Summer grads upset by commencement cancellation

Thomas Wanat
The Daily Iowan

The cancellation of UI summer graduation ceremonies is going down about as well as the flood water itself for some of the 1,048 degree candidates affected.

"We've had a lot of phone calls from people who are real disappointed or would like us to reconsider," UI Vice President for University Relations Ann Rhodes said. "We still think that canceling summer graduation was the most responsible course of action given the circumstances."

Rhodes said she has been inundated with calls asking if they have considered all the options. Hancher Auditorium, where the Aug. 6 ceremonies were scheduled to be held, is considered unsafe due to high flood waters and because it is currently without air conditioning and ventilation.

Carver-Hawkeye Arena, local high-school auditoriums, and nearby private colleges were all considered inadequate, Rhodes said, because of size, comfort, or convenience.

Safety, lodging and road access were just some of the factors they had to keep in mind, she said.

"Some people have even asked me if we would consider limiting the number of people who could attend," Rhodes said. "But that kind of defeats the purpose of having it then."

The news of the cancellation has been hard on some UI students.

"I was so disappointed that tears came to my eyes when I saw it in the paper the other day," said Richelle Smith, a graduating senior in liberal arts. "After going here for four years it's just so anticlimactic to just move away and get a diploma in the mail."

Smith said she would continue to send out announcements and added that she would attend the December ceremony.

"That will be okay, but it's really so much after the fact that it won't be quite the same," she said.

A local woman is suing Johnson County for negligence in the upkeep of the First Avenue extension.

According to plaintiff Sylvia Robinson, the road was in such condition that it caused her daughter, Christine Davies, to leave the traveled portion of the roadway and roll her vehicle, an accident which caused Davies' death on July 20, 1991.

Robinson is suing the county for the loss of services, companionship and society of her daughter, as well as medical and funeral expenses. She is also suing Mazda Motor Corporation because of an alleged defect in the roof of the vehicle.

NATIONAL GUARD CALLED TO IC

Residents brace for record crest

Jon Yates
The Daily Iowan

Volunteers and National Guardsmen worked side-by-side filling sandbags Tuesday as area residents prepared for an expected record crest on Coralville Lake later this week.

On Normandy Drive in Iowa City, guardsmen spent much of the day distributing sandbags to homes surrounded by flood waters. Many of the homeowners said that without the guardsmen's help, they would not have been able to re-fortify their homes.

"We haven't had any sandbags down here for quite a while, so, yeah, we're glad," said Helen Quigly, whose home on Manor Avenue stands several blocks from dry roads. "We have to walk or wade to get out of here."

Tuesday's effort marked the first time the National Guard has been called in to assist flood-fighting efforts in the Iowa City area. For guardsman Jim Wheeler, who grew up in the Normandy area, the early-morning call to duty was particularly difficult.

"This is where I grew up," he said, taking a break from sandbagging to survey the area. "My mom still lives here, so this is kind of a trip. When I came home last night, it was one of the most humbling days of my military experience."

Capt. John Grote, the guardsman in charge of the operation, said he expects the unit to be working in Iowa City for a couple of days. While the guardsmen have been called into active duty, Grote said they are serving on a volunteer basis.

Lt. Walls of Iowa City's 209th Medical worked with Normandy Drive residents loading sandbags to be distributed throughout the neighborhood Tuesday. Walls, along with most of the 209th, was called to active duty in the past 24 hours, as flooding is expected to increase.

City hears arguments for alcohol at benefit

Joel Donofrio
The Daily Iowan

At Monday night's work session, the Iowa City City Council voiced its displeasure over a proposed outdoor Red Cross fund-raiser featuring live bands and alcohol. Tuesday night, organizers of the event gave their side of the story.

Iowa City Yacht Club owner Hank Miguel, Blues Instigators lead vocalist Kevin Burt and KRUI's John Fogerty all regret that there was "no way" the Council would OK the proposed fund-raiser.

"This city is very narrow-minded about this," Miguel said. "It's unfortunate that even before I took my application to the city manager, the attitude was taken by the city that this will never happen."

After noting that last Sunday's Yacht Club fund-raiser raised $4,100 for flood victims, Miguel asked the Council, "Why don't you want to raise even more money for the American Red Cross when there are so many people in need?"

Several Council members said that while they approve of the cause, they have problems with

Levee breaks threaten St. Louis

Mike Mokrzycki
Associated Press

A levee crumbled along a mile-long stretch of the River Des Peres and surged into south St. Louis on Tuesday, as the Mississippi River bulged to a record crest and heavy rains doused the area.

"We don't know how many homes have been inundated. But things are pretty bad. We're trying to get people out. It's severe," said Candy Green, spokeswoman for the city's emergency management operation.

"The city is rushing in with heavy equipment trying to dump stones, sandbags and sand to plug it up," said Bill Groth of the St. Louis Corps of Engineers. "The water was up to chest-deep in some areas where the breaks took place."

The neighborhood was already flooded because sandbags washed off of the levee Sunday, and much of that water remained when more of the dike gave way.

About 1,200 people had been ordered to evacuate during the weekend, but some remained. Earlier Tuesday emergency workers with bulldozers drove through the neighborhood, urging the holdouts to flee.

It couldn't be determined immediately how many people remained when the levee burst.

Police Lt. Tim Murphy said there were four or five new breaks in the levee along a stretch of about a mile.

Two bridges were closed in the area. Water service had been turned off earlier in the day following six water main breaks.

The River Des Peres is a concrete-lined drainage ditch that has been flooded by the Mississippi. Workers had lined sandbags along its sides to try to keep flood waters out.

The collapse came as the Mississippi, which had reached one record crest of 46.9 feet Sunday night before dropping slightly, rose to 47.1 feet Tuesday evening, Groth said. A line of strong thunderstorms moving through the area also probably contributed to the levee break.

"As high as the river is, almost anything's going to have some impact," Groth said.

Other parts of the Midwest also faced new complications in trying to recover from more than 1 1/2 months of record flooding:

Clinton appoints Freeh FBI director

Nancy Benac
Associated Press

WASHINGTON — President Clinton selected "street-smart" federal judge Louis Freeh on Tuesday to lead the FBI in its fight against persistent violent crime, new challenges in counter-terrorism and the agency's own morale problems.

Louis Freeh

"Our country must be made safe again," Freeh declared at an upbeat Rose Garden appearance alongside Clinton.

The ceremony provided a sharp contrast to the previous day, when a grim-faced Clinton had appeared in the White House briefing room to announce he was firing William Sessions as FBI head because of questions about his conduct and leadership.

Freeh, a 43-year-old federal district judge from Manhattan, was appointed to the bench by President Bush in 1991 after five years as an FBI agent and a decade as a federal prosecutor.

"He is experienced, energetic and independent," Clinton said. "He will be both good and tough — good for the FBI and tough on criminals."

Clinton said that Freeh, working with Attorney General Janet Reno and drug policy director Lee Brown, would give the administration "a street-smart front line against crime."

Freeh, for his part, pledged "total commitment to a Federal Bureau of Investigation whose only beacon is a rule of law, whose sole task is protecting all of our people from crime and violence."

Clinton called him "a law enforcement legend," citing his drug and mail-bomb investigations as a prosecutor and his work as an FBI agent against racketeering.

His last name is pronounced "Free." Clinton called him "Louie." Freeh made a point of introducing his wife and four sons at the

Local activists take stand against roads

Dave Strahan
The Daily Iowan

Paved and unpaved roads link virtually every place in the continental United States with everywhere else. While many people view these roads as a convenience — a means of getting from point A to point B — roads mean different things to different people.

To the romantically inclined, for instance, roads may represent adventure, opportunity and the unknown. To cyclists and runners, they may represent challenge and a source of recreation.

Not everyone has positive thoughts when roads are concerned, though. To Iowa City resident Jenny Prichard and five other Earth First! environmental activists, roads represent death — both to animals and to ecosystems.

According to Jeff Juel, a volunteer at the Missoula Ecology Center in Missoula, Mont., a road is one of the most damaging structures which can be imposed onto an ecosystem.

"Roads become a void driven through wild areas," he said, explaining that many animals are afraid to cross roads, and become effectively caged by them.

Juel added that roads pollute streams and cause erosion.

"They impact everything," he said.

On June 30, Prichard and the five activists were arrested in an attempt to halt road construction and logging activity in the Nez Perce National Forest in Idaho. The area in question includes the Cove and Mallard roadless areas, which make up the largest remaining roadless area in the greater 48 states.

The activists were charged with theft and obstruction as they locked themselves to a gate which designates the beginning of a road. A preliminary hearing will be held July 28 in Idaho.

The action was part of Earth First!'s 10-year campaign to stop encroachment into old-growth forests in the Northern Rockies. The campaign is a result of a governmental decision several years ago which earmarked the Cove and Mallard areas for timber sale. The same decision also set aside 5 to 6 million acres in the same general area for wilderness preservation.

According to Dave Spores, U.S. Forest Service Director of Timber Management in the Northern Region, the decision was intended to appease a number of groups which were affected by the decision.

"The balance was struck by Congress to address the issues of wilderness as a resource, and of supplying a continuing source of timber for the needs of the American people," he said.

But to Earth First!, whose motto is "no compromise in the defense of Mother Earth," the balance is unacceptable. As a result, the group pledged to stop the activity, using not only direct action like those employed by the six activists, but also using legal challenges.

On the legal front, Earth First! has accused the U.S. Forest Service of breaking several laws by allowing the Cove and Mallard areas to be cleared. They claim the areas are prime habitats for the recovery of gray wolf and grizzly bear species, and they accuse the Forest Service of violating the Endangered Species Act, which is supposed to protect the habitats of species facing extinction.

Earth First! supporter Tony Caldwell said it was no accident that government officials broke the law.

"There were people in the Forest Service who knew the area shouldn't be logged and they went ahead and did it anyway," he said.

Juel, too, was sympathetic to the Earth First! position.

"They feel very strongly that the Forest Service is doing things that are illegal and getting away with it because they are a government agency," he said. "Luckily, there are people who are willing to be arrested to prevent the atrocities."

Despite criticism, Spores denies any wrongdoing within the Forest Service.

