U.S. guns for talks; Aidid invites cease-fire

Somalis protest U.N. involvement

Associated Press
NAIROBI, Kenya — Some 2,000 Somalis demonstrated in the capital of Mogadishu on Sunday in support of fugitive warlord Mohamed Farrah Aidid, a U.N. spokesman said.

Maj. David Stockwell, the U.N. military spokesman, said the demonstrators shouted slogans against the United Nations and the United States. He had no other details about the rally.

It coincided with the arrival in Mogadishu of Robert Oakley, a former Bush administration official who is seeking a diplomatic solution in Somalia and a negotiated end to the fighting between Aidid's militiamen and U.N. peacekeepers.

A U.N. official in Mogadishu, speaking on condition of anonymity, said Aidid's reported offer Saturday for a cease-fire appeared to be a way of opening dialogue with Oakley.

Militiamen loyal to Aidid have brazenly attacked the peacekeepers since June. At least 15 American soldiers were killed Oct. 3 in one of the fiercest battles yet. Two more bodies believed to be those of U.S. servicemen were recovered Friday, and one soldier was still unaccounted for.

Aidid's forces also took a beating in last week's 15-hour battle. The warlord said 315 Somalis were killed, and the Red Cross said more than 700 were wounded.

Oakley met Saturday with President Meles Zenawi of Ethiopia, who has a mandate from the Organization of African Unity to handle international negotiations on Somalia.

The official Ethiopian News Agency said Zenawi told Oakley that Ethiopia and its neighbors

Members of Bravo Company, 1st Battalion, 87th Infantry, board a C-5 Galaxy transport plane at Griffiss Air Base in Rome, N.Y. Sunday to

were pleased with the new efforts to reach a political solution. Oakley left Ethiopia on Sunday without making a public statement.

U.N. Secretary-General Boutros Boutros-Ghali will hold talks on Somalia Thursday in Cairo with Egyptian President Hosni Mubarak, the chairman of the Organization of African Unity, Egyptian Foreign Minister Amr Moussa said Sunday.

On Saturday, American and British media in Mogadishu reported that Aidid said he was ordering his militiamen to stop fighting.

The fugitive Somali leader, speaking on his clandestine radio, also said he would accept an investigation of the June ambush that killed 24 Pakistani peacekeepers, according to Cable News Network and the British Broadcasting Corp.

The United Nations accuses Aidid of masterminding the attacks on U.N. peacekeepers and has issued a warrant for his arrest, and despite the apparent cease-fire offer, Stockwell said the U.N. military mission had not changed.

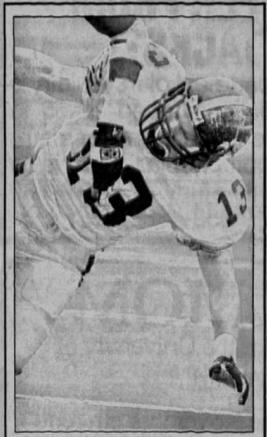

"Aidid is still vulnerable to detention," Stockwell said.

Earlier, another U.N. military spokesman said the United Nations had not received official notice of Aidid's offer.

MacDavitt said no fighting was reported overnight Saturday, but attributed the quiet to heavy rain rather than Aidid's order.

Pipe bomb expected cause of trailer park explosion

Iowa City police responded early Sunday morning to the sound of an explosion at the Hilltop Mobile Home Park.

When officers arrived at 1:30 a.m., they found the remains of what appeared to be a pipe bomb in a 1974 Ford Mustang owned by Kevin Jamieson, 133 Hilltop, according to the police report.

Initial reports indicated the explosion resulted in about $2,000 in damages to Jamieson's car and $100 in damages to a car which was parked nearby.

Explosion of fuel tanker in Texas kills 1, injures 10

CALVESTON, Texas (AP) — An oil tanker explosion felt four miles away killed at least one crew member Saturday night, injured 10 others and ignited a raging fire on board.

Two missing crew members triggered the 8 p.m. CDT blast near the mouth of the Houston Ship Channel while they welded a metal drum, said Coast Guard Capt. Paul Prokop. He said there was little hope the men would be found alive.

A second blast rocked the area about an hour after the first explosion, and authorities feared the tanker could sink with its roughly 365,000 gallons of diesel fuel.

Kmart must pay $11 million to victim of gun buyer

WEST PALM BEACH, Fla. (AP) — Kmart Corp. must pay more than $11 million to a woman who was left a quadriplegic when her drunken boyfriend shot her with a rifle he bought from the retailer, a jury has ruled.

"It was not so much that he was drunk," jury foreman Sean Callahan said. "There was negligence on Kmart's part for not training the salesperson."

The $12.5 million verdict against Kmart and Thomas W. Knapp, who shot Deborah Kitchen in the neck on Dec. 14, 1987, sends a message to gun retailers, said Kitchen's lawyer.

Nov. 1 deadline set for UI construction

Jude Sunderbruch
The Daily Iowan

Although still slowing traffic and inconveniencing some students, many construction projects around the UI campus are nearing completion.

UI Vice President for University Relations Ann Rhodes said the goal is to have most construction projects around the Pentacrest completed by Nov. 1. She cautioned, however, that delays could still arise.

"Those deadlines tend to slip," she said.

Rhodes said restoration efforts and foundation work on the Old Capitol, which have been hidden by large wooden walls, will be finished soon.

"They're renovating the exterior," she said. "They're working from the top down."

One of the tightest bottlenecks this fall has been the area surrounding the new John Pappajohn Business Administration Building. Sidewalks have recently reopened on the Clinton Street side of the building, and others will be completed soon.

WIPES OUT SUPPLEMENTAL FUNDS

Dean Jones settles UISA budget

Megan Penick
The Daily Iowan

After multiple revisions and controversial debates within the Senate, Dean of Students Phillip Jones revised the UI Student Association budget allocations, funding an additional $23,000 to student groups.

The extra funding dips into supplemental funds, leaving no extra money until further revisions in December. At that time, funding will be reallocated.

UISA President John Gardner said groups will now receive more equitable funding.

"I'm glad that after all the fuss everyone has had to go through, groups are finally getting the funding they need," he said.

UISA Vice President Micah Hobart said he is pleased the budgets have finally been approved.

"I'm glad it's done," he said. "I'm really thankful for the Office of Campus Programs and Services' help in scrutinizing the budget and making sure everything is done fairly and equitably."

American Indian Student Association member Shirl Snyder said her group had been wrongly accused of turning in its budget late, which originally caused the group to receive no funding. The revised version allocates AISA over $4,000.

"I am happy with what we've got," she said.

Health-Care Reform - Who, What, When...

With all the speeches, news stories and presentations to Congress about Clinton's proposed health-care plan, understanding it can seem as hard as filling out an insurance form. Here's the facts:

WHO is covered:

Everyone. Clinton's plan promises to provide every American citizen with a Health Security Card that guarantees a comprehensive package of benefits which can never be taken away.

WHAT is covered:

- preventive care (screenings, immunizations, mammograms, prenatal care)
- laboratory and diagnostic services
- mental health and substance abuse treatment
- doctor visits
- expanded home health care
- prescription drugs
- Hospice care/outpatient rehabilitation
- hospital services
- vision and hearing care
- emergency/ambulance services
- children's preventive dental care

WHEN coverage can be taken away:

The plan says never, even if a person changes jobs, loses her or his job, or moves. For those unemployed, the plan dictates that the federal government will pay for the insurance.

WHERE the money is coming from:

- Medicare and Medicaid savings
- savings from federal employee health-care costs
- reducing benefits of tax-free compensation
- sin taxes

HOW much people will pay:

The plan states that most individuals and families will pay a maximum of 20 percent of the average health-care premium in their area. Some will pay a little less, some a little more, depending on the health-care plan they choose. Special exceptions apply to the self-employed, independent contractors, part-time workers with unearned income, families with incomes below 150 percent of the poverty level and seasonal workers.

Students weigh merits of Clinton's health plan

Lynn M. Tefft
The Daily Iowan

A.J. Miller, a UI junior with diabetes, said although it is nearly impossible for him to get health insurance, he doesn't believe President Clinton's health-care plan is the right solution to the country's health-care problems.

He is very skeptical of Clinton's plan because of the cost.

"It may help people, but it's digging a hole for the government," he said. "And from the way they've laid it out, it's like they expect not to have the money right away."

Other UI students have offered mixed reviews of the plan.

Second-year medical student Shay O'Mara said in the end the plan will be a "watered-down" version of what Clinton is currently promoting.

"I don't think I'll be very affected by it because what we're talking about now isn't what's going to get passed," O'Mara said.

Drug and insurance companies will prevent the plan from surviving, he added.

"The medical industrial complex is second only to the military industrial complex in lobbying power in this country," he said.

"The plan is a good idea, but Clinton's not going to be able to do it."

One of Clinton's aims is to produce more primary care doctors, but O'Mara said contradictions in the medical education system need to be worked out.

"We're encouraged from the start to choose primary care over specialization, but we're taught by specialists and trained by specialists and have rare contact with primary care doctors," he said. "I'll still probably go into primary care or a general specialization like emergency treatment, but others will end up choosing specialization."

Pharmacy student Melissa Weg said she agrees with Clinton's goal of cost containment but feels he is targeting the wrong groups to cut costs.

"He's looking at the high cost of prescription drugs and ways to cut those costs," she said, "but we can't help that. The pharmaceutical companies are overcharging the

Expert politely shares manners tips

After serving as the United States' social secretary at embassies in Paris and Rome and chief of staff for Jacqueline Kennedy in the White House, Letitia Baldrige is definitely no novice when it comes to etiquette. Here she offers some insight into politeness on campus.

Steve Chamraz
The Daily Iowan

In her latest book, "Letitia Baldrige's New Complete Guide to Executive Manners," Letitia Baldrige writes about how to behave once established in the business world. Here, in an exclusive interview with The Daily Iowan, she speaks about how to relate with professors and how to get a foot in the door in one of the toughest job markets around.

DI: So, is it ever proper to refer to a professor by their first name?

Letitia Baldrige: Only if the professor has urged it on the student. If a professor says, "Hey, call me George" or "Call me Jacqueline," yes, but not otherwise and not in class around other people who are not allowed to call them by their first name. That means a privileged relationship usually. It really has to come from the professor.

DI: If a student misses a class or an exam, is it appropriate to phone their professor at their home, or jot them a note and have someone deliver it to them?

LB: Deliver a note the next day. Never bother a professor at home, unless the house is burning down. They deserve their privacy.

DI: What are the most important things a college student can do to make a good impression at a job interview?

LB: Be punctual and have a beautifully written résumé that's clean and doesn't have this morning's breakfast all over it. Make sure it's beautifully spelled and punctuated, which is rare these days. If you can, take it to someone that can page? LB: Possibly, yes. If you're a professor with published articles, attach those. But if you're a college student, make it short and snappy and keep it one page. I've seen résumés where they put down hobbies. They go into dandelion picking and bird watching by the river, the darndest things. They may think it's funny, but when someone is going through a pile of mail, tired and exhausted, the humor completely leaves the résumé.

DI: How relationship-oriented is today's business world? LB: Very. It always has been, even since George Washington picked if they went to school with the boss's son, but even so, you can catch up very quickly.

Once you're in the mainstream, once you get in and are hired, that's where the quality of the person gets in — not relationships. When I was young, anyone who was the son or a nephew of a bank president was virtually assured of a job for life. Boy, has that changed. The nephew of the president may get into another bank, but if he or she doesn't perform, they're out.

DI: It's that competitive? LB: It's that competitive. With all the downsizing going on, this is probably the most competitive marketplace this country has ever seen. I saw how it was when the boys came back at the end of World War II — how competitive that was. This is worse.

DI: What are the main rules of etiquette and manners?

LB: If you use common sense and you think about somebody else, you have good manners. You also have to inform yourself. Go to lectures, read books and notice how people you admire move through the world.

DI: Any final words of advice?

LB: Many people in college think kindness and good manners mean that you're not tough. I know that after all these years of observing, you can be tough as nails, make all the tough decisions, but you don't have to be an animal.

"Many people in college think kindness and good manners mean that you're not tough. I know that after all these years of observing, you can be tough as nails, make all the tough decisions, but you don't have to be an animal."

Letitia Baldrige, manners expert edit it beautifully, make it very shipshape. Hand it over precolated, if it's more than one page, which it shouldn't be.

After you greet the person, remain standing until the interviewer says "Here, take a seat." I've seen young people go to interviews and flop themselves down like Raggedy Andy in the chair next to the interviewer, while the interviewer is still standing at their desk.

