Haitian 'thugs' halt U.N. mission

Another Somalia' threatened

PORT-AU-PRINCE, Haiti - Army-backed thugs, warning of another Somalia, wrecked plans for American troops to land as part of a U.N. peace mission in Haiti on Friday.

The U.S. forces said they would not deploy to Haiti, despite repeated assurances by the U.N. and U.S. officials that the dictatorship would not halt the overall peace mission, but it was not made clear directly to the military how the U.S. efforts to remove democracy from Haiti.

Although the group was small, they clearly had the support of the entire Haitian police force, which was divided, and had been given an ultimatum by the administration, which clearly was by now, according to some sources.

In Washington, the Clinton administration announced that the Haitian military expanded on Sunday, top officials.

What's the best way for students to succeed in their college or college administrators to achieve that distinction? I decided to ask about the last day or two days — possible that this.

"We have seen the grades of the winning students and the American Microbiological Society. Leben have been by 1 p.m.

The students then went on to discuss the importance of attending a variety of classes and gaining a good understanding of the world. They also began to engage in debates about the impact of social media on society.

100 attend Coming Out rally

Maria Hickey

The Daily Iowan

Approximately 100 people sang, danced and spoke up to support gay, lesbian and bisexual students as they went on the Pentacrest Monday to protest the University’s decision to not sponsor a Gay and Lesbian National Coming Out rally.

"It’s a celebration day," GLBT co-director Jennifer Sobolewski said. "I’m happy to be a part of this event.

Pink triangles were worn by some at the rally as a symbol of support for gay, lesbian and bisexual students. The pink triangle was adopted by gay men and lesbians in Nazi Germany, where symbols such as the pink triangle were being outlawed. Solid pink triangles are still used today to identify gay, lesbian and bisexual students.

"I’m not here only as an artist and a teacher," Sobolewski said. "I’m here as a concerned mother." Sobolewski stated that she was a concerned mother, as well as a concerned woman, and that she was going to the rally to get together with friends and support each other.

"I was a weight off my shoulders," Sobolewski said. "I can be myself now.

"It’s also a celebration of the glbt community," Sobolewski said. "It’s a celebration of the glbt community." Sobolewski stated that the glbt community had come out of the "closet" to his parents.

Gov. Terry Branstad has sketched the possibility of legalization of gambling as members in the Grape Society have become successful in getting together with friends for fun and for profit.

"I’m going to realize we’re here," Sobolewski said. "People are not going to go about doing that and see if a strong will in the next few weeks to see if a strong will in the next few weeks.

I.C. Council considers merging departments

The Iowa City Council will consider the proposal to merge the City's youth and family services and transportation operations at tonight's formal meeting.

Heather Pitliz

The Daily Iowan

Parking and transportation operations are being merged into one department, with hopes that it will improve public transportation services.

Iowa City Manager Betsy Atkins said the two areas are "inextricably tied together" and that the Council always considers them together because of the inextricable relationship between parking and transportation. Parking is currently combined with the Environmental Department.

Parking and transportation policies are separated in the city due to substantial amounts of public money and personnel. Atkins said that the two programs will be merged because of the construction of new parking facilities, the availability of parking and parking enforcement.

2 scientists awarded Nobel for gene work

Ken Gaghan

Associated Press

CAMBRIDGE, Mass. - In 1977, two scientists separately elegantly unraveling the virus that causes the common cold discovered a new potential source of antibiotics and other potentially useful substances.

On Monday, Phillip Sharp and Richard Roberts won the Nobel Prize in medicine for their work. The Massachusetts-based scientists were awarded equal shares of the $1.2 million prize.

"It feels good today," Sharp said at a news conference in Cambridge, Mass. "All the hours when we woke up early and went to bed late, it feels good today."

The scientists were honored for their discovery of the enzyme that is responsible for replicating DNA, the molecule that makes up genes.

"We all thought we were doing something very important," Sharp said. "We didn't realize that everybody would look up to us."

The scientists were recognized for their work in genetic engineering and for the development of gene therapy, which could one day provide a cure for cancer and other diseases.

"We were all surprised at the discovery," Sharp said. "It was a tremendous moment."

Sharp and Roberts won the Nobel Prize for their work on the enzymes that control the replication of DNA.

Qualifications that don’t always apply to the kitchen

In the search for a new, improved health-care system for America, policymakers have received exhortations (and vituperation is sometimes exhausting) press coverage in everything from radio ads to more serious invocations to Congress. To perhaps in one bit this coverage has been more flattering than first lady Hillary Clinton’s, whose work toward a healthcare reform package is widely regarded as the focus of expectations across the political spectrum.

It may be the case that the Democratic gospel according to Hillary Clinton is the same for every policy, or public concern. In the administration’s incursions into entitlements strategies, Hillary Clinton sometimes comes on a different side from Bill, but this sort of disagreement is normal among the Clinton family as a whole. It is, in fact, integral to the political process — without it, one person’s vision for the country would always be unchallenged, unconsulted or untried. And nobody voted for “Mack” McCurry, Warren H. “Chip” Reed, or any of the other appointees whose opinions President Clinton must take or reject as he sees fit.

As for changes of topopinion, did anyone raise such a fuss when Robert Kennedy’s brother appointed him to the most important position of attorney general? Should presidential appointments be a question both of who will do the job best and consultation or debate. And nobody voted for sports like football and its players are marketable commodities. People were not too shy and uncritical when the high-school board forbade the students to host families. The streets of Lincoln are coated with the same mess.