"I can assure you that we're fully in compliance with all the laws and regulations pertaining to that area," he said. "Some interest groups believe the National Forests should not be managed for commercial production. I think that is what's happening here."

Regardless of whether the government acted in accordance with the law, a recent informational newsletter distributed by Earth First! suggested there will be more confrontations in the future.

"What we're envisioning is a series of federated, loosely coordinated actions. We've got a lot of area to cover, so we'll probably set up several different bases from which activists can work," the release read. "This campaign is going to be intense; it could become one of the greatest things we've done."

"Roads become a void driven through wild areas ... They impact everything."

Jeff Juel, volunteer at the Missoula Ecology Center in Missoula, Mont.

FLOWER FUN

Recent rains fail to dampen daylilies' brilliance

Maria Hickey
The Daily Iowan

Hemerocallis is a Greek word that means to live for a day. The bloom of the hemerocallis — better known as the daylily — lasts only 24 hours, but its short lifespan is sweet.

The star-like flower takes a minimum of care and can be grown almost anywhere. It can grow as high as 4 feet, and each stalk is able to produce up to 30 blooms each day.

After almost 30 years of growing daylilies, Iowa City resident Fred McDowell is well aware of the qualities of the flower. Every day, he can be seen stepping carefully through his daylilies, snipping the petals of yesterday's blossoms.

McDowell has over 1,500 varieties in his yard, at 1118 E. Court St., which is a display garden for the American Hemerocallis Society. With between 800 and 1,000 new hybridizations every year, it's doubtful he'll ever get bored.

"Some of these varieties are spectacular and unusual, so that's one challenge," McDowell said. "Another challenge is the fact that you have a different garden every day, so there's an element of surprise."

A retired English professor, McDowell worked at the UI from 1949 until 1985. He opted for a daylily garden because the flower took relatively little time from his busy schedule. In 1976, his all-season garden was completely phased out in favor of daylilies.

"It's a fair amount of work, but on the other hand, not as much work as an all-season garden," McDowell said. "It frees me up to travel in any month but the month of July."

July is the peak of the season, and McDowell's yard is framed with hundreds of daylilies in subtle to exotic shades of every color. Early, mid-season and late varieties allow for a season that lasts from June 20 until Aug. 10.

The former professor and the flower seem a perfect match. The daylily has a fragrance which McDowell described as "ethereal" and a host of enchanting names, such as Star of Africa, Asian Pearl and Pandora's Box. McDowell thinks the names describe the flowers well.

"You know that Midnight Magic is not going to be a white daylily," he said.

Since the 1940s, daylilies have been hybridized extensively, leaving only two colors yet to be bred — pure blue and snow white. That leaves more than enough for a truly incredible color display. Everything from golden yellow to the deepest maroons floats along in a sea of green in McDowell's garden.

McDowell was hard-pressed to name any one daylily as his favorite as he walked along the 6-foot border of daylilies that frames his yard.

"I guess you could say I have 50 to 100 favorite daylilies," he said with a smile.

McDowell did point to a few that looked especially beautiful. Devil's Delight stood out noticeably with its deep red color and jauntily-pointed petals. The fiery hues of Olympic Gold and Aztec Furnace made a sharp contrast to the more delicate pinks of Tropical Sunset and Pink Monday. Then there was the unusual Princely Banner, a true lavender with a large green throat.

McDowell plants about 100 new varieties every year and keeps them along his house and driveway. If he likes them, he'll transplant them into the back yard, once they're large enough. McDowell keeps his garden up to date by exchanging daylilies with other gardeners and attending daylily conferences held all over the nation.

The rain that has pummeled Iowa City this summer hasn't bothered the daylilies. The flowers' need about an inch per week, according to McDowell. During the dry summers of 1988 and 1989, McDowell said, he had to irrigate the flowers.

McDowell welcomes visitors to his home, especially now that the daylilies are in their peak. He even encourages people to visit more than once since it's a new garden every day.

Pattycake, Pattycake: make me a gorilla

NEW YORK (AP) — Timmy the gorilla, whose forced separation from a sterile mate in Cleveland drew protests from animal lovers, has become a first-time father at the Bronx Zoo.

Veteran gorilla mother Pattycake, 21, gave birth to a 5-pound, 6-ounce male on Sunday, said the Wildlife Conservation Society, which runs the Bronx Zoo. It is Timmy's first offspring and Pattycake's sixth.

Timmy, 34, was separated from his mate Katie at the Cleveland

Metroparks Zoo and sent to New York in October 1991, in hopes of diversifying the gene pool of the captive gorilla population.

Their forced separation angered animal-rights activists who said the emotional trauma on the animals would be great.

Under the breeding contract, the baby belongs to the Cleveland zoo, said Metroparks spokeswoman Susan Allen. However, that doesn't necessarily mean the baby will live at the Cleveland zoo, she said.

Solon man dies after canoe tips over 15 feet from Lake Macbride shoreline

Tory Brecht
The Daily Iowan

A canoe accident on Lake Macbride at about 10:00 Tuesday morning claimed the life of a Solon man.

Howard Jacob Robertson, 71, of 3711 Cottage Reserve Road, drowned when his canoe capsized about 15 feet from the shoreline.

Detective Bob Dolezal of the Johnson County Sheriff's Department said Robertson was attempting to adjust the mooring lines on his pontoon boat when the accident took place. Dolezal said police do not know what caused the canoe to capsize.

Robertson's wife called the Sheriff's Department at 9:53 a.m., Dolezal said.

When police arrived, Robertson was submerged in 6 to 7 feet of water. CPR was administered on the scene and the victim was transported to the UI Hospitals and Clinics by Air Care, the hospital's emergency helicopter service.

Robertson died at the hospital at 11:08 Tuesday morning.

Gwen Prentice, a park ranger at Lake Macbride, said the lake has been closed to all boating since last Tuesday, due to the high water. She added that even people with homes on the lake are advised to not use their boats.

Branstad prepares damage estimates

Mike Glover
Associated Press

DES MOINES — Gov. Terry Branstad on Tuesday said 42 Iowa counties have given early estimates of more than $303 million in flood damage.

In addition, another 19 counties — including Scott County with the heavily damaged Davenport — still are tabulating their preliminary estimates. Officials in Davenport have estimated damage from the flooded Mississippi River at $100 million.

The highest damage was reported in Polk County, which posted $250 million in losses from flooding that swamped the Des Moines water-treatment plant and forced the evacuation of 3,500 in West Des Moines.

The estimates came in a letter Branstad sent to President Clinton, giving initial figures designed to trigger the flow of disaster aid to the state. The numbers are certain to increase, and Branstad has estimated damage in the state at $2.7 billion.

Branstad, meanwhile, named a new task force to coordinate flood-recovery efforts statewide, while disaster officials said they would brief top lawmakers on damages.

The governor said it's too early to consider a special session of the Legislature aimed at disaster-relief programs but said "I think it's appropriate to begin to review the impact this will have."

Board looks at IC's voting methods

Maria Hickey
The Daily Iowan

Voting procedures in last week's special Iowa City City Council election were scrutinized at the Johnson County Board of Supervisors meeting Tuesday.

Questioning both the cost of the election and how the locations were chosen for the early-voting satellite stations, Iowa City resident Sue Thompson had voiced concerns to the board last week. She added that the Johnson County Auditor's Office had not been open Saturday, July 10, before the election, which she said is an illegal procedure.

Board Chairwoman Pat Meade had said she was surprised to learn the office had not been open, and suggested the matter be put on the informal agenda for Tuesday.

County Auditor Tom Slockett

clarified Tuesday that the Code of Iowa does not require the office to be open, and added that there had been a satellite location available to voters. Slockett was upset that the charges had been made at a public meeting and that Meade had agreed with Thompson that the office should have been open.

Slockett also explained that satellite locations are chosen at the auditor's discretion and by petitions signed by at least 100 electors. He said the cost of having the satellite locations was $583, most of which went to pay for the use of the Senior Center and Iowa City Public Library. Slockett pointed out that the county saved about $848 by not mailing the ballots between the office and voters.

"People enjoy voting and they like to do it when it's convenient," Slockett said.

Chairmen for both the Johnson County Republican and Democratic parties were present.

Democratic Party Chairman Tom Carsner said his party encouraged people to vote, making the public very aware of the early voting locations.

"If there's a cost to it, it's part of the cost of running a democratic government," Carsner said.

Republican Party Chairman Chuck Denninger said the Republican Party is just as concerned about voter turn-out, but that it's an economic concern.

"No one here, that I know of, is against voting," Denninger said.

Slockett said there have been satellite locations in the past at rural locations but there was never much voter interest.

"It's a new process, and we're trying to find out what is cost-effective," Slockett said.

UI grad student killed in car accident

Brad Hahn
The Daily Iowan

UI biology doctoral student Shiaw-Ching Fong, 33, was killed Sunday when his car was struck head-on by another vehicle in Scott County, Iowa.

Fong had been at the UI for seven years, and was in the process of writing his doctoral thesis, according to Gary Gussin, a professor of biology who was Fong's adviser.

The accident occurred two miles east of the Stockton interchange on Interstate 80. Fong was pronounced dead at the scene.

Arthur Hill, 45, of Muscatine was driving the other vehicle, the state patrol reported. His automobile was moving eastbound in the westbound lane of Interstate 80 when it struck Fong's car at about 11:50 p.m.

Hill was taken to UI Hospitals and Clinics and was in critical condition on Tuesday evening.

Gussin described Fong as a hard worker who was always willing to help younger students in labs.

"He had a lot of friends, and the people in the lab are obviously very upset," Gussin said. "He was always very generous with his time and willing to help others. This summer he was helping an undergraduate honors student."

Gussin added that Fong had a postdoctorate position lined up at the University of Washington in Seattle; the job was supposed to begin in January.

Fong was returning from a visit to his brother, who lives in Chicago. The rest of Fong's family lives in Taiwan, Gussin said.

'Poaching' slows return of water to Des Moines

Mike Glover
Associated Press

DES MOINES — Even though threats by officials slowed water poaching from the flood-contaminated city system, residents won't get permission to shower or flush until at least today.

