Building a 'down to earth' satellite

"... and now we have liftoff!" That's what UI graduate student Joe Clay hopes to hear someday as one of a group of Iowa students planning to launch a satellite that could give the exact weather temperature for every county in Iowa.

Based on an idea that originated in an Iowa State aerospace engineering class, today students from the UI, Iowa State University and the University of Northern Iowa are in total control of the conceptualization, design and building of an actual satellite.

Clay, a thermal control engineer, is a member of the Iowa Satellite Project, also known as ISAT. He is in charge of maintaining the temperature on the various units of the satellite. A member since February, he foresees the project continuing throughout the 1993-94 academic year and a possibility of the satellite being launched by late 1995 or early 1996.

One of the main goals behind building the garbage can-sized, futuristic-looking satellite is to get as many Iowans involved as possible. Once in orbit, the satellite will be scheduled to pass over the state at least four times a day. It will even be controlled by Iowans from several mobile sites across the state as well as from the command center stationed in Boone, Iowa.

Yet, Clay hopes what the satellite will do for most Iowans is give pinpoint accuracy in determining exact weather temperatures throughout the state.

"The satellite will serve not only in reading weather temperatures, but it will also determine wind speed and barometric pressure," he said. "The information can then be used by people such as farmers for agricultural purposes."

Some planned functions of the satellite, which will orbit the Earth in a low orbit of less than 600 kilometers, include a camera-telescope combination that will be able to take detailed pictures of the state of Iowa as well as a device that can sense micrometeor impacts and determine how it affects the performance of the satellite.

Clay explained that due to the harsh vacuum of space, he finds himself having to make constant changes to his building analysis for the satellite.

"I try to update the research as much as possible because you can't get to a satellite and make changes in space," he said. "So you have to

UI engineering graduate student Joe Clay gets the same view of the world that the satellite he is currently working on will have. Clay is working with other students from the UI, ISU and UNI on the weather-monitoring agricultural satellite that they hope to launch by 1996.

Members meet with each other about twice a month to get feedback on finished work and to get an idea of what to anticipate prior to the actual launching.

"We talk about progress and the idea of concurrent engineering," Clay said. "If I have a problem that I can't solve, I bring it up in the meeting; we're there to help each other."

Clay said that constant communication between members of the group is vital.

"If I make a change, I have to inform all in the group; the satellite must be made to accommodate all involved in the process," he said.

Mennonites help flood victims recover

Steve Vincent surveyed his flood damaged, mud-filled home and said simply, "We'd have been better off with a fire. At least with a fire it would have been done with, and we could've cleaned up earlier."

Vincent and 24 other Iowa City homeowners along Stewart Road, not far from the Coralville Reservoir, were able to begin the long cleanup process Wednesday — a process finally made possible due to a continued drop in outflow from the reservoir and help from more than 200 volunteers from the Mennonite Disaster Service.

Not its first massive volunteer cleanup, the MDS is an organization of the Mennonite Church that has been involved in relief work for over 20 years across the world. Earlier this summer its members helped with the flood cleanup of Iowa City's Normandy Drive on four weekends.

Wednesday the MDS even enlisted the help of the Iowa Mennonite School, a Mennonite-operated high school near Kalona. The school canceled classes and sent its 160 students and teachers off to work. The rest of the cleanup force consisted of members of area Mennonite churches.

"We chose a service project because it fits in with what we want to do as a school," said Wilbur Yoder, principal of Iowa Mennonite. "Our committee at school approached the MDS, and they were very receptive to our help."

The students' work along Stewart Road centered on basic cleanup and not the long process of actually rebuilding. Students split up into small groups and each group emptied one house at a time. The six students working on Vincent's home carried out load after load of ruined furniture, pictures and carpet.

"I told them to tear it to pieces," Vincent said. "We just have to get everything out of here, and then hope there isn't any structural damage to the house. Every half-hour it looks a little better."

Stewart Road resident Donna Chandler was thankful for the help.

"Everything below 5 feet on the wall is ruined, but we are still planning to live here," Chandler said. "What they are doing today would take us days and days to do, probably weeks."

Iowa Mennonite students had mixed reac-students and teachers, and the county graded Stewart Road to make it passable for vehicles trying to get close to the houses.

Wilbur Litwiller, president of the MDS in Iowa, explained that the Mennonites first offered their help at a July flood relief meeting led by Vicki Jennings, the head of the Iowa State Bank / Iowa City Jaycees volunteer network. The groups then stayed in contact with residents about new developments throughout the summer.

"On Normandy Drive, they put together a questionnaire that helped a lot," Litwiller said. "The residents indicated what they needed done. Jennings' work gave us a good idea of what we were facing before we got there."

"We couldn't have done it without the help of the Mennonites," said Doris Woods, a Normandy Drive resident. "If they wouldn't have come, I don't know how we would have handled it."

PRIVATIZATION DISCUSSED

Regents suggest UI explore possibilities for Printing Dept.

Mary Geraghty
The Daily Iowan

AMES — The Iowa state Board of Regents granted permission Wednesday for the UI to begin exploring options for relocation of the Printing Department, which was severely damaged by this summer's flooding.

The original request was for the board to give the go-ahead for looking into building a new facility for the department, but regent Thomas Dorr suggested that the UI use an outside printing company to fill its needs.

Thomas Dorr

"This is an example of an issue that is an opportunity for the university to explore privatizing an aspect of its operations," he said. "I would prefer that we explore the opportunities for turning this into a privatized operation."

Kathleen Kennedy, Printing Department customer service representative, said the regents do not realize the scope of the department's services.

"They need to understand all the services we do for the university in addition to just printing ink on paper," Kennedy said.

She added that continuity of university publications would be affected if an outside company were used.

"We do so many things for University Relations, like making sure affirmative action statements are on everything and the proper university typeface and logos are used so people don't deviate from standards," she said. "We see everything that goes through, and we do quality checks on all printed pieces."

Vice President for Finance and University Services Douglas True said he would investigate the available options and present a report at the board's October meeting in Cedar Falls.

In other capital improvement business, the UI received permission to begin plans for remodeling Phillips Hall.

"One of the reasons that we've been so competitive in terms of new faculty hires is the support of this board and the state as they've shown toward our faculty salaries. We ask that the salary policy for this year is funded as fully as possible ..."

Jerald Schnoor, UI Faculty Senate president

new faculty hires is the support of this board and the state as they've shown toward our faculty salaries," he said. "We ask that the salary policy for this year is funded as fully as possible because the institution will be hard-pressed to find funds elsewhere."

He also asked for continued support in improving undergraduate education and increasing support for graduate students.

Schnoor asked for funds to complete the health-care program for teaching and research assistants which was begun and partially funded by university reallocations last year.

However, Dennis Deslippe, UI graduate student in history and co-chairman of the Coalition to Organize Graduate Students, asked for a different kind of support.

"If the regents find they are unable to support us in improving the quality of life and education at the University of Iowa, we ask that they act in a moral and responsible manner by allowing graduate employees ... the dignity that comes with a union contract," he said.

Schnoor said he would also like to see funding for a plan to bring full tuition scholarships to graduate assistants at the UI.

Members of the board approved the board office recommendation for the 1995 state appropriations request of $546.3 million.

Reduced relief strains I.C.'s budget

Heather Pitzel
The Daily Iowan

Flood recovery will cause more budget problems for Iowa City if Gov. Terry Branstad makes the current property-tax freeze permanent and the state's required flood-relief contributions are reduced.

The federal government recently announced the state's matching funds requirement for Federal Emergency Management Agency assistance will be reduced from 25 percent to 10 percent.

Iowa City City Manager Steve Atkins said even with the matching requirement, a substantial number of things are not covered by FEMA.

"There's a tendency to get complacent like, 'Oh, the feds will fix it,' but things like trees are usually not covered. City Park has 1,400 trees, 300 of which may be damaged to the point where they'll have to be removed. The test will be next spring to see if they leaf or not," Atkins said. "There are people ready to go in there with chain saws, and we have to say 'time-out' because we don't really know the extent of damage. Besides, if the feds aren't paying, what's the hurry?"

He said the City Council will have to tackle the issue of what budget items must be reduced and what capital projects are going to be delayed to pay for all the flood damage. In a memorandum dated Aug. 31, Atkins noted the city will have to make budget adjustments because it has used financial reserves to provide for immediate flood-relief initiatives, but those funds were considered part of the budget for future years.

"(The budget) was going to be snug, and this reduced matching requirement will just exacerbate it," Atkins said.

Compounding the city's financial problems, Branstad is seeking a permanent property-tax freeze, said Rep. Mary Neuhauser, D-Iowa City. The current property tax is frozen this fiscal year and next, which hinders municipalities from raising money for their budgets.

"I don't understand how the state can raise the sales tax for itself and then tell us we can't raise revenues," Atkins said.

Branstad is considering calling a special session for legislators to deal with the budget and flood situation. Neuhauser said it will be difficult for him to come up with a majority because most legislators won't vote for anything depending on how it's tied to the gambling issue.

"There aren't a lot of reasons to call a special session except to raise taxes," Neuhauser said, "and I don't think he'll be doing that."

In another memo from Sept. 2, Atkins said he expects the state to say it doesn't have the funding and therefore the matching requirement will become an additional burden on local government.

"As usual, we'll find out (about both of these issues) at the 11th hour," Atkins predicted. "For now, we're making the assumption the state won't provide a match."

"I like Macintosh® because I don't have the time or energy to be working with computers that aren't as user friendly as the Mac. When I have a job to do I like to get in, get it done and get out in the least amount of time possible. Mac has been great for Spanish Dasher Drills and for writing papers.

Most of the Mac operations I learned on my own. Almost everything I needed to know I got from a single sheet of instructions. It's easy to learn new operations on the Mac. Once I've learned the operations I find it matches and often exceeds the amount of power I needed in the first place."

INSURANCE, TUITION AMONG ISSUES

COGS supports UI initiatives

Heather Pitzel
Daily Iowan

Representatives of the Campaign to Organize Graduate Students called the administration's newly stated support for state-funded tuition remission and health-care contributions a positive action.

Dean of the Graduate College Leslie Sims told the Faculty Assembly last week the administration will be seeking money from the state Legislature to help attract quality graduate students.

Dennis Deslippe, co-chairman for the COGS-Service Employment International Union Local 150 coordinating committee, noted the timing of the announcement.

"It's interesting all this is coming to fruition this fall," Deslippe said. "Clearly something happened, and they are mobilizing on these issues."

Sims said these two issues are not new, but they've been tabled in the past due to the state's budget problems.

"I've been working for (tuition waivers and health care) ever since I got here in July of 1991," Sims said.

COGS filed a petition July 26 with the Public Employment Relations Board, the UI administration and the Iowa state Board of Regents to be recognized as a bargaining unit. The UI has until Sept. 28 to formally accept or contest the bargaining unit of research assistants, teaching assistants, graders and fellows.

There has been no response from the UI administration, Sims explained, because members must first discuss the situation with the regents.

