 1,300 at a time.

A move to the Dodgers seemed logical, but Rickey had another idea. Eager to crack the color bar in baseball generally, and in the American Association in particular, Rickey destined Campanella for his St. Paul Double-A team. Dodgers manager Leo Durocher objected; he wanted Campanella as his No. 1 catcher in Brooklyn. But Rickey prevailed for the moment, and Campy joined the St. Paul team while it was on the road the next season.

He hit a series of home runs that made him a celebrity in St. Paul even before he got there. In a few months, when he was batting .325, Rickey ordered him to report at once to Ebbets Field.

With mixed feelings — because he was doing so well and his wife had just had another baby in St. Paul, but still elated about joining a major league team — Campanella was in New York the next morning. The same night, in a Dodgers uniform bearing the number 39, Campanella went to bat for the first time with the Dodgers and hit a home run, a double and two singles. He kept No. 39 for 10 seasons in Brooklyn.

The years that followed were a series of triumphs, distinguished by awards, All-Star team memberships and numerous individual National League records.

Shortly before the 1958 season, as Los Angeles was beckoning the Dodgers, tragedy struck in Campy's career and personal life. On a wintry night in January, driving alone to his Long Island home, his car skidded and overturned. He arrived at a hospital, paralyzed by spinal nerve damage. He was a quadriplegic, immobilized from the chest down — and his playing days were over.

In 10 months in the hospital he worked zealously with the therapists and improved considerably. He could move his arms, with limited use of his hands. He later pushed his rehabilitation further.

In his major league career, Campanella played in 1,215 games, scored 627 runs, had 1,161 hits, including 178 doubles, 18 triples and 242 home runs. He drove in 856 runs and had a career batting average of .276. In five World Series appearances with the Dodgers, Campanella hit .237 with four home runs and 12 RBI.

Behind the plate, Campanella caught three no-hitters in 1956 and established many catching World Series records.

MEDICAL

OCCUPATIONAL HEALTH NURSE

Part-Time

Mercy Hospital continues to respond to the needs of its community with effective health care programs, including our program addressing employees of many Iowa City industries. For this part-time position, we seek an RN or LPN with a minimum of a 3 years' clinical experience requiring strong assessment skills, and preferably, one year of experience as an occupational health nurse, or knowledge of occupational health, and/or certification in this nursing specialty.

Responsibilities entail assessing employees' health status and injuries; providing instruction and counseling; conferring with physicians and making referrals; and interfacing with company supervisors and human resources personnel on insurance and government agencies regarding health, safety, and coverage concerns.

Case management experience is desirable. Knowledge of community referral resources would be an asset. Ability to use Lotus and/or WordPerfect software is a plus. You would be working in the day shift primarily, though you may be scheduled to work other shifts occasionally.

We offer a competitive salary and attractive part-time benefits. For consideration, please contact the Human Resources Department at (319) 339-3568.

MERCY HOSPITAL
500 East Market Street
Iowa City, Iowa 52245

If you would like a copy of classification description listing qualifications, job duties and salary range please send a stamped self-addressed envelope indicating name of position.

Four ex-Hawkeyes join field Hockey Cup team

The United States Field Hockey Association has announced that former Iowa field hockey players Kris Fillat, Liz Tchou, Andrea Wieland and Marcia Pankratz will participate in the fourth Women's Intercontinental Cup, July 14-25 at Villanova University in Philadelphia, Pa.

The four Hawkeyes are among 20 women chosen to participate on the 1993 U.S. Field Hockey National team. Twelve international teams will compete for the five spots that advance to the World Cup in Dublin, Ireland, in 1994.

Fillat, who completed her senior season with Iowa last fall, was a two-time national all-American and three-time regional all-American. She is eighth on the school all-time scoring list.

Wieland was a two-time regional and national all-American who finished her eligibility with the Hawkeyes last season. She holds the school record for saves in a game with 25.

Tchou is the only Iowa field hockey player to have her jersey retired. A member of the 1986 national championship team, Tchou was a national all-American and a three-time regional all-American and ranks fifth on Iowa's all-time scoring chart.

Pankratz ranks third on Iowa's all-time scoring list with 76 career goals and was named the 1985 Big Ten Conference Most Valuable Player.