L.D. McMullen, city water manager, said 200 businesses were being investigated after reports that they used water early, but he listed only two violators: Piggott, Inc., at 3815 Ingersoll Ave., and an apartment complex at 2147 High St.

Mayor John Dorrian scheduled a 6 a.m. news conference today to announce whether city businesses could start getting back to normal because water mains would be filled, assuring fire protection downtown.

The water system was nearly 80 percent full Tuesday afternoon, and officials said water may begin flowing from some city faucets today.

Refilling of the system was slowed because businesses opened the tap before the pipes were full and pressurized. Officials had threatened sanctions, including publishing the names of violators.

"The people appear to be cooperating today, and we've been making steady progress," he said.

GAY BAN

Clinton's big copout

Monday's announcement by the Clinton administration of their "new" policy on gays in the military was no big surprise. Anyone who has been following the development of this story was probably aware of the clues given by the administration that virtually no policy change was in sight.

And that is exactly what happened. It has been clear since Clinton's inauguration, after strong resistance to his proposed elimination of the ban on gays became very evident. The president may think he comes out of this as the real winner, because he appeases both the military brass and the gay-rights activists with one stroke. Unfortunately for him, this double appeasement may cost him the votes of the gay community.

Realistically speaking, Clinton's fiasco on the gay ban may not be as costly as George Bush's broken "No new taxes" promise, simply because votes from tax payers largely outnumber those of the gay community.

But the new gay policy will hurt his image anyway, at least with some people.

As you all may know by now, the new policy allows gays to serve in the military, but only if they refrain from all homosexual activity.

"So what's the change?" asked Cokie Roberts Monday night on ABC's "Nightline." "They won't have to lie, because, simply, they won't be asked if they are homosexual," retorted Defense Secretary Les Aspin.

That's right. That's the big change after all these months of negotiations. The policy states that: sexual orientation will not be a bar to service unless manifested by sexual conduct (homosexual act or marriage); no investigations will be conducted solely to determine an individual's sexual orientation, but inquiry procedures may be started if there is credible information for a possible discharge; and, most importantly, no questions on sexual orientation will be asked during recruiting procedures.

While Clinton admitted the solution to the problem was not perfect, perhaps the best reaction quote came from Tim McFeeley, a gay-rights activist: "We elected a leader and got a barometer."

Clinton desperately needed a way out of this promise, and unlike Bush's tax promise, he at least was able to come up with something. Since the very beginning of his term and notoriously after the impasse with Senate Armed Services Committee Sam Nunn and Joint Chiefs of Staff Chairman Colin Powell, Clinton realized that he had simply promised too much.

At a time when Clinton is trying to regain the country's and Congress' confidence in him, alienating the powerful Nunn, Congress and the military as a whole was clearly not the best recipe for any kind of legislation on the ban.

Powell has so far given his support to the proposed new policy; but Nunn, strongly implying he is for a total ban of gays in the military, has preferred to state that, in any case, it is Congress who will have to vote on the policy in the end.

In reality, for gay-rights activists, this new policy is a defeat, for it means virtually no change. Unfortunately for them, the lifting of the ban had almost no chance of ever passing Congress. Rep. Barney Frank, D-Mass., one of two openly gay congressmen, admitted that "anything beyond this I'm afraid would have lost."

Gay-rights activists fell victim to the old trick of campaign promises. And they can't be blamed for believing.

Joycelyn Elders has proven herself extreme, not moderate

My mother once told me that you are judged by the company you keep. Obviously no one told this to President Clinton, for he claims to be a moderate "new" Democrat, but he is surrounding himself with radicals. The latest radical to join the Clinton inner circle is Dr. Joycelyn Elders, nominated to be surgeon general. Dr. Elders is eminently qualified to hold this post as an experienced pediatrician and state health department director. Dr. Elders is, however, completely out of touch with both the realities of the health-care crisis afflicting our country, and with mainstream American values.

The most horrendous of Dr. Elders' plans is to provide Norplant, a hormonal birth control device, to prostitutes. The problem with Norplant is that it protects neither the prostitute nor her "client" from sexually transmitted diseases - including AIDS. It is well known in the public health community that the vast majority of prostitutes use condoms and that they are not significant contributors to the spread of STDs in the general population. Prostitutes use condoms because they are cheap or free and prevent pregnancy, a debilitating condition for a prostitute. The fact that condoms prevent STDs is incidental to most prostitutes. If prostitutes are given a free pregnancy-prevention method other than condoms, there will be an explosion in transmission rates of STDs among prostitutes, their "clients," and innocent third parties.

Dr. Elders is also a pro-abortion rights extremist. She advocates federal funding of abortion and opposes even the smallest regulations, like parental notification and informed consent. Most polls show the American public split on the subject of abortion, but even Planned Parenthood's research shows large majorities against federal funding of abortion.

Worse than her open approval for radical and unpopular policies is her disdain for rational debate and the narrow-minded dismissal of those who disagree with her. Of abortion opponents, she states that they should "get over their love affair with the fetus." Others who disagree with her are simply tools of a "celibate, male-dominated church, a male-dominated legislature and ... medical profession."

Dr. Elders is also an unquestioning advocate of sex education. While sex education isn't a bad idea in the right place, Elders wants it in the kindergarten classroom alongside finger-painting and the alphabet. Dr. Elders is also on record opposing the inclusion of abstinence in sex-education curricula, even when the local school board chooses it. Every year for decades, government spending on sex education has increased, the age at which it is introduced has decreased, and its value content has slipped completely away. At the same time, the number of abortions, teenage pregnancies, out-of-wedlock births, and cases of STDs has skyrocketed. In some communities illegitimate births constitute 50 percent of all births, and as many as 10 percent of all pregnancies end in abortion.

The facts notwithstanding, Dr. Elders believes the answer is more sex education at an earlier age with less of a role for parents. Dr. Elders has such contempt for parents that she states, "sex education has to take place because many parents are ignorant." Her valueless version of sex education borders on encouragement when she says things like "we've taught them what to do in the front seat of the car, now it's time to teach them what to do in the back seat."

Elders wouldn't be such a surprise if Mr. Clinton didn't run as a "new" Democrat. It is particularly disappointing to see the post of surgeon general radicalized by an appointee more interested in pushing her social agenda than in promoting healthy lifestyles and educating the public. The previous two administrations have deliberately placed nonideological individuals in the post of surgeon general in order to build public trust and increase the flow of credible information to the public. Antonia Novello and C. Everett Koop, the previous occupants of the surgeon general's office, both bucked important beliefs of their party, most notably on abortion. Joycelyn Elders is no such independent health-care professional; she is very much a creature of far left Democratic politics, and for that reason will tarnish the credibility of the office and probably lead to increasing public distrust for the health initiatives undertaken by the federal government.

Dr. Elders' confirmation hearing has been delayed due to several ethics scandals, including involvement in the mismanagement of a financial institution, the possible violation of federal law, failure to pay Social Security taxes, and being paid for two government jobs at the same time. These scandals are relevant only to the extent that they provide cover to moderate dissenting senators from the powerful special-interest groups who are backing her nomination.

If Bill Clinton had listened to his own campaign rhetoric and nominated an independent moderate to be surgeon general, he would not be in the position of having to back down on another appointment because of radical and unpopular positions taken by his nominee.

Freeport: different verse, same old racist song

Freeport, Ill. looks like many other small Midwestern industrial cities. Saturday, July 10 was clear, hot and humid - perfect weather for an anti-Klan rally. We took Ill. Highway 26 into town. The road was lined with the gas stations, quick-shops and strip malls that you would expect to find on any major thoroughfare in any small American city. Freeport looks as innocent as Dubuque or Janesville. There are no billboards announcing it the "Klan Kapital of the Kountry." Citizens don't do yard work in white robes and hoods. But the Klan has been there, recruiting local youths in the town's high school. And, as in Dubuque, local officials and media are no help whatsoever. The mayor denied that the Klan was in his city, and proclaimed "There's no racism in Freeport." Newspapers in Freeport and nearby Rockford (itself a model of race relations like Davenport, Des Moines, Waterloo - or Selma) denounced the anti-Klan rally and advised residents to stay away.

The atmosphere was tense. A few nights before the rally, there had been a confrontation between Freeport blacks and police. Local cops had gone into Freeport's black neighborhood and started conducting standard operations. They stopped and frisked all black men who went through a given area. The cops justify the practice by saying they are looking for weapons and gang members. Freeport cops have photographed some men and exchanged the photos with other police departments as part of a national "anti-gang" network.

That night, some of Freeport's blacks had had enough. Thirty people plastered the invading cops with rocks and bottles. Seven cop cars converged on the area. While it may not have been a "riot," the incident buttressed the charge that Freeport police routinely harass the city's black populace. The incident also shows that Freeport's blacks are fed up with police harassment.

Most of the city's blacks live in the east end of town: low, swampy land with standing water and lots of mosquitoes. Municipal services are lacking; many east-side residents lack indoor plumbing. What I saw of the west side was high, dry and plumed. The east side was flooded. The barricades blocking some streets - "Street Closed Due to Flooding" - also signify how most whites in this country see black neighborhoods. Freeport's roadblocks right now are physical, but mental roadblocks are what usually keep working whites and blacks separated. However, those mental barricades can be torn down. One young white man came up to us as we made our picket signs. "If I didn't have to work, I'd march with you. I really support what you're doing."

The rally and march almost did not happen. We were going to march through the east end, but the flood ended that plan. The Freeport city government tried to stop the march by refusing to issue a parade permit. They said they feared "violence," even though every day, impoverishment and police brutality wreak violence on millions of people in this country. The city relented, but Freedom Of Residence, the organization which sponsored the march, had to shell out hard-earned dollars for an insurance premium. Nor could we march to the police station so that Freeport blacks could air their grievances against local law enforcers. It seems freedom of assembly does not exist if you frighten the powers that be.

I spoke with Kevin, a young man who lives in Freeport. "Is this a Jim Crow town, do all the blacks live over on the east side?" Kevin thought about it and named two or three neighborhoods that were considered "integrated." He pointed out a nearby street: "There are mostly blacks on this side of the street, then it's all white on the other side. Yeah, and the rest of the blacks here live on the east side."

