Jordan, Israel sign 'Agenda for Peace'

Arab countries may follow PLO lead; Arafat canvasses U.S. for loan guarantees

Barry Schweid
Associated Press

WASHINGTON — The historic Israeli-PLO accord bore further fruits of peace Tuesday as Jordan and Israel signed a framework for negotiations and Morocco moved toward formal recognition of the Jewish state. Yasser Arafat, once condemned as a terrorist, was warmly received in Congress.

"We will continue now rapidly to break down the barriers between Israel and other nations," said an approving President Clinton.

Jordan and Israel signed an "Agenda for Peace" at a relatively low-key State Department ceremony. The agreement lays out a framework for future negotiations. Ambassa-sador Fayed Tarawneh, who signed for Jordan, said he hoped it would establish an agenda for discussions and lead to "a comprehensive peace that will transform the lives of all our peoples."

commitment not to threaten each other by any use of force" or terrorism. While that ceremony took place, Israeli Prime Minister Yitzhak Rabin was in Morocco for a surprise meeting with King Hassan II, who has long taken a moderate position toward Israel. The meeting was expected to lead to diplomatic relations.

Rabin said it would not happen instantly. "But the fact that from Washington we are coming to Rabat, Morocco, and are meeting with the king perhaps is another step forward in everything that is linked to establishing relations," he said.

In Washington, a senior official said Secretary of State Warren Christopher had sent letters to some 10 U.S. embassies in Europe, the Middle East and Asia, suggesting the host governments "provide political and financial support" to the Palestinians.

The official said appeals had earlier been made to the European Community, Japan, Saudi Arabia and other Persian Gulf states.

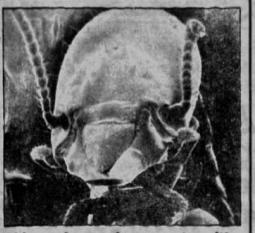

Arafat, denounced in America for nearly three decades as a terrorist, said he was not ready to shuck his military uniform, but he was clearly relishing a new Washington role of good-natured statesman.

"I am not a chameleon," Arafat said, proudly asserting he still was commander-in-chief of a Palestinian army. However, he said at a news conference that when Palestinians get a state and control over East Jerusalem, Jews would be welcome to keep living there.

Arafat met with Senate leaders who promised to review U.S. laws that bar finan-

Man facing 17 burglary charges pleads not guilty

A man charged with 17 counts of third-degree burglary is currently residing in Johnson County Jail.

Casey J. Booth, a 20-year-old white male, pleaded not guilty to charges of entering unoccupied vehicles unarmed. He is also charged with possession of marijuana in prison.

A police investigation began during the fall months of 1992 when numerous car burglaries were reported. Over a period of two months, a total of nine stereos, two radar detectors and several miscellaneous items such as clothes and tapes were stolen.

Booth was identified as one of the suspects. In December 1992, Booth and another suspect were arrested after being stopped for a traffic violation. He was formally charged Sept. 13.

A preliminary hearing is set for Oct. 4.

Senate considers Medicaid funding of abortions

WASHINGTON (AP) — A Senate committee approved a bill Tuesday that would lift a 17-year ban on Medicaid funding for poor women's abortions, handing abortion rights forces a rare win on the issue of public financing.

However, a battle is guaranteed when the measure hits the Senate floor, where both sides predicted there would be a close vote, possibly next week.

Meanwhile, the House Judiciary Committee approved a bill aimed at curbing violence at abortion clinics and ensuring access for doctors and women.

A subcommittee of the Senate Appropriations Committee first stripped House-passed language continuing a ban on Medicaid abortions. The bill then went to the full panel, where abortion opponents didn't even try to restore the ban when it became clear the votes weren't there.

LENDERS WORRY ABOUT FINANCING

UI students praise national service plan

Kristin Berg
The Daily Iowan

When President Clinton signs his national service plan next week, many UI students will join the celebration. However, financial aid lenders will remain apprehensive.

Gretchen Mondt, a UI senior biomedical engineering student, affords college with Pell Grants, loans and tuition scholarships. The legislation for the National and Community Service Trust Act of 1993, which goes into effect Oct. 1, entices her.

"I would gladly participate in the service program because now I don't get as much in loans as I need," Mondt said. "It is going to be a real burden to have a lot of bills when I graduate. I have always been interested in the Peace Corps, and this would give me the chance to help my country."

Trisha Firzlaff, a UI nursing student, relies on PLUS Loans and a tuition scholarship. She also believes the national service plan is an excellent opportunity.

"The program appeals to me mainly because I wouldn't have to pay it back," Firzlaff said. "In addition, I've always wanted to do community service, but I haven't had much time with school and work. This program would give me the time."

The plan will give participants up to $4,725 toward college tuition and $7,400 for living expenses for two years in exchange for completing 1,700 hours of community service. The service can either be completed before, during or after college.

Florida tourist killed at highway rest stop

Curt Anderson

MONTICELLO, Fla. — Margaret Ann Jagger, bleeding from a bullet that grazed her chest and right arm, cried into the telephone, "He's dying! He's really dying! ... Please hurry!"

The British tourist's boyfriend had just been fatally wounded at an interstate highway rest stop in northern Florida, the latest in a series of attacks that are threatening the state's lucrative tourism industry.

Jagger, 35, and boyfriend Gary Colley, 34, who arrived Thursday in Orlando, pulled off Interstate 10 for a nap in their unmarked rental car early Tuesday. The rest area was well-lit. There were other people around.

Then two armed youths approached, knocked on the windows and demanded money. "They woke up and tried to back out, and that's when they were shot," said Jefferson County Sheriff Ken Fortune.

SCHOOL BOARD CONTEST

'High' voter turnout results in re-election of incumbents

Although only 9 percent of eligible citizens voted, that number represents the highest turnout in over a decade. This was also the first contested election in three years.

Staley Champion Hawtrey

Bill Pepper
The Daily Iowan

The makeup of the Iowa City School Board remained the same following Tuesday's election. Incumbents Sally Staley with 3,010 votes, Connie Champion with 2,774 votes and Betsy Hawtrey with 2,590 votes were the top vote-getters. Each will serve another three-year term.

Total turnout was 4,476, or 8.94 percent of the electorate. That is the highest turnout since 1981, when 4,601 voters went to the polls.

Staley said she was grateful to her supporters for helping her to win.

"I'm thrilled," she said. "I have a lot of wonderful supporters."

She said she believes she was re-elected because she has worked hard for the district and voters.

"I think I've done my job," she said. "You have to be willing to ask questions."

Champion said her win, as well as that of the other incumbents, can be attributed to the gradually improving relations between the board and the public.

"In the past six years the board has worked hard on improving relations with the public," she said. "I just think we're taking a positive direction."

All six were good candidates, Hawtrey said, and the four female candidates shared the same support base but only three could be elected.

"I was lucky," she said. "I'm glad for the support."

Challengers Janice Simmons-Welburn had 2,489 votes, Brandon Ray had 898 votes and Royce Phillips received 698 votes.

Only 101 votes separated Hawtrey from Simmons-Welburn.

Simmons-Welburn congratulated the incumbents and vowed to stay involved in school district affairs.

"I knew that it would be a tough race running against three incumbents who have name recognition and are well entrenched in the community," she said. "But we know that 55.9 percent of the voters are not happy with business as usual."

The three incumbents agreed that Simmons-Welburn was an excellent candidate and said they hope she stays involved.

"I would have been thrilled to serve with her," Staley said. "She knows what she's talking about."

Champion said Simmons-Welburn ran a tough campaign.

"I think she campaigned very heavily," she said. "I think she should run again."

Johnson County Auditor Tom Slockett said the voter turnout was low in regard to total voters, but very high compared to other school elections.

"It's not without a certain amount of irony that I call a 9 percent turnout high," he said. "It's really very much to the credit of the candidates who gauged the public well."

NEWS A SHOCK

Student dies from obscure disease

UI sophomore Kelly Gordon died Saturday at University Hospitals in Madison, Wis., of Wilson's disease, an extremely rare illness.

Gordon moved into her room in Currier Residence Hall in August. She became ill shortly thereafter, according to UI senior Adrienne Leeds, the resident assistant for Gordon's floor, the east 300s of Currier.

"She didn't really ever live here," she said.

Gordon had not been around much after moving in at the beginning of the semester, Leeds said. Her registration was soon withdrawn, and her personal belongings were moved out of her room.

Few people on the floor knew Gordon well, but residents were still surprised and saddened by the news of her death.

"I was shocked — I had no idea," Leeds said.

Jennifer Lofdahl, a UI sophomore who also lives in the E300s, was surprised by the news.

"I had just met her once or twice," she said. "She seemed really nice."

Aimee Jansen, a UI junior who lives down the hall from Gordon's room, also expressed sorrow at the sudden loss.

"She helped me move in the first week of classes," she said. "She was so cheerful."

Wilson's disease is rare, affecting only one in every 30,000 to 200,000 people, said Douglas LaBrecque, director of liver services at UI Hospitals and Clinics. The illness is transmitted when both parents carry the recessive

Physical Plant idea bests flood waters

A fortress-like ring of sandbags is a fading reminder of a summer of flooding and some ingenious quick thinking.

Timothy Connors
The Daily Iowan

Banks of sandbags, concrete blocks, clay and more sand stand alone now in the middle of Riverside Drive in front of the UI Art Building complex — a silent tribute to hours of work and one man's idea that saved the campus from further damage and class delays.

The water which had once accumulated inside of them has dried up, hopefully for the last time. And unless torrential rains change the trend toward lowering water levels at the Coralville Reservoir, Jim Deatsch said the remains of the manmade pond will be torn down within a week. The structure, known better in circles at the UI Physical Plant as Deatsch's Beach or Lake Croy, was Deatsch's brainchild.

"I got to thinking about what we could do to get a grasp on things over there," said the UI Physical Plant mechanical distribution systems manager.

Then, after a week of 15-hour workdays fighting flood waters on campus, an idea to alleviate the flooding on the west side of the Iowa River came to Deatsch in a nap.

Unlike the east side, flood waters never lapped over the western riverbanks by the Art Building complex and the Alumni Center. Instead, backwater from the storm sewer system, designed to drain the campus from the Dental Building down to the river, had accumulated on Riverside Drive, flooding the buildings.

Rather than continue to defend the buildings from the encroaching flood waters, Deatsch proposed that Physical Plant workers take on the water at its source. Deatsch's Physical Plant supervisors approved the plan, and two 5-foot-diameter levees of sandbags and plastic were built around the storm sewer drains in the second week of July.

But then, the ground under one of the levees shifted so the Physical Plant expanded the effort and a 20-foot by 80-foot elliptical levee was constructed around the two smaller levees. Forty Physical Plant workers took part in the weeklong construction project.

Within 20 minutes of the construction's completion, the manmade pond had risen to the same level as the river, forcing the rest of the drainage from uphill into the river. The rest of the water around the levee was pumped out in the next day and a half. Rains after that brought a few temporary inundations, but ones that could be more easily dealt with.

"If we would not have had that dike in there, anytime we would have had a rain, it would have come out on Riverside Drive," Deatsch said.

Deatsch acknowledges that it was his plan to construct the levees, but he shrugs off any credit for its success. Instead, he said the Physical Plant officials who made the decisions and the workers who put the plan to practice deserve the praise.

"It was a Physical Plant effort," Deatsch said. "We probably had 40 people over there throwing sandbags."

Jim Croy, the manager of UI Physical Plant services, discussed the levee plan with Deatsch and assisted him in preparing it.

he said. "I can't commend Jim enough for that."

Bleckwenn noted that without Deatsch's Beach, the Art Building complex and Alumni Center would still be uninhabitable today. Due to the flooding, two art classes have been canceled this semester and many were postponed for the first week of the semester. If the building were still uninhabitable, the effects would have been devastating, according to Samuel Becker, interim art department director.

"We would have had to cancel more classes," Becker said. "It would have been terrible for all the art department's classes."

Becker called the pond solution "very imaginative."

"The Physical Plant people have done a great job under very difficult circumstances," Becker said.

Despite the seemingly endless overtime hours, Deatsch said Physical Plant workers have gained in certain ways.

"It's been a good experience," Deatsch said. "If it ever happens again, we'll have a plan."

WHAT TANGLED CORDS WE WEAVE...

Extending right into trouble

Extension cords are the greatest thing since sliced bread. Too bad they're not up to par with the law.

Molly Spann
The Daily Iowan

Hair dryers, stereo equipment, alarm clocks, lamps and a slew of other electrical appliances can form cluttered jungles of electrical cord in student residences, and when the few misplaced outlets become outnumbered by cords, students often turn to extension cords to satisfy their hunger for power.

Little do they know that extension cords violate both city and state fire codes because they can start fires, Iowa City Fire Department Lt. Corvin Justice said. In fact, the only extensions allowed for permanent usage in buildings are power bars which have built in circuit breakers that shut off power when they become overloaded.

Despite the risks and the rules, many students said they continue

"I didn't even realize it was a problem until I came home and found my room on fire."

Jim Carlson, a UI junior who learned firsthand that extension cords are fire risks to use extension cords.

"We have extension cords all over our house in all colors and sizes," UI senior Luke Krebs said. "I could probably give you an estimate in miles. I don't worry about a fire too much. We have a fire extinguisher."

Krebs said he and his roommates do have power bars in their rooms, but in the main living areas only extension cords are used.

UI freshman John Evans said in his dorm room there are six cords now in use, including two power bars and four thin extension cords.

"The outlets are so limited here," he said. "We had to totally upgrade the power. We do have a surge depressor and that's supposed to help prevent overheating, but we don't really worry about fires."

UI freshman Megan Gogerty said extensions for power in her dorm room are a must.

"There are enough outlets, there just isn't enough length on the cords on our appliances to plug all of them in," she said.

Gogerty said she and her roommates use five extension cords and two power strips to plug in their most powerful appliances.

But Director of Residence Hall Services George Droll said extension cord use is discouraged in dorm rooms.