DI: A résumé should only be one his pet troops to have around him at Valley Forge.

DI: Is it more relaxed now than it was, say, 10 years ago?

LB: There is much more upward mobility in the ranks if you have no pull. Young people who came from very humble backgrounds — with parents that never went to college, never finished high school — these kids are fabulous. They're graduating college and getting good jobs. They don't have the pull that perhaps someone would have Peter Gros of The Mutual of Omaha's "Wild Kingdom" holds a cougar cub at Tanger Outlet Mall in Williamsburg, Iowa, on Sunday afternoon. Gros spoke mainly to children and emphasized the message of recycling, rain forest protection and ecological awareness.

'Wild Kingdom' host tags CR kids

Prasanti Kantamneni
The Daily Iowan

He didn't wrestle any animals to the ground with his bare hands and Marlin Perkin's voice couldn't be heard in the background, but "Wild Kingdom" host Peter Gros still managed to get the attention of more than 400 people in Cedar Rapids this weekend.

Gros was at the Indian Creek Nature Center Sunday along with a cougar, parrot and other endangered species, trying to make people more aware of how much the environment affects our animal friends.

"We need to preserve the animals," Gros said to the room filled mostly with grade school-aged children.

The 45-year-old Gros is an environmental biologist from Duchesne County, New York. He said his interest in animals and their welfare began as a child.

"Like most kids, I grew up on 'Wild Kingdom,'" he said.

Unlike most kids though, Gros got his chance to become a part of the "Wild Kingdom" act in 1986. While giving a presentation with cougars on the Johnny Carson show, Gros was discovered by The Mutual of Omaha and was asked to join "Wild Kingdom."

Traveling to exotic countries and places — like Cedar Rapids — has become a routine part of Gros' profession. He explained that recently he visited Africa to research how changes in the environment have affected desert animals. Then, after the desert, it was off to visit the tundra.

"During the past month I've been to Lake Baykal in Siberia to study the fresh water marine life," Gros said. "Lake Baykal makes up 20 percent of the world's fresh water."

He said that environmental concerns over the rain forest in Venezuela had him on the road just last week.

"The rain forest has thousands of animals and trees which have not been identified yet," he said. "There are undiscovered trees which may offer cures."

Most of Gros' presentation was aimed to involve the younger members of the audience. Children are even given the opportunity to actually touch snakes and other animals to get a hands-on feel for his talks. His goal is to make people aware at an early age of the importance of preserving the environment.

"I talk to kids about what they can do to help the environment," he said. "I tell them about my recent trips and what is being done worldwide to save the environment."

Gros said that he believes that today's youth is much more aware of environmental issues and some of the things that they can do to help.

"When I was in Cincinnati a while ago, I was amazed with how much they knew," he said. "I'd say that over 90 percent of kids know the importance of recycling."

Horoscopes

Tory Brecht
Astral Observer

ARIES (March 21-April 19): The hog feed company you work for has decided to relocate you and your family to Tama. Upon arriving you notice the town has no motorized moving company. Break down and call Mule-Haul©, but watch out for ol' number seven, he's quite temperamental.

TAURUS (April 20-May 20): After seeing local schmaltz band ... these days perform Sunday at Mayflower Residence Hall, you decide they'd be perfect for your wedding. However, after listening to one of the band's tapes, your beloved's in-laws unequivocally deny permission. "If we wanted crap," your mom-in-law says, "we would squeeze your head."

GEMINI (May 21-June 21): This week you will be caught spitting on the sidewalk. A judge sentences you to spend a weekend with Miss Manners. After your first social faux pas you find the secret to her etiquette instructing success — S&M. That's right, Miss Manners is a dominatrix. Watch out for her pink and blue, "politically correct" bullwhip.

CANCER (June 22-July 22): Sensing that this town just doesn't have enough restaurants, you convince your uncle Billy Bo Ray from Arkansas to give you financial backing to put a store in Taco John's old location. Next week, Billy Junior's Roadkill Cafe will open to mixed culinary reviews and a picket by PETA.

LEO (July 23-Aug. 22): Realizing a liberal arts education won't get you weasel spit for a job, you enroll in Mavis Truck Driving School. After a week behind the wheel of the big rigs, you realize your stomach can't handle that much coffee and amphetamines. Try flying school — most airline pilots stick to martinis and scotch before they fly.

VIRGO (Aug. 23-Sept. 22): The Iowa International Socialist Organization and Young Americans for Freedom decide this week to end their verbal bickering and resolve their differences like the rational people they are — no holds barred mud wrestling. They decide to hold the event in your back yard. You agree to allow them because you've always wondered what Keith Chivetta looks like in a leotard.

LIBRA (Sept. 23-Oct. 23): Believe it! You are the next Michael Jordan. Sure, you're only 5'3" and 115 pounds, but you can FLY! (Of course, only if someone throws you.)

SCORPIO (Oct. 24-Nov. 21): Do something funny. The next time there is an eclipse tell a little kid five minutes before it happens that if he's bad, God will make the sun go away. Wait for his reaction as the sky darkens. Laugh.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22-Dec. 22): More controversy is on the way for the UI. You are offended in class by the film "Solon is Burning," which documents animal husbandry. You go to the administration to lodge a formal complaint. "What the hell do you think this is," you ask, "Iowa State?"

CAPRICORN (Dec. 23-Jan. 19): Your philosophy class degenerates into a shouting match as one of life's great unanswerable questions is brought up in class: Who would win in a fight between Worf of "Star Trek" and Chewbacca of "Star Wars"?

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20-Feb. 18): Jim (know what I mean Vern?) Varney is your real father.

PISCES (Feb. 19-March 20): This February, Hayden Fry celebrates his birthday. Start pitching in now to present him with something for the coach who has everything — an offense.

ANTI-ILLINI MOOD DISCOURAGED

Homecoming week to kick off with Hawkeye spirit activities

Terry Collins
The Daily Iowan

With the Fighting Illini on their way to town, the UI Homecoming Committee has filled the coming week with Hawkeye spirit activities.

This year's focus has changed since 1991, the last time Iowa played Illinois at homecoming, publications director Tim Howe said. The focus has moved away from anti-Illini toward Hawkeye spirit. The theme of the week is "I to I: The Staredown Between the States."

"The Homecoming Council wanted to promote campus pride in a positive aspect that does not include chopping someone's head off," he said.

The week's activities began Sunday with the first annual Hawk Walk, which raised money for flood relief. More than 50 students and community members participated in the 3.25-mile event. The activity raised an estimated $400. "The walk itself was the first of its kind in the efforts of giving back to the community," Howe said. "We hope this will be the start of a tradition."

Other Sunday activities included a volleyball tournament involving campus organizations in the UI Field House. The event concludes with the finals Tuesday at 6:30 p.m.

The annual coronation of the homecoming king and queen will take place today in the Triangle Ballroom of the Union at 4:30 p.m. Iowa City Mayor Darrel Courtney will give the king and queen keys to the city.

Sports fans will have the chance to meet and get autographs from their favorite UI athletes at the Robert A. Lee Recreation Center, 220 S. Gilbert St., on Wednesday from 7 to 9 p.m.

Howe said in addition to meeting local sport stars, fans will have an opportunity to greet representatives from the Iowa City police and fire departments.

The annual Iowa Shout competition will be Thursday at Macbride Auditorium from 8 to 10 p.m. The competition allows UI organizations three minutes to perform a cheer or skit supporting the Hawkeyes. At 9 p.m., the Alpha Phi Alpha fraternity will perform a step show.

The homecoming parade will be Friday at 6:15 p.m. The honored guest and distinguished alumna will be Lilia Abron, the first African-American woman to graduate from the UI with a doctoral degree in chemical engineering and the second in the country to do so. A pep rally in the Main Lounge of the Union will follow.

The homecoming fireworks show will be at 9:15 p.m. and the rock group Tina and the B-Side Movement will perform at 9:30 p.m. in the Wheelroom of the Union.

Former gang members visit I.C.

Terry Collins
The Daily Iowan

Three reformed gang members will visit Iowa City today to discuss their previous lifestyles in a presentation titled "View from South Central Los Angeles: The Future of Urban Communities."

The presentation, at 7 p.m. in Levitt Auditorium in Boyd Law Building, will feature Charles "Chopper" Harris, a native of South Central L.A. who joined a gang at the age of 11 and spent nine years in a California youth corrections facility for assault and robbery.

He became one of the first participants in former football great Jim Brown's "Amer-I-can" program, which is geared toward self-esteem and awareness. He is also a co-founder of the Amer-I-can Youth Club, with fellow speaker Gregory "Hi-T" Hightower.

Once a member of the Grape Street Crips, Hightower was jailed for 10 years for murder.

Hightower was selling shoes on a street corner with Ronald "Ray-Ray" Arnold, also a speaker, when they entered a joint venture with Brown and others to open a sporting goods store called The Playground.

Also a member of the Crips, Arnold has served jail time for numerous offenses including drug possession, assault, robbery and gun possession. He is also the co-owner of another sporting goods store called The Playground II.

Arnold is the founder of Member of the Other Side, which seeks to inform people about the plight of inner cities and encourage black economic and community development.

The visit is being organized by UI law Professor Adrien Wing, a native of Los Angeles who met the young men during a visit to her hometown after the riots in 1992.

Wing said she was moved by the actions of Harris, Hightower and Arnold.

"These individuals really impressed me with their life stories and their ability to turn their lives around," she said.

She said the men's efforts only reinforce an appreciation of what she has accomplished in her career.

"I have nothing but admiration and respect for those who live in their environment and are caught in the crossfire," she said. "In the case of these men, they have had hardened lives."

RISE IN STRESS PROBLEMS

Iowa to get $22 million in flood aid

Associated Press

DES MOINES — The Clinton administration is to release $65 million to Midwest states to help provide medical relief and social programs for flood victims, an Iowa senator says.

Democrat Tom Harkin, who heads a Senate Appropriations subcommittee on health and human services, said Saturday that an additional $10 million in assistance would be held in reserve.

He said Iowa would receive nearly $22 million, or a third of the initial assistance. The other recipients are Illinois, Kansas, Minnesota, Missouri, Nebraska, South Dakota and Wisconsin.

Harkin's office said a presidential announcement of the Health and Human Services Department grants was imminent, but President Clinton was in Connecticut for a Yale University reunion Saturday and there was no White House announcement.

Public health officials throughout the Midwest had been discussing such aid this past week at meetings in Des Moines with representatives of the federal health agency.

There were reports of rising drug and alcohol abuse and fears of growing psychological problems.

"Iowa has seen an increase in admissions for substance abuse and an increase in waiting for services," Janet Zwick of the Iowa Department of Health said at the meeting Friday.

of the flood — people flooded out or who lost income because their jobs were flooded out," she said.

Zwick said there was a 66 percent rise in drug and alcohol abuse admissions in residential programs in a flooded area of South Dakota and a rise of 40 percent to 50 percent in admissions to Minnesota detoxification programs after the floods.

Brian Flynn, chief of emergency services for the U.S. Department of Health and Human Services, said at the conference that funds would be available to help farmers cope with floods and poor harvests.

"We know from past farm crises that when there's an economic catastrophe that affects agriculture there is a psychological impact," Flynn said.

"We did a survey of the people in treatment statewide, and 19 percent of them were addicted because

Local schools depend on grants

William Pepper
The Daily Iowan

Government cutbacks on education budgets are forcing school districts to rely more heavily on special grants for funding. During the 1993-94 school year, the Iowa City School District has received more than $1 million in grants.

According to a report issued by Ron Mirr, grant writer for the Iowa City Community School District, during the last school year the district received $685,000 to fund programs such as special courses in foreign language and public service programs related to child care and substance abuse.

The majority of the grants come from state sources, particularly the Iowa Department of Education and the Iowa Department of Human Services.

"We've just started looking for grants," Mirr said. "We have a very good program here. It's a very easy district to sell."

He said funding sources are attracted to Iowa City because the district is always looking for ways to improve education. Teachers create innovative programs and work with "at-risk" children and fami-

"We have a very good program here. It's a very easy district to sell ... We make it easy for funding sources to say 'Iowa City knows what it's doing, let's give them the money'" lies, which include dropouts, students involved in substance abuse or students not living up to their full potential.

"We make it easy for funding sources to say 'Iowa City knows what it's doing, let's give them the money," he said.

Hills Elementary School, traditionally one of the largest recipients of grants, received 37 percent of them during the last school year and 44 percent this year.

Paula Altmeier, project director for the Hills Before and After School Program, said Hills has received attention because of its unusually high population of families living at or below the poverty level. She said the fact that last year over 39 percent of the students qualified for free or reduced lunches is an indicator of this situation.