Kevin was thinking about joining the Freeport police force. "Would you be able to do that, after seeing how they've hassled your friends and neighbors?" Kevin looked me in the eye: "I've got friends on the police force, but man, I'm really having second thoughts about joining now." Kevin is mixed-race, but is considered black by many whites. He told me what one woman-friend's father told her: "If you're sleeping with Kevin, I'll kill both of you."

Freedom Of Residence members told us the city of Freeport refuses to run sewer and water lines into the east end because it wants to force the residents out. That land, it seems, is coveted by development interests who want to buy the property cheaply. Think of Freeport's east end as "Little Appalachia," and you'll understand how its residents live.

I'm no longer surprised by such deliberate misery in this, the wealthiest nation on earth. Two years ago, my wife and I were visiting in Des Moines. She didn't believe the stories I told her about the Northside and Southeast Bottoms, so I convinced her. We drove a few blocks past the state Capitol building and found a rutted, graveled street. We could see the gilded dome from the pothole I stopped in. Then we hit University Avenue and some of its interesting streets. Donna now believes my stories about poverty in Des Moines.

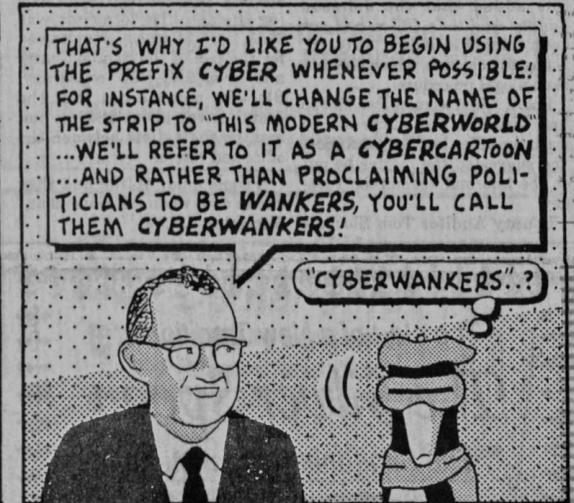

Black men are seven times as likely as white men to be murdered. Since 1987, 48 black men have supposedly hanged themselves in Mississippi jails. Friends and family of many victims say they were murdered by police. This summer's floods are a natural disaster: We cannot stop them, but we can pull together to keep our communities going. Racism is a human-made disaster. Unlike the floods, we can stop racism, but that will happen only when we reorder society. Until we do, the Klan will become bolder, poor blacks and whites will continue to live in miserable conditions, and we will all be poorer, materially and spiritually, than we should be.

Letter requires clarification

To the Editor:
John Bagby's Letter To the Editor (July 14 D) was filled with a number of inconsistencies concerning the University of Iowa Student Association. I am not going to question his opinion of UISA President John Robert Gardner. Mr. Bagby seems to think I dislike John, but he has never asked me my opinion. I feel that John and I have a good working relationship. I have publicly stated that I feel the charges against John to be legitimate. I have not stated that I support the impeachment of John Gardner. I did not place these charges, nor have I decided how I will vote during the impeachment hearing. I will not decide until the evidence is put before the UISA in a public hearing.

Mr. Bagby goes on to insinuate I am a Bible-thumping member of the Christian Coalition. I have never been a member of the Christian Coalition. I am a Christian and very proud of it. I believe that the best way to lead others to Christianity is by example, not Bible-thumping. I have never tried to force my values on another person, nor do I believe in doing so.

PHYLLIS SCHLAFLY

Ginsburg an activist feminist candidate

Ruth Bader Ginsburg's writings reveal her as an advocate of the extremist feminist notion that any differentiation whatsoever on account of gender should be unconstitutional. Her radical views are made clear in a book called "Sex Bias in the U.S. Code," which she co-authored in 1977 with another feminist, Brenda Feigen-Fasteau, for which they were paid with federal funds under Contract No. CR3AK010.

"Sex Bias in the U.S. Code," published by the U.S. Commission on Civil Rights, was the source of the claim widely made in the 1970s that there were 800 federal laws that "discriminate" on account of sex. The 230-page book was written to identify those laws and to recommend the specific changes demanded by the feminist movement in order to conform to the "equality principle," for which Ginsburg was the leading advocate in the Supreme Court gender cases of the 1970s.

Here are some of the extremist proposals from the Ginsburg book:

- Draft women and give them affirmative action in the military. "Supporters of the equal-rights principle firmly reject draft or combat exemption for women. ... The need for affirmative action for transition measures is particularly strong in the uniformed services."

- Declare the traditional family obsolete. "It is a prime recommendation of this report that all legislation based on the 'bread-winning husband and dependent, home-making wife' pattern be recast using precise functional description in lieu of gross gender classification."

- Legislate federal baby-sitting. "The increasingly common two-earner family pattern should impel development of a comprehensive program of government supported child care."

- Federalize no-fault divorce. "Consideration should be given to revision of 38 U.S.C. #101(3) to reflect the trend toward no-fault divorce." "Retention of a fault concept in provisions referring to separation ... is questionable in light of the trend away from fault determinations in the dissolution of marriages."

- Restrict any allowance for motherhood to only a few weeks of temporary disability. "The references to 'maternal' health or welfare and 'mothers' ... would be appropriately descriptive only if the programs involved were confined to care for pregnant women and lactating mothers."

- Lower the age of consent and eliminate protection for minor girls. "Eliminate the phrase 'carnal knowledge of any female, not his wife who has not attained the age of 16 years' and substitute a federal, sex-neutral definition of the offense. ... A person is guilty of an offense if he engages in a sexual act with another person, not his spouse, and ... the other person is, in fact, less than 12 years old." "Current provisions dealing with statutory rape ... are discriminatory on their face."

- Legalize prostitution. "Prostitution, as a consensual act between adults, is arguably within the zone of privacy." "There is a growing national movement recommending unqualified decriminalization of prostitution and the prostitution business as sound policy."

- Don't protect women from bad men. "The Mann Act ... prohibits the transportation of women and girls for prostitution, debauchery, or any other immoral purpose. ... The Mann Act is offensive because of the image of women it perpetuates."

- Sex-integrate the prisons. "If the grand design of such institutions is to prepare inmates for return to the community ... then perpetuation of single-sex institutions should be rejected. ... We should not permit consideration of a person's gender as a factor making a particular institution appropriate or suitable for that person."

- Sex-integrate single-sex schools and colleges. "The equal-rights principle ... requires elimination of sex-separation in all public institutions where education and training occur."

- Sex-integrate Boy Scouts and Girl Scouts. "The Boy Scouts, the Girl Scouts, Future Farmers of America, Boys' Clubs of America, Big Brothers of America, and the Naval Sea Cadets Corps, while ostensibly providing 'separate but equal' benefits to both sexes, perpetuate stereotyped sex roles and should consider a name change to reflect extension of membership to both sexes ... and should be revised to conform to these changes."

About 750 of the 800 federal laws that allegedly "discriminate" on account of sex merely involve the use of so-called "sexist" words. Here are a few of the words that Ginsburg wants removed from federal law, and in parenthesis is the word that she wants substituted as a matter of federal law: manmade (artificial), man, woman (person, human), mankind (humanity), husband, wife (spouse), mother, father (parent), sister, brother (sibling), entryman (enterer), serviceman (servicemember), midshipman (midshipperson), longshoremen (stevedores), watchman (watchperson), duties of seamanship (nautical or seafaring duties), "to man" a vessel (to staff), he or she (he / she), her or him (her / him).

Clarifications on panic-attack study

To the Editor:
On May 14 the DI featured a Guest Opinion concerning a study on panic attacks in which we are currently involved. Since that date happened to be the last day The Daily Iowan was published before summer recess, there was no opportunity for a reply to the concerns of the author, Ms. Heth. Several items in the guest opinion were inaccurate, while other points that Ms. Heth made concerning the limitations of the study were ones upon which we would agree. First, let me address those comments which were inaccurate to "set the record straight."

1. The study is limited to men and women of nonchild-bearing potential, rather than to "men and post-menopausal women." Since approximately 30 percent of women in the age group at risk of panic disorder have had tubal ligations, this group of women would also be candidates for study in our project.

2. Panic attacks in individuals predisposed to such are being induced not by breathing into a paper bag but by breathing a higher-percent concentration of carbon dioxide (35 percent) for a short period of time. This inhalation leads to the development of panic attacks in around 70 percent of individuals with panic attacks and only 10 percent of individuals without this difficulty. The procedure used to induce panic attacks was unfortunately misquoted by the reporter doing the original article on our study. We did not feel it was worth putting in a retraction since those articles are commonly placed in small letters on an obscure page and read by virtually nobody. The individuals who were interested in participating in our study could be informed of the actual procedure that we use at the time of inquiry.

3. The reason for limiting the study to women without child-bearing potential is because of the concern that the drug company has about using a medication that has not had its effects on unborn fetuses tested. Rather than subjecting women to these risks, they chose to limit the study to those without risk of becoming pregnant.

The interesting thing is that we agree with Ms. Heth in many ways. We would like to study more young females. She is absolutely right that a significant number of young women have difficulty with panic disorder and should be included in the testing procedure if at all possible. In fact, as recruitment is progressing, it appears as if we will have some young women represented despite the restriction related to potential for pregnancy. Women who have had surgical procedures to prevent pregnancy and who also have panic disorder are entering the assessment process. Even if, after we have completed the entire study and find we have found that we have a limited number of young females included, we do not feel that the study should have been stopped because we were unable to include a greater percentage of women in our study design. This seems to be short-sighted, since it is likely that our results will be generalizable to young females and that a greater understanding of panic disorder in all populations may lead to better treatments in the future. We, like Ms. Heth, consider panic attacks to be a disabling condition, as she so well describes them in her Guest Opinion. Furthermore, we recognize that there is a need to develop better ways to help people with this problem. This is the principle aim in our research project, and we are sorry that Ms. Heth felt that we were arbitrarily excluding important individuals in the research process.

We remain interested in talking with individuals who might be interested in participating in our study. They can call 319-353-4658 to obtain more information.

