Arafat, Rabin prepare to sign agreement

Success of peace accord depends on Israeli aid, PLO's credibility

Ruth Sinai
Associated Press

WASHINGTON — Yasser Arafat and Yitzhak Rabin, wary partners in peace after decades of enmity, stood ready to reshape the Middle East with the ceremonial signing of an agreement that will set the stateless Palestinian people on the road to independence.

Arafat: hopeful Rabin: optimistic guerrilla leader who now hopes to free them from Israeli rule, today's signing of an Israel-PLO accord on self-rule for Palestinians marks a moment of hope and trepidation.

"I ... am hopeful that this will lead to peace," a beaming Arafat declared Sunday after stepping off a plane at Andrews Air Force Base outside Washington. It marked the PLO leader's first trip to the United States in 19 years.

Along with President Clinton, Arafat and Rabin will share a stage on the South Lawn of the White House before 3,000 guests — former Presidents Carter and Bush, dozens of foreign ministers, and legions of Americans, Arabs and Jews who have tried to make peace in the Middle East — and millions of TV viewers around the world who will watch the ceremony live.

The prospect of the encounter between Rabin and Arafat, sworn enemies until three days ago when they signed a mutual recognition pact between Israel and the PLO, generated intense speculation and disbelief Sunday amid the frenzied preparations for the signing.

"An awful lot of taboos are being broken in the last few days," said Secretary of State Warren Christopher. "We're all blinking our eyes at how much is new." Christopher will witness the signing along with Russian Foreign Minister Andrei Kozyrev.

The document will likely be signed by Israeli Foreign Minister Shimon Peres and Arafat's top aide, Mahmoud Abbas. White House workers were dusting off the desk used to ink the 1979 peace agreement between Israel and JERUSALEM — Israel has invested heavily in its longtime nemesis Yasser Arafat, betting he can set up a smoothly running, autonomous government even though the PLO is bitterly divided and scrimping for cash.

That may be asking too much of Arafat, but giving a helping hand poses a dilemma for Israel.

If Israel gives too much, Arafat may look like a dupe and lose credibility among Palestinians at a time when he needs all the friends he can get.

If Israel stands aloof, chaos may overwhelm the Palestinians and the peace accord could blow up — in Israel's face as well as Arafat's.

"It is in Israel's interest that Arafat succeed," said Asher Sussner, an expert on Israeli-Palestinian relations at Tel Aviv University.

Israeli officials have made it clear that they would like to share intelligence information with Arafat's police force, which will draw on Palestinian fighters from around the Arab world.

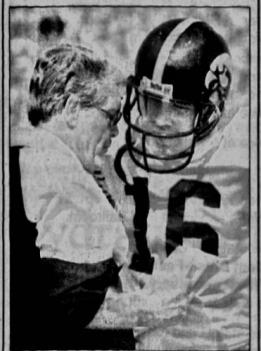

Israel's military is also anxious to brief Palestinians about the day-to-day running of government

9 missing after refugee sailboat capsizes

MIAMI (AP) — Nine Haitians were missing Sunday after their sailboat capsized during a nighttime rescue attempt in rough seas off Haiti's northern coast, the U.S. Coast Guard reported. Thirty-seven were saved.

The 35-foot boat was foundering in 4- to 6-foot seas when it was spotted Saturday night about 12 miles northwest of Haiti's Ile de la Tortue, said Coast Guard Chief Petty Officer Joe Dye in Miami.

The Coast Guard later learned that the boat had left Cap-Haitien, Haiti, for Miami several days before with 46 people aboard, Dye said. It had been adrift at sea for at least two days, he said.

The cutter Mohawk launched two small rescue boats, and a Coast Guard officer and Immigration and Naturalization agent boarded the boat, Dye said.

IOWA KEEPS ROLLING

Hawkeyes give fans 11 straight victories

Terry Collins
The Daily Iowan

Thousands of Hawkeye fans traveled hundreds of miles for the big intrastate football clash Saturday and left chanting "11," signifying the number of consecutive wins Iowa has over rival Iowa State.

Not only did the Iowa faithful have to deal with the opposition wearing those new all-red uniforms, but they had to endure long traffic delays upon entering Cyclone Stadium.

Hawkeye fan Vicky Brunscheen of Wyoming, Iowa, said all of the preplanning and hassle to attend the game was well worth it.

"I thought the game was great, one of the best played games between the schools in years," she said. "I think all of the fans had fun."

Betsie Brown of Churdan, Iowa, agreed with Brunscheen.

STUDENT DOLLARS FOR FLOOD DAMAGES?

Student governments join to oppose possible tuition increases

Megan Penick
The Daily Iowan

The student governments at the three regent universities have collaborated in a joint resolution opposing state tuition and student fee increases.

Tracy Kasson, executive director for United Students of Iowa, a group that lobbies state and national government on issues involving universities, said the institutions are taking a more pragmatic approach to opposing the tuition increase.

"In principle, we hate to see an increase in tuition," she said, "but we'd like to see them stick to the 3.4 percent ceiling."

The "ceiling" is created by the Higher Education Price Index. The HEPI scale takes into account inflation levels and the current price index to establish a ceiling on tuition increases. According to the current HEPI level, tuition should be increased at a rate of no more than 3.4 percent.

Matt Ashford, UI campus director of USI, said state university tuition has increased annually at the regent universities for the past 13 years and the increase has always exceeded HEPI levels.

"If there is a tuition increase, we would like it to be at least at or below the Higher Education Price Index," he said.

"We feel if we go in with a unified voice for the students, we would have a more valid argument."

Micah Hobart, UIA vice president

UI Student Association President John Gardner and Vice President Micah Hobart decided to collaborate with the other regent universities last week in an attempt to keep tuition increases at a minimum.

"John and I spoke with USI Executive Director Tracy Kasson last week and also had communication with the ISU and UNI student body presidents," Hobart said.

This type of unification has been attempted in the past, but for varying reasons the universities have always made split decisions, Hobart said.

"We all three have distinct needs, but we're all affected by the regents' decision," he said. "We feel if we go in with a unified

SITUATION BEGAN WITH HEATED DISPUTES

Factors leading to shooting death heard in 1st day of murder trial

Tory Brecht
The Daily Iowan

Drugs, guns and money provided the volatile mix leading to the shooting death of 18-year-old Ryan Wagehoft, witnesses and attorneys said Friday in the opening of the first-degree murder trial of Kevin Williams and Michael Coleman.

Wagehoft was shot in the trailer home he shared with his friend Ryan Henry on the night of March 19. Henry, a small-time marijuana dealer, was the intended victim of the shooting, prosecuting attorney Anne Lahey said.

Attorneys for Williams, 30, and Coleman, 20, said the tragedy occurred because of intensifying disputes between Williams and Henry, including threats to the safety of Williams and his wife, until the situation finally came to a fatal conclusion.

The fate of Williams and Coleman, who are both black, rests in the hands of an all-white jury. The conflict between Henry and Williams centered on a debt of $240 owed by Williams to Henry for one ounce of marijuana.

Despite repeated efforts to collect the money, including following Williams into McDonald's and coming to his Iowa City apartment demanding the money, Henry testified he never received payment.

Henry testified that during the meeting at Williams' apartment, he said, "The problem is out of my hands. I'm going to have to tell the others your name and address."

The "others" Henry referred to were dealers further up the drug chain. Henry gave Williams two weeks to come up with the money.

Attorneys for Williams claimed this was a threat by Henry, causing Williams to fear for himself and his wife.

Henry said on the stand it was not an ultimatum but "motivation."

On the night of the 19th, Henry, Wagehoft and seven others were at the trailer — some smoking marijuana, others drinking alcohol — watching the NCAA basketball tournament when the phone rang.

Henry testified that in a heated exchange on the phone, Williams said he was going to come over.

"I told him OK," Henry said. Other witnesses testified that racial slurs, including someone in the background saying "We're going to kill you nigger," were shouted while Henry spoke on the phone with Williams.

Henry testified that after the call, he took three golf clubs from his room and placed them behind the front door for protection.

Robert Schlegel, one of Williams' attorneys, said his client decided to confront Henry in an attempt to resolve the situation.

"He wanted to arrange payment

Religion professor enlightens students

Giving people the opportunity to understand other cultures is Robert Baird's job. Iowa City is his melting pot.

Maria Hickey
The Daily Iowan

The congested streets of Old Delhi, India, come immediately to Professor Robert Baird's mind whenever he joins the packs of students crossing the road outside Gilmore Hall. A comparison most people probably wouldn't draw, but the UI religion professor has had plenty of first-hand experience.

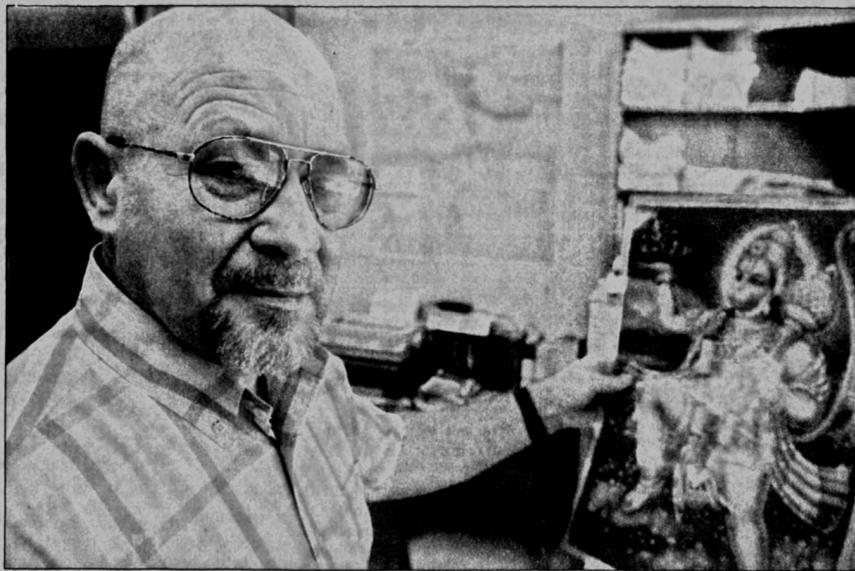

Baird, who has taught here for 26 years, has traveled throughout Asia and extensively in India. He tries to use his knowledge of Eastern culture to enlighten students about people who are different from themselves.

