Clinton on Somalia: Finish it the right way

Terence Hunt
Associated Press

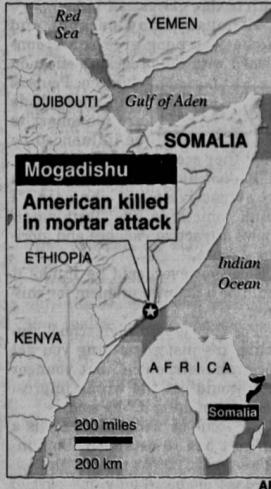

WASHINGTON — President Clinton ordered 5,300 more troops, heavy armor and naval firepower to Somalia on Thursday to "finish the work we set out to do." But, facing growing demands for immediate withdrawal, he pledged to pull out all Americans by March 31.

"We started this mission for the right reasons, and we are going to finish it in the right way," Clinton said in a nationally televised address from the Oval Office. "If we stay a short while longer and do the right thing, we have a reasonable chance of cooling the embers."

Under intense pressure from Congress and the watchful eye of an anxious public, Clinton said the U.S. force had to be expanded to protect troops already there and to make sure humanitarian missions continued.

The president was looking to quell a chorus of protest in Congress and won an immediate pledge of bipartisan support from Senate Republican leader Bob Dole.

"I would urge my colleagues that this is not a time to pick a partisan fight over Somalia," Dole said. "On this particular issue I believe the president has earned the day and deserves our support, and I believe he will have broad support across the aisles."

Sen. Robert Byrd, D-W.Va., one of the most outspoken critics of Clinton's policy, praised the president's decision to set a withdrawal

2nd Iowa soldier killed in fighting Wednesday

Associated Press

NEVADA, Iowa — A second Iowa soldier has died in the fighting in Somalia, family friends said Thursday.

Matthew Riererson, 33, who was with the U.S. Army Special Forces stationed at Fort Bragg, N.C., died Wednesday in heavy fighting in the strife-ridden East African nation, his family was told Wednesday night.

"You never think this can happen in your community. It's just a tragic loss, just tragic," said Rosella Chitty, a neighbor and family friend. "He was very proud of what he was doing, and he was a wonderful husband and father."

"This is just too much for the family to take," Lt. Cmdr. Joe Gradisher of the Department of Defense media desk in Washington said no information on Riererson's death had been released by the Pentagon.

Riererson was the second Iowan killed in the recent fighting in Somalia. Pfc. Matthew K. Anderson, 21, of Lucas, Iowa, died Oct. 2 when Somali militiamen shot down a U.S. helicopter with a rocket-launched grenade.

Riererson and his wife, Patricia, also from Nevada, have sons aged 2 and 4. Riererson's mother, Kay Riererson, and in-laws, Richard and Elizabeth Huff, still live in the central Iowa town of 6,000 about 30 miles north of Des Moines.

"He blended into whatever was going on. This was true about him ever since he was a kid," Chitty said. "Sure, he was ornery as a little boy, but he had a very caring nature."

Riererson had been home in July when flood waters spread across much of Iowa. Chitty remembers him paddling around with a sump pump in his canoe.

A 1979 graduate of Nevada High School, Riererson was captain of his football team.

"Whenever he did anything, he did it all the way or he didn't do it at all," said Ron Fincham, who owned a sporting goods store in Nevada. "He wanted to do his part. I don't know, but I guess the odds caught up to him."

Choreographer de Mille dies at age 88

NEW YORK (AP) — Agnes de Mille, the "monumental force" whose breakthrough choreography changed Broadway and ballet, died Thursday at age 88.

De Mille won Tony Awards for "Brigadoon" in 1947 and "Kwamina" in 1962. But theatergoers best knew her for "Oklahoma!" which made its Broadway debut in March 1943.

Physician's assistant amputates own leg

IDAHO SPRINGS, Colo. (AP) — A physician's assistant who was pinned down by a boulder freed himself by cutting off his leg with a fishing knife, then crawled out of the wilderness and drove off in a truck to find help.

William S. Jeracki, 38, of Conifer, Colo., was in serious but stable condition Wednesday.

Jeracki was hiking earlier in the day on St. Mary's Glacier in the Rockies, searching for a good fishing spot, when a rock the size of a truck tire crashed down on his lower left leg.

When no one responded to his calls for help, and with bad weather looming, he cut through the knee joint.

"He got to the point where he was more concerned about his life than about his limb," Dr. David Cianni said.

Lawmaker who brandished toy penis won't be charged

ATLANTA (AP) — A state lawmaker who brought a toy penis to the House floor won't be charged with showing it to a 13-year-old page because the boy was unsure who did it.

Attorney General Michael Bowers announced the decision Wednesday in the case of Rep. Jimmy Benefield.

The toy consisted of a penis that popped up when an apron covering it was raised. A page had said a legislator last spring summoned him to his seat, directed his attention to the apron and displayed the fake penis.

DOCUMENTS GAY LIFESTYLES

Controversial film's showing in response to 'homophobia'

Tory Brecht
The Daily Iowan

A flier announcing the screening of "Paris is Burning" reads: Caution! The UI administration does NOT want you to see this film.

A group of students and teaching assistants are sponsoring the screening in response to what they say is a sanction for homophobia and intolerance by the UI and the Iowa state Board of Regents.

"Paris is Burning," which documents gay lifestyles, was shown in a class last spring, prompting complaints by several students who objected to its content. The TA who showed the film was reprimanded in a letter from the dean of the College of Liberal Arts for not warning students about the nature of the film.

However, the reprimand was rescinded because the UI had no concrete policy on when students should be warned of class content. The TA also established that the class had received prior warning of the subject matter.

Pat Gallagher, a TA in the Spanish and Portuguese department, said "Paris is Burning" is only controversial because it documents gay life.

"The point is not whether it has sexual scenes in it," he said. "The reason it was censored is because it had to do with homosexuality." Gallagher said every film that has prompted the regents to act has dealt with homosexual issues.

Two years ago, the showing of "Taxi zum Klo," another movie depicting homosexual life, resulted in a banning of the film in UI classes.

Last winter a film in a UI art and art history Colloquium that included a scene depicting male oral sex prompted then regents President Marvin Pomerantz to warn the university that it had two strikes against it, and someone was going to be fired if another incident like that took place.

R. Wayne Richey, the executive director of the Iowa state Board of Regents, said "Paris is Burning" will not be the third strike.

"I understand it has no explicit sex," Richey said. "If that's true, then the board does not have a position on the film. The board request relates only to explicit sexual relations involving humans, nothing else."

The regents have asked the UI to write a specific policy addressing procedures when showing possibly offensive material in the classroom. The UI was scheduled to present the new policy at the October regents meeting.

But the UI Faculty Senate failed

DISCRIMINATORY FUNDING?

International groups still call budget unfair

Megan Penick
The Daily Iowan

Despite numerous meetings and revisions, some UI international student groups still feel they have been discriminated against by the UI Student Association in their organizational budgeting.

Moyisi Majeke of the African Student Association said he blames only the Student Association Budgeting and Auditing Committee and not the entire UISA.

"The budget was a fiasco, and there was nothing the president or the senators could do about it," he said. "The veto power was held by the [Keith] Chiavetta group. ... I am saying it was deliberate and that it was not a mistake."

Chinese Student Association President Wen-Sang Wang said the UISA showed blatant prejudice in not funding the CSA.

"Our association didn't get even a penny this year, and we have about 400 students," he said. "The only thing I know is that there seems to be some students in student government that have some degree of discrimination for foreign students."

FACING DISCIPLINARY ACTION

ISU student declares 'jihad' on prof.

Associated Press

AMES — An Iowa State University student faces disciplinary action after threatening a professor with "jihad," or Muslim holy war, ISU President Martin Jischke said.

"The comment that he made about declaring a 'jihad' was interpreted by history Professor Christine Pope to be quite threatening," Jischke said Wednesday on WO radio's "Talk of Iowa" program.

The student was identified as DeAngelo Moore, who also goes by the name DeAngelo X. The freshman from Waterloo was barred from Pope's class in African-American history for being disruptive but has since been allowed to attend with an escort, Jischke said.

X, whose major is construction engineering, said Wednesday that he had been told by "superior officers" in the Nation of Islam not to comment.

Jessica Bovey, an art education student from Iowa City, said problems in the class came to a head recently when Pope wouldn't recognize X for a question. X was holding up a newspaper with a headline saying something about "black power," she said.

When Pope did not recognize X, "he called her a racist," Bovey said. When Pope finally started answering the question, X didn't agree and called her a liar, Bovey said.

Bovey said that Pope asked X to leave. He stayed, and when Pope continued with her answer, he walked to the front of the class and put the newspaper on the lectern. As he was returning to his seat, Pope threw the paper at him, Bovey said.

Pope has said federal law prohibits her from commenting on a student disciplinary case.

UI campus reacts to Beavis and Butt-head

Chris Pothoven
The Daily Iowan

The names pretty much say it all: Beavis, Butt-head. Even for the three people on campus who haven't actually seen their television show, it's a safe bet that this MTV duo isn't on quite the same intellectual level as "Nightline," "Northern Exposure" or even "Full House."

In the last few months these crudely animated hell children of cable television have firmly established their place on the couch of American pop culture. Their popularity has spread like wildfire — "Fire! Fire!"

Fire! Fire! Fire!—

even surviving in the "intellectual" atmosphere of institutions of higher learning like the UI.

"They're pretty cool. They do stuff you don't see on regular TV or regular cartoons," UI sophomore Mark Dice said. "When you think about it, they're really stupid, but they're so stupid that they're funny."

geous. It's not a normal show, and they don't stick to a normal script," Dice said. "You just don't expect to see that on television."

Some students like the mindlessness of MTV's top-rated show; others enjoy it as a kind of social commentary that takes aim at video rock stars, the mass media and their audiences. For UI senior Christina Conrad, the show is a combination of the two.

"I like it when I'm not in the thinking mode," she said. "I also like the fact that it's sarcastic humor. I can relate a lot of it to people I know."

Scarcely a day goes by that you don't hear someone repeating some of their catch phrases. "Fire! Fire! Fire!" "That sucks!" "That was cool!"

"Nobody knows whether something will become popular or not," he said. "If they resonate with the audience in some way, they become very successful."

"The industry would like to know how to predict that, but since it can't, many similar things are soon gone and forgotten."

Not all students find the delinquents so amusing. UI junior Mary Jo Poulson described the program as "crude."

"I hate it. I think it's really stupid," she said, "but I can see why some people like it so much. All my guy friends love it. They say that's what it was like to be 15."

The show has received much criticism because of the teens' gross, anti-social and often violent behavior. Beavis and Butt-head play baseball using frogs as balls, get high on paint thinner, put dogs in washing machines and pound each other with baseball bats covered with boxing gloves.

Although many parents and media watchdog groups are concerned with the program's effect on children, Poulson said most kids are too smart to be influenced by what they see.

"It's not like it shows violence in an attractive way," she said. "I think something like 'Terminator' shows attractive violence and glorifies it more."

Dice, however, said he thinks it could be a definite problem for children.

"For college and high-school students, it's just something you get entertainment out of, but younger kids would get the wrong impression by watching it," he said.

The issue of media influence is a difficult one to establish, Rothenbuhler said.

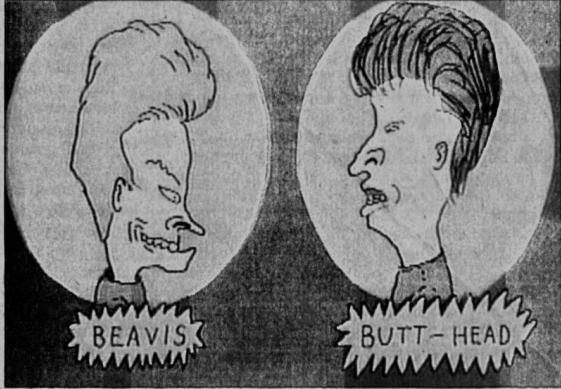

"Mass media is only one part of people's lives," he said, "but that doesn't mean we shouldn't criticize things that are stupid and in bad taste."

Huh, huh, huh.
That was cool.

That was cool!

Huh, huh. You said butt!

Man, they suck!

TRANSITION FROM INSTITUTIONS BACK TO SOCIETY

Play to feature histories of silent struggles

Kristin Berg
The Daily Iowan

David Leshtz hopes that his new play will shatter the myth that people with mental retardation do not have interesting, compelling stories to tell.

"With Others of Their Own Kind," commissioned and produced by Leshtz and Barbara Smith, both from the Iowa University Affiliated Program, will be premiering in Iowa City this weekend.

After working for two state institutions, Leshtz said he was inspired to create the histories of struggles for acceptance by the mentally retarded.

"I was struck by graves without names on them and sometimes only numbers," Leshtz said.

In the late 19th century, people with mental retardation and other disabilities were often sent to live their lives in state mental institutions. Leshtz said the institutions served as places for people who did not appear to fit in with mainstream culture.

During the 1960s, Leshtz said, philosophies changed allowing many people with mental retardation to return to their communities, but little documentation of their brave immigrations was written.

Then in 1992 the Iowa University Affiliated Program received a donation from the Iowa Humanities Board. The contribution gave Leshtz and Smith the resources needed to uncover their powerful stories.

Leshtz and Smith were able to collect the histories of 12 people — more than 300 pages of transcripts.

The voices that emerged from the histories were powerful, poignant and unique, Smith said.

"They are life-affirming people who went through a lot of struggles but survived," Leshtz said.

With additional support from the community, they were able to create a play based on the stories.

The production features four actors who will be reading the histories. The stage and lighting are simple, but the stories are moving, Leshtz said.

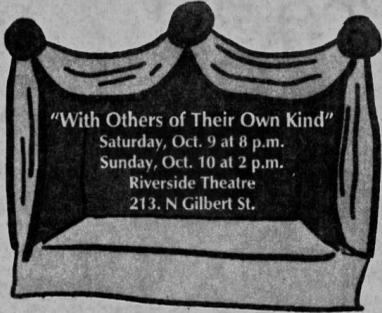

Director Julia Fischer said this is different from a play since it is a staged reading. She tried to keep her creative self out as much as possible because she wanted it to be clear that the actors were telling someone else's story.

"It is important to me that we don't convey we can tell the stories better than the people with mental retardation," she said. "They can tell their histories, and they are credible."

Leshtz said he hopes the audience will come away with something more.

"I hope people will have a greater appreciation for the human costs of separating people who are seen as different and a better understanding that all people have unique voices with important stories to tell," Leshtz said.

"With Others of Their Own Kind" will be performed at Riverside Theatre, 213 N. Gilbert St., at 8 p.m. Saturday, Oct. 9 and 2 p.m. Sunday, Oct. 10.

PLETHORA OF PERSONAL POSTAGE

The man who gets more mail than Santa Claus?

Steve Chamraz
The Daily Iowan

You've opened all of the day's mail with a sense of anticipation and still feel as if something is missing. You've read the J. Crew catalog, paid your U-bill and tossed a half-dozen pizza coupons into the trash can, only to realize the pen pal you wrote to in the fifth grade still hasn't responded.

Robert Mishek understands your plight. The Minnesota resident has been helping people find pen pals since 1936, and he may have one for you.

When Mishek realized the students in his business and economics classes were unaware of world events and geography, he assigned them pen pals around the world. Little did he know this assignment would grow into the Student Letter Exchange; one of the largest pen pal organizations in the world.

But now that Mishek has grown older and his daughter has taken over the Student Letter Exchange, the 86-year-old Mishek has begun a program to connect lonely people from around the world by mail.