The Before and After School Program recently received a renewed $10,000 grant from the Iowa Department of Human Services.

Altmeier said because underprivileged children are at a greater risk of getting in trouble academically or personally, funding sources hope the grants they provide to the school will help minimize that risk.

GROWING SEASON HALTED

Weekend frosts add insults to injuries

Roger Munns
Associated Press

DES MOINES — A killing frost ended the growing season for at least the northern half of Iowa early Sunday and sounded the starting gun for a harvest predicted to be mediocre at best.

"We definitely have a frosty morning," said Pete Wenstrand, 41, who farms 1,500 acres of beans and corn near Essex in southwestern Iowa.

Wenstrand, newly elected president of the National Corn Growers Association, said most of his plants were safe from frost, but he said the frost was sure to damage corn that got a tardy start because of wet weather.

He cautioned farmers to properly handle corn that's wet or damaged, then added, "All I can say is, I think everyone is looking forward to 1994."

All overnight temperatures were at freezing or below across the state. Mason City got down to 25, while it was 26 at Spencer, 27 at Sioux City and at Cedar Rapids, and 28 at Waterloo, Dubuque, Ames and Fort Dodge. Larger cities in the southernmost tier of counties also reported subfreezing temperatures, including Lamon, Burlington and Ottumwa all checking in at 30.

Most plants will die if the temperature falls to 28 or below, but slightly warmer temperatures can damage plants as well.

"We've got a real good frost across the state," said National Weather Service forecaster Dan Smith.

"We had a fairly decent rainfall on Friday to precede the cold air. Of course, we're pretty used to that. That system moved off and brought down the Canadian air."

"Then the skies cleared and the wind diminished; ideal conditions for a freeze. The center of the high pressure area was over the southwestern corner of the state, which allowed the winds to die down," he said.

The service had issued a frost warning Saturday, giving homeowners a chance to preserve the petunias and impatiens for a while, but there was no saving the cash crops in the countryside.

Luckily, said Wenstrand, the state was blessed with several excellent drying days last week.

As of last Monday, only half of the corn crop was rated safe from frost, according to the Iowa Agricultural Statistics report. Last year, 86 percent was safe, and in normal years, when farmers can get into their fields and plant on time, 96 percent of the corn is mature. Soybean progress is also behind normal.

The next report is scheduled to be released this afternoon.

Prior to Friday's rain, there was at least a week of mostly dry weather, with two days of temperatures in the 80s and plenty of wind to dry out crops.

"Every day you have before a frost makes a difference in expense of drying, harvestability and quality," said Wenstrand. "We needed all we could get."

He said there was "considerable harvesting" in his area throughout the past week, where the frost did little damage.

In the northern corn belt, he said, "This is it, they know this is the end. They'll have to harvest what they can. It does take extra effort if you're harvesting wet corn. And if there are quality problems, people need to handle the grain with care."

He said private forecasts are showing the corn harvest will be lower than the some 7.3 billion bushels projected last month by the U.S. Department of Agriculture. "The next U.S.D.A. forecast is for Tuesday, and we think the number will be lower than last month."

Rally to mark Coming Out Day

Holly Reinhardt
The Daily Iowan

Members of the gay, lesbian and bisexual community will be wearing pink and black felt triangles with pride today on the Pentacrest, in celebration of National Coming Out Day.

The rally, scheduled for 12:20 p.m., is sponsored by the UI Gay, Lesbian and Bisexual People's Union. The GLBPU is also encouraging heterosexual community members to attend.

"Anybody who is supportive of gay, lesbian and bisexual lifestyles, or a member of the community, is encouraged to attend," GLBPU co-moderator Jay Larson said.

He said the rally is important because it allows members of the gay, lesbian and bisexual community to affirm themselves, show their numbers and let "closet" gay, lesbian or bisexuals see there are others like them.

Today and throughout last week, GLBPU distributed pink and black felt triangles to be worn by members of the community. Triangles stating "ally" are also available for heterosexuals who support the gay, lesbian and bisexual lifestyle.

"The triangles are a symbol of pride and remembrance for the community," Larson said.

Troy Larsen, editor of GLBPU's newsletter The Triangle, said heterosexual support is important.

"GLBPU is thanking those who don't consider themselves queer, but are queer friendly," he said.

Larsen said making the community visible is important.

"We can't be counted as a minority unless we stand up," he said. "Gay discrimination is the last that hasn't been addressed as bad discrimination. It isn't just a choice issue."

GLBPU is prepared for any problems or negative response to the rally. Larson said people have been set aside to take care of anything in case problems should arise. However, he does not foresee violent protests.

"We don't expect any more than signs and verbal harassment, but we are prepared," Larson said.

Larson expects 30-50 people to attend the rally.

The GLBPU has planned other activities in conjunction with National Coming Out Week.

The Bijou will show a variety of films centering around gay, lesbian and bisexual issues.

Will your company grow as fast as you do?

Almost every company's recruiting ad promises you rapid growth. But before making any decisions, ask them how fast they're growing. After all, you're going to have trouble moving up if your company isn't.

Over the last five years, while economic conditions have stalled many organizations, Andersen Consulting grew on the average of 20% per year.

Compare that figure to any other firm you're considering. It could be the difference between getting ahead. And banging your head.

Iowa deputy killed while directing traffic

Associated Press
DES MOINES — A sheriff's deputy diverting traffic from the scene of a fatal accident was struck by a passing vehicle and killed north of Des Moines this weekend. Authorities are awaiting laboratory reports of blood tests for clues in both of the deaths. The deputy was identified as Kipton Hayward, 40, a 10-year veteran of the Polk County Sheriff's Department. He is survived by his wife and two children. James Dean Smith, 31, of Polk City, Iowa, was arrested on a charge of vehicular homicide in Hayward's death, the Polk County sheriff's office said. He posted $13,000 bond Saturday afternoon and was released from jail. The Polk County sheriff's office gave this account:

• Hayward was assisting the State Patrol with traffic control at the scene of a fatal accident along a combined stretch of Interstates 35 and 80 just east of the U.S. 69 overpass.
 • About 2:10 a.m., Hayward was diverting traffic from the interstate onto U.S. 69 when he was struck by a pickup truck driven by Smith.

• Hayward was flown by helicopter to Iowa Methodist Medical Center in Des Moines, where he was pronounced dead.
 • Smith was stopped just east of U.S. 69, arrested and taken to the Polk County Jail in Des Moines. Bond was set at an initial hearing Saturday morning and arraignment was scheduled for Nov. 2.

SOMALIA

Concocting a warlord

President Clinton's curious need to identify himself by analogy to his predecessors has reached a point of dangerous absurdity. In deciding to reinforce the American presence in Somalia while simultaneously promising to withdraw the whole contingent in six months, he begs an obvious, yet no less potent, comparison to the failed American approach to Southeast Asia 30 years ago. Without irony, he is pursuing an interventionist policy embarrassingly similar to the one he opposed when he was merely a civilian and his political power was naught. No longer an admirable, if complicated, humanitarian relief effort, our mission in Somalia has been redefined in tenuous political terms. The 5,400 troops being sent to Somalia are now pledged not to feed starving and powerless people, but to lay the groundwork for a government and preserve the United States' image as an unflinching international leader.

At the outset of the American involvement in Somalia, it was made clear that, although the country was in an advanced state of anarchy, action was being taken in the sole interest of securing the United Nations' supply lines to the countryside. The merciless influence of warlords was known. After all, they were the ones stopping the distribution of food to the starving. Even and especially in light of that knowledge, the mission was humanitarian. But when the warlords persisted in their aggression, the mission was transformed into one of unbidden international law enforcement. In spite of the general calm of Somalia's rural areas, we perceive a state of war there. In spite of his relatively small sphere of influence in Mogadishu, we perceive Gen. Aidid as a formidable enemy. We are escalating hostilities with a petty mobster whose only claim to power is that we think he already has it.

None of this reflects well upon America's ability to distinguish serious global military threats from localized annoyances. The miserable American response to widespread, systematic devastation in Bosnia crippled our reputation far more than an immediate withdrawal from Somalia would. What we lack in Somalia and had in Bosnia was a justification for offensive military action. The collapse of Yugoslavia was the beginning of shocking, interminable violence that needed intervention to be calmed; the violence in Somalia is largely due to our continued presence there and the increasing ambiguity of our purpose in staying. If America creates for itself a protracted military engagement in Somalia — a war, in other words — its reputation will suffer horribly as the futility of the situation becomes clear. We will not be admired for ignoring a holocaust in favor of a gang war.

If Bill Clinton is really concerned for America's image in the international community, he will admit the error of his decision, withdraw all Americans from Somalia and encourage the other nations involved to do the same. His current approach will not work, though it will ensure that we never escape the memory of Vietnam, the evocation of which is already a cliché (albeit a valid comparison). Reputation is not derived from the naked use of force. It is built upon careful, far-sighted policies, consistent action and a commitment to justice. If force is used, it should be used with the intention of preventing its continued employment. Aidid is not Hitler, not Milosevic. He needs to be subdued, of course, but not at the expense of human life because his power does not justify the cost. Go ahead and arrest him and stop his faction. But recognize that that is a mission for a small military outfit, not the collective strength of 33 countries. The hunt for Aidid is a job we made up for ourselves, without the pleading of the Somali people who continue to starve, not concerned about the power games being played out in one city far away from the famine.

And the hunt is doomed.

True wildlife conservation

To the Editor:

Recent articles in the press have stated that efforts to seed 40 acres for winter wheat for goose grazing have been washed out and that vegetation for waterfowl to eat is way down this fall due to the flooding.

What a wonderful opportunity for all those whose tools of conservation are guns, bows and traps — Ducks Unlimited, Pheasants Forever and Isaac Walton leaguers — to really be conservationists. Add up the cost of a hunting trip — license, ammo, gun, lures, duck calls, tree seats, etc. — and contribute that sum to a fund to help feed the wildlife whose habitat has been destroyed by flooding. Prove that you really do care about wildlife by declaring and enforcing a hunting moratorium for this season.

Self-clarification

To the Editor:

Because I am a graduate student in English, I feel particularly obliged to correct my grammar. The "three-way relationship" referred to in the opening sentence of my guest opinion in the Oct. 5 issue of The Daily Iowan is a relationship "among" (not "between") COGS, CSS and the administration. I didn't notice my error until I saw it in print.

I encourage my students to correct and revise their papers. I would appreciate the opportunity to do the same thing. Thanks.

Preaching to the converted can help

Some days, discretion does indeed constitute the better part of valor, but on others, it pays to scrutinize the component parts of valor more closely than such truisms allow. Feeling smug is a reliable gauge of our need to look closely before toeing the discreet line, and it is easy to feel smug about something like

National Coming Out Day. Reasons to feel smug may include, but are not limited to, the following:

- 1) Hey — I'm not gay. What do I care?
- 2) I don't have to take part. Everyone knows I'm gay, and it's cool. Life is good.
- 3) I am above all this political crap. It makes me sick.

Those are not awful reasons to ignore the day. Each is fairly benign, and I certainly won't irritate you by repeating the familiar litany of the risks of benign indifference. You're at least that smart, or you wouldn't be here.

What I would like to do is outline why I'm not remaining indifferent today, and why I am urging you not to surf through the day in a state of cool indifference, either.

For all the comfort you and I may feel with issues of sexuality, they obviously make a lot of people's skin crawl. Whether explicit material shows a heterosexual woman exhibiting her sex drive without remorse or celebrates the sexuality of gay men and lesbians, people of a certain stripe can be counted on to oppose its unrestricted creation, reading and viewing. These days heterosexual men, formerly considered lords of all they surveyed, are also in the position of having robust expressions of their sexuality looked upon with suspicion by the same people who oppose gays and think women should be silent and submissive. So it's nothing to be complacent about: People are trying to elbow our privacy rights, artistic freedom and full range of public human sexual expression off the board.

This needs to stop. It needs to stop for many reasons, sensible reasons steeped in values that can only be called traditional. Let's look at some of the most important.

Local politics is a prime example. Gay candidates can get elected, provided they don't admit to being gay during the race. Such honesty is apparently considered an attempt to gain unfair advantage over heterosexual opponents.

Traditional Value 1) Avoid waste. Nothing wastes people faster than anxiety, and nothing serves to make people anxious faster than having to fear a secret part of themselves. Why keep secrets? Open a newspaper. Listen to the word on the street. Grab a clue. People are still getting jerked around for being queer.