"Just for the moment I would like students to get inside the skin of other people," Baird said.

His classes such as Living Religions of the East give students an opportunity to learn about people that they come in contact with every day. A simple walk down the streets of Iowa City confirms that Eastern culture is present in the Heartland. Baird said that a Hindu temple sitting in the middle of a field outside of Aurora, Ill., is a reminder of cultures within our own.

"This isn't an idle exercise for understanding the exotic that's halfway around the world," Baird said. "They live right next door."

Baird was first exposed to Eastern religion as a college student but didn't become serious about it until his junior year. He spent three years in theological school, a year getting his master's degree and then came to the UI for his doctorate. "I liked what I was doing so I decided to keep doing it until they stopped me," he said. "I'm still here."

Twenty-six years have seen the university put much more emphasis on Asian culture classes, Baird said. Today China, Japan and India are the three nations which are covered to the greatest extent, and Baird said he hopes that even more Asian countries will be covered in the future.

"Every once in a while a student will come up and ask 'Are you going to cover Korea?' and I have to say no," Baird said. "It's not a value judgment on my part. It's simply that we have only so much time in a semester." As a religion professor, Baird said, it is important to keep one's own beliefs out of the classroom, especially when working for an institution and teaching students who believe in "everything and nothing." With training and effort though, it hasn't been difficult.

"I take very seriously the principle that I ought not to use my position at the front of the class to impose my personal views on people," Baird said.

Instead, what he wants most for students is that they value the understanding of other people.

"My goal is to help people understand people that are different from them," he said. "India is a good case study in that regard."

He has traveled to the country three times since he first studied religion and law there for three months in 1966. When he returned in 1991, Baird found that some significant differences had been mixed in with ancient traditions.

"As soon as my foot hit the sidewalk, I was aware that they had been multiplying over a 20-year period at a phenomenal rate," he said.

Baird also found that the women's movement had become much more apparent. When he first met one young Indian family, the wife had been very demure, rarely speaking and always standing behind her husband. On his return visit, the same woman invited him into her home and told him of the changes that occurred while he had been away.

The changes were obvious to Baird, who explained that her actions spoke louder than words.

"I thought, 'I'm seeing it. Just the fact that you brought me into the living room and are telling me what is on your mind,'" he said.

Baird plans to travel to India again for five months in May. Now that his family is grown, he has much more time to involve himself in his studies and the university.

"People sometime say we're not in the real world," Baird said. "This is my real world. I've always been a university student or a professor."

FORGET HOTDOGS AND APPLE PIE

Chili: Official U.S. food?

If Congress passes the chili bill then this truly American food might win some much needed recognition.

Richard Rosenblatt
Associated Press

NEW YORK — To aficionados of jalapenos, habaneros and other incendiary ingredients, the hottest bill in Congress isn't President Clinton's health-care package — it's the chili bill.

H.J. Res. 337, introduced in an effort to have chili named "America's Official Food," has been simmering on the government's back burner since it was concocted by former New Mexico congressman Manuel Lujan in the mid-1980s.

Monday, the International Chili Society renews its effort with a 23-city "Chili Across America" tour starting at the Capitol Building in Washington and led by a motorized stagecoach with a 300-pound copper chili pot on top.

Why should chili be named America's official food? Why not hot dogs, hamburgers or apple pie?

Jim West, executive director of the ICS, has the answer.

"Chili was created in America by Americans initially, on cattle drives of the 1870s when chuckwagon cooks would make chili with beef and spices for the cowboys," West said. "Because there was no refrigeration, chili was one meal they could cook the daylights out of and it would still be healthy to eat."

"Now you can find chili anywhere from Caribou, Maine, to San Diego, from Bellingham, Wash., to Key West, Fla."

The tour, sponsored by Hyundai Motor America, also will raise money for the American Red Cross, with ICS members pledging $10 for each of the 2,800 miles the stagecoach travels.

The final stop on the chili trail will be Reno, Nev., site of the World Championship Chili Cookoff Oct. 2-3. More than 100 winners from state and regional chili cookoffs have qualified for the event, which carries a first prize of $25,000.

The championship has come a long way since the so-called original cookoff between Wick Fowler and H. Allen Smith in 1967 at the Chisos Oasis Saloon in Terlingua, Calif.

That cookoff was declared a tie after one judge voted for Fowler, the other voted for Smith and the third, according to ICS board member Jonathan Levine, got drunk and forgot to vote.

MORE FLOOD-RELATED PROBLEMS

Hydraulic research lab's projects halted due to water

The problem is originated by the possible flooding of the basements of the lab, which are home to a towing tank.

Associate Professor Fred Stern said. "The windows are below river level."

Glass block windows were installed in the basement during the 1950s when the river wasn't expected to ever rise as high as it has. The current flood levels have caused water to leak into the towing tank and has threatened to break the windows, warranting deducted in the tank, hasn't lost any funding, but researchers have lost valuable time.

Stern is questioning if he will be able to attend a conference of the American Society of Mechanical Engineering, where he is scheduled to speak about research conducted in the tank.

"I'm not sure if we'll have enough data," said Stern. "We're so behind as Stern said, to protect against a rapid rise in the water level.

When operative, the institute will continue its two-year experiments on ship boundary layers and the structure of turbulence on a wave-free surface.

The UI Institute of Hydraulic Research, a facility that relies on large quantities of water for experiments, is ironically unable to continue its research due to the flooding of the Iowa River.

The main problem stems from the possible flooding of the basements of the lab, which hold the institute's towing tank. The basements and the towing tank underwent $250,000 in renovation last year.

Ill. town votes to move after flood damage

Associated Press

VALMEYER, Ill. — Residents of Valmeyer have decided that retreat is the better part of valor.

The town was devastated by Mississippi River flooding this year, and instead of rebuilding, residents there have decided to pick up the town and put it in a safer place.

Valmeyer Mayor Dennis Knobloch estimated that about three of every five of the town's 346 homes sustained damage of at least 50 percent during weeks of high water.

Of 239 ballots tabulated Saturday, Knobloch said about 66 percent voted to move. He said an exact tally was not available. There are about 900 residents.

Knobloch said town officials will begin site planning and land acquisition processes immediately.

SHUTTLE LAUNCHES SATELLITE

Associated Press

After four tries Discovery finally blasts off for space

Marcia Dunn
Associated Press

CAPE CANAVERAL, Fla. — On its fourth try, Discovery roared away Sunday with five astronauts who dispatched an experimental communications satellite after overcoming last-minute trouble.

They were jubilant to be in space at last.

"Hey Houston, I gotta tell ya, you've never seen five happier guys up here," Commander Frank Culbertson told Mission Control shortly after reaching orbit. "It's been a long time coming."

The astronauts accomplished one of their chief jobs when they ejected the Advanced Communications Technology Satellite. They had to delay its release by 1 1/2 hours, or one orbit, because of a temporary drop in communications from the ground to Discovery.

"Excellent work by the whole team. Good show," Mission Control's Gregory Harbaugh told the crew.

An attached rocket fired less than an hour later and propelled the satellite from Discovery's 184-mile altitude to an orbit 22,300 miles high at the farthest ends. A motor firing Tuesday should circularize the satellite's elliptical orbit.

Discovery's flight had been delayed five times since mid-July for equipment failures, payload concerns and even a meteor shower. Two of the three earlier count-downs had been halted in the final 19 seconds.

This time — countdown No. 4 — everything worked and Discovery rose promptly at 7:45 a.m. from its seaside launch pad.

Two engine pump sensors failed on the way up, but that posed no problem since identical sensors worked fine, said launch director Bob Sieck. If one of those sensors had failed prior to launch, however, it would have meant another aborted launch.

DEVELOPING NATIONS A MAJOR CONCERN

200,000 mothers die from illegal abortions

Nick Ludington
Associated Press

WASHINGTON — As many as 200,000 women die each year from unsafe, illegal abortions, mostly in the developing world, a population research group said Sunday.

"Of the estimated 50 million induced abortions worldwide each year, more than one-third are illegal and nearly half appear to take place outside any health system," concluded a report by Population Action International.

The report contends that limits on voluntary access to safe, affordable abortion are a key cause of abortion-related death and injury.

The group said that Romania under former dictator Nicolai Ceausescu — who imposed a ban on abortion and contraceptives to increase the national birth rate — did not experience a higher birth rate. But there was a doubling of deaths of childbearing mothers, with 87 percent attributed to illegal abortions, said the report. After the ban was lifted, the number of maternal deaths fell by half.

Though early induced abortion, properly performed, is very safe, "Unsafe abortion is a major cause of maternal death worldwide and has a devastating public health impact," said the report.

"Estimates of abortion-related deaths are imprecise, but range from less than 100,000 to as many as 200,000 deaths each year," it said.

The report said that even with contraceptive methods widely available, at least one out of five women would face an unplanned pregnancy.

