Zen and the art of umpiring softball

Linda Hanstein

THE DAILY IOWAN

Umpiring is a fine art, one that not everyone approaches with equal finesse. But for Paul Leick, it’s a skill he’s honed over the years. Leick, a software engineer, has been umpiring softball for about 10 years. He’s not just a hobby; it’s a passion.

"I love umpiring," he said. "It’s a great way to stay physically active while being involved in the community.

"The game is fast-paced and requires quick thinking. It’s a great stress reliever, too."

Leick started umpiring as a way to stay active and keep his mind sharp. "I’ve been playing softball since I was a kid, and when I started working, I realized I needed a way to stay active and connect with people," he said.

"I enjoy the challenge of umpiring. It’s a game of judgment, to decide whether a ball is in or out, safe or out. You have to make split-second decisions, and you have to be able to explain your calls to the players and coaches."

"It’s a great way to stay involved in the community, and it’s a great way to give back to the sport I love."

Leick is one of many who have taken up the art of umpiring. There are about 70 umpires in the Coralville, Iowa, area. Some are experienced in the game, while others are new to it. But all share a passion for the sport.

"It’s a great way to stay active and give back to the sport," Leick said.

"I enjoy umpiring and I enjoy the game, and I want to give others the opportunity to enjoy it as well."
Pigott canvasses across Iowa takes door-to-door local politics, she said, "I think you can affect change that way."

Pigott passed out her street, taking a careful approach. She followed drops and tracked any responses.

"We're going to keep going," Pigott said, "I think we can get people talking and we can influence people."

Pigott stressed the importance of local politics, saying, "We need to be active in our communities and make sure our voices are heard."

Practical legislation needed to combat violence against women

Guest Opinion

Efforts to fight sexual violence in Iowa have been slow to appear in the history of feminist struggle. Indeed, attacks on today’s women are so widespread that it seems almost impervious to change. Yet there are those who fight, against all odds.

Rape victims are often stigmatized and their testimonies disbelieved. Many believe that feminists are overly confrontational and need to tone down their rhetoric. But the reality is that many people believe that women are lying, and this belief is not based on evidence. Men are also often blamed for the violence.

Legislation has an important role to play in addressing these issues. It can provide a framework for change, and it can help to secure justice for victims of violence.

For example, we need laws that make it clear that sexual violence is a crime, and that perpetrators will be held accountable. We also need laws that make it easier for victims to come forward and report their experiences. And we need laws that ensure that justice is done, regardless of whether the perpetrator is found guilty or not.

Legislation can also help to address the underlying social and cultural factors that contribute to sexual violence. For example, laws that promote gender equality can help to reduce the prevalence of violence against women.

The heart of the bill, however, is its civil rights provisions, which ensure that victims of sexual violence are provided with the same legal protections as other victims of discrimination. The bill would also create a new federal civil rights law that would make it illegal for employers to discriminate against women who have been victims of sexual violence.

The legislation would also establish a new federal agency to enforce the law, and to provide resources and support to victims of sexual violence. This agency would ensure that women have access to the resources they need to recover from the trauma of sexual violence.

We believe that this legislation is needed, and we urge all members of Congress to support it. It is time for us to stand together as a nation and ensure that our laws protect all women, regardless of their gender.

The Daily Iowan - Iowa City, Iowa, Tuesday, July 6, 1993 — 3
Hurricane Calvin takes tragic toll on Medny's hundreds of people and six fighting neck and head wounds. A 32-year-old man was evacuated to a hospital in Lansing, Mich.

Calmus, which is located near the town of Elk, was hit by a tornado on Wednesday night. At least 14 people were injured and two homes were damaged.

It's a relief for many people who were concerned about the impact of the storm. The National Weather Service has issued a severe thunderstorm warning for several counties, including Calhoun and Hillsdale.

In addition to the tornado, there were reports of heavy winds and flooding in the area. It's a reminder of the importance of staying prepared and following weather forecasts during these times.

The weather service is urging people to stay away from flooded areas and avoid driving through standing water. It's also recommended to check on neighbors and family members who may be affected by the storm.

The situation is still unfolding, and we will continue to monitor it closely. For more updates, please follow our local news channel on social media.

Supervisors declare county ‘disaster area’

Mary Hickley
The Daily Iowan

Failing in late with a deletion of the governor, the Johnson County Board of Supervisors voted Thursday to declare Johnson County a disaster area.

The motion passed unanimously, and it is expected that hopefully the news would help victims secure grants from the state.

In other business, the board voted to support the Iowa HeartRide at the Unitarian Church and City Hall on Saturday, Sept. 27.

The Iowa HeartRide is a fundraising event that benefits the American Heart Association.

"Firm" plagued by limp performances

Daily Iowan

December 1, 1993

By: June Sandlin

THEATER

"Firm" takes the stage at Hancher for three performances this weekend.

"Firm" is a new play written by Chicago-based playwright Seth Greenberg. The play is about two middle-aged women who are both going through mid-life crises. One of the women is a spinster who is trying to make ends meet by running a fashion magazine. The other is a married woman who is trying to balance her family and career.

The play is set in a small town in the Midwest and follows the lives of the two women as they go about their daily routines. The play is performed on a simple stage with minimal sets and costumes.

Critique

While the play has some interesting themes, the acting and direction leave something to be desired. The actors seem to be struggling to bring their characters to life, and the pace of the play is slow. The play could benefit from a more dynamic director who could bring out the natural talents of the actors.

The setting of the play is also a bit too generic, and it fails to capture the unique character of the small town in which the story is set.

Overall, "Firm" is a disappointing play that fails to engage the audience. It is recommended for those who are interested in exploring the themes of mid-life crises and the challenges of balancing family and career. However, it is not a must-see play and is best left to those who have a strong interest in the subject matter.

cast in a lake larger than Central Park, the largest amount of water released by the dam since it was completed in 1964. The dam's total outflow capacity is 20,000 cfs.

DAM

"They build the dam in bowls," Castle explained, "with one half of it sitting in the lake, and there is water in the river through that half and starting on the other. Finally, when you get right down to it, the dam is pretty small." Castle continued that other dams, at 15,000 feet wide and 100 feet high, are considered to have some of the largest man-made structures in the area.

And one of the most important. "Without the dam, you wouldn't have these houses along the river with the water here they are in 36 hours," Castle said. "We know the water will be coming into the lakes at around 100 cubic feet per second, we were only letting out water at 50,000 cfs. Without the dam, there would have been 400 cubic feet per second of water downtown..."

And, as much as downtown continues to excel the dam's usefulness, Castle has suggested that it has been increasingly apparent that much of the community's future is being in jeopardy to hold water daily.