DISEASE AFFECTS ORAL HEALTH

Alzheimer's effects studied at UI

A group of UI researchers will be using a $23,000 grant from the American Fund for Dental Health to look into links between Alzheimer's disease and dental hygiene.

Lynn M. Tefft
The Daily Iowan

As a result of declining motor skills and memory loss, some people with Alzheimer's disease may suffer poor oral health, according to a team of UI researchers from the Colleges of Dentistry, Medicine and Nursing.

Alzheimer's disease is a severe neurological disorder marked by progressive dementia and deterioration of the cerebral cortex.

"Some people with Alzheimer's have terrible oral hygiene because they lose the ability to remember to brush their teeth or the ability to do it," said John Warren, a post-doctoral associate in preventive and community dentistry.

The team will use a $23,000 grant from the American Fund for Dental Health to study the oral health of over 300 Alzheimer's patients who visit the UI Hospitals and Clinics' geriatric assessment clinic.

"We want to know when the disease really starts to affect oral hygiene," Warren said. "The study will help determine the relationship between the stage of the disease and the patient's oral health."

Neglecting oral health can lead to cavities and periodontal disease, he said, and can eventually impair the patient's ability to eat.

"There can be a decline in nutrition because of the lack of health in their mouths," he said.

Participants in the study will receive dental checkups and answer questions about how often they brush their teeth and visit the dentist. Family members and other care-givers will also provide input about their roles in the patients' oral hygiene.

Relatives and professional care-givers can provide tremendous help to the patient, Warren said.

"What's really important for an Alzheimer's patient is to get the care-giver involved to prevent oral disease early on, so it doesn't become a problem," Warren said.

Steven Levy, UI associate professor of preventive and community dentistry and principal investigator for the study, said he hopes the two-year study will lead to a more extensive one.

"It will allow for a better understanding of how the disease affects oral health and oral-health behaviors," Levy said. "That will help us develop ways to assure the highest quality of oral health for persons with Alzheimer's disease."

New Hawkeye Express Card to be issued by UISA this fall

Megan Penick
The Daily Iowan

A new and improved Hawkeye Express Card will be available to more students next year, with money earned from the card going to the Self-Help Scholarship fund, according to UI Student Association Vice President Micah Hobart.

Businesses sponsoring the service will give discounts on their products to students who carry the card. The card will be made available to all UI students, who will receive it in the mail along with their university billing in September or October.

Undergraduate Collegiate Senate Executive Officer Luke Greenwalt said that the card should be more successful than it has been in past years because it will reach more students and they will receive the card earlier in the year.

"We will have 29,500 cards printed up and sent out," Greenwalt said. "Distribution shouldn't be as hard as it has been in the past, because it's just going out with the U-bill rather than being mailed separately."

The card should have more sponsors than last year, making it more useful to students and earning more money for the scholarship fund, Hobart said.

"Last year we only had 14 businesses sponsoring the card," he said. "This year, we're going for 40 businesses who will have their names on the back and four main sponsors who will have their names on the front."

Right now, UISA Executive Committee members are working through a list of 75 potential sponsors. In order to sponsor the card, each business must pay $300. Four businesses will be placed on the front of the card, each sponsoring $1,500.

If the UISA achieves their goal of 40 businesses, the card will earn over $15,000 for the scholarship fund. The scholarship is need-based and will go to students who are unable to meet UI billing.

KFMH radio is the only main sponsor the committee has finalized so far. But through KFMH, the UISA is being given radio spots for advertising the card, and the station is going to have a UISA-KFMH party on the Pentacrest which they will give two hours of air time, according to Hobart.

DeBoers appeal to Supreme Court

Lisa Zagaroli
Associated Press

WASHINGTON — A Michigan couple trying to keep the child they have raised since her birth asked the U.S. Supreme Court on Tuesday to block an order that they hand the girl over to her biological parents in Iowa by Aug. 2.

Jan and Roberta DeBoer of Ann Arbor, Mich., were ordered by the Michigan Supreme Court to give the 2 1/2-year-old girl they call Jessica to Dan and Cara Schmidt of Blairstown, Iowa.

The DeBoers plan to appeal their custody battle to the U.S. Supreme Court. They want the child to remain with them at least until they exhaust their legal options.

she has ever known would "immediately, severely, profoundly and permanently damage Jessica."

Two petitions seeking the stay were filed Tuesday, one by lawyers for the DeBoers and one by lawyers acting on behalf of the girl.

Under court procedure, a stay is requested of one justice. Justice John Paul Stevens has jurisdiction over the region of the country that includes Michigan.

If Stevens turns down the motion, the DeBoers could submit the request to another justice. Were they to do so, it probably would be turned over to the full court to decide.

The bitter interstate custody dispute began when Cara Schmidt, then 28 and unmarried, made arrangements to give up her child for adoption and listed the wrong man as father. Shortly after the Feb. 8, 1991, birth, she changed her mind and told Schmidt he was the father. Together, they tried to get the baby back.

The DeBoers were never granted the adoption, but managed to keep the child this long through a series of appeals, first in Iowa courts and then in Michigan.

They claim the child will suffer irreparable damage if the stay isn't granted, even if the Supreme Court eventually reverses a lower court's decision.

The legal argument focuses on the Michigan Supreme Court's interpretation of a law known as the Parental Kidnapping Prevention Act.

"I have used my Mac® to write millions of papers, law briefs, law memos and take home finals. Now I use my Classic® at home to access Lexis and Westlaw and interact with Prodigy. This has saved me a lot of time because I can do my research from my apartment instead of hauling myself back and forth from the law library. Besides, I can take my Classic® away with me on weekends.

Anybody can learn to use a Mac. It only takes a few hours to get acquainted with how a Mac works just by sitting down in front of it.

Why did I buy a Classic®? It's small, portable, expandable, inexpensive and easy to use."

SENATE QUESTIONS IMPACT

Aspin expects policy to still dissuade gays

Donna Cassata
Associated Press

WASHINGTON — Defense Secretary Les Aspin predicted under close Senate questioning Tuesday that President Clinton's new policy on homosexuals in the military would still discourage gays from signing up. "They would be much more comfortable pursuing another profession," he said.

In three hours of questioning by skeptical senators, Aspin was pressed repeatedly to explain what they saw as inconsistencies in the policy, and members of the Senate Armed Services Committee wondered aloud about its impact.

"This has to be pinned down," an exasperated Sen. Sam Nunn said after Aspin offered a lengthy response to the question of whether the military could investigate a soldier who merely told another he was gay.

"We can't have a commander out there saying, 'What do I do?' and somebody says, 'Call the attorney general,'" said Nunn, the committee's chairman.

Sen. John Warner, R-Va., said the policy makes an unrealistic request that homosexuals remain celibate for their entire military careers. Sen. John McCain, R-Ariz., called the rules "fodder for legal challenges."

Tuesday's hearing was designed to launch a congressional review of Clinton's policy, which he outlined Monday after six months of negotiations designed to take into account the objections of critics in Congress and the Pentagon.

Clinton, in an interview with journalists from Wisconsin, said homosexuals in the military "are much better off today because we took an honorable compromise."

Gen. Colin Powell, chairman of the Joint Chiefs of Staff, told the committee that he was "in full support of the president's policy" and that it would allow the military to carry out its mission.

"I believe this is the right answer," said Powell, who described the policy as removing "an element of uncertainty" that has existed for the armed services.

But Aspin acknowledged it would continue to discourage homosexuals from joining.

Under questioning from committee members, he also said the policy would make few changes to the regulation that existed when Clinton took office.

"If a person is homosexual, they would be much more comfortable pursuing another profession than the military," Aspin said.

Still, he described the president's plan as progress for homosexuals who want to be in the armed forces. "The policy before was 'don't tell.' What's new is 'don't ask' and 'don't pursue,'" Aspin said.

Earlier Tuesday, White House counselor George Stephanopoulos said the policy "will be to leave homosexuals alone as long as they're acting privately."

Associated Press

Joint Chiefs of Staff Chairman Gen. Colin Powell, right, testifies on Capitol Hill Tuesday before the Senate Armed Services Committee.

"It will create a zone of privacy for gays in the military," Stephanopoulos said on ABC.

Aspin said the policy's language allowing a service member to rebut an allegation of homosexuality is in the current regulation. So is the wording "a propensity or intent to engage in homosexual acts."

Nunn said Congress would have the final say on the issue, and he hoped that after the testimony the committee could write legislation "that is consistent with the policy announced by the president and Secretary Aspin."

Aspin said the department would prefer that Clinton's directive, which would go into effect Oct. 1, stand alone. But White House Press Secretary Dee Dee Myers said the president accepted the political reality that Congress would take action.

Across the street from the White House, meanwhile, gay-rights groups registered their displeasure with the policy, promising to continue their fight to have the ban lifted in the courts and in civil disobedience protests throughout the country.

About 75 protesters marched through Lafayette Park, chanting "You can't ban us" and "Les Aspin, more queers."

And David Mixner, a California consultant who helped raise $3 million for Clinton's campaign, said the president had betrayed the gay community. He promised protests, too.

JUDGE TESTIFIES

Ginsburg hearings commence

Steven Komarow
Associated Press

WASHINGTON — Supreme Court nominee Ruth Bader Ginsburg testified Tuesday that while she rose "on the shoulders" of women's rights pioneers, advocacy is not her vision of a justice's role.

"My approach ... is rooted in the place of the judiciary, of judges, in our democratic society ... third in line" behind the people and their elected representatives, she told a receptive Senate Judiciary Committee at her confirmation hearing.

Citing the words of Justice Oliver Wendell Holmes, she said: "One of the most sacred duties of a judge is not to read her convictions into the Constitution. I have tried, and I will continue to try, to follow that model."

President Clinton's nominee, the first by a Democratic president since Lyndon Johnson, was greeted warmly by members of both parties. No significant opposition has emerged, and the relaxed atmosphere of Tuesday's hearing contrasted starkly with recent experience.

Only Sen. Arlen Specter, recently returned from brain surgery, had any tinge of harshness in his words.