Noticing that many people, especially the elderly, were alone on holidays, Mishek began toying with the idea of linking people with pen pals. In his first effort last October, he received between 8,000 and 10,000 names from countries as far away as India, Jamaica and Malaysia.

Mishek currently offers two catalogs for prospective pen pals, one for people aged 20-50 and one for people aged 50-90. Each catalog contains 300 names, but according to Mishek's assistant Jerome

Broughton, he could have included many more.

"We could have made them with 500 names. We could have made them with 1,000," Broughton said. "The demand for pen pals is just so high."

Before Mishek published a catalog of pen pals, his home was the hub of a worldwide letter-writing ring that often received 150 or more letters a day. After finding out what type of pen pal the writers were in search of, he would then forward the letters to the appropriate people around the United States. Now, thanks to the catalog, the letters are sent directly from person to person.

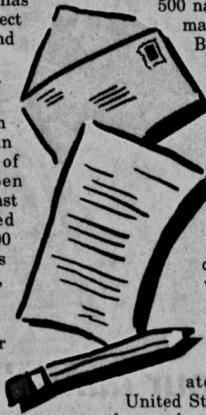

"The directory is not as personal as the old way," Mishek said, "but we like it."

One of the main difficulties he has had in connecting people with pen pals is the speed of the mail systems in Europe and Asia. On some occasions, the mail has been delayed two weeks or more, and in the former Soviet Union, the mail has frequently been stopped.

"We're disappointed because we haven't gotten a good response from the former Soviet Union," Mishek said. "Their mail is so slow."

But the letters keep rolling in despite the slowdown. Each week, hundreds of letters pour into Waseca, Minn., from all over the world and they all ask for the same thing — American pen pals.

If you are interested in having a pen pal, you can send a self-addressed, stamped envelope to Robert Mishek at RR 3, Box 220, Waseca, MN 56093.

PETITION DRIVE UNDER WAY

UISA, USI lobby to squelch potential tuition increases

Tricia DeWall
The Daily Iowan

After a few futile hours, the UI student petition drive to oppose a possible tuition increase seems to be gaining momentum.

United Students of Iowa and the UI Student Association are working together on a two-fold attack against the Iowa state Board of Regents' proposed 5.3 and 7.3 percent tuition increases for the 1995 fiscal year. The groups hope to hold the regents to their promise of not increasing tuition above the Higher Education Price Index, which would mean an increase of only 3.4 percent.

USI campus director Matt Ashford said there is a good chance this can be done if enough students sign the petition and write letters to the regents. However, after spending a few hours at the petition table in the Union basement Thursday, Ashford was disappointed.

"I am really frustrated with the students," Ashford said. "I sat at the table for four hours today and got only 25 signatures. At least 2,000 students walked by and didn't even have time to stop."

Ashford said the regents decided two years ago to adhere to the Higher Education Price Index, and now they are not sticking to their own policy. Their current proposal would increase current in-state tuition of $2,192 by $116.18 and the current out-of-state tuition of $7,580 by $553.34.

"Students have really given up," Ashford said. "They seem to have accepted the fact that the regents are going to do whatever they want to do."

But fortune changed at 4 p.m. when UISA President John Gardner began addressing people as they passed. In one hour Gardner received 156 signatures. He said in the beginning they were hoping students would stop by, but soon realized a different tactic was necessary.

"All we have to do is vocally mention what we're trying to do, and people stop and sign," he said. "Students seem to be responding."

Not all the members of the regents board are in favor of the increase, Ashford said. Only three of the nine members support it, two others are against it and four are undecided, he said. Board members are scheduled to vote on the matter at their regular meeting Oct. 20.

"All we have to do is win the undecided votes, and we can win this thing," Ashford said, "but we need to present a solid front. If they only hear from 25 students, they aren't going to care. If they hear from 20,000 or 30,000, you bet they'll listen."

To try and motivate senators to get more signatures, Gardner said he and UISA Vice President Michah Hobart have each donated a $15 reward for the senator who collects the most signatures.

UISA representatives will attend the October regents meeting to discuss the tuition issue, Gardner said.

Hobart said he wants to make sure the students and administration realize he and Gardner agree on the tuition issue.

"We have different disagreements on other things," he said, "but in the matter of tuition we stand in 100 percent complete union."

BOARD BILL TOTALS $15,336

Supervisors dispute expenditures for Johnson County flood cleanup

The board is hoping the Federal Emergency Management Agency will assist in the cleanup costs.

Prasanti Kantamneni
The Daily Iowan

The Johnson County Board of Supervisors has spent over $15,000 in an effort to help rural Johnson County residents affected by the flood.

At the meeting Thursday, Supervisor Joe Bolkcom said cleanup fees totaled $15,336. The fees included tipping, hauling and landfill cleanup.

Chairwoman Pat Meade and Supervisor Betty Ockenfels said spending so much money for flood relief was ridiculous.

"What are we going to do? Do we have an open-ended checkbook?" Ockenfels asked.

Supervisor Steve Lacina said the spending was not outrageous. He cited the number of tons of materials removed from flood areas as an example of how the money has benefited the community.

The board is hoping the Federal Emergency Management Agency will cover Johnson County cleanup costs. Bolkcom has given Disaster Services Coordinator Jim McGirtley an estimate of $19,000 to $22,000 in applying for FEMA. However, there has been no official word from FEMA regarding reimbursing the county.

Bolkcom said cleanup efforts are nearing completion. Efforts are projected to end Wednesday.

Fifty volunteers from a Lutheran Church in Minnesota are arriving today to lend a hand. Also, Iowa City's sister city in California, Santa Rosa, will be sending a soup kitchen cook to the area to work for a month to help with flood relief.

Mutant frogs raise pollutant questions

Associated Press

BUFFALO, Iowa - Rising from the primordial ooze of the muddy Mississippi River comes Teen-age Mutant Ninja ... frogs?

There is some weird goings-on in the wake of the Great Flood of '93 between Buffalo and Muscatine, something that seems to have hopped from the pages of the crime-fighting comic book characters, the Ninja Turtles.

The cartoon heroes are said to have risen from a toxic blob, but experts are hoping to learn why a 2-year-old girl found deformed frogs near Buffalo.

"One had a leg growing out of its back. Oh, that was weird," said Laura Kirkman of Moline, Ill., whose daughter Kiya Leigh White, discovered the frogs.

"One frog had six legs, and something extra growing out of a leg. Another had three legs, an extra foot hanging off a leg and intestines growing out on the outside," she said.

Experts say the phenomenon is rare but not unheard of. They also believe that some type of toxic contamination related to the summer's flood may be to blame.

"It probably is not a mutation because a mutation is a genetic change in DNA molecules," Western Illinois University genetics Professor Te-Hsiu Ma said. "I would call it an abnormality. A toxic substance may have affected the formation function of the limbs."

It does happen occasionally, Augustana College biology Professor Ralph Troll said.

"I have a skeleton of a frog with six or eight legs. Something went wrong genetically. It could be many different things. I would suspect something in the water," he said.

"My PowerBook® has freed me from my desk"

"As a journalism student and Metro Reporter for The Daily Iowan I do a lot of writing. I just put my PowerBook in my bookbag and I can go from apartment, to class, to work, to down by the river and never be without a computer. By being able to work whenever and wherever I am, I can work much more efficiently. I have a built in fax/modem so I can send and receive information from all over the country. PowerBooks are simply the coolest portables around. They offer all the power of a desk-top computer but with the freedom to go anywhere!

No other computer is easier to use than a Mac. You just plug it in, turn it on and go!"

COLLEGE OF NURSING TO STUDY ALZHEIMER'S

UI awarded $1.4 million grant

The grant is funded by the National Institute of Nursing Research.

Prasanti Kantamneni
The Daily Iowan

The largest grant ever allocated to the UI College of Nursing is being used to conduct a four-year research project to improve the care of Alzheimer's patients.

The $1.4 million grant is funded by the National Institute of Nursing Research.

"In a past study, we found family members were dissatisfied with the extent to which they were involved with the care," said Meridean Maas, UI associate professor of nursing.

Involvement was not the only issue members were dissatisfied with, she said.

"Family members were also dissatisfied with the unavailability of resources to care for the Alzheimer's patient and the number and types of activities that were available for the patient," Maas said.

The project, which begins in November, will include the participation of six nursing homes in Iowa and Wisconsin.

As part of the research, family members of Alzheimer's patients will be invited to participate in the daily care of their relatives.

"We want to improve the flow of communication among the patient, family and staff," said Ruth Cox, president of the Alverno Health Care Facility in Clinton, Iowa. "We want family members to feel that they can participate in providing care for their loved ones."

Family members who become a part of the study will be trained to share the nursing staff's tasks.

Two hundred families are predicted to participate in the research. Participating families and patients will be observed for a period of nine months.

"This intervention is designed to decrease family and staff stress with their respective care-giving roles and increase family members' satisfaction with how their relatives are being cared for," Maas said.

She said the research is expected to have other benefits as well.

"It is also expected to increase staff job satisfaction and to maximize the mental and functional abilities of Alzheimer's patients while lessening their agitation and social withdrawal," Maas said.

Aidid's wife collects welfare, watches CNN in Canada

1 TORONTO, Canada (AP) — The wife of Somali warlord Mohamed Farrah Aidid collects welfare and spends her days in a sparsely furnished townhouse, often watching Cable News Network, a Canadian newspaper said.

Khadiga Gurhan, 35, the second wife of Aidid, has lived in a middle-class townhouse in London, Ontario, with her four young children for two months, the Toronto Sun said. She entered Canada as a refugee four years ago.

Her husband is on the run from U.N. forces in Somalia.

Wednesday, Gurhan, dressed in Somali garb, was sprawled on the couch of her home watching the latest developments about her husband on CNN. A Somali flag was draped across a wall, decorated with pictures of her family and husband. A couch and television were the only furniture in the rugless room.

She married Aidid in 1984 and for the next four years they lived in India, where her husband was posted as his country's ambassador. She left Somalia for Canada because she feared for her and her family's safety.

Gurhan collects welfare, officials said. "I don't like to live on welfare. It's shameful," Gurhan said, "but my husband has no money. He's a rebel."

U.N. to lift economic sanctions against South Africa

2 NEW YORK (AP) — The General Assembly, pleased with the progress of South Africa's march toward democracy, will repeal all economic and financial sanctions, opening the way for desperately needed foreign investment.

The assembly will declare an end to the voluntary sanctions in trade, finance, investment, travel and transportation that won worldwide compliance in 1985, and urge all states to lift restrictions, a U.N. statement said.

An 18-year-old voluntary embargo on the sale of petroleum and petroleum products to South Africa will be lifted when a multiracial panel to help govern the country is in place.

A mandatory arms embargo imposed by the Security Council in 1977 will remain in effect, as well as a voluntary ban on military imports from South Africa.

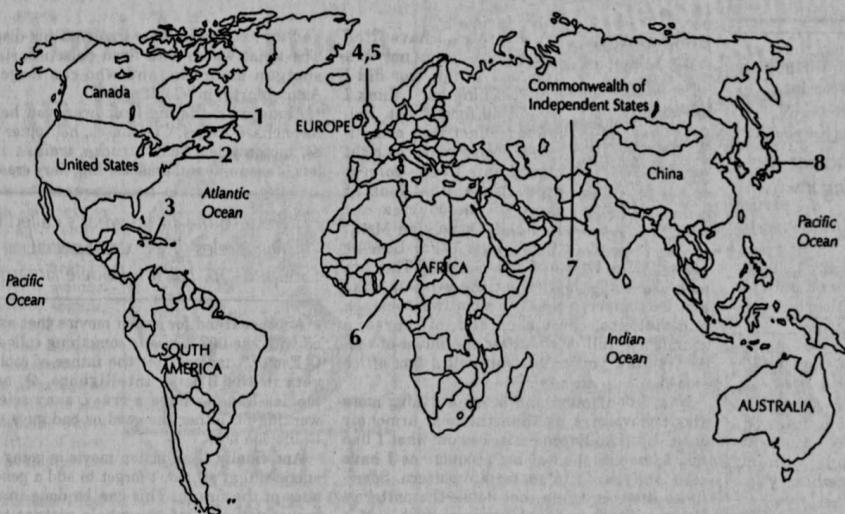

The formal lifting of sanctions has been expected since Sept. 24, when African National Congress leader Nelson Mandela urged the international community to put aside its most potent weapon against apartheid. Mandela, whose movement is expected to win the country's first multiracial elections in April, urged extensive investment to shore up the South African economy and fortify the transition to democracy.

The United States and most Western nations have lifted most sanctions, especially in the past two years as the South African government has pursued democratic reform.

American soldiers arrive in Haiti on humanitarian mission

3 PORT-AU-PRINCE, Haiti (AP) — Thirty-one U.S. and Canadian security personnel hit the airport tarmac here this week, the first wave of a U.N. military and police training mission that will number 1,600 by month's end.

The mission intends to focus on reforming Haiti's traditionally repressive military and rebuilding the nation's infrastructure, which was already deteriorating before the overthrow of President Jean-Bertrand Aristide two years ago.

The mission also is expected to pave the way for Aristide's return in three weeks.

The foreign troops have been told not to interfere in rising political violence. The 26 U.S. soldiers, Marines and sailors and five Canadian police monitors were unarmed on arrival, but will be given weapons during their duty for self-defense, U.S. Embassy spokesman Stanley Schragger said.

"However, this is not a combat mission," Schragger added. "They are not here in a security role at all. When they are engaged in construction, building clinics and roads, they will not be armed."

As the blue-bereted troops filed past Haitian police at the airport, a Haitian leaning against a pillar said quietly,

European governments seek better value for health-care money

4 LONDON, England (AP) — "Save our hospital" posters plaster central London. Union members threaten to strike in Germany over the loss of holidays to help pay for health care. Italy's government slaps a new tax on doctors.

While President Clinton is proposing a radical overhaul to make the U.S. health-care system in some way more like those in Europe, European countries are tinkering with their systems to adjust to changed economic times.

There is a shared concern, as Hillary Rodham Clinton put it last week in Washington, that "we are not getting our money's worth."

With increasing elderly populations and budget pressures brought on by recession, pressures for greater efficiency and cost control are unavoidable.

"There is a huge amount of room for improvement," Sir David Cooksey, chairman of Britain's Audit Commission, told a Wednesday.

Italy is trying the simple expedient of taking money out of the pockets of its nearly 15,000 doctors through a new tax of 85,000 lire ($56) per year on each physician and putting it back into the health service.

In Germany, labor unions are threatening strikes to protest the proposal announced by the government last week to reduce the number of paid holidays from 10 to eight to help cover nursing-care costs.

Buckingham Palace tours turn a kingly $3.3 million profit

5 LONDON, England (AP) — Summer tourists who flocked to Buckingham Palace for a peek at the royal lifestyle raised the kingly sum of $3.3 million to restore fire-damaged Windsor Castle.

The profits were 25 percent higher than royal planners had hoped when the 56-day experiment began in early August.

While Queen Elizabeth II spent the summer at Balmoral Castle in Scotland, about 377,000 people toured the palace, helping to repair up to $60 million in damage to Windsor Castle from last November's fire.

The vacationing queen threw open the palace doors after a public outcry at initial plans to have taxpayers foot the bill.

"The queen said she was well satisfied with the amount raised for the restoration of Windsor Castle and very pleased with the results," spokesman Dickie Arbiter said.