Local politics is a prime example. Gay candidates can get elected, provided they don't admit to being gay during the race. Such honesty is apparently considered an attempt to gain unfair advantage over heterosexual opponents. This is not a dream. Right here in the Sodom of eastern Iowa, a woman who ran for a seat on the City Council was accused of "pretending to be a lesbian in order to 'curry political favor.'" Whose favor are we talking about here? It is, of course, a ludicrous assertion. But that doesn't matter. The power of such word on the street is not metered. We can never know what it is. The point is that word on the street, when it reaches you, needs to be directly confronted with a different kind of word, a word that holds the speaker accountable for such shabby thinking.

People are also quick to use the proverbial broad brush to paint the words "single issue" on gay candidates. This is hogwash. What is single issue is the focus of those who would deny to openly gay politicians the same breadth of interest outside their personal lives and public rights that heterosexual candidates are assumed to have! But enough of politics.

Traditional Value 2) Try to be decent, would ya? Don't pick on people just because they're different from you, or even because they think you have a cute butt. Support them, and support their good taste in butts, then tell them you're a "heterosexual ally, but thanks anyway."

So, it's National Coming Out Day. Many of us already have, which could make it a tempting snoozer, as noted above. Don't let it. There is a gathering at 12:15 p.m. today on the good old, much-gathered-upon Pentacrest. I encourage you to be there. Gay, straight or proudly standing with both feet planted in both places.

If you don't like the shooting that's been aimed at abortion providers recently, take a few minutes and show up to support others who are often targets of bullets fired from the same guns. If you don't like it that two students can protest a film in an art colloquium class and bring outside pressure to bear on this university such that we try to enforce faculty anticipation of student sensitivity in creating curricula, show up on the Pentacrest at 12:15. If you don't care for the judgmental morality Pat Robertson says you must have if you are Christian, come on down.

National Coming Out Day needs to be expanded. Today, there are as many reasons not to remain discreetly seated in our offices or dorm lounges as there were to preach to the converted by writing this column. So come on out to the Pentacrest today at 12:15. Just to show the narrow-minded of the world that we know who they are, we see what they're trying to do and they're not going to be able to pick us off piece by piece to do it.

Kim Painter preaches to the converted and otherwise Mondays on the Viewpoints Page.

Interference with budget will harm student groups

Hallelujah, the budget crisis has been solved by Dean of Students Phillip Jones. Faster than a speeding bullet and freer with the cash than SABAC Chairman Keith Chiavetta, Dean Jones has managed to solve all of the UI Student Association's budgeting problems by spending the student body into a deficit and wiping out supplemental funding.

The problem with the budget, as with all budgets, was that there wasn't enough money to make everyone happy. (If there was enough money to satisfy everyone, we wouldn't need a budget or rules.) Chiavetta had the unenviable job of distributing the money within the constraints of the UISA Constitution. No one could have devoted more time and energy than Chiavetta did, nor could anyone have come up with a better or more fair outcome.

Obviously, with the limited resources Chiavetta had at his disposal, he couldn't please everyone. Those who didn't get their way began to make charges of "racism," "arrogance" and "white-right conspiracy" against Chiavetta with no other foundation than the fact that Chiavetta is a well-known and outspoken conservative.

Most vocal among the self-righteous peddlers of this silly conspiracy theory is Moyisi Majeke, who belongs to three black student groups. Majeke is infuriated because the groups he belongs to did not get all the funding that they asked for. The Black Student Union asked for nearly $34,000 — more than twice what any other student group asked for and more than one-quarter of the funds available to the hundreds of Class III student groups. Another group Majeke is involved with, the African American World Studies Association, turned in its budget request in the second week of July. The budgets were due Feb. 27, more than four months prior to when Majeke deigned to turn the AAWSA's budget in.

Worse than the behavior of individual black student groups is their behavior as a group. The six recognized, black student groups asked the UISA for more than $75,000, or approximately 60 percent of all the money available to student groups.

Those who didn't get their way began to make charges of 'racism,' 'arrogance' and 'white-right conspiracy' against Chiavetta with no other foundation than the fact that Chiavetta is a well-known and outspoken conservative.

The arrogance here is not that of Chiavetta, but of the student groups who think they are so important that they should get all of the money they want and not have to bother filing their paperwork correctly or on time.

Black student groups are not the only culprits in this disaster; many other groups turned in their budgets late and demanded outrageous sums from the UISA. The nine Asian student groups asked for more than $26,000, and two of them turned in their budgets late. If you add together the budget requests of liberal, black, American Indian, Muslim and homosexual student groups, there is no money left over for academic, community service or conservative groups. That is arrogance.

Dean Jones' response to this problem is typical of the knee-jerk liberal: Throw money at the problem. Jones has accepted the budgets of all the groups which turned in their budgets late, to the tune of $14,000. He also handed out an additional several thousand dollars to his favorite liberal groups, like the Lesbian Alliance, which received a $1,700 bonus from the dean, and the Black Student Union, which got an additional $2,300.

As a result of Dean Jones' meddling, the UISA is now going to run a $23,000 deficit and have no money available for the supplemental funding of student groups. Supplemental funding is what allows the UISA and the student groups to remain flexible throughout the year as conditions change and new issues become important to the different groups. Dean Jones' ill-conceived interference has robbed the student government of the flexibility that would have led to more diverse and more relevant programming throughout the year.

The ultimate authority behind the UISA, Dean Jones, is supposed to provide the maturity and impartiality that student politics sometimes lacks. Unfortunately, Dean Jones has fallen to the level of padding the wallets of his political friends and allies. Loud-mouthed student politicians can behave that immaturely without the supervision of Jones.

Chiavetta, allegedly a self-serving politician with few, if any, ethics, has funded conservative student groups with only $4,000 — less even than the UI Environmental Coalition received. Favoritism didn't appear in this budget until Dean Jones interfered.

The worst outcome of Dean Jones' interference is the fact that next year the UISA will be unable to produce a budget at all. Why should minority student groups bother to turn in their requests on time when all they have to do is accuse SABAC of racism to cause Dean Jones to ride to their rescue? How will academic and conservative groups get fair access to funding when they can't play the race card?

Dean Jones created this mess. I hope he's prepared to live with all the headaches it's going to create. David M. Mastio's column appears Mondays on the Viewpoints Page.

Haitian PM: Democracy must be restored

Michael Norton
Associated Press

PORT-AU-PRINCE, Haiti — If the United Nations mission fails to restore democracy in this Caribbean country, hordes of Haitians will flee toward the United States, Prime Minister Robert Malval warned Sunday.

He spoke after a night of heavy gunfire in the capital, a stark reminder of the volatile political passions that many fear will force the U.N. peacekeepers into fighting, as has happened in Somalia.

A U.S. warship carrying hundreds of GIs to take part in the U.N. mission is to arrive today. A small contingent of U.S. and Canadian peacekeepers arrived last week.

The U.N. troops are part of a U.N.-brokered plan to restore democracy to the country more than two years after President Jean-Bertrand Aristide, Haiti's first freely elected leader, was deposed in a military coup.

After Aristide's ouster, countless Haitians began fleeing by boat for the United States. U.S. military ships began intercepting them and returning them to Haiti, sparking outraged criticism that Washington was turning away refugees of political oppression.

If the U.N. plan fails, "more and more people will leave the island. It will no longer be a problem for Haiti. It will be a problem for Florida," Malval told reporters, speaking from the porch of his home.

"Even the U.S. 6th Fleet will be unable to prevent Haitians from fleeing a less and less hospitable land," Malval said.

Malval's message attempted to show Americans, more wary of military involvement following the mounting American deaths in Somalia, the domestic costs of a failure of international will in this military-dominated nation.

He rejected comparisons with Somalia, asserting that 90 percent of Haitians — inside and outside the military — wanted to restore democracy here. However, his transition government has received little cooperation from the Haitian army, and civilian gunmen tied to the military have been blamed for a series of politically related killings in the past two months.

More than 200 people have died in almost-nightly shooting attacks scheduled return of Aristide.

The U.S. amphibious warship Harlan County headed toward Haiti on Sunday, carrying military engineers, medics and civil affairs protect the arriving American troops — a greater concern following the attacks in Somalia — the Pentagon said Friday that the Harlan County will remain off Haiti's coast, ready for possible rescue missions. Another warship, the USS Fairfax County, is to arrive Oct. 20 carrying hundreds more troops and tons more material.

Malval said Sunday he had signed a 27-page guideline for the mission with U.N. envoy Dante Caputo. Malval rejected assertions by coup supporters that the mission would evolve into a military occupation, adding that it aims "at helping us to join the rest of the world."

Worn down by a worldwide petroleum embargo and other economic sanctions, Haiti's army agreed in July to a U.N. plan in which Cmdr. Raoul Cedras and Police Chief Joseph Michel Francois would leave their posts and Aristide would return by Oct. 30.

"Many friends and observers are very pessimistic, but we are not. Haitians refuse to identify with those who maintain them in poverty and terror."

He disclosed that Western Hemisphere foreign ministers were planning to fly here Oct. 30 for the specialists, along with troop trucks, bulldozers, earth movers, tents and rations for a six-month mission. Also to be unloaded are M-16s, sidearms and ammunition, which U.S. officials said would only be used in self-defense.

The force is to total 1,600 troops.

Six hundred American troops have been committed to the mission, which has been the subject of a debate within the Pentagon. To

U.N. aid convoy halted by Serbs; 150,000 stranded in 'black hole'

Tony Smith
Associated Press

SARAJEVO, Bosnia-Herzegovina — Serbs stopped trucks laden with food and medicine Sunday from reaching two north Bosnian towns where tens of thousands of Muslims have been trapped for months, U.N. officials said.

It has been more than 100 days since the towns of Maglaj and Tesanj have seen an aid convoy. Relief workers say at least 150,000 civilians in the area have been pinned down by Serb and Croat artillery.

Ray Wilkinson, a U.N. relief official in Sarajevo, said the 24-truck convoy returned to the northern Serb stronghold of Banja Luka after "failing to receive final approval from the Serbs."

He said the convoy carrying 250 tons of food and medicine would try again today.

Wilkinson called the area "a black hole" last week because no relief workers from the United Nations or other agencies are there to report on conditions.

Maglaj and Tesanj are about seven miles apart in a heavily contested area about 45 miles north of Sarajevo. Food has been air-dropped there in recent weeks, but many of the bundles reportedly have fallen out of reach.

State-run Bosnian radio said Serb artillery was firing on people who ventured out to recover aid packages. Those reports could not be confirmed.

Bosnia's war began 18 months ago when Serbs rebelled over a vote by the republic's Croats and Muslims to secede from Serb-dominated Yugoslavia.

The United Nations began resuming medical evacuations from Sarajevo on Sunday after suspending the program Friday, claiming it was being abused for political ends. U.N. officials had been negotiating most of last week to resume the evacuations.

The impasse apparently was broken with an agreement to evacuate the notorious former head of the Bosnian military police, Ismet Bajramovic, to Ancona, Italy.

Bajramovic, considered a war criminal by many Serbs, needs surgery to remove a bullet that lodged in his heart during an assassination attempt. Under the agreement, at least three Serbs needing specialized treatment were to be evacuated in exchange for granting the Muslim-led government's request to airlift Bajramovic.

Bajramovic gained notoriety early in Bosnia's war for his fighting proven on front lines around Sarajevo. Later, as military police chief, he ran the city's main prison and frequently was accused of mistreating prisoners.

CONSTRUCTION

responsible for the building and several other projects on campus, said the interior of the new business school should be completed before classes finish this semester.

"We should be done pretty close to Thanksgiving," he said. "We're pretty well on track."

One wing of the building is already being used for classes, and another will be finished soon. After that, furniture will be moved in and a transfer from Phillips Hall will take place.

"The plan is to occupy it over break," Rhodes said.

Students affected by the construction along the narrow walkway between the residence halls and the Pentacrest are looking forward to the completion of the projects. UI freshman Melissa Wirtjes said the construction has caused her delays.

"As far as walking to classes, it takes more time," she said.

UI freshman Michael Nelson said he is glad the UI is making improvements, but added that he will appreciate the convenience of not having to dodge building projects.

"The construction was kind of a hassle during the first week of the semester, but now that the business building is done, it's no problem," he said. "I do appreciate them putting up new facilities."

Wirtjes agreed that the long-term benefits are worth any current inconveniences.

"I think it'll be a lot nicer when it's done," she said.

Several new projects are beginning that will take the place of those being completed. Wurzer said the new pharmacy building and an expansion at the UI Power Plant will be started as soon as delayed utilities relocations are finished.

Once water mains, power lines and other connections are moved, initial efforts will begin at the pharmacy site.