"I admire the positions you've taken, what you've achieved as a litigant and what you've done as a jurist," he said. "But ... when you're on the Supreme Court ... you'll have a free hand in doing a great deal more. ... So that I think these hearings are very important."

Sen. Howard Metzenbaum, D-Ohio, said he hoped she took advantage of her new powers.

"I want to know whether Judge Ginsburg will embrace this opportunity to shape the law to make the enduring principles of the Constitution a reality for all Americans," he said.

She said of the Constitution's framers, "Their large view was expansive. Their immediate view was tied to the circumstances in which they lived." For example, Thomas Jefferson was opposed to allowing women to serve in government.

"I do believe that if Thomas Jefferson were alive today he would say that women were equal citizens," she said.

When she was fighting for women's legal rights in the 1970s, Ginsburg said, she had to change attitudes.

"Women were on a pedestal," she said. "So I was trying to educate the judges that there was something wrong with saying 'sugar and spice and everything nice and that's what little girls were made of.'"

They had to be shown those attitudes were "limiting the aspirations of our daughters," she said.

"We're just trying to minimize the damage to homes in this area," he said. "Everyone around here has been great. We had one guy and his son who came down here from Winnetonka, Wis., to help."

Across town at the beleaguered Iowa City Water plant, over 200 volunteers worked much of the day shoring up a sandbag dike that surrounds the plant.

UI senior Murray, who shoveled sand into sandbags for a couple of hours during the afternoon, said she volunteered because she had heard on the radio that the city needed workers.

"People are sandbagging like crazy," Iowa City City Manager Stephen Atkins said. "We have every indication that the crest will come on Thursday and we're supposed to see some rain then, so we're preparing for what might be coming."

Although it's still too early to tell what that may be, Coralville Lake Park Manager John Castle said that, barring heavy rain, Thursday's crest, while setting another record, may not be as bad as previously expected.

"I'm beginning to think it's not going to be as high as we previously thought," he said. "The water's been slowing down coming into the lake."

Monday, Army Corps of Engineers officials predicted the lake would crest at 717 feet, representing approximately 132 percent of the lake's capacity. Now, Castle said, the crest might be slightly lower.

The corps will continue to let water out of the dam at around 24,500 cubic feet per second for as long as they can, Castle said, with the threat for severe flooding still coming from localized rains.

Interstate 380 remains closed today, and Highway 6 in Coralville is reduced to two lanes of traffic.

White House ceremony. "Come on, guys, stand up," he prompted the older three boys. He picked up the youngest for the cameras.

If confirmed by the Senate, Freeh would take charge of an agency fighting an unyielding violent-crime problem and new terrorist activity on U.S. soil.

While the number of murders in America last year dropped 6 percent, total violent crime remained steady, and rapes and assaults increased. The agency has established a task force to work with state and local officials on combating violent crime.

At the same time, the agency has been active in investigating new terrorist challenges, including the February bombing of the World Trade Center and alleged plots to bomb sites in New York and Los Angeles.

"The FBI must not only catch those who have committed crimes, it must be an important step ahead of criminals as often as possible to prevent crime from being committed," Freeh said.

Sessions, in his departure statement Monday, said his refusal to resign was in line with his effort to protect the political independence of the FBI.

Freeh, in accepting the nomination to replace Sessions, paid heed to that issue, saying the agency "must stand for absolute integrity, be free of all political influence."

Freeh's nomination was well-received even among Republicans on Capitol Hill, where Senate Minority Leader Bob Dole, R-Kan., said, "At first glance, his credentials appear impressive."

The administration hopes to have Freeh's nomination confirmed by the Senate before Congress breaks for its August recess.

said that he definitely won't be coming back for the December commencement.

"It'd be pretty ridiculous to go through graduation after you've been out in the real world for six months," Day said. "It's kind of like being in France on your 21st birthday; you can already drink over there, so what's the point?"

About 22 family members were scheduled to come in for Day's graduation this summer, and he said some of them still are.

"Some of them bought plane tickets in advance because it's cheaper. I guess they can take pictures of all the water while they're here," Day said.

Associate Registrar Catherine Pietrzyk explained that with the exception of the ceremony, everything else was on schedule.

Graduates can pick up diploma covers, which are normally on the seats during graduation, at the Registrar's Office after Aug. 1. The graduation will be posted on students' academic records sometime late in August, and the diplomas will be mailed out after Sept. 1.

All summer graduates will be invited to the December 1993 commencement and their names will appear on the program.

MISSISSIPPI

Thunderstorms raised the danger of new floods in parts of Kansas and Nebraska. More than 5,000 people were urged to evacuate in and near Manhattan, Kan., and Prairie Dog Creek in Colby, Kan. spilled over its banks.

"I thought the worst was over," said Kansas City Mayor Joe Steiner. "It's not over. If the predictions were right, we will have major flooding."

Showers in much of Iowa and parts of Missouri made it harder for people to get on with drying out their homes and businesses and scrubbing away the reeking muck the floods left behind.

"It smells like fish, and there's only one way to get rid of the smell: bleach, Pine-Sol and lots of elbow grease," said Dorothy McKinzie, owner of an auto-repair shop in downtown Davenport. Her business was coated with about a quarter-inch of Mississippi River bottom.

"There is just goop everywhere," she said.

After some businesses flushed toilets and opened faucets before the Des Moines water system was completely refilled, officials pushed back by a day their timetable for restoring running water to 250,000 people. The water has been out since flooding forced a water plant to close on July 11.

outdoor festivals where alcohol is served.

"I have no problem with a downtown music festival, but the presence of alcohol will kick it into another realm," Councilwoman Susan Horowitz said. "There will be abuse, and it will cost the city money to deal with that abuse and protect the crowd from it."

Mayor Darrel Courtney and Councilman Bill Ambrisco objected to holding any alcohol-related events on public property, and questioned whether there would be enough police officers for crowd control.

"I object more to the method than the cause," Courtney said. "In the past, we have not allowed beer gardens or what-have-you for a public festival." He cited the jazz festival as an example of a successful, alcohol-free downtown music event.

"I feel that members of the Council aren't showing a lot of faith in the public's ability to control themselves," Burt said to the Council. "We canceled a show in Des Moines this weekend where we would have made $2,400 so we could play outside Sunday and make a whole lot more money for the Red Cross."

Several councilors indicated they would endorse an alcohol-free fund-raiser.

"I'm advocating having the party," Councilwoman Karen Kubby said. "I like the idea of everybody gathering together, releasing stress, but we need to make sure we have the personnel to police the event."

Kubby and others advocated postponing the party, an idea that Miguel said he would consider. Miguel also said he would pursue the no-alcohol option, while noting that more funds could be raised if alcohol was available.

"Since we are unable to donate money, KRUI was hoping to publicize an event that will raise a lot of money," Fogarty said. "Alcohol sales in a controlled environment can be successful."

After the discussion broke down, Councilman John McDonald, who had been silent during the debate, indicated that he personally supported Miguel's festival proposal. However, the Council did not share his viewpoint and made no move to allow the festival this Sunday.

In other action, the Council discussed rejecting the renewal of a class C liquor license for The Field House bar, 111 E. College St. However, even if the city recommended denial, the state liquor board could still approve renewal of the license.

City Manager Stephen Atkins said that since Jan. 1, there have been 73 possession / consumption citations filed against underage patrons of The Field House, a statistic several councilors frowned at.

"I'm willing to make a denial ... I think 73 people underage is a pretty heavy indictment," Horowitz said. "I don't need the board to tell me I can vote to deny the renewal."

Kubby added her concern about alcohol consumption by patrons under 18.

"It's important to know how many violations are under 18; 19- to 20-year-olds don't bother me that much," she said.

At press time, the Council had not yet voted on the renewal.

Aikman ahead of schedule

Denne H. Freeman
Associated Press

AUSTIN, Texas — The ball was wobbly and overthrown so the receiver had to make a lunging one-handed catch.

No this wasn't All-Pro Michael Irvin with the acrobatic, fingertip grab. It was injured Troy Aikman, who doesn't act like he had back surgery on June 19.

Aikman is so far ahead of his expected rehabilitation pace that he has coach Jimmy Johnson shaking his head and doctors worried the Cowboys' Super Bowl MVP is going too far too fast.

"He's amazed me," Johnson said. "He's looking really good."

The antsy Aikman already has set a tentative date for his playing comeback. It's Aug. 21 against the Houston Oilers in the Alamodome.

He's working like everyone forgot he threw four touchdown passes in the Super Bowl and got $50,000 for saying "I'm going to Disneyland."

Early in the morning he's up, practicing his backpedal in a harness and tossing a medicine ball. The harness helps Aikman rebuild his back muscles.

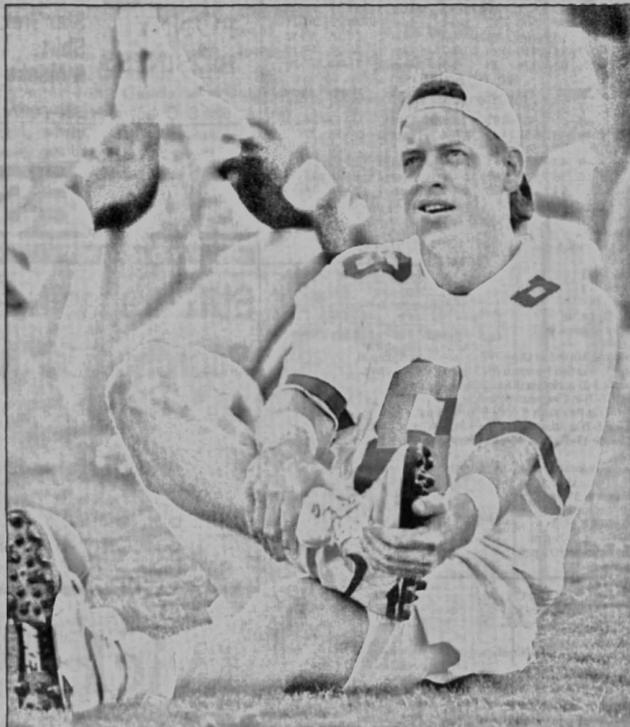

Then he's out on the field making longer passes each day. He's already up to 30 yards with a tight spiral. Worried trainers caution him not to cut loose with 50 yard throws.

