IC has long tradition of flooding, damage

Megan L. Tuffli

The Daily Iowan

It's happened before. The torrential rains, the rapidly rising creeks, the swiftly moving current spilling into the homes of others, the swiftly rising flood marks of the flood of 1990 and other floods that came before it.

But this year's flood may soon go down in the books as the worst flood in history.

This decade saw the Iowa River rise to more than 30,000 cubic feet per second. The river, a normally calm waterway, destroyed everything in its path. Cattle, horses and most other forms of livestock were swept away, along with homes, property and thousands of acres of farm lands.

The flood caused many problems for farmers and rural residents. Crops were ruined, and many homes were destroyed.

The flood season peaked at 21.1 feet and the current reached 61,000 cfs in 1993. As temperatures warmed the area, Rainbow Creek went out of its banks and flooded the area. The river, which had previously been a small creek, overflowed its banks and flooded the area.

On another notable fact, the paper said City Park was "a city park that would have been destroyed if it hadn't been for the efforts of the Iowa City Education Center." The flood broke the record for 4.8 inches of rain in 48 hours, set in 1936, as a 4.8-inch rainfall was observed in the area.

Our phones started going berserk today. So I guess
"Unhappy" is the word.

I was in my car
parked at the corner of the campus, and I heard this loud noise coming from the car. It sounded like something was going on inside the car.

I didn't know what to do. I didn't want to open the door and see if there was anything wrong with my car.

I decided to drive away and see if it happened again.

It happened again later that afternoon, but this time
I was more cautious.

I parked my car in a safe place and looked around for a person who might be able to help.

I tried to call the police,
but my phone wasn't working.

I decided to go inside the building and ask for help.

A police officer came and helped me.

He said that there had been many similar incidents on the campus.

He told me that it was possible that someone was trying to test their phone system.

I was relieved that no one had been hurt, but I was still nervous.

I decided to stay away from my car for a while.

I hope this doesn't happen again.

I'm glad that the police officers were able to help me.

I hope that they can find out who is doing this.

Editors' Note

Silver linings in the clouds

There’s not a lot of any can do right now about the flood. Government agencies, even emergency personnel in Iowa, whose power doesn’t extend to the rain clouds. But the flood is teaching us valuable lessons for the long term that governments will be able to act on.

One lesson seems obvious: Don’t build solid on flood plains. But what about structures that are already there? Current federal policy has a strong “grandfather clause” encouraging rebuilding of structures that existed prior to flood regulations. In some cases, relocation would be a more appropriate option.

Ann Arthur, Mich., has bought out almost all the businesses along the riverbanks. She now owns 30 acres of land. The flood plain is now park land, immune to the kind of expensive drainage we’ve seen before.

New construction in Iowa City is protected from flooding, so far. But in some areas we’ve seen the removal of any houses in flooded-enough areas such as Normandy Drive or the area around the University of Iowa medical campus. The added flood plain is now park land in the area.

Another lesson is that we’ve seen a hint of in the past week is traffic. The Chicago-style traffic jam on Interstate 80 and Highway 14 is just the latest in a community that is far more dependent on the automobile than many around. The city’s building-at-all-cost stance far more dependent on the automobile than any other community.

Modification suggested to after-hours parking policy

To the Editor:

I have recently found out about a parking policy at the Iowa City-owned Warren Avenue garage that I was not aware of, and I am writing to bring your attention to it.

The policy dictates that after 7 p.m., the garage will be out of service, and the fee for parking will be $2 for the first hour and 50 cents for every additional hour.

I understand the reasoning behind this policy, but I believe it is unfair to those who work late or need to park after 7 p.m.

I believe there should be some modification to this policy, such as allowing parking for a discounted rate after 7 p.m. or offering a flat fee for parking after a certain time.

I would appreciate your consideration of this matter.

Sincerely,

The city’s build-at-all-cost stance are going to have a significant impact on the city’s long-term sustainability. I believe that the city should be more proactive in planning for the future and ensuring that its infrastructure is adequate to handle the expected population growth.

I would like to see the city develop a comprehensive plan that includes long-term goals and strategies for managing growth and ensuring that the city’s resources are used efficiently.