"It's interesting all this is coming to fruition this fall. Clearly something happened, and they are mobilizing on these issues."

Dennis Deslippe, COGS-SEIU Local 150

Nationally, there are six graduate student unions with bargaining contracts and 15 more in the process of organizing. Of those six, Deslippe said all had experienced opposition from "the powers that be," both legally and extralegally while they were trying to unionize.

The UI is one of only two schools in the Big Ten that does not give tuition waivers. If the state does award the UI money for tuition remissions and health-care contributions, COGS will move forward with the union anyway, press committee Chairwoman Debbie Blake said.

Deslippe described tuition remission and health insurance as "important bread and butter issues" and said others include child care, a formal grievance procedure, quality graduate instructional training, office space, class size and academic freedom.

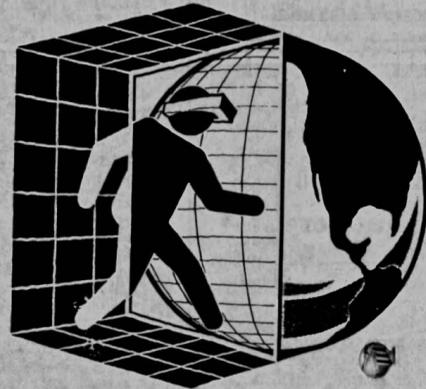

"Quality living for graduates means that quality undergraduate education can't help but be raised," Blake said.

The next step in the collective bargaining contract process is for 30 percent of the bargaining unit to say they want an election. COGS is asking graduate students to sign cards asking for an election and, so far, Deslippe noted, there are between 800 and 900 signed cards. The election must occur by Dec. 1 so COGS can bargain with the UI for next fall.

Deslippe said members of COGS are looking for a mandate in the election.

"We wouldn't want to go into an election without 60 to 70 percent because any opposition to the union could be detrimental if we relied on only 30 percent," he said. "We feel fairly confident we can get that 60 or 70 percent."

Step Into Your Own Reality

CAREERS DAY '93 is next Thursday, Sept. 30 10:00 a.m. to 3:30 p.m. Main Lounge, IMU

WHAT IS CAREERS DAY?

It is a day when representatives from business, industry, social service organizations and government meet informally with University of Iowa students for an exchange of career information. It is a chance to learn about career opportunities with approximately 130 employers.

WHO SHOULD ATTEND?

Careers Day is open to all University students - Freshman, Sophomores, Juniors, Seniors, and Graduate students.

WHY SHOULD YOU ATTEND?

Careers Day can help all students learn about many career fields. You can find out about post-graduation employment opportunities. Juniors and Seniors can talk with recruiters about job opportunities, resumes, and interviews. Freshmen and Sophomores who are trying to decide on a major can benefit by talking with professionals from different career fields. Information about cooperative education programs and internships will also be available.

TIPS ON HOW TO MAKE CAREERS DAY WORK FOR YOU:

FRESHMEN:

Read the Careers Day list of employers in the Tuesday, September 28th Daily Iowan and circle the companies you'd like to visit. Bring a book bag to put your employer information in - the companies will give you a lot of brochures, reports, etc. Walk around and talk informally with the representatives. Stop in and out throughout the day. Dress casually.

SOPHOMORES:

Follow the same steps as the freshman and add these tips. Begin to explore internship and summer job possibilities by taking a resume with you. Ask the employers if they hire interns, and if so, in what areas. Dress professionally if you want to make a good impression.

JUNIORS:

Do all of the above with the addition of trying to research the employers a bit more before you attend Careers Day. Stop by 380 IMU, Business and Liberal Arts Placement, 18 PHBA, the Employer Literature Room and 3121 Engineering Placement to learn about each employer. Write down a number of questions to ask each employer about opportunities with their company. Leave your resume if you're looking for an internship or summer job. Dress professionally.

SENIORS & GRADUATE STUDENTS:

Target 10 or 15 companies to explore in depth. Write down questions to ask each representative, and make sure you visit with your targeted companies first. You can tire easily if you try to talk to too many. Pick up materials from each employer which will help you make a decision about whether you want to pursue opportunities with them. Tell them about yourself and leave your resume. Dress as you would for an interview.

TIPS FOR EVERYONE:

Make sure that you check in at the Information table at the East entrance. Get a nametag and wear it. The employers like to know who you are. Plan to visit several times throughout the day. Last year over 2,000 students talked with employers. You're often standing in lines or pushing your way through the crowded aisles. It's tiring! If you can take a few breaks, you'll feel fresher. Don't expect to get private time with the employers. This is an information fair, and you'll have lots of people trying to get themselves heard too. Be patient and try your best to listen carefully when the employer is talking to you. Prepare questions that you want to ask. Don't ask the obvious. Only ask what you really want to know.

Russian recovery demands reforms

Jude Sunderbruch
Business Editor

In the past several days, the political situation in Russia has rapidly spun out of control. A multitude of events led to this chaos, but foremost among them were poorly implemented and ill-chosen economic reforms. To build the Russian economy into a successful market system, dramatic changes will be necessary.

The political future of Russia is far from settled, but let's assume for a moment that Boris Yeltsin gets his wish. He's now completely in charge until December, when elections will be held for a new bicameral parliament. For good measure, since we are assuming, let's add that the Constitutional Court is no longer a problem and millions are gathering in the street to voice their support of Yeltsin.

Given this scenario, what should Yeltsin do to fix the Russian economy? There are a variety of measures that must be taken immediately and simultaneously to reinvigorate the faltering Russian economy, lest it fall into complete disarray.

These new steps would begin to repair an economy in decay and decline. Considerable problems existed before any market reforms were tried, and most of these linger today, frustrating new efforts.

Nearly all the old failings of the communist system continue to haunt Russia. Crops rot in fields because of poor transportation systems, and state subsidies keep inefficient businesses afloat that should fail. Underdeveloped financial systems, as well as the lack of private-property laws, discourage both domestic savings and international investments.

All these problems have been compounded by half-hearted reforms that have led to a vicious circle of economic catastrophe. By freeing some prices while keeping controls on others, the marketplace has been unable to do its job of determining prices and clearing the market of goods. In attempting to cover huge deficits with oddball currency policies, the government has lost control of its monetary policy. The result has been rampant inflation, difficulties in foreign exchange and related problems. Overall, the economy is close to collapse.

Yeltsin's actions, given our admittedly unlikely scenario, need to be quick and decisive.

First, he should call for a constitutional convention that will begin its work immediately and complete its deliberations before the December elections. Two months should be enough time to whip up a new constitution if they stick to some tried and true examples. The new governing document of the country will need to expressly guarantee private-property rights, state that foreign firms will be able repatriate profits and guarantee that companies will not be subject to nationalization in the future.

Second, Yeltsin needs to present a clear, conservative monetary policy. The ruble should be replaced with a new currency immediately with an exchange rate of about a 1,000 to one. The Central Bank must issue the new money, be independent and follow guidelines established by the International Monetary Fund. The new currency should be fully convertible and devalued as needed to ensure that it can be exchanged on international markets. The money supply has to be allowed to grow only as much as economic growth demands and will generally expand slowly to deter inflation.

Third, Yeltsin needs to mount a crash privatization program that will allow 100 percent foreign ownership of any company. Subsidies to all firms should be phased out completely over the next year, with inefficient heavy industry first, and consumer goods and food producers last. The droves of unemployed will have to be employed in massive environmental cleanup, homebuilding and other infrastructure projects in exchange for basic subsistence and health care. Hopefully, such programs could be financed through international grants.

Finally, the new government should maintain a sound fiscal policy. A new value-added tax should be the principle form of revenue for the government, and deficit spending should be limited to 10 percent of the gross domestic product the first year and 5 percent thereafter.

These reforms would be far from fun for Yeltsin, the new parliament or the Russian people, but they are the only route with a reasonable chance of building a globally competitive market economy in Russia by the start of the new century.

108 DEAD IN 2 DAYS

Georgian rebels attack second passenger plane

TBILISI, Georgia — Rebels shot down a passenger plane Wednesday for the second time in two days. Eighty people died as the plane crashed and exploded, a Russian news agency reported. At least 26 people escaped according to one official.

Abkhazian rebels aboard a gunboat shot down the plane with a missile as it approached Sukhumi, the capital of the separatist region along the Black Sea, Georgia's Interior Ministry said.

The plane downed Tuesday was also hit by a heat-seeking missile fired from an Abkhazian gunboat. Twenty-eight people died in that attack.

At least 80 passengers were killed Wednesday, the Russian news agency Interfax reported, quoting Georgian leader Eduard Shevardnadze's press service.

Twenty-six people scrambled off the burning jet before it exploded, said Shevardnadze's spokesman Vata Djordjikia.

Djordjikia said that "more died than escaped" and added that he was unable to confirm the report that 80 people died.

The crew of the plane that was shot down Wednesday was unharmed, Russia's State Committee for Emergency Situations said.

Shevardnadze called the rebel action "barbaric."

OPPOSITION REMAINS SECLUDED

Yeltsin backers rally in show of support

Julia Rubin

MOSCOW — President Boris Yeltsin's bid to control Russia gained strength Wednesday, buoyed by support from the army and cheering crowds. His hard-line opposition sat barricaded in parliament, struggling to respond.

Bonfires burned for a second night outside the Russian parliament building, where as many as 5,000 anti-Yeltsin demonstrators ringed the building to protest his suspension of parliament Tuesday. Protesters waved red Soviet flags and stockpiled rocks, pipes and Molotov cocktails.

Despite appeals by Yeltsin's opponents for a nationwide strike, there were no reports of protests elsewhere. State television aired the usual shows, traffic was normal and many Muscovites sat outside enjoying the balmy weather.

Hundreds of people applauded and shouted "We support you!" when Yeltsin and his military commanders made an impromptu visit to Moscow's downtown Pushkin Square.

"He should have done this a long time ago," said Alexander Kuznetsov, 47, who sells photographs to tourists in the square. "The Russian people have put up with a lot, and the parliament is just resorting to hooligan tactics."

Yeltsin told the crowd he would avoid bloodshed.

"We would not like and do not intend to use any force," he said. "We want everything to go peacefully, without blood."

Defense Minister Pavel Grachev said the military "unequivocally supports the president as commander-in-chief."

A public opinion poll taken Wednesday in Moscow showed a majority of capital residents supporting their president in his bold moves.

It said 51 percent of 880 respondents supported Yeltsin and 25 percent opposed him, although nearly a quarter of those polled either had not heard about Yeltsin's decree or had no opinion. The poll by the All-Russia Center of Public Opinion Research had a 3 percent margin of error.

Yeltsin has been locked in an 18-month power struggle with lawmakers who want to slow the country's transition to free markets, prop up state industries and pursue a more nationalistic foreign policy. Yeltsin has long sought parliamentary elections and a post-Soviet constitution.

Support for Yeltsin poured in from world leaders, including President Clinton, and from neighboring republics of the former Soviet Union.