"We hope to start the foundation around the first of November," he said.

Other construction around campus includes the new eye center next to the UI Hospitals and Clinics and an addition to the UI Recreation Building. The eye center project suffered significant delays when rain filled the recently excavated site this summer.

BUDGET

Gardner said 22 of the student groups had problems that could not be explained. Thirteen of those groups were minority organizations.

"In Dean Jones' opinion there was a pattern that was disadvantageous to minority groups," he said. "My concerns about unfairness have been confirmed. Hopefully, now we can investigate it and cure the problems."

Gardner said there will be an investigation into the Student Association Budgeting and Auditing Committee's actions in regards to the Class III student budgets.

"I'll be giving the Student Judicial Court a letter on Monday formally asking them to review the past and present SABAC committees," he said.

Moyisi Majeke, president of the African Student Association, said an investigation is necessary.

"I hope they will do that investigation. The budget as a matter of policy was extremely discriminatory," he said. "It's not that we want to start a fight, but I don't feel comfortable just to let the issue go just because some groups got funding."

Even after the funding, Majeke, who has been extremely vocal for all minority organizations throughout the fiasco, said his group does not have adequate funding.

"It is not fair that we have to run the gauntlet every year," he said. "They have been increasing fees for everything every year, but each year they are decreasing our funding."

SABAC Chairman Keith Chiavetta had no comment about the revised budget.

UISA financial adviser Cory Muench said he and Chiavetta have been working on student groups' budgeting contracts and they should be done by Wednesday.

"We're focused on getting groups their money so they can spend it and get their programs going," he said.

HEALTH PLAN

pharmacies, and they have to make up for it somehow." She feels more limitations should be placed on the pharmaceutical industry.

Weg is also concerned that local health maintenance organizations, or HMOs, could limit patients' freedom to choose which doctor they want to see for treatment.

"If you choose a doctor who isn't part of the HMO, you'll end up paying out of your own pocket," she said. "People will end up going to whomever (the HMOs) want."

Student Luke Greenwalt thinks the health-care problem in the United States is overexaggerated.

"I keep hearing about the 37 million people who are uninsured, but it's never been backed up one way or the other," he said.

He said he opposes the plan because he feels certain groups will be harder hit than others.

"Eighty percent of small businesses will take a hit, and that's way too much," he said. "And it adds more bureaucracy. The last thing we need is more of that."

He also opposes the alcohol and tobacco taxes, citing what he feels to be high taxation of those products already.

"People will drink and smoke anyway," he said.

Limits on malpractice suits and minor private insurance reforms are a better way to improve the health-care system, he said.

Student Anna Sorteberg said in spite of the many concerns people have about the plan, Clinton is making an effort.

"I admire him for taking this problem on," she said. "Something needs to be done."

Student Brad Linder agreed.

"There's definitely a health-care problem in this country," he said. "It's a reasonable plan, even if it's not the best it can be yet."

UISA Vice President Micah Hobart believes the plan is a good idea with some significant flaws.

"It needs to be carefully implemented to increase coverage," he said, "and there has to be a suitable way to pay for it."

He said he'd rather see tax breaks for small businesses as incentives to provide health-care benefits, rather than making them bear the majority of the cost of the plan. Health-care packages must be made affordable to smaller businesses if universal health care is to become a reality, he said.

Student Jeremy Buck feels the plan is too conservative.

"It's no solution to our health-care problems at all," he said. "Clinton wants to protect corporate rights."

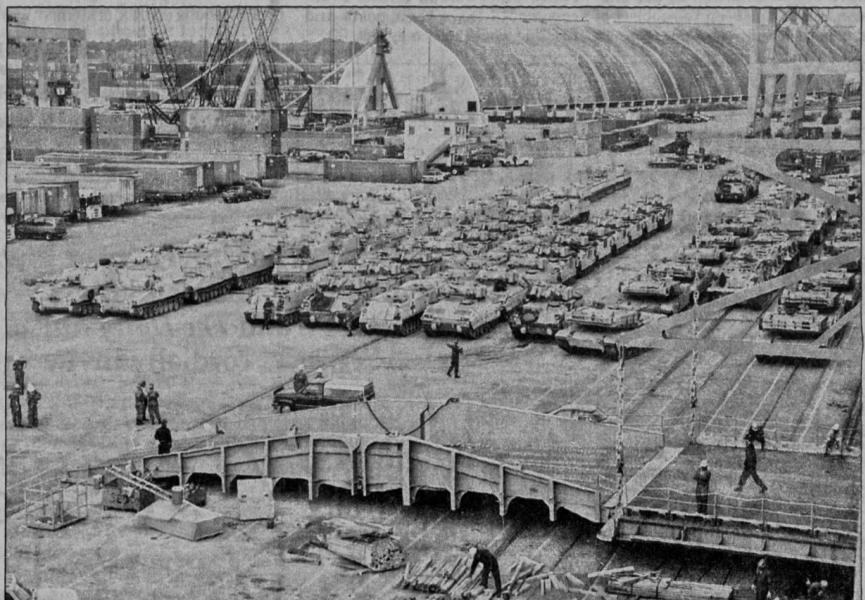

He feels the United States should try the single-payer plan that has proven successful in western European countries and Canada.

"The U.S. spends twice as much on health care as they do," he said. "The single-payer plan would eradicate that problem."

OFFICIALS REFOCUS MILITARY BENT OF MISSION

Christopher: U.S. policy 'out of balance'

Jim Abrams
Associated Press
WASHINGTON — American decision-makers "right up to and including the president" were responsible for the now-discredited tilt toward military action in Somalia, Secretary of State Warren Christopher said Sunday.

Associated Press

The effort to apprehend Somali warlord Mohamed Farrah Aidid and his followers after they began their attacks on U.N. forces last June "was a sound and natural response," Christopher said on NBC's "Meet the Press."

But, he said, "I think it did get out of balance" with too much focus on the military and not enough on the political side of the problem.

"I think we're all responsible for that, right up to and including the president," Christopher said.

Retired Adm. Jonathan Howe, the U.N. special envoy to Somalia, said a $25,000 reward for Aidid's capture remained in effect and that U.N. forces were still trying to bring him to justice.

Heavy armor equipment from the 24th Infantry Division, including M1A1 Tanks, Bradley Fighting Vehicles and 155mm self-propelled Howitzers, far left row, are lined up on the dock Sunday at the Port of Savannah, Ga. The material is being loaded aboard the USNS Demebola, a fast sealift that will take them to Somalia. American decision-makers have been criticized for their tilt toward militarism.

Howe, appearing on NBC and ABC's "This Week With David Brinkley," said U.N. forces had had "many opportunities to eliminate" Aidid, but "that's not our job."

Aidid has reportedly called for a cease-fire in the fighting that has left 18 Americans dead over the past week. U.S. officials made clear that while the U.N. resolution calling for his apprehension remained valid, the focus has shifted.

"We have a different set of priorities," Defense Secretary Les Aspin said on ABC. Pressure will be kept on Aidid until a political settlement is found, but "we are going to depersonalize it and de-emphasize that aspect of it."

situation of trying to capture an individual in the middle of an urban area that he controls. It's like going after Br'er Rabbit in the briar patch," said Sen. Sam Nunn, D-Ga., chairman of the Senate Armed Services Committee.

Sen. John McCain, R-Ariz., a sharp critic of the Somalia operation, repeated on CBS' "Face the Nation" that U.S. troops should leave immediately. "It's eerily reminiscent of the Vietnam rationalization for remaining there," said McCain, a POW during the Vietnam War.

However, Rep. Lee Hamilton, D-Ind., chairman of the House Foreign Affairs Committee, also appearing on CBS, said a hasty pullout would be wrong. "If we bail out now, chaos would come back, starvation would come back."

President Clinton last week announced plans to withdraw U.S. forces by March 31.

Christopher denied that there was any secret peace offer to Aidid and said U.S. special envoy to Somalia Robert Oakley, currently in the region trying to coordinate a political solution, has not been instructed to meet the warlord.

But if Aidid wants to stop fighting unilaterally, "that's fine with us," Christopher said, "and as you know, we had a very quiet night last night in Mogadishu."

He said the administration favors the establishment of an African commission to assess responsibility for attacks on Pakistani, U.S. and other troops under the U.N. command.

Congressional leaders, meanwhile, urged the administration to give up the Aidid manhunt.

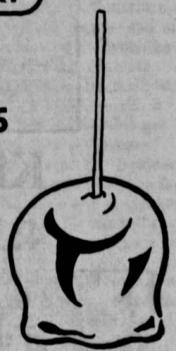

"The first thing you ought to do is lift the ransom," Senate Minority Leader Bob Dole, R-Kan., said on NBC.

Dole said President Clinton has "done fairly well" in his handling of the Somalia problem and supported Clinton's decision to send more troops to Somalia if the goal is to "protect lives, but not to be the posse to go after General Aidid."

Herd sets course record as men win Invitational

Hawkeye senior guides men to second straight win; Iowa finishes seven runners in top 24 at Murray Keatinge.

Mike Egenes
The Daily Iowan

In any sport, momentum is a crucial ingredient in building a championship season.

The Iowa men's cross country team appears to be gaining speed.

The Hawkeyes captured their second meet in a row as they came away with the Murray Keatinge Invitational at Orono, Maine, Saturday.

It was a clean sweep for Iowa. As a team, the Hawkeyes edged Arizona, 40-46.

The nine-team, 8,000-meter event was capped by senior Kevin Herd as he set a new course record, finishing the University of Maine course in 24 minutes, 14 seconds.

Herd also won last year's Murray Keatinge Invitational.

The Hawkeyes finished all seven runners in the top 24, led by Herd and Matt Gerard, who finished fifth. Gerard ran the course in 24:51.

Iowa coach Larry Wiecezorek couldn't be happier with Saturday's showing.

Indiana takes care of weak Hawkeye offense

Iowa picks up just 201 yards in 16-10 defeat by Hoosiers

Associated Press

BLOOMINGTON, Ind. — The next time Hayden Fry picks up the telephone, the Iowa football coach might want to consider dialing "O." That's "O" as in offense because the Hawkeyes desperately need to find some.

Iowa has scored only two touchdowns in its last three games, all losses, and hit a season-low for yardage in a 16-10 loss at Indiana on Saturday.

The Hawkeyes managed only 201 yards and nine first downs and ran just 49 plays to 81 for Indiana. Of Iowa's three first downs in the first half, two were by penalty.

first three Big Ten games was 1976.

Defensive back Scott Plate said the players are getting frustrated.

"It's tough not to point fingers, but we know our defense is playing pretty well," he said. "We didn't play as well as we have before and our offense has been sputtering pretty badly."

"Maybe we have to start using true freshmen. No team is any bigger or quicker than us. It's something that's mental."

Quarterback Paul Burmeister was sacked four more times Saturday for 39 yards. That's 17 sacks in the last three games — a big reason Iowa's rushing totals have looked so paltry.

The Hawkeyes had only 72 net rushing yards after getting just 48 in a 24-7 loss to Michigan and 32 in a 31-0 loss to Penn State.

"Paul did a fine job, but he needs a lot more help," Fry said. "He didn't have a lot of time to throw."

Burmeister completed 12 of 21 passes for 129 yards, including a 4-yard toss to Ryan Terry for Iowa's only touchdown, which came with 2 minutes, 6 seconds left in the game. Iowa tried an onside kick after the score, but Indiana fell on the ball and ran out the clock.

The Hawkeyes played without center Casey Wiegmann, who injured his knee on the last play of practice Wednesday and will be out two to eight weeks, Fry said. Backup guard Hal Mady replaced Wiegmann.

"Casey calls all the blocking schemes," Fry said. "On the other hand, Hal Mady — with only one day of practice — did an adequate job at center. I don't think he was necessarily to blame for the breakdowns on pass protection."

Iowa also didn't have linebacker John Hartlieb, who was suspended because of his arrest the previous weekend for public intoxication and disorderly conduct. Fry had

Hartlieb gets suspended by university

Associated Press

IOWA CITY — Iowa linebacker John Hartlieb has been suspended after all.

Coach Hayden Fry had said that Hartlieb, arrested Oct. 3 after a disturbance in downtown Iowa City, would play in Saturday's game at Indiana unless he was injured.

But Fry said he was told just before practice on Thursday that Hartlieb couldn't play because the university had suspended him.

Athletic director Bob Bowlsby explained it was not Fry's call to make.

"Hartlieb was suspended indefinitely, consistent with departmental and Board of Control of Athletics policies regarding incidents like he was involved in last weekend," Bowlsby said.

"We are not prepared to comment on how long the suspension will last. For now, he's suspended indefinitely."