Colbert wins Senior Players Championship

DEARBORN, Mich. (AP) — Jim Colbert didn't make a mistake until the final hole Sunday. By then, it didn't matter. Colbert had an insurmountable lead and won the Senior Players Championship by one stroke over Ray Floyd, who had already finished.

Colbert shot a 69 in the final round to finish at 10-under 278 and collect the $180,000 winner's prize. It was the seventh Senior victory — but the first major — for Colbert, who won the Royal Caribbean in February.

Floyd shot a 68 to finish at 279. Al Geiberger was another shot back at 280 after a closing 66.

Hamlin fights back to take ShopRite Classic

SOMERS POINT, N.J. (AP) — Shelley Hamlin birdied the 15th and 17th holes after losing a three-stroke lead Sunday and won the $450,000 ShopRite LPGA Classic by two strokes in a record performance.

The victory was the third for the 44-year-old golfer and her second since breast cancer surgery two years ago. Her 9-under-par total for 54 holes broke the mark of 7-under set by Juli Inkster in 1988.

Hamlin won the $67,500 top prize by shooting a 1-under 70 and withstanding a challenge that at one point saw eight players grouped within two shots of the lead.

Beth Daniel, Amy Benz and Martha Faulconer were all one stroke back, with defending champion Anne-Marie Pall, Judy Dickinson and Brandie Burton two off the lead.

Golf Channel on the way

BIRMINGHAM, Ala. (AP) — Joseph Gibbs doesn't mind being the butt of jokes. In fact, he expects to get the last laugh when The Golf Channel goes on the air in May 1994.

"There are 25 million golfers in America," said Gibbs, president of the new cable network. "They enjoy watching competitive golf. They enjoy watching good shot-making. They want to see good golf from anywhere in the world."

Since most golfers are middle or upper-middle class, Gibbs doesn't expect the cost of the service to be a problem.

"We'll be charging $5 or $6 a month," said Gibbs, part owner of a local cable company and cellular telephone firm. "That's a couple of balls to a golfer."

Arnold Palmer has agreed to become chairman of the channel.

The Golf Channel will feature two live golf tournaments a week, Gibbs said. One will come from overseas while the other will be an American event from either the PGA, LPGA or Nike tours.

Viewers can also expect instructional programs, talk shows, travel guides featuring golf packages all over the world, a "home shopping club" for golfing merchandise and footage of old tournaments.

Kingsbury, Millard lead Fitzpatrick's

Curtis Riggs
The Daily Iowan
Incoming freshman basketball recruit Chris Kingsbury says that he was most interested in becoming a Hawkeye because they appeared to be the ones most interested in him.

"They recruited me the longest and I really liked (assistant) coach (Gary) Close," said Kingsbury, a 6-foot-5, 220-pound swingman.

The toughest decision that Iowa coaches may have to make next season concerning Kingsbury is where to play him. He showed that he is capable of playing both guard and forward in helping to lead Fitzpatrick's over First National Bank, 117-103, Sunday in Prime Time League action.

Kingsbury scored 21 points, hauled down eight rebounds and got nine assists as he moved well around the basket, while taking his game outside to knock down three 3-pointers in the second half.

Russ Millard scored 29 for Fitz's, as he was once again Mr. Inside/Mr. Outside for the Brew Pub squad. Kevin Skillett scored 28 for F.N.B.

Kingsbury, who hails from Hamilton, Ohio, says that 3-point shooting is one of the favorite aspects of his game.

"I've always shot a lot of 3s and I'll hit them better when I'm in shape," he said.

Kingsbury said that he is also looking forward to playing for Tom Davis because he likes Iowa's style of play.

"I should have a good chance to play," he said. "Coach Davis always plays a lot of guys."