For much of Wednesday, Yeltsin's opponents spun their wheels. About 150 members of the Supreme Soviet, the country's standing legislature, remained holed up in the White House, or parliament building, where they gathered following Yeltsin's Tuesday night announcement stripping them of power and calling for elections to replace them in December.

Led by speaker Ruslan Khasbulatov, the legislators declared Yeltsin's action unconstitutional and moved to impeach him. They named Vice President Alexander Rutskoi acting president and voted to replace the heads of the military, police and security police.

Lawmakers also unanimously adopted amendments to Russia's criminal code to add a new article imposing capital punishment for the "violent alteration of the constitutional system."

Legislators were trying to bring Yeltsin's ouster to a vote before the full parliament, the Congress of People's Deputies. Legislator Ivan Shashviashvili said 600 of the 1,041 members of the congress had signed up for a session set for today; 689 are needed for a quorum.

The lawmakers urged Prime Minister Viktor Chernomyrdin to join them. But in an emotional speech to regional leaders Wednesday, Chernomyrdin called his support for Yeltsin "unequivocal" and said new elections are necessary to bring stability to Russia. "Would we unleash a massacre because of two months? Would history and the people forgive us?" he asked.

14 killed in clash between Turks, Kurds

Associated Press

DIYARBAKIR, Turkey — Twelve separatist Kurdish guerrillas and two Turkish soldiers were killed in overnight clashes in southeastern Turkey, the governor's office said Wednesday.

The killings raised the death toll from violence in southeast Turkey — where the government has launched a major offensive against the outlawed Kurdistan Workers' Party, or PKK — to at least 131 since last week.

Troops killed five Kurdish insurgents near the town of Hizan in Bitlis province, the governor's office said. Two government fighters also died.

SEVEN HILLS, Ohio — John Demjanjuk was free to return to his adopted state of Ohio Wednesday, but not free to go home.

A group of Jewish activists marched in front of his home in this Cleveland suburb, protesting his release from an Israeli prison after his conviction on war crimes charges was overturned.

After landing at New York's Kennedy Airport Wednesday morning, Demjanjuk boarded a private plane for Medina Municipal Airport south of Cleveland. Once there, he quickly left by car for an undisclosed location.

"He looked like he was happy to be here" when the plane landed in New York, said Demjanjuk's son-in-law, Ed Nishnic. He said use of the private plane was donated, but would not identify the donor.

Nishnic said his father-in-law would go into seclusion and might not return to his home for weeks.

Demjanjuk still must fight to regain his U.S. citizenship and avoid deportation.

Eighteen people protested outside the ranch-style home where Demjanjuk lived for more than 30 years before his extradition.

Study says smoking is riskier for women

Malcolm Ritter
Associated Press

NEW YORK — Pack for pack, cigarettes may pose more of a lung cancer threat to women than to men, a study says.

The results suggest that overall, female smokers may run about twice the risk of getting lung cancer that male smokers do for a given number of cigarettes smoked in their lives, Dr. Harvey Risch said.

Risch, an associate professor of epidemiology and public health at the Yale University School of Medicine, said he had no adequate explanation for the disparity.

He presents the new work in the current issue of the American Journal of Epidemiology with scientists from the University of Toronto and the Ontario Cancer Treatment and Research Foundation in Toronto.

Other scientists called the work interesting but said more studies must be done before its conclusion can be accepted. Surprisingly little research has looked into the question, said Dr. Jonathan Samet, a professor at the University of New Mexico School of Medicine.

The study used data from four groups: 442 women with lung cancer, matched with 410 healthy women of similar ages and living in the same sections of Toronto, and 403 men with lung cancer and 362 similarly matched men.

The information was gathered from interviews with the lung cancer patients or stand-ins such as spouses, and with the healthy people.

After learning each person's smoking history, researchers estimated the number of cigarettes each had smoked. The answer was expressed in "pack-years," the number of cigarettes a pack-a-day smoker would smoke in a year, which equals 7,305.

In fact, most participants who smoked averaged about a pack a day and had smoked about 40 years, Risch said.

THE ADULT

Coming of age?

The Adult was awakened by the sun's rays piercing through his curtains, challenging the sensitivity of his sleeping eyes, winning as usual. The Adult stretched his full-grown arms, yawned and turned his attention to the Sports Illustrated swimsuit calendar on the wall to his left. "Wow, Miss June," he thought to himself. The Adult shifted his eyes below the swimsuit-clad curves of Miss June, focusing on the day's date, noticing that today was the day of the carnival. "Oh boy, how I love the carnival," he gleamed as he fluttered his baby blues at Miss June.

The Adult strolled along the fairway, taking in the enormity of this year's roller coaster and reminiscing about his childhood memories on the merry-go-round. A screaming toddler broke the Adult from his nostalgic trance, diverting his attention to the psychic tent at the end of the fairway. He entered the tent and a woman introduced herself as Madame Logique.

The Adult inquired, "How much for my fortune?"

"Two dollars a fortune, but today is your lucky day. I have special; three fortunes for five dollars."

"Why would I want three fortunes?"

"Oh my boy, so young and sweet. In America, fortunes are so very different."

The three fortunes lingered in his mind as the Adult tried to sort them out. They were all consistent in the fact concerning his age, the difference being the results. In the first fortune, he was shipped home in a body bag and awarded a Purple Heart. In the second, he was sentenced to death and electrocuted. And in the third fortune, he was ejected from the bar, deemed by society as not responsible because of his age, and issued citations for public intoxication, falsifying identification and underage drinking.

"How so?"

"Each fortune may seem to have the same course but because of politicians, bureaucrats and what do you call them ... oh yes, self-proclaimed moralists, each fortune has a different result. Come, let me show you. For five dollars, Madame Logique can show you."

The Adult's curiosity dipped into his wallet, extracted an Abe Lincoln and handed the bill to the psychic.

"Good, good, now have a seat and Madame Logique will tell you your fortunes." She peered into the crystal ball for a moment, "Ahh yes, I see you dressed in a uniform, an Army uniform and you're holding a gun. It is night. You're on guard duty. I see you falling asleep and I ... oh dear, the spirits are strong and I see ... oh no ..."

"What is it? What do you see?"

"I see body bags. A dozen bags or so. Yours is one of them."

"Jesus, what an awful fortune."

"I'm sorry, I can go on to your next fortune if you wish."

"Yes! Yes, it can't get any worse!"

Madame Logique peered into the crystal ball once again, rubbing her dangling bracelets along the table's edge, "Ooooo, the spirits are strong, I see you sitting in a tiny jail cell."

"Jail! I'm only 18! What am I in jail for?"

"It's not clear. Wait a minute, I see a priest."

"A priest!?"

"Silence, you're disturbing the spirits and disrupting Madame Logique's powers. A priest is walking along side you, followed by an armed guard. You're having troubles walking ... ah, your feet are chained together. I see a ... dear God ... an electrocution chair. You've been condemned to death."

"Death! What a crock!"

"You question Madame Logique's powers?"

"Yeah, I've never heard such rubbish in my life. I ought to report you to the Consumer Protection Agency, you fraud. Give me my last fortune so I can be on my way."

"If you insist. I see an angry young man sitting in a restaurant. No ... no it's a bar. It looks like a restaurant, but there are a bunch of empty mugs on the table and you're leaning over the table with your head resting in your arms. I see ... I see two policemen dragging you away and ..."

"And nothing, I've heard enough." The Adult stormed out of the tent and marched downtown toward his usual drinking hole. The three fortunes lingered in his mind as the Adult tried to sort them out. They were all consistent in the fact concerning his age, the difference being the results. In the first fortune, he was shipped home in a body bag and awarded a Purple Heart. In the second, he was sentenced to death and electrocuted. And in the third fortune, he was ejected from the bar, deemed by society as not responsible because of his age, and issued citations for public intoxication, falsifying identification and underage drinking. "Go figure," the Adult thought to himself as he handed the bouncer his altered driver's license.

Playing with the Savior — Jesus Christ!

GI Joe, Ken & Barbie, Jesus.

It was bound to happen sooner or later.

That's right, they've developed a Jesus action figure, and kids around the nation are playing with God.

According to an article in The Detroit News, Eden Books in Center Line, Mich., sells a Jesus doll manufactured by the Rainfall company. And Jesus is selling well.

Dorothea Rafinski, manager of Eden Books, told the News, "In our 'Heroes of the Kingdom' doll collection, the Jesus doll has outsold all the other figures. He's outsold Moses and John the Baptist and Peter." Christ's retail value is $11.95, according to Rafinski.

Jesus' white robe is included, she says, but there are no Jesus accessories, as yet. I imagine it's only a matter of time. You can picture the advertisements: "The Walk on Water Stunt Set comes with all you see here. Loaves, Thorny Crown and Judas are sold separately."

The creation of a Jesus doll raises some questions. Should the Jesus doll be free? It would be unseemly to pick up Jesus for 25 percent off, with a two-dollar factory rebate. Of course, He wouldn't want people wasting money on Him, but then how do you justify charging more for Barbie and GI Joe than the messiah? Do Christians want their kids goofing around with Jesus on a Saturday afternoon?

Let's face it, kids'll be stuffing him inside Tonka Trucks and launching him off skateboard ramps. And they'll be getting him into fights. Little Tommy is bound to wonder if Rambo could take Jesus. Sure, Jesus has eternal life, but Rambo's got an Uzi.

And imagine the hullabaloo under the Christmas tree: "Johnny got the Masters of the Universe, and all I got was Jesus." Try explaining to a hostile 6-year-old that Jesus doesn't need a photon decimator.

Jesus' white robe is included, she says, but there are no Jesus accessories, as yet. I imagine it's only a matter of time. You can picture the advertisements: 'The Walk on Water Stunt Set comes with all you see here. Loaves, Thorny Crown and Judas are sold separately.'

Of course, the Jesus doll will break from time to time, but if he's defective within one year of purchase, the buyer is entitled to a new savior. A kid could do a hell of a lot worse.

It so happens there's another doll in the news. Cathy Meredig, a Minneapolis entrepreneur, has invented a "reality-based doll" — a doll with bigger hips, shorter legs and larger feet than the traditional Barbie.

She calls it "Happy To Be Me," and hopes that it will allow girls to develop realistic visions of how they ought to look when they grow up. This seems to me a reasonable and laudable effort given the American obsession with thinness.

A recent New York Times series on obesity quotes a study in which several obese people say they'd rather be blind or deaf than fat; if they were blind, no one would blame them for their condition. But American society is generally disgusted by fat people, seeing them as lazy, undisciplined people — the kind of people that aren't worth hiring or having as friends.

Perhaps the "Happy To Be Me" could be supplemented by a whole series of reality-based dolls; dolls that show girls what they might have to go through to attain and maintain the Barbie physique.