The palace will open to tourists for the next four summers. Profits are expected to rise now that the monarchy has invested $150,000 in hard-wearing carpets to protect the royal parquet floor from millions of footsteps.

About 7,000 people a day — 60 percent of them British — took the palace tour.

Once ignored, Nigerian tribe now being slaughtered

6 LAGOS, Nigeria (AP) — Small in numbers and bereft of political influence, the Ogoni people were long ignored as they clamored for a homeland separate from the volatile ethnic cocktail that is Nigeria.

But other ethnic groups no longer ignore the persistent Ogonis. Now they kill them, human rights activists and tribal leaders say.

Hundreds have been reported massacred in recent weeks, and thousands driven from their homes in September alone, according to Africa Watch, a human rights group.

The bloodshed comes while Nigeria is preoccupied with a political crisis brought on by the nullification of June's presidential election by dictator Gen. Ibrahim Babangida, who then appointed an interim government when he was forced to resign in August.

There is no indication the attacks on Ogonis are connected with the crisis. Tens of thousands of people have died in ethnic and religious fighting in Nigeria, Africa's most populous nation, with 90 million people from about 250 tribes who speak as many languages.

In one incident alone in late September, more than 200 Ogoni men, women and children were shot and their village of Kpean burned down, along with crops and livestock, the Movement for the Survival of the Ogoni People said.

The movement blamed the slaughter on members of the rival Andoni tribe, who it said attacked the village with automatic weapons.

On Sept. 25, the federal government sent 200 soldiers to try to end the violence, said radical author Ken Saro-Wiwa, a spokesman for the movement.

Russia holds national day of mourning for slain

7 MOSCOW (AP) — President Boris Yeltsin suspended Russia's highest court Thursday in a continuing clampdown on opposition strongholds. But, on a national day of mourning for the scores who died in this week's violence, he also appealed for healing.

The government persisted with efforts to round up and charge leaders of the hard-line revolt crushed by tanks in the streets of Moscow Monday. There were no reports of new violence.

Flags adorned with black ribbons lined the capital's streets, churches held special masses and mourners filed past coffins overflowing with flowers.

Yeltsin said the Constitutional Court had played "a negative and collaborationist role" in this week's crisis. Earlier, he said the court bore some blame for the bloodshed Sunday and Monday because it became involved in politics and backed parliament against him.

The Constitutional Court is a panel of 13 judges charged with ruling on constitutional issues. It voted 9-4 against Yeltsin's Sept. 21 decree dissolving the hard-line parliament that had stymied his reforms.

The court's chairman, Valery Zorkin, frequently sided with parliament leaders against Yeltsin in the 18-month power struggle that paralyzed the Russian government.

Computerized train's crash boosts doubts about technology

8 TOKYO, Japan (AP) — Japan's pride and confidence in its high technology have suffered blows from a series of blunders and accidents — most recently the crash of a computer-controlled train that injured more than 180 people.

Three separate safety systems failed on the commuter train. It plowed Tuesday into a concrete barrier at the end of its route.

Japanese are seeing that the nation's vaunted technology, whether in trains or nuclear power plants, isn't fail-proof, just as its economy has shown that it can slump.

Officials at some high-tech companies admit they aren't sure what new areas of technology to pursue, and companies that have pursued zero defects are now being forced to cut costs and move production overseas because of the high yen, which makes goods made in Japan more expensive.

Even the symbol of Japan's technological expertise, the high-speed "bullet train," hasn't been immune to trouble.

The newest model has suffered more than two dozen kinds of defects — including malfunctioning brakes, 54 cases of door failure and scores of improper welds.

GOVERNOR BRANSTAD

Traveling man

"In the crack where illusion meets reality, that's where you are, out there on the road, and the road is you."
— "The Bridges of Madison County"

Gov. Branstad is just now ending a foreign trade mission, having been out there on the road for two weeks, and has tough issues awaiting his return. He must deal with flood issues, budget revisions, economic development and gambling. On top of this, Attorney General Bonnie Campbell's exploratory committee released poll results showing both Branstad and herself with 45 percent of those polled supporting them. Each day brings us closer to the 1994 gubernatorial campaign, and Branstad is scrambling harder to make the illusion of a decent record as governor a reality in voters' minds. As with his so-called trade mission, most of the governor's economic development efforts have been efforts in creating the illusion for Iowans that something is being done to create a more stable, growing economy.

Three days of the trip were spent in Germany at the invitation of German Chancellor Helmut Kohl. Branstad's intent was to give Iowans the impression that he is doing something to develop the state's economy. The Associated Press photo of Iowa's Branstad standing like a tourist in front of the Brandenburg Gate was slightly silly, though. Stranger still was imagining him standing next to Douglas Wilder, Virginia's liberal, black, Democratic governor. The governors were invited ostensibly to study how that nation is coping with reunification and to take a gander at its comprehensive health-care system. It is more likely that this junket was intended to wine and dine the governors, cutting loose as much as seven stiff's can.

On Wednesday Branstad called from Korea to say that lifting betting limits on the state's riverboat casinos is "crucial" and that gambling is here to stay. A Branstad-named task force recommended Monday easing betting limits on floating casinos and allowing slot machines at racetracks. Critics charge that he stacked the committee to give himself political cover for a wholesale reversal of his stance on gambling. Branstad has been slowly shifting his position all year, starting the year off opposed to efforts to ease restrictions and flatly ruling out lifting betting limits on riverboats. After the Legislature adjourned, though, the governor began calling for lifting of the restrictions.

Branstad has not led this state as governor; instead, he has followed the political weather vane, shifting with the winds of fickle and often ill-informed public opinion. When the farming economy went off in the 1980s, the state began an affair with gambling as impassioned as Francesca Johnson's rejection of her steady, stable husband, and Branstad went along with it. During the 1990 gubernatorial campaign, he managed to lure the Iowa State Education Association into a brief fling, abandoning long-time supporter Don Avenson, by offering the promise of pay raises that never came.

Branstad is a master politician, but a pitiful governor. He has proven in the past that he can fool voters with a last-minute propaganda blitz and that he fully intends to present the appearance of a hands-on governor this year, if not the reality. If not, he will be hitting the road for real.

Academic freedom

To the Editor:
At its Sept. 28 meeting, the Faculty Senate voted to postpone indefinitely a decision on the Sexually Explicit Materials Policy requested by the Board of Regents. While it is unfortunate that the Senate did not have the courage to reject this homophobic policy outright, its decision can be considered a partial victory for academic freedom — due in part to the organizing efforts of students who picketed, distributed fliers and made arguments at the meeting. Unfortunately, it remains quite possible that the Board of Regents will unilaterally impose some sort of restrictive language.

The ad hoc group of students which came together to oppose the policy at the Faculty Senate meeting has organized a screening of "Paris is Burning" for Friday, Oct. 8 at 7 p.m. in room 121 of Schaeffer Hall. A teaching assistant at the UI was reprimanded in the spring after showing this film to a class because he allegedly failed to provide students with sufficient "warning" that it dealt with the lives of transvestites. This was but the latest in a series of incidents where instructors found themselves officially chastised for exposing students to issues of nonheterosexual orientation. Although the TA in this case fought back and eventually succeeded in having a letter rescinding the reprimand placed in his file, the administration's action made it clear that it will go out of its way to accommodate the fears and prejudices of a minority of right-wing students. Its stance is unlikely to change unless people angered by the current trend organize to make their voices heard.

We invite all concerned students, teaching assistants and faculty to join us for a screening of this highly acclaimed documentary, to be followed by a discussion of the current threats to academic freedom and gay rights and how we can fight back.

TOM HUDSON

A feel good adventure that keeps you guessing

I think I have it all figured out. I may not be a huge movie fan, nor did I major in film, but I think I have it all figured out. Hollywood is not that complicated. It just takes the right ingredients in the correct proportions. Just look at some of the movies out recently: "Demolition Man," "Cliffhanger," "For Love or Money," "The Fugitive" and "Singles." They are all cookie-cutter movies in their own way. Take a little romance, a chase scene or two, some sex and violence, corruption and, of course, a soundtrack full of whatever the flavor-of-the-day is, and you've got yourself a box office smash.

Now, I don't purport to know anything more about moviemaking than the next armchair critic. But like anyone else, I know what I like and I know that most big productions I have seen lately all fit into a certain pattern. Sometimes there is a film that defies the patterns, but most fit nicely, thank you very much.

The Action Movie: First you need bulk — lots of it. You have to get a huge name with an even bigger chest size. Stallone, Schwarzenegger, Van Damme, even Bruce Willis, as long as you compensate with fire power. Second, you need that fire power. So much so that the Defense Department is jealous. You have got to shoot people, bomb buildings, blow up cars like there's no tomorrow.

There also has to be what's called in movie circles "The Extra-Special, Souped-Up, Full-Tilt Boogie Firearm." That's usually a gun so big, so powerful, so destructive that it makes the NRA rethink its position. This all started with the original action hero, not "Our Man Flint" (too cheesy), but 007 — Bond ... James Bond. While 007 didn't have anything ultra-neat in his holster, he did have his Berretta and an assortment of weapons at his disposal. The wrist watch that fired poison darts, the shotgun umbrella, and who can forget the Aston-Martin in "Goldfinger"?

Along with the big firepower, you have to have chase scenes. Car chases, helicopter chases, motorcycles, boats, trucks, trains ... with lots of monumental crashes. Big, fiery crashes.

There also has to be what's called in movie circles 'The Extra-Special, Souped-Up, Full-Tilt Boogie Firearm.'

Another trend for action movies that exploded with the 007 series is something called "the Q Factor," named after the father of cool gadgets in the British intelligence. Q. action movies have to have a crazy, zany scientist working for either the good or bad guys under California law.

And finally, if an action movie is going to be successful at all, don't forget to add a generous slice of the future. This can be done in many ways; you can set the whole picture in the future, bring your bulky hero back from the future or send him forward in time. A word of warning though: If you decide to plop the whole plot in the middle of 2054, don't expect viewers to believe that the only restaurants left after the "War" (oh, you've got to refer to one of these: "Things have been better since 'The War.'") are Taco Bells.

The Comedy Movie: Don't even think about trying a comedy script until you have a proven character. Wayne and Garth, Pat, Fletcher, the stoned surfer, a generally "wild and crazy guy." And you've got to start with a plot that would normally take 10 minutes to unfold, and wrap it up in loosely defined, unconnected character bits to make it feature length.

Once you have the character, put her or him in silly situations that have absolutely no cinematic value. This is the "Seinfeld" Epidemic. It works wonderfully on the small screen, but when movie fans go see a movie about nothing, they feel jilted ("Slacker" aside).

Find your funny character(s) and have them go to the grocery store (Laughter abounds from the deli counter as they try to pick up the deli clerk.), their parents' house (Comedy erupts when they discover mom's nag.) or to the doctor's office (Funny things develop behind the X-ray machine.) Isn't it hilarious when you map it out?

And don't forget that every good comedy has a time element, too. Looking to spice up a story about a divorcé and his son? Have them mysteriously switch bodies. Having trouble selling a script about a boy's struggle with adulthood? Have him go back or forward in time. (Also, think about having the crazy scientist waiting for him.)

And if all else fails in comedy, there's always satire. If you can't make it funny, make fun of it.

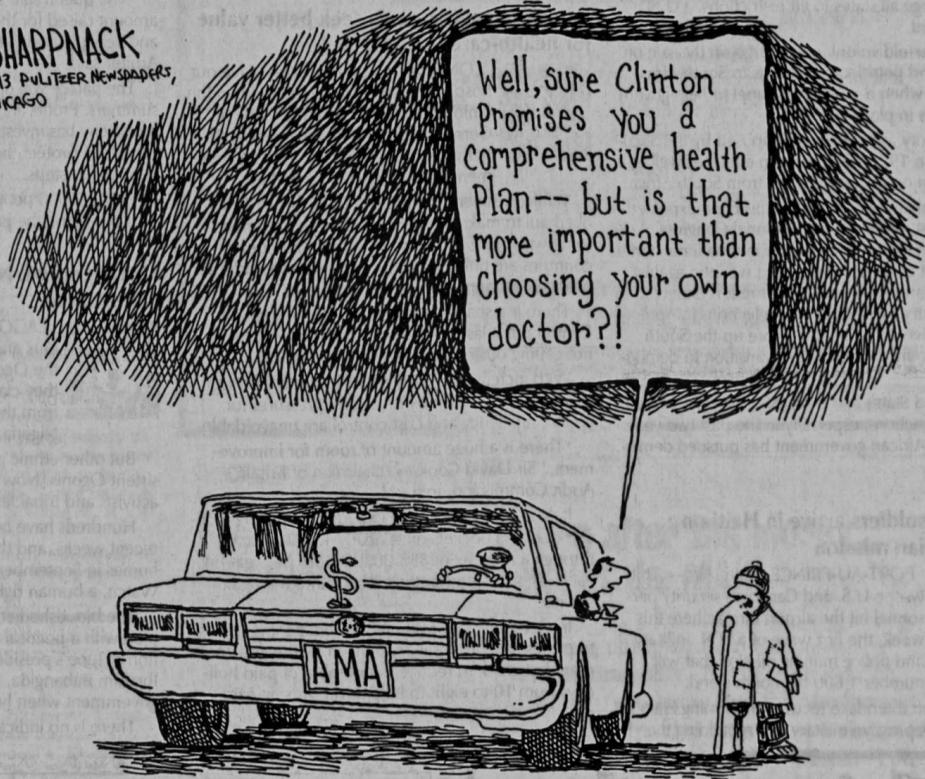

The Romance Movie: These are probably, the easiest to dissect. A boy down on his luck, a girl in love with someone else, a first kiss scene, the blossoming relationship scene, the first fight and breakup scene, the loneliness scene, the get-back-together scene and finally, the proposal / marriage scene. To liven it up, throw in some cool chase scenes.

The Action / Comedy / Romance Movie: Pick and choose the elements that fit. Have our hero work in a dangerous or exciting profession (I suggest a CIA agent, a radio talk show host or JC Penny suit salesman.), unrequited love for an older woman and the corner bartender for comic relief. I think we've got ourselves a box office smash.

Or did somebody else already do it?

Lessons learned each season — but never retained

Around this time of year, it becomes necessary to discuss a common affliction that affects millions of Midwesterners every year. The affliction, commonly known as "wrigitis," is a psychological disorder in which the afflicted disregards all empirical evidence and reason and unexplainably invests time and emotional energy undertaking the painful and unrewarding task of rooting for the baseball team the Chicago Cubs.

Psychologists are, for the most part, at a loss as to why the afflicted, known as "the fan," undertakes such behavior or about the type of person most likely to become afflicted. However, scientists have found a correlation coefficient of 0.42 between people who spend half the year rooting for the Cubs and people who like tetanus shots. Although psychologists are still learning about the disorder, they have identified six discernible phases the afflicted will go through:

Optimism (April-May) During this incipient phase, the fan will ignore logic and repress the painful past in order to delude himself into thinking that the Cubs have a chance in hell of winning the World Series. In order to uphold this delusion, the fan will often disregard such negligible factors as the team's sausage-armed pitching staff, the preponderance of players on the team who have an inability to hit the ball hard and the generally superior talent level of several opponents. The fan will also neglect the Law of Average's only unexplained phenomena: the fact that the Cubs have not won the series since God was in grade school.

The irrational hopes of the fan are often perpetuated by the patriarchy, television announcer Harry Carey, who during this stage will declare that "for some reason" he likes this year's team, which means a lot considering the fact the Carey has "for some reason" liked every mediocre Cub team in history.