CYNICISM

Sudden political sanity

It's always a bit startling when people previously believed to be insane or incompetent suddenly offer a reasonable solution to the very problems caused by their presence. The Declaration of Principles, to be signed in Washington today by Israel and the PLO, is a good example. President Clinton's initiative to reduce the size and waste of the federal government is another. Unfortunately (though not unwisely), we tend to regard with fear and suspicion the ostensibly generous actions of madmen, soldiers and political sluts so that when they finally make a sincere move to end or even mitigate the misery they have inspired, we instinctively reject it. Modern cynicism is a wonderful thing, but it is not a comprehensive ideology. It should not be allowed to impede the few good things that can still be accomplished in the political world.

Unfortunately (though not unwisely), we tend to regard with fear and suspicion the ostensibly generous actions of madmen, soldiers and political sluts so that when they finally make a sincere move to end or even mitigate the misery they have inspired, we instinctively reject it.

The unexpectedly rational attempt by Israel and the PLO to make peace is an unequivocally positive thing. While the details will be endlessly debated and complicated, the spirit of the moment signals the slow demise of hostilities made increasingly absurd by the apparent inevitability of their continuation. The people of the Middle East who would have the war go on are incapable of imagining a state of peace. In demanding greater concessions from the other side now and in rejecting outright the accord before them, opponents of the Declaration of Principles are encouraging the perpetuation of division and pain in a region numbed long ago by a fruitless war. Similarly, though less violently, comfortable pundits in the United States have been disparaging Bill Clinton's plans to "reinvent" the federal government. It is not entirely comforting to imagine a government operating by the same ruthless techniques that sustain competition between obnoxious corporations, but then again, it could not be measurably worse. Like the conflict in Israel, the problems of fat, sloppy bureaucracy will not disappear until someone risks failure to eliminate them. Clinton will fail absolutely if he can't find the support his reforms require. It is worth temporarily suspending our passive American disbelief to discover whether change really is possible.

Most of the time skepticism is the only logical approach to political reform. Overly enthusiastic cynics, however, can be as damaging to progressive action as misguided government policies. They should be willing to resign their offensive positioning if the outcome of something as significant as the Declaration of Principles or Clinton's federal reduction strategy is uncertain. Rather than disturbing the processes with threats of violence and / or failure, everyone should strive to ensure their success. Or not. I'm a cynic, too.

LETTERS

Mistaken perceptions on smoking

To the Editor:
Tom Hudson's column (Sept. 3, DI) makes it clear that he does not understand what he is risking by smoking. The statistic that every minute smoking takes a minute off your life is misleading. People die of lung cancer and others become invalids for many years because of emphysema, years that could have been healthy and happy. "Smoking takes off the worst years of life — the ones at the end" is very wrong. Many people live full, active, healthy and enjoyable lives in their 70s and 80s. It is not a question of living in a nursing home or dying, it is a question of living a happy and healthy life or being dead or incapacitated.

Young people often mistakenly believe that while they are young, they cannot die, and that when they are no longer young, they might as well be dead. Both of these are very wrong. When young people truly understand what they are risking, I think they will choose not to smoke. The benefits do not outweigh the risks.

Margaret Kleinfeld
associate professor,
mathematics dept.

It affects everyone

To the Editor:
In Tom Hudson's Viewpoints column (Sept. 3, DI), he ends his story by saying, "Smoking, and any other bad habit, takes off the worst years of life — the ones at the end." This seems to summarize the entire message of this piece. "I am going to die anyway, so..." Why should one assume that the end of one's life has to be so terrible? By taking care of my health now, I am preparing for a comfortable life in my old age. I certainly acknowledge that there are things that one cannot control in regards to one's future, but avoiding health risks is something we all can do. Smoking doesn't just affect the smoker — it affects everyone who is unfortunate enough to be in the near vicinity of the smoke. If Tom wants to smoke, fine — but have him do so in a locked room... alone. Those of us who have chosen to adhere to intelligent medical advice are looking forward to enjoying our geriatric years. Have fun on that lung machine, Tom.

Editors, Nazis and the First Amendment

I remember a few words of wisdom I was offered soon after I was given this job: Choose your battles.

So I chose one. I've learned that being editor means basically two things: freedom and responsibility. The two go hand in hand: whenever that freedom is threatened, that responsibility is to fight for it.

Right now I feel that freedom is being threatened.

You may have read a column titled "Is this a case of murder or justifiable homicide?" in the DI Monday, Aug. 30. It was written by David Mastio, that guy with a column today over to your right. In case you haven't, the main point of it was that the killing of doctors who perform third-trimester abortions is OK.

As expected, this created quite a controversy. The response — including a barrage of letters to the editor, phone calls and media attention — has been overwhelming.

Personally, I find David Mastio's viewpoint reprehensible, but that's irrelevant. At issue here is the right of this publication to print such an opinion, and in defending it for the last two weeks, we've taken a lot of flak.

I'm hearing a lot of people say that politically correct speech should be valued above free speech.

Never. A slightly disturbing postcard of support I received from an anti-gun control, anti-fascist, pro-life, Jewish conservative Iowan who uses Hitler as a gun-control poster child (as far as I can tell) makes a relevant point, "It is now you learn how maliciously intolerant contemporary liberals are of an opposing belief."

But most of the response has been in protest.

My favorite was an unsigned letter addressed to David Mastio care of "The Neo-Nazi Tabloid, a.k.a. The Daily Iowan." We have it posted on the newsroom door. "You are nothing but a right-wing, Hitler-loving un-American Nazi son-of-a-bitch, aren't you?"

What can I say? We aim to please.

At times it seems we can't do much of anything without giving someone a fit. Take, for example, the lighthearted UI-ISU rivalry story we ran on our front page Friday. One loud and angry woman called to ask if we were trying to "stir up more violence" and demanded the reporter write a public apology to those "poor Iowa State kids" he was poking fun at. I tried futilely to explain to her the satiric tone of the story before she finally told me "You'd better keep your damn mouth shut" and hung up.

If we're getting an angry response to something as innocuous as that, perhaps you can imagine the feedback we got on the Mastio column. The controversy of which we are now in the middle reminds me of a valuable lesson I learned one early December morning a couple of years ago, when I was working as a disc jockey at KRUI radio. By six o'clock that morning at least half a foot of snow had fallen, and I was swamped with anxious callers wanting to know if the university would be canceling classes for the day.

An anonymous caller had phoned earlier to inform me of such a cancellation, though when I tried Jessup Hall to confirm, nobody was there. So I had to tell at least 30 people "no."

Apparently the same guy who tried to fool me also gave KRNA radio a call — only they bought it and advised all of their listeners to stay home for the day. Their blunder made front-page headlines the following day.

Looking back, I now see this as a quintessential example of how the corporate media are sometimes all too willing to tell their audience exactly what they want to hear. Reality is, college newspapers — on a daily basis — run things that would never see the light of day in the commercial media.

So I have to wonder if anyone else would have had the guts to print what we did. Apparently not KGAN-TV or a certain respected columnist from The Des Moines Register.

In a recent on-air editorial, KGAN General Manager Rich Herbst stated his belief that the DI should rethink its policies about what and who it publishes, and said "It too often acts like a student newspaper."

Mr. Herbst, I'm flattered. I suppose I could expect such thinking from an editor, but who, once said "Cash is at the top of my list." (DI, Sept. 1, Page 14A)

Also last week, Donald Kaul of the Register referred to me and some of my colleagues as "The Daily Iowan's (ha-ha) editors." I wonder, when was the last time Mr. Kaul challenged his editors with something that pushed the limits of free speech?

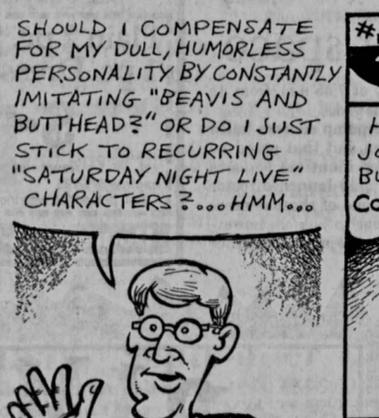

The Daily Iowan's Viewpoints Page will remain an open forum for the free exchange of ideas, and be assured, dear readers, that controversial opinions will continue to be published. This will include unpopular opinions. Opinions that aren't politically correct. Opinions that may be dangerous. Opinions that will challenge your thinking and make you angry. Your opinions.

A word of thanks goes out to the few who have supported me, including a half-dozen former DI editors, Vice President for University Relations Ann Rhodes and several area newspapers that ran editorials supporting our position. It's a relief to know we're not the only ones who still believe in the basic American right of free speech.

And most thanks to those who think I'm wrong: You've made my point by missing it.

Loren Keller is the editor of The Daily Iowan.

Viewpoints: the good, the bad and the human

We have a policy at this newspaper: No Viewpoints Page wars between columnar insiders. This means I can't take after David Mastio with a stick, at least not where you can see me. Policy aside, you should know that I would not choose to take after David with a stick, even if I had the option. You see, God's in His heaven, all's right with the world, and there are more things in heaven and earth, Horatio, than are dreamt of in your philosophy. David Mastio and Kim Painter are friends. I come neither to praise David nor to bury him, but to tell anyone who will listen that he is the sorriest excuse for a purveyor of terror you could possibly imagine.

The many distinct truths of our lives often conflict. I may be a friend of Mastio's, but I have also spent a notable amount of time in recent years concerned for the safety of those affiliated with the Emma Goldman Clinic for Women. Whenever I come into town via Dubuque Street and pass the clinic at night, I check for people who don't belong there. People messing with cars; shadowy figures trying doors. Anything that looks suspicious. I've imagined the worst, and I resent living in the kind of world where such imaginative flight is a necessity rather than a paranoid indulgence.

Yet each day brings fresh news of escalating tension between forces defending abortion access and those determined to stop abortion now. The knowledge that abortion providers are under siege is just that. It is real, not trumped up "PC War" baloney. Knowing that my very real friends face a very real threat is chilling.