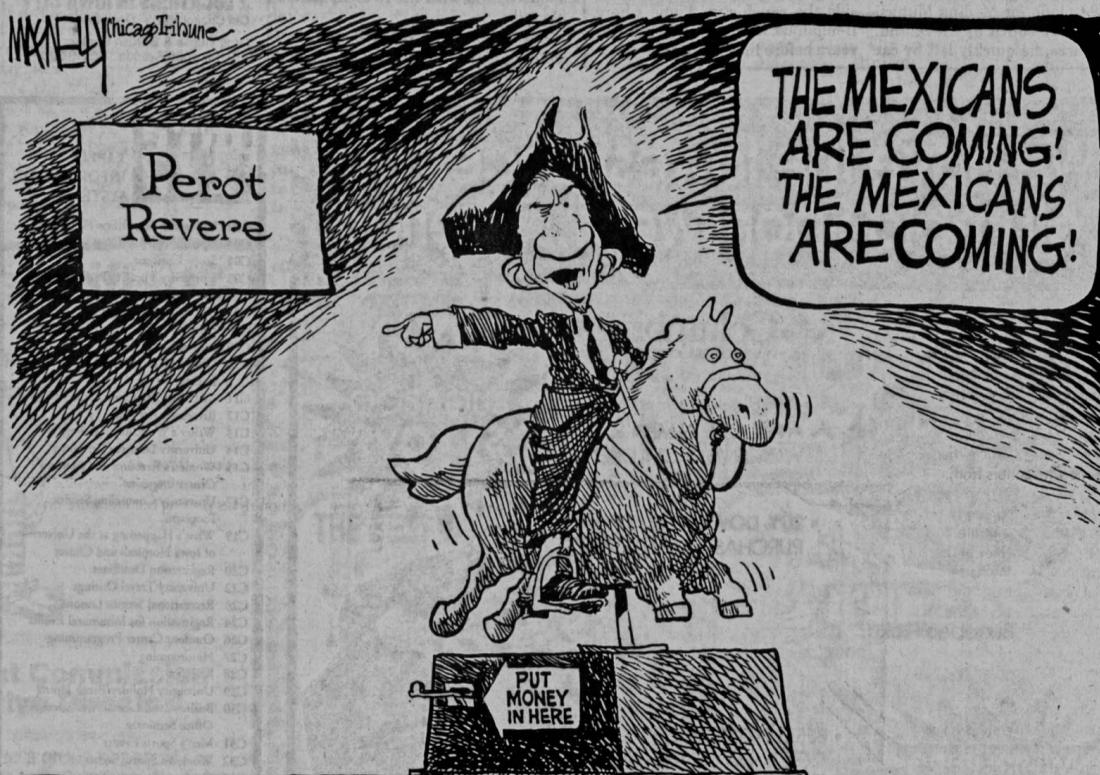

First, I'd introduce Liposuction Barbie, the doll that sheds unwanted pounds through a surgical suction process your child can do right at home. The suction treatment would leave Lipo-Barbie with folds of unsightly skin. That's where the Facelift Barbie Fun Set would come in. Then there'd be Anna and Rexia, the emaciated, critically ill action figures, and Bulimite Skipper, the only doll whose arm swings back and forth so she can make herself throw up. Finally, Silicon Implant Barbie, the once-perky doll whose breastpam started leaking. Now she's undergoing chemo.

As yet there are no reality-based dolls to replace the iron-pumping he-males that little boys play with. What would the "Happy To Be Me" guy doll look like? He'd be thinner than today's dolls, and he wouldn't carry a gun. Maybe he'd know how to read.

If he's anything like the rest of us, he's probably not really happy to be him. He's dreaming of that killer body he could have if he just took the time to jerk the free weights.

GUEST OPINION

UI's stance on free speech contradictory

In response to the recent controversies over the gerbil quilt and David Mastio's column in the DI, President Hunter Rawlings commented in the DI, "We try to be very supportive of the right to free speech and expression," while Dean Phillip Jones was quoted in the Press-Citizen as saying, "We would not censor ideas because they are repugnant to some."

This newly found passion for free speech is news to those who recall three highly publicized incidents over the past two years in which the UI administration and regents took quite a different stance.

The first was the October 1991 controversy over the showing of "Taxi zum Klo," a film including gay sex scenes, to German language classes. Instead of defending free speech on that occasion, then-Board of Regents President Marvin Pomerantz commented, "We hope we don't see this kind of thing again, and we're going to make sure everyone involved hears that from the regents." According to the Oct. 10, 1991 Des Moines Register, Pomerantz indicated he did not think any of the instructors involved would be fired only because "it would be difficult to make the dismissals stick," and the regents feared lawsuits.

President Rawlings, for his part, commented that he found it "difficult to believe that it was appropriate to use this film in this course." In a contrite letter to County Attorney J. Patrick White, Rawlings penned this impassioned defense of the free flow of ideas: "The lesson to be learned from the dispute over the film is that responsibility and freedom must complement each other, or freedom will fade. It is my expectation that the lesson has been learned." Or, as Ice-T puts it, "Freedom of speech — just watch what you say!"

Then, in February 1993, controversy arose around teaching assistant Megan O'Connell's showing of an art video by UI Fellow Franklin Evans to an art Colloquium. Once again, the furor centered around depictions of gay sex, and once again, the administration's immediate response was not to defend free speech, but rather to go on the defensive and chide instructors about the need for, in Dean Judith Aikin's words, "responsibility" and "sensitivity." Vice President for University Relations Ann Rhodes commented, "Unless there is a very sound educational reason for using that kind of matter, it's not a good idea." This stands in stark contrast to the administration's defense of the Campus Review's right to display its noxious gerbil quilt in the Union.

The third incident occurred when a teaching assistant in the American studies department was officially reprimanded for showing "Paris is Burning" to a class. The film contains no graphic sex scenes at all, but it does depict the lives of transvestites. This incident clearly demonstrates that it is not representations of sexual acts in general that the administration seeks to quash, but rather of non-heterosexual orientation in particular. Although the TA fought back and ultimately succeeded in having a letter rescinding the reprimand placed in his file, the official rebuke had a chilling effect, alerting other instructors that dealing with similar material in class could bring the long arm of the institution down on their heads. Meanwhile, the Campus Review received no official censure when it displayed a graphic of a happy face (representing evil, AIDS-spreading sodomites) with a bullet through its head in the Union that same semester.

Subsequent to the hubbub over the Franklin Evans video, Dean Aikin sent out a memo to instructors stating, in part, "if you foresee that any student might find any aspect of your course contrary to their own opinions, feelings, or values, please make it clear to students ... that they have the right to object to course material or to disagree with opinions expressed by the instructor, that alternative assignments may be available if a small portion of the course involves material to which they object ..." While it is to be hoped that any self-respecting teacher attempts to engender a classroom environment in which students are encouraged to argue their own positions, no one could seriously expect instructors to anticipate what topics might make "any student" object to "any aspect" of a course. This prohibition is so broad-based that, were it implemented as written, teachers would constantly be scrambling to provide alternative assignments and readings to appease an infinity of possible objections.

In fact, given that each instance in which the instructors were publicly chided or threatened just happened to involve representations of gays or transvestites — a message not lost on edgy teaching assistants who already have no contract, job security or collective bargaining voice — the administration's position was and is nothing more than coded homophobia. Its highly selective defense of free speech sends a pernicious message: Vicious verbal attacks on and even calls to violence against gays will be protected in university buildings and newspapers, while any discussion of homosexuality in the classroom may entail serious consequences.

The administration's stance serves to perpetuate the notion that homosexuality is a dangerous aberration from which "normal" citizens have the right to be protected — a bigoted perspective that fosters real violence in everyday life. Equally serious, it undermines a paternalistic environment where, instead of learning to argue their own opinions, students learn to trust to authority figures for protection from ideas that disturb them. This allowed to go unchecked, this tendency will only spread to issues other than sexual preference, and no view that deviates from the dominant norms will be safe from censorship.

If UI administrators want to claim the moral high ground on free speech, let them at least defend it across the board — not only when it upholds the status quo of institutionally sanctioned bigotry and intolerance. Jean Follow is a graduate student in comparative literature.

UI, DI censorship debate continues ...

DI urged to stand by decision

To the Editor:
This is a letter in support of the position taken by Editor Loren Keller and Viewpoints Editor Jonathan Lyons in firing Jeff Klinzman from The Daily Iowan. I urge Mr. Keller and Mr. Lyons to remain firm in opposition to Mr. Klinzman's rehiring, despite the expected letter campaign from Mr. Klinzman, the Coalition Against Terror, or CAT, and the Iowa International Socialist Organization.
Mr. Klinzman was fired for acting directly against his employer, The Daily Iowan, despite being expressly asked not to do so. His actions demonstrate a conflict of interest that renders him (or any worker, regardless of political orientation) undesirable as an employee. Mr. Keller and Mr.

Lyons therefore acted fully within their rights as employers to remove him.

Attempts by Klinzman, CAT and the IISO to obfuscate this issue with a) a mythical "right-wing" takeover of the UI, b) claims that Mr. Klinzman's right to free speech was abrogated, and c) vehement ad hominem attacks against the right and David Mastio are feints to divert attention from Mr. Klinzman's actions. Mr. Klinzman failed in his responsibilities as an employee and his removal from The Daily Iowan is an acceptable and expected action from the paper. I say "solidarity in struggle" to Mr. Keller and Mr. Lyons. Please stand by your decision.

Reader 'shocked'

To the Editor:
I was shocked to read in the "other" newspaper that the DI fired Jeff Klinzman, and for such a ridiculous reason. Yes, he's a subversive radical. That's exactly why we need his viewpoint to balance things out in this sheltered little ecopod we call a community.

Please consider reinstating Jeff Klinzman as a DI columnist. He was one of the best you had, right up there with the Painter (keep on stirrin', Kim, you might be next), Mitch Martin (a very funny guy) and even that Jim Guy (I don't remember his last name, that guy who was the flip side of Klinzman). We liberals need to stick together. Bring back Jeff.

'McCarthyite' atmosphere perpetuated

To the Editor:
A front page article, "TA reprimanded after showing film" (Aug. 20, DI) states that a graduate instructor received a reprimand for failing to warn students about "Paris is Burning" before showing the documentary in a course. The story explains that the nature of the film made this procedure necessary, but UI spokesperson Ann Rhodes admits that "there was no explicit sex" in "Paris is Burning." Having seen the film, I would go further and state that there is also no nudity, no strong profanity and no graphic violence (How often can you say that about a film?). The documentary simply has people talking about their lives and about a cultural practice known as voguing. In short, there is nothing in this film to warrant a reprimand, whether or not its showing was announced in advance.

Yet because "Paris is Burning" examines the lives of black drag queens, a handful of closed-minded students feel that they have the right to complain. For them, it isn't a question of sexual depictions but of sexuality: They want to censor any images of black gay men and stifle any discussion of race and sexuality in the classroom. By accepting the students' complaints and by issuing a reprimand to the instructor, the UI — in particular, Dean Aikin (who decided upon the reprimand) — has perpetuated the obvious homophobia and racism that motivates these students.

Even though the reprimand has been rescinded, it remains in the instructor's file, and the students who complained have succeeded in creating a McCarthyite atmosphere for those who teach about the lives of lesbians, bisexuals and gays in the classroom.

