Industrial accident fuels memory prices

Thomas Watkin

When the Sumitomo Chemical Co. in Osaka, Japan, began upping the price of epoxy resins used to encase semiconductors, the price rise hit the electronics industry like an atom bomb.

Although some industry traders speculate a hike in the market could give the industry a much-needed shot in the arm, others are worried the price increases will stifle the growth of the industry.

Watkin, managing editor of the industry journal Web Japan, said the price rise was not going away anytime soon.

FROM THE NEW YORK TIMES

The New York Times

March 9, 1995

WASHINGTON — A strong coalition of advocates and lawmakers has emerged in favor of the Violence Against Women Act, the centerpiece of the Clinton administration's domestic policy agenda, and the majority of Congress is likely to pass the bill this year.

The bill, which has been the subject of intense debate in recent months, has a bill number and is known as the Violence Against Women Act. It is designed to provide a comprehensive approach to addressing domestic violence, sexual assault, and stalking.

The bill was introduced by Senator Ted Kennedy and Representative Bill Pascrell Jr. and is supported by a wide range of organizations, including the National Coalition Against Domestic Violence, the National Organization for Women, and the National Association of Sexual Assault Programs.

The bill includes provisions to increase funding for domestic violence shelters, provide funding for victims' legal services, and strengthen penalties for those who commit domestic violence.

The bill has faced opposition from some members of Congress, particularly those who are concerned about the cost of the bill and the potential for new government programs.

However, the strong support from the advocacy community and lawmakers has made it likely that the bill will pass this year. The bill is expected to be debated in the House of Representatives later this month.

The bill is a significant step forward in addressing the issue of domestic violence, and it is essential that it be passed into law as soon as possible. The advocates and lawmakers involved in the bill have worked hard to ensure that it is a strong and comprehensive piece of legislation.

Their efforts are paying off, and we are hopeful that the bill will be passed into law soon. The issue of domestic violence is one that affects many people across the country, and it is time that we take action to address it.

Thank you to all those who are working tirelessly to ensure that the Violence Against Women Act becomes a reality. Your efforts are making a difference and are helping to create a safer future for all.

Sincerely,

[Your Name]

The debate concerning the merits of returning to college campuses and universities for the purposes of promoting peace or preventing violence is often lost in the shuffle. However, the recent release of a movie titled "Stranger," which opened in theaters nationwide, has reignited the conversation.

"Stranger" is a film that tells the story of a young Muslim convert who becomes involved in a religious fundamentalist movement. The movie examines the effects of this movement on the convert's life, as well as the surrounding community.

The movie has sparked controversy, with many people expressing concern about its portrayal of Islam and Muslims. Some have accused the film of being biased and promoting negative stereotypes.

However, others have praised the movie for raising important questions about the relationship between religion and politics. They argue that the film provides a valuable opportunity for dialogue and understanding.

In conclusion, the debate over the merits of returning to college campuses and universities for the purposes of promoting peace or preventing violence is far from over. "Stranger" is just one of many recent examples of the ongoing conversation. It remains to be seen how this conversation will continue to evolve.
Why were you more apathetic than the typical 20-something? Of course, the answer to this question is that the typical 20-something is not apathetic at all! In fact, it is quite the opposite. The typical 20-something is highly involved in social and political issues. They are likely to vote in elections, participate in protests, and engage in community service. They are also likely to be concerned about their personal health and well-being, and they are actively seeking new experiences and opportunities for personal growth. In short, the typical 20-something is anything but apathetic. So, why were you apathetic? Perhaps it was because you lacked a sense of purpose or direction, or perhaps you were simply not aware of the issues that were important to you. Whatever the reason, it is clear that apathy is not a characteristic of the typical 20-something. If you are feeling apathetic, I encourage you to reflect on your own values and priorities, and to consider how you can become more involved in the issues that are important to you.

Foster, tired of criticism, returns to Steelers’ camp

Associated Press

Bobby Foster returned to the Pittsburgh Steelers on Thursday after missing 29 days of practice in a protracted salary dispute with his team, his agent said.

Foster, who led the AFC with 1,283 rushing yards in 1992, has two years remaining on a six-year contract signed in 1990 that will pay him $600,000 in base salary this season. His agent, Nate Marrinelli, has said Foster was unhappy with the lack of playing time.

Foster was credited with bringing the bad guy all the way up to the line. Under the new NFL, a player agreement that makes protracted salary disputes with an owner a no-no, Foster’s return could be a test of both a player’s right to return to practice and a condition of a player’s return.

Foster said he wasn’t looking for a deal similar to the one Yearwood, a former Pittsburgh quarterback who was signed last year to a deal with Buffalo. "But there is no deal there, by the way. That would be $600,000. Foster’s case, but each case will be heard on its own condition of a player’s return.

Foster said he was making a deal similar to the Yearwood one. "I do that kind of thing," Foster said. "I make deals all the time."

"I don’t know how it works, if it works at all. However, I knew they were going to bring me back, and I was going to do my best to get off the line."

The return of Foster has been a relief for the Steelers, who are preparing for the start of training camp on Tuesday.

The Mets and charging the Express

I want to work for the New York Mets. And just to show you the lie that’s in play, I’ve done fine long ago.

Being late seems to have been the Mets’ greatest sin. It certainly isn’t playing baseball.

John Shipley

The Mets have announced that they will not renew the contracts of bench coach Tom Hume and hitting coach Gary Carter.

Both coaches were fired after the team finished last in the National League East with a record of 73-89.

The firing comes amid speculation that the Mets may be looking to bring in new managers and front office officials this offseason.

The Mets have struggled in recent years, missing the playoffs in 2019 and 2020, and finishing fourth in the NL East each of those seasons.

The team currently has a 56-66 record and is in sixth place in the NL West.

The firing of Hume and Carter is expected to pave the way for new managerial and coaching hires, with some reports suggesting the team may be considering candidates with experience in the major leagues.