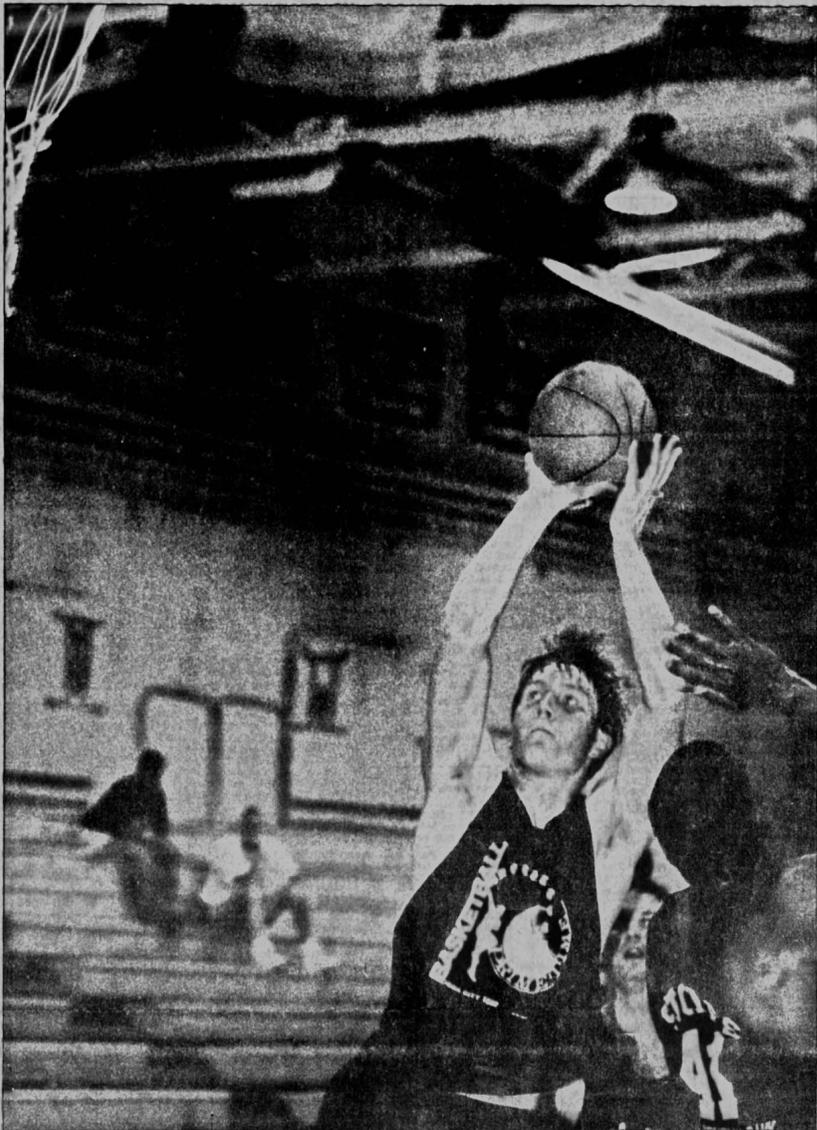

In other Prime Time action U of I Credit Union, led by Jim Bartles' 22 points downed Nike, 109-83. John Sykas scored 20 to lead Nike.

Kingsbury, who is living with Millard this summer, says that he likes the fervor that surrounds Iowa basketball.

"It's great to see how they love Iowa sports," he said. "I really like the atmosphere here. It should be a lot of fun."

There are other advantages to playing Prime Time besides having fun and sharpening his skills, according to Kingsbury.

"This is a good league and it gives me a chance to see other Iowa players," he said.

Fitzpatrick's swingman Chris Kingsbury shoots over former Iowa great Greg Stokes in his team's 117-103 win over First National Bank Sunday. The incoming Iowa freshman scored 21 in his second Prime Time game.

NATIONAL LEAGUE

Young breaks futility mark

Associated Press
NEW YORK — Anthony Young didn't think about losing when he got out of bed Sunday morning. He thought about pitching against St. Louis.

But by the end of the day, the subject was losing again. Young dropped his 24th straight decision, 5-3 to the Cardinals, and broke Cliff Curtis' 82-year-old major league record established with Boston of the National League.

"I tell him the sun will keep coming up," manager Dallas Green said. "It rained early today, but the sun broke through."

For Anthony Young, though, it continues to pour losses.

"It's not logical," Green said. "I can't explain it."

He pitched OK against the Cardinals, allowing five runs and eight hits in seven innings.

"I feel like I pitched a good game," Young said. "They had a couple of bloop hits to score some runs."

Despite the streak, Young is a proud pitcher who has talked to reporters after each game, even cracking some jokes.

"I always think this will be the day," Young said. "Now that I have the record I hope you (reporters) will all leave me alone."

But still someone asked, isn't this getting embarrassing for a major league pitcher?

"I wouldn't think about it that much if I won," said Young, who had 15 saves last season. "When I leave the park I won't think about it. Why keep thinking about it?"

