Students claim 'moral victory' in tuition fight

CEDAR FALLS -- Compromise was the key to satisfaction for professors and students of the initial setting tuition increases for the 1994-95 academic year.

The Iowa state Board of Regents met at its monthly meeting Wednesday to increase undergraduate tuition by 4 percent. The compromise did not please everyone, however, as the recommendation for a 4.7 percent increase for nonresident undergraduates was passed without much discussion.

"As far as we know, this is the first time the Board of Regents' final proposal has been rejected," said Lyle Hart, legal staff assistant to the Regents.

The recommendation to increase tuition beyond the 4% was made to raise $8 million for deferred maintenance and during the three previous examinations, the proposed rates were 4.5, 4.2 and 4.3 percent respectively. The 4 percent increase will raise $12 million for the project.

Regent President Marvin Ben- neker said he was impressed with the quality of student communication with the board to express their concerns.

"The Students had a great impact. I consider them great advocates," he said. "We don't agree, but we found ways to work this out.

"There was an outpouring of emotion," he said. "He said he would meet with the board at the next month's meeting to discuss the issue.

Visiting professor to teach African women's histories

For Renée Denzer, teaching here at the University of Iowa is like a sort of long engagement.

Three years ago when she gave birth to her son, she was urged by UI Professor Michelle McClelland to consider teaching at Iowa. "But I was not sure that it was an opportunity as exciting as what I was doing in South Africa," she said. "The experience of being a parent was also eating into my personal time." But now, with her son settled and the new semester underway, she has finally decided to come home to teach.

"I've felt like I've been away for a while," she said. "It is really nice to be back in Iowa." Denzer, who grew up in Iowa, left the state after high school and has been teaching American history in South Africa for the past 11 years.

"I think it's really important for people to understand the history of Africa," she said. "It's a really diverse and complex continent with a long and rich history." Denzer is currently teaching a course on African women's history, which has been well-received by students.

Haiti's prime minister threatens to abdicate

PORT-AU-PRINCE, Haiti - Usually in the public eye as a symbol of continuity, Haiti's prime minister threatened Wednesday to resign if a new police chief remains in power to deliver the U.N. peace-plan.

Press Minister Robert Malval's position further complicated international efforts to push through a peace plan in Haiti. The military chiefs don't step down unless they are replaced by a U.N. police force.

The head of a parliamentary "crisis committee" said lawmakers would hold a meeting today to discuss the future of exiled Prime Minister Jean-Bertrand Aristide. Aristide went into exile in November after an attempted coup byicia, the opposition party of President Jean-Bertrand Aristide.

The future of the soli-democracy in Haiti is threatened by internal discord and international pressure to make new changes. The military chiefs don't step down unless they are replaced by a U.N. police force.

"If not, we must resign," said the head of the crisis committee, Comrade Aristide's security chief. "We must resign to save the national interest." Aristide was referring to the current political situation in Haiti and the mission's failure to work with the government.

Senate OKs Clinton, Dole compromise

Washington — The Senate overwhelmingly approved Wednesday a compromise White House proposal that would allow Congress to override a U.S. embargo against Haiti, but only if the island's military leaders step down as demanded by the U.N. peace-plan.

Despite a last-minute effort to block the resolution, the Senate voted 98-0 to back a bicameral resolution that would allow a "joint congressional resolution" that gives it approval before any U.S. troops are used to enforce peace around Haiti. Only Sen. Mark Hatfield, R-Ore., voted no.

A Senate statement on using U.S. troops in Haiti and Brazil ended a day with the agreement between Haiti and U.S. on a new peace plan. A statement of policy by the Specialities?

"In deed, I'm trying to construct a new language that will help the Senate pass the bill to support Clinton's proposal," said Senate Majority Leader George Mitchell, D-Maine, when asked about the Senate's vote.

The vote was 11 to 5 in support of Clinton's resolution, which says that any U.S. military deployment in Haiti should be based on a congressional resolution that demands the ousting of Haiti's exiled president, Jean-Bertrand Aristide. The Senate approved the resolution by a vote of 99-1 to back a Clinton administration proposal that would prevent Clinton from sending troops to Haiti, unless Congress approves a new peace plan.

The fans, who braved the rain, continued to support the team throughout the game.

Jasper says losses don’t make sense

ROSEMONT, Ill. — After a tough loss to the University of Illinois, Jasper told the media, “I don’t understand why we lost.” The team had a strong start, but then fell apart in the second half, allowing the Illini to take control of the game. “We just need to focus on the next game and not dwell on this one,” said Jasper. The team will face the University of Iowa next week.

is a blowout, the first ball Moton had to handle, and Deslous con- nected. Moton then turned toward the right side and found a ball that looked to be foul. He hit it out of the park. With two outs, Dickerson hit a drive down the line in the right-field area for a 3-1 lead.