In the handbook for students living in residence halls, it is written under electrical appliances that outlets are not to be overloaded with extension cords or adaptors.

Last year, UI junior Jim Carlson learned firsthand what kind of problems extension cords can cause. While living in a dorm room at Hillcrest Residence Hall, a thick orange extension cord plugged into the wall overheated and set his mattress on fire.

"I didn't even realize it was a problem until I came home and found my room on fire," he said.

Carlson said he lost almost everything in his room because of the fire. He added that no one in the dorms had ever told him that he could not use extension cords.

Evans and Gogerty also said no one in the dorms has told them they cannot use extension cords in their rooms.

"It's very difficult to monitor 2,900 rooms," Droll said, "but a warning would be given to a student overloading an outlet, and if misuse results in a fire, that student would have to pay for damages."

And according to Justice, a fire caused by an extension cord isn't all that uncommon. He explained that when cords become overloaded, they get overheated, and the heat can easily be transferred to a carpet or to a wall and start a fire.

"Often times these cords are used wrong, either stapled to the wall or underneath the carpet," he said. "If used improperly or installed improperly, the risks can be doubled."

Justice said fire inspectors can usually expect to find one or two cords which violate fire codes inside every building they inspect.

When extension cords are found in use on a property, the fire department will always give a violation notice to the occupants and then return two weeks later to inspect again. By the third visit, the occupants will get billed for the inspection. Fire inspectors don't regularly patrol residence halls, apartments or houses though.

Carlson said he has learned his lesson — the hard way.

"I don't use them anymore," he said. "I just don't mess around with them."

A house to drive you buggy

RICHMOND, Calif. — Termites really bug Vernard Lewis. So the University of California entomologist built an $85,000 house, Villa Termiti, and invited 3,000 of the wood-munching pests to dinner — and death.

What the termites don't know is that the entree may be enticing, but they're the dessert. While they're noshing away on the free eats, workers will be trying out traditional and alternative ways of extermination to find out how best to wipe them out.

"The proofs in the pudding," said Lewis, who proudly unveiled his house of termite terror Tuesday.

It was a harried homeowner's dream.

Termites are munching away anywhere from $200 million to $400 million in damage, and that's just in California," Lewis said. "I'm told nationwide that figure jumps up to $2 billion."

Some of the guests at Villa Termiti Tuesday were human, there to celebrate an open house at the one-room, 400-square-foot Douglas fir structure built at UC Berkeley's Richmond field station with a $200,000 state grant.

In honor of the big day, Lewis whipped up a bug banquet for his human guests: termite soup, water bugs sauteed in garlic and worms stir-fried with green beans.

"To clean the palate, we have honeycomb," said Lewis, unperturbed by the cries of "Lord, give me strength" emanating from the kitchen in the main building near the house.

"I've had a lot of big days lately; this probably is going to stand out," Lewis said.

TESTIMONY RECOUNTS EVENTS

Williams claims shooting was unplanned

Kevin Williams and Michael Coleman face first-degree murder charges in the shooting death of Ryan Wagehoft. Two other men involved in the incident pleaded guilty to lesser charges. The prosecution wants to prove Williams ordered Coleman to fire the handgun.

Tory Brecht and Steve Chamraz
The Daily Iowan

Kevin Williams said he went to the mobile home of Ryan Wagehoft and Ryan Henry expecting a fistfight. Instead, one of the men accompanying Williams fired a pistol point-blank into the front doorway of the trailer, killing Wagehoft, Williams said in a videotaped interview shown in court Tuesday.

Williams and Michael Coleman are facing first-degree murder charges in the shooting death. Two other men who were with Williams and Coleman the night of the incident, Tommie McCune and Otis Penelton, pleaded guilty to lesser charges and are expected to testify for the state. The state aims to prove Coleman killed Wagehoft under Williams' orders.

In the videotaped interview conducted by special agent Rich Benson of the Iowa Department of Criminal Investigations, Williams said he was not expecting gunplay and actually discouraged Coleman, McCune and Penelton from bringing weapons to the trailer. "I told Michael, all of them, that we did not need a gun," Williams said. "We were going to fight."

But weapons were brought to the trailer, and when Wagehoft opened the door, a shot was fired.

"Somebody came to the door, and Michael shot him," Williams said on the videotape. "I never even saw the pistol."

According to Lt. Tommy Widmer of the Iowa City Police Department, after the shot was fired and Wagehoft fell to the floor, a golf club

"I told Michael, all of them, that we did not need a gun. We were going to fight. Somebody came to the door and Michael shot him. I never even saw the pistol."

Kevin Williams, charged with first-degree murder, during a videotaped interview shown in court allegedly carried by Wagehoft was dropped into the doorway and had to be kicked away in order for the door to close.

The four then allegedly fled in Williams' black Toyota Tercel.

Two pistols were later discovered by investigators under a television set in a nearby trailer home.

Testimony then turned to the chain of events that led to the arrest of Penelton and Williams, with officers from the ICPD, Washington County Sheriff's Department and Washington Police Department taking the stand.

According to witness Kurt Burmeister's report, two men in a Dodge Aries, Penelton and Williams, engaged Burmeister the morning after the shooting in a verbal confrontation outside of a Hy-Vee grocery store. Burmeister then flagged down Deputy Kenneth Miller of the Washington County Sheriff's Department, who was responding to an unrelated call. Miller pulled over the car which was driven by Trisha Finn.

After Miller advised other officers of the traffic stop, officer David Schweitzer of the Washington Police Department arrived on the scene to assist. Schweitzer, recognizing the two men, asked Williams if he was carrying any weapons. When he said he wasn't, Schweitzer asked him to step out of the car and proceeded to pat him down.

Penelton and Williams were then handcuffed and taken to the Washington Law Center for questioning. At the detention center, Penelton said he wanted to speak with authorities to tell his version of the story, claiming he didn't shoot anyone.

Authorities later searched the apartment of Angie Michalec, a friend of Penelton, where they found a duffel bag containing .22- and .30-caliber ammunition and identification cards belonging to Penelton.

UISA leaders question tuition increase for flood-damage repairs

Megan Penick
The Daily Iowan

With millions of dollars needed for flood repair on the UI campus, student leaders are asking where money from proposed tuition increases will be directed.

UI Student Association President John Gardner said UI President Hunter Rawlings told a group of student leaders at a meeting last week that a portion of a proposed tuition increase would go toward repairing flood damage.

"A portion of the Higher Education Price Index is earmarked for the costs of deferred maintenance," Gardner said. "This should not be coming out of students' pockets."

The UISA voted last week to oppose any tuition increase above the HEPI level of 3.4 percent. The HEPI scale is a national average for universities that determines the amount tuition needs to be raised in order to maintain educational standards. The HEPI scale takes into account inflation levels and the current price index to establish a ceiling on tuition.

UISA Vice President Micah Hobart said it is wrong for students to have to pay for flood damage.

"Hunter Rawlings gave us the impression that part of tuition was going to be used for flood repair. That's not a student's responsibility to pay for the mistakes of the university's planning," he said.

"What tangible benefits can we as students see from the increased tuition? That's the bottom line."

Micah Hobart, UISA vice president

However, Iowa state Board of Regents Executive Director Wayne Richie said he has not recommended that any of the tuition increase be used to repair flood damage. "The impact of flood damage has had a lot of potential influence on the state's ability to give funds, but none of the targeted tuition increase relates to flood damage," he said.

Vice President for University Relations Ann Rhodes said she has a different understanding of the situation than the student leaders. "The flood damage specifically should not affect tuition," she said. "We're going to use money from the tuition increase for building repairs and renewal."

Rhodes said money to pay for flood damage will come from a variety of sources, primarily federal insurance money, utility costs and general funds. The UI will ask for money from the Legislature as well. She said the tuition increase will include the 3.4 percent HEPI index plus added funds earmarked for building improvement.

"We would be seeking the same amount of tuition increase even if we hadn't had the flood," Rhodes said.

"Without Macintosh I would never have gotten my papers and projects done on time!"

Amy Jeffrey
U of I Senior in Communications

"Cut and paste functions on the Mac are lifesavers as they enable me to write and re-write my papers while sitting in front of the computer. I've previously used a Mac to type scripts for a production course, to write many term papers, and to complete projects for several business and statistics classes.

I would purchase a Macintosh because it is user-friendly and helpful in writing papers and finishing projects.

The Mac is easy to use, it takes no time at all to learn and there are a large variety of applications to choose from. Once you've tried a Macintosh, you will never want to switch to another computer."

LAN WOULD LOWER NO-SHOWS

Supervisors hear SEATS policy

Tricia Dev Wall
The Daily Iowan

Director of Johnson County SEATS Larry Olson presented a policy to the Board of Supervisors Tuesday which, if approved, will cut down on the number of no-shows SEATS drivers have been experiencing.

Olson said there is great need for such a policy as there were 87 no-shows in July and nearly as many in August. SEATS is a county service which provides transportation for elderly and disabled citizens.

Board Chairwoman Patricia Meade agreed that a no-show policy is in order, especially since they have been occurring with such frequency.

"I think it's a good idea," Meade said. "No-shows are costly timewise, for the vehicles and for others who can't get on."

The proposed policy will allow five no-shows within a 60-day period before a temporary suspension is issued. After the first three no-shows in a 30-day period, a written warning will be issued. A suspension will then be issued if two more occur within the subsequent 30 days.

"We need to have something in place to make people aware that they need to cancel their ride in time," Olson said. "Even allowing 30 minutes prior to the pick-up would save mileage and would enable us to dispatch another pick-up."

Olson said there are some people who are not responsible for setting up their own rides and that there are a few elderly who simply forget they have scheduled one. He said SEATS currently deals with these cases on an individual basis.

The board is scheduled to vote on the policy Thursday.

Olson also said SEATS drivers will soon need to upgrade their commercial operator's licenses in order to legally operate newly purchased buses.

Olson said SEATS plans to purchase additional buses because they work better than vans, especially for transporting wheelchair-bound persons.

COUNCIL CONTINUES PUBLIC HEARING

Officer presented with award

Heather Pitzel
Daily Iowan

Police officer David Droll was presented a Certificate of Commendation Tuesday for risking his life in the rescue of three people whose boat capsized on the flooded Iowa River.

Police Chief R.J. Winkelhake presented the certificate at the Iowa City City Council meeting and recounted the events that led up to the heroic effort at the Burlington Street Bridge. He noted that of the 50 public safety persons there, Droll risked his life twice to go over the bridge in order to rescue the boaters before they went over the dam.

In other business, the Council was addressed by the president of the Iowa City School Board, George Matheson, during a public hearing on an ordinance amending a conditional zoning agreement for a 240-acre tract of land, known as Windsor Ridge.

There is a potential school site on the land, and the city wants a guarantee that the school district will decide whether to build a school there within the next 12 years. The Windsor Ridge developer will pay an impact fee, but if the school is not built, the money goes back to the developer.

Matheson voiced concern about the collection of impact fees and said he'd prefer to see the time-span option be increased to 30 years. The Council voted to continue the public hearing at the next formal meeting.

The Council also voted to increase parking fines from $3 to $5 after 10 calendar days and then again to $10 after 30 days. Accordingly, the towing limit will be raised from $15 in parking tickets to $50. This action is intended to provide incentive for citizens to pay their parking fines in a timely manner.

101st justice named to Supreme Court

Mike Glover
Associated Press

DES MOINES — Des Moines lawyer Marsha Ternus has formally taken her place as the 101st justice and second woman to sit on the Iowa Supreme Court.

"We've reached another landmark in the history of this court," said Chief Justice Arthur McGiverin as he welcomed the court's newest member.

At 42, Ternus is the youngest member ever named to the state's highest court.

Gov. Terry Branstad administered the formal oath of office, then assumed babysitting duties, cradling Ternus' youngest child over his shoulder — complete with precautionary cloth to protect his dark suit in case of accidents.

"I am very proud and very thrilled to be here," Ternus said.

Branstad named Ternus to the court to fill a vacancy created by the retirement of Justice Louis Schultz.

AGREEMENTS SIGNED

Clinton, ex-presidents lambaste Perot, other NAFTA opponents

Martin Crutsinger
Associated Press

WASHINGTON — With three ex-presidents standing behind him, President Clinton signed supplemental agreements Tuesday that the White House hopes will overcome formidable opposition to establishing the world's largest free trade zone.

During an elaborate East Room ceremony, Clinton and former presidents George Bush, Jimmy Carter and Gerald Ford attacked opponents of the North American Free Trade Agreement who they said are distorting the truth and playing on Americans' worst fears.

Carter used the bluntest language, zeroing in on Dallas billionaire Ross Perot, the agreement's most vocal critic, who has contended that it will put 5.9 million American jobs in jeopardy as U.S. companies seek cheaper wages and lax enforcement of environmental and labor standards in Mexico.

"Unfortunately, in our country now, we have a demagogue who has unlimited financial resources and who is extremely careless with the truth who is preying on the fears and the uncertainties of the American public," Carter said, drawing a standing ovation from the crowd of NAFTA supporters.

Perot spokeswoman Sharon Holman said the former independent presidential candidate would not respond to Carter's attack. "We're going to stay focused on the issues," she said.

The 2,000-page main trade agreement was completed in August 1992 by the Bush administration. It would remove virtually all barriers to trade and investment among the United States, Mexico and Canada over a 15-year period.

Clinton demanded three supplemental agreements on enforcement of environmental laws, worker standards and sudden import surges to correct what he saw as flaws in the main agreement.

Those supplemental agreements were signed Tuesday in separate ceremonies by Clinton and Mexican President Carlos Salinas de Gortari, Canadian Prime Minister

"... We have a demagogue who has unlimited financial resources and who is extremely careless with the truth who is preying on the fears and uncertainties of the American public."

Former President Jimmy Carter, on billionaire Ross Perot

Kim Campbell, who is facing a tough October election, signed the agreements without a public ceremony Monday night, her office said.

The White House had most of the Cabinet on hand along with 13 governors, four mayors, various business executives and Democratic and Republican leaders from the House and Senate.