To the Editor:
I am the mother of eight children, seven of whom are or have been students at the UI. The eighth child attended a Catholic women's college in Indiana. Not once in her four years at Saint Mary's was she subjected to the kind of ideological bigotry and censorship that seems to be routine at the UI.

graduate teaching assistant whose entire career would be jeopardized by the exercise of his academic freedom, committees of the left and the right to place limits on freedom of speech — and this is still only September.

I've always believed that one of the redeeming features of living in Iowa is our respect for freedom of speech and the Bill of Rights. I hate to think that fanatics of any stripe are succeeding in doing violence to academic freedom at the UI.

Spiritual, supernatural not imaginary

To the Editor:
I'm a chaos scientist, author and writer, and I would like to respond to Tom Hunter's article "The God Myth" (Sept. 14, DI). Mr. Hunter talks of Christians and religious people being ignorant and full of hate. It was painfully obvious to me while reading Mr. Hunter's article that he is the one who suffers from ignorance and hate. Contrary to Mr. Hunter's belief, religion is not a hoax — there is an afterlife. In being a firsthand observer of the supernatural and having had a number of observations of the paranormal, I can testify to the fact that God is real and that the angels are alive and well, and move about freely, along with other forms of intelligent life.

Christianity is about "asking" and "receiving." I believed in that and had faith in that for many years and then one day — Easter 1978, at the age of 21 — I had the born-again experience. Without asking for an "experience," one will not receive the gift of God. It is no myth. It is not "imaginary." My research is loaded with objective data to support my writings of such (spiritual) events. Perhaps if Mr. Hunter did just a tiny bit of investigation and tried to open his heart to the unknown, he might also experience the love and light of the gods. Ask and you shall receive.

An immense liberal playground

To the Editor:
I never thought I'd find myself supporting the DI Viewpoints Page. Strangely, I feel I must.

What brings me to this is a quote on Page 7 of the Friday, Sept. 17, DI from CAT member Jeremy Buck. Buck says, "The hypocrisy is now clear: The administration and The Daily Iowan only support the free speech rights of the right wing, while they attack anyone taking a stand against bigotry and homophobia."

How ludicrous. Anyone who has been around this place for a while realizes that the Viewpoints Page is an immense liberal playground. The Viewpoints Page has always been a place for the espousal of liberal views; now that it has hired one columnist who is "right thinking" (absolutely no pun intended), it is suddenly a "right-wing paper!" I sorely doubt it. It seems that CAT's legions are out to stifle all views but their own.

Debating the object

To the Editor:
Before the question of "choice," in relation to abortion, is debated, the object (unborn) of the abortion should be debated first.

For obvious reasons you will have a hard time getting anyone who favors abortion rights to debate the object of the abortion. When was the last time you heard of anyone in favor of abortion rights passing out literature on fetal development for the purpose of informing the public that the object of the abortion is not human?

That would be like a politician handing out copies of his criminal record for the purpose of soliciting votes. No, you cannot get those who favor abortion rights to discuss the object of the abortion. That would be just plain murder.

Michael E. Mallie
Iowa City

Not defeated

To the Editor:
Jeff Klinzman (Sept. 2, DI) doesn't have a clue. Johnson County Right to Life has written to some area businesses which have supported the Emma Goldman Clinic regarding their support, and he foolishly declares victory, calls it a "botched boycott" and says the "tactic has backfired." How ludicrous. The idea for the letter was forged at a JCRTL meeting I had the opportunity to attend, and the intent was to make sure businesses which had given to Emma Goldman understood that the clinic is a major abortion provider in Iowa City. That may sound absurd to those devoted to Emma Goldman because of their abortion business, but Teresa Wagner was right when she said it was a "good faith gesture" because we wanted in all fairness to entertain the possibility that a business might have given money to promote "women's health" and not to support abortion. If a business responded that they were determined to support Emma Goldman, knowing they have done thousands of abortions, then pro-lifers can be confident they have been fair in their response to such a business. We have other options for copying, for banks, for grocery stores. Klinzman loves to write of "freedom" and "rights," but he is outraged that pro-lifers are still free to spend their money as they care to.

Another matter that shows Klinzman's gray cells are failing him — since when has having popular support made something right or wrong? What a shoddy way to decide one's ethics. America is a culture where selfishness reigns supreme, where sex is a god and babies a nuisance. Any popular support (vastly overstated by the media) for the "right" to slaughter babies only shows the decay of our culture, not the superiority of the abortion rights movement.

And we are not defeated. I was one of many in September of '91 who gathered at Emma Goldman, hoping to remind Iowa City that babies are routinely killed there. There were a few loose cannons who got the media attention and made bold claims. The clinic stayed open, the loose cannons left and the pro-life community picked up where it left off in the day-in, day-out work of helping women in crisis pregnancies and telling the truth about abortion. I remember walking by Klinzman that September in front of Emma Goldman as he chuckled when an acquaintance of his cheered for demons. He would do well to read Psalm 2; the nations rage, the peoples plot and the One who sits in heaven laughs.

Grants ignored

To the Editor:
In the article about research grants that appeared in the Aug. 30, 1993, Daily Iowan, there was no mention of staff participation in either receiving grants or in working on the grants. There are about 800 professional and scientific staff persons working in research, and a large proportion of these positions are funded from outside the UI.
There are also staff persons who have received outside funding in their own right. Sue Buckley, director of pre-vocational training, has received about $140,000; CONDUIT, whose director is a staff person, supports about three FTE of P&S with grants; Lynn Stoll from the anesthesia department has a grant to study cellular mechanism of action in the airway.
I'm sure there are many more staff persons with their own grants, and this financial contribution should also be recognized by the UI.

Field hockey drops to No. 5 in latest poll

The Iowa field hockey team dropped to No. 5 in the NCAA field hockey coaches poll, released Tuesday.

Big Ten rival Penn State is at top of the list. Last week's No. 1 North Carolina dropped to No. 2. Defending national champion Old Dominion moved up two spots to No. 3. Other ranked Big Ten schools include Northwestern at No. 4 and Michigan at No. 14.

Ex-Arizona State wrestler joins Iowa State staff

AMES (AP) — Shawn Charles, a four-time All-American at Arizona State, has been named an assistant wrestling coach at Iowa State.

Charles joins another former Arizona State wrestler, Thom Ortiz, on the Iowa State staff of coach Bobby Douglas. Douglas coached at Arizona State before taking the Iowa State job in April of 1992.

Wrestling at 126 pounds, Charles compiled a 103-31-6 record at Arizona State from 1989-93. He won Pac-10 Conference titles in 1992 and '93.

Ryan's career may be over

SEATTLE (AP) — Nolan Ryan's 27-year baseball career may have ended Wednesday night when a doctor found a suspected torn ligament in the Texas Rangers pitcher's right elbow.

Ryan failed to retire a Seattle batter, walking four and allowing two hits, including a grand slam to Dann Howitt, and trailed 5-0 when relieved in the first inning. He threw 28 pitches.

When he came out, Ryan asked to be examined by a doctor, according to Rangers traveling secretary Dan Schimek. Mariners team physician Dr. Larry Pedegana said he suspected Ryan has a torn ulnar collateral ligament in his right elbow.

Schimek said that if the diagnosis is correct, Ryan won't be able to pitch again this season, which he has said is his last.

On the disabled list 114 days this season because of injuries, Ryan entered the game with a 5-4 record and a 4.21 earned-run average.

Letterman gives World Series early start

NEW YORK (AP) — And now, the No. 1 reason why most World Series games will start about 20 minutes earlier this year: David Letterman.

CBS is cutting down its pregame show in hopes World Series games will end before the "Late Show with David Letterman" is scheduled to air at 11:35 p.m. EDT, television and baseball officials said Wednesday. World Series games, which had been starting in the 8:30-8:40 p.m. range, are set to begin at 8:12 p.m. during the week.

Games 1, 2 and 7 are set to start at 8:29 p.m. EDT with the rest at 8:12 p.m., the commissioner's office said Wednesday. These will be the earliest World Series start times since 1985, when Games 4-7 between Kansas City and St. Louis began at 8:13 p.m. EDT. Since 1985, all World Series games have been played at night except for Game 6 in 1987, which began at 3:56 p.m. EDT.

NFL

Players of the week announced

NEW YORK (AP) — Running back Chris Warren of Seattle and linebacker Junior Seau and kicker John Carney of San Diego are the AFC offensive, defensive and special teams players of the week, the NFL announced Wednesday.

The NFC picks were wide receiver Calvin Williams of Philadelphia and linebacker Renaldo Turnbull and punter Tommy Barnhardt of New Orleans.

Men's tennis brings experience into season

Todd Hefferman

The Daily Iowan

The men's tennis team takes center stage this weekend as they open their 1993-94 season in Ames.

The Hawkeyes are one of eight teams competing in the Iowa State Invitational Saturday and Sunday.

Drake, Creighton, the host Cyclones, Northwest Missouri, Southern Illinois, Southwest Baptist, and Southwest Missouri will all join Iowa for the weekend tournament.

Steve Houghton

As the Hawkeyes open their fall season, they also open their fall competitions for the top spots in the line-up.

"We have ten calendar days to get ready for our first meet, I'll probably play some challenge matches," Coach Steve Houghton said.

Houghton is in his 11th year as coach, and became Iowa's winningest coach in 1992.

Iowa will utilize an experienced line-up that includes six returning letterwinners, including four seniors, to help make up for their graduation losses.

Seniors Denahan, Mannheim, Marino, and Shale all look to contribute in the singles department.

Marino is a fifth-year senior out of Dubuque and is one of the top doubles players.

Joining the Hawkeyes this year is an elite transfer and two incoming freshmen. Bob Zumph is a junior from Bowling Green University, where he played the top singles position for the past two seasons while being ranked No. 29 in the nation.

Freshmen Tom Derouin and Ryan Johnstone will also see action.

"Both Zumph and Derouin will help our doubles," Houghton said.

With four of the top six singles players back from last year and several experienced doubles players, the Hawkeyes figure to improve on their fifth-place finish in the Big Ten a year ago.

"I'm really optimistic, we finished fifth, but I thought we were the fourth best team. One of our goals is to make it into the top four so we can qualify for the regional, and then get into the NCAA tournament," Houghton said.

"Experience will be a major advantage for the Hawkeyes."

"Everyone's been through all kinds of match situations," Denahan said.

Giants win, close in on Braves

Associated Press

HOUSTON — Bill Swift allowed four hits over eight innings for his 19th victory as the Giants closed within 2½ games of Atlanta in the NL West with their fifth win, a 1-0 victory over the Astros, in six games.

Swift (19-8) retired 17 of the first 20 batters and held Houston hitless until Steve Finley's infield single with one out in the fourth. Rod Beck pitched the ninth for his 42nd save and allowed one hit.

Pete Harnisch (15-9) pitched eight innings, allowing seven hits. He struck out 10 and walked two.