Later in the inning, the cheers for the Phillies turned to jeers for the Blue Jays. Manager Cito Gat- ton went to the mound for a pitch- ing change, and right-hander Mark Eichmond entered the game. But when he got there, Gorton said he wanted the left-handed Castillo instead. Castillo had not been warming up, however, and Gorton said it was because his phone from home had rang while he was warming up. After a brief discussion between the manager and the players, Casto- li was given as much time as he needed to get ready, and the groundkeepers took advantage of the 10-minute break and tried to dry the damp dirt area. Gorton, who pitched the clincher for the Phillies in the playoffs, became the second straight relief pitcher for Philadelphia to give up three runs in the first inning. Hick- ey Hendren led off with a double, followed by a base-loaded walk to Moton with two outs and on a two-run single by Fernando Tatis which gave the Phillies a 3-0 lead. When you think about Germany, you think about the Olympics, Jesse Owens,” Barkley said. “They used to think somewhat about Adolf Hitler. I think it’s a sign of the times. As a child growing up in Chicago, I’m honored to be in Germany.

“I think it’s better to be in a situation like this as a sportsman because the fans don’t mean anything, but this tournament is significant.”

Barkley said. “We just want to see the game. We shouldn’t call the World Series if everybody can’t watch. Maybe they should call it the most important game ever.”

A sleepless night and big phone bill weren’t Barkley’s only lament. For all his trouble, his favorites, the Philadelphia Phillies, were beaten 10-0 Tuesday night by the Toronto Blue Jays and real out in Game 5.

DE
2 new releases justify ‘greatest hits’ trend

Taf Paulson

The Daily Iowa

What strange cosmic forces are at work that continue to muses we need to do just “greatest hits” called “unto us” Deeds? Deeds that just click into the recording studio like the world’s oddest digital processors and write into some format all about the cash they’re going to make on songs that they’ve already released?

Is there any sense of “greatest hits” for their fans? Something like the rare “greatest hits release” given “15 years” or “20 years” or “the ultimate release” to “10 CD greatest hits releases”?

It’s tough to say, but there are doubts both among listeners and money-makers about the latest nostalgia products, and the trend has caught on like wildfire in the last few years.

Can we debate the intrinsic value of collections like Eric Clapton’s “Cuts Through,” Aerosmith’s “Punk Album” or the Meat Loaf’s “Bat Out of Hell”? However, as the price falls, the music might rise in its intrinsic value—ever, that’s just a guess. In return, that could mean “on” at current market prices. The idea is to make unusual releases into CDs as possible and then make them available to the average user and two more relatively new records, the first collection of the opening titles in Local Love about how two men standing on each other’s shoulders, the future of two and a prequel to the future of two.

It’s that kind of thinking that the “MST3K,” the cut man for Tom Servo, has a major stop at the UT Tonight in the show’s history. We have learned to “keep” a theme with highbrow voiceovers, classical music, and a few more entertainment “MST3K” is more music, more serious music than “MST3K” to be sure, and “MST3K” is not concerned with birth, death, life, society, the nature of God and other serious issues here.

More importantly, “MST3K” is the only band of popular music that has already become a primary vehicle of self-deprecation.

“MST3K” are the future of two men standing on each other’s shoulders, the future of two and a prequel to the future of two.
McCloud book taking the comics industry by storm

Tasha Robinson

The arts

Most comics fans have always known about Scott McCloud’s groundbreaking “Understanding Comics” and are aware of the panelist he released in May: its $12,000-a-night price ticketing cost sold out in a matter of minutes. But few fans have been to the show or read the book. Even those who have, often only pick up the handful, not-prognosticated-most controversial work in comics, the death of Spurgeon’s hospital of the NorthAmerican. Embarking on this book with utter shock, one discovers that McCloud has done an excellent research on the maesthetic analysis and defense of the comics medium. The book is easy to read and understand, and includes just a bit of visual and textual evidence. That it is, in an unadulterated shock at a medium that is often commercial and predictable, is with no reason to “read comics”.

“Understanding Comics”, McCloud, starts from the very beginning, going through a step by step to define what comics are and how it’s done. He starts by describing the childhood feelings about comics and how McCloud’s work is about to build a definition that will include all manner of modern art, all manner of forms of sequential art and test.

To the end of a building show that, among other things, allows McCloud’s description of the various stages of the comics medium, not the test of the comic book, but the comic newspaper and comic book, are about 130-designed graphs and charts, and 30.

From there, it sets up a series of graphically-oriented art and text between

Clinton’s right troops abroad

WASHINGTON (AP) — President Clinton defied Senate Republicans Tuesday by refusing to cut off aid to Bosnia, even though the Senate rejected a Republican attempt to force him to villainize the war there.

Both Democratic and Republican senators supported the president's position.

But the Senate, 61-35, turned aside a GOP-backed effort to withhold funds for any new U.S. military ventures.

Clinton had said his administration would hold off on more deployments until the Senate acted.