Clinton, who was forced to pass his economic program without a single Republican vote, is counting on GOP support to offset widespread defections by liberals in his own party.

He said the agreement would expand American exports and create 200,000 jobs during its first two years by lowering Mexican tariffs.

Elsewhere in his speech, Clinton also claimed the agreement would create 1 million jobs over five years, a figure he later conceded was inaccurate.

"I inadvertently made a factual error today, not a big one, but it was an error and we corrected it," he said, rolling back to the 200,000 figure.

"NAFTA means jobs — American jobs and good-paying American jobs. If I didn't believe that I wouldn't support this agreement," the president said.

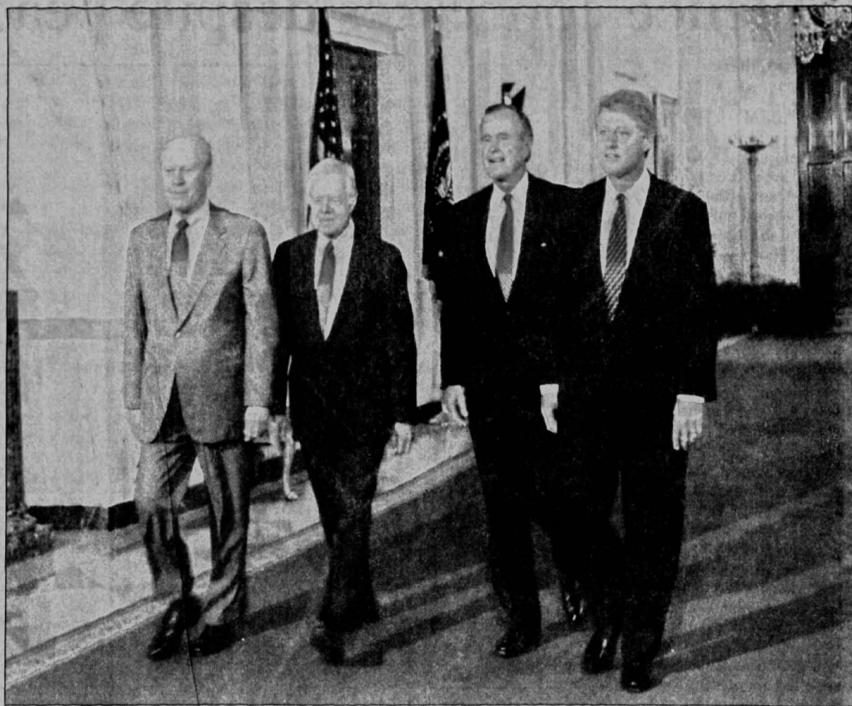

Opponents, including the Sierra Club and the AFL-CIO, called their own news conferences to attack the main agreement and the 87-page side agreements that the White House released Tuesday.

During the White House ceremony, Clinton and Bush, bitter foes in last year's presidential race, went out of their way to complement each other.

Speaking after Clinton, Bush said, "I thought that was a very eloquent statement by President Clinton, and now I understand why he's inside looking out and I'm outside looking in."

Bush also attacked skeptics he said were "taking the cheap and easy way out on this one, appealing to demagoguery." Ford warned of a sharp increase in immigration by Mexicans desperate for jobs if the agreement failed.

Former President Ronald Reagan was invited but said he could not make it.

President Clinton, accompanied by former presidents (from left) Ford, Carter and Bush, heads for the East Room of the White House Tuesday for the signing of a side agreement to NAFTA.

Kevorkian faces 2nd charge for assisted suicide

Jesse Washington
Associated Press

REDFORD TOWNSHIP, Mich. — Dr. Jack Kevorkian was arraigned Tuesday on a second charge of assisting in a suicide, this time in the death of a man who killed himself while Kevorkian was free on bond in the first case.

District Court Judge Richard Manning released Kevorkian on $10,000 bail with the condition that he not assist in any more suicides.

Kevorkian waved to cheering spectators as he left the courthouse, but had no comment.

The latest charge came in the death Thursday of Donald O'Keefe. The 73-year-old bone cancer victim was the 18th person to die in Kevorkian's presence.

Police, summoned by an emergency phone call, found O'Keefe dead at his home with a mask and tube over his nose and mouth. A canister of carbon monoxide gas was nearby and Kevorkian was in the house, police Chief David Parker said.

The call came hours after Kevorkian was bound over for trial in last month's death of 30-year-old Thomas Hyde Jr., who suffered from Lou Gehrig's disease.

Michigan's law against assisted suicide is punishable by up to four years in prison and a $2,000 fine.

HARD-LINERS OPPOSE AGREEMENT

Violence continues despite peace accord

Neil MacFarquhar
Associated Press

JERUSALEM — Two Palestinians died in attacks on Israelis that injured one soldier, and gunmen wounded three other soldiers Tuesday, less than a day after Israel signed an accord with the Palestinian Liberation Organization.

Some Palestinian and Israeli hard-liners oppose the peace agreement, and the Palestinian opponents have sworn to keep attacking Israeli authorities.

The army said it would seal off the Gaza Strip today at 7 a.m. until 8 p.m. Saturday in an attempt to prevent anti-Israeli assaults during the Jewish new year holiday.

PLO Chairman Yasser Arafat pledged to curb attacks on Israel as part of the recognition accord that preceded the autonomy pact, but violence is expected to increase as Hamas and other radical Palestinian groups try to wreck the deal.

Alaa Najjar, 19, of Gaza City carried out an apparent suicide attack by blowing himself up when the electric gate of a Gaza police station opened for a car, the Israeli army and Palestinian reporters said.

Also in Gaza, Abdullah Shehaber, 19, also of Gaza City was shot and killed by Israeli soldiers after he wounded a soldier at the observation post atop the municipal building in Palestine Square, the army and Palestinians said.

In the West Bank, shots fired at an army jeep badly wounded two soldiers and slightly wounded a third, Israeli reports said. The army spokesman office could not immediately confirm the reports.

In other developments, about 10,000 people marched for five hours Tuesday in the West Bank city of Nablus in the largest rally yet in support of Palestinian self-rule. About 5,000 supporters also marched through Israeli-occupied Gaza.

A Palestinian flag is waved from the top of a building in Nablus, Occupied West Bank, Tuesday the building following Monday's signing of the accord, until the day before, was an Israeli Army observation point. Israeli soldiers withdrew from the building following Monday's signing of the Israeli-PLO peace accord.

In a bid to assure Israelis that peace dividends were on the way, Prime Minister Yitzhak Rabin stopped in Morocco on the way home from Washington, where Israel and the Palestinians signed the peace agreement Monday.

He was looking for diplomatic relations with Arab countries that could help him sell the peace plan back home. Israel's Likud opposition bloc has called for new elections, and a debate in parliament next week may force a public referendum on the Palestinian autonomy plan.

Rabin described the visit as a step toward diplomatic relations and said at a press conference in Rabat that he heard many "very warm and promising things about the future" from his hosts.

But while the Israeli public has been generally supportive of peace moves, widespread unease exists about the role of the PLO.

"There isn't peace with Egypt, and there won't be with Morocco and Jordan either," said David Cohen, who lives in a Jewish settlement in the West Bank. "The terror will continue, but Hamas will take credit instead of Arafat."

Security appears to be the most difficult issue in selling the accord to Israelis. The pact foresees an Israeli withdrawal from the occupied territories and a final agreement on the permanent status of the lands within five years.

"If they can't deliver on security they will have failed the test and there will be tremendous pressure not to follow through on the agreement," said Joseph Alpher, director of Tel Aviv University's Jaffee Center for Strategic Studies.

The Jaffee Center announced it had been holding informal talks with senior PLO officials for 11 months on the security transfer. It is due to take place in the Gaza Strip and the West Bank city of Jericho by April.

PRISON CAMPS TO CLOSE

Latest Bosnian truce pledges access for aid convoys

Tony Czuczka
Associated Press

GENEVA — The presidents of Croatia and the Muslim-led Bosnian government signed a cease-fire for Bosnia Tuesday and pledged to open routes for aid convoys. They also agreed to close all prisoner camps.

Croatian President Franjo Tudjman and Bosnian President Alija Izetbegovic agreed fighting should stop "immediately and by no later than" Saturday.

Several previous agreements between the two sides have failed to stop the battles for territory that have raged for much of the summer in central and southern Bosnia.

The accord came as pressure mounted on Tudjman in Croatia, where his troops and Serb fighters have been engaged in the worst fighting since January.

Bosnian state radio reported heavy clashes on Tuesday between Croat and government forces in the central town of Gornji Vakuf. And in the besieged city of Mostar, at least 10 people were killed and several dozen wounded Tuesday night in an attack by Croatian troops from Bosnia and Croatia, Sarajevo radio said.

Serb fighters claimed to have shot down a Croatian army jet Tuesday. Croatian government would not comment on the report. But a U.N. official who spoke on condition of anonymity said only three of four MiG-21 fighters that took off from a Croatian airfield in the morning had returned.

Tension flared when Croatian troops captured two Serb-held villages and Serbs responded with rocket attacks near the Croatian capital, Zagreb, during the weekend.

Croatia fought a six-month war with its Serb minority in 1991 over the republic's secession from Serb-dominated Yugoslavia.

International peace mediators in Geneva welcomed Tuesday's accord, their spokesman John Mills said.

Tudjman and Izetbegovic pledged to create conditions for "free and unhindered passage of all relief convoys and activities of humanitarian organizations."

Only two U.N. aid convoys have been able to reach some 55,000 Muslims besieged in Mostar since June 15. And Muslims recently freed from Croat camps, gaunt from lack of food, reported torture and inhumane conditions.

The mediators, U.N. envoy Thorvald Stoltenberg and Lord Owen of the European Community, said they hoped the accord would lead to a resumption of the full peace talks. But they said it was too early to tell when that might be.

ARISTIDE TO RETURN

Haitian official resigns after death threats

Chris Angelo
Associated Press

PORT-AU-PRINCE, Haiti — The prosecutor overseeing the government's inquiry into a political assassination quit after receiving death threats, a private radio station said Tuesday.

The reported resignation of senior government prosecutor Wilson Ciceron follows the government's promise to take legal steps against the gunmen who dragged businessman Antoine Izmyery from a church Mass and shot him.

The assassination Saturday of Izmyery, a leading supporter of exiled President Jean-Bertrand Aristide, epitomizes the violence and intimidation that have paralyzed a new Aristide-backed government.

The violence has raised questions as to whether a U.N. peace plan calling for Aristide's return Oct. 30 can be carried out. In a statement released Tuesday, the U.N. civilian observer force blamed the killing on "civilian auxiliaries of the army."

Aristide asked Monday for international help to immediately kick out army leaders and police Chief Joseph Michel Francois.

But Army commander Raoul Cedras denied army involvement in the killing Tuesday and criticized Aristide's comments as "thoughtless."

Cedras and Francois oversaw the overthrow of Aristide and killing of hundreds of his supporters in 1991. Under the U.N. plan, accepted by the military after international economic pressure, Cedras and Francois must step down before Aristide's scheduled return.

TO STUDENTS & FACULTY
The College of Liberal Arts invites you to submit nominations for the COLLEGIATE TEACHING AWARDS

All full-time tenured and tenure-track faculty members are eligible to be nominated for these awards, which are funded by the Iowa Legislature to reward outstanding teaching. Nominations may be initiated by current or former students or by faculty colleagues who have firsthand knowledge of the nominee's excellence as a teacher.

There are four award categories: Fine Arts, Humanities, Social Sciences, and Natural Sciences. Each award carries a monetary prize of $3000.

Nominating materials are available in the Office of Academic Programs (116 Schaeffer Hall).

Deadline for nominations is October 13

'I am afraid the government will use money from the Pell Grant and campus based programs to fund the $1.5 billion national service program.'

UI Director of Financial Aid Mark Warner commenting on the national service plan

CENSORSHIP

451° F is kinda hot ...

Iowa ranks sixth in the nation as a state where books are challenged in attempts to censor them, and seemingly stands at the forefront of the shift from higher to lower learning. In a year of nationwide gear-shifting from Republican to Democratic, less-liberal to more-liberal, the state of Iowa has been a center of startlingly numerous and ugly little nests of censorship-based incidents. Iowa seems to be a bastion of dogmatic radicals and reactionaries genuflecting to the Great Book Burning God in the Sky.

Amusingly, Iowa has experienced yet another huge, freedom of speech / First Amendment fiasco just weeks before National Banned Book Week, which runs from Sept. 25 to Oct. 2. A special significance hangs on 1993's Banned Book Week due to recent events, so although it will not be celebrated with a decorated tree or a white sale at Sears, it will be celebrated ardently by people who enjoy the printed word.

Eschewing yet another foray into the current battle between various UI publications and organizations, one must realize that media at odds with the status quo of the politically or religiously correct is media that many want to make silent. Political and religious correctness are appropriate only to certain points, and then REAL LIFE takes the wheel to mow over attempts at rhetorical perfection. When dissident voices and opinions get censored, when important issues and attitudes are safely and superficially discussed, bad things happen. Instead of telling little Tommy and Betty that they cannot read a book because it is "bad," we should tell them that because a book is "bad," they should read it and discover why it might be "bad." Because everyone is a potential enemy of free speech — even you have your own list of "goods" and "bads" — there are things each of us should consciously do to celebrate Banned Book Week with finesse.

First, go to the public library and get the list of books challenged or banned in 1992-93. Since book challenges usually originate in public grade schools, middle schools and high schools, many of the books are geared toward younger age groups. A book is a gift that just keeps giving and giving, so go out and buy your favorite niece, nephew, cousin or other child a banned book; kids like to feel naughty, much like the rest of us.

Second, go out and buy yourself a banned book. Find something politically incorrect to quote and say it in class, or perhaps even to your co-workers. You may be amazed at the vehemence with which an entire group of people can tell you to shut up and go to hell.

Third, and finally, celebrate Banned Book Week every week of the year, or soon you might be celebrating Banned Newspaper / Journalist / Movie / Magazine Week.