Bowlsby said Hartlieb will be required to meet with counselors and his coaches. He added that UI officials will decide this week how long the suspension will last.

Hartlieb, a 225-pound junior, was arrested outside a Burger King restaurant several hours after Iowa's 24-7 loss at Michigan. He was charged with public intoxication and disorderly conduct.

Iowa City police said Hartlieb caused a disturbance in the restaurant around 12:30 a.m. by throwing his food and yelling. Fry said Hartlieb told him he was provoked.

The suspension angered Fry, who noted that Hartlieb had paid a fine and would be punished by the coaching staff.

"I would get myself in deep, deep trouble if I commented at all because I am just furious," Fry said after Saturday's game.

Field hockey remains confident after loss

Kris Wiley
The Daily Iowan

Even after losing back-to-back conference games, Iowa field hockey coach Beth Beglin said all is not lost.

"We've lost these games on the road. Those teams still have to go on the road," she said. "We're still in control of our own destiny."

The third-ranked Hawkeyes (10-3 overall, 1-2 in the Big Ten) suffered their second conference loss of the season Saturday to powerhouse Northwestern, 2-0, in Evanston, Ill. The defeat marked the first time in the team's 17-year history that they lost consecutive conference games.

"I am not happy with our position in the Big Ten," Beglin said. "We're now behind Northwestern and Penn State. We will have to win the remainder of our conference games to win the conference title."

After some lineup changes which included moving Heather Bryant to the forward line and Mary Kraybill to the midfield line, Iowa came back and shutout Southwest Missouri State, 7-0, Sunday.

"We focused more on our cover and deep cover positions and that had a big impact," Beglin said. "We were creating an attack."

Al Goldis/The Daily Iowan

The Hawkeyes held a 1-0 advantage over the Bears at half-time on an unassisted goal by freshman Diane DeMiro before going on a tear in the second half, scoring six goals in 26 minutes.

Senior Kristy Gleason teamed up with Bryant to put Iowa ahead 2-0. Gleason scored two more goals on the day. Bryant put in

AMERICAN LEAGUE CHAMPIONSHIP SERIES

Jays' Guzman downs Sox for 3-2 lead

Ben Walker

Associated Press

TORONTO — The Toronto Blue Jays, with Juan Guzman finding his groove, finally found a way to win at home.

The Blue Jays, looking like the World Series champions they are, became the first home team to win in the AL playoffs, beating the Chicago White Sox 5-3 Sunday for a 3-2 lead.

Guzman, coming off an erratic but somehow effective effort in Game 1, beat White Sox ace Jack McDowell for the second time. Guzman was super from the start, retiring the first 13 batters. He pitched three-hit ball for seven innings, allowing one run, and is 5-0 in the postseason now.

The rest of the Blue Jays were just as sharp. They became the first team in postseason play to score in the first four innings since 1979, and moved within one win of a return trip to the World Series.

Toronto will send Dave Stewart, 7-0 in the playoffs after his win in Game 2, against Alex Fernandez on Tuesday night at Comiskey Park.

Roberto Alomar was 3-for-3 with two walks, one run scored, one RBI and three steals to lead the Blue Jays' offense.

By winning, the Blue Jays put an end to several streaks.

Only once before in postseason history had the visiting team won the first five games of a series, that in the 1906 World Series between the White Sox and crosstown Cubs.

Also, Toronto prevented Chicago from winning three straight postseason games for the first time, and made sure the White Sox, the league's best road team, did not win three at the SkyDome for the first time.

Alomar was in the middle of Toronto's early offense as it scored a single run in each of the first four innings. The last team to do that in the postseason was Pittsburgh against Cincinnati in Game 3 of the 1979 NL playoffs.

All the while, Guzman was in control.

In Game 1, Guzman won despite walking a career-high eight, throwing a playoff record three wild pitches and giving up five hits in six innings. Not once in that game did he pitch a 1-2-3 inning.

This time, he did not allow a runner until Ellis Burks homered with one out in the fifth. Guzman struck out six, walked one and left with a 5-1 lead.

Tony Castillo pitched a scoreless eighth. Duane Ward entered in the ninth and gave up a two-run homer to Robin Ventura with two outs. He then walked Burks, but struck out Bo Jackson to end it.

Jackson, who complained about not being played in the first two games, is now 0-for-10 with six strikeouts. He also struck out with two runners on to end the seventh, Guzman's last batter.

McDowell, meanwhile, again was hit hard by Toronto. He was tagged for a playoff record 13 hits in the opener, and lasted only 2 1/2 innings in his second try against the Blue Jays.

McDowell has rarely done well against them. He is 0-4 versus

Cubs will name replacement this week

Associated Press

MILWAUKEE — The Chicago Cubs, barring an unforeseen development, will name Tony Muser or Tom Trebelhorn as manager this week, the Milwaukee Sentinel reported in today's editions.

Muser and Trebelhorn were interviewed Thursday in Arizona by Cubs General Manager Larry Himes, assistant Syd Thrift and scouting director Al Goldis, the report said.

The Cubs fired manager Jim Lefebvre last week. The only candidates to be interviewed were Muser, Chicago's bullpen coach this season, and Trebelhorn, Chicago's bench coach for two seasons.

Muser and Trebelhorn also underwent a battery of tests Friday that included a psychological evaluation.

"It's just something Larry wants to do," Muser said. "I don't mind it."

"They want to know who they're hiring. I think they have every right to do it."

Muser and Trebelhorn will undergo more testing Monday in Escondido, Calif.

The report said the Cubs could name a manager as soon as Tuesday or Wednesday.

"From what I can tell, it's just us two right now," Muser said. "I've managed in the minors and I think I'm ready to manage in the major leagues."

Himes recruited Trebelhorn and made him Lefebvre's bench coach. Goldis and Thrift are supporters of Muser, the report said.

Muser is a former Milwaukee Brewers coach. Trebelhorn managed the Brewers from the last week of the 1986 season through 1991, when he was fired.

The candidate who is passed over for the manager's job is expected to be the bench coach or third base coach next season, the report said.

It was Toronto's day and not Chicago's. With two outs and two on, McDowell tried one of the oldest tricks in the book, faking to third and trying to trap a runner off first.

That play, which almost never works and usually is a waste of time, actually did work, sort of. Slow-footed Pat Borders fell down and was caught off first, but first baseman Frank Thomas froze with the ball when Fernandez bluffed from third base, and Borders scampered safely to second without a throw.

Sprague singled home a run in the seventh off Roberto Hernandez.

Northwestern's Shannon Small tallied seven saves.

Iowa finishes a six-game road trip this weekend at Ann Arbor, Mich. The Hawkeyes face Ohio State Saturday and No. 13 Michigan Sunday.

"The focus now is to stay up on school work and focus on the rest of the season when things become crucial," Beglin said.

Manolopoulos followed with a 27-yard field goal.

Although Iowa hasn't won since beating Iowa State on Sept. 11, Fry remains confident. The Hawkeyes play host to Illinois next Saturday.

Jackson, battered by the Braves in last year's playoffs, pitched out of trouble throughout the game, but stayed cool in the clutch and pitched the Phillies to a 2-1 victory Sunday that evened the series 2-2. Thompson crashed into the left-field wall for a leaping back-handed catch of Mark Lemke's drive with two on and two outs in the eighth inning.

The Braves, coming off 14-3 and 9-4 routs, could have done it again. They put runners on the last eight innings, but were just 1-for-15 with runners in scoring position. They stranded 11 players.

Not that the Phillies were much better. They left on a record 15 runners and were 1-for-10 with runners in scoring position, making them 6-for-36 in the series.

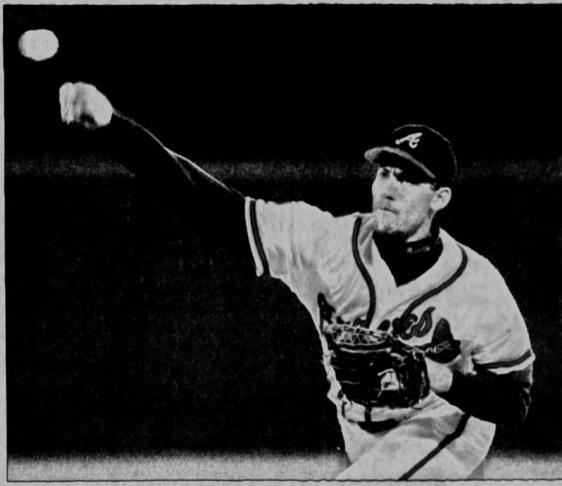

But this time, Philadelphia took advantage of two breaks. An error by Lemke at second led to a pair of unearned runs in the fourth inning, spoiling John Smoltz's perfect postseason record. And first base umpire Jerry Crawford blew a call on a bunt that would have given Atlanta runners on first and second with no outs in the seventh.

Bill Pecota, batting for reliever Mark Wohlers, singled to open the Atlanta ninth. Otis Nixon sacrificed on a hopper back to the mound but Mitch Williams dropped the ball as Pecota took second and the throw to first was too late to get Nixon.

Jeff Blauser bunted back to the mound again and Williams got the runner at third this time on a force play. Williams nearly threw the ball away, but defensive replacement Kim Batiste stretched to catch the ball.

Williams then got Ron Gant to hit into a double play, ending the game and the drama.

So now the series is sure to go back to Philadelphia. Game 1 starter Curt Schilling will pitch for Atlanta's John Smoltz releases a pitch to Philadelphia during the fifth inning of the Phillies' 2-1 win Sunday night in Atlanta.

the Phillies on Monday against Steve Avery at Atlanta.

Jackson allowed a run, nine hits, struck out six and walked two in 7 2-3 innings.

After two-out singles by David Justice and Damon Berryhill in the eighth, Williams relieved. The Wild Thing was the lucky one this time.

Pete Incaviglia, who platoons with Thompson in left, is a poor fielder and probably would have had trouble making the play on Lemke.

Jackson had faced the Braves in last year's playoffs when he was with Pittsburgh, but was tagged for four runs in 1/2 innings, and he was looking to recover his reputation.

Jackson also drove in the go-ahead run with a single in the fourth. During the season, he was just 5-for-65 (.077) with two RBIs.

Smoltz, 5-0 the previous two postseasons, was nearly as good. He struck out 10 in 6 1/2 innings, including John Kruk three times. But he's had trouble with the Phillies — 0-4 since May 1990 — and allowed at least one runner in each of his innings.

WOMEN'S TENNIS

Hawkeyes knock out Marquette 9-0

Jodd Hefferman
The Daily Iowan

The women's tennis team ended a brilliant homestand Saturday afternoon with a 9-0 thrashing of the Marquette Warriors.

Over a period of 13 days, the Hawkeyes beat Gustavus Adolphus 9-0, Iowa State 8-1, and the Warriors 9-0 to complete a sweep of their first three home meets of the fall season.

The Warriors turned out to be a stiffer test than expected, and the Hawkeyes often had to rally before taking control of their matches.

The No. 1 singles match-up was a key example, junior Laura Dvorak went to three sets for the first time this season in her match with Marquette's Joanna Bauza.

Bauza and Dvorak went on serve in the first set before Dvorak took control at 2-2.

Dvorak broke Bauza twice after the 2-2 deadlock to take the first set 6-2 and seemed to be on her way to another rout.

Bauza, a freshman from San Juan, Puerto Rico, wouldn't quit, and won the first four games of the second set from Dvorak, who holds a No. 52 singles ranking.

Dvorak found herself in a pivotal ninth game, serving to stay in the second set, down 3-5. Bauza broke Dvorak at love and took the second set 6-3.

"After I lost the second set, I tried to forget about it and focus on the third set," Dvorak said.

Dvorak quickly went out in front in the final set, breaking Bauza's serve to go up 1-0, serving out the second game to lead 2-0, and led 3-0 before Bauza could stop the bleeding, winning the fourth game to cut Dvorak's lead to 3-1. Dvorak quickly won the fifth game with two forehand winners and two errors by Bauza to lead 4-2.

Serving to stay within a break of Dvorak, Bauza suddenly had trouble getting the ball in the court, she double-faulted her first two points, and after a forehand volley by Bauza, made a backhand unforced error to give Dvorak two break points at 15-40.

After a brief rally, Dvorak crushed a backhand down the line that Bauza couldn't get to, and Dvorak broke to lead 5-2 and serve for the match, and ended Bauza's upset bid with a 6-2, 3-6, 6-2 victory.

Sophomore Nikki Willette also had to rally to beat Becky Kane, 6-3, 6-1 to give Iowa a 2-0 lead in the singles round.

