Flood of the century

Raging waters result in destruction, gridlock

Facing wet forecast, area residents cope

Joe Yates

Residences and businesses along the winding Iowa River and adjacent Clear Creek are preparing for the worst following a day of record-setting rainfall and flood waters. In Clear Creek, where a crested levee is situated, flood waters were 2 feet over the levee as of late Monday night, forcing residents near the river to evacuate. As of Tuesday morning, more than 500 homes have been evacuated.

"It's a disaster," said Clear Creek resident Mark Johnson. "We've never seen anything like this before. The water is coming in fast and furious."

In Coralville, where the levee is also crested, flood waters were 1 foot over the levee, causing damage to several homes and businesses.

"We've got a lot of work to do," said Coralville Mayor John Valvo. "But we're doing our best to keep everyone safe."

Save for a few brave souls who ventured into the flood waters, most residents have been advised to evacuate their homes. In Coralville, authorities evacuated the Coralville Dam and Hancher Auditorium, due to high water levels.

"We had to evacuate because the water was getting too high," said Coralville resident John Miller. "We just couldn't take any more risk."

As of Tuesday morning, authorities in both Coralville and Clear Creek are still assessing the damage caused by the flood. In Coralville, authorities estimate that 500 homes may be damaged or destroyed.

"We're still trying to figure out the extent of the damage," said Coralville City Manager Tom Hoag. "We have a lot of work to do."

Lenders are back up into the water Monday afternoon at the 250-acre farm next to the northbound highway. Rick Auson wandered about trying to figure out how much water was left in his fields and what he could do to get some of his crops harvested.

"I'm tired of being hungry, " Auson said. "I've seen a lot of those plans, and Agriculture Secretary Mike Jon Yates."

At noon Clear Creek flooded the section of Interstate 80 between Coralville and Iowa City, causing a full closure of the roadway, and closing the expressway for two days' delay in clearing the stormwater that was vinous over Iowa City, authorities said.

"What we're seeing here today is the worst flooding I've ever seen," said Mike Jackson, maintenance directory for the Iowa Department of Transportation. "It's a real difference in real-time evacuation." He explained, "To be able to get the Iowa City neighbors into the area, you have to make sure they're out of the area."

Iowa City Council hears open-space plan

The Daily Iowan

At noon the Iowa City Council heard a second-hand-use public hearing on the Neighborhood Open Space Plan. The plan involves converting 3.7 acres of open space for public access in the Iowa City area.

The basics of the plan, as presented by Neighborhood Open Space Committee member Alice Jackson, is about converting 3.7 acres of open space for public access in the Iowa City area. Jackson said the plan would be presented to the council on Monday, April 3.

"The need to use our open space at those areas, because we want the plan to come to the council on Monday, April 3," Jackson said. "We want to present the plan to the council on Monday, April 3, and the council will vote on it on April 3.

"We take mail delivery very seriously." — Colorado delivery supervisor for the Iowa City / Coralville Post Office

An idea whose time has passed

A Cold War diagram (gracious "Serious Paper" facilities) was pushed a step closer to extinction recently, as the House of Representatives eliminated the last vestiges of Post Office Service. The $20 million saved is a meaningful spock in the corpse of the deficit. But the symbolism of the House vote is long overdue. Anyone remember why Jimmy Carter started it, back when the Soviets invaded Afghanistan? Despite its trivial importance — even proponents admit Social Security records are a better way to track potential draftsthe — Selective Service is a high-profile program, thanks to these constant, annoying public-service announcements and the box at the front of every personal check.

Selective Service is one of the worst examples of selective politics, a program that has had to raise money by organizing nationwide lotteries to register, virtually no one bothered to fill out all changes of address forms, and we were pretty scared those registration cards went to get unused. Now, the question of conscription is only one among many that seem to be passed away all the best that was possible. That prompts more questions. Now that registration is restored, why not back those conscientious recruting ads, which one knows how much more useful the military would be — the image of the degenerate synder in Washington — faster? If saving $20 million on Social Security checks is a more important reason to keep the question, why still we have a military geared in instead of weaponry for a War of Women's Rights? But at least registration is a serious candidate for extinction. It's a little early to start any registration to the post wars, before the Senate even voted to vote. Then Hernking says he, he was to vote against the idea. If Carter took his stand over, maybe just to have a financial aid for them. It's point, its easily and its time gone.

Power plays in religious politics

BLY M. TELFORD

As if laying their hands wasn't enough, church leaders in a number of states are without a doubt the least welcome news of the week. This week's headline was the resignation of the Rev. W. W. John, a Roman Catholic priest in Pennsylvania. John's resignation, which came after a letter was sent to him by the Vatican, stated: "I understand that your acts and omissions are not in keeping with the Church's teachings on the sanctity of marriage and the faithful observance of the requirements of the Church's laws." The letter also stated: "Your continued acts and omissions are a threat to the spiritual well-being of the Church and the faithful of your diocese."

John's resignation is the latest in a series of resignations by Catholic priests in response to the Church's stance on same-sex marriage. The Church has been heavily criticized for its stance on same-sex marriage, with many priests and religious leaders expressing their disagreement with the Church's position.

The resignation of John highlights the ongoing battle between the Church and its priests over issues related to same-sex marriage. Many priests have expressed their support for same-sex marriage, while the Church has taken a strong stance against it. The resignation of John is a clear indication of the Church's unwillingness to support priests who disagree with its stance on same-sex marriage.

Despite the Church's stance, many priests and religious leaders have continued to support same-sex marriage. The resignation of John is a reminder of the ongoing battle between the Church and its priests over issues related to same-sex marriage.

NEW YORK — Drew Bledsoe, whose football career extended almost 21 years, said he was ready to end it. Bledsoe, who recently retired from the New England Patriots, said in an interview with The Associated Press that he is ready to move on from football and begin his next chapter. "I think it's time for me to step back and let the next generation take over," Bledsoe said. "I've been through a lot and I've had my share of ups and downs. But I've also had some great moments and I'm grateful for everything."

Nike Hawkeye Open in full swing

Course should hold up for tournament

Carla McGee Associated Press

Robinson gives Earl some friendly advice

J. White Associated Press

Robinson gives some sound advice to former Iowa player Earl Robinson as they watch the second round of the Nike Hawkeye Open yesterday. Robinson, who won the 1980 NCAA Men’s Golf Championship, is not in the field this year but is back in Iowa to watch.