The only question on organ donation: why not?

AIDS, cancer, heart disease, STDs and suicide are of common medical and social concern in today's world, but what about the issue of organ donation — giving of yourself to save someone else? Though we are presently unable to find cures for many terminal illnesses, we already have the cure for many dying people — that which is within our own bodies. It is up to the human race to save ourselves and one another, and it's as easy as signing your name.

The United Network for Organ Sharing maintains a national waiting list for vital organs. Today there are 30,000 people with lives waiting to be saved on the list with an average of 1,700 patients being added to it each month. An estimated 7,500 patients will not get their wish and will be left to die without a donor (The Living Bank Q&A fact sheet).

Many people procrastinate their declaration, either being too lazy or not realizing the shortage and the need for life. The sad reality is that in order to actually donate an organ a person must not only be stabilized in a hospital and on a respirator, but also be declared brain dead by a neurologist, and the donor's next of kin must agree in order for that person to donate. This indicates that an obvious vegetative state must persist before the patient is qualified as a donor.

In my eyes and those of many others, it is immoral and unfair to draw out an inevitable death, while in the process sacrificing a promising life, one that could easily be saved if only a kidney or a liver could be found. Because of the strict policy and all of the qualifications that must be met, an actual donation is rare. The few donors that exist make for few lives to be saved.

Going through the process of becoming a donor is a simple thing, yet it is a monumental moment in the lives of fading patients. Willing donors are hard to come by, so hard that hospitals are now required, as of legislation passed in 1986, to ask the next of kin of every patient for permission to use that person's organs at the time of impending death. There are no statistics on how many people agree to the question.

Organs that can be donated include kidneys, heart, liver, lungs and pancreas. Tissue includes corneas, skin, bone, middle ear, heart valve and blood vessels. Giving of yourself is said to be the greatest gift of all, and this expels the controversy of why to donate and promotes the morality of such an action. The only question that remains is: Why not?

The common myth is that having the donor box marked on your driver's license is enough. The time has come to dispel this fallacy. It's a wonderful start, but in most accidents the patient's license is taken by the authorities for investigation and the hospital is unaware of one's status as a donor. A Living Bank donor card serves as a backup, and all it takes is a letter.

If statistics don't spur support, real-life stories sure do. A Texas 3-year-old died while waiting for a heart that never came. Brittany Vines from Waco, Texas, became sick in late March 1993. Doctors judged her case to be beyond their care, and she was transferred to Fort Worth. Brittany was diagnosed with cardiomyopathy, an infection of the heart, which caused her ventricles to become incapable of pumping blood through her body.

Her family's insurance wouldn't cover the payment for a heart transplant, so the Texas Children's Hospital offered to give the child a heart and worry about the payments later. Brittany's name was in the top 10 on the national list. The family was told that the average waiting period is three months to a year. Brittany died 52 days later; a donor heart never came.

Trials of the graduate / professional student

In the last several weeks, returning students have been bombarded with information about how to succeed in school and how to get the most out of college (with "success" and "most" usually taken to mean "how to succeed at getting the most profitable job after college"). No one has discussed how to prolong these enjoyable days, how to savor each year until the money runs out and one is either forced to choose between graduating and getting a job or getting a job without graduating. In my own 10-year run at college (B.A., M.A., heading toward Ph.D.), I've gained a lot of valuable insights on this subject which I'd like to pass on to you. Believe it or not, it is entirely possible to make going to college a rewarding career of its own and evolve gently into the real world with no traumatic shocks. It just takes time.

1) Stay awhile.

First, of course, it is necessary to extend the stay in college beyond the five years that it takes most people to get the so-called "four-year degree." One can hardly aspire to professional status in less than six years; it takes most people that long to figure out where the best Xerox machine in the library is located. A real professional not only knows the softest seats in the Bijou, but also is on a schedule to scam free food at every art and music reception this fall. Pros can give you a thumbnail sketch of nearly every course offered in the liberal arts catalog — they have taken them all.

To make this pipe dream of endless college days a reality, find a nice town with a pretty downtown area, friendly people and a couple of good places to hang out. Adopt the attitude that college is an arena for self-development, inside and outside the classroom. Join political groups that take up a lot of time so that your failures in the classroom pale in comparison to the relevance of your commitment to global concerns. Get into the local music / theater / art / kickboxing scene — make good friends, maybe for the first time in your life. Develop a healthy fear of drudgery; note how disgusted your parents seem in their careers. Compare the 52 weeks of relatively unstructured time offered by college with the two weeks offered by a job. Think it over for a while. A long while.

2a) Change majors. Frequently.

A sure way to "go pro" is to change majors ... repeat when graduation threatens an end to evenings spent shooting pool at RT Grunts. This will wipe out a lot of credit hours which will henceforth only serve to drag down your cumulative average. After all, since everyone knows that you always wind up doing what you've trained for and you stop learning after you quit going to college, make absolutely sure that you're pleased with your choice.

2b) Drop out and come back.

Each time that you realize you're going to wind up selling insurance in your old hometown no matter what you take, drop out in utter despair. After four weeks of feeding tin cans into the Golden Goat for spending money, have a change of heart and reapply (in a different major, of course).

2c) Go with the flow — or beer seeks its own level.

Drink too much, act irresponsibly and skip final exams. Sleep late and blow off morning classes. Better yet, hang out with losers when you first arrive at UI — they will console you when your grades sink and buy you a round when you find that you can't change majors until your GPA goes up. These people make great companions during your stay; because they will never graduate and have no ambition, they will make you feel good about your under-achievements. More than that, they'll be right by your side every step of the way, and you'll never have to make new friends to replace the ones who have gone on and done something with their lives.

3) Become an aesthete.

For those of you who have more delicate sensibilities, you might develop a passionate attachment to a completely unmarketable subject in your quest to become a latter-day Renaissance Man / Woman. As you take a double major in art history and classical languages, minoring in anthropological botany, remember that the university (having, as it does, its roots in the medieval period) will indulge your pretensions to humanistic scholarship by practicing the latter-day form of blood-letting: TUITION. While it may put you in a foul humor, you'll probably find some loans to finance your quest for liberal arts nirvana. Take out several thousand dollars' worth ... that way, you'll be obliged to stay in school because you won't be able to make enough spouting Greek and hopping tables to make good your debts. (See also Go to grad school.)

4) Go to grad school.

If you haven't been able to avoid the dreaded ravages of graduation, there's always grad school. This is where the elite, known as "lif-ers," go to perfect the hanging-out skills they mastered as undergraduates. With a new cycle of incompletes, compound teaching-learning duties and the start of their own families, graduate students are faced with tempting opportunities to tarry awhile at the U. Tinkering with one's dissertation can be extended as long as one's adviser's patience holds out. One's student loans have reached stunning proportions and provide a strong impetus for delay. Everyone wants to believe that they will eventually be as smart as they thought their professors were, so they relentlessly take more classes. This wastes years.

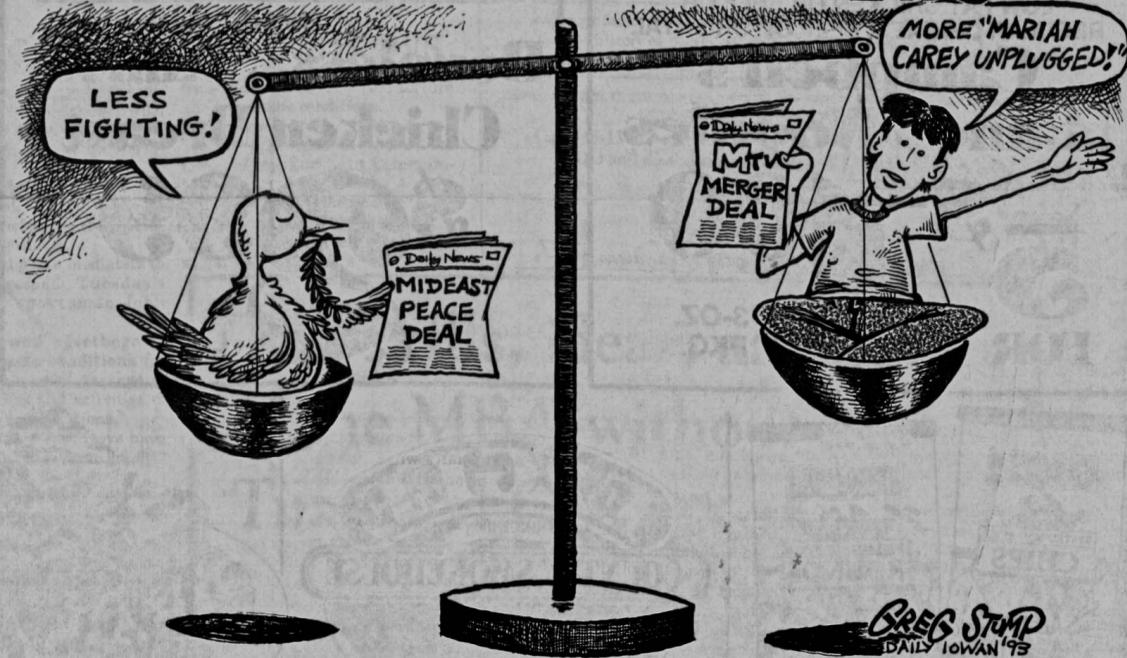

5) Grow up and face it. There's more to life than college.

Although it takes awhile to evolve to this state, you'll realize when you're beginning to outgrow collegiate life. When men reciting Monty Python routines verbatim bore you, when you take pride in reading everything before it's due, when you think drinking too much is expensive and pointless ... you're ready to move on.

'Solidarity in struggle?'

To the Editor:
I've been reading Jeff Klinzman for as long as I can remember (I've been here three years). Pound for pound, I'd say he's as good as the next. But there comes a time in the life of every UI student when, difficult as it is, he or she must move on, leave town, get a job, a life, etc. It's not just that the world has more to offer than the noble struggle for truth and freedom here in Iowa City, but the fact that people just get sick of you and your cause-of-the-week, not to mention your "martyr complex" and melodrama.

"Solidarity in struggle?" In Iowa City? Give me a break.

Attack on diversity

To the Editor:
Daily Iowan Editor Loren Keller's firing of Viewpoints columnist Jeff Klinzman is a hostile and blatantly hypocritical move that must be challenged. In his editorial Monday, Sept. 13 Keller wrote, "The Daily Iowan's Viewpoints Page will remain an open forum for the free exchange of ideas, and be assured, dear readers, that controversial opinions will continue to be published." No one should be fooled by Keller's words. Klinzman's firing took place only days after Keller's defense of David Mastio's call for the murder of abortion providers. The issue involved is one of suppressing the opinions of those like Klinzman who call for a fight back against the right-wing movement actively organizing against the rights of gays, women and international students for a voice and role in the UI community.

The firing of Klinzman is part of a general attack to stifle diversity and academic freedom by the campus right, supported and promoted by the UI administration. Keller's action mimics the UI administration in its dealings with issues of diversity and free alternative family culing," a film dealing with the alternative lifestyle of the drag queen subculture in NYC. The administration's response to a student's complaint about the film was to place a letter of reprimand in the instructor's permanent file and to put him on probation. In an earlier incident this year, Board of Regents members examined possible action against a TA who dared show her class an art film that sought to represent homosexual sex and life in a positive light.

The hypocritical message is clear: The administration will go so far in supporting academic freedom and cultural diversity before resorting to intimidation tactics and official action against those who offer positive views of gay lifestyle. The Campus Review's violence-promoting display and David Mastio's column are acceptable to the administration. What isn't acceptable is a fight back against the right by people who want to create a campus climate where bigotry is not tolerated. The reinstatement of Jeff Klinzman is only part of an overall campaign that must confront the right wing and its attack on multiculturalism and diversity at the UI.

GUEST OPINION

Strengthening graduate education: Now is the time

The Faculty Senate and its leadership have worked for several years to promote quality undergraduate and graduate education. We believe, along with the UI administration, that these should be the institution's two highest priorities.

In 1992, the administration and the Faculty Senate Budget Committee worked together to develop a strategic initiative aimed at strengthening graduate and professional education. The then president of the Faculty Senate Steve Collins focused on this priority in his presentation to the Board of Regents. In 1992, the graduate education initiative was reshaped to include an effort to secure tuition scholarships for graduate teaching and research assistants. The then president of the Faculty Senate Edward Lawler urged the regents to start the process of bringing compensation for graduate assistants in line with our competition. Current Faculty Senate President Jerald Schnoor has made graduate education a cornerstone of his agenda for 1993-94.

Despite considerable effort over the past few years to strengthen graduate education, progress has been modest at best. Graduate assistant compensation remains uncompetitive. We believe it is time for the faculty to take a strong position on this matter and to consider ways to ensure that this issue is resolved. There are several reasons for this:

- Excellent graduate teaching assistants enrich undergraduate education in basic and widely subscribed courses. Both good faculty and good graduate students are necessary for superior undergraduate programs. Good faculty attract good graduate students, and good graduate students help to bring good faculty to the UI.

- Excellent graduate research assistants enhance the quality of faculty research and scholarship. The faculty's responsibility to create new knowledge as a condition for the betterment of humanity is dependent upon the availability of outstanding graduate assistants.

- The UI now ranks near the bottom of the Big Ten in total compensation provided graduate assistants. We are eighth in compensation provided teaching assistants and ninth in compensation provided research assistants. As we fall further behind our competitors, even our best departments have recently been losing top candidates — including Iowans who get better offers in other states.

- Morale among graduate assistants is declining due to continuing uncompetitive compensation levels and unavailability of affordable health care and child care. Public misperception or criticism of the contributions of graduate students, and the perception by some graduate students that the institution assigns a low priority to graduate education, also contribute to the erosion of morale.

- Excellent graduate students are absolutely essential to the goals defined in the UI's strategic plan "Achieving Distinction." The difficulty of competing for the best graduate students threatens to undermine the quality of our teaching, research and service activities.

- Uncompetitive compensation packages are a particular barrier to women and minorities seeking graduate education and impede the institution's ability to increase access to its graduate programs.