Fellow announcer and perpetuator Steve Stone will further deceive the fan during this phase by stating that all the Cubs need to be contenders is something he calls "chemistry," which is a euphemism for ability.

Reality (June) During this phase, it becomes apparent to the objective observer that the Cubs have about as much chance of winning as a one-legged man in an ass-kicking contest.

However, instead of the fan being so pathetic at this stage that the fan loses interest, the team will be just not-pathetic enough to fool the fan into maintaining just enough interest to waste countless afternoons and evenings following ultimately meaningless games, while enduring an infinite number of insightful interviews with backup catchers and utility infielders, and enough commercials for True Value Hardware to make Bob Vila puke.

Denial (July) While in this phase, the fan is amazed at how lucky the good teams have been getting. The fan does not understand why his average team does not start beating good teams. The fan begins creating impossible scenarios in which the good teams start losing a lot, and the Cubs starts winning a lot, allowing the team to overtake first place.

The fan, during this phase, also cannot understand why mediocre players are not performing like good players. This situation is exacerbated by Carey, who often states at this stage that several players who have been hitting below .230 all season are suddenly "due." Stone, however, will simply posit that the team needs to "gel."

Anger (August) During this phase, we begin to see the first signs that the fan is discontented with the incredibly uninspiring level of play of the team and its white-guy-in-the-50-yard-dash chances of winning the pennant.

Often, at this stage, the fan can be seen giving speeches to strangers concerning a hypothetical team consisting of players the Cubs have traded away that the fan believes would win approximately 120 games.

The fan will also, at times, discuss the surprising home run power his grandmother might display if she had an opportunity to hit against a Cub pitcher.

At other times, the fan will pontificate extemporaneously with regard to the relative difficulty the team's manager might have in differentiating between his anus and a hole in the ground.

The fan is in a general state of unhappiness at this point. The fan is not happy about the fact that he has wasted so much time and energy in such a useless endeavor as rooting for the team. The fan wishes that he had invested the time in which he watched the team's games in a more constructive activity, such as counting his socks or staring at the ceiling.

Fortunately for the fan, his overall displeasure at this stage is given a voice by Carey, who will exclaim "You gotta be kiddin' me!" for the fan anytime the team does not perform as expected.

Acceptance (September) By this phase, the fan has come to terms with the fact that his bones will be dust before the Cubs win the World Series. The fan by this point realizes that there will be no chemistry. No gel.

At this stage, the fan is neither upset about or puzzled by the team's cosmic inability to win the World Series or even the pennant. He simply accepts its unrelenting mediocrity as a fact of life.

Pathetic Renewal of Unwarranted Optimism (Off season) During this final, and most distressing phase, the fan unconsciously forgets all that he has learned during the previous season and is again deluded into thinking that the team has a chance to win it all next season.

The fan imagines a scenario in which last year's bad teams become next year's good teams. Lack of talent becomes a nonissue to the fan. All rational thought is lost. Carey will announce that "for some reason" he likes the chemistry of next year's team. The Cubs suddenly become "due."

ACADEMY HAILS 'POETIC' WRITING

American author Toni Morrison takes Nobel Prize in literature

Laurinda Keys
Associated Press

STOCKHOLM, Sweden — American novelist and essayist Toni Morrison, cited for writing prose "with the luster of poetry," won the 1993 Nobel Prize in literature Thursday for her lyrical accounts of the black experience.

The Swedish Academy awarded the prize to Morrison "who, in novels, characterized by visionary force and poetic import, gives life to an essential aspect of American reality."

She is the first black American to win the prize, worth $825,000, and only the eighth woman to win since it first was awarded in 1901. The last woman winner was Nadine Gordimer of South Africa in 1991; the most recent American winner was Soviet-born Joseph Brodsky in 1987.

Morrison told the Associated Press she was inspired by "huge silences in literature; things that had never been articulated, printed or imagined, and they were the silences about black girls, black women."

"It was into that area that I stepped and found it to be enormous," she said in an interview in her office at Princeton University, where she has been a professor of humanities since 1989.

Morrison, who was keeping to her teaching schedule Thursday, said she found out about the prize from a university colleague who called her after seeing a television report.

The 62-year-old author was born Chloe Anthony Wofford in the steel town of Lorain, Ohio, the second of four children of Alabama sharecroppers who migrated north.

She made her debut as a novelist in 1970 with "The Bluest Eye" and soon gained attention for her "epic power, unerring ear for dialogue and richly expressive depictions of black America," the academy said.

She followed with the novels "Sula," "Song of Solomon," "Tar Baby," "Beloved" and "Jazz." A play, "Dreaming Emmett," was first produced in 1986 but has not been published.

In her 1992 book of essays, "Playing in the Dark: Whiteness and the Literary Imagination," Morrison wrote, "My work requires me to think about how free I can be as an African-American woman writer in my gendered, sexualized, wholly racialized world."

"My project rises from delight, not disappointment," she wrote.

The academy hailed Morrison as an author who "delves into the language itself, a language she wants to liberate from the fetters of race, and she addresses us with the luster of poetry."

She won the 1988 Pulitzer Prize for fiction, a year after publishing "Beloved," in which she widened her themes of the black world in life and legend, first described in the 1978 "Song of Solomon."

"One can delight in her unique narrative technique," the academy said, "varying from book to book and developed independently even though its roots stem from (William) Faulkner and American writers from further south."

"The lasting impression is, nevertheless, sympathy, humanity, of the kind which is always based on profound humor," the academy said.

Morrison was not considered a likely winner this year in media speculation.

Writers who had been mentioned as possible winners included Trinidad-born novelist V.S. Naipaul; Irish poet Seamus Heaney; Mahmoud Darwish, a Palestinian poet; British writer Doris Lessing; American novelists Joyce Carol Oates and Thomas Pynchon; and Canadian writers Robertson Davies and Margaret Atwood.

Literary critics have applauded Morrison's ability to draw readers into her novels with powerful webs of description.

The Nobel committee cited the opening of her 1992 novel, "Jazz," as providing "a richly complex, sensuously conveyed image of the events, the characters and moods."

U.N.-issued report cites evidence of ethnic cleansing by Croats

Snjezana Vukic
Associated Press

ZAGREB, Croatia — The U.N. commander in former Yugoslavia issued a damning report Thursday charging Croatian troops had practiced a "scorched-earth policy" in Serb-held villages and killed civilians in cold blood.

The report detailed evidence of atrocities committed during an offensive month ago against Serb-held villages in the Medak pocket near Gospić in southwestern Croatia.

"The scale of physical destruction and killing of residents in the area ... indicates that the Croatian Army practiced a comprehensive scorched-earth policy," said a statement summarizing the report.

Serbia is suffering severe economic sanctions for backing Serb rebels in Croatia and neighboring Bosnia-Herzegovina.

But the European Community also has warned Croatia it could face sanctions for attacking Serbs who hold about one-third of the state after a six-month war in 1991 and for backing Croat forces in neighboring Bosnia-Herzegovina.

Croats have demanded that the land be returned and are increasingly frustrated with the U.N.'s inability to disarm the Serbs and organize the return of Croat refugees.

A U.N. official in Sarajevo, the Bosnian capital, released details Thursday of what appeared to be the worst ethnic cleansing by Croats for months in the divided city of Mostar in southwestern Bosnia-Herzegovina.

The U.N. report on Croatia, approved by Gen. Jean Cot, the commander of U.N. forces in former Yugoslavia, was relayed to Tadeusz Mazowiecki, the U.N. human rights investigator for the region.

In an open letter to Croatian Foreign Minister Mate Granic Wednesday, Mazowiecki said Croatian forces apparently "arbitrarily executed" several residents of the villages, and he demanded a full investigation.

The Croatian Council for Defense and National Security, an advisory body to President Franjo Tudjman, said Tudjman had ordered an inquiry and charges would be brought against those responsible. It also asked that all crimes committed during Croatia's six-month Serb-Croat war in 1991 be investigated, Croatian radio reported.

The U.N. statement said 18 corpses were recovered by U.N. civilian police and that most were "riddled with multiple bullet wounds or incinerated."

Another 52 bodies were turned over to the Serbs by Croatian authorities, it said.

It charged that "demolition teams" totally destroyed about 500 buildings in three villages the Croatian army seized in the Sept. 9 offensive.

friends and allies would be severely damaged. Our leadership in world affairs would be undermined. ... And all around the world, aggressors, thugs and terrorists will conclude that the best way to get us to change our policies is to kill our people. It would be open season on Americans."

Aspin said he hoped Clinton's decision would lead other nations to beef up their forces in Somalia. "We believe the allies will also show more activity," Aspin said at a White House briefing after Clinton's speech.

Clinton said that he wanted to call the troops home as soon as possible and was sending diplomat Robert Oakley to Africa to try to find a diplomatic settlement. He said it might take "up to six months" to complete the mission, but he hoped to wrap it up before then.

Secretary of State Warren Christopher outlined a burst of diplomatic activity to refocus the Somali operation on a political rather than military track. He said the United States was sending messages to 30 countries asking that they keep their troops in Somalia until it is secure.

Christopher made clear that American forces would be pulled out by March 31 even if Somalia is still plagued by lawlessness and chaos. He noted Clinton's statement that there is no guarantee Somalia will rid itself of violence or suffering, "but at least we will have given Somalia a reasonable chance."

Aspin defended himself against criticism, after last weekend's U.S. losses in heavy fighting, that he had rebuffed requests from military commanders for tanks and heavy armor to defend troops in Somalia.

"Had I known at that time what I knew after the events of Sunday, I would have made a very different decision," Aspin said. He rejected demands from some in Congress that he resign.

Both Aspin and Christopher emphasized that the military operation should now take second place to a political or diplomatic solution that will be overseen mostly by African nations.

In fact, Christopher said, it would be up to the Africans to decide whether fugitive warlord Mohamed Farrah Aidid should have a role in attempts to reconcile rival factions in Somalia.

"We're looking to the African leaders to find an African solution to an African problem," Christopher said.

end of the year, we may have to dismiss our organization," he said. "We don't have enough money to survive for too long."

The Singapore Student Association did not receive money for its annual Chinese New Year. SSA member Angela Ong said the celebration is traditionally funded and a large number of students attend. She said the UISA supports the white majority and only one foreign student is represented within the UISA.

"They really don't view us as important," she said. "The student government only approves money for things that are going to interest them."

UISA President John Gardner said he fully supports the international students.

"I think there has been discrimination. I will not argue with that," he said. "They have to be listened to in order to correct the situation."

Applying for funding is geared to those who know the procedure, UISA Vice President Micah Hobart said.

"The system may be discriminating in that it works best for those who know it best," he said. "We're trying to extend our hand to all university students, international as well as those from Iowa and the U.S., to make sure all voices are heard."

SABAC Chairman Keith Chiavetta said the committee is nondiscriminatory when allocating funding.

"I'm sorry that the groups feel that way, but our budgeting and auditing committee has been fair and equitable to all student groups regardless of their skin color," he said. "It comes down to the fact that we only have so much money. Just because you ask for money doesn't mean you automatically get it."

Chiavetta said the work SABAC did over the summer — meeting with groups and helping to revise their budgets — demonstrates its effort to be objective in its funding.

"I'm at a loss to understand why groups would be outraged at this point after having four sets of appeals," he said.

There is still money available through supplemental funding, Chiavetta said. It is just a matter of applying for the funds.

"There are supplemental funds available, and we're adding a December reversion to the budget," he said. "We are bound by our Constitution to be fair and equitable to any student group that comes to us."

COULD LIVES HAVE BEEN SAVED?

Aspin deflects criticism on slow response

Donna Cassata

Associated Press

WASHINGTON — Defense Secretary Les Aspin on Wednesday defended his rejection last month of a field request for more tanks and men to protect U.S. forces in Somalia but said he would have made "a very different decision" in hindsight.

"I made the decision as best I could," Aspin said at a White House briefing, rejecting criticism and calls for his resignation from members of Congress upset over the weekend deaths of U.S. soldiers in Mogadishu.

Asked his intentions, Aspin said, "Not to resign."

Aspin said he discussed the request for reinforcements with Colin Powell, then chairman of the Joint Chiefs of Staff, but "views in the Pentagon were kind of mixed on the issue as to whether we ought to grant that, and I think they were mixed for good reason."

Aspin said the request came at a time when the United States was trying to reduce rather than increase its presence in Somalia and turning its attention to a possible peacekeeping operation in Bosnia.

"All in all, the decision was deferred at the time that it came to my attention," Aspin said. He added that the request had been presented to him as necessary to protect logistic supply lines rather than for rescue operations.

"Had I known at that time what I knew after the events of Sunday,

I would have made a very different decision," Aspin said. "I saw that they could have been used very usefully after the events on Sunday."

Several lawmakers criticized Aspin strongly, and two suggested he should resign.

"Had I known at the time what I knew after the events of Sunday, I would have made a very different decision."

Les Aspin, defense secretary

One military source said Aspin had rebuffed Powell twice last month when Powell recommended sending tanks and additional troops.

But Pentagon officials portrayed the situation more as one of Powell relaying and discussing field requests for the reinforcements rather than necessarily endorsing them.

Powell, who retired last week as chairman of the Joint Chiefs of Staff, spoke twice with Aspin about the request, one Pentagon official said, speaking only on condition of anonymity. However, the official said, military leaders were not pushing Aspin to grant the request.

Aspin sought to explain his decision during a White House briefing with members of Congress, according to participants in the meeting.

The defense secretary also said he received the recommendation in the form of a discussion paper from Powell. Aspin "tried to differentiate between what was a discussion paper and the specific request to do it," Warner said.

Some lawmakers were having none of that.

"He should be fired now or he should resign now," declared Sen. Alfonse D'Amato, R-N.Y., in a speech on the Senate floor. A day earlier, Republican Rep. James Walsh of New York also had called for Aspin's resignation.

D'Amato and Sen. Hank Brown, R-Colo., also sent a letter to Aspin asking why the request was rejected and whether Aspin had consulted with his former colleagues on Capitol Hill.

Senate Armed Services Committee Chairman Sam Nunn, D-Ga., said his panel would question Aspin about the reports, but he didn't agree with the calls for his resignation.

"Les Aspin is a very conscientious, dedicated public servant. He has been for a long time. ... I'm sure he did in every case what he thought was right. We'll look into it. If there were inappropriate actions taken, I'm sure that he would himself acknowledge them," Nunn said.

Warner said "in fairness to Secretary Aspin, he should be given the opportunity to reply to a broad inquiry."

Earlier in the week, the Pentagon acknowledged receiving such a request from Maj. Gen. Thomas Montgomery, commander of U.S. forces in Somalia, but characterized it as merely one of a number of such requests.

Ryan Bowen

Iowa basketball snags local recruit Bowen

Associated Press

FORT MADISON, Iowa — Basketball player Ryan Bowen grew up wanting to be a Hawkeye, so when it came time to choose a college, he went with his heart.

Bowen, a 6-foot-9 forward from Fort Madison, announced Thursday he would sign with Iowa, ending a recruiting battle that also had involved Iowa State, Northern Iowa and Arizona.

"I feel a lot better now," Bowen said. "The whole recruiting thing was pretty intense, but it also was a very neat experience for me to go through."

Iowa will be getting a versatile player who can play inside or outside, handle the ball and shoot.

Bowen averaged 24 points and 10.5 rebounds in leading Fort Madison to a 15-5 record as a junior last season. He shot 70 percent from the field and made 40 percent of his 3-point attempts while averaging 5.5 blocked shots and 4 assists a game.