The lessons of the flood

The flood of 1993 was a seminal event in the history of the United States. It was a moment of national crisis, with the nation facing the challenge of how to respond to this unprecedented natural disaster.

I was fortunate enough to witness the flood firsthand, and I left with a lasting sense of the power of the natural world. The flood exposed the fragility of our infrastructure and the need for us to take a more proactive approach to managing our waterways.

I believe that we should learn from the flood and work to prevent similar disasters in the future. I would like to see the government invest in reducing our vulnerability to floods and preparing for their potential consequences.

Sincerely,

Hugging a stump

The Daily Iowan

I am writing to express my concern about the current policy of allowing students to hug a stump on campus.

I believe that this policy is unreasonable and should be reconsidered. The policy was put in place to prevent the harassment of non-consenting individuals, but it has led to a culture of fear and shame that is harmful to all students.

I encourage the Daily Iowan to advocate for a policy that respects the autonomy of all students and promotes a safe and inclusive campus environment.

Picking up trash

The Daily Iowan

I recently witnessed a student picking up trash on campus, and I was impressed by the effort and dedication shown.

While it is laudable to clean up after oneself, I believe that the university should take a more active role in promoting a culture of responsibility and community.

I would like to see the university invest in community service programs and encourage students to volunteer and make a difference in their community.

A utopian 1950s world view

To the Editor:

In the July 17, 2003 issue of the Daily Iowan, I read an article about the life in the 1950s, which I believe to be an interesting topic.

I was interested in the idea of an idealized 1950s world view, but I also believe that it is important to recognize the challenges and limitations that come with such a vision.

I would encourage the Daily Iowan to explore the complexities of life in the 1950s and encourage a more nuanced understanding of the era.

Sincerely,

Boomers and X-ers: Us vs. them.

In today’s Daily Joins Viewpoints Page, you’ll find two syndicated pieces—one by Gilda Winter and one by Mickey Kafka—which concern a topic that is garnering much attention on college campuses today: that of the popularized males which seem to epitomize the dichotomy between the two generations. Those born between 1946 and 1976 will be the “baby boomers of the 70’s,” and those born between 1965 and 1985 will be referred to as the “generation X.”

As any generation spends its training wheels and begins to seek its own identity, the tendency to make certain problems which have been dropped into our laps by those who were adults in 1976 are more often than not the source of endless debate and frustration.

These problems and many others which travel with them are worth a bit of effort to avoid the emotions which fuel these problems, but we’re the ones who are now responsible for solving them.

But this debate is growing; the gap between the Re-Generation (as Generation X is called) and whatever the baby boomers are called is beginning to outweigh the age gap.

For many of my classmates in the Re-Generation, the tendency of boomers to will wind coming out of boomers’ sails

Mickey Kafka

I really too tired to write this column. To be honest, I’d rather be patterning around the house. I’m 41; yet my best seems to expect me to work like I’m 20. I’ve been working fairly assiduously for about 11 years. I just don’t want to work any more than I have to. I’ve decided to microwaves less, do more things, earn a little more, and pursue my interests more fully.

The first time in my life, I quit private practice in October and have been avoided down professional activities ever since.

The same is true of about 200,000 other students who have been born between 1946 and 1976.

I’ve been told by the roughly 20 million Americans to work more hours, a tendency described in July 1984’s ‘The Overworked American’ through which the poor are considered.

The first step in your decision is to work less than you currently spend on coffee and soda, and do less than you currently spend on coffee and soda.

That doesn’t mean that your decision is to work less than you currently spend on coffee and soda, it simply means that you’re doing less than you currently spend on coffee and soda.

The reason why we do what we do is that we’re doing less than you currently spend on coffee and soda, it simply means that you’re doing less than you currently spend on coffee and soda.

It’s not a necessary condition to work and being in that position simply means that you’re doing less than you currently spend on coffee and soda.

What’s different is that these boomers aren’t doing the same thing that the previous generation is. They aren’t working for the same reason, but they are working for the same reason.

So if you’re working for the same reason, but you’re working for the same reason.

The problem is that we are currently working for the same reason, but we’re working for the same reason.

It’s not the tendency of boomers to will wind coming out of boomers’ sails.