- Advanced graduate education is critical to the economic competitiveness of the state. As Iowa seeks to expand and diversify its economy, it will increasingly depend upon workers with graduate and professional training.

Because of our conviction that the faculty must speak out in support of graduate education, we plan to offer the following resolution for consideration at the Faculty Senate meeting Sept. 28, 1993:

Recruiting of top quality graduate teaching and research assistants is becoming increasingly difficult due to highly uncompetitive compensation levels. Moreover, the faculty recognize that morale among graduate teaching and research assistants is declining. Accordingly, the University of Iowa Faculty Senate strongly urges the University and Regents to redouble their efforts to extend tuition scholarships to and improve health care and other benefits for University of Iowa graduate teaching and research assistants.

We hope that faculty and other members of the UI community will support an effort to strengthen graduate education. Such support is essential if we are to gain greater external recognition for the value of graduate education and the contributions of graduate assistants, and if we are to achieve competitive compensation for our teaching and research assistants. Steve M. Collins is a professor of electrical and computer engineering, and radiology. He currently chairs the UI Strategic Planning Committee.

Edward J. Lawler is the Duane C. Spriestersbach professor in the liberal arts, and a past president of the Faculty Senate.

GUEST OPINION

COGS necessary for bargaining

At first glance, the debate over the formation of a graduate student union at the UI may not seem to involve undergrads. The hottest issue in the debate is the so-called health-care subsidy.

On top of their regular salaries, graduate students will receive $300 per year to pay for the university health-care plan. This sounds good, but it doesn't even cover cost of living increases, and it goes directly to the UI health-care plan, even for the grads who can't afford the plan. They never see that $300. Graduate Student Senate officials have taken the credit for cutting this lousy deal with the administration: Your student government working for you!

But there is more... The forces which will align themselves against the Campaign to Organize Graduate Students, or COGS, will argue that a grad union would pose a danger to undergrad students' financial well-being. "Sure," they'll say, "it will help grad students, but this can only come at the expense of undergrads because the university doesn't have enough to go around." This is hogwash. If the UI were broke, it wouldn't be able to fund such pricey projects as: the business building ($33 million), the laser center ($25 million), the brand new pharmacy college addition ($16.5 million), the renovation of Hunter Rawlings' mansion ($300,000 upon his arrival), the Old Capitol renovation ($360,000), and the monument commemorating all the rich people who have donated large sums of money to the UI ($73 million).

How ironic that the UI can drop 73 grand to commemorate the vast donations of money it has received, but it's too poor to pay grad employees a decent wage without socking it to the undergrads. Somehow, I don't believe that is the case.

Arguments that a grad student union will conflict with undergrads' best interests are most likely to come from administration figures and student government. Considering the sources, these arguments demonstrate a shocking level of intellectual dishonesty.

The UI administration has consistently shown a callous disregard for students' best interests. It has repeatedly slashed already skeletal budgets and raised already hulking tuition costs. The insipid health and computer fees are simply tuition increases by another name. The administrative offices at this university are mazes of bureaucracy. In short, every part of student life — financial and otherwise — is terribly burdensome, and the UI is showing an inclination toward making it worse.

Echoes of the administration's arguments about undergrads' "best interests" will be heard from student government. However, these echoes will ring hollow when compared to the pathetic track record that the UI Student Association — particularly the dominant right-wing faction — has in its purported role as a "student advocacy group." The UISA has done little to nothing for students in response to the gargantuan budget cuts and fee increases of the last few years. Its predominant tactic of lobbying (read: begging) state government and administrative bodies has failed and will continue to fail because the Iowa state Board of Regents, et al., have no interest in going out of their way to meet students' needs. The poorly organized walkout of fall 1991 to protest budget cuts had absolutely no direction and squandered real student anger.

The right-wing caucus that currently dominates the UISA has not only failed as a student advocate, it has consistently acted as an opponent of student interests. Members have opposed student resistance to tuition increases with the line, "Students should pay their fair share." Last spring they tried to push through a completely unrepresentative student government endorsement of former regents' President Marvin Pomerantz. While toeing the administration line and supporting tuition increases, they attempted to defund student political groups and executed a blatantly racist attack against international student groups. These funding cuts combined would have saved each student a paltry sum of less than two bucks while squelching important channels for students to gather for social events and political discussion.

The hideous irony of all this is that it was the administration's indifference to student concerns and the student government's incompetence in addressing those concerns that frustrated grad students enough to self-organize and build COGS. Now these two bodies will champion the cause of student concerns in their attempts to stop the union.

The interests of graduate and undergraduate students are similar and in many ways linked. A graduate student union will be able to change teaching assistant and research assistant pay into a living wage. Relieving the pressures on graduate students caused by poor medical care, no child care, tuition, job insecurity, disappearing academic freedom and much more will make them better able to concentrate on their teaching. And the work of grad student teachers comprises much of every undergrad's education. Any undergrads who give a damn about their education should appreciate the burden borne by grad student teachers. Likewise, anyone who values the search for an understanding of the universe should appreciate the burden borne by grad student researchers.

Graduate and undergraduate students are also being screwed by the same university system. It's the same administration that raises tuition for grads and undergrads, cuts services, shrinks course availability, causes all the problems the union will be working against and makes it impossible for you to do anything about it alone. In order to get away with this, UI officials try to divide the students into mutually hostile camps so they aren't strong enough to challenge the UI company policy. Students will gain nothing by aligning with the administration against other students except emptier pockets and new gold leaf on the Old Capitol dome.

In conclusion, I urge all graduate students to ignore the hypocritical arguments of union opponents and get involved in COGS and the graduate student union. Unity for our own interests against management can only help us all. I also urge undergraduate students to support the graduate student union. Solidarity makes us all stronger. United we bargain, divided we beg!

SEXUAL ASSAULT AWARENESS WEEK SEPT. 13-19

Acquaintance Rape Risk Reduction

Many of us are brought up holding a certain image in our minds of a rapist: a stranger, someone who is crazy, someone who looks a certain way, someone we could certainly identify and recognize as dangerous. But in reality, most rapes are acquaintance rapes — it's been estimated that in as many as 70% of rapes, the victim knows the assailant. Rapists very often may appear "normal" — many are attractive, articulate, and charming. Although rape is NEVER the victim's fault and many rapes are unavoidable and unpredictable, there are several behavioral warning signs that we can become aware of and learn to listen to — warning signs that may indicate danger:

- Someone who emotionally abuses you — through insults, comments, ignoring your opinions and/or feelings.
- Someone who acts angry or sulky when you initiate an activity or an idea.
- Someone who tries to control elements of your life or your relationship — who tells you who you may be friends with, who you can talk to, what you can wear.
- Someone who always insists on making decisions, for example — the movie you'll see or the restaurant you'll go to.
- Someone who talks negatively about women in general.

- Someone who holds false, dangerous ideas about women — for example, that women ask to be raped.
- Someone who gets jealous when there's no reason; who is overly possessive or overly accusatory.
- Someone who acts in an intimidating way towards you (sits too close, uses his body to block your way, touches you when you tell him not to, speaks as if he knows you much better than he does.)
- Someone who is physically violent to you or others, for example, grabbing and pushing to get his way.
- Someone who is unable to handle sexual and emotional frustrations without becoming angry.
- Someone who drinks heavily or uses drugs or tries to get you intoxicated.
- Someone who berates you for not wanting to get drunk, get high, have sex, or go with him to an isolated or personal place — his room, your apartment, etc.
- Someone who doesn't view you as an equal either because he's older or because he sees himself as smarter or socially superior.

cial assistance to the PLO because of its long history of terrorism against Israelis and Americans.

Senate Majority Leader George Mitchell, D-Maine, said Congress and the Clinton administration would pursue "the best and most appropriate way" to further the peace process.

Arafat then went to the National Press Club where he said that more than 1 million Palestinians in Gaza faced starvation. "We are in need, at least, of loan guarantees."

At the same time, Arafat reaffirmed he intends to see a Palestinian state established and to take control of East Jerusalem, which he described as occupied territory.

"We know there is a problem, and we are not going to put our heads in the sand," he said. "No. We have to face all the problems. ... If there is a will, we can find a way."

He said joint Palestinian-Jordanian committees were already working on a confederation of a Palestinian state with the kingdom headed by King Hussein.

On another issue, Arafat said he would not use force against Hamas and other Muslim radical groups to compel them to abandon violence. The problem, he said, would be dealt with through "democracy" within the PLO.

A few miles away, at the State Department, the agreement signed by Israeli and Jordanian diplomats kept the peace momentum going. Presiding at the ceremony, Christopher said the document was "a very important step toward that very comprehensive peace" between Israel and the Arabs.

He noted that it came just a day after "we witnessed the historic signing of the Israeli-Palestinian declaration of principles, an event that really has forever altered the contours and chemistry of the entire region."

The earlier accord gives the Palestinians immediate administrative control over Gaza and Jericho and calls for negotiations within two years on the future of Jerusalem and the PLO's quest for a state on Israeli-held land.

Israel's chief negotiator, Elyakim Rubinstein, said the agreement with Jordan was "yet another step in a long road to peace." Rubinstein had opposed the accords with the PLO and flew here from Jerusalem only to sign the Jordanian agreement he helped put together.

Ambassador Tarawneh, who signed for Jordan, stressed that any final agreement would depend on accords between Israel and all its Arab neighbors.

"We are not negotiating a truce, we are negotiating a genuine peace ... that will last for generations to come," Tarawneh said. "We don't want to rush."

At the White House, President Clinton praised the fast-moving developments and applauded both the agreement for Palestinian self-rule and King Hassan's gesture toward Israel.

"I think the king has set an example" other Arab states will follow — "trying to establish a continuing dialogue," Clinton said.

gene for the disease and pass it on.

Wilson's disease does not allow the body to excrete copper normally. It is usually gradual, but sometimes can be a fulminant, overwhelming disease, LaBrecque said. The illness can cause either neurological, psychiatric or liver problems.

In rare cases where it appears in a certain form, red blood cells are rapidly destroyed. In such a case, there is no prior warning and death can occur rapidly — within days or weeks. LaBrecque said in this instance a liver transplant is usually the only chance for survival.

More often Wilson's disease is gradual. If diagnosed early enough, it can be treated with medication. However, because the disease is so rare, it can be difficult to identify, LaBrecque said.

Gordon's funeral is today at West Clermont Lutheran Church in Clermont, Iowa.

SERVICE PLAN

The pilot program is scheduled for three years and is expected to help 100,000 people and cost $1.5 billion.

UI Director of Financial Aid Mark Warner expressed apprehension about financing of the plan.

He said national service is a terrific concept, but it may harm students if existing programs are cut to raise the $1.5 billion needed.

"As college costs go up, federal Pell Grant support is decreasing," he said. "I am afraid the government will use money from the Pell Grant and campus based programs to fund the $1.5 billion national service program."

Last year the maximum Pell Grant was set at $3,700, but Congress later allocated $2,300 per student. Warner said the maximum Pell Grant is expected to fall to $2,250.

Firzlaiff said $7,400 for living expenses is too high for some areas.

"Maybe it would be better if the amount for living expenses were adjusted depending upon where you go to school," she said. "Obviously, it costs more to live in New York City than in Iowa City, but overall it's a great idea."

Participants have to be at least 17 years old, U.S. citizens and high-school graduates or agree to achieve at least a General Equivalency Degree. The tuition awards would be placed in the national service trust and would then be distributed directly to the colleges or lending institutions.

Students would complete their community service by working with conservation or youth corps, nonprofit organizations or poor communities.

Michael Jogerst, a UI political science professor, said the program is a good start and hopes it will expand.

"It should help more students than 100,000," he said. "Obviously, many people need resources for education, and many communities need service. Communities need people who want to serve so we should utilize the maximum resources this program could potentially provide."

He said he would have liked to participate in the program for the experience.

"I had a hard time financing school," he said. "This program would have been a great opportunity because it is the right thing to do and a great experience."

Warner said he would support the service plan if he was assured the money would not come from existing federal financial aid programs.

Iowa State Bank student loan manager Renetta Burlage is also concerned about funding.

"Overall it is a good idea," she said, "but I wonder if the government will be able to fund direct lending and the service plan. It would be sad to see one of the programs come to a sudden halt due to lack of funding."

"Direct lending" is the government's objective to take over the student loan process by 1997 or 1998.

Despite her concerns, Burlage said she and many of her student clientele are extremely excited.

"They are more than willing to give their time and effort," Burlage said. "I think that says a lot for the president's program. I just hope they are able to handle everything."

Julie Lindsay, a UI freshman pre-journalism major, may have the opportunity to use this program.

"I think it is a great idea," she said. "It makes you feel like you are really working for your education and benefiting the community at the same time."

booth nearby. "And there was blood all coming out of his mouth, and I think he's dying," she told an emergency operator.

Colley, who lived with Jagger for about 12 years, was the ninth foreign tourist in Florida to be killed since October. Early Thursday, a German honeymooner driving an unmarked rental car from the Miami airport to his hotel was shot to death in an apparent highway robbery attempt.

Although police said it appeared that Colley's killers were unaware he and Jagger were foreign tourists, Gov. Lawton Chiles suspended all tourist advertising for Florida — at home and abroad.

The governor also ordered beefed-up patrols at the state's 48 interstate highway rest areas, deploying 540 auxiliary officers from the Florida Highway Patrol, Game and Fresh Water Fish Commission, and Marine Patrol. The officers have law enforcement powers as long as they remain in contact with police.

The state also was exploring ways to hire private security for a permanent 24-hour presence at the stops.

"We have to turn our outrage into determination," Chiles said. "Violence and brutality have no welcome mat in Florida."

Field hockey ranked No. 2

The Iowa field hockey team is ranked No. 2 in the first NCAA Division I coaches poll of the 1993 season, released Tuesday.

North Carolina is No. 1, followed by the 1992 national runners-up Hawkeyes, Big Ten rival Northwestern, last year's NCAA Champion Old Dominion and Big Ten newcomer Penn State.