"Ryan's a very excellent athlete," Fort Madison coach Mark Bigler said. "With the advent of the 35-second clock at the college level, a player of his size and quickness is going to become even more valuable."

"He's got the ability to create offense on his own and to set up his teammates."

Bowen visited Northern Iowa and Arizona in addition to Iowa and also considered Iowa State. But those other schools couldn't match the feeling he had about Iowa.

"Being a Hawkeye fan throughout my whole life, I feel comfortable there," he said. "I followed my heart and took my gut feeling."

Iowa also has a commitment from 6-10 Greg Helmers of Pomeroy-Palmer, which finished fourth in the 1993 Class 1A state tournament. Helmers averaged 29.6 points and 14.2 rebounds last season.

The early signing period for high school and junior college players begins Nov. 10.

When Bowen puts his name on the line, he'll be following a dream he has had since he and his brother, Tyler, used to pretend they were Iowa players during imaginary games in their basement.

"I was always Steve Carfino and my brother was Michael Payne," Bowen said. "Maybe some day some young kids will be playing in their basements pretending they're Hawkeye Ryan Bowen."

Hawkeyes looking for first Big Ten win

Iowa must beat Hoosiers to keep bowl hopes alive

Roxanna Pellin
The Daily Iowan

Despite scoring just one touchdown in the past two games, the Hawkeyes aren't ruling out the possibility of post-season play.

Saturday's game at Indiana could decide whether Iowa will be invited to a bowl game, Iowa senior linebacker Matt Hilliard said.

"Every game that's left will be a big game," Hilliard said. "If we want to get to a bowl game, we've really got to come through with some big wins."

With an overall record of 2-2, the Hawkeyes will look for their first Big Ten win at Memorial Stadium. Kickoff is scheduled for 1 p.m.

The Hawkeyes have lost their last two games against ranked teams. Iowa dropped 24-7 at then-No. 8 Michigan last week after taking an open date. Iowa was shut out 31-0 by then-No. 14 Penn State Sept. 18 at Kinnick Stadium.

While Iowa's lack of scoring is a concern, Iowa coach Hayden Fry said the Hawkeyes will have to be more assertive defensively as well to win.

"It's not only do we have to eliminate making mistakes on our end of the field, but we have to start getting turnovers by our defense," Fry said. "Knocking the ball loose, creating fumbles, getting interceptions."

The two-deep roster shows some close matchups for the Hawkeyes' starting lineup. Cliff King and Kent Kahl are competing for starting rights at full back and Ryan Terry and Sedrick Shaw are matched up at running back.

"If a guy's a real competitor and he's replaced then he'll fight to regain that position," Fry said. "If he's a quitter, I'd rather for him to quit during the week rather than in front of a 105,000."

Fry said it's a tossup between freshman Brion Hurley and sophomore Todd Romano at placekicker. Romano missed a 27-yard field goal in the third quarter at Michigan.

Freshman punter Nick Gallery ranks third in the Big Ten, averaging 40.3 yards per game.

The Hoosiers' senior punter, Shannon Rutledge, is from Altoona, Iowa.

Mallory said he's been pleased with his kicking duo of Rutledge and Jim DiGuilio.

"I've been punting him from the 50 (yard line) in," Mallory said. "He has excellent hang time. He's been real good about keeping that ball in play. It's been a real good combination of using both of them."

The Hoosiers are 4-1 overall and 1-1 in the conference after a 23-19 win over Minnesota (0-2, 1-4) last week. The Hoosiers jumped out to a 20-3 halftime lead, but were outscored 16-3 in the second half.

Last week against the Gophers, the Hoosiers generated their best offensive output this season with 389 yards. Quarterback John Paci passed for a career high 255 yards, completing 18 of 32. Thomas Lewis had five catches for 123 yards and Jermaine Chaney ran for 109 yards on 31 carries.

Indiana coach Bill Mallory said his tight ends aren't getting the ball as much as he'd like.

"I think we could be using them more than what we have," Mallory said. "We haven't used (Ross) Hales as much as we intended to do. He's very capable as a receiver so I'm hoping to get the ball to him a little more."

Iowa has won eight of the last nine in the series, including a 14-0 win in Bloomington last year. The Hawkeyes lead the overall series, 32-20-4 and Fry is 8-2 against the Hoosiers.

Iowa linebacker Mike Daily brings down Michigan 24-7 loss at ninth-ranked Michigan last weekend. The senior led all Hawkeyes with 11 tackles. Tailback Tyrone Wheatley during the Hawkeyes'.

Wildeman Iowa's most improved

Associated Press

IOWA CITY — When Iowa coach Hayden Fry needs inspiration, all he has to do is watch Parker Wildeman.

With Wildeman, there's no holding back.

"Parker Wildeman may be the most refreshing player on the team as far as improving," Fry said. "I cannot find a single play where Parker doesn't give 100 percent."

Wildeman is a 6-foot-2, 265-pound nose guard who has worked his way into the starting lineup this season after two years of obscurity with the Hawkeyes.

He has made 23 tackles this fall — only six fewer than team leader Mike Dailey — and should be in the thick of things again in Saturday's game at Indiana.

"I just try to play hard in practice and I think that carries over to the field on game day," Wildeman said. "I try to be an inspiration to the other players by working hard. It kind of rubs off."

His efforts didn't bring much reward the past two years.

The junior from Cherokee played in four games last season without making a tackle and got into only one game as a redshirt freshman in 1991, again without making a tackle.

"I would have wanted to have broken in a little earlier, but there were a lot of talented players in front of me," Wildeman said. "I know it takes time, especially at this level."

Wildeman played as a reserve in a season-opening victory over Tulsa, then got his first start at Iowa State the following week.

NATIONAL LEAGUE CHAMPIONSHIP SERIES

Braves even series with 14-3 rout

Alan Robinson
Associated Press

PHILADELPHIA — Check the tape measures, the Philadelphia Phillies' ERAs and the look of disbelief on Tommy Greene's face. The Atlanta Braves are back — make that way back.

The Braves, a team built on power hitting and power pitching, got both in abundance Thursday night in a record 14-3 rout of the Phillies in Game 2 of the National League playoffs. They also got exactly what they wanted in Philadelphia — a split.

The series goes to Atlanta for Game 3 Saturday, where the confidence-restored Braves will start Tom Glavine (22-6), part of their unmatched stable of pitching talent, against left-hander Terry Mulholland (9). Mulholland has pitched just once in the last month because of a strained hip.

Atlanta's big bats, so quiet in the Phillies' 4-3, 10-inning victory in Game 1, broke loose big time against Greene (16-4), who was 10-0 in Veterans Stadium this season. Manager Jim Fregosi held him back a day so he might start twice in the Vet, but there was no holding back the Braves' offense which tied an NL playoff record with 16 hits while setting a major league playoff record with the 14 runs.

Fred McGriff, who super-charged the Braves' dramatic 39-11 stretch run that seized the NL West title from the San Francisco Giants, got it going with a huge two-run drive in the first, and Greene and the Phillies never recovered.

Jeff Blauser homered in a six-run third in which Greene never retired a hitter. Damon Berryhill and Terry Pendleton later went deep against Philadelphia's as-usual shaky bullpen, and Ron Gant had two doubles and three RBIs.

The four-homer night was a Braves' postseason record, a significant accomplishment for a franchise that has showcased sluggers such as Hank Aaron, Orlando Cepeda and Dale Murphy.

Greg Maddux, the 20-game winner who rarely needs more than three runs to win, had an 8-0 lead by the third, and that's the NL equivalent of mailing it in. He gave up Dave Hollins' two-run homer in the fourth, but that was the only blip on his otherwise splendid pitching line.

Maddux (20-10) was 13-2 after July 11 and didn't allow more than two earned runs in his last 13 decisions. He didn't this night, either, pitching five-hit ball over seven innings, striking out eight and walking three in his first postseason victory. He was 0-1 for the Cubs against the Giants in the 1989 playoffs.

The Braves' blowout — even more overpowering than their 13-4 pounding of Pittsburgh in Game 2 in last year's playoffs — was unexpected because of the opposing pitcher.

Greene had limited Atlanta to a .111 batting average this season, and no Braves' starter other than

Associated Press

Phillies' second baseman Micky Morandini flips at second base after throwing Braves' Greg Maddux out in Game 2 of the NLCS.

Mark Lemke, who was 2-for-4, had a career average higher than .273 against him. McGriff, for example, was 0-for-7, and Blauser 0-for-5.

But Greene couldn't throw any of his pitches for strikes, and that's a death wish against only the fifth team in major-league history with three 30-homer, 100-RBI men in the same season.

Gant doubled and McGriff, who was 3-for-4, singled before David Justice walked. Pendleton, 3-for-5 with three RBIs, brought on reliever Bobby Thigpen with a two-run single.

Thigpen promptly served up Berryhill's three-run homer, and Pendleton added a solo drive two innings later off Ben Rivera as the Braves continued to play home run derby.

Field hockey faces 'pivotal weekend'

Kris Wiley
The Daily Iowan

Nobody has to tell sophomore Ann Paré how important this weekend is to the Iowa field hockey team.

"As far as the team and coaching staff, this is a pivotal weekend for us," she said. "This is going to say a lot about our team."

The third-ranked Hawkeyes are coming off a split last weekend in their conference opener in University Park, Pa. Iowa shutout No. 14 Michigan, 2-0, before falling to No. 1 Penn State, 1-0.

The Hawkeyes are back on the road this weekend to face No. 5 Northwestern Saturday and Southwest Missouri State Sunday in Evanston, Ill.

Iowa finds itself in a different situation from the position they were in a year ago. In 1992, the Hawkeyes remained undefeated until the final game of the season, a 4-0 loss to Old Dominion in the National Championship.

This year, Iowa is 9-2 halfway through the season. The Hawkeyes lost to then-No. 6 Maryland, 2-1, Sept. 18, and had not lost a Big Ten game since 1990.

Iowa coach Beth Beglin said this weekend will not "make or break" Iowa's season, but with the competition in the Big Ten so tough this year a Hawkeye victory is crucial to a conference title.

Al Goldis/The Daily Iowan

Ann Paré

"For the conference championship, it's a must-win," Beglin said.

Beglin also said Iowa will not forget its matchup with Southwest Missouri State, which is 4-3 on the season after beating St. Louis, 4-0, last weekend. Senior Colleen Finnerty leads all scorers with eight goals. The Hawkeyes lead the series, 9-5-1.

"They're a very good team," Beglin said. "They're pumping in a lot of goals this year. When we played them last year, I felt we overlooked them and it showed."

Iowa cross country anxious to compete

Mike Egenes

The Daily Iowan

After achieving one of its short-term goals and spending a week away from competitive racing, the Iowa men's cross country team is anxious to get back to a meet.

The Hawkeyes travel to Orono, Maine, this weekend for the second annual Murray Keatinge Invitational hosted by the University of Maine. In last year's meet, senior Kevin Herd won the meet to lead the Hawkeyes to a third place finish.

After capturing the championship two weeks ago at the Spartan Invitational, Hawkeye coach Larry Wiecezorek is ready to get back to another meet.

"We're really looking forward to running again," said Wiecezorek. "The week off has helped us a lot. We've had a few extra days to recover and had the opportunities to get some good workouts."

Wiecezorek said the best possible situation would be to take a week off between meets.

"Ideally, we would like to have every other weekend off," Wiecezorek said. "It allows the runners' bodies to recover from the strain of meets."

During the initial weeks of the season, Wiecezorek set a goal for his team to work for some respect and recognition in the weekly coaches' poll. After winning their last meet, the Hawkeyes finally received one vote.

However, Iowa junior Matt Gerard isn't content with the results of the poll.

"It's nice to get the recognition, but one vote isn't that big of a deal," Gerard said.

Gerard feels that the weeks to come will give an accurate display of how good the team is. He says the quality of the team is reflective of Wiecezorek's enthusiasm.

"He's great. Everybody gets along with him. Just the fact that he thought we could do it is enough, but he's given us confidence and now we know we can," Gerard said. "All of our success is attributed to Coach Wiecezorek."

Wiecezorek definitely has a lighter side to him. Recently he told his runners that it was their job "to make a famous coach out of me. It's about time for (Kevin) Herd to step up. He'd better have broad shoulders and he'd better hurry up, he's only got nine months

"That game was pretty emotional," he said. "I had a lot of butterflies then. But I came to grips with the butterflies. I turned my worries over to the Lord. I always get blessed that way."

Wildeman followed his start against Iowa State by leading the Hawkeyes with 10 tackles in a 31-0 loss to Penn State, including the team's only sack. He made six tackles and deflected a pass in last week's 24-7 loss at Michigan.

"I was happy to make a contribution, but we still lost the game," he said.

"It's hard to feel good after a loss. Maybe someday I'll sit down and say to myself, 'Wow, I did that against Michigan.'"</

Women wallop Iowa State, 8-1

Todd Hefferman
The Daily Iowan

The Hawkeye women's team continued their successful homestand with an 8-1 romp over intrastate rival Iowa State Thursday evening.

Iowa's lone loss was a nail-biter in the No. 5 singles match, which paired junior Cara Cashion and Iowa State's Ann Backhaus. Cashion lost the first set 3-6, but fought back and managed to take the second set 6-3 to force a third.

Amidst the gusty winds at the Klotz Tennis Center, Cashion and Backhaus dueled to a 6-6 tie, forcing a seven-point tie-breaker to decide the match. Cashion fell 4-7 in the tie-breaker to give the Cyclones their only victory.

At the No. 1 singles, Laura Dvorak won the first three games in the match, only to see Kristin Becker take the next three and tie the score. That would be all Becker would get in that set, and Dvorak rolled 6-3, 6-1.

In No. 2 singles, sophomore Nikki Willette ran Iowa State's Lesley Lewis early and often in her 6-3, 6-1 rout.

Senior Rhonda Fox breezed past Franchel Bennett 6-0, 6-2 in just under two hours in No. 3 singles, and at the No. 6 spot, senior Miyuki Moore lost the first set against Iowa State's Lynn Stuart, but won the next two to take the match 2-6, 6-3, 6-2.

The No. 4 singles match saw senior Amy Jahn put her 5-0 singles mark on the line against Erika Asmuss. Jahn won the first set, but lost the second, and had to play a deciding third set.

"I didn't play very well in the second set, and had to change something," Jahn said.

In the decisive third set, Jahn held serve in the first game, and then broke Asmuss to take a 2-0 lead. Just as quickly as she had gotten the lead, she lost it, and found herself tied 2-2 and serving for a 3-2 lead. Jahn held serve, and would not be denied her sixth victory. After being broken once more, Jahn rallied from a 3-4 deficit to win the third set 6-4, keeping Iowa a perfect 26-0 against Iowa State in dual meets.

The doubles round saw sophomore Sasha Boros return to action from an injury that had left her out of competition since early February. Boros teamed with Dvorak at the No. 2 doubles spot, and faced Barnett and Lewis. Boros and Dvorak prevailed 6-2, 7-5.

"I'm pleased with how I played. It'll be fun to play singles on Saturday," Boros said.

Under the lights of the Tennis Center, Fox and Willette overpowered Asmuss-Becker 6-0, 7-5 at the Laura Dvorak returns in her 6-3, 6-1 win over Iowa State's Kristin Becker Thursday at Klotz Tennis Center.

No. 1 doubles position, Cashion-Jahn won their doubles match over Backhaus-Stuart 6-2, 6-0 at the No. 3, and the McCrackens teamed up to beat Bassman and Miller in three sets, 6-7, 6-3, 7-4.