Seen in the odd light that infuses such a world, Mastio's column was incendiary. I don't feel that these pages should provide encouragement to any wing nuts out there contemplating the adoption of a Dirty Harry ethos in the culture wars. Alas, such succor for their twisted dreams they may have seen in Mastio's column.

It is at the very least unwise to set forth a stark rationale for bloodshed in discussing issues already heated to temperatures that could wilt tungsten. Abortion access is a tangle of issues — some of the toughest society will ever face. Ethical, social, civil rights, feminist, religious, moral and humane concerns frequently spar one-on-one. When blended into the highly combustible mixture they become in relation to abortion, society hardly knows how to untangle them — we only know the whole thing could blow up in our faces at any moment as we try. It is an appalling form of cultural vulnerability analogous to a collective attempt to defuse a bomb. We simply can't know when the next explosion will occur. Given this fact, those with ongoing media access should assume a special level of responsibility to avoid lighting the short fuses that could eventually make for the next blast.

Whenever I come into town via Dubuque Street and pass the clinic at night, I check for people who don't belong there. I resent living in the kind of world where such imaginative flight is a necessity rather than a paranoid indulgence.

That said, Mastio followed the logic he set for himself with consistency. If he believes that a third-trimester fetus isn't a fetus at all, but is fully and undeniably that much more bonded-to-humanity being we call a baby, then he may very well deduce a moral obligation to pull a Winchester from the rack whenever he's alerted to the presence of a doctor who aborts at that phase.

This is precisely the type of reasoning that has always led me to observe that those who adopt it have reneged on their part of the social contract. In fact, the mad desire for such hare-brained consistency — the "place for everything and everything in its place" approach to a moral philosophy of life — is not the bedrock of decent civilizations some would have us believe, but rather the first banana peel on a slippery slope to a cultural ethics driven by the lowest common denominator.

It doesn't take a moral giant to follow sound logical steps straight to the bottom of the ethical barrel. A chip could do as much, and quite happily pull the trigger of the gun that waits at the end of his chain of reasoning. We should expect much better of human beings.

The question must be asked and answered with a resounding "No." Can there be such a thing as an ethical discussion with the stated objective of pinpointing the people we are morally obligated to murder? Of course not. To conduct that dialogue is to presuppose that murder can be ethical. We have never supposed that, which is why those who know say "War is hell," not "War is ethical." The day we embrace an ethics predicated on killing is the day we sign off on our own death warrants.

That individuals may feel compelled to take such a dire step as killing, one that plunged them immediately into the category of outlaw, and strips them of the esteem of their peers, is regrettable enough if we just leave it alone for what it is: high tragedy. Whether the victims of such murders are villains or saints is not for us to determine. Our tendency to make such determinations must not be mistaken for either the miraculous courage of the hero nor the mundane cowardice of the intimidator. It is simply an example of human frailty, a frailty so high we can't get over it, so low we can't get under it, and so big we can't get around it — even on our editorial pages, where it has every right to exist for all to ponder.

Loving lesbian better than bureaucrats

Since the 1960s, a quiet but growing movement has been stealing across the legal landscape. At first, its goals were modest and fit in with mainstream American ideas like allowing children's best interests to be a more important factor in determining custody in divorce cases. What it has become, however, is a bureaucratic monster of epic proportions that has become an imminent threat to every parent's rights.

The "children's rights" movement has become ubiquitous. It has its own bureaucracy, the Child Protective Services, in nearly every town and state with incredible police powers. It has its own special interest group in Washington.

Last week, the "children's rights" movement claimed its latest victim. Sharon Bottoms was declared an "unfit" parent because she is a lesbian and has admitted to the heinous crime of oral sex, a felony in Virginia. Sharon Bottoms was stripped of her parental rights by the state because her mother, Kay Bottoms, believes that the child in question might not be able to differentiate between men and women after growing up in a lesbian household. Not one shred of credible evidence, scientific or otherwise, was produced to substantiate this claim.

I am no fan of gay rights. I don't believe homosexuals belong in the military, nor do I believe that they should be allowed to adopt children. I also loathe that pathetic, irrational, ill-conceived drive called the "right to privacy," that eventually led to Roe vs. Wade. However, this is not a case about any of those things. This is a case about Sharon Bottoms' right to be presumed innocent until PROVEN guilty. Unfortunately, 30 years of advocacy by self-appointed "children's rights" lawyers has resulted in this basic premise of U.S. law being thrown out with the bath water.

All too often this has become the standard procedure for legal actions against parents. Last year, more than 100,000 children were stripped from the arms of their parents prior to anything but a cursory investigation or even with only an anonymous complaint. More than 75 percent of these cases were found to be without factual basis. Many of the children who it was found were not being abused were only returned to their parents after months of litigation and thousands of dollars in legal fees.

Often the families that this occurs to are destroyed in the process. When stories get into the press many parents have lost their jobs, been asked to leave their churches and even assaulted on the streets. Sometimes relations between the parents are destroyed because of doubts about their partners' innocence. When these tensions result in divorce, there is no home or family for the child to return to.

In one case, a girl was raped in her own home. For months the police investigated and could not find the perpetrator. During this time the victim was in therapy with a psychiatrist who came to the conclusion that her father raped her. Over a period of months this mental health professional badgered the child into accusing her father. Immediately, Child Protective Services took the child into custody. The police investigated the child's father and found no evidence that he had committed the crime; his semen didn't match that of the perpetrator, he had a dozen witnesses as to his whereabouts and the fingerprints on the window used to enter the house didn't match either. Still, the Child Protective Services would not relinquish custody of the child. Only after it was revealed by a private investigator that the psychiatrist was involved in more than a dozen cases of child molestation where children recanted their original testimony and accused their fathers did the CPS agree to reconsider the case. The family was reunited more than four years after the original rape with a debt of nearly a quarter million dollars and no closer to finding the real rapist.

In a city not that far from Iowa City, a girl told the police that her mother had attacked her with a hammer. Immediately the government stepped in and took custody of the teen. During the next week government officials interviewed all of the neighbors and the mother's co-workers, strongly implying that they had proof of the attack and were going to prosecute. At the end of the week the mother was informed that the police had completed the investigation and found no evidence of abuse. Later, when the mother asked the local Child Protective Services office to return custody of the child to her, their response was "Why? So you can beat her some more?" They then denied having authority to release the child. The mother later found out that the CPS delivered her child to her ex-husband, in another state, even though he did not have custody.

Our society is struggling with the devastating impact of the decline of the family, and it makes no sense to have a huge bureaucracy whose sole purpose is to break up the few families that remain. A loving lesbian household is better than the tender mercies of state bureaucrats.

GUEST OPINION

Think about victims of AIDS

I have a question for Mr. Renander and the Campus Review: How old are you? Seems a strange query? Well, let me explain. If, and only if, you and your cohorts are of traditional undergraduate college age can I begin to overlook the appalling crassness of the so-called "parody" of the AIDS Quilt that is hanging in the Union. Why am I even willing to give you some slack if you are young? There are a couple of reasons.

First and foremost, you are probably echoing some other person's opinion about the meaning and significance of the AIDS Quilt, i.e. parent, preacher or Rush, instead of taking the time to attempt to form one of your own. I know, you're going to say that you have formulated your own opinion after careful study of the current material at hand. Sorry. That doesn't cut it if the only material you read comes from the extreme right.

Second, and perhaps more important — perhaps, because you are young — you have been lucky enough to have been missed by the disease. Maybe you don't have a sister or brother, uncle, mother, father or best friend waiting to die. You mention more than once that more people die of cancer, heart and lung disease, breast cancer and suicide than from AIDS. You also mention more than once that AIDS is an "overwhelmingly preventable" disease. All true; however, we, the American public, did not have the pleasure of that fact until 1983-85. Most of the people who are listed on the quilt contracted the disease before that date. Again, how old are you, Mr. Renander? Are you 19, 20, 21, even 25? Chances are very good that someone could tell you how to prevent AIDS from invading your body before your first sexual experience. I am 36. When I, and most of the dead, were free and single, the disease was not even identified, let alone preventable. There are some statistics that suggest that the infection began in the 1970s in large cities like San Francisco and New York.

Now let's talk about another disease. Let's talk not about the number of dead, which is sad and tragic no matter what the cause, but instead let's talk about hope. Hope, no matter how small a light at the end of the tunnel of a disease, is present for cancer, heart and lung disease, and most other "killing diseases." There is a chance, in many cases an excellent chance, of a cure. My grandfather lived through colon cancer; my grandmother lived through breast cancer; my father controls and lives with arterial disease; and my best friend controls and lives with alcoholism. None of these people have died or will die of these diseases as long as they follow doctor's orders. But my brother-in-law and two of my dearest friends will not live through AIDS. Eventually it will claim them as its own. There is no hope. My loved ones are not bitter, now. All have learned to work and live and love with a parasite that makes them just a bit weaker every day.

So, Mr. Renander, try walking in their shoes, or mine. Try sitting beside them as they plan their own funerals. Try standing beside them as they try to explain to their own children and parents that they are going to die. The AIDS Quilt is really not about death; it is about life and hope. If one person is impacted and listens to the advice of AIDS prevention, the quilt will have saved a life. I sincerely hope that your youth and lack of experience is the underlying reason for your lack of compassion for other human beings. I don't suppose that you and your group would ever think of making fun of MS poster children or physically impaired people — or would you? No, I suppose not; there are no supposed immoralities involved with those medical problems, are there Mr. Renander? I submit that it is you who are buckling under to right-wing political correctness, Mr. Renander. Why not try overlooking your personal brand of morality for a moment and be just plain human. Work with the AIDS prevention movement, not against it. Then perhaps your young life will never have to be interrupted by the very disease you think is so despicable.

Christina M. Taylor submitted this guest opinion for publication.