Iowa faces Northeastern Thursday, before taking on No. 6 Maryland Saturday and No. 8 Boston University Sunday.

Iowa Women's Sports Information wins awards

The University of Iowa received two Citations of Excellence in the College Sports Information Directors of America Contests for the 1992-93 academic year.

Best Cover Awards for tennis and track and field brochures went to the Women's Sports Information staff members Beth Weber, Cathy Bongiovi, Jeff Hartz and Shelli Stewart.

Fans advised to start early to football game

Football fans driving to Kinnick Stadium for Saturday's game are once again advised to start early due to construction projects on Interstate 80, campus construction projects and flood damage in the Iowa City area.

Delays are possible on Interstate 80 where construction is under way in Scott, Johnson and Cedar counties east of Iowa City and in Jasper County west of Iowa City.

Bridge repairs on U.S. 6 over the Cedar River in Muscatine County and on Iowa 965 over the Iowa River in Johnson County will also slow traffic.

Travelers in the Iowa City and West Branch area should note that two westbound on-ramps, the West Branch exit No. 254 and the Herbert Hoover Highway interchange No. 249, will be closed from 10 a.m. to 2:30 p.m. Saturday.

Cyclones back to gold

AMES, Iowa (AP) — Iowa State will go back to wearing gold pants for Saturday's game at Wisconsin.

The Cyclones wore new red pants with their red jerseys against Iowa last Saturday. Coach Jim Walden said the reds will be for special occasions only.

"We bought it for an oddity," he said. "Other teams do it. Why shouldn't we?"

BASEBALL

Suspensions handed out

NEW YORK (AP) — Mariano Duncan of the Philadelphia Phillies and Frank Castillo of the Chicago Cubs were suspended for three games on Tuesday by National League president Bill White.

Duncan was suspended for charging Castillo on the mound and fighting, creating a bench-clearing melee, on Sept. 9 at Philadelphia. Castillo was punished for throwing at the batter, fighting and creating a melee.

Both suspensions are effective immediately.

Both players have appealed the suspensions, which will not be served pending hearings.

Pirates, Orioles trade complete

PITTSBURGH (AP) — The Pittsburgh Pirates will receive outfielder Stanton Cameron and left-handed pitcher Terry Farrar from the Baltimore Orioles to complete last week's Lonnie Smith trade.

Cameron hit .276 with 21 homers and 84 RBIs this season with the Orioles' Class AA Bowie (Md.) farm club. Farrar pitched for the same team, going 7-7 with a 3.49 ERA in 24 games, 21 of them starts.

The Pirates traded Smith to the Orioles last Wednesday. Smith is not eligible for either the American League playoffs or the World Series.

Iowa's Big 10 opener reunites Fry, Paterno

Roxanna Pellin

The Daily Iowan

Saturday's Iowa-Penn State game marks the first time the Hawkeyes and Nittany Lions will meet as Big Ten rivals, but the game will be nothing new for the two veteran coaches who combine for 60 years of head coaching experience.

Kickoff is scheduled for 2:35 p.m. at Kinnick Stadium.

According to Iowa coach Hayden Fry, in his 15th season at Iowa and 32nd as a head coach, said he first got to know Penn State's Joe Paterno when they were opposing coaches in the 1968 Hula Bowl. Fry's team trailed 35-0 at halftime, but rallied back.

Hayden Fry

"We had those rascals 36-35 late in the game and they had to kick a field goal to win it," Fry said.

"Joe remembers that."

Fry said he's a big fan of Joe Paterno, who's in his 28th season at Penn State.

"I relate to Joe because he's older than me and he's still in the coaching profession, doing a heck of a job," Fry said. "Maybe that will keep people off my back. Hey, you don't have to be 35 or 40 to be a good coach. I love the guy."

Paterno returned the compliment.

"Hayden's done it all," Paterno said. "He's a great person. He's a credit to the sport. It's great to have people like that staying in. I feel exactly the same way about Hayden."

The Hawkeyes are coming off a 31-28 win at Iowa State Sept. 11. Fry said eight or nine of his Hawkeyes were injured during the close win and were unable to practice early this week.

Fry said he's unsure of when senior quarterback Paul Burmeister will be ready to play.

Burmeister, who did not practice Tuesday, was hit with a helmet in the back on a draw play against Iowa State.

"He does not have anything wrong with the kidney," Fry said. "I guess you could classify it as a deep bruise in the small of the back. He's extremely sore."

Defensive lineman Lloyd Bickham will be sidelined against the Nittany Lions.

Besides recovering from injuries, Fry said his team will have to keep its intensity to win. He said he talked to the players about not backing down at halftime of the Iowa State game. The Cyclones trailed 21-7 at the half, but came back to score three unanswered touchdowns.

"I think if you examine the first half, we were highly motivated against Iowa State," Fry said.

"I don't know if we can pick it up a notch. What we have to do is pick it up a notch for the full 60 minutes."

"I'm real happy with our players. I know they're just young men and they're going to make mistakes."

Penn State hosted Southern Cal in a 21-20 win last Saturday and opened its Big Ten season with a 38-20 win over Minnesota Sept. 4.

Paterno said he sees the Iowa game as the Nittany Lions' real introduction to the conference.

"Once we play somebody as good as Iowa away from home and see how we shape up, then I think we'll have a better feel for what it's all about," he said.

Fry said the Penn State matchup is bad timing for his young Hawkeyes.

"I wish we could have caught them a lot later in the schedule and given our team time to mature and gain experience," he said. "Plus the fact that somebody could knock them off and bring them back to earth. Right now they're on cloud nine."

Yankees stay on Blue Jays' heels

Associated Press

MILWAUKEE — Danny Tartabull hit his 30th homer and drove in four runs Tuesday night as the New York Yankees stayed on Toronto's heels in the AL East, beating the Milwaukee Brewers 12-5.

New York remained 1½ games behind the first-place Blue Jays and one-half game ahead of Baltimore.

Paul Gibson (1-0) went five innings, allowing just four hits and a run in relief of Wickman.

John Jaha had RBI singles for the Brewers in the sixth and eighth innings. Milwaukee loaded the bases in the eighth before Bobby Munoz retired pinch-hitter Dickie Thon.

Two runs scored on Randy Velarde's sacrifice fly in the ninth to make it 12-5.

Blue Jays 9, Tigers 5

DETROIT — Tony Fernandez drove in five runs and Juan Guzman won his fifth straight game.

Guzman (12-3), who hasn't lost in seven starts since July 20, allowed six hits over 7½ innings, struck out six and walked three. Duane Ward pitched the ninth, striking out Cecil Fielder with two on to end the game.

Rickey Henderson broke a 5-5 tie in the eighth against Storm Davis (2-7) with an RBI groundout.

Orioles 11, Red Sox 3

BOSTON — Fernando Valenzuela got his first victory since July 23.

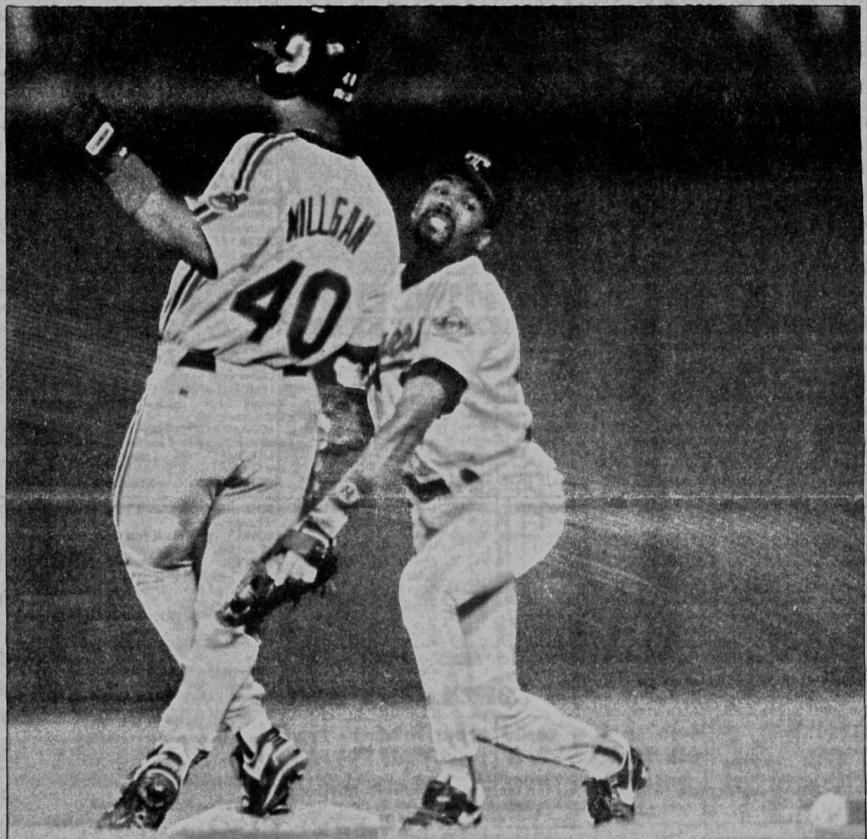

Chris Hoiles hit a two-run homer in the seventh against Danny Darwin (14-11).

Valenzuela (7-9) pitched an eight-hitter, walking two and striking out three.

White Sox 8, Royals 3

KANSAS CITY, Mo. — Ivan Calderon broke a tie with a three-run double on reliever Stan Belinda's first pitch.

Jason Bere (9-5) gave up six hits and four walks while striking out five.

Cleveland's Randy Milligan (40) is safe at second base as fourth inning of the Indians' 2-0 win Tuesday in Arlington, Texas. Mark Clark was the winner.

Indians 2, Rangers 0

ARLINGTON, Texas — Mark Clark threw eight innings of four-hit ball.

Clark (5-4) extended his string of scoreless innings to 14, a span in which he has allowed only six hits. He struck out six and walked one as the Rangers were shut out.

Kenny Rogers (15-9) was the loser.

Athletics 8, Twins 3

MINNEAPOLIS — Kurt Abbott and Scott Hemond hit two-run homers as Oakland beat Minnesota.

Dave Winfield drove in a run with a sacrifice fly but went hitless in three at-bats to remain three hits away from 3,000 in his career.

Steve Karsay (2-3) won for the first time since his big-league debut, outpitching fellow rookie Eddie Guardado (3-8).

NATIONAL LEAGUE

Gant, Glavine lead Atlanta past Reds

Associated Press

ATLANTA — Ron Gant hit the first regular-season grand slam of his career and Tom Glavine got his 19th victory as the Atlanta Braves beat the Cincinnati Reds 10-3.

The Braves, returning from a 5-2 road trip that boosted them into first place in the NL West, entered the game with a 1½-game lead over San Francisco.

The Braves, who played at home as a first-place team for the first time since April 13, won for the 10th time in 12 games. The Reds have lost four in a row and nine of 12.

Gant connected in the second inning off Bobby Ayala (6-8) to give Atlanta a 6-0 lead. Glavine (19-5) — just one victory shy of the 20-win mark for the third straight season — won for the ninth time in his last 10 decisions.

Mets 5, Phillies 4

NEW YORK — Jeff Kent blooped a bases-loaded single in front of Lenny Dykstra in the sixth and the ball bounced past the center fielder as another run scored.

Philadelphia, which led the Expos by 1½ games on Aug. 21, led by just 4½ following Tuesday night's action. The Expos beat St. Louis 12-9.

Philadelphia has lost six of nine, and its late-season skid has raised the spectre of 1964, when the Phillies led second-place St. Louis by 6½ games with 12 to go only to lose 10 straight and blow the pennant.

Frank Tanana (7-15), who had lost three straight starts, allowed three runs and eight hits in six-plus innings.

Danny Jackson (12-11), who also lost to the Mets on Aug. 14, allowed four runs — just one earned — and five hits in six innings.

Expos 12, Cardinals 9

ST. LOUIS — Rookie Kirk Rueter raised his record to 8-0 as the Montreal Expos remained red hot with a 12-9 victory over the St. Louis Cardinals.

Moises Alou drove in three runs with a triple, double and two-run homer for the Expos, who have won seven games in a row and 16 of 17.

The Expos have won eight of their last nine on the road and ended the Cardinals' four-game winning streak.

Allen Watson (6-5) was the loser.

Philadelphia's Pete Incaviglia, right, is tagged out at second by New York second baseman Jeff Kent during the fourth inning of the Mets' 5-4 win.

Pirates 1, Marlins 0

MIAMI — Carlos Garcia hit the first pitch of the game for a home run and Paul Wagner threw a six-inning shutout as the Pittsburgh Pirates beat the Florida Marlins in a rain-shortened game.

It was the first win since July 17 for Wagner (6-7) who allowed four hits, struck out five and walked three. He was credited with a complete game, the first of his career.

Chris Hammond (10-11), whose last win came on July 2, went the distance for Florida.

Rockies 9, Astros 4

DENVER — Reliever Bruce Ruffin set a team record with nine strikeouts and Charlie Hayes hit a three-run homer as the Colorado Rockies beat the Houston Astros 9-4 in the first game of a doubleheader.

The game was a make-up for one postponed Monday when more than five inches of snow fell in Denver.

Ruffin, who relieved Armando Reynoso (10-10) in the sixth; struck out nine of the 16 batters he faced over four innings. Hayes took the team lead with his 22nd homer and drove in his 82nd run, both career-bests. Doug Drabek (8-16) gave up 12 hits and six runs over four-plus innings and took the loss.

NBA

Suns' Dumas entered drug-rehab clinic

Associated Press

PHOENIX — Richard Dumas, the Phoenix Suns forward pursued by Detroit in a possible trade for Dennis Rodman, sought treatment for two weeks last month at a drug-rehabilitation clinic in Houston.

Dumas, who has a history of substance abuse, was treated at the John Lucas clinic, a Houston television station reported Tuesday.

Richard Dumas

Dumas did not check into the NBA's Adult Substance Abuse Program center in Van Nuys, Calif., as expected, and one of his agents told KRIV-TV the league had not yet become involved.