San Francisco scored in the seventh after Willie McGee led off with an infield hit that first baseman Chris Donnels mishandled. He advanced on a sacrifice and scored when Kirt Manwaring doubled, the only extra-base hit of the game.

Expos 6, Braves 1
MONTREAL — Jeff Fassero struck out a career-high 11 as the Expos rebounded from the 18-5 crushing the night before against Steve Avery (16-6).

Rookies Rondell White and Wil Cordero each drove in two runs for Montreal and Fassero (12-4), who started his first game in the majors on July 10 after 161 relief appearances, allowed four hits over eight innings.

The Expos stole four bases and those led to four runs, two in the first as Marquis Grissom led off with a single, moved up on a grounder and stole third. White blooped a single over the drawn-in infield for one run and Cordero beat a double-play relay for the second.

White opened the third with his second homer and one out later Cordero's double drove in Sean Berry, who had singled.

Cubs 11, Cardinals 9
CHICAGO — Glenallen Hill's three-run homer rallied Chicago over St. Louis and gave the Cubs a three-game series sweep over the Cardinals for the first time since October 1991.

Karl Rhodes' two-out RBI single in the sixth tied it 7-7. Mark Grace was walked intentionally to get to Hill, who hit his eighth homer since being traded from Cleveland Atlanta's Ron Gant slides into second for a stolen base the fourth inning of Montreal's 6-1 win over the Braves. The Braves are 2½ games ahead of the Giants.

on Aug. 20. He earlier had two singles and an RBI.

Shawn Boskie (5-3) gave up one hit in two innings for the win and Randy Myers pitched the ninth to extend his NL save record to 49.

Rene Arocha (11-7) pitched three scoreless innings of relief before giving up all four runs in the sixth.

Dodgers 3, Reds 1
CINCINNATI — Rafael Bourrigal's two-run single in the fourth broke the final tie and sent the Reds to their 12th straight loss, their longest losing streak since 1945.

The Reds haven't won since Sept. 8 and have lost 17 of 20.

The Dodgers won their third straight at Riverfront Stadium behind seven innings of four-hit pitching from Kevin Gross (11-13).

John Roper (2-5), a rookie who hasn't beaten anyone but Colorado, was the loser.

Mets 6, Pirates 5

PITTSBURGH — Charlie O'Brien hit a two-run homer in the 10th after John Franco blew his fourth consecutive save opportunity in the ninth as the Mets won consecutive games for the first time since Aug. 26-27 against the expansion Colorado Rockies.

Franco gave up a two-run homer to Dave Clark in the ninth, his 10th hit in 11 at-bats.

Franco (4-3) was credited with the win even though he allowed another run in the 10th on three singles.

Jerome Burnitz's two-run homer in the eighth broke a tie and gave the Mets the 4-2 lead.

Phillies 2, Marlins 1

PHILADELPHIA — Dave Hollins' one-out single with the bases loaded in the 12th inning reduced the Phillies' magic number for clinching the NL East to six.

The Phillies, who last won the division in 1983, maintained their 5½-game lead over second-place Montreal, which beat Atlanta 6-1 Wednesday night.

Pinch-hitter Pete Incaviglia walked to open the 12th and raced to third on a single by Lenny Dykstra. Reliever Richie Lewis then hit Mickey Morandini with a pitch to load the bases.

Reliever Roger Mason (5-11) pitched 1½ innings to earn the victory while Bryan Harvey (1-5) took the loss. Harvey walked Incaviglia, then left with a groin pull.

Toronto's streak ends in 10 innings

Associated Press

TORONTO — Rob Deer hit a two-run homer in the 10th inning Wednesday night as the Boston Red Sox ended Toronto's nine-game winning streak with a 7-5 victory over the Blue Jays.

Despite losing, the Blue Jays didn't lose any ground in the AL East race.

They maintained a 5-game lead over New York and 5½ over Baltimore, both of whom lost.

Mo Vaughn reached on first baseman John Olerud's error before Deer hit loser Mike Timlin's (4-2) 1-2 pitch to left for his 19th homer of the season.

Ken Ryan (6-2), who gave up a game-tying double to Roberto Alomar in the ninth, got the win. He allowed three hits over two innings, struck out two and didn't walk a batter.

Rickey Henderson chased Aaron Sele in the seventh, hitting his 20th homer to trim the Red Sox lead to 4-3. Mo Vaughn 27th homer of the year made it 5-3 Boston.

Mike Greenwell hit a two-run homer in the fifth off Pat Hentgen had given Boston a 4-2 lead.

Twins 5, Yankees 2

NEW YORK — Pedro Munoz hit a three-run homer during Minnesota's four-run second inning and the Twins beat the fading New York Yankees.

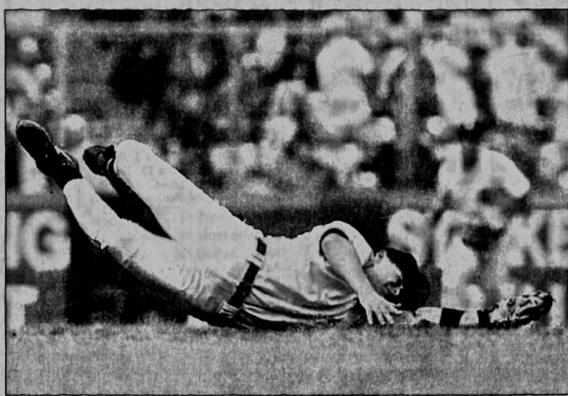

New York lost for the 10th time in 15 games and failed to cut into Toronto's lead in the American League East.

Munoz, who homered twice and drove in five runs in Tuesday night's 5-4 victory, homered off Scott Kamieniecki (9-7).

Kevin Tapani (10-15) won for the eighth time in 11 career decisions against the Yankees, who had won four straight at home against Minnesota before losing Tuesday night.

Indians 4, Orioles 2
CLEVELAND — Pinch-hitter Candy Maldonado hit a two-run, tie-breaking single in the seventh inning.

The loss wrapped up a 3-6 road trip, and the Orioles now return home for a season-ending, 10-game homestand that includes three games with the Yankees and four with the Blue Jays.

Ben McDonald (12-13) limited the Indians to two runs and four hits until the seventh, when Mark Lewis singled and stole second and Sandy Alomar walked. A ground-out advanced the runners, and Maldonado drove them in with a single off Jim Poole.

The Orioles had tied it at 2 on Brady Anderson's run-scoring double off Jeremy Hernandez (5-3) in the seventh.

Tigers 8, Brewers 4

DETROIT — Chad Kreuter, Alan Trammell and Eric Davis all homered in a seven-run fifth inning as Detroit beat Milwaukee.

David Wells (11-9) allowed three runs in the first two innings, then settled down for his first win in four September starts. He allowed three runs on eight hits and one walk in seven innings.

Cal Eldred (16-15) gave up seven earned runs on seven hits in 4½ innings.

Tyson case won't be reviewed

Thomas P. Wyman

Associated Press

INDIANAPOLIS — The Indiana Supreme Court refused Wednesday to consider the rape case that landed former heavyweight champion Mike Tyson in prison.

The justices issued a one-page order that gave no reason for not reviewing an appeals court decision upholding Tyson's conviction and six-year sentence.

"The only thing left for him to do is if he could find some constitutional issue — and there is none — and take it to the U.S. Supreme Court," said Greg Garrison, the prosecutor who won the 1992 conviction.

The five-member court divided 2-2. Chief Justice Randall T. Shepard withdrew from the case last year and didn't participate in the vote. Justices Richard M. Givan and Roger O. DeBruiler voted against Tyson. Justices Brent E. Dickson and Jon D. Krahulik, who earlier announced he will resign next month, voted to hear the appeal.

Court rules require a majority vote before a case can be heard. The Supreme Court is required to review criminal cases only when a prison sentence is 50 years or longer, or in death penalty cases.

"The idea that an evenly divided court should refuse to hear the appeal of a defendant with substantial claims of innocence defies American traditions of fair play," Tyson lawyer Alan Dershowitz said.

"We will take whatever legal recourse is necessary to see that this injustice is finally brought to an end..." he said. However, the lawyer didn't refer to an earlier statement that he would take the case to the U.S. Supreme Court if the Indiana high court refused to hear it.

Tyson is being held in the Indiana Youth Center, a state prison 15 miles west of Indianapolis, for the 1991 attack on a Miss Black America pageant contestant.

Desiree Washington, the Coventry, R.I., college student who accused Tyson, had little reaction when she heard the news, said her lawyer, Deval L. Patrick.

"She's very sober about all the milestones in the case," Patrick said. "She has taken this in stride as she has every other step."

The Appeals Court upheld Tyson's conviction on a 2-1 vote last month. The majority ruled that Marion Superior Court Judge Patricia J. Gifford acted correctly in preventing jurors from hearing testimony that might have shed doubts on Washington's credibility. Jurors also didn't hear evidence the defense claimed would show that Washington had a "powerful and secret motive" to lie.

In dissent, Judge Patrick D. Sullivan said the judge erred by not telling jurors to consider whether Tyson might have mistakenly believed Washington had consented to sex.

Even if she had not, "Tyson may have reasonably believed she was consenting," Sullivan said.

Washington said Tyson, who traveled to Indianapolis to promote the pageant, lured her to his hotel room with the promise of a party tour and raped her despite her pleas to stop.

Tyson said Washington agreed to sex, then turned on him when he abandoned her. He said Washington filed the criminal complaint with the hopes of suing him.

Dolphins focus on Thomas

Steven Wine
Associated Press
DAVIE, Fla. — The Miami Dolphins plan to stop Buffalo starts with Thurman Thomas.

In 11 games against Miami, Thomas has averaged 115 yards rushing while the Bills win and 28 yards when they lose. The AFC East foes renew their rivalry Sunday in Buffalo.

"When Thurman Thomas can run the ball and be a threat catching the ball, that's when we have trouble," Miami linebacker Bryan Cox said Wednesday. "We have to stop the run and make Buffalo one-dimensional. When you do that, you have a chance to make big plays."

The Miami defense has other worries, namely its pass rush. Buffalo's no-huddle offense, screen passes, Jim Kelly, Andre Reed and John Offerdahl's shoulder.

"With a list that long, it's no wonder the Bills have won six of the past seven games in the series. Every time they win, they control the ball and the flow of the game," safety Louis Oliver said.

With a victory Sunday, the Bills would take charge of the division race. The three-time defending conference champions are 2-0; Miami is 1-1.

Thomas is off to a good start this year, with 189 yards rushing in 49 carries. A bye last weekend gave the Dolphins an extra week to look at film of him breaking tackles and outrunning defenders.

"You just have to get a lot of people around him so that if he does something, it's going to be amazing," safety Jarvis Williams said.

A healthy Offerdahl would make Miami's task easier, but the oft-injured middle linebacker is questionable for the game because of a slight shoulder separation.

"We get an emotional lift when he's in there," Williams said.

Miami's only recent victory over the Bills came a year ago at Buffalo. Offerdahl was all over the field, Thomas rushed for just 33 yards and the Dolphins won, 37-10.