*I don't suppose that you and your group would ever think of making fun of MS poster children or physically impaired people — or would you? ### LETTERS, CONTINUED

Expose reprehensible ideas

To the Editor:
The recent uproar over the despicable "gerbil quilt" is truly unfortunate. The offense of the Campus Review against common decency has been overshadowed by an attack on everyone's civil liberty.

Some say the Campus Review has gone too far to be covered by the First Amendment. But that's what's said about people from J.D. Salinger to Robert Mapplethorpe to Salmon Rushdie.

We're smart enough to determine right from wrong. Let the Campus Review bunch expose their ugly, insensitive and downright mean ideas to public scrutiny. Explain why that gerbil quilt is so reprehensible, and people will see how devoid of worth the Campus Review's position is.

Doug Allaire
Iowa City

A right to know

To the Editor:
At the University of Missouri they have a gang of basketball fans who have dubbed themselves "the Antlers" and have assigned themselves the task of distracting opponents, using tactics such as taunting the players about the illness or death of their parents. At the UI, we have the Campus Review.

As an unrepentant liberal, I want to go on record as defending the presence of the Campus Review's "gerbil quilt" in the Iowa Memorial Union. If the Campus Review, by mocking the suffering and grief of others, is anxious to reveal its kinship with the Antlers, cemetery vandals and people who think that tripping the blind is a good laugh, they should be given the opportunity to do so.

The public has a right to know.

Winston Barclay
Iowa City

Censorship cannot control thought of populace

To the Editor:
We are appalled by the Sept. 8 article regarding the position of the Coalition Against Terror on both the Campus Review and DI columnist David Mastio. The coalition believes that calling for a ban on the Review and the dismissal of Mr. Mastio are an effective and appropriate way of confronting hatred and bigotry "head on."

While the gerbil quilt and Mr. Mastio's remarks are as good examples of bigotry and hatred as any, the lesson to be learned from them is tolerance and education, not merely a repayment in kind. Attempts to ban certain publications or dismiss people because of their views is painfully reminiscent of the goals of those whom the coalition claims to oppose. If the coalition were truly concerned about hatred, they should concentrate their efforts on the causes of hatred, instead of merely trying to put a Band-Aid over the symptom of the hatred that the Review and Mr. Mastio represent. History has taught us the hard lesson that censorship has never been an effective way of controlling the attitudes of the populace, and knee-jerk reactions such as those of the coalition do a disservice to those who strive to rise above the intolerance of hatred and bigotry.

Ending massive deer kills

To the Editor:
The Johnson County Conservation Board meeting in late August was reported in The Daily Iowan with a notable bias toward the state's policy of massive deer kills at the small forest ringed Lake Darling near Brighton, Iowa. Over 200 deer have been killed at this location in two state-sponsored "controlled hunts" over the past 2 years.

Rapacious agricultural policies of the past 20 years have set the stage for this tragic play. Few areas remain for the deer to congregate as a herd for important yearly events before the onset of winter. The farmers' overextended sense of "loss" stems from the same attitudes that have destroyed many small timbers, natural flood control basins and other features, all of which was done to get every possible square foot planted during times of booming land and commodity prices. A murder in Hills, Iowa, occurred in the 1980s when a farmer bent on expansion killed the local banker and his tenants after being denied further loans for buyout purposes. The book "Lone Tree," by Bruce Brown, carries extensive information on Iowa agriculture. The belief that deer are causing great "damage" is derived from the same sense of lucrativeness endowing every square yard of farmland. A year as bad as this one for farm crops renders most of the marginal areas near where the deer congregate unsalable anyway.

This state is overplanted. Federal reserves should be extended near the state parks where deer congregate this fall. Damages that can be thoroughly documented could be paid. Cost wouldn't be great; then feeding programs and documenting of individual deer could begin, similar to the computer files on manatees in Florida.

Wildlife and agriculture issues have a long and broad history. Differing goals abound. Accepting state policies of massive deer kills in this instance as a successful program, as your reporter stated, could lead to an Iowa with little wildlife!

Egypt — the only Arab-Israeli peace ever signed.

On everyone's minds was whether Rabin and Arafat would shake hands.

Rabin's response, when asked in a CNN interview, was a grudging "if it will be needed." And Arafat? "Why not?" he told the Associated Press in an interview aboard the plane taking him to Washington. "With whom are we going to make peace? With our enemies."

One thing was made clear Sunday: Arafat might well wear his trademark black-and-white head-dress (called a kaffiyeh) but could not carry his pistol. The White House policy against handguns would apply, warned a presidential aide.

"I think it was much more difficult for him to change his garb than to change the real politics behind it, but symbols sometimes are very difficult to fade out," said Arafat's aide, Nabil Shaath.

For Rabin, too, it's a fundamental adjustment. "I wouldn't say that it will be easy to me. I don't pretend that I can change in a few days," he told CNN. But, he added, "I would like to give it a chance."

The White House was careful to protect its long relationship with Israel. After the ceremony, Clinton was meeting privately with Rabin. No consideration was given to a similar meeting with Arafat; the ceremony alone is "a revolution in terms of our relationship with the PLO," a senior administration official said.

Even before Rabin and Arafat set foot here, there was trouble. Three Israeli soldiers were killed by Muslim militants opposed to the accord, and the thorny dispute over the future of Jerusalem surfaced.

While praising the self-government agreement as "an important, positive and correct step," Arafat also told reporters before leaving Tunis for Washington that the agreement would lead to "an independent Palestinian state, with Jerusalem as its capital."

"He can forget about it," was Rabin's retort when told of Arafat's prediction. "I assure Chairman Arafat that ... Jerusalem will remain always united under Israel's sovereignty and our capital forever."

The future of the holy city is one of the issues which Israeli and PLO negotiators left to be decided at a later date.

Associated Press

Israeli border police are framed in a window in the walls of the Old City of Jerusalem as PLO supporters fly the Palestinian flag from the top of the walls Saturday. For bitter enemies, PLO Chairman Yasser Arafat and Israeli Prime Minister Yitzhak Rabin will stand side by side today at the White House for signing of a historic peace agreement.

On another track, Jordanian and Israeli officials met at the State Department Sunday to work on the final details of a document that could serve as a framework for a peace treaty between them. Rabin predicted a probable announcement of that agreement Tuesday.

The Israeli-Palestinian agreement foresees the election of a Palestinian council within nine months to run everyday life for the 1.8 million Palestinians in the West Bank and Gaza Strip — which Israel captured from Jordan and Egypt in the 1967 Mideast war.

Within four months of the agreement taking hold, Israel will have withdrawn all its troops from Gaza and the biblical West Bank town of Jericho — where self-government will go into effect first.

Israel will also start pulling back its troops gradually from other Palestinian centers, handing control to a police force composed partly of former PLO fighters.

Not later than the start of the third year of self-government, Israel and the Palestinians will start negotiating the future sovereignty over the West Bank and Gaza.

But the accord is intentionally vague about many of the details still to be worked out, and Christopher said he would meet today with Arafat to start discussing the nitty gritty of the accord.

functions to assure a smooth handover.

One indication of Israel's desire to protect its investment came earlier this month when security was visibly tightened around Arafat and his top aides following warnings relayed by Israeli parliament member Yael Dayan.

PLO sources said the information came from Israel's secret service, but Dayan said she merely cautioned Arafat aide Bassam Abu Sharif to take care.

"I think it will be difficult for Arafat to maintain law and order without some kind of cooperation with Israel," Susser said. "It is less of a problem for Israel to offer him assistance than it is for Arafat to accept it."

Palestinian opponents of the Israel-PLO accord said the new ties could prove difficult for Arafat and force him to carry out Israeli policies that would ruin his credibility with large segments of the Palestinian public.

"This is very ironic, this interdependence between Arafat and Israel," said Bassam Shaka, who was deposed by Israel as mayor of the West Bank city of Nablus. "It will prove to be a very complicated relationship."

At Israel's insistence, Arafat has pledged to stop terrorism and discipline anyone who violates his non-violence pledge. Shaka said this could lead Israel to demand that Arafat rein in militants by force if he wants to expand autonomy to other areas besides Jericho and the Gaza Strip.

"He will have no choice but to do it," said Shaka.

Economic cooperation may prove easier but also contains risks.

Arafat hopes to receive billions of dollars in aid from both Western countries and Arab oil states.

Arab donors cut off support to the PLO after Arafat backed Saddam Hussein of Iraq in the 1991 Persian Gulf War, but they are expected to resume aid to the occupied lands once the accord is signed.

With PLO coffers reportedly empty, such aid is critical. Tens of thousands of Palestinians, especially in the Gaza Strip, are out of work as the result of Rabin's closure of the occupied lands on March 31.

More than 100,000 Palestinians came to work every day in Israel before the closure, but only about half that number do today.

Jacob Frenkel, governor of Israel's central bank, said interdependence would be "very good" as part of the autonomy agreement, with relatively free trade and access for workers to jobs in Israel.

Frenkel said the peacemaking would create an environment of "tranquility" that would attract foreign investment.

He said Israel would do its share to help but declined to say if it would offer to give up part of the $10 billion in U.S. loan guarantees allocated for Russian immigrants.

Palestinian leaders have said that without quick aid, the self-rule government would not be able to show that peace pays and that could undermine Arafat's authority, as well.

voice for the students, we would have a more valid argument."

Gardner said the university is planning to use any extra tuition money to repair flood damage, but, according to regent policy, any excess projected tuition income should be returned to students via financial aid.

"What we are asking for is accountability and credibility in use of fiscal funds," Gardner said. "Hunter Rawlings told me that the regents would raise tuition over HEPI to cover the flood. It is not the students' job to pay for flood insurance."

ISU Student Association President Dennis Kline said the universities need to work together to keep the increase low.