Iowa hosts Marquette Saturday at the Klotz Tennis Center.

Men sending three to Volvo Nationals

Todd Hefferman
The Daily Iowan

The Iowa men's tennis team sends three players to one of the biggest tournaments of the year.

Junior Bryan Crowley, senior Todd Shale, and junior Bob Zumph are all on their way to Austin, Texas, for the Volvo Nationals, which attracts players from around the country and features one of the stiffest draws in all of college tennis.

Crowley, Shale, and Zumph will begin the tournament in the pre-qualifying rounds, where 125 more entries will vie for the eight spots available for the qualifying round. To get through the pre-qualifying rounds, entrants would be required to win three to four matches in a period of just over two days. Overall, there will be more than 200 entries in the singles tourney.

"One of the purposes of this kind of tournament is to expose these guys to national competition. It's a good opportunity to get into the rankings," Coach Steve Houghton said.

The Hawkeyes haven't competed since the Ball State Invitational, which was held on Oct. 1-3, and are just waiting for their opportunities.

"It's going to be a good tournament. I'm looking forward to going against some good competition," Crowley said. The Volvo is nothing new to Crowley, he went to Austin his freshmen year.

Zumph is coming off a rough finish from the Ball State Invitational, and is eager to get back into the swing of things.

"I think we have a real good chance to get out of the pre-qualifier and into the qualifying round. We're ready to go down there and do some damage," Zumph said.

The Volvo Nationals run through Oct. 17, depending on how well the Hawkeyes do in the first three days.

COLLEGE FOOTBALL

Huskers come back to give Osborne win 200

Owen Canfield
Associated Press

STILLWATER, Okla. — Nebraska righted itself after a sluggish first half, getting big plays from its offense and special teams to beat Oklahoma State 27-13 and give coach Tom Osborne his 200th victory.

The seventh-ranked Cornhuskers fell behind 13-3 in the first half as Oklahoma State (3-2, 0-1) took advantage of good field position and held tailback Calvin Jones in check.

Jones and the rest of the offense got going in the second half, when field position swung in the Cornhuskers' favor.

When Barron Miles blocked a punt and recovered it in the end zone early in the fourth quarter, Nebraska had the lead for the first time and was on its way. Jones sealed things with a 44-yard touchdown run with 3:38 remaining. He finished with 136 yards on 21 carries.

Jones, who had played only one snap in the previous three games due to a knee injury, had just 26 yards on nine carries in the first half.

But his 20-yard run midway through the third quarter put the ball at the Oklahoma State 4, and on the next play Tommie Frazier scored on an option keeper to tie the score at 13.

It was the first rushing touchdown against the Cowboys this season.

Men's golf hopes to extend win streak

Doug Alden
The Daily Iowan

The Iowa men's golf team hopes to extend its winning streak to two today as it enters the Northern Intercollegiate in Ann Arbor, Mich.

The Hawkeyes go into the tournament after taking first place in the Southern Illinois D.A. Weibring Intercollegiate on Tuesday in Bloomington, Ill. It was their first win of the fall season.

Co-captains Sean McCarty and David Sharp will be joined by Sean Rowen, Iowa's top finisher in both its previous tournaments and the overall champion in Bloomington.

Chad McCarty makes his third start this fall and sophomore Paul Levin joins the squad at the No. five player.

Iowa faces every Big Ten team in the 24 team tournament which takes place at the Alistair MacKenzie Golf Course in Ann Arbor. Non conference teams include Louisville, Marshall, Miami (Ohio), Notre Dame, and Kentucky, who Iowa finished ahead of at the Midwestern Invitational earlier this fall.

Sean Rowen

After returning to Iowa City late Tuesday night, the Hawkeyes took Wednesday off and prepared to travel on Thursday. Coach Lynn Blevins feels such a short time between tournaments could help his squad.

"I hope we can take advantage of (the win)," he said. "There are lots of positives going in and we've got to stay focused. It's a good time to capitalize on it."

Rowen and Sean McCarty feel going right into another tournament will benefit the Hawkeyes.

"I think it actually helps because I'm staying in rhythm," Rowen said.

"We've still got momentum so hopefully we can take that into this weekend," Sean McCarty added.

The Hawkeyes see this weekend as a tremendous challenge but feel they are both physically and mentally ready to compete.

"We're going into this expecting to win. If you set high expectations — it just brings out the better parts in you," Sharp said. "These are all the Big Ten teams we need to play well against. We know what we have to do."

"We're confident," Rowen added. "Sean and Dave are playing really well again. If we stay focused we should be all right."

WOMEN'S CROSS COUNTRY

'Homecoming' trip for Iowa

Mike Eganes
The Daily Iowan

The Iowa women's cross country team will have a "homecoming" of sorts this weekend in Orono, Maine.

The No. 20 Hawkeyes will compete in the Murray Keatinge Invitational hosted by the University of Maine Saturday.

Murray Keatinge, for whom the event is named, is a former Hawkeye runner from the 1950's.

Iowa coach Jerry Hassard said the planning for this meet had been going on for a few years, before finally getting it off the ground. This is the second year of the meet and the first trip to New England for the Hawkeyes.

"This should prove to be an enjoyable trip. There were only four teams last year, but this meet is growing and we hope to make this an annual event for us," said Hassard.

Initially, Hassard didn't feel the level of competition would be to a level he had anticipated.

"It's still a very important meet. In fact, it's taking on more importance than I originally thought it would," said the 18-year Hawkeye coach.

According to Hassard, the most challenging teams in the field will be Big Ten foes, Minnesota and Purdue. Also Arizona, which is traditionally strong, will compete.

"Arizona still looks like a challenge to us and Minnesota ran well against us last weekend," Hassard said. "Our biggest challenge will be to make sure we don't let up from last weekend."

Iowa senior Tina Stec, who paced Iowa with a third-place finish overall last weekend, hopes a let down isn't in the making.

"I'm not expecting anything bad to happen, but a lot of us have been tired lately. I think we can muster up enough energy for the meet," Stec said.

Despite any present fatigue, Stec feels confident about the team's chances to win the meet.

"We would really like to come away with this one. We expect Arizona to be our main competition, but a lot of the teams are quite competitive," she added.

Stec also said it would be most important to finish ahead of Minnesota and Arizona for postseason time in order to qualify for an at-large bid into the national meet.

The distance of the trip to Maine may factor into the performance of the runners, but Hassard hopes to prevent travel in playing a decisive role in Saturday's meet.

"That's why we're leaving earlier in the week, to make sure we are rested," he said. "Getting out there earlier should allow us to get back to normal and prevent jet lag."

NFL PREVIEW

Miami set for Cleveland ambush

Dave Goldberg
Associated Press

The Miami Dolphins have suddenly become the NFL's hot team, beating Buffalo at Buffalo, then taking the Redskins Monday night at home.

Now they go into Cleveland, a game that shows every indication of an ambush — teams up for two straight games can suddenly come down, particularly on the road in a tough stadium.

The Dolphins come in as 2 1/2-point favorites against the Browns, who will again start the newly signed Bernie Kosar. Vinny Testaverde, the relief pitcher, will wait in the wings.

For whatever it's worth, both Kosar and Testaverde have ties to Miami.

They played in college there, with Testaverde backing up Kosar in that situation, too.

More important is the letdown factor. If there's a spot for the Dolphins to ease up, this is it.

Besides, Bryan Cox hasn't said anything nasty about Cleveland.

And Kosar's due for a good week.

Houston (plus 3 1/2) at Buffalo

This is where the trouble started for the Oilers, who blew a 35-3 third-quarter lead to the Bills last season, fired defensive coordinator Jim Eddy and hired Buddy Ryan.

"We certainly haven't done much since then to get our confidence back," coach Jack Pardee said.

Maybe it will help the Oilers that Jim Kelly, injured during that playoff game, is the Buffalo quarterback instead of Frank Reich. Maybe it will help that the Bills had to huff and puff to beat the Giants Sunday.

And maybe it won't.

BILLS, 35-3.

Chicago (plus 7) at Philadelphia

Dave Wannstedt, in his best CoachSpeak form, says he'd rather face Randall Cunningham than Bobby Brister because he coached against Cunningham twice a year in Dallas.

Sure.

EAGLES, 13-10

New York Giants (no line) at Washington

The no line is because no one, including Richie Petitbon, knows who'll play quarterback for Washington. The Giants probably will be without the overworked Rodney Hampton, who inevitably injured his leg.

But the Redskins have more injuries, are probably overrated to start with and have lost to the Giants in six of the eight non-strike games at RFK.

GIANTS, 20-17

Cincinnati (no line) at Kansas City

Kansas City Chiefs' running back Marcus Allen during a second quarter touchdown run Oct. 3 in pulls away from Los Angeles safety Eddie Anderson Kansas City.

The no line is because Joe Montana may not play for the Chiefs.

No line? The Chiefs could win this game with Marty Schottenheimer playing quarterback.

CHIEFS, 24-2

Dallas (minus 11) at Indianapolis

Jeff George probably will start for the Colts. Will they boo him the first time he throws an incomplete pass? He will break into tears?

COWBOYS, 23-10

New York Jets (plus 3) at Los Angeles Raiders

Another "Who's the quarterback?" game.

The Raiders are one team with Jeff Hostetler, another with Vince Evans.

Hostetler probably plays ...

RAIDERS, 23-17

Denver (plus 3) at Green Bay

The Broncos are a lot better at home and the Packers are desperate.

But the Packers have been beaten twice in the final minute and now get John Elway, who does that kind of thing four or five times a season.

BRONCOS, 21-20

San Diego (plus 3) at Pittsburgh

Rick Mirer shredded the Chargers' defense last week.

This week, it's Gary Anderson besting John Carney.

STEELERS, 19-15.

Tampa Bay (plus 9 1/2)

at Minnesota

Are the Bucs for real? How much of a test is a game against a team like the Vikings, who have scored only four touchdowns all season? Make it five.

VIKINGS, 22-6.

New England (plus 10) at Phoenix

Bill Parcells knows all about beating the Cards ... with playoff and Super Bowl teams from New York.

His Pats? They've lost two home games by a total of six points and two road games by a total of 62.

CARDS, 65-3.

Iowa women's golf plays for conference seedings

Doug Alden
The Daily Iowan

The Iowa women's team gets back into competition today in Columbus, Ohio, at the Lady Northern Invitational.

The three-round tournament, which features every Big Ten team as well as Iowa State, Illinois State, Northern Illinois, and Missouri, will seed conference teams for next spring's Big Ten Championships, which will also take place in Columbus.

Coach Diane Thomason feels the team placing well is not as important as playing well.

"Probably the most important thing about this tournament is coming away with a good feeling," she said. "You want to go away with a feeling that you can play the course and play it fairly well."

Lynette Seaton, Jennifer Nodland, Jennifer McCullough, Candy Schneekloth, Tanya Shepley, and Stacy Boville will compete for the Hawkeyes.

After three straight weekends of tournaments, including a disappointing fifth-place finish at home on Sept. 26, the Hawkeyes had a weekend away from competition. Thomason and her players feel the time off will prove to be worthwhile and not take anything away from their games.

"I think (time off) has helped us," Thomason said. "It has given us a chance to really practice and work on some things that we needed. I think once we get there and play the practice round and get into a normal pregame routine they'll be all right."

"It was nice to have time off and work on our games," Seaton added. "Mentally it can be tough."

Rather than holding qualifying rounds in the off weeks, Thomason based the lineup on the results of the Hawkeye Invitational. She feels this also could help Iowa.

"Sometimes they like the competition — knowing that it's not just automatic," she said. "But when it comes right down to it, it takes the pressure off of them when they know they are going."

In the time off, Thomason says Iowa has worked on several things including their short games, shot selection, and confidence. The players feel ready going into today's tournament.

"We need to work on staying relaxed," Seaton added. "I just hope we can put it all together and finally pull through with a good tournament."

Hawkeyes look for first conference win

Joel Donofrio
The Daily Iowan

The No. 17-ranked Illinois volleyball team is not the best opponent for a struggling team to face. Nevertheless, the Hawkeyes will shoot for their first Big Ten victory when they host first-place Illinois Saturday at 7 p.m. in Carver-Hawkeye Arena.

If Iowa is going to compete with Illinois, they will have to reduce the high number of serving errors committed in losses to Michigan and Michigan State. For the season, Iowa has over twice as many serving errors (143) than service aces (65) — a trend that has baffled coach Linda Schoenstedt.

"We practice serving a great deal, and I am mystified why we missed so many serves," Schoenstedt said last weekend. "I guess it's a lack of concentration, but I will say this: I felt that our upperclassmen were the ones that had the most difficulty back there (at the service line). . . I'm at a loss as to why."

Senior outside hitter Erin Weaver had one possible explanation for Iowa's recent serving woes.

"We practice our serving forever in practice, but in a game your adrenaline is going, or you're thinking about where you need to be on defense," Weaver said. "It's very difficult to serve well when you lose focus. There's that little tiny spot in the middle where you hit (serves) just right, and when you lose concentration you either hit it too long or into the net."

Following their challenging non-conference schedule with matches against national powers such as USC, UCLA and Texas, the Illini (7-5, 4-0 in the conference) will bring a powerful lineup into Iowa City.

Middle blocker Kristin Henriksen and outside hitter Tina Rodgers were both selected by conference coaches to the preseason all-Big Ten Volleyball Team. The Illinois seniors are both in the ranked in the conference's top ten for hitting efficiency, with Henriksen lead the league with a .437 percentage.

"Illinois is a very fine volleyball team," Schoenstedt said. "They have a lot of big people in the middle and a setter who does a very good job. They will be a very tough challenge for us."

The Hawkeyes (8-9, 0-5) are coming off a 15-12, 15-9, 15-9 loss Wednesday night at Minnesota.

ICON XVIII brings filk, LARPing, and other strange things to town

Shayla Thiel and Holly Reinhardt The Daily Iowan

Don't be alarmed to find Klingon warriors, Ferengi entrepreneurs and Wookies beaming into the Coralville Best Western Westfield Inn this weekend. It's not an alien attack. It's just the ICON XVIII science fiction convention.

This year's convention will feature artists' exhibits, a treasure hunt, a Society for Creative Anachronism demonstration and, of course, a chance to break the pointy ears out of the closet.

"At ICON, you can get away with wearing anything," said Rex Bryant, who has attended 15 out of 18 annual ICONs so far. "It's the only place I know of where you can walk up to a table and have people dressed in cutoffs and T-shirts, people like my girlfriend and me wearing a tux and evening gown, and then a Klingon, a Romulan and a 'Star Wars' guy."

Michelle Clark of the ICON Executive Committee said there will be costume contest with a "costume aid station" to help repair — or even create — costumes at the last minute. There will also be an art show and auction featuring 200-400 unusual pieces open for bidding.

"Believe me, you are not going to find works like these in your average art shop," Clark said.

There will also be a number of readings by authors, an instruction panel on how to enjoy your first science fiction convention and a dealer exhibit room which will contain rare and hard-to-find books as well as jewelry and other items. Other highlights include a panel discussion by professional experts on cyberspace, or virtual-reality issues, a demonstration by the Society for Creative Anachronism and a filk room.

What's filk? It's a lot like folk, but with science fiction or fantasy related lyrics. Some filk is original; some consists of traditional folk songs reworked so that instead of "Michael Row Your Boat Ashore," attendees may be singing "Scotty, Beam Me Up No More."

Mick Hitch, a member of the Trans Iowa Canal Company of actors, will be involved in the opening ceremony skit tonight at 7. Titled "The Young Coyote Jones Chronicles," the skit will parody the "Indiana Jones Chronicles" as well as various commercials.