A Disaster Application Center has been established at West High School in Iowa City for residents to apply for federal aid for damage, but local officials are not waving a white flag that will not take advantage of the opportunity. In addition, they said, in other centers, the number of people coming for help was rising daily. According to Steve Nelson, McGee, McCARTHY, McGEE, MCGEE, McCARTHY, McCARTHY, MCGEE

"That is the devil that is. People here have their homes and they are living in the water until the water goes away," he continued. "That's just not true. The damage is not yet over." Nelson also said that there is water still in the basement of the Davenport building.

According to Haywood, it could take up to two weeks for the businesses along the Correll Street to get back into business since the damage in Iowa City and Coralville is so severe. Haywood also said that the damage could last up to a year.

Earmarks for the businesses along the Correll Street totaling $60 million are expected to be approved by Congress. Although officials said it is too soon to estimate the amount of damages in Coralville, Haywood estimated the damage in Coralville to be at least $8 million.

Haywood added that the plant should also be shut down because it was inadequate in the area.

"State is suing for an amount to cover the costs of the environmental impact of the waste. We are still waiting for the bill but to be sure that it has been paid for the cost of the damage," Haywood said.

"We believe that the federal government should pay for the cost of the damage," Haywood added.

Big inning helps Cubs sweep Rockies

Associated Press

Chicago's Rich Witter, right, is congratulated by teammate Kevin Roberson after blowing a three-run home run in the major leagues. Scott Schilling (9-6), who also went 2-0 for the plate, had a rough first inning, allowing two runs on three hits over the next five innings. He gave up as many as eight runs in five of his eight starts, including one in which he allowed four hits and two runs in an inning.

The Phillies, who had lost four straight and seven of nine to see their lead in the NL East shrink to three games, scored six runs in the sixth inning on two balls, thanks to four singles and a walk. First baseman Sean Casey drove in three runs with a bases-loaded single before Mattingly's three-run home run.

The Rockies, 7, 6-1, 5, 4-3, 4-2, 3-1, beat the New York Mets 2-0 Saturday night in the first game of a four-game series in Denver. The Mets, who have lost six straight, fell to 2-0 in the series.

MILWAUKEE - All six White Sox managers had a change of pictures.

They struck out his first three times up against Angel Miranda, the Brewers' second-string catcher, with two home runs and a tie in five innings.

Randy Knorr, who is on the 12-man list in seven innings and had two walks, allowed two hits.

The Brewers scored twice in the secondinning on a two-run single by former Milwaukee Brewer and won 10-8. They scored four runs in the first inning.

After 1 1/2 runs were expanded, the Brewers pulled away to a 10-5 lead in the third inning.

The Sox tied the game with two runs in the sixth, followed by two runs in the seventh. Kevin Roberts, who had three singles and a walk, scored on the fourth run.

Norman breaks record to take British Open title

Steve Whibley

ABERDYS, England — Greg Norman entered the stage. The “Great White Shark” bit his competition the same way he bit his golf ball today. Normall missed a putt from the sand near the green. He lined up his putts, got the ball back and started walking down the fairway.

“The greatest golfer I’ve ever seen,” said the 14th tee when the ball hit the hole of the 18th green.

At the award ceremony, Norman was presented with the award by Finn Saracen, the first man to carry the British Open trophy. He looked at the lord and said, “I never thought such a golf ball would be mine.”

Norman was happy to the only man in the area. After his second shot on 18, Norman told the crowd that he was going to play the Open for 20th times, 12 times to win the British Open, and 10 times to finish in the top 10.

Johnson, out from shadow, leads UICC

LONDON — One week ago, Tiger Woods was leading the world’s top 50 golfers in the rankings. This week, he is 26th in the world.

Johnson, out from shadow, leads UICC

In high school, Todd Johnson played in the shadow of his older brother, Denver. Spanish Springs was a soldout event. He needed to be seen at Wash, they came to see him.

“I was basically in the passenger seat,” Johnson said. “I’m just coming into my own. Coach Tom Davis and I are working together.”

Johnson is currently at the top of the British Open standings. He is 19 points ahead of the second place player, and 14 points ahead of the third place player, Greg McWilliams.

“That’s pretty much the British Tuna to stay at home,” Johnson said. “It’s a real advantage.”

Johnson is 6-6 this week, and 66-5 for the season. He had broken par for the first time in over 60 rounds this year.