Seniors Rhonda Fox and Amy Jahn, sophomore Sasha Boros, and junior Cara Cashon all won their respective singles matches in quick fashion, with Cashon having the toughest test, giving up four games in a 6-2, 6-2 win over Cory Armstrong.

Fox beat Marquette's Mary Thompson 6-0, 6-2 at the No. 3 spot, Jahn won her sixth straight singles match, blowing out Sara Martin 6-1, 6-2.

Boros won her first singles match in nearly eleven months, beating freshmen Sandra Woolson 6-2, 6-0.

Coach Micki Schilling was pleased with the play of the Hawkeyes, who improved their dual meet record to a perfect 3-0.

Danny Frazier/TheDaily Iowan

Iowa's Nikki Willette hits an overhead during her 2-0 victory over Marquette's Becky Kane Saturday at the Rec Building.

"It was 100 percent different then we played on Thursday. They listened to what I said, and they took action," Schilling said.

The doubles matches went pretty much the same as usual, with Iowa sweeping the doubles, and running their doubles record to a combined 9-0, but not without a couple problems.

At the No. 1 doubles, Fox-Willette had to come from behind to defeat Marquette's Bauza-Kane combination.

At the No. 2 doubles, Iowa's Cashon-Jahn team crushed Thompson and Martin 6-0, 6-0, and Dvorak teamed with senior Miyuki Moore to beat Armstrong-Woolson 6-1, 6-0 at the No. 3 doubles spot.

Phoenix Suns' Charles Barkley disagrees with a referee call during practice Saturday in Flagstaff, Ariz. Barkley later collapsed while running wind sprints.

Barkley gets 'encouraging' report

Walter Berry
Associated Press

PHOENIX — Charles Barkley, who collapsed during wind sprints when his legs went numb, received an encouraging medical report Sunday night after a battery of tests and may possibly return to training camp today.

Phoenix Suns president Jerry Colangelo said the star forward, who collapsed Saturday night, sustained no nerve damage following a magnetic resonance imaging, CAT-scan and neurological exam. He won't need surgery and apparently will only have to reduce his workouts.

"The results of today's tests are good news," Colangelo said Sunday night. "... Charles is doing very well. He will undergo one more test (this) morning and if the results are as positive as today's, he could be back up here (to) night."

Colangelo, in a statement from the team's training camp at Northern Arizona University at Flagstaff, said the injury was to the L-5 vertebrae and probably stemmed from thickening of the tendon that rubbed against a nerve.

The NBA's Most Valuable Player was running with teammates after an hour scrimmage at training camp when he fell forward. He remained on the floor for more than 30 minutes before being helped to the locker room, where he was treated for an hour.

"He maxed out in terms of his workout," Colangelo said. "Nothing like surgery is required. Charles will have to cut back on his workouts. This is great news for the Phoenix Suns and for Charles Barkley."

It was also great news for the NBA, which lost Michael Jordan to retirement just last week and Magic Johnson, Larry Bird and Kevin McHale in the past 14 months. Over the last four months there were the deaths of Reggie Lewis of Boston and Drazen Petrovic of New Jersey.

After leaving practice Saturday, Barkley said his back and legs had been "really tight," but he was running well.

"I kept running, then I kept getting slower and slower," he said. "It was like my legs started going into the floor. I couldn't lift my feet. I couldn't move my legs at all. It scared me to death."

On Sunday, Barkley, 30, was brought to Phoenix, where he was examined by team doctors at an undisclosed hospital.

Team doctor Richard Emerson said before the tests were conducted that there was no immediate indication of nerve damage and Barkley's problem was consistent with a disk injury.

VOLLEYBALL

Iowa gives Illini tough time

Joel Donofrio
The Daily Iowan

Although Iowa lost its sixth straight volleyball match Saturday night, there weren't too many long faces on the Hawkeye bench in Carver-Hawkeye Arena.

Iowa played its "best match of the year," giving No. 17 Illinois all it could handle in a 16-18, 15-11, 15-9, 15-7 setback. The first game was both the first game which Illinois had lost in conference play as well as the Hawkeyes' (8-10, 0-6) first conference game won.

The way the first game began, it didn't look like it would be a very good night for Iowa. Illinois (9-5, 6-0) ran out to 13-5 lead before the Hawkeyes went on eight point run to tie the game behind the serving of senior Erin Weaver. Senior Courtney Gillis had two kills in the run as well as many of her team-high 14 digs.

"We really played together with lots of emotion, and everyone was involved," freshman Jennifer Webb said of the comeback. "Everyone was excited and playing great."

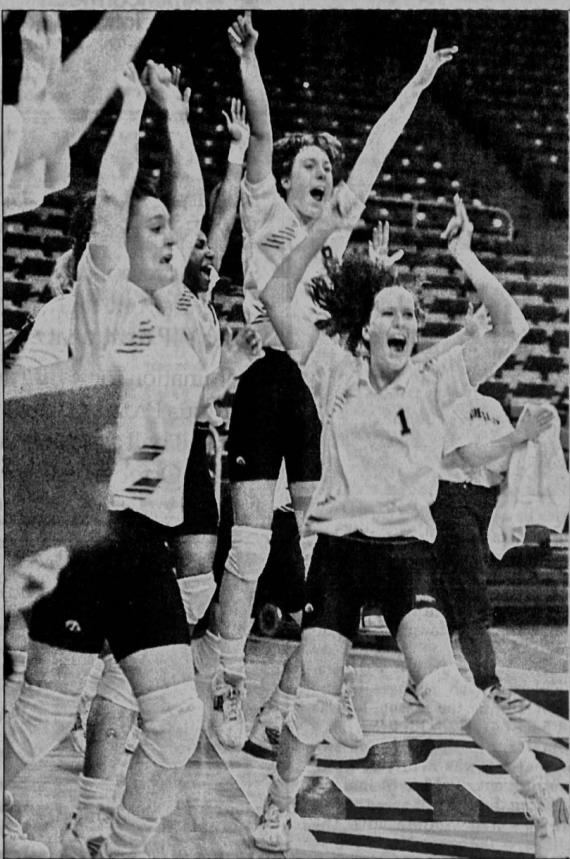

After surviving four Illinois game points at 14-13, the Hawkeyes pushed the score to 16-15 before eventually breaking through to win the 40-minute long game 18-16. Iowa coach Linda Schoenstedt said that one of the keys to her team's success was the quick tempo of their passing.

"We pushed the tempo a lot more than we have been - we were trying to drop the passes to the setter, so she could get it to our hitters more quickly," Schoenstedt said. "We saw a lot more splits in their block, and we had many, many more kills than we did in the past couple of weeks."

Game two was tight throughout, with Iowa jumping to 7-2 lead behind one of freshman Jill Oelschlager's 16 kills. Illinois regrouped and used a 7-0 run to take a 9-7 lead, before the Hawkeyes came back with four points of their own. Freshman Heather Calomese came off the bench to spark Iowa with a kill and two digs, pushing the Hawkeyes to an 11-9 advantage.

"It's exciting to come into the game in a high-pressure situation. I'm learning to like it," Calomese said. "I'm just glad I could make a contribution to the team's effort tonight."

Eventually, the Illinois powerful trio of 6-foot-3 Tina Rogers (20

Iowa's volleyball bench, including, from left, Stephanie Stitt, Teri Fleming and Heather Grimm, explode with excitement after a 18-16 first-game win against No. 17 Illinois. The Hawkeyes could not continue the momentum and lost to the Illini, 15-11, 15-9, 15-7.

kills), 6-2 Kristin Henriksen (18 kills, 9 blocks) and 6-2 Kellie Hebeisen (14 kills) was too much for the Hawkeyes. Illinois closed out game two with six straight points to prevail 15-11, went on a seven point run behind Rogers' serving to win game three 15-9, and held on in game four to win 15-7 and seal the match.

Overall, both Schoenstedt and her players felt that the Iowa performance was its best of the Big Ten season - a reason for optimism through the rest of the schedule.

"In the first game, we could have easily fallen apart, when Illinois jumped out to their lead, but we stuck together as a team and came back," Calomese said. "These last two weeks of practice have been great. We've really worked hard, and I think that's what paid off out here on the floor."

Webb, who had 11 kills, 13 digs and eight blocks overall, agreed that her team's tough practice workouts were helping. "We've been working on blocking all week in practice, doing blocking drills to the point where we're ready to cry," Webb said. "We were really scrappy in the first two games, and I attribute that to our hard work."

WOMEN'S CROSS COUNTRY

Inexperience not liability for Iowa

Mike Egenes
The Daily Iowan

Normally, inexperience proves to be a liability as the season progresses.

The Iowa women's cross country team probably wouldn't be classified as normal.

While competing with only two runners with collegiate experience prior to this season, Iowa finished second behind Arizona Saturday at the Murray Keatinge Invitational in Orono, Maine.

Three Hawkeye runners finished in the top 10. Senior Tina Stec paced the Hawkeyes and finished third overall, completing the five-mile course in 17 minutes, 30 seconds.

Iowa coach Jerry Hassard is surprised at how well the team has been performing with so many young runners.

"With the exception of Stec and (Erin) Boland, there is more burden on the younger athletes with relatively little experience. The nature of this team has changed considerably," he said.

Hassard says freshman Jennifer Schoonover continues to run well and Sara Murray, Becky Coleman and Kiersten Pauling ran their best races of the season.

Along with Stec, top 10 performers included Boland (5th; 17:37) and Schoonover (7th; 17:47).

Also finishing for Iowa were Murray (15th; 18:07), Coleman (18th; 18:13), Pauling (19th; 18:14) and Natalie Kleinfelter (40th; 18:51).

Hassard has tried to remind his runners not to underestimate any of the meets in order to keep their chances alive for the national meet. Stec, however, doesn't foresee any problems.

"We get focused when we need to be focused. It's going to be harder this year to make the national meet and we realize that, but I don't think there will be any problems (from inexperience)," Stec said.

"I think they (the freshmen) will be able to handle it. They're getting the experience they will need, Kiersten Pauling and Becky Coleman are always getting better," Stec added.

However, Hassard thinks there is room for improvement. "Our top three runners ran well, but we need to close the time gap between our third, fourth, fifth and sixth runners," he said.

One of Iowa's top performers, Christine Salsberry, did not compete Saturday. Hassard said she has been troubled by a throat congestion problem.

MEN'S GOLF

Hawkeyes disappointed with finish

Doug Alden
The Daily Iowan

The Iowa men's golf team finished a disappointing 23rd place Sunday at the 24-team Northern Intercollegiate in Ann Arbor, Mich.

The Hawkeyes were tied for 19th place after the first round on Friday. They dropped to 21st after shooting a 317 on Saturday and finished with a 315 on Monday.

Coach Lynn Blevins was disappointed in the team's performance. "This was a humiliating tournament," he said. "I think this was an indication that we were not prepared to compete at this level. The players just didn't seem like they were ready."

Sean McCarty led the Hawkeyes with rounds of 74, 73, and 76 to finish tied for 14th place. He was followed by David Sharp (239), Chad McCarty (240), Sean Rowen (240), and Paul Levin (245) who was playing in his first tournament this fall.

Ohio State and Wisconsin tied with 883 to win the tournament. Illinois finished third and was followed by Michigan State and Penn State who tied for fourth place.

Indiana, Northwestern, Ball State, Minnesota, and Toledo rounded out the top 10.

Blevins hopes Iowa will return to playing well after adjusting to next week's practices.

"I'm going to put a little of the burden back on the players," he said.

"I hope they have enough pride and enough motivation to come back and get ready for our last tournament."

The Hawkeyes are coming off a first-place finish at the D.A. Weibring Illinois State Intercollegiate a week ago. Iowa closes the fall season Oct. 18-19 at the Persimmon Ridge Invitational in Louisville, Ky.

Iowa finds trouble at Volvo

Todd Hefferman
The Daily Iowan

The Hawkeyes' much-anticipated trip to the Volvo Nationals turned sour Saturday in Austin, Tex.

Iowa sent three singles players in hopes of defeating the 128-player draw at the tourney. Junior Bryan Crowley, senior Todd Shale, and junior Bob Zumph were chosen by Coach Steve Houghton to take the trip to Austin.

In the pre-qualifying rounds, the Hawkeyes were all eliminated. Crowley fell to Louisiana State's Jose Leon 3-6, 4-6, Shale lost to Chad Raymond of Texas A & M 4-6, 1-6, and Zumph fell in the second round to Vladimir Krstic of South Florida, 4-6, 4-6.

Zumph bypassed the first round with a victory by default over Fred Bach, who withdrew from the tournament. Iowa's next competition is in Bloomington, Ind., at the Midwest Intercollegiate Oct. 22-24.