Hitch encourages the reticent to attend the convention to meet others with common interests who are knowledgeable on various subjects. "It doesn't matter how esoteric or strange the interest is," he said.

"There is somebody there who knows something about it."

Live-action role playing, or LARPing, is expected to be another big attraction of the convention. Steve Crow, organizer of the role playing, said that everyone interested in LARPing will be given a background, a plot and a story; participants interact with each other in character to achieve a certain set of goals. Alien invaders, secret agents, scientists, rock stars, magicians, mercenaries and anarchists are among the characters. The setting is a Mediterranean Island.

"It's a spy haven, sort of like Casablanca," Crow said.

This year's game is "Under The Table," based on the game "Over The Edge" by Jonathan Tweet, who will be one of several professional guests at ICON. The guest of honor is Suzette Haden Elgin, author of "Planet Ozarks," "Native Tongue," and many other books

Clark agrees science fiction fans are certainly into having a wonderful time learning about their favorite genre.

"We're a bunch of people with a really good sense of humor, and we don't take ourselves too seriously," she said.

Among the ICON crowd, Bryant said people are most interested in ideas and commonalities — or uncommonalities.

"Most of the places you go, the first thing people ask is what you do," he said. "This is not. 'What do you do?' It's what you are."

"You can do anything at all — it doesn't matter at all."

So strap on that light saber and boldly go to ICON XVIII tonight through Sunday at the Westfield Inn, 1895 27th Ave., Coralville. Admission for the entire weekend is $25 or $15 for a single day.

Author Mavis Gallant to read from tales of insecurity

Amy Weismann The Daily Iowan

Mavis Gallant is probably best known for her extraordinary 42-year relationship with The New Yorker. The magazine has published more than 100 of her stories. There is good reason for such rare faith on the part of a publication renowned for literary discovery.

Gallant's short stories are portraits of people living out irresolution. They struggle to come to terms with the interdependency of the individual in worlds which isolate and inhibit. Often intimate, their stories reflect the humor and tragedy of self-discovery. Her new book "Across The Bridge" demonstrates the poignancy of her vision. "Bridge," which Gallant will read from tonight at Prairie Lights Books, 15 S. Dubuque St., is a beautiful collection of 11 stories, some related, others marked by their independence from the rest. The stories relay unsentimental, quiet moments of identities in crisis.

There is a hint of satire in her conundrums, a voice which points to the context of an existence and sketches a larger, changing and often tragically superficial world, a Europe and a Canada consumed by their own myths.

Over the last 40 years, Gallant's writing has been an exercise in observation. In effect, she never let go of her reporter's ear and eye. "Fiction," she says, "is in a sense reporting, reporting on the human heart."

In "Across The Bridge," she sophisticatedly weaves in and out of a journalistic narrative detachment. The people met in this collection emerge as figures of disenchantment, monuments to a certain self-dissection of the upper-middle class in the 20th century. One story, "A State of Affairs," tells the story of an elderly Polish Parisian who finds that the mundane validations offered by a society that he embraced as his own reveal a Europe he once knew but can no longer recognize. After a disorienting trip to the bank, he comes to a conclusion:

"Shreds of episodes shrugged off, left behind, strewed the roads. Only someone pledged to gray dawns would turn back to examine them. You might as well collect every letter and call the assortment an autobiography."

Yet, in the end, it is through the imagining of a letter to a lost friend that he is in any sense at home.

As if confirming his confusion, Gallant says she believes the present cannot exist through the past, but the knowledge of what to leave behind seems to elude the hearts she recognizes and puts to paper.

Gallant says, "I know a man who keeps his parents' home exactly as it was left to him when they died. People are angered by this and criticize him. He responds by saying 'I have a right to roots.' Now, I am not angry about this. I wish only someone would burn the house down." Perhaps, on paper, she is burning it over and over again.

Tonight's reading begins at 8 and is open to the general public. It will be broadcast live on WSUI (AM 910) and WOI (AM 640).

Motorcycle metaphor permeates male-sympathetic one-man show

Charles Monson
The Daily Iowan

Top two reasons to attend todd j. petersen's one-man show "Built for Abuse," according to director Michael Sokoloff: "There's a real live motorcycle on stage, and todd takes his pants off." Between the bike, the unorthodox script and the male-sympathetic point of view, petersen hopes that "Abuse" will be a theatrical experience unlike anything recently seen on this campus. "Hopefully, it's going to be an event," petersen said. "I haven't seen this type of one-person show produced locally, and I wanted to see if I could do it, both as an actor and a writer."

Petersen's chances of making an impact are enhanced by the experience of director Sokoloff. Sokoloff is a 20-year theater veteran who has worked all over the country in almost every possible theatrical venue. He's brought his considerable experience to bear in helping petersen meet the challenges he's set for himself.

"It's an ambitious project," Sokoloff said. "A writer looks at material in a very different way than an actor; to take both viewpoints is very challenging."

While Sokoloff's directorial input has been very important in refining petersen's approach to the dramatic aspects of the piece, Sokoloff himself was more concerned with guiding petersen through the script revision process.

"When you're writing material like this, you're very close to it; you need another set of eyes (to offer a different point of view). My first requirement in working on this project was that todd would be willing to rework the script," Sokoloff said.

"Abuse," written by and starring petersen (Yes, his name is all lower case — don't ask.), is an exploration of masculinity using the motorcycle as a metaphor. Petersen plays a total of nine different men, most of them lower-class Midwesterners drawn from petersen's small-town Iowa background. The characters range from little boys to senior citizens, most of them playing off of the motorcycle (or a variation, like a bicycle or wheelchair).

"Since I entered the educational world, all I've seen is put-downs focusing on the negative side of masculinity," petersen said. "This play looks at both the hard and soft sides of masculinity; it's about men I've known and men I've imagined myself to be."

todd j. petersen wrote and stars in "Built for Abuse," which will be performed in the UI Theatre Building this weekend.

The script deals with sides of masculinity that most men might be unwilling to discuss. For instance, one sequence focuses on a heterosexual man who is being plagued by a recurring "gay dream." Petersen thought the taboo on this subject made discussing it particularly important.

"According to a study I read, most men have homoerotic dreams; they just aren't willing to talk about it," petersen said.

The play has undergone a whirlwind production schedule. Script revisions started only three weeks ago; light design didn't happen until late this week. In that time, the script has gone through five drafts, and a complex light and sound show has been set up.

"Built for Abuse" will be performed in Theatre B of the Theatre Building at 8 tonight and Saturday and at 3 p.m. Sunday. Admission is $1.

DOWNTOWN ROUNDUP

Warm weather prompts mystical, musical weekend

Tad Paulson
The Daily Iowan

"No man shall be denied his fair portion." — ancient phrase that sounds like a sexist Bible verse.

The last few days leading up to this weekend have definitely had a mystical quality to them. The wind has felt distinctly heavy, warm and tropical. Temperatures have soared. And during it all, the leaves are being spray-painted by Mother Nature. (Wouldn't it be great if people, like leaves, turned colors before dying?) We are in the midst of a hazy Indian Summer, it would seem, and this weekend's the time to enjoy it.

For this is a brief, shining respite for Iowa City before the leviathan cold of our winter. It's warm enough to walk around town half-naked, and there still seems to be a glint of summer lingering around the corner somewhere, exhaling.

Well, enough poetry. This is usually an exuberant time for Iowa City, and I'd recommend everyone get out and enjoy it while it lasts.

And now on to the musical weekend festivities:

- Mango Jam will be wrapping up a two-night gig at the Iowa City Yacht Club, 13 S. Einn St., tonight. The tropical funksters will take the stage following a happy hour set by B.F. Burt, the bellowing crooner for local band the Blues Investigators — who will play Saturday night. Should be two extremely packed nights at the underground bar, with lots of spilled beer and sweat. Go check it out.

- The grungy halls of Gabe's, 330 E. Washington St., will barely contain the rumbling, raging schmaltz of local alternative pop lords ... these days, who will play tonight with newly formed opening band Odd Man Out. Saturday night, the hard-drive rock of Big Daddy Sugar Snake will shake the foundations in a gig that will also feature the driving sounds of the Bent Sceptors and Critical Gopher.

- Local jazz repository the Sanctuary Restaurant & Pub, 405 S. Gilbert St., sponsors two gigs by Seattle-based musician Sam Weis, starting both tonight and Saturday night at 9.

- And yes, there's folk music, too, if you're looking. The Mill Restaurant, 120 E. Burlington St., will host the four-man acoustical group Big Wooden Radio tonight and Saturday night starting at 9, for only $2 cover. The restaurant will also continue its Sunday Night Concert series with the folk-rock duo of Beth Galiger and Michael Elwood, starting at 7 and for $4 cover.

Enjoy the weather.

Free screenings bring cult TV to film

Tasha Robinson
The Daily Iowan

What do you get when you shoot a mild-mannered lab technician into space and make him watch bad films until he tears apart his control panels to make some robots to keep him company?

In our only documented test case to date, you get "Mystery Science Theater 3000," a cult TV show with about the popularity of "Beavis and Butt-head" — but with many times the charm, not to mention intellectual capacity. Longtime fans and newbies alike will have a chance to experience the show up close and personal tonight at the Bijou, with the free screening of an episode due to air on TV later this month.

"MST3K" (as the diehard fans, or "MiSTies," call it) has a simple enough concept — comedian Joel Hodgson is stuck in a satellite shot into space by his mad scientist employers. He builds himself a couple of friends — unfortunately using crucial parts of his ship.

Subsequently, he becomes a pawn in a ruthless experiment, as his bosses force him and his robots to watch an endless string of terrible movies such as "Santa Claus Conquers the Martians" and "Attack of the Giant Leeches." He can't turn the films off — he used the control systems (or maybe just the TV remote) as parts for his robots, Crow and Tom Servo.

The up side is that Hodgson can feel free to say anything he wants about the films, and this is the apparent source of the show's popularity. The movies are truly terrible, but the commentary almost invariably makes them worth watching.

From word play and puns (Film: "What are the specs on this ship?" Audience: "Oh, those are dead bugs; they wipe right off.") to commentary on the production values ("Run away! The stock footage is erupting!") to actual physical interaction with the screen, Hodgson and the robots ruthlessly take the films apart like veterans at a "Rocky Horror Picture Show" screening. Cinematic, literary and cultural references fly fast and furious.

The show, as conceived by Hodgson, first aired on Minneapolis' KTMA-TV and was later picked up by Comedy Central. Now in its fifth season, the show is about to undergo a major change — right here on campus.

Tonight at 7 and 9, the Bijou will show "Mitchell," the episode of "MST3K" in which Joel Hodgson is replaced by head writer and frequent guest star Mike Nelson. "Mitchell" is also the name of the '70s cop film being dissected in the episode.

According to writer Frank Conniff, who plays Frank the mad scientist on the series and in the movie, fans will not be disappointed by "Mitchell," which is essentially a normal episode, but those who aren't familiar with the show should also have no problem understanding what's going on.

"Basically, it's just a regular show, except there's a plot," he said. "Joel and the robots watch a movie and make wisecracks, but there's a plot that weaves through the show about how Joel leaves."

"It's very much in the spirit of what we've been doing for the past few years."

Conniff doesn't believe that the changeover from Hodgson to Nelson will change "MST3K" much.

Hodgson is only one of a number of writers; the rest of the staff, including Nelson, Conniff, Kevin Murphy (voice of the robot Tom Servo) and Trace Beaulieu (who plays lead mad scientist Dr. Clayton Forester and does the voice of Crow), are all remaining on the show.

"The show is not going to change in terms of content and the humor," he said. "We're still in the process of evolving and developing (Nelson's) character, but I think people are going to like what they see." Audience members can get a first glimpse of that character tonight, but Conniff said they should be aware that Nelson will be developed over six episodes or so following "Mitchell."

What else should audiences expect? "I think I'd advise them to expect, hopefully, a funny show, and to keep an open mind."

Tickets for tonight's showings will be available to the public at the Union Box Office on a first-come, first-served basis.

Fellini recovering, ready to start next movie

Associated Press

Federico Fellini can't wait to get going on movie No. 21.

The 73-year-old director, recovering from a stroke that caused him to be bedridden last August, is hoping to return home Oct. 20 and begin work on his 21st feature film, "Block Notes of a Director: The Actor," in February or March, said producer Leo Pescarolo.

Fellini is eager to be back on the set, Pescarolo said Monday at the Mediterranean Film Festival in Valencia, Spain, the Italian news agency ANSA reported. He said Fellini told a friend that "this latest dramatic experience was the most nourishing of his life."

Fellini is recovering in Ferrara, 50 miles southwest of Venice.

After returning to Rome, he will continue therapy to improve the condition of his left arm. His left leg has recovered from the stroke.

Fellini won Oscars for his films "La Strada," "The Nights of Cabiria," "8 1/2" and "Amarcord."

Many of his other films, including "La Dolce Vita," have been widely acclaimed.

OPEN LATE NIGHT

Homecoming 1993

Welcome to Homecoming 1993!

This year marks the 82nd Anniversary of this unique celebration at The University of Iowa.

Jill Johnson
'93 Homecoming Director

Homecoming is a special time, when alumni, students, and Hawkeye fans gather to exhibit their enthusiasm and demonstrate their Hawkeye spirit. In one week Iowa will tackle Illinois with thousands of devoted fans cheering the Hawks on to victory. This year's theme, "I to I: Stare Down Between the States" is fitting since we are once again challenging such a close neighboring rival.

Students, faculty members, fans, and alumni can show their spirit by purchasing the official Homecoming badge. You'll find this year's design to be very different from those in past years - it's the only square badge in Iowa's history! In addition, a special edition badge commemorating the 50th anniversary of the World War II-era paper Homecoming badge has been commissioned by the Homecoming Council and the Iowa Hawk Shop.

Other new events include the "Hawk Walk" Flood Relief Fund Raiser, proceeds from which will benefit local flood victims as well as an improved Sports Night that emphasizes education.

The Executive Council would like to recognize alumna Dr. Lilia A. Abron, who has been selected as the 1993 Honored Guest. Her dedication and achievements are an inspiration to all of us.

There are many people, organizations, businesses, and departments who deserve recognition for their contributions and cooperation during Homecoming. These efforts are essential to making Homecoming 1993 truly successful. In closing, we encourage everyone to participate in this year's events and enjoy themselves to the fullest.

A message from the University President

Welcome back, Iowa alumni and friends — it's great to have you home! While the teams are getting ready for the "I - to - I Stare-down," you can relax "eye-to-eye" with old friends. We've planned a full slate of festivities to celebrate your return, capped off by the parade and the game. We hope you will enjoy all the events.

President
Hunter Rawlings III

We hope, too, you'll take some time just to wander around the campus and find out what's going on with all this construction.

Some benefits are easy to point out: the freshly gleaming dome of Old Capitol, some classrooms open in Pappajohn Business Administration Building, and a fine stretch of Cleary Walk completed in front of the Chemistry Building. In other places the temporary inconvenience is more obvious, as we recover from the Great Flood while making necessary repairs in uncertain weather. But if you come to a blocked street, just look for another way to get through. Our motto this year is "You can get there from here!"

No matter how much the campus may change, this is still your University of Iowa. You'll always be a part of the Iowa family, and we hope you'll come back as often as you can.

HOMECOMING COUNCIL MISSION STATEMENT

The purpose of the Homecoming Council is to create and coordinate programs that positively affect a diverse group of students, faculty members, and alumni, as well as the Iowa City community. One of the goals of this year's council is to encourage minority and international students to participate in Homecoming events. The council aims to meet the needs of students, alumni, and the University community by concentrating on unifying these different groups.