"I can throw the ball 30 to 35 yards no problem," Aikman said. "The back feels good. Every day in my rehab I do more."

Aikman said he had feared the herniated disc in his back was a ticking bomb.

"It had been wearing down over a period of years and when I did those squats with the weights it pushed things over the edge," he said. "At first I thought the problem was muscular. But it sure wasn't. Jay Novacek had this same operation four years ago and he seems fine. I don't want long-term problems because I want a normal life after I get out of football."

Dallas Cowboys quarterback Troy Aikman stretches with the team during morning workouts Tuesday in Austin, Texas. It's the first day Aikman has suited up.

Edward's University, where the boredom of two-a-day practices drags on. "Frustrating," he said. "It's frustrating."

Aikman hopes to begin practicing with the team following a London exhibition game against Detroit Aug. 8. He'll be in California working out under the watchful eye of the doctors who operated on him.

"There's been no pain so I'm encouraged," he said. "I plan to play in the last preseason game and possibly the one before that."

What drives Aikman is his experience two years ago when he was injured and Steve Beuerlein took control of the team in the playoffs.

"Watching someone else quarterback this team isn't fun for me," Aikman said. "I've lived through that experience."

Aikman then took off to run on a treadmill.

Run, Troy, run. He'll keep running until he's out on the field with the team in RFK Stadium on Sept. 6, starting against the Washington Redskins. "I'll be there," he said.

Pittsburgh choice may choose snakes

Associated Press

If Chad Brown doesn't play football this year, there's always the snake business.

Snakes? Brown, you see, breeds and sells snakes. Clearly, he is not the conventional draft choice.

In any case, he is threatening to sit out the season unless the Pittsburgh Steelers come up with more money.

On Tuesday, the Steelers signed first-round draft pick Deon Figures, a college teammate of Brown at Colorado. That leaves Brown, a linebacker chosen in the second round, as the only unsigned player among the Steelers' 10 draft picks.

Brown said his threat isn't a negotiating ploy. He and his partner own about 100 snakes, some worth as much as $5,000. They breed and sell snakes to pet shops and other breeders.

"This year my partner and I will make about $160,000 if things go well," Brown said. "If things don't go well, we'll make $80,000 to $100,000."

Brown plans to continue breeding snakes even if he signs with Pittsburgh.

"I'm not trying to use it as leverage or anything," he said. "It's just that I'm not going to be broke if I don't play for the Steelers this year."

Bills
John Parrella doesn't figure to go AWOL again. His father wouldn't hear of it. The Buffalo Bills' second-round draft pick said Tuesday he decided a day earlier to go home to Grand Island, Neb., to see his father, who has a history of heart problems.

Parrella said he called from Toledo, Ohio — about 3½ hours from the Bills' camp at Fredonia, N.Y. — to see how his father was doing. That was the end of the trip.

"I'm not going to say on the air what he said to me," said Parrella, a defensive lineman from Nebraska.

"He's probably not the first guy to leave training camp and come back," Bills coach Marv Levy said.

Levy would not say how Parrella would be disciplined.

Bengals
Cincinnati signed tight end Tony McGee, a second-round pick from Michigan. No. 1 pick John Copeland, who fired his agent last week, has said he plans to hire another by mid-week. Bengals general manager Mike Brown said that wasn't necessary.

"We have only a certain amount left in our rookie salary pool ... and that's why I don't think there's a significant role for agents in rookie signings under our new system."

Redskins
No. 58 was always popular in Washington. It still is even though Wilber Marshall has moved on to Houston. The new 58 is Carl Banks, who wore that number with the New York Giants before joining the Redskins.

"He's going to bring a quality of leadership to our team that maybe we haven't had in the past," assistant coach Larry Peccatiello said. "Yesterday, he took a young player aside after practice and was working with him on some things. I haven't seen that before during my time with the Redskins."

Cardinals
Offensive tackle Ernest Dye, a 313-pound first-round draft choice, has to learn quickly to move quickly. He got a valuable lesson from linebacker Freddie Joe Nunn, who blew by him on the pass rush.

"He kind of stunned me a little bit," Dye said. Meanwhile, coach Joe Bugel is trying to shape his team without quarterback Timm Rosenbach, whose agent says he is giving up football to raise cattle and take an occasional turn on the rodeo circuit.

"If he shows up at camp, good, and if he doesn't show up at camp, good also, but I'd just like for the kid to tell me what he's decided," Bugel said. "Just a show of professional courtesy."

Dolphins
Miami, which waived Mark Duper because of a surplus of receivers, is suddenly not so deep at the position.

On Sunday, the day before training camp opened, receiver Mike Williams broke a finger in a bicycle accident. On Tuesday, Irving Fryar went down with a strained knee. He is expected to miss up to two weeks, but will not face surgery.

Packers
Mark Clayton, three other wide receivers and a tight end have been slowed by injuries.

Clayton pulled a hamstring. Jack Milling injured his left leg and sustained a concussion. Wideout Louis Clark hurt his hip and Chris Holder, dislocated his thumb. Ed West, who has more experience than the other three reserve tight ends combined, "got a crack on the ankle," coach Mike Holmgren said.

Giants
Coach Dan Reeves would like to talk with AWOL linebacker Pepper Johnson and clear the air. Reeves seemed a little concerned over reports that Johnson was staying away from training camp because he was unhappy over a proposed move from inside linebacker to outside linebacker.

Reeves said that's not the case. "I've said all the time that he's the starting inside linebacker and someone has to beat him out to change that," Reeves said.

GM George Young reported no progress on signing veterans Jumbo Elliott, Dave Meggett, Mike Fox and Corey Miller or draft picks Michael Strahan or Marcus Buckley.

SportsBriefs

LOCAL

Football ticket deadline Aug. 6

The Iowa Athletic Department would like to remind students that Aug. 6 is the deadline for UI students to place their orders for 1993 Hawkeye football season tickets. Orders received after that date will not be guaranteed.

Tickets may be purchased with cash or check in person at the Athletic Ticket Office in Carver-Hawkeye Arena for $48. Students may also purchase one student guest ticket for $120.

UI faculty and staff members may purchase two season tickets at $90, plus a $1 processing fee that covers two tickets.

Season tickets may be picked up beginning Aug. 23 at the Athletic Ticket Office.

For more information, contact the Iowa Athletic Ticket Office at 335-9327 or the Iowa Sports Promotions Office at 335-9431.

Prime Time title on line

The regular season title of the Prime Time Basketball League will be decided tonight when Fitzpatrick's takes on the U of I Credit Union at 7:30 p.m. in the City High new gym. Fitz's comes into the contest at 8-3 and the Credit Union squad sports a 7-4 record.

First National Bank plays Imprinted Sportswear/Goodfellow Printing at 6:00 p.m. in the new gym. Hills Bank plays Nike at 7:30 in City High's old gym. This is the last night of Prime Time regular season play.

The Prime Time tournament begins Friday with games at 6:00 and 7:30.

Sunday the tournament continues with second-round play. One game will be at 6:00 p.m. and two games will follow at 7:30.

BOXING

Lewis rejects deal to fight Bowe

LONDON (AP) — Lennox Lewis, the WBC heavyweight champion, has rejected a deal to fight Riddick Bowe for the undisputed title.

"The deal was $21 million for Bowe and a 50-50 split if the final purse went above $32 million," Frank Maloney, who represents Lewis, said Tuesday. "We declined that, and the Bowe fight won't happen until the summer of 1994."

Lewis was awarded the WBC title last year after Bowe was stripped for failing to make his first defense against the British fighter. Bowe retained the IBF and WBA crowns.

Dan Duva, who has promotional ties with both champions, said Tuesday that Rock Newman, Bowe's manager, made the offer to Lewis' management group.

"Their response was, 'we've made commitments for two fights,'" Duva said.

The fights will be against Frank Bruno, also of Britain, in London in October and against Tommy Morrison at Las Vegas in March, according to Duva.

COLLEGE

Nebraska football down to NCAA limit

LINCOLN, Neb. (AP) — The departure of three scholarship players from the football program this summer helps the University of Nebraska get down to the NCAA limit of 88 scholarship players for the 1993-94 school year, Coach Tom Osborne said.

Charles Green, who was listed as a fourth-string defensive back; Charles Randolph, listed fifth at tight end, and Jim Stiebel, fourth-string offensive guard, have quit the NU team.

"We had no particular problems with any of the players who left," said Osborne. "This will give them a chance to play quickly and maybe play more."

Green, from Ruston, La., and Randolph, from New Orleans, will join former NU scholarship player Robert Smith at Northeast Louisiana University in Monroe, La., The Lincoln Star reported Tuesday.

Stiebel, a 1992 recruit from Belleville, Ill., has left NU but his plans for transferring were unknown, the newspaper reported.

With the transfer of the three players and the loss of Willis Brown, out with a career-ending neck injury last spring, NU will be at the 88 scholarship players limit, Osborne said.

The NCAA lowered the division I scholarship limit from 95 to 88 for the 1993-94 school year.

Blaze evacuates Atlanta stadium

Tom Saladino

Associated Press

ATLANTA — Fire swept through a section of Atlanta-Fulton County Stadium on Tuesday, sending fans and players scurrying for safety as black smoke poured from the burning press box.

The fire in the stadium's middle level started 90 minutes before the Atlanta Braves were to play the St. Louis Cardinals and was put out 45 minutes after it began.

One firefighter was taken to a hospital suffering from heat exhaustion and as many as 10 others were treated on the scene for heat related problems. Remarkably, no other injuries were reported.

A crowd of more than 40,000 was expected, and the few hundred fans who arrived early for the 7:40 p.m. EDT start were evacuated. While Braves management and fire officials decided whether the game could be played safely, fans milled outside the stadium. Finally, the game began at 9:38 p.m.

Joe Torre, manager of the Cardinals, was in the clubhouse when he heard about the fire.

"I just ran out onto the field and looked up and it scared the hell out of me," he said. "I just kept running into the outfield."

Atlanta assistant fire chief Larry Tanner said he thought the fire was caused by an electrical problem.