"I don't think it's ever worked like this before, with all three universities going the same way," he said. "It's stupid for us to have opposing attitudes toward one another. It's not like we're a football team, and we should hate the Hawkeyes."

Luke Greenwalt, executive officer for the Undergraduate Collegiate Senate, said the UISA does support a small tuition increase.

"The UISA wanted to support a zero percent increase, but that would show a lack of understanding on our part," Greenwalt said. "It's important that we take an intelligent stand on how we feel about tuition if we want them to take us seriously."

Rick Brunscheen offers the Hawkeyes and head coach Hayden Fry some advice.

"They'd better play 150 percent better against Penn State than they did today," he said. "Bring back the razzle-dazzle; you need it, we the fans need it."

"Iowa State played much better than I thought," she said. "When they recovered that on-side kick toward the end of the game, I was scared to death."

The Cyclones' fourth quarter rally gave longtime Iowa State fan Jerry Meyer hope for an upset.

"We looked like we were on the verge of a comeback," he said. "We should've won. It would have been a good feeling to leave here with a win."

Iowa State sophomore Jill Rhoden managed to remain optimistic.

"Maybe they will do better next year," she said. "I have to think this way; I attend school here."

"We need a new coach," he said. "Anytime you lose 11 of these in a row and accept the role of second banana, you shouldn't even call yourself a coach."

Bormann's friend and fellow Cyclone fan Matt Riegdsdorf appreciated Iowa State's attempt to come from behind.

"I thought they should've done better in play selection," he said. "I get tired of losing to those guys."

One Iowa State fan, Rich Jacobsen, got so tired of losing to Iowa that he tried to tear the Herky sticker off his friend Jennifer Dieringer's face.

"More than that, she's originally from Illinois," he said.

Williams drove to Henry and Wagehoft's trailer home with Coleman, Otis Penelton and Tommie McCune in the car.

Henry testified that when he saw the car with four men in it, he became panicked. The girls in the trailer went into a back bedroom, while Henry and Wagehoft turned off all the lights and the television.

Henry said Wagehoft told him to go out and talk to Williams to try to resolve their conflict. Instead, he remained in the trailer.

Williams and the others approached the trailer and began banging on the doors and windows. Someone broke one of the side windows, causing Wagehoft to go to the door to try and protect his property, Henry said.

The opening of the door by Wagehoft was immediately followed by a loud bang, then Wagehoft stumbled back a few feet into the kitchen.

"All I could see was an arm, a hand and an orange flash," Henry said. "I always thought when someone got shot you could tell and that they knew they were shot. He thought it was a fake gun."

Henry testified he ran outside with a golf club to chase the men he thought were trying to scare him and his friends.

When he returned to the trailer, Wagehoft was lying in the kitchen, surrounded by blood.

"They shot him," Henry said, his voice shaking in one of the few displays of emotion he showed on the stand.

Henry could not identify the man who pulled the trigger but was positive he heard Williams' voice.

Coleman's name was brought up rarely during the first day of testimony, but Lahey said Penelton and McCune will testify that Williams was the person who wanted the killing done, had it done and used Coleman, who pulled the trigger, as his weapon.

"There was no plot and no plan," Schlegel said. "It is not a case of premeditated murder; it is an unfortunate, tragic incident."

Sukova anchors team for doubles

NEW YORK — Sukova left the U.S. Open with two doubles titles and a little addition to her money. She said all the money could not compare to her champion.

Sukova, the world runner-up, teamed with Sanchez Vicario to win the women's doubles. Sanchez and Vicario won 6-4, 6-2.

Last Thursday, Todd Woodbridge and Navratilova won 6-3, 7-6 (8-6) to claim the doubles title.

Graf spoiled Sukova's chance of becoming the first Navratilova in 19 years to win a triple crown — singles and mixed doubles — with a 6-3 victory Saturday.

BEIJING (AP) — Chopped 10 second meter record Sunday at the National Games in minutes, 12.19 seconds. It was the third time in five days that a women's world track record has been shattered by the Chinese.

Wang, 20, smashed the 10,000-meter world record last Wednesday, Qu Yunxia won the 1,500 meters and Wang, who also holds a world mark.

In effect, Wang's three world records are an astounding feat.

Official results of the 1993 World Championships in Athletics are as follows:

3,000-meter women's world record set by Tatyana Kazankina of the Soviet Union. Qu Yunxia of China won the 1,500 meters and Wang in her day's second heat.

During an interview, Holtz said "Coaches Corner" with what has been a positive response — that he read the book and commended it.

But he then said it was difficult not to respond to several minutes of the allegations.

"Look at our program. Look at our drug program. Look at the people who have played at the University of Notre Dame and the results have had," Holtz said.

"Under the terms of the agreement, How Notre Dame will be interviewed with the Notre Dame players and Holtz of encouragement and abusing playing things."

NEW YORK (AP) — Helena Sukova left the U.S. Open Sunday with two doubles titles and a tidy little addition to her bankroll. She said all the money in the world could not compare with being a champion.

Sukova, the women's singles runner-up, teamed with Arantxa Sanchez Vicario to win the women's doubles over Amanda Corretzer and Ines Gorrochategui 6-4, 6-2.

Last Thursday, Sukova and Todd Woodbridge beat Martina Navratilova and Mark Woodforde 6-3, 7-6 (8-6) to claim the mixed doubles title.

BEIJING (AP) — Wang Junxia chopped 10 seconds off the 3,000-meter record Sunday at the 7th National Games with a finish of 8 minutes, 12.19 seconds. It was the third time in five days that a women's world track record has been shattered by the Chinese.

Wang Junxia

Wang, 20, smashed the 10,000-meter world mark by 42 seconds last Wednesday. Then Saturday, Qu Yunxia set a record in the 1,500 meters, barely ahead of Wang, who also broke the old world mark.

In effect, Wang herself broke three world records within five days, an astounding feat in the history of track.

Official results show five Chinese runners on Sunday broke the 3,000-meter world record of 8:22.62 set nine years ago by Tatyana Kazankina of the former Soviet Union. Qu finished just behind Wang in 8:12.27 in Sunday's second heat.

SOUTH BEND, Ind. (AP) — Notre Dame coach Lou Holtz defended himself and the university Sunday against allegations in a new book, marking the first time he has commented on the book since its contents became public two weeks ago.

During an interview on CNN's "Coaches Corner" Holtz began with what has been his standard response — that he would not read the book and would not comment.

But he then said it has been difficult not to respond and spent several minutes refuting some of the allegations.

"Look at our graduation rate, look at our drug-testing program, look at the people who have played at the university of Notre Dame and the response that they have had," Holtz said.

Hawkeyes keep streak alive with 31-28 win

Roxanna Pellin

AMES — Another hyped-up intrastate rivalry, another win for the Hawkeyes and the "same old thing" for Iowa State coach Jim Walden.

"We're so tentative against this team every year," Walden said of Iowa State's dismal first half. "I do not know what I can do to keep it from happening. It's just the same old thing every year."

Predictions that Saturday would be Iowa State's best chance to break Iowa's 10-game win streak held some truth as the Hawkeyes narrowly escaped with a 31-28 win over the Cyclones at a windy Jack Trice Field.

With 1 minute, 23 seconds remaining in the game and a first down on the Iowa 48-yard line, Hawkeye Maurea Crain hit Cyclone quarterback Bob Utter to knock the ball loose. Iowa's Mike Dailey came up with the recovery and the Hawkeyes ran down the clock for the win.

Iowa coach Hayden Fry said the win reminded him of his 1966 squad at Southern Methodist.

"They dubbed those guys the Cardiac Kids," he said. "We pulled four games out by one or two points."

Iowa quarterback Paul Burmeister said that win No. 11 in the streak was an important one for the Hawkeyes. He completed 6 of 8 passes for 71 yards and one touchdown before catching a helmet in his back in the fourth quarter on a draw play.

"This game means a lot to us," he said. "We came here with the attitude to show that we're the best team in the state."

It looked like the game would be all Iowa after the Hawkeyes jumped out to a 28-7 lead at the half.

Junior running back Ryan Terry ran up the middle for a 7-yard touchdown to give Iowa an early 7-0 lead at the 4:58 mark in the first half. Four plays later, the Cyclones were unable to move the ball and Iowa regained possession.

Burmeister's 16-yard pass to wingback Anthony Dean with two seconds left in the first quarter and a Todd Romano extra point gave Iowa a 14-0 lead.

Terry takes advantage of wind

Roxanna Pellin
 The Daily Iowan

AMES — Windy conditions at Cyclone Stadium Saturday turned out to be an advantage for Hawkeye running back Ryan Terry.

"I thought they'd give me the ball today and that's what we did," Terry said. "We just ran the ball."

A southeastern wind of 20 mph forced Iowa to look to its running game to move the ball. The Hawkeyes gained 17 of 22 first downs with the ball on the ground and compiled 287 yards rushing compared to Iowa State's 176.

"We played the wind when we had the ball and when we didn't have the ball," Fry said. "It was a big, big factor."

Terry, a junior transfer from Tennessee State, is one of 49 finalists for the Doak Walker Award which is presented annually to the top NCAA Division I-A junior or senior running back.

Against the Cyclones Terry had an Iowa career-best of 107 yards on 21 carries with a long run of 19 yards and a 7-yard touchdown. He became the only Iowa running back to gain more than 100 yards since Mike Saunders 103 yards in the 1991 Holiday Bowl.

"I really don't know if it's my best game as a Hawkeye," Shaw said after the game. "I have to give credit to the offensive line and the full backs."

Fry said he liked what he saw in Iowa's offense against the Cyclones.

"We didn't make as many mistakes as we did in our first game," he said. "We really improved our running game."