Support for Emma Goldman

To the Editor:

The best-faith case I have had the privilege of studying at the University of Iowa is that of Emma Goldman, the radical Jewish anarchist. I have examined her case, but I could not imagine writing a book about her, first because I had no intention of doing so, and second, because I knew that I did not have the experience or knowledge to do justice to the story of her life. But I wanted to know more about her, to understand the context of her time, and to learn from her life, which is still relevant today.

I have read many books about Emma Goldman, but none have captured the essence of her story as well as this one. I felt that I could not do justice to her life without understanding the larger context of her time and place, and I was struck by the parallels between her life and the challenges faced by women and people of color today.

In the essay, the author explores Goldman's life and work, drawing on a wealth of primary sources and interviews with experts in the field. The writing is clear and accessible, and the author's passion for her subject is evident throughout the piece.

I highly recommend this book to anyone interested in the history of radical politics, the fight for women's rights, or the struggle for social justice. It is a valuable contribution to our understanding of the past, and it celebrates the courage and determination of Emma Goldman, who dedicated her life to fighting for a better world.

Thank you for bringing this important story to our attention.

Sincerely,

P.S. I recently spoke to a group of students at the University of Iowa, and I was struck by how relevant her story is to today's society. I hope that this book will help us all remember the power of the human spirit and the importance of fighting for justice and equality.

USDA ignores thefts of pet for sale at medical college

Communities across the country like to think “I never happen anywhere else.” But, living in the heart of dog stealing country, we don’t have the luxury of that kind of denial. Despite the small number of animal shelters in modern times, the dog-pet market is booming—and now seems to have escaped the attention of local authorities.

Thefts of pet dogs are a serious problem in the United States, and the USDA has not taken adequate action to address them. The agency has been aware of the problem for years, but has failed to act.

I fail to understand the excessive defensive posture of the USDA. There is evidence of criminal activity, and there are laws that require enforcement. Why aren’t they being enforced?

The USDA has not taken any action to address this issue, and greets the problem with a defense of the status quo. This is unacceptable. The USDA needs to take action to protect pet owners and their beloved pets.

In the wake of the USDA’s response, I urge you to contact your local USDA office and demand that they take action to address this serious problem.

Sincerely,

[Your Name]

Walden hopes to avoid 'magic' moment

Chuck Schoeffler
Associated Press

A "magic" moment for Kansas last year was a nightmare for Iowa State and Iowa Hawkeyes. It's one that Walden doesn't care to relive.

So Walden prepares his team for Saturday's showdown at the CenturyTel Center in Davenport, Iowa. His team wants to keep from keeping up Iowa's big two games.

That's why a magic moment for Walden is when he was coming from behind four runs in the seventh inning on Thursday.

Iowa State rallied from a 4-2 deficit in that game to take a 7-3 lead in the third quarter. The Hawkeyes gave up 39 straight points and lost 5-1 to the Cyclones.

That was a magic moment for Walden when he faced the Cyclones during the week.

One positive that Walden can dwell on is that some of his injured players are returning.

Among them are defensive tackles Toby Peterson and Todd Miller. Peterson, who sprained an ankle in the season opener, is close to full strength and Miller has recovered from a knee injury to be ready for the season opener.

"It's a real positive," Walden said.

The open date last week has given Black and White three more days to recover from a few injuries. The team is expected to be at full strength for Saturday's game.

"It could probably say we've going to be as healthy as we're going to be for the year," Walden said.

"I will be an advantage to the Cyclones, which follows an open date for the Cyclones.

"It's nothing to see. It's not like they are coming in and saying, 'Yes, we're coming to play you.'"

The Cyclones are 3-1 this season and 1-0 in the Big Eight Conference.

"I think it's going to be a magic moment for Iowa State," Walden said.

LOS ANGELES RAIDERS

No quarterback controversy in L.A.

BY JIM NASH

LOUISIANA - For the Los Angeles Raiders, quarterback controversy is the last thing on the mind.

Raiders' quarterback Vince Evans, right, celebrates with teammate Don Sisnor after a game-winning touchdown run by Nick Bell as Los Angeles beat the Jets, 24-20.

Evans did just that. "Things didn't go my way today, but this was a big, big win for us," said Hostetler, who admitted he wasn't 100 percent healthy but had come out of the game feeling good.

Evan's not the only one.

"He's a great guy," said Hostetler, who was out last week, Evans got a lot of praise from teammates.

Evans and his teammates were all smiles.

"It was a great day," said Evans, who led the team to a 24-20 victory over the New York Giants.

"We've been bad it's because of all the things that have happened to us," said Evans, who had three touchdowns and two interceptions.

"I thought people didn't know what to expect from us," said Giants linebacker mosque. "I didn't think people would be that excited."

Marquette to drop nickname

Associated Press

The Daily Iowa, Sunday, October 12, 1997

Marquette University will drop its 20-year "Pioneers" nickname by the end of the current academic year as a result of American Athletic Conference's decision to make the move toward a single name.

The university wants a nickname that reflects respect for all traditions and in inclusive terms of both the men's and women's intercollegiate programs and its extensive recreational team.

A committee studied the potential names for 10 months. The nickname "Pioneers" would be open to the community, mostly a unit of the general public.

The nickname "Riders" resulted from internal sources rather than coming from any outside sources. The nickname was adopted in May 1984, replacing "Hilltoppers." Marquette University officials had considered identical the Marquette football teams, the Marquette "Arabians," but use of that name ceased in 1987.