"If there's any doubt in our mind that there was structural damage, at least that section of the stadium will be isolated completely," Tanner said. "We'll never risk people's lives to play a game."

The fire burned 25 minutes before firefighters could get close enough to pour water on it. Twenty minutes later, it appeared out.

Tanner said five box suites were destroyed and a sixth was heavily damaged. Kasten said he does not believe the 28-year-old stadium sustained structural damage.

Braves president Stan Kasten

The press box at Atlanta-Fulton County Stadium blazes Tuesday. The fire started in a luxury suite near the press box. Braves president Stan Kasten said officials aren't sure what caused the fire, which burned for 45 minutes.

said 2,000 seats were damaged. The scoreboard and lights operated, but not the public-address system. The team was able to broadcast the game on television and radio.

The media were shifted from the pressbox to an adjacent section in the stands.

The fire apparently started in a suite rented by radio station WGST on the third-base side of the press level. Matt Stewart of WGST said no one was in the suite when the fire started at 5:55 p.m.

A loud explosion was heard several minutes after the fire began. Burning debris fell onto the field-level seats, flames shot through the club level and black smoke billowed above the 52,013-seat stadium. Players from both teams stood on the field and watched.

"I couldn't believe it," said Braves outfielder Otis Nixon, who was in the dugout when the fire started. "I just looked up and there was this fire. Then everybody just took off. It was like a 60-yard dash to the outfield. I never saw Bobby (Cox, the Braves manager) run so fast."

Chicago shortstop Jose Vizcaino leaps over Cincinnati's Tim Belcher in attempting a double play in the third inning of the Reds' 8-3 win over the Cubs Tuesday night at Riverfront Stadium. Jeff Branson at first was safe.

Reds end Cubs' streak

Trade talk, not hitters, starting to get Belcher

Associated Press

CINCINNATI — All the trade talk might be getting to Tim Belcher.

For the last two weeks, Belcher has been able to block out the rumors and keep winning. He led the Cincinnati Reds to an 8-3 victory Tuesday that ended the Chicago Cubs' five-game winning streak.

Belcher (9-5) gave up seven hits and three runs in 6½ innings to win for the eighth time in his last nine decisions. But he was a little disappointed he couldn't make it past the seventh, when the Cubs scored a pair of runs to knock him out.

He wondered whether his lack of concentration was due to pitching with a 7-1 lead, or the uncertainty of where he would be pitching in a few weeks. Belcher leads the team in wins and hasn't lost since June 20, but his earned run average has climbed to 4.16.

"I'm not really thrilled with the way I'm pitching," he said. "I'm satisfied with my stuff. But I made mental mistakes in the seventh, and that puts a damper on it for me."

"I've made mental mistakes my last couple of starts that I didn't make earlier in the year. But I wouldn't use that as an excuse."

The Reds have talked to the Chicago White Sox about trading Belcher, a free agent after this season. Belcher has removed some of his belongings from his locker over the last couple of weeks in anticipation of a trade.

He had the luxury of a big lead Tuesday, as the Cubs' pitching staff collapsed for the first time since the All-Star break. Chris Sabo drove in three runs with a bases-loaded single and a double as the Reds went ahead 7-1.

Chicago's season-high winning streak was built on pitching that allowed nine earned runs in the five games. It ended with an uncharacteristically bad outing by Mike Morgan (7-10), who gave up four runs on seven hits in 2½ innings.

"I wasn't throwing the ball very well today," said Morgan, who shut out Colorado last Thursday to start the five-game streak.

"Mike was struggling and Belcher was on his game," manager Jim Lefebvre said. "They scored some runs and that was the end of the story. It just wasn't his night, the Reds took advantage of it, and that's all there was to it."

Joe Oliver's solo homer, his ninth, got the Reds started in the second, and they sent eight batters to the plate for three more in the third.

Steve Buechele hit his seventh homer in the fifth, and the Cubs knocked Belcher out in the seventh with Jose Vizcaino's RBI double and Ryne Sandberg's run-scoring single. Jacob Brumfield's sacrifice fly drove in the Reds' final run in the seventh.

Jerry Spradlin allowed one hit over the final 2½ innings for his second save.

Pirates 2, Astros 1

PITTSBURGH — Different year, different uniform, same old script. Doug Drabek pitches well and the Pittsburgh Pirates win.

There's just one difference — Drabek now pitches for the other guys. He pitched one of his best games of the season but former teammate Randy Tomlin was even better, throwing a four-hitter for the Pirates.

The loss was Drabek's third straight overall and fourth in a row on the road.

"I feel bad for Doug because he's pitched great. You couldn't ask more of a pitcher," Astros catcher Scott Servais said.

The Astros had a hard time handling Tomlin (3-6), who struck out three and walked one in his first complete game since June 7, 1992 against New York.

Drabek gave up two runs on five hits in seven innings but continued to struggle on the road, where he is 3-6 with a 4.24 ERA. He hasn't won away from the Astrodome since June 23. He couldn't even win in Three Rivers Stadium, where he was 17-6 the last two seasons.

Rockies 6, Marlins 3

MIAMI — Andres Galarraga hit a 455-foot home run off Chris Hammond (10-6) and Dante Bichette added a three-run homer to help Colorado break its five-game losing streak and clinch the season series against its expansion rival. The Rockies lead 7-4 with one game remaining today.

Willie Blair (4-7) gave up two runs in five innings and struck out six for his first victory since June 19.

Giants 8, Expos 3

SAN FRANCISCO — Darren Lewis hit a two-run homer, had three hits and scored four runs as San Francisco beat Montreal.

Bill Swift (13-5) worked 6½ innings, allowing seven hits and three runs for the victory.

Expos starter Dennis Martinez (10-7) pitched 5½ innings, allowing nine hits and seven runs.

Will Clark hit a 374-foot solo homer, his ninth, in the fifth inning off Martinez to make it 5-0.

Orioles blank Royals, take 1st

Associated Press

BALTIMORE — Ben McDonald pitched his first career one-hitter and Harold Baines homered and drove in three runs Tuesday night as the Baltimore Orioles took over first place by beating the Kansas City Royals 7-0.

The victory pushed Baltimore ahead of Toronto and New York in the AL East, the first time the Orioles have been in first place this season. The Orioles' seventh victory in their last nine games moved them a season-high 10 games over .500.

The lone hit off McDonald (7-8) came in the fourth inning, when Gary Gaetti lined a clean single to left field. McDonald matched his career-high with nine strikeouts and walked three in his first shutout since July 18, 1992, when he threw his second career two-hitter.

The 6-foot-7 right-hander retired 13 of the last 14 batters in his first complete game of the season and third straight victory. The Royals have been blanked three times this season, twice by the Orioles.

Baltimore took a 1-0 lead in the second inning when Baines hit a 2-2 pitch from David Cone (6-9) over the center-field wall for his seventh home run.

The Orioles sent 10 players to the plate in a six-run eighth.

McDonald has gone 14 straight starts allowing three earned runs or less, dating back to May 11. The last Oriole to accomplish the feat was Jim Palmer in 1972.

White Sox 2, Blue Jays 1

CHICAGO — Frank Thomas' two-run homer in the sixth inning backed the four-hit pitching of Alex Fernandez (12-4), leading Chicago past Toronto.

With the White Sox trailing 1-0 on John Olerud's 18th homer in the second inning, Joey Cora looped a one-out double to center and Thomas hit Juan Guzman's next pitch for his 22nd homer into the left-field bleachers. Guzman is now 7-3.

Mariners 9, Yankees 5

NEW YORK — Ken Griffey Jr. hit a two-run single off Steve Howe during a six-run rally in the seventh inning and also homered, sending Seattle over New York.

Mike Stanley's second grand slam in three days helped the Yankees take a 5-0 lead after five innings. But the Mariners bounced back to end their four-game losing streak and stop New York's four-game winning string.

Dave Fleming (6-1) won his sixth straight decision. Howe (3-4) threw only one pitch and was the loser.

Twins 4, Tigers 3

DETROIT — Shane Mack's two-run homer in the eighth inning broke a tie and lifted Minnesota over Detroit.

Three Twins pitchers held the Tigers to four hits. Jim Deshaies (10-7) allowed two runs on three hits through the first seven innings. Carl Willis pitched a perfect eighth and Rick Aguilera finished up for his 26th save, allowing Cecil Fielder's 25th homer.

Mark Leiter (6-6) took the loss.

Minnesota's Jim Deshaies picked up his 10th win of the season as his Twins beat the Tigers, 4-3.

Indians 9, Athletics 5

CLEVELAND — Carlos Baerga foiled Tony La Russa's new pitching strategy by hitting a grand slam and driving in five runs as Cleveland beat Oakland. The Indians have won four straight overall and 11 of their last 12 at home. Oakland has lost five in a row.

The A's were in the second game of a multiple-pitcher system La Russa installed in hopes of turning their season around. The manager is limiting each of his pitchers to about 50 pitches per game. Starter Mike Mohler fell to 1-2.

Jose Mesa (9-6) won despite allowing four runs and eight hits in five innings.

Red Sox 2, Angels 1

BOSTON — The Red Sox won their fifth straight game as Scott Cooper scored on Scott Fletcher's grounder over the pitcher's mound in the ninth inning to beat California.

Cooper started the ninth with a double off Gene Nelson (0-3) and went to third on John Valentin's sacrifice bunt. Pinch-hitter Mo Vaughn, who sat out the last four games with a sore thigh, was walked intentionally. Fletcher then hit the first pitch over Nelson's head. It was scored a fielder's choice.

Tony Fossas (1-0) pitched both batters he faced in the top of the ninth with a runner on first.

Rangers 5, Brewers 1

ARLINGTON, Texas — Juan Gonzalez hit his 26th homer to tie Barry Bonds for the major-league lead, a three-run shot to highlight a four-run fifth inning.

Kevin Brown (7-6) pitched a five-hitter and struck out a career-high 10 to send the Brewers to their sixth straight loss. It was his eighth complete game of the season.

Gonzalez's homer, a 434-foot shot off Cal Eldred (10-10), scored Julio Franco and Rafael Palmeiro, giving the Rangers their eighth victory in their last 10 games.