Terry said he had no doubts that the Hawkeyes would pull off the win, even after Iowa State's onside kick recovered by defensive back Kevin Lazard.

"I didn't worry because I'm more of an optimistic person. Last week I stayed relaxed and I didn't think we'd lose for a second," he said, referring to Iowa's 26-25 win over Tulsa.

Hawkeyes sweep weekend series

Kris Wiley
 The Daily Iowan

Iowa field hockey coach Beth Beglin knew the results of her team's weekend matches were foregone conclusions.

"We knew these weren't going to be the strongest opponents," Beglin said. "We were not looking at the outcomes, but at how we played."

No. 5-ranked Iowa raised its record to 4-0 after routing Miami (Ohio) 7-0 Saturday and St. Louis 7-0 Sunday. The Hawkeyes have not given up a point this season.

"We used this as preparation for Boston next weekend," Beglin said. "This was a good test."

"We were not being as aggressive inside our 25-yard line, and Ann came in and gave us a boost," Beglin said. "She was able to pick up our attack inside the 25-yard line."

The Hawkeyes failed to score on their first 18 shots and didn't find the net until the 6:06 mark in the first half, when Kristen Holmes, assisted by senior Heather Bryant, made her third goal of the season.

Senior Kristy Gleason made the score 2-0 in favor of Iowa less than four minutes later on a penalty corner, with the assist going to Mary Kraybill and Tiffany Bybel.

Iowa turned it loose in the second half, scoring five goals. Pare scored at 31:27 with the assist going to Kraybill, followed by an unassisted shot by freshman Diane DeMiro, an unassisted goal by Gleason, and two goals by Pare, both assisted by Gleason.

Overall, Iowa out-shot Miami 43-4, and produced 17 penalty corners to the Redskins' three. Miami goalkeeper Melissa D'Antonio recorded 27 saves. Iowa sophomore Rachel Smith tallied three saves.

Gleason turned the 11th hat trick of her career, and led the Hawkeyes past St. Louis. She set the school record for most points in a game with 11, and tied the school record for most goals in a game with five.

Gleason scored an unassisted goal to end the first half, and tallied four shots in the second half on assists by Aimee Klapach, Kraybill, Bybel and Pare.

"Congratulations to our kids that came off the bench. They have the ability to adjust quickly," Gleason said. "It shows we have great depth and that's a great position for our coaching staff."

Iowa volleyball streak ends

Joel Donofrio
 The Daily Iowan

The Iowa volleyball team's seven-match winning streak came to an end when the jump-serving, hard-hitting Washington State Cougars beat the Hawkeyes 15-9, 15-9, 15-7 Saturday night in Carver-Hawkeye Arena.

The Cougars, ranked 21st in the nation, won all three of their matches to claim the Hawkeye Challenge title. Iowa (7-2) came in second, beating Wright State 15-7, 15-9, 15-2 Saturday afternoon and Kansas State 15-12, 15-4, 15-8 Friday night.

Despite the second-place finish, the tournament hosts had freshman outside hitter Jill Oelschlager named Most Valuable Player and freshman middle hitter Jennifer Webb named to the all-tournament team. For the weekend, Oelschlager recorded 25 kills, 19 digs and six blocks while Webb compiled 25 kills, 15 digs and seven blocks.

"Obviously, those two are not playing like freshmen," Iowa coach Linda Schoenstedt said. "I'm very pleased that they got the recognition; it's always nice to see that you've got those kinds of players stepping it up."

The Hawkeyes got off to a rough start against Washington State, as the Cougars jumped out to a 6-1 lead in game one behind the serving of setter Krista Beightol. Iowa got back to within 10-8, but the tide turned when a Washington State spike that appeared out was ruled good, giving the Cougars a controversial side out.

Schoenstedt refused to comment on the officiating. Coaches who criticize officials are subject to fines

Hawkeyes keep victory streak alive

Roxanna Pellin
The Daily Iowan

Hawkeye senior cornerback Scott Plate picked off his fifth career interception and the first this season on a pass thrown by Bob Utter intended for split end Mickal Horacek. He had four tackles and one fumble recovery. JUCO recruits left tackle Chris Webb and lineman Toney Bates contributed with Webb recording two tackles for a loss of eight and causing a Cyclone fumble late in the third quarter. Bates had two tackles and a sack for a loss of two.

ANOTHER YEAR: Iowa State coach Jim Walden wanted a win over Iowa just so he wouldn't have to read about Iowa's 11-game winning streak over the Cyclones.

"It's like anything else, you get a monkey on your back and you want to get it off," he said. "We didn't get it off, so next year for a whole week we have to read that it will be 11 years since we've done it. It's just one whole year of having to put up with that."

FRIENDS AND RIVALS: Iowa State junior defensive tackle Troy Peterson and Iowa sophomore left guard Matt Purdy were two friends until they took the field. Peterson, who weighs in at 290, a Davenport, West graduate, and Purdy at 280, of Cedar Falls, wrestled each other in high school.

"Once he puts on his helmet and I put on my mine, they're not the same color," Peterson said. "That's the only difference we have. Once the helmets come off, he's Matt and I'm a Troy. It's not Iowa-Iowa State."

ROMANO LEADS: Sophomore kicker Todd Romano leads the Hawkeyes in scoring with 19 points for the season, including four extra point kicks and a 29-yard field goal against Iowa State.

NEW LOOK: After warming up in the regular gold pants, the Cyclones came on the field at kickoff wearing new red pants.

"It surprised me," Iowa coach Hayden Fry said.

BELOW: Iowa coach Hayden Fry celebrates after the Hawkeyes score their second touchdown during the first quarter of action in Ames.

got a little better because we got the ball game close enough to tighten up a little bit.

"We just told our kids they had to suck it up a little better, play a little harder."

Senior right tackle and co-captain Mike Wells had seven assisted tackles and two unassisted, forced one fumble and had a sack for a loss of six yards, to lead the Hawkeye defense. Strong safety Jason Olejniczak recorded eight tackles and left end Larry Blue and linebacker Matt Hillard each had seven.

Iowa running backs also had a solid performance with junior Ryan Terry rushing for 107 yards on 21 carries and freshman Sedrick Shaw adding 86 yards.

Shaw ran the ball for 22 yards to the Iowa State 5 for first-and-goal with 10:35 left in the first half. After a gain of 2 yards on the first down, Shaw went up the middle to score and put Iowa ahead by 20.

The Cyclones answered the call on the next drive when fullback Artis Garris ran the ball in for a 6-yard touchdown. Stewart's extra point put the score at 21-7 before Hawkeye Kent Kahl ran in a 9-yard touchdown. Iowa led 28-7 when Scott Plate picked off an Utter interception to close the half.

Utter, who was selected Big Eight offensive player of the week a week ago for his performance in a 54-10 thrashing of Northern Illinois, threw 4 of 9 for 35 yards and one interception.

Walden said he was concerned that Utter not take the blame for the loss.

"I didn't want him feeling bad,"

"He shouldn't have to carry the brunt of the whole thing today just because he fumbled there late. It shouldn't get down to the last pattern at the bottom of the night."

With Utter running in a touchdown in the third quarter and a Graston Norris 6-yard touchdown with 9:59 remaining, the Cyclones closed the gap to 31-20.

Utter handed off to halfback Calvin Branch for a three-yard touchdown and then again for the two-point conversion to move the score to 31-28.

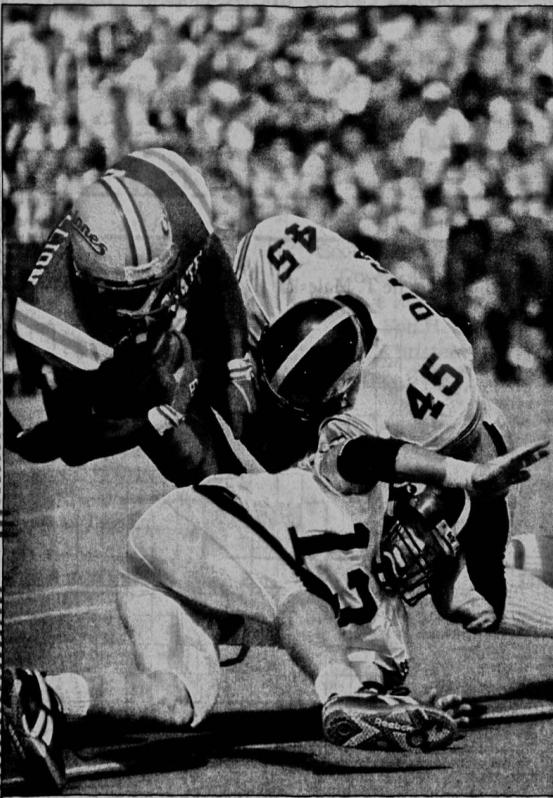

Fry said he was impressed with Utter's aggressive play, but said Utter will take some hits.

"He's going to take punishment every ball game," he said. "He's a tremendous competitor and a real fine athlete, but when you run with the ball that much, it's going to happen."

TERRY

Selected as a team Most Valuable Player on offense for the Tulsa game, Terry ran for 88 yards on 22 carries against the Golden Hurricane. He shares time with freshman Sedrick Shaw, a transfer from Austin, Texas, who went 38 yards on 8 attempts against Tulsa and had 86 yards rushing and 24 yards receiving at Iowa State.

Terry said he likes having Shaw right behind him.

"We compliment each other really good," Terry said. "When I see Sedrick do good, it's a compliment to me. I try to teach him things that the coaches can't, the same as Marv (Cook) did me."

TELEVISION COMMENTARY

Associated Press

The new NBC show "SeaQuest DSV" typifies half this year's new prime-time TV shows. From "Thea" to "Brisco County, Jr.," the season's split between home life and mythic lives.