After his latest loss, the "Anthony Young history-making program" was being hawked on the ramps leading out of Shea Stadium.

"I feel sorry for Young," Cardinals reliever Lee Smith said. "I'd tell him to hang in there. I know what he's going through. I was with the Cubs."

Astros 3, Braves 0
ATLANTA — Darryl Kile came within one out of his first major league shutout, extending his winning streak to six games.

Kile (8-1) gave up five hits, struck out eight and walked four in

Morris loses no-hitter, but Jays keep rolling

Mets pitcher Anthony Young reacts to Brian Jordan scoring on Tom Pagano's single in the sixth inning of the Cardinals' 5-3 win Sunday.

8½ innings before Xavier Hernandez got the final out, gaining his third save in six chances.

Greg Maddux (7-6) gave up all three runs — just one earned — and six hits in seven innings, struck out two and walked three.

Pirates 4, Phillies 3
PITTSBURGH — Pinch-hitter Don Slaught homered and Kevin

Associated Press
MILWAUKEE — Jack Morris lost his no-hitter Sunday, but Joe Carter made sure the surging Toronto Blue Jays didn't lose a game.

Carter hit a two-run homer to give the Blue Jays a 5-0 lead in the seventh, then made a leaping catch to rob Kevin Reimer of an extra base hit in the eighth as the first-place Blue Jays held to beat the Milwaukee Brewers 5-4.

"I don't know if it was over the wall. It was high," said Carter of his catch. "It took a big jar out of me."

Morris held the Brewers hitless for six innings before Milwaukee rallied for two runs in both the seventh and eighth innings.

Morris (5-7) lost his no-hitter in the seventh when B.J. Surhoff dumped a short fly into right for a hit. Three more singles — one in the infield and two more bloop — made it 5-1.

Toronto sent right-hander Bill Wegman (4-13) to his sixth straight loss. Wegman, who gave up seven hits and three runs, was forced to leave after five innings with tightness in his elbow and forearm.

Red Sox 8, Tigers 2
BOSTON — The Detroit Tigers kept sinking, losing their sixth straight game while the Boston Red Sox won their sixth in a row behind John Doherty's third victory in his last three starts.

Andre Dawson's two-run homer in the third inning and Bob Melvin's run-scoring single in the fourth gave the Red Sox a 3-0 lead against Bill Gullikson (4-4). They drove him from the game in a five-run sixth in which Mike Greenwell greeted reliever Kurt Knudsen with a three-run homer.

Doherty (6-5) allowed seven hits in 6½ innings.

Twins 2, Angels 0
MINNEAPOLIS — Jim Deshaies and Rick Aguilera combined on a four-hit shutout and Scott Sanderson lost his sixth straight start.

In winning for the fourth time in his last five decisions and improving to 7-0 at the Metrodome, Deshaies (9-5) allowed only singles to Rene Gonzales, Chad Curtis, Stan Javier and Torey Lovullo in his eight innings of work.

Sanderson (7-8) was 7-2 with a 2.82 ERA in April and May before going 0-6 and 6.06 in June.

Yankees 9, Orioles 5
BALTIMORE — New York hit four homers, three off rookie left-hander John O'Donoghue (0-1), to end Baltimore's six-game winning streak.

Jim Leyritz, Mike Stanley, Bernie Williams and Danny Tartabull homered for the Yankees.

Melido Perez (5-6) got the win and Steve Howe earned his second save.

White Sox 6, Mariners 4
CHICAGO — Frank Thomas' two-run homer and a pair of run-scoring singles by Lance Johnson led first-place Chicago to its sixth victory in its last seven games.

Fernandez (8-4), who equalled his 1992 win total, gave up eight hits, walked one and struck out six in 7½ innings. Roberto Hernandez pitched the ninth for his 14th save.

The White Sox scored three runs with two out in the first inning off Rich DeLucia (2-5), who was making his first start since July 18.

Rangers 4, Athletics 0
ARLINGTON, Texas — Kevin Brown pitched a five-hitter to snap his three-game losing streak as Texas beat former Ranger Bobby Witt.

Brown (6-6), struck out five and walked one to win for the first time since June 4. He did not allow a baserunner past second until the ninth inning in pitching his second shutout and seventh complete game of the season.

Witt, making his first Arlington Stadium appearance since he was traded to Oakland last August, yielded three solo homers and nine hits over 6½ innings to fall to 7-5.