Homecoming is planned to incorporate as many exciting and innovative events as possible. There is a major emphasis on diverse programming and steps will be taken to ensure their completion. Homecoming is a long-standing tradition that attempts to bring a festive educational and cultural experience to The University of Iowa.

Coach Hayden Fry continues to strive for excellence

Fry sees academics as a top priority for 1993 Hawkeye football squad

by Roxanna Pellin
When Hayden Fry arrived at Iowa, the Hawkeyes hadn't had a winning season in 17 years. That was 15 years ago. Three Rose Bowl appearances later, Fry is now the winningest coach in the school's history and the fourth winningest active coach in Division I football, holding a .640 win percentage at Iowa. Fry has built a winning tradition at The University of Iowa that is being highlighted this week during the Homecoming celebration. His contributions to the Hawkeye football program will be on display Saturday when Iowa hosts Illinois at Kinnick Stadium in the teams' 55th meeting since 1899. The Fighting Illini lead the series 32-21-2. Fry is 8-6 against Illinois, coming off a 24-14 win at Champaign last season. But Fry said the program he's developed at Iowa is about more than winning football games. "Our philosophy is to put out the highest quality football team possible," he commented. "We build everything around trying to be first class. We have tried to establish a tradition of graduating athletes who conduct themselves as adults should conduct themselves and who play good football. It's a tradition we've built by taking pride in wearing the black and gold at The University of Iowa." Academics are a top priority for Fry's players. The graduation rate for Iowa's football team is 63.2 percent compared with a university

Coach Hayden Fry average of 59.1 percent. Last season's Iowa squad hosted three Big Ten Conference all-academic selections, seniors Jim Hartlieb and Matt Whitaker and junior Jason Olejniczak. A native of Odessa, Texas, Fry was selected as an all-state quarterback before he entered the Marines. After just two seasons as an assistant coach at Baylor and at Arkansas, he was named head coach at Southern Methodist University in Dallas where he led teams to Sun and Cotton Bowl appearances. He spent six years at North Texas State, compiling a 40-23-3 record. Fry said he's never regretted the move to Iowa. "They had approximately 20 seasons when they couldn't win half of their games," he stated. "It was obvious there was room for improvement. That's what we've done. We've made The University of Iowa football program one of the better ones in the country."

Marching band steps out

Drum major fulfills goal

by Brenda Ward
With a flash of brass and the crash of drums, drum major Eric Hojka and the Hawkeye Marching Band begin high-stepping to the center of Kinnick Stadium. Hojka, a UI senior, said the pre-game show is one of the most exciting things about marching band. He stated, "It's a great feeling to know you're leading the band onto the field. It's exciting because everyone is so hyped!" According to Hojka, being drum major is the fulfillment of a life-long goal. He explained, "I saw the Hawkeye Marching Band for the first time when I was in the fifth grade. Ever since then, I've wanted to be a part of this marching band." Being a drum major entails numerous responsibilities, according to Hojka. In addition to teaching new members the fundamentals of marching, Hojka also keeps rehearsals running smoothly. He added, "A lot of my job is showmanship and showing spirit on the field. I try to keep the crowd going and the band pepped up." The Hawkeye Marching Band has been a tradition at The University of Iowa since the early 1900's. As part of the Homecoming festivities each year, the band invites alumni members to play during both the parade and the Homecoming game. "I think it's really important to show spirit and tradition are still continuing in the marching band," stated Hojka. "We want the band to be especially good at Homecoming because all our alumni are back." Hojka said improvement and perfection are two of the band's goals. He commented, "We are better this year as far as precision on the field and overall sound. We really focus on putting on a good show." "All I can say is that I love my job and I'll be sad to have to give it up," said Hojka. "I hope whoever succeeds me will carry on the traditions of drum majors from the past."

Homecoming Honored Guest - Dr. Lilia A. Abron
 Engineering alumna encourages science education for children

Lilia A. Abron, 72 PhD, is the first African-American woman in the nation and the third woman at the UI to receive a doctorate in chemical engineering.

In 1978, after a teaching career at Tennessee State University, Vanderbilt University, Washington Technical Institute, and Howard University, Dr. Abron left academia and founded PEER Consultants, P.C., an environmental consulting firm headquartered in Washington, D.C. Today, she is president and chief executive officer of PEER, which has grown to include branch offices in ten U.S. cities and a staff of 120. Abron also serves as either the program manager or technical reviewer for all PEER projects, which generate revenues of more than $10 million annually.

A registered professional engineer, Abron is a member of several professional and technical societies, including the Water Environmental Federation, the American Society of Civil Engineers, the American Water Works Association, the Society of Sigma Xi, and the American Association of University Women. She also serves on the Board of Registration of Professional Engineers for the District of Columbia and the Engineering Advisory Board for the National Science Foundation.

Beyond her work at PEER, Abron has been active in a number of community organizations, including serving as president of the Washington, D.C., chapter of Jack and Jill of America, Inc., and as a board member for the Baptist Home for Children. She also plays handbells in the Angelus Bell Choir at her church.

In addition, Abron uses her business acumen and engineering expertise to promote science education in primary and secondary schools. Her company supports science fair projects by purchasing equipment and supplies for students, and Abron encourages PEER staff to work with children in their neighborhood schools. She serves as a mentor for several students each year.

Active on the lecture circuit, Abron visited the University of Iowa in February 1992 to urge UI engineering students to serve as role models and mentors for schoolchildren. "We must remember that every Ph.D. in engineering and every CEO of a major corporation was at one time in the second grade," she said.

Abron is a life member of the UI Alumni Association.

1993 Homecoming Honored Guest Dr. Lilia A. Abron

Editors note: The Homecoming Council extends its appreciation to The University of Iowa Alumni Association for providing Dr. Abron's biography. This biography was first published June 5, 1993 at the All-Alumni Luncheon where Dr. Abron received the Distinguished Alumni Achievement Award.

Californians and Homecoming help flood relief effort
 "Operation Payback" funds to alleviate local damage; help clean up

by Sarah Schiavone

The people of Santa Rosa knew they had a friend in need. Civic, business, and church leaders in the California community decided to team up with Iowa City leaders to form "Operation Payback" in an attempt to alleviate some of the local damage caused by recent flooding. Both communities are planning fund raisers.

Hawk Walk Organizer Brenda Marzen

As part of Iowa City's contribution to the program, the 1993 Homecoming Council has planned the "Hawk Walk" Flood Relief Fund Raiser for Sunday, October 10. Organizer Brenda Marzen commented, "The Homecoming Council felt it was fitting to give something back to the Iowa City community. We are proud to support Operation Payback through the Hawk Walk."

The three and one-quarter mile walk will begin at West High School at 1:00 pm and will end at Hubbard Park. The entire route is wheelchair and stroller accessible. Homecoming officials say the $5.00 per person entry fee will go directly to Operation Payback and will stay in the Iowa City area.

Santa Rosa leaders are holding a flea market to raise money for flood victims in Iowa City. They are also sending a truck full of building, cleaning, and school supplies to help those who have experienced damage due to the flooding. Operation Payback has set a goal of each Santa Rosa resident contributing one dollar to this flood relief fund. If this goal is reached, it will mean $123,800 for the Iowa City community.

The special relationship of sharing and support between Iowa City and Santa Rosa goes back over 80 years. In 1906, Santa Rosa experienced extreme financial and physical damage due to a massive earthquake. In the aftermath, a large portion of the support given to the Californians came from the Midwest and, more specifically, Iowa City.

Marzen commented, "We have been uplifted by the generosity of people we don't even know. We want to help their efforts as much as we can and hope that everyone will feel welcome to participate in the Hawk Walk."

Education becomes Sports Night focus

by Tim Howe

Sports Night 1993 will emphasize a diverse range of educational programming in addition to traditional activities.

The annual event will be held Wednesday, October 13, at 7 pm in the Robert A. Lee Recreation Center, 220 S. Gilbert Street.

"In past years, Sports Night was simply a time for children to get the autographs of University of Iowa athletes," commented Homecoming Recreation Director Erik Daley. "Children will still have the opportunity to talk to their favorite athletes but will also be exposed to some educational programming."

The Iowa City Police and Fire Departments will have presentations geared for children and McGruff the Crime Dog will be in attendance.

Representatives from D.A.R.E. (Drug Abuse Resistance Education) will present information. D.A.R.E., a police sponsored program, is active in seven local elementary schools.

"D.A.R.E. emphasizes the practical art of how kids can escape situations in which drugs are available," stated Daley.

Professional magician Stuart Beck and radio station KFMW 108 will provide entertainment. Daley says over 100 UI athletes, cheerleaders, and pom squad members will be signing autographs. Miss Teen Iowa and Herky will be in attendance.

"The kids who come to Sports Night are going to have a lot of fun and will learn a lot," said Daley. "We have the unique opportunity to provide a diverse mix of education and entertainment and expect hundreds of local children will take advantage of it."

Athletes' autographs will be only one feature of Sports Night 1993.

Badges bring uniqueness to Homecoming
Diversity of traditional buttons adds flavor to annual celebration

by Michelle Blacksmith

They've been round, square, metal and cardboard and have celebrated everything from tradition and spirit to Rose Bowls and "Superfans."
The Homecoming badge, a time-honored tradition at The University of Iowa, is here to stay. This year marks the 69th anniversary of this spirited tradition.
"Nowhere in the Big 10 is collecting as intense as in Iowa," said Herbert Staub, avid collector and author of The Price Guide to Iowa Homecoming Badges. "The low price range of the badges as well as the collections themselves set Iowa apart from the rest."
The first official Homecoming badge was produced in 1924. The badge was the only one to use the name "State University of Iowa" as the University's name and was sold to fans for ten cents each.

In 1943, due to the shortage of metal brought about by World War II, a cardboard badge took the place of the standard metal one. Heavy rainfall during the Homecoming football game destroyed the majority of the badges, making the 1943 badge the rarest and most valuable of all. To commemorate the 50th anniversary of this badge, the 1993 Homecoming Council and the Iowa Hawk Shop have commissioned a limited edition replica. Homecoming officials say that all replicas have been sold.
Numerous special edition badges have been commissioned throughout the years. Iowa made its first trip to the Rose Bowl in 1957. With this debut came the largest official badge ever issued.
There was no Homecoming celebration in 1972. The tradition of a spirit badge continued, however, emblazoned with "Old Capitol Week" across the top in place of a

1943 paper Homecoming badge

Homecoming slogan.
Other notable badges from the 1970s include the "Superfan" badge of 1975, proceeds from which went to the Iowa Foundation, and the "clicker" badge in 1976. The badge came with a "clicker" fans could use during exciting moments of the game. The badge read "The Hawks are Clicking."
The 1993 Homecoming badge is significant as well, according to Homecoming officials. Sales Coordinator Jamie Hunt explained, "These are the first metal badges to be square in shape. All other badges Homecoming Badges continued on Page 21

Homecoming supports sensitivity, pride Communication is seen as key to better understanding

by Tim Howe

Homecoming has traditionally been a time to unite with friends and family to enjoy the good feeling of being a Hawkeye.

This year's Homecoming against The University of Illinois will also focus on the celebration of diversity, according to student leaders.

"We played Illinois for Homecoming two years ago," explained Homecoming Director Jill Johnson. "Many Native American groups were offended by violent caricatures of the Illinois Chief mascot on window displays downtown."

To promote greater school unity, Homecoming officials say they will monitor Sweepstakes events such as window displays, the float competition, and Iowa Shout. Displays Coordinator Molly Mortensen commented, "Anything that does not promote Hawkeye pride in a positive way will not be permitted. Our only purpose is to promote spirit and pride."

Homecoming leaders say they have established a dialogue with Native American groups. "Our goal is to make students aware of the sensitivity surrounding this issue," said Johnson. "We plan to emphasize communication as a key to promoting a better understanding."

Tracey A. LeBeau is chairperson of the American Indian Student Association, an organization which objected to the violent use of the Illinois mascot two years ago. In a written statement she said, "The 'heritage' portrayed by this mascot is a general stereotype of an Indian that does not exist...Indian people Sweepstakes events such as the window displays downtown will focus on the positive aspects of Hawkeye pride.

THROUGHOUT THE WEEK OCT. 11 - 16

Children's Art Display
Robert A. Lee Recreational Center, 220 South Gilbert
Local school children will show their Hawkeye spirit by drawing their impressions of Homecoming. Illustrations will be judged during the week, and results will be announced at Sports Night, Wednesday, October 13.

History Display
IMU, 1st floor
Hawkeye pride is one thing that hasn't changed much over the years. This special display will emphasize age-old traditions observed during Homecoming week.

Iowa Corn Monument
Pentacrest, west side
The corn monument will once again be constructed by the Associated Students of Engineering. The corn monument is a 74-year tradition at The University of Iowa.

The Corn Monument, designed by students in the College of Engineering, is an Iowa Homecoming tradition.

Window Displays
Downtown Iowa City University of Iowa organizations will decorate the windows of downtown businesses in black and gold. This traditional show of Homecoming spirit will be judged as part of the Sweepstakes Competition on Monday, October 11.

Volleyball Tournament
UI Fieldhouse, North gym
October 10 - 12
Watch as some of the university's finest volleyball players serve, set, and spike their way to victory in the annual Homecoming tournament.

Sweepstakes Competition
The Homecoming Sweepstakes Competition gives student groups an opportunity to work together using their spirit and skills to compete with other organizations. Categories included in the competition are: button sales, volleyball, window painting, parade, Iowa Shout, and Big Wheel Races. All organizations are encouraged to participate.

SUNDAY, OCTOBER 10

Homecoming 1993

Schedule of Events

Sports Night

Robert A. Lee Recreational Center, 220 South Gilbert
7:00pm - 9:00pm
University of Iowa athletes will be only one part of this year's improved Sports Night! In addition to traditional favorites such as Herky, the Pom Pon Squad, and the athletes, this year's event will feature representatives from the Iowa City Police and Fire Departments and D.A.R.E. (Drug Abuse Resistance Education). McGruff the Crime Dog and Sparky will be in attendance, as will radio station KFMW 108. An emphasis on education should make Sports Night 1993 one of the very best in recent years. The first 400 children in attendance will receive free Sports Night booklets and door prizes will be given away to everyone.

Herky signs autographs at last year's Sports Night.

THURSDAY, OCTOBER 14

Noontime Jazz
Pedestrian Mall (Rain Location - IMU, Wheelroom)
12:00 noon - 1:00pm
Shade of Blue, a hot rhythm and blues band, will heat up Iowa City with diverse sounds ranging from funk to blues. Everyone is invited to enjoy the tunes on a beautiful Iowa autumn afternoon. This event is co-sponsored with the UI Alumni Association.

Big Wheel Races

Dubuque Street between Iowa and Washington Streets
2:00pm - 4:00pm
University of Iowa students participating in the Sweepstakes Competition will relive childhood glories as they compete for the title "Iowa's Fastest Bigwheeler."

An anxious Big Wheeler gets ready for the starting gun.

Iowa Shout

MacBride Auditorium
8:00pm - 10:00pm
All spirited University of Iowa organizations will get three minutes to show that their "Hawkeye Pride" is the best on campus. Singing, dancing, and acting are incorporated into the acts, which will be judged as part of the Sweepstakes Competition.

A University of Iowa fraternity and sorority demonstrate their spirit during Iowa Shout, part of the Sweepstakes Competition.