"We're concerned about Richard's medical problems," said James Bryant, a Tulsa, Okla., lawyer. "Richard felt he needed further help from John Lucas and his people in his recovery. That's why he voluntarily checked back in. At this point, we don't know what action the NBA will take as far as Richard seeking further help."

Bryant said Dumas left the Lucas clinic in late August for his hometown of Tulsa but planned to return soon. He acknowledged the August visit was for help beyond Dumas' after-care program.

Suns president Jerry Colangelo said he was not sure of Dumas' whereabouts.

"We are given limited information on the team level," he said.

The NBA's drug program is confidential and is overseen by the league and the Players Association. The league would not confirm or deny whether Dumas had returned to a treatment center for after-care.

In any case, these developments apparently ended the Suns' hopes of trading Dumas and other players to the Pistons for Rodman.

Colangelo recently reopened the third set of trade talks with the Pistons. In the first two cases, Detroit asked for Dumas as part of the package because it needs a small forward.

"I think it would be safe to say anything happening with Dumas would be remote," Pistons player-personnel director Billy McKinney said.

Dumas' selection in the 1991 draft drew boos from a Phoenix crowd still smarting from a team drug scandal four years earlier.

The 6-foot-7 forward lasted two years at Oklahoma State before substance abuse caused him to leave for a season in Israel. He was suspended before the 1991-92 season after failing a random test.

The ASAP center is where the NBA sends players who either voluntarily admit to a substance-use problem or have a positive drug test. Each referral or check-in counts as a strike. Three strikes result in banishment for two years. Reinstatement is not automatic.

A clause in the collective bargaining agreement says a player may not come forward on his own until he has played in an NBA regular-season game. Since Dumas' problem two years ago was detected before the team had played, he may not have a strike against him.

Brian McIntyre, the NBA's vice president of public relations, told the Arizona Republic his office has received no indication of a strike against Dumas.

Griffey joins elite again

Associated Press
ANAHEIM, Calif. — Ken Griffey Jr. is at it again — matching statistics with some of baseball's greatest names.

His two in Monday's 10-1 victory over California gave the Seattle outfielder his third straight 100-plus RBI season. He did it before turning 24, a feat accomplished only by Joe DiMaggio, Ted Williams, Ty Cobb, Mel Ott and, most recently, Texas' Juan Gonzalez.

Griffey, 23, an All-Star in four of his first five major-league campaigns, is the youngest player with three consecutive 100-RBI seasons. He knocked in his 100th run with a first-inning sacrifice fly, then added a solo homer in the seventh, ending a streak of 21 hitless at-bats.

"I had 20 games to go and one more to get, so I figured I'd get there sooner or later," Griffey said with a laugh. "When I get to 10 RBIs, I say I want 20 and keep going from there. I'm never satisfied with what I do."

His father Ken, now a coach with the Mariners, doesn't let his son get complacent. The elder Griffey watched the media crush around his son from the other side of the clubhouse with a bemused grin and reminded him — loudly enough for all to hear — that his 41st homer was only his second hit in 29 at-bats.

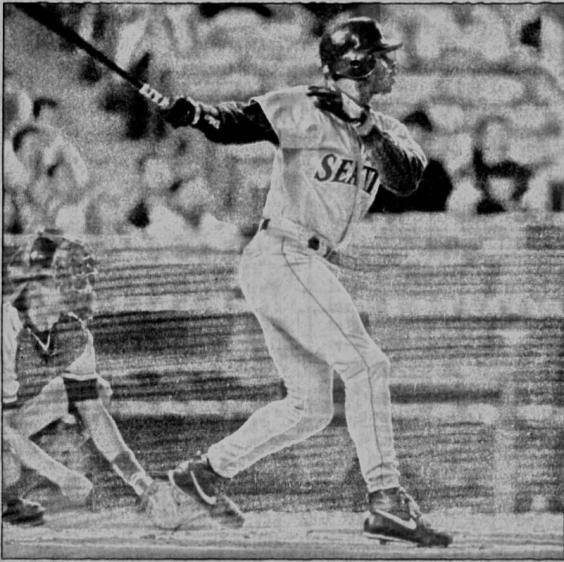

Ken Jr. just smiled and yelled back. "Like father, like son. I remember he went 5-for-65. I'm going to have to call my grandmother to have him straightened out."

Griffey Jr. finished third in the 1989 rookie of the year balloting behind pitchers Gregg Olson and Tom Gordon, after hitting 16 homers and driving in 61 runs at age 19. At 23, he is younger than both Mike Piazza and Tim Lincecum, the front-runners for NL and AL rookies of the year.

He also had the advantage of a father who played 17 seasons in the majors. But his dad never had more than 85 RBIs in a year. Of course, Ken Sr. wasn't as much of a run producer, particularly during his years with Cincinnati's "Big Red Machine."

"His job wasn't to drive in runs; it was to get on base," Griffey said of his father. "We talked about that, and one day I asked him why? He told me that when he was younger, his job wasn't to hit home runs, but get on base for the guys behind him. We're different ballplayers."

They're together in the record books, however. Both Griffeyes were teammates in Seattle until Ken Sr. retired as an active player at the end of the 1991 season. Tuesday was the third anniversary of the night at Anaheim Stadium when father and son pulled off a major-league first by hitting home runs in the same game — back-to-back, no less.

It might be one of the few times the father will be there and one of many entries for the son before he is through, but it is unique.

Griffey Jr. also is trying to become the first left-handed batter in 23 years to drive in 100 runs, score 100 runs, bat .300 and hit 40 homers. The last to do it were Hall of Famers Carl Yastrzemski of the Red Sox and Billy Williams of the Cubs in 1970, the year after Griffey was born.

Whitaker wants decision changed

Ed Schuyler Jr.
Associated Press

NEW YORK — Because a judge apparently also served as a jury, Pernell Whitaker's promoter believes a draw decision should be changed and Whitaker made the winner of his WBC welterweight title defense against Julio Cesar Chavez.

Dan Duva, through his attorney Pat English, has asked the Texas Department of Licensing and Regulation, which oversees boxing, to take such action.

A spokesman for the department said no action could be taken until a formal complaint is filed.

As Chavez moved forward in the sixth round, Whitaker threw a body punch that landed low. Referee Joe Cortez stopped the bout for about 30 to 45 seconds to allow Chavez to recover, but did not deduct a point, obviously considering the low blow unintentional.

It was a big round for Whitaker and judges Franz Marti of Switzerland and Jack Woodruff of Dallas each scored it 10-9 for Whitaker.

Judge Mickey Vann of England scored it 10-9 for Chavez.

James Lawton, writing in the Daily Express in London, quoted Vann as saying "The referee didn't take off a point, but I thought it had to be done."

"The only one who can take a point away is the referee, and that's true in fights all over the world," Duva said.

Vann's deduction of a point also indicates that he thought it had been an even (10-10) round. If he had scored it as such, his final score would have been 116-115 for Whitaker. That would have made Whitaker a majority-decision winner since Woodruff scored it for him 115-113. Marti also scored it 115-115.

In a poll of 16 ringside reporters conducted by New York Newsday, 14 of them thought Whitaker won and two called the fight a draw. Three of the writers favoring Whitaker were Juan Carlos Gutierrez of Excelsior (115-114), Carlos Rivero of Uno Mas Uno (116-113) and Carlos Hernandez of La Jornada (116-114).

"We seek to overturn the erroneous decision in order to insure Whitaker's rightful place in boxing history as the first man to 'officially' defeat the 'unbeatable' Chavez," Duva said Tuesday.

Although he failed to win a fourth world title, the draw kept Chavez unbeaten, with an 87-0-1 record. His super lightweight title was not at stake.

DALLAS COWBOYS

Cowboys release kicker

Denne H. Freeman
Associated Press

IRVING, Texas — Lin Elliott didn't get blindsided. He knew the hit was coming.

"I kind of dug my own hole," the Dallas Cowboys kicker after he was released Tuesday. "Maybe if the team had been playing better I would have kicked better."

Elliott sat in the equipment room while eight kickers tried to take his job in a 20 mph wind. Eight was enough. Coach Jimmy Johnson found two he liked.

Veteran Eddie Murray, who has 14 years of NFL experience, and Tracy Bennett, a former World League kicker who was cut twice by Denver, were picked as the two finalists.

Johnson will decide later which one to keep after they take physicals and owner Jerry Jones gets down to negotiations. Should there be no problem with his agent, Johnson was expected to keep Murray.

Elliott started slowly last season then hit 13 in a row for a club record. However, he missed seven of 13 kicks in exhibitions and an extra point against Washington. Then, he missed two field goals against Buffalo, including a 30-yarder, in Sunday's 13-10 loss to the Bills.

"I'm not bitter about it," said the former Texas Tech kicker. "I'll just go back to Waco and teach high school kids how to kick. I'll get another chance. And I have a Super Bowl ring."

Johnson said the Cowboys kicking situation taught him a lesson. Only Elliott was in training camp this summer.

"I'll always bring in more than one kicker at camp from now on," Johnson said. "Now, that's second-guessing myself, which I rarely do."

On the Cowboys' downcast state of affairs, Johnson admitted: "We've dug ourselves a hole but I think our team is right on track. I don't like being 0-2. I'd like to wake up in the morning with it being 2-0."

"Without Emmitt Smith we're not the same team. We've just got to do what we have to do to be successful. If that means Troy (Aikman) has to throw 50 times a game we'll do what it takes to be successful."

Jones admitted Tuesday that the loss to Buffalo hurt the Cowboys' negotiating stance with the missing Smith.

"We might have had a better chance of Emmitt being here this week if we hadn't lost to Buffalo," Jones said. "We might not have the talks we're having now with his representative. I've seen all I need to see to know how important he is to the team."

Associated Press

CHICAGO — Chicago's South Side baseball team is in first place, its stadium is only three years old and its black-and-silver merchandise is the rage among the nation's youth.

So why do more fans flock to see the North Side club, whose name is synonymous with losing?

The White Sox, leaders in the American League West, have drawn 2.2 million fans this year.

The Cubs, a team struggling around .500, have attracted 2.4 million.

"Now that the Bulls have won three consecutive NBA championships, the fans may be a little more blasé about winning," suggests Rob Gallas, vice president of marketing for the White Sox.

Funnyman Bill Cosby may have put his finger on the lure of the Cubs' Wrigley Field.

"This is one of the most beautiful sights on earth," he said during a recent visit to Chicago.

Bruce Betz, a Sox fan and grocery store manager, says the Cubs-Sox rivalry is a frequent issue at Catchers Inn tavern.

"White Sox park is nice and new," he says. "But a lot of people are turned off by the park."

Betz contends attendance is hurt by the size of Comiskey Park, which seats 44,300.

"I've sat down in the box seats, where I really enjoyed the game," he said. "But I've also been in the upper deck and it's a long haul up there. It's scary. When you walk down the aisle, you are almost running" because of the steep angle.

"I wouldn't take my family up there," Betz said.

Wrigley Field, with its ivy walls and near perfect sight lines, is a baseball mecca, one of three ballparks built before World War I still in use.

"I think the centerpiece of the enthusiasm and charisma of the Chicago Cubs is Wrigley Field," said John McDonough, head of marketing for the Cubs. "When they come to Wrigley, the one thing you hear is, I've never seen anything like this."

Because Tribune Co., owner of the Cubs, doesn't have a champion to market, McDonough has to find other ways to promote the team.

One thing in his corner is the company's "superstation," WGN-TV, which brings Cubs games to 30 million homes nationwide over cable.

Another is veteran announcer Harry Caray, who's well-known for leading the Wrigley faithful in singing "Take Me Out to the Ball Game."

"We have a 70-year-old man who is the band leader of 38,000," McDonough says. "He lives with a verve and zeal that transcends into radio and television. There is nobody more charismatic."

By contrast, the White Sox strike some fans as bland.

"A couple of years ago, the White Sox were real scrappy," said pitcher Jack McDowell, a perennial 20-game winner who is aloof off the field. "This team doesn't seem to be as scrappy or fiery. But I don't think we necessarily need to respond to the opinions of how we're dealing with things."

CLEVELAND BROWNS

Jones finds way to end zone

Chuck Melvin
Associated Press

CLEVELAND — You can almost set your watch by it. Exactly once a year, 290-pound defensive tackle James Jones will find a way to score a touchdown.

As a Cleveland Browns rookie in 1991, Jones scored on an interception. In 1992, he lined up as a blocking back in a short-yardage situation and tricked the Houston Oilers by catching a 1-yard pass from Bernie Kosar.

On Monday night, he did it again, this time taking a handoff from Kosar and plodding 1 yard to the end zone during the Browns' 23-13 upset of the San Francisco 49ers.

What's next? Running back kick-offs?

"James showed his versatility," coach Bill Belichick said. "He can run. He can catch. It's nice to have him back there."

"He's a real dependable player, and you know when he is in there, he's going to do exactly the right thing. James is the ultimate team player. Anything we ask him to do, he goes out and does."

Jones' touchdown put Cleveland ahead 10-6 early in the second quarter of a game that was on the verge of bogging down into a battle of kickers. Cleveland's Matt Stover and San Francisco's Mike Cofer capped each team's first possession with a long field goal, and Cofer made it 6-3 with a 28-yarder late in the first period.

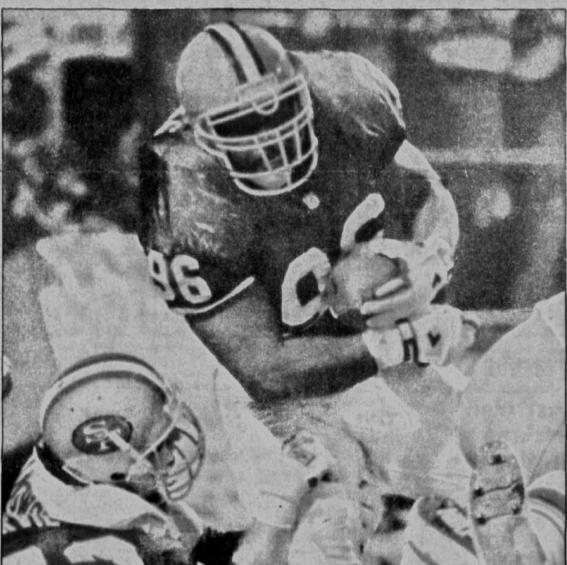

But a critical pass-interference penalty on the 49ers' Michael McGruder changed all that. McGruder barely bumped Eric Metcalf on an incomplete pass in the end zone, and the infraction advanced the ball 22 yards to the San Francisco 1.