Kelly threw four interceptions, partly because he was harried by a strong pass rush. But this year, after two games, Miami is the only NFL team without a sack.

If the Dolphins blitz, Buffalo likely will turn to the screen pass. It worked repeatedly in last season's AFC championship game, when running backs Thomas and Kenneth Davis combined for 122 yards in receptions and the Bills beat Miami, 29-10.

The Dolphins have had trouble stopping Kelly and Reed, too. When the Bills beat Miami three times in 1991, the duo combined on 23 completions for 356 yards and five touchdowns.

If the threat of a long gainer by Reed or Thomas puts Miami on edge, Buffalo's no-huddle offense only intensifies the pressure. The pace at which the Bills play can exhaust a defense.

"They run the no-huddle better than most people," defensive end Jeff Cross said.

"Most people are just trying to keep you from making substitutions, but the Bills are trying to get you tired and sloppy and wear you down."

Still, given the Bills' scheme and multiple weapons, Thomas remains the foremost concern. More than anyone else, he has determined the outcome when Buffalo plays Miami.

"The games we've won, he wasn't a factor," Oliver said. "The games we've lost, he killed us."

Nike works to keep stars' eligibilities

Bob Baum
Associated Press
PORTLAND, Ore. — Nike, admitting "we didn't do our homework," attempted Wednesday to preserve the high school eligibility of some of the best young basketball players in the nation.

The 37 players from 19 states participated earlier this month in a series of all-star games sponsored by the athletic shoe manufacturer.

By playing in the Nike Town Fab 40 Shootout in Beaverton, some of the players apparently violated high school association rules governing all-star game participation and amateur eligibility.

Nike officials were contacting associations in all states involved to see what could be done to preserve the youngsters' eligibility to play high school sports, company spokesman Keith Peters said Wednesday.

The case was being investigated on a player-by-player basis, he said, because each state has different rules.

"It's a complex situation," Peters said. "On the high school level, there are a myriad of state organizations, sometimes more than one in a state."

For participating in the event, each player received a $100 gift certificate to Nike's company store along with about $240 worth of shoes and practice gear.

That is against the rules in some states, and several players have indicated they would return anything they obtained in violation of the rules.

"I don't know that anything is physically back here yet," Peters said, "but I'm sure they're all very willing to return anything that will help maintain their eligibility."

Another problem in some states is the timing of the gathering. It was Sept. 10-12, after school had started in most areas. In some states, players aren't allowed to participate in all-star games during the school year.

Peters said Nike is entirely to blame for the problem. The company made sure no NCAA rules were violated but did not check to see if high school regulations were followed.

Expansion pitches finished

Five cities remain in contention for an NFL expansion franchise; committee will make recommendations in Oct.

Associated Press

CHICAGO — The five cities vying for two NFL expansion franchises made their final pitches on Wednesday. Now they have a month to wait.

The NFL's Finance and Expansion committees heard presentations from Memphis, Charlotte, St. Louis, Baltimore and Jacksonville, Fla., over two days.

They will make their recommendations to the league owners in Chicago Oct. 26-28, and a vote is expected then.

"We accomplished and they accomplished what they had to do," NFL Commissioner Paul Tagliabue said Wednesday after Memphis and Charlotte made their presentations.

Tagliabue said none of the five cities' stadium plans appeared to have any obvious problems.

St. Louis and Baltimore, which lost franchises to Phoenix and Indianapolis over the past decade, appeared to be the favorites with Charlotte running third.

But William Dunavant, majority partner for the group seeking a franchise for Memphis, thought his group swayed committee members.

"Memphis' stock today went up considerably in the eyes of the gentlemen in that room," he said after Tuesday's presentation.

"I mean very strongly went up. We answered all the questions. There were no excessive questions about the financing package

Pepper Rodgers talks to reporters after a group from Memphis, Tenn., he was with made its final presentations in a bid for an NFL expansion team Wednesday in Chicago. He is a former coach at Georgia Tech and UCLA.

because it is sound and conservative."

Jerry Richardson, head of the 19-member Charlotte ownership group, felt just as good.

"I think the people we talked to today were impressed," he said. "I think they clearly understood what we had to say."

Richardson said his group emphasized its stadium proposal and public support.

The team would play at Clemson University the first year while a $160 million privately funded stadium is built and ticket sales have already put $54 million into an escrow account.

"We never tried to figure out where we ranked in the race for an expansion franchise," Richardson said.

"We think we have a very strong case."

Rankin Smith, owner of the Atlanta Falcons and a member of the expansion committee, said he hadn't made up his mind. He declined to speculate on the applicants' chances.

Asked if a club in Charlotte would affect the Atlanta market, Smith responded: "I don't think it has any effect on us whatsoever. And Jacksonville would be the same way."

Chinese delegation responds to criticism

David Crary
Associated Press

MONTE CARLO, Monaco — With the crucial vote just a day away, the Beijing delegation Wednesday denounced Western criticism of China's human rights record and said the entire world would benefit if it hosted the 2000 Summer Olympics.

Vice Premier Li Lanqing, the senior Chinese official with the almost 200-strong delegation, accused U.S. and British politicians of violating the Olympic spirit by urging that China be denied the Games on political grounds.

The delegations from Beijing's two main rivals, Sydney and Manchester, took aim at the front-runner and touted their cities as safe, stable venues.

British Environment Minister John Gummer said China's human rights record was a topic of legitimate concern for the IOC in choosing a host city Thursday.

"The real issue is whether it is an incentive or a prize for improving the treatment of dissidents," Gummer said during a Manchester news briefing. "I am sure there will come a time when Beijing will be a very suitable host for the Olympic Games. I don't happen to think that it is the moment now."

He also suggested that Beijing lacked the stable atmosphere that Manchester could provide.

Li said the Chinese viewed with "astonishment and regret" recent remarks by British Foreign Secretary Douglas Hurd opposing Beijing's bid because of human rights shortcomings.

Rick Warner
Associated Press

After being a head coach at Stanford last week, the Buffaloes could use another Saturday. They won't be there though.

That's because no one has been able to stop them. The Buffaloes are 3-0 in their last-second 4-0 Stanford.

"We'll rebound in the next game," McCartney said. "That's the way to do it, that's what we do."

Miami coach Dennis Green expects a tough test for the Buffaloes following a convincing 26-10 victory over Boston College at the Sun Bowl in El Paso, Texas.

"They have their ball game," he said.

"I'm sure that loss will get them up and ready to go for the game on Saturday."

The game will pit the Buffaloes' explosive offense against the Hurricanes' stingy defense.

The Buffaloes are averaging 38.5 yards and 39 points per game, while the Hurricanes are averaging only 258 yards and 4.4 points per game.

Something's got to give. The Buffaloes have a dominating defense which has eight sacks and two interceptions in its first two games.

The Hurricanes, who are point favorites, will be led by Colorado quarterback Kory Allen and hand the Buffs their first straight loss... MIAMI

Buffaloes won't have easy game

Rick Warner
Associated Press

After being a heartbreaker to Stanford last week, the Colorado Buffaloes could use an easy victory Saturday. They won't get one, though.

That's because nothing comes easy against No. 3 Miami, which visits Boulder for the first time since 1978.

With the powerful Hurricanes coming to town, Colorado coach Bill McCartney knows his 13th-ranked team can't afford to dwell on its last-second 41-37 loss to Stanford.

"We'll rebound in a hurry," McCartney said. "That's what we'll try to do, that's what we have to do."

Miami coach Dennis Erickson expects a tough test for his Hurricanes following convincing wins over Boston College and Virginia Tech.

"They have their backs against the wall," he said. "I'm sure that loss will have them up and ready to play us at home."

The game will pit Colorado's explosive offense against Miami's stingy defense.

The Buffaloes are averaging 539 yards and 39 points per game, while the Hurricanes are giving up only 258 yards and 4.5 points per contest.

Something's got to give, and it will be Colorado.

The Buffaloes haven't faced a dominating defense like Miami, which has eight sacks and five interceptions in its first two games.

Sacca wants answers

Kelly P. Kissell
Associated Press

STATE COLLEGE, Pa. — Was it something he said?

Penn State quarterback John Sacca, who criticized coach Joe Paterno for pulling him from Saturday's game at Iowa, said Wednesday he hasn't figured out why he's been demoted to the Nittany Lions' second string.

In his first interview since an outburst in the Nittany Lion locker room at Iowa City, Sacca said he hoped the distraction didn't hurt the team, but he stuck by his words and said Paterno hasn't fully explained why Kerry Collins is working with the first team.

"I went in and asked why I was taken out," Sacca said. "He didn't give me a clear-cut answer. He said he wanted to give Kerry a chance."

Paterno said Tuesday the matter is history and that he would determine later who would start against Rutgers on Saturday night.

Sacca said he is willing to stay on the team this year despite his disappointment. He said he would reconsider his options after the season.

"I think somewhere down the road they're going to need me," Sacca said.

Paterno pulled Sacca from Saturday's game after he misfired on six of his first seven passes. The coach said after the game he had every intention of using Collins sometime on Saturday. Sacca wasn't told ahead of time.

"I don't think I would have been as shocked," Sacca said. "That might have contributed to what I said. During the game I was doing some thinking. It just sort of came out."

After the game, Sacca questioned Paterno's actions, saying he deserved to lead the team and threatening to leave the team if he was a backup. He changed his mind after talking to teammates and family, including his brother, Tony, now with the Phoenix Cardinals, who played here before John.

"They really wanted me to stick it out," Sacca said. "I didn't want to leave my fellow players hanging."

Against Iowa, Penn State's passing didn't improve with Collins. He completed only six of 16 passes. A storming defense, with nine sacks and three interceptions, and another 200-plus yard running attack won the game.

'Into the West' infused with captivating magic

Ian Corwin
The Daily Iowan

The Irish have always had a talent for capturing the world's heart with lore and song.

Whether a storyteller roams around the slums in turn-of-the-century Dublin, whether a songster croons about political mas-

"Enchanted April" director Mike Newell. Sheridan pens the screenplay while Newell directs, and it is a partnership of true wizardry.

"Into the West" concerns itself with the escapades of two precocious street children living in Dublin's overcrowded housing projects. Their father, Papa Riley (Gabriel Byrne, "Cool World"), used to be a traveler (a sort of modern-day Celtic brand of gypsy), but after the death of his wife, he took the children and settled in the city, against his own instincts as a man of the road.

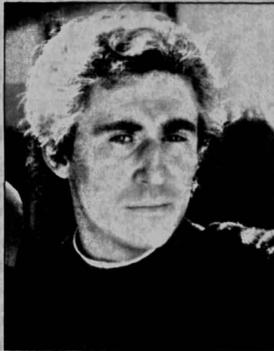

The boys, 8-year-old Ossie (Ciaran Fitzgerald) and 12-year-old Tito (Ruaidhri "Rory" Conroy) must panhandle to survive, but their luck changes when a horse with extraordinary abilities follows their grandfather's caravan into Dublin. In a beautiful, haunting campfire scene, the grandfather tells the boys that the horse's name is "Tir na nOg," which means "Land of Eternal Youth." He relays to them the legend of a beautiful woman and her prince, who wanted to remain eternally young, but could only do it by staying on his horse.