'93 TV: Fantasy vs. Family

Jenny Fox
The Daily Iowan
A widow has two jobs and four children. A shrink ends up living with his aged ex-cop father. A shrink ends up living with his used-car salesman father. A recently divorced woman takes on a number of jobs to support her three small children. A recently divorced sports columnist wrestles with work at the office and the demands of his two young daughters at home. A recovering alcoholic works as the night manager of a bus station. And an unemployed electrician spends his nights working at his brother's restaurant and his days at home taking care of his three children.

Roseanne has ended up paving the way for shows about single parenthood and economic hardship. Only 10 years ago, Blake Carrington was surprising Krystle with diamond bracelets and Chanel furs just for the hell of it. (He never had a used-car salesman father.) Dry cleaning bills and kids' checkups were no problem on "Dallas" or "Dynasty." This is not to say that fantasy has no place on the airwaves now.

What is interesting is the complete divorce from reality evident in the nonfamily situations: A maverick creator operates a 1,000-foot renegade submarine 25 years in the future; an FBI agent investigates paranormal phenomena; and a Harvard law graduate becomes a cowboy in the Old West.

Now, I think anyone would agree that these are all what might once have been called "boy" situations. Boy situations also constitute most of the remainder of the line-up for the fall - Daniel J. Travanti as a head cop (big surprise) in Chicago, Glenn Frey of the Eagles as a cop in L.A., cops in New York City, cops in Bakersfield, Calif. And these cops don't worry about kids, dads or dry cleaning bills. Every day brings a fascinating new case - not parking tickets and drunk trespassers.

Apart from a few attempts to revive "Moonlighting" and a few shows about young (exclusively young, please note) women striking out on their own, this is it: sentimentalized bills-'n'-kids reality or cop-'n'-cowboy shoot-'em-ups.

It's too easy to say simply that the reality shows are aimed at women and the fantasy cop shows are aimed at men - plenty of either gender will watch the "wrong" kind of show. But it's as if two different planets have come into existence. Why this radical split? I'd much rather see Roseanne Connor pilot a renegade submarine, and then deal with the laundry when she gets home.

'I, Claudius' keeps gripping drama alive

Ian Corwin and Tad Paulson
The Daily Iowan

There are thousands of ways to adapt a novel to the screen — the catch is, only a few of them work without boring the audience to death or making them dash from the theater holding their noses and screaming about artistic integrity.

Take Peter Weir's 1983 drama "The Year of Living Dangerously," starring Mel Gibson and Sigourney Weaver, and adapted directly from C.J. Koch's panoramic novel of the same name. Weir and Koch co-wrote the screenplay, amplifying the relation-ship between Gibson and Linda Hunt's characters and allowing the historical context of the story (the political upheavals of 1965 Indonesia) to fill in the rest. In this case, little is lost in the translation because the original, complex plot is kept intact. The only difference between book and movie is Weir's visual approach — his stunning photography adds the necessary imagery to characters and situations that needed no alteration.

Then there's the interpretive route taken by Francis Coppola with "Apocalypse Now," which is really only Joseph Conrad's "Heart of Darkness" with a touch of Saigon and a dash of Cambodia replacing the novel's original excursion into the Congo.

In each of these examples, however, there's a deciding factor — there's an artist behind the camera with a vision just as vivid and often wildly different from the ideas of the original author.

So where do we go to see the textbook example of how to execute the transition from page to screen without losing a drop of the author's original intent?

Look no further than Robert Graves' "I, Claudius," which the BBC transferred to 13 hours of videotape (It originally appeared in 1976 on PBS' "Masterpiece Theatre."). Using a venerable, classically trained cast and a faithful writer (Jack Pulman), the long, engrossing series breathes decadent life into the story of the stuttering idiot Claudius, who would become the ruler of the grandest empire in human history.

Graves' novels ("I, Claudius" and its sequel "Claudius the God") are structured as a first-person autobiography tracing the spiraling internal decay of Roman politics and society. The tale is told from the point of view of Claudius — who was lame, sickly and thought by many to be a total fool — and it is his dedication as a historian to preserving the honest, sometimes horrific truth which gives "Claudius" its gritty edge.

Graves was a meticulous historian (much like his narrative alter-ego) — his books are well-researched and meticulously grounded in fact — but he weaves such a spell over the reader that one forgets that one is reading history. Miraculously, the BBC has preserved every nuance that made "Claudius" such a good read, retaining that gripping sense of drama and, in many ways, expounding upon it. Leave it to the British to keep drama alive for us.

Seldom in the annals of history have readers (or TV viewers) experienced firsthand the poisoning of the Emperor Augustus by his own wife, Livia. Nor have they been treated to the vision of the mad Caligula, his face painted with garish color, as he dances about the palace dressed as a goddess. This is the stuff they leave out of the history books, kids.

Claudius is played throughout the series by English actor Derek Jacobi, recently recruited by Kenneth Branagh as the narrator of "Henry V" and the wizened swami of "Dead Again." Jacobi's performance as "Claudius" is meticulous, hypnotic perfection — every gasping stutter hurts and every head twitch feels like whiplash. Jacobi plays Claudius exactly as Graves painted him in his novels — a brilliantly intelligent social misfit who survives assassinations, universal mockery and the imperial reigns of the perverse Tiberius and the insane Caligula only to be appointed emperor, most reluctantly, late in his life.

The cast of "I, Claudius" reads like a Who's Who for British cinema and theater. Sian Phillips ("Dune") plays Claudius' malicious grandmother Livia, Brian Blessed ("Flash Gordon," "Henry V") does a churlish Augustus and John Hurt ("Alien," the upcoming "Even Cowgirls Get the Blues") brings a new brand of psychosis to his portrayal of the loony, raving Caligula. Other well-knowns like Patrick "Jean-Luc Picard" Stewart and John Rhys-Davies ("Sallah" in the Indiana Jones flicks) make equally notable appearances.

"I, Claudius," while a rather long and involved dramatic opus, is well worth chasing down — it's available at the downtown That's Entertainment as well as the Iowa City Public Library. Unlike many other book-to-movie adaptations ("Dune," for example), it's not necessary to read the book before sitting down and absorbing this series — though the novel is just as recommendable. Either way, you'll know a lot more about our naughty Roman forefathers than you did before, and you won't have to write any term papers or read any Latin in the process.

Videotape, a column on old, new, and exasperatingly obscure video releases, appears Mondays on the Arts and Entertainment pages of The Daily Iowan.

Mont. native's new book describes epic kayak trek

Lisa Anne Taggart
The Daily Iowan

Steve Chapple is a true Montanan, no two ways about it. One spring morning in 1991, living in San Francisco with his wife and two young sons, Chapple found himself stumbling over a used hypodermic needle as he took his boys to a playground. He had a Montanan's reaction: "What the heck am I doing in this place?"

There was only one way to remedy the situation. Chapple, who is reading tonight at Prairie Lights, decided to move himself and his family to his native state.

But a true Montanan doesn't do things on a small scale. Chapple decided to make his homecoming in a truly Montanan way: He and his family would kayak the entire length of Montana's Yellowstone River, the longest free-flowing river in the continental United States.

Never mind that he'd only been in a kayak twice in his life. Never mind that his wife and sons had never been in a kayak. Montanans as we discover over and over again in Chapple's book, do not get bogged down by technicalities.

"My wife and I had a great deal of romantic will," Chapple explained in an interview. Or, as he writes in his book, "Adventurers are optimists or else they would stay home in front of the VCR."

"Kayaking the Full Moon: A Journey Down the Yellowstone to the Soul of Montana" is the story of the Chapple family's trip.

The ride down the Yellowstone's 671 miles is a journey through Montana's history as well, from the Jurassic era, when plant-eating, possibly warm-blooded Maiasaura ("good mother lizard") dinosaurs roamed its grassless coastal plains, to the early 19th century when Lewis and Clark were among the first white men to cruise the river's length, to a bit later in that century when Chapple's grandfather settled in Billings and founded the city's hospital.

The trip took Chapple and his family two summers. In between kayak excursions, Chapple went grouse hunting, attended a sweat in the Pryor Mountains, stopped for a brief chat with Peter Fonda and his wife Becky, visited the hospital where Ernest Hemingway's leg was repaired, fished for catfish and stopped for a drink at a number of bars. It is a wonderful journey.

But Chapple's search for the soul of "the most mythic state in the modern West" begins and ends with a father. The memory of his own father, who led cityslickers on trips through Yellowstone's Grand Canyon in 1911 and died when Chapple was 18, is always present in the book. "He represents the Montana side of me," Chapple says of his father. "I wanted to recover that. 'Kayaking the Full Moon' is a search for a father."

And the book is also the story of Chapple becoming closer to his two sons. He notes that he has become better at "regulating the savages as they grew into toddler bruisers, trying to make them laugh as frogs jumped out of the reeds and their mother popped away at psycho owls in the trees."

Those are, after all, the essentials for a Montana father. "Outside of Montana we had always been Montanans, at heart, and that is why, I suppose, we had returned," Chapple writes. A man's nature, after all, is what it is.

"Live at Prairie Lights" begins at 8 p.m. at Prairie Lights Books, 15 S. Dubuque St. It will be broadcast live on WSUI (AM 910) and WOI (AM 640) with host Julie Englander. The reading is free and open to the public.

"As a journalism student and Metro Reporter for The Daily Iowan I do a lot of writing. I just put my PowerBook in my bookbag and I can go from apartment, to class, to work, to down by the river and never be without a computer. By being able to work whenever and wherever I am, I can work much more efficiently. I have a built in fax/modem so I can send and receive information from all over the country. PowerBooks are simply the coolest portables around. They offer all the power of a desk-top computer but with the freedom to go anywhere! No other computer is easier to use than a Mac.