McGruder was livid.

"Questionable is not the word. No way, in my opinion, was it interference," he said. "If you had instant replay, I'm going for the interception. I just can't believe they made a call like that."

Jones finished the drive on the next play.

"It was just a quick trap, something that we added in our short-yardage offense the last week or so," Jones said. "I don't think they expected it. The linebacker stepped up to Steve Everitt's leg. I think he just ran right by me on the trap play, and I walked in pretty easy."

Cleveland defensive tackle James Jones (96) rumbles into the end zone on a one-yard touchdown run against the Browns' 23-13 win over the 49ers.

Cleveland took the lead for good at 20-13 late in the half, when Kosar hit Michael Jackson on a 30-yard touchdown pass. Jackson — who has changed his name from Jackson (his mother's maiden name) to Dyson (his father's name) and back again in the last two weeks — atoned for dropping a potential TD pass on the Browns' first play from scrimmage with the diving end-zone reception.

The win was easily the biggest of Belichick's three years as coach, though he fought to keep it all in perspective.

Yes, he said, a 2-0 start is nice, and yes, the 49ers have been the dominant team of the last decade. But remember, Belichick said, there are 14 games to go.

"It was a damn good win. Don't get me wrong," he said. "We'll take it."

'Undercover Blues' should stay underground

Ian Corwin
The Daily Iowan

I am reluctant to say it, but the fact is some spies should stay retired, along with their stories.

Dennis Quaid and Kathleen Turner have never been experts when it comes to boring people. Turner's dry sense of humor and tongue-in-cheek portrayals of sexy, husky-voiced heroines have always been intriguing (Well, that's one word for it.). And Quaid is just plain goofy. Rumor has it that his smile was the model for Jack Nicholson's makeup in "Batman." But unfortunately, Turner and Quaid's new flick "Undercover Blues" is just as unfunny and insipid as the previews make it out to be, which is a bit of a letdown for me. Watching the trailers, I thought "Christ, it must be some form of satire! It couldn't be this ludicrous!"

Get a load of the premise: Two American spies (Quaid and Turner, playing a couple named the "Blues," get it?) get hot for each other, get married and squeeze out a pup, then decide to take an early semi-retirement in New Orleans. But they get called back on duty to catch an international criminal!

Sound bad? It gets worse. This movie's biggest sin is that it could have been a brilliant dose of slapstick comedy. Never mind the trite story. Never mind the fact

MGM Inc.

Quaid, Turner and scene-stealing young friend up alongside the best of them. Tucci plays a bungling New Orleans mugger named Muerte who becomes obsessed with killing Quaid after Quaid thwarts one of his mugging attempts. Obviously inspired by Blake Edwards, Tucci's character becomes a running joke, which is very fortunate, because he's the only thing the audience has to laugh at.

Then there's the remote last chance that a good villain could mix things up and provide a little suspense to keep the plot ticking. But a laughable Czech accent and bad makeup hide what turns out to be a very poor excuse for an archfiend, and in the end it doesn't matter much anyway because she's only on screen for five minutes total.

"Undercover Blues" turns out to be exactly what the previews say it is — a frivolous, asinine waste of time. Its elements try like hell to come together and make it go somewhere, but when all is said and done, this lemon should have stayed right on the shelf.

THE COYOTE GOSPEL

DC Comics

Keeping our icons alive: Superman's back to stay

Stuart Reid
The Daily Iowan

This week: "Lois and Clark: The New Adventures of Superman" ... King Missile ... "The Flash" ... "seaQuest DSV" ... "Babylon 5" and the Weekly World News space alien.

It's been quite a year for Superman, what with dying and all. But, as with Elvis, Christ and Andy Warhol, the Big Blue just doesn't seem to want to stay dead. It's like that King Missile song "Jesus Was Way Cool," except that it's Superman instead. Apparently he was just mostly dead and seems to have recovered from the whole thing rather nicely. In fact, Supes has not only returned to the comic shops, but to prime time as well, with the ABC "drama" "Lois and Clark: The New Adventures of Superman."

"Lois and Clark" stars Dean Cain and Teri Hatcher (imagine second-rate Jimmy Smits and Kirstie Alley clones 10 years younger) as, you guessed it, Lois Lane and Clark Kent. As with CBS' recent attempt at comic-inspired television, "The Flash," "Lois and Clark" is strong on special effects and art direction and weak on dialogue and character development.

The show is certainly nice to look at, with the Smallville and Daily Planet sets being some of the sharpest-looking and most convincing on television. However, as with NBC's "seaQuest DSV" and last year's syndicated "Babylon 5" pilot, I often found myself wishing that the producers had shaved back the effects budget and invested a little more in getting a decent script together.

What might set "Lois and Clark" apart from recent flops in the television fantasy / SF genre is that the principals do seem to have a genuine chemistry, which is a remarkable accomplishment given what they have to work with. The writers have tried to make Lois a '90s sort of woman, at least superficially. Unfortunately, they have written her character as so domineering and downright unpleasant that it becomes difficult to believe that Clark would even bother continuing to pursue things.

To make matters worse, the writers then sabotage their entire premise by having Lois break down and start bawling the first time she finds herself in danger (although she gives her attacker quite a purse-whipping at first). In essence, the writers have severely undermined her character as any sort of a positive female role model by letting us know that her big-city toughness is nothing more than a veneer to cover up her underlying feminine insecurity. Please.

The other major writing problem is the unwarranted inclusion of junior-high level sexual innuendo. I'm not a parent or anything, but lines like "So you like to be on top" and Kat Grant's constant attempts to lure Clark into bed are not really what this show needs. If I wanted to listen to two hours of idiotic soft-core repartee, I'd just switch over to anything on Fox. Really, a slightly more lecherous Superman is probably not what's going to sell this program to America.

The secondary cast is a mixed lot. Lex Luthor is neither charismatic nor intimidating, which are probably the two characteristics the role most calls for. Perry White isn't given much to do besides bluster around The Daily Planet, although he does bluster effectively. The senior Clarks are well-played, as is Jimmy Olson in a tabula rasa kind of way. Also, the show does a good job of making inside references to the comic continuity.

Overall, though, the effect is underwhelming. It seems amazing that 24-page weekly comics can far better convey emotions and depth of character than a nearly two-hour-long script, but that is what seems to have happened. It may be premature to write off "Lois and Clark" already, but as for just now, the world of Metropolis is far more vivid at $1.25 a crack than it is on the small screen.

There is a theory that gods die off when there isn't anyone left around who still believes in them. In America, we've modified that a bit: Our cultural icons are only allowed to rest in peace when they stop paying their own way. This being the case, Superman, like Elvis, was bound to bounce right back from the grave.

Speaking of Elvis, why have him flipping burgers at a truck stop in Missouri when we could have him hanging out with JFK or the Weekly World News policy-wonk space alien? Maybe they could start a band or something. And as for Superman, if he's going to be on television each week, he should say something positive (especially about Lois, as she gets first billing) and rely on intelligence rather than raunchiness to get the oldsters to watch along with the younguns.

Two words: Largely sedentary that there's a cute, pudgy little baby waiting to steal every scene with its stubby little fingers. Very funny films have been made out of much less — Blake Edwards' "Pink Panther" series, for example. But Peter Sellers is dead, and his comedic abilities are sorely missed.

I personally think that before appearing in this turkey, Quaid and Turner signed contracts which required them to look like they'd been carved out of wax. Turner is so stiff that one wonders whether her valet left the pins in her shirts. And after looking at that stupid, paste-up grin of Quaid's for two hours, I wanted nothing more than to smack it clean off his face.

The flick's supporting characters, no matter how hard they try, can't give the poorly written proceedings a jump start, either. It's a pity because Stanley Tucci proves here that he can pratfall his way right

Smashing Pumpkins sold out; Oct. Primus concert scheduled

The Daily Iowan
The Smashing Pumpkins concert scheduled for Wednesday, Oct. 6 in the Union's Main Lounge sold out within two days, according to a representative of SCOPE, the Student Commission on Programming and Entertainment.
Dan Kinatader, production director for SCOPE, said that Pumpkins tickets went on sale at 10 a.m. last Friday and were sold out by 5 p.m. Sunday. He says the speed was unusual, and was comparable to SCOPE's largest past shows.
"By my opinion, it's kind of like a small Guns N' Roses show, in the popularity the public had about it," Kinatader said.

THEATRE REVIEW

'Gunplay' calls up memories, poses questions about Nov. 1

Shayla Thiel
The Daily Iowan

I was in my third month of freshman year at the UI on Nov. 1, 1991 when my then-roommate, Jean, breezed into our Hillcrest room breathless after leaving her physics class at Van Allen. When she told me she had heard the gun shots and was then whisked out of the building by frazzled police officers, I was shocked. When we turned on the radio and finally heard what had actually transpired, a dull sickness mounted within me and, for the first time, I felt the odd despair of some pending cultural doom.

This was the feeling I left with after the premiere of Riverside Theatre's "Gunplay."

The play is, in fact, a reaction to the Nov. 1 shootings by disgruntled doctoral student Gang Lu. It's certainly not what you might expect, though.

You might expect a strictly "Guns are bad — outlaw all of them" stance, but "Gunplay" is not so presumptuous. In fact, the play — written by Kansas City playwright Frank Higgins for Riverside Theatre — bombards the audience with myriad views and scenarios. It uses wit and cynicism through clever, sometimes-sexy dialogue and challenges the audience to look deeper into the issue.

"Gunplay" poses questions from the viewpoint of inner-city shopkeepers and educators, police officers, soldiers, avid hunters and crime victims. Most chilling is the cry of despair from the shopkeeper waiting to be looted during a blackout: What can we do when we aren't sure if our government can protect us from violence any more? An eye for an eye, a gun for a gun, she poses. Flash back to the L.A. riots — it doesn't seem so radical.

With so many angles and plots, "Gunplay" is an emotionally taxing involvement for an actor. The four performers, who portray characters from every end of the gun-issue spectrum, are to be commended for showing such professional diversity and pure energy. Rarely do I see a production about which I can say not one of the actors got on my nerves, but this was one of the rare experiences in which no sore thumb stuck out.

Ron Clark's booming stage presence saved some of the sillier characterizations from failing miserably. The wild look in his eyes throughout "Gunplay" added a certain edge to his roles that made the audience wonder if at any given moment he could just snap — a very appropriate edge for this production.

Judy Hovland, in turn, added calm and grace to her scenes. She savors the words she speaks and takes on the air of a teacher in most of her characters. Her talent is in captivating the audience with her quiet sense of knowledge and sophistication, making them trust her in every scene.

UI student Elgin Burnette seems like one of those actors doomed to the role of "nice guy"; he was the epitome of the nice guy (angel, actually) in Black Action Theatre's "When Black Angels Fall" last year. In "Gunplay," Burnette shows he too can play it nasty through scenes on domestic violence and a war-with-words performance art piece in which he proclaims the top 10 reasons why a beer is better than a woman. It is in scenes like these — not the nice-guy scenes — that Burnette's characters' true innocence manifests itself through his raw, streetwise facade.

Traevna Potter-Hall, also a UI student, is absolutely on target. In one scene she convincingly dons the mask of a bitter inner-city shopkeeper who can lapse into the most emotional bedtime story of "Br'er Rabbit" (with her own special twists and explanations), and in the next she becomes an innocent child who has never seen the moon because of the darkness of the towering tenement where she lives. Potter-Hall shows savvy and intelligence throughout her roles in "Gunplay" but does not attempt to override the true issues at hand by overacting her parts. I would recommend the play to someone who feels ambivalence toward gun control simply to experience Potter-Hall's power on stage.

With the sparse set — a stage covered with 28,000 empty shotgun shells piled in red, orange and green mounds of fire and crates with 20 different types of guns — "Gunplay" simply sets forth good acting. The gun shells are the main props; guns and bullet shells saturate the entire essence of the play both literally and figuratively. The effect of so much different weaponry is not only an interesting history lesson on America's fascination with guns, but also a startling commentary on the consequences of emotion — both pro-gun control and anti-gun control.

Not to give away the ending, "Gunplay" does not attempt to solve anything for anyone. It doesn't even draw a conclusion as it ends with a simple "Well, that's it." In fact, it delivers only real life — loaded into a two-hour-long machine gun which simply shoots forth issue after issue. It accomplished something important, though: It made me remember the initial shock from Nov. 1, 1991. It brought back that sickness within and forced me, for once, to really think about what it meant.

"Gunplay" performances are scheduled for Sept. 17-18 and 23-25 and Oct. 1-2 at 8 p.m., plus Sept. 19 and Oct. 3 at 2 p.m. Post-performance discussions will be held Sept. 10, Sept. 25 and Oct. 2. Tickets are $14 for general admission, $12 for senior citizens and students, and $11 for matinees. For reservations call 338-7672.

Study: Most pre-ultrasound scans unnecessary

BOSTON (AP) — giving ultrasound scans to pregnant women, as many recommend, is unnecessary and may waste more than a year, a landmark study says.

Researchers at the Missouri-Columbia percent of all mothers such low risk that they need an ultrasound. The nationwide study found that 5 percent delivered to healthy major problems at the time of a routine performed.

Barney's '1 love' disturbed by attack

GALVESTON, Tex. — Barney, the purple adored by millions of youngsters, was roughed up by youngsters.

The unidentified costume was worn by four boys, ages 10 to 12, accused of punching and trying to pull it off during a personal appearance at a K Mart.

The youngsters were released to their parents.