WOMEN'S GOLF

Final round torments Hawkeyes at Invite

Doug Alden
The Daily Iowan

The Iowa women's golf team finished 11th out of 14 teams Sunday at the Lady Northern Invitational in Columbus, Ohio.

The final round continues to torment the Hawkeyes, who were in seventh place after shooting a 322 in Friday's first round.

They dropped to eighth after shooting a 329 on Saturday and came apart on Sunday with a 343.

Coach Diane Thomason was disappointed with the collapse.

"We just closed out so poorly," she said. "We were just not ready to play."

Indiana won the tournament with a score of 952. Iowa State (960) finished second and was followed by Wisconsin (968), Minnesota (970), Missouri (973), tournament host Ohio State (974), Illinois (977), Michigan State (978), Purdue (984). Iowa's 994 placed them ahead of Illinois State (1,001), Northwestern (1,013), Michigan (1,013), and Northern Illinois (1,020).

strong fall season. She shot 246 and tied for 27th place in the tournament.

She was followed by Jennifer McCullough (249), Jenny Nodland (250), Stacy Boville (255), Tanya Shepley (256), and Candy Schneekloth (257).

The tournament took place at Ohio State's Scarlet Golf Course which is a longer course than the Hawkeyes have played this season.

It begins with three long par fours which Thomason feels contributed a great deal to the Hawkeyes' performance by shaking their confidence early in the round.

"It's a tough golf course. You've got to get a good start on it," she said.

"You just have to be patient at first. If you don't make pars those first three holes, there's a lot of holes left to play."

Conditions at the tournament were not ideal.

Saturday's round was hampered by rain and temperatures dropped below 50 degrees Sunday morning, but Thomason feels the conditions should not have been a factor.

"We can't use those as excuses," she said.

"You've still got to mentally get yourself tough."

Thomason is giving her players the week off to catch up on studies, but she plans on coming back hard next week to prepare for their final fall tournament Nov. 1-3 at UCLA.

NFL ROUNDUP

Quarterbacks take hits in rough day on football scene

Barry Wilner

Associated Press

Dan Marino is gone, sidelined with a torn Achilles tendon. Bernie Kosar is gone, sidelined by his coach.

Drew Bledsoe and Steve Emtman, the two choices of the last two drafts, also went down Sunday on a rough day in the NFL.

The injury to Marino came late in the first half in Cleveland, where the Dolphins beat the Browns 24-14. Marino had a string of 145 straight starts for Miami (4-1). He won't make 146 after tearing his right Achilles tendon while planting his foot for a 10-yard completion.

Dr. Daniel Kanell, the team physician, made the original diagnosis. But the team said it would wait until returning to Miami before making plans.

Marino's replacement, Scott Mitchell had thrown just eight passes in three previous seasons. He hit on 10 of 16 passes for 80 yards, including touchdowns of 19 yards to Tony Martin and 3 to Keith Jackson. That came after Mitchell's first pass was picked off by Najee Mustafaa, who set a Browns' record with his 97-yard TD runback.

Kosar was benched for Vinny Testaverde, who didn't do much better. But after the game, coach Bill Belichick announced a switch to Testaverde for next week against Cincinnati.

Bledsoe sprained the medial collateral ligament in his left knee in New England's first victory this season, 23-20 at Phoenix.

Dolphins 24, Browns 14

Before Marino went down, he completed 14 of 19 for 161 yards and one touchdown, a perfectly thrown 13-yarder to Mark Ingram.

"It felt like I got kicked," Marino said. "I got a real sharp pain in the back of my ankle just as I threw the ball. I haven't been hurt enough to know exactly what happened, so it was a real shock."

Patriots 23, Cardinals 20

In coach Bill Parcells' first victory with New England after four losses, the Patriots used an impromptu 82-yard pass-and-lateral play to set up the decisive points.

Scott Secules, in for Bledsoe, hit

Associated Press

Dallas' Emmitt Smith tries to break through Colts defensive back Jason Belsler in the third quarter of the Cowboys' 27-3 win Sunday.

Kevin Turner for 13 yards. Turner stayed on his feet with a Phoenix defender holding his legs and shoved the ball to a sprinting Leonard Russell, who raced 69 yards down the sideline. Ben Coates then scored on a 2-yard pass from Secules.

Steve Beuerlein threw three scoring passes for Phoenix (1-4).

Raiders 24, Jets 20

At Los Angeles, Vince Evans, at 38, the NFL's second-oldest quarterback, guided the Raiders on a last-gasp 72-yard, 11-play drive. Nick Bell scored on a 1-yard run with 4 seconds remaining for the Raiders (3-2), who overcame a 17-0 deficit and five turnovers.

Steelers 16, Chargers 3

At Pittsburgh, San Diego (2-3) was held without a touchdown for the third time in five games. Linebacker Levon Kirkland returned Stan Humphries' fumble for a touchdown and Gary Anderson kicked three field goals for Pittsburgh (3-2). Barry Foster ran for 110 yards.

Bears 17, Eagles 6

Philadelphia's 11-game home winning streak ended as backup QB Bubby Brister was overwhelmed by the Bears (3-2). He fumbled twice, was intercepted twice and sacked seven times.

Brister was sacked three times and had two interceptions and a fumble in the first half.

Giants 41, Redskins 7

New York (4-1) sent Washington (1-4) to its worst home defeat in 45 years and its fourth successive loss. Lewis Tillman, subbing for injured Rodney Hampton, ran for 104 yards. The Redskins ran for only 65 yards.

Cowboys 27, Colts 3

At Indianapolis, Troy Aikman, the NFC passing leader, hit 21 of 28 attempts for 245 yards, Michael Irvin caught seven passes for 112 yards and Emmitt Smith ran for 104 yards as Dallas (3-2) won its third in a row. The Cowboys forced five turnovers.

The Colts (2-3) lost defensive end Steve Emtman again, probably for the season. Emtman tore ligaments and tendons in his right knee.

Vikings 15, Buccaneers 0

At Minneapolis, Vencie Glenn intercepted two of Craig Erickson's passes and Carl Lee and Todd Scott picked off one each. Erickson finished 12 of 29 for 122 yards.

That was critical because Minnesota's passing attack was held to 144 yards. It was the Vikings' first shutout since 1991.

Chiefs 17, Bengals 15

After rookie Doug Pelfrey's fifth field goal put Cincinnati ahead, Dave Krieg guided Kansas City on a 48-yard drive that ended with Nick Lowery's winning 37-yard kick.

Kansas City (4-1), which had the ball for only 25:03, got untracked in the second half.

Packers 30, Broncos 27

GREEN BAY, Wis. — The Green

Bay Packers built a seemingly safe 30-7 halftime lead Sunday night before John Elway led the Denver Broncos on another comeback. Reggie White made sure this one fell short.

White broke through for back-to-back sacks of Elway in the final 1:50 to stop a Denver drive and the Packers held on.

Le-Lo Lang's interception, the Broncos' third of the second half, at the Green Bay 43 gave Denver one last chance with 2:05 to play. But White brought down Elway for losses of 8 and 14 yards, the final sack with 1:27 to go.

Green Bay, breaking a three-game losing streak, is 2-3.

Screen legend Steve McQueen lives on in compelling 'Pebbles'

Ian Corwin
The Daily Iowan

"I'm still here, you bastards!" So decrees the haggard-looking star of 1973's "Papillon" as he drifts out to sea and toward his freedom, floating away from a lifetime of bitter and unjust captivity on a canvas bag full of coconuts.

Whether the critical elite among film historians acknowledges it or not, actor Steve McQueen's presence is still here, living on the screen today, despite his apparent fall into obscurity after his death in 1980.

In his Film Encyclopedia, film maker and historian Ephriam Katz accurately sums up McQueen's appeal to moviegoers in the '60s and '70s, describing him as "an appealing combination of a heroic anti-hero, gregarious loner and exuberant introvert." In a decade when America was finding out what it was like to be alone in the world, it's easy to see why McQueen's peculiar brand of aloof charm so appealed to the public.

McQueen's distinctiveness was achieved on what would normally be considered a very embarrassing level — he was one of those few actors who didn't have to do a thing in order to dominate the screen. Like Bogart, his fame was not achieved so much by his thespian acrobatics as it was by the way he stood, walked and talked on screen, and by how he lived off screen.

When American audiences saw him in his first important role (1963's "The Great Escape"), a reputation for macho thrill-seeking and an insistence on doing all of his own stunts had already preceded him. When those same moviegoers put that larger-than-life daring together with the James Dean-inspired cool which marked McQueen's portrayal of a rebellious teen-ager in the 1958 horror-schlocker "The Blob," a legend was born, albeit an odd one.

True, he has not reached the cult status of Bogie or Dean, but I think time will prove McQueen's durability as a screen icon, simply because his legacy as a powerful leading man achieved a complexity that Bogie sadly lacked. McQueen's fame came at a time when America was just entering Vietnam, and the United States was about to have its standing as the bastion of truth and justice deflowered in a particularly ugly way. Where Bogie stood for what was solid and true in the American Male, McQueen seems now to have stood for that same male on the verge of losing everything he held dear.

This loss of innocence for the traditional hero finds its truest expression in director Robert Wise's "The Sand Pebbles" (1966).

In this compelling drama, McQueen plays Navy engineer Jake Holman, assigned to the San Pablo, an American gunboat which patrols the waterways of China, circa 1926. At a socially and politically tumultuous time in China's long history, the San Pablo is supposed to be merely a "police presence, keeping order in a volatile land." Sounds vaguely similar to a certain "police action" in America's more recent past, doesn't it?

McQueen's Holman is cursed with a conscience, and his casual mistreatment of the Chinese gradually gives way to a warped understanding of their plight. Of course his shipmates, seeing the confusion and strife as an opportunity to exploit China for all its worth, become preoccupied with buying women and goods from the greedy Chinese profiteers of Shanghai.

Holman becomes unwilling guardian to a Chinese woman and her dreams of freedom. When she is killed by members of the Student Militia, they hang the blame on Holman, surround the San Pablo in the harbor and demand that the criminal be handed over to them for trial and execution. Holman's shipmates turn against him, and the stage is set for a heartbreaking, shattering climax.

"The Sand Pebbles," apart from being a truly gripping drama, is a very clear indictment of foreign intervention and the loss of America's political naiveté. McQueen shines as a symbol of a wide-eyed America, still learning to guard its secrets and cherish its past. His scenes with Candice Bergen, who plays an American missionary, are particularly charming. Bergen draws McQueen out slowly, letting us get a glimpse of the true actor inside the macho shell, an actor whose sensitive, sad blue eyes seem to have seen a great deal more than the colder, calculating baby-blues of Paul Newman.

With strong support from Richard Crenna as the ship's captain and Richard Attenborough as Holman's only true compatriot Frenchie, McQueen offers us in "The Sand Pebbles" the face of American values unmasked. His presence as a lost rebel gradually slides away to reveal the fact that his lack of direction is slowly killing him — a true American sob story if ever there was one.

This is the first Videotape worm column in a three-part series focusing on the films of Steve McQueen. Next week: The Rebel in Shacksles — "Papillon," "The Great Escape."

UNFORTUNATELY, THIS IS WHERE PEOPLE ARE PUTTING TOO MANY RETIREMENT DOLLARS.

Every year, a lot of people make a huge mistake on their taxes. They don't take advantage of tax deferral and wind up sending Uncle Sam money they could be saving for retirement.

Fortunately, that's a mistake you can easily avoid with TIAA-CREF SRAs. SRAs not only ease your current tax bite, they offer a remarkably easy way to build retirement income—especially for the "extras" that your regular pension and Social Security benefits may not cover. Because your contributions are made in before-tax dollars, you pay less taxes now. And since all earnings on your SRA are tax-deferred as well, the money you don't send to Washington works even harder for you. Down the road, that can make a dramatic difference in your quality of life.

What else makes SRAs so special? A range of allocation choices—from the guaranteed security of TIAA to the diversified investment accounts of CREF's variable annuity—all backed by the nation's number one retirement system.

Why write off the chance for a more rewarding retirement? Call today and learn more about how TIAA-CREF SRAs can help you enjoy many happy returns.

Benefit now from tax deferral. Call our SRA hotline 1 800-842-2733, ext. 8016.

75 years of ensuring the future for those who shape it™

CREF certificates are distributed by TIAA-CREF Individual and Institutional Services. For more complete information, including charges and expenses, call 1 800-842-2733, ext. 8016 for a prospectus. Read the prospectus carefully before you invest or send money.