"What did the lady look like?" asks Ossie.

"Close your eyes," orders the old man. "Do you see a pretty lady?"

"Yes."

"That's her."

Gabriel Byrne

It's writing like this, simple in its goals, that weaves the spell in "Into the West." After Tir na nOg is bought by a wealthy businessman, the boys steal the horse and head west, toward the Land of Eternal Youth. Here, the film bursts the bounds of "charm" and goes straight toward a trait found very rarely in movies anymore — pure magic.

The boys "ride the trail" like their American cowboy idols, singing songs and sleeping under the stars, relying on their wits to survive (and doing a pretty good job of it). The scene in which Ossie and Tito spend the night in a movie theater with all the free popcorn they can eat is a realized moment of childhood fantasy for all who see it, aside from being a smart way to keep from starving.

"Into the West" draws on all types of stories to tell its tale, from old myth to new legend, from the American Western to the simple campfire chiller. The Irish countryside (beautifully photographed) in and of itself infuses the film with an ethereal magic, but Sheridan and Newell have created their own unique blend of tangible enchantment on a meatier, higher plane.

This film is the first "family" flick I've seen in years that doesn't treat children like complete dolts who slaver and drool over Nintendo's day and sit like blank-faced imbeciles in front of the tube by night until they must be packed into bed like chunks of meat. Sheridan and Newell give the children who watch this film a little credit — they expect kids to be able to understand some of the more complex themes at work in the film, and that's their proudest accomplishment.

How can I weed through all the delightful images and ideas and get right to the heart of "Into the West?"

Let's put it this way: "Close your eyes. Do you see a perfect story? This is it."

sacres in Derry and Belfast, if they are Irish, they seem to be blessed from the start with an uncanny gift, a mysterious ability to hypnotize listeners and lead them by the hand through a magical country and into the Halls of Legend.

"Into the West," the new film from Miramax's young family film division, does just that. It is a tale of true fenny adventure, discovery and the iron will of youth, and in the end, it's the stuff dreams are made of.

The mythic quality of this charmer is in no small part due to the teaming of "My Left Foot" director Jim Sheridan and

New 'Crow' collection passing time for fans; film still stuck in limbo

Tasha Robinson
The Daily Iowan

If a movie falls by the wayside before it makes it to theaters, does it make a noise?

Normally, no. Some projects — like Terry Gilliam's prospective "Watchmen" adaptation, which allegedly folded after his "Adventures of Baron Munchausen" went down in extremely expensive flames — get a lot of press and attract a lot of interest even in the pre-pre-production stages. Most, however, crash and burn without attracting any notice whatsoever.

Not so with Paramount Pictures' "The Crow" project, which attracted nationwide attention earlier this year when the project's star, actor Brandon Lee, was accidentally shot to death on the set last March. The questions about what had caused the accident and who was to blame seem to have been answered, at least as well as they're ever going to be. The film, however, remains in limbo.

After a quick analysis of the extent of the unfilmed scenes and the public mood, Paramount stated it was going ahead with the film project. That much hasn't changed. Earlier this week, Harry Klein, a publicity representative for the film, adamantly asserted that work on "The Crow" is still being done, and that it will eventually be released.

Beyond that? No one seems to know. What's being done about the missing scenes? We don't know at this time. Is the script going to have to be rewritten? We can't say. Is this going to hurt the final product significantly? Paramount has said in the past that they plan to release a version that will serve as "a fitting memorial tribute" to Lee. But no one seems to be willing to say more than that. Klein claims that the company simply doesn't know yet. "As far as I know, it's apparently going to be released," he said. "I don't know when and I don't know by who, but they say it is going to be released."

Release or no release, chalk up a few points to Paramount for taking their time with the project. I worried in an April column that Paramount would attempt to slap together an edited version of the film as quickly as possible in order to ride the free publicity to a box office success. That, at least, hasn't been done. It's entirely possible that befuddled bureaucracy has more to do with the nonrelease of the film than high moral standards do, but the end result is the same — fans don't have to see the original work cheapened by a weak film. At least not yet.

While waiting for the final results, however, fans should check out the latest take on "The Crow," hot off the presses from Kitchen Sink Press, the new owners of Tundra Publishing, which released the original. This book hit town over a month ago, but until now neither Daydreams nor Igwana's has been able to keep it in stock; they've been selling far too well.

The new book is a trade paperback collecting the original three books of the series, along with a new introduction, a dedication to Lee and quite a bit of new art. It's probably not an investment for people who already own the books, since it's basically a reprint volume, but it's ideal for those who heard about the books' strength in the wake of the March tragedy and were subsequently unable to track them down.

"The Crow" tells the story of a young man who inexplicably comes back from the dead to avenge his own death and the vicious rape-murder of his fiancée. The plot is simple enough; chapter by chapter, he tracks down the people responsible and kills them messily. The story is not "The Crow" 's strong point.

What does make the book stand out is its unusual tone and experimentation in cognitive dissonance. The book is essentially an exercise in contrasts and extremes; throughout the book, author J. O'Barr's graphic, grisly images are at direct odds with his poetic, often ethereal text. From the art, which ranges from highly detailed, blade-sharp chiaroscuro to soft, fuzzy pencil work, to the contents, which are both brutally ugly and subtly elegant, "The Crow" is unique in its juxtaposition of ultraviolence and poetry.

O'Barr fleshes out this theme with quotes, poetry and song lyrics from The Cure, Joy Division and Robyn Hitchcock. His main character speaks in litting free verse and poetic metaphor as he commits acts that couldn't make it into a film version without guaranteeing an NC-17 rating.

That's assuming the film ever makes it as far as a ratings board. One way or another, though, it's just become a little easier to take a look at the book that started it all off. (Good luck getting your hands on one.)

CORRECTION: A previous column listed an incorrect address for NEC Press. For a free catalogue of titles including "The Tick," "Paul the Samurai" and "Man-Eating Cow," fans should write to Box 310, Quincy, MA, 02269.

LIVE AT PRAIRIE LIGHTS

Sherman Alexie to read from strong, bleak new collection of short stories

Shayla Thiel
The Daily Iowan

We hear about the American Indians of old journeying to the depths of the wilderness, starving and depriving themselves in order to be given a remarkable vision of their destinies. A Spokane / Coeur d'Alene Indian, Sherman Alexie, fulfills such a vision quest through his poignant new collection of short stories, "The Lone Ranger and Tonto Fistfight in Heaven."

While Alexie's vision may seem bleak throughout his fictional accounts, he still possesses the strong voice of a survivor of a people plagued with hopelessness. Using humor and irony, Alexie sets forth imaginative stories ranging from one young man's struggle to understand his father's fascination with Jimi Hendrix's "Star Spangled Banner" to another young man raising a seemingly mentally disabled orphan. He goes on from there to explore three friends' vision quests that can only be induced by drugs and the trial of a gifted storyteller who remained silent for 20 years before delivering some final words of wisdom.

Alexie's 22 stories flow with resilience and determination, connected by common characters in common contemporary situations laced with everyday realism on the reservation and beyond — alcoholism, basketball, relationships with whites, sex, the hurtful references in an unknowingly racist society. Although Alexie is only 26, he is a veteran teacher from whose lessons we can all learn.

"There are things you should learn," he says in "A Drug Called Tradition." "Your past is a skeleton walking one step behind you, and your future is a skeleton walking one step in front of you. Maybe you don't wear a watch, but your skeletons do, and they always know what time it is. Now, these skeletons are made of memories, dreams, and voices. And they trap you in the in-between, between touching and becoming ... keep walking, keep moving. And don't wear a watch. Hell, Indians never need to wear a watch because your skeletons will always remind you about the time. See, it is always now. That's what the Indian time is. The past, the future, all of it is wrapped up in the now. That's how it is. We are trapped in the now."

Alexie, whose first book of poetry and short stories, "The Business of Fancydancing," won the "Notable Book of the Year Award" in 1992, forces readers who are unfamiliar with the trials and tragedies facing the contemporary American Indian to examine this lost sector of American society. But he does so without seeming forceful in his style and words. He forgives the world which has been so undeniably cruel to the American Indian throughout the centuries and offers his own vision as redemption in "Imagining the Reservation."

"The reservation doesn't sing anymore but the songs still hang in the air. Every molecule waits for a drumbeat; every element dreams lyrics. Today I am walking between water, two parts hydrogen, one part oxygen, and the energy expelled is named Forgiveness."

Alexie's distinct voice is perhaps what makes his writing so magical and accessible. In a story about doomed storyteller and daydreamer Thomas Builds-The-Fire, Alexie seems to speak through the character:

"We are all given one thing by which our lives are measured, one determination. Mine are the stories which can change or not change the world. It doesn't matter which as long as I continue to tell the stories. ... I have no brothers and sisters. I have only my stories which came to me before I even had the words to speak. I learned a thousand stories before I took my first thousand steps. They are all I have. It's all I can do."

Alexie delivers the formula for survival — the key to getting through the misery and discovering the joy found in his heritage — with the honest simplicity of a young American storyteller and the power of Chief Crazy Horse. "Survival = Anger x Imagination. Imagination is the only weapon on the reservation."

Alexie will read from "The Lone Ranger and Tonto Fistfight in Heaven" at 8 tonight at Prairie Lights Books, 15 S. Dubuque St. The reading will be broadcast live on WSUI (AM 910) and WOI (AM 640) with host Julie Englander. It is free and open to the public.

'Billboards' dancers to attend reception, answer questions

The Daily Iowan

Tickets are still available for all five of Hancher Auditorium's upcoming performances of "Billboards," the Joffrey Ballet / Prince collaboration. But interested "Billboards" fans can get a little more up close and personal with members of the show this evening from 5 to 6:30 at Burge Residence Hall.

Mayflower Resident Assistants Cristina Gapsin, Brian Nelson and Michelle Johnson, who, like most of the rest of the Mayflower staff and students, are currently living in Burge, have set up a reception for "Billboards" as part of their RA requirements. Two dancers from the Joffrey troupe, Carl Corry and Kim Sagami, will be at the reception to talk about their work with "Billboards."

Gapsin says that the dancers will talk about "what it means to be a dancer, what they have to do in the troupe, how they came to join the Joffrey, etc." and will then open the floor up for questions.

The reception will be held in the Burge Lobby and is open to everyone living in the UI residence halls. Refreshments will be served.

'Polite' freedom of expression or banal sarcasm?

DETROIT — Detroit police officers under orders not to say "a nice day" anymore.

At least, not after issuing a traffic ticket.

The directive was issued Wednesday after some officers complained the phrase was sarcastic.

"The officers will free use that expression without using anything malicious," Deputy Chief James Barbee said. "It's a delicate kind of thing. You don't want to tell police not to be polite."

Tom Schneider, president of the police union, complained the order sounds like a comment on freedom of speech rights.
