Students, faculty square off on policy

Steve Chamraz
The Daily Iowan

UI students and faculty members are facing off against each other and the Iowa state Board of Regents in the wake of the sexually explicit materials policy implemented by the board Wednesday.

UI Student Association Vice President Micah Hobart said the policy does not affect the academic freedom of anyone, but rather provides fair warning to students that may feel offended by explicit material.

"These people that think the policy is against academic freedom are misinterpreting the policy," Hobart said. "It shouldn't affect the style of UI teachers. I don't think the board wanted to do this, but they had no choice with the Faculty Senate tabling the issue indefinitely."

Although some students are indifferent to the policy, many UI faculty members feel their rights as educators will be directly threatened.

According to Faculty Senate member and sociology Professor Ed Lawler, the policy upsets the "delicate" relationship between faculty members and their students.

"The policy could have a chilling effect," Lawler said. "It may cause some faculty to remove material important to the class."

Enforcing the policy, according to Lawler, may not be worth the effort as it may end up hurting the students.

"Writing a policy on sexually explicit acts causes more problems than it solves," he said.

The regents' decision to allow students to do an assignment different from the one they find offensive will not be accepted warmly, Lawler said.

"Any kind of alternate assignment policy is completely unfavorable," he said. "I'd be See POLICY, Page 7A

Flood response center establishes hot line

The U.S. Department of Agriculture has established an 800-number flood response center for agricultural producers impacted by the floods in the Midwest.

Starting today, people in nine Midwest states including Iowa can call 1-800-880-4183 to find out what flood-related agricultural assistance is available and where they can get it.

USDA program specialists will staff the number from 7 a.m. to 3 p.m. weekdays. At other times, questions may be left on an answering machine, and someone from the center will call back.

Girl Scouts' 'Godless' pledge angers some

MINNEAPOLIS (AP) — Promising to serve their "Creator" instead of God, or simply to serve, is now OK for Girl Scouts, but the decision to allow the choice was not universally cheered Sunday by people outside the scouts.

"This is one more organization that has become morally relativistic, and that's deeply disappointing," Tom Minnery, a spokesman for Focus on the Family, said Sunday. Focus is an evangelical Christian organization based in Colorado Springs, Colo.

The Girl Scouts national convention delegates voted 1,560 to 375 Saturday to allow girls to pledge service to the spiritual power of their conscience — or none at all.

William Kennedy Smith arrested for assault

ARLINGTON, Va. (AP) — William Kennedy Smith, nephew of Sen. Ted Kennedy, was charged with assault and battery on a bar bouncer early Saturday after a fight Sunday, says he didn't start.

Smith, 33, originally was involved in an altercation with a third man, who left the scene before officers arrived at Bardo Bar and Restaurant, according to Arlington County police.

Cleanup costs climb upward after I.C. flood waters recede

Mary Geraghty
The Daily Iowan

Although water from this summer's flooding has receded significantly, the cleanup costs continue to increase.

The total amount of flood damages to Iowa City is now estimated at $2.08 million, according to estimates released Friday by City Manager Steve Atkins.

The city has already spent nearly $600,000 on flood repairs, Atkins said, and is counting on the Federal Emergency Management Agency to pick up that tab as well as provide the additional funds necessary to continue repairs.

"What we have done so far we have spent from our reserves," he said. "We hope that we will be substantially reimbursed by FEMA."

The two major locational expenses for the city will be City Park and Benton Street, but sewer repairs See DAMAGES, Page 7A

FLOOD of '93

The following is a list of some of the estimated major repair and cleanup expenses from the flood:

UI STUDENTS ANGRY

Publishers in Seattle accused of duplicity

Jude Sunderbruch
The Daily Iowan

A group of UI students seeking jobs in the cruise and tourism industries have launched a crusade against a company in Seattle, Wash., that they believed deceived them.

Last month UI undergraduates Stephanie Glaser, Lisa Safley, Tracy Krulik and several of their friends sent $49.95 to a firm called Cruise Employment Services in Seattle for a guidebook on obtaining employment in the cruise and tour industries. The students found out about the book from a listing in "College Coupons," small coupon books distributed at the Union at the beginning of the fall and spring semesters.

The guidebook, "Cruise Employment Program," is the product of Cruise Employment Services, a subsidiary of Progressive Media, a Seattle-based publishing company. The 144-page book includes sections on the history of cruising, tips on getting hired, job hunting tools, and an extensive listing of cruise and tour companies including their addresses, types of positions available and other information.

However, the group of UI students who purchased the book contends that it contains many inaccuracies. In addition, the students said that some of the companies are unaware that they are listed in the "Cruise Employment Program."

"They knew nothing about this book and, in fact, they wondered why they were getting résumés in the mail," Safley said.

"I called about maybe 10 other ones or more, and all of them had no clue who this company was."

The students contacted many of the firms listed in the book and, according to them, some of the information is incorrect. They also found many of the firms to be uninterested in receiving applications.

244 GRIEVANCES TOTAL

Ombudsperson office logs fewer complaints

Megan Penick
The Daily Iowan

Troubled graduate students, sexual harassment and faculty complaints top the list of grievances received by the UI Office of the Ombudsperson, according to the department's annual report.

The office received a total of 244 complaints in fiscal year 1992-93, three fewer than the year before.

Associate Ombudsperson Maile-Gene Sagen said more people seem to be aware of the office.

"People are learning we're one of the offices on campus they can go to," she said. "It's been a real switch in our case load, and we just want to call it to people's attention that harassment is a problem."

The purpose of the Office of the Ombudsperson is to ensure that all members of the UI community receive fair treatment within the UI system, with particular attention to "any policies, programs, personnel or institutional decisions which ... violate the rights of students, staff or faculty."

There were 97 complaints made by students, 96 by staff, 41 faculty complaints and 10 others. The largest number of complaints, 77, came from the College of Liberal Arts with the second largest coming from the College of Medicine with 29 complaints.

Barbara Schwartz, UI ombudsperson from 1989 to 1993, said the numbers probably reflect an increased awareness of the office.

"It's hard to distinguish whether there are more complaints or whether our office is just more well-known," she said. "Our numbers are up all over."

There were 34 complaints of harassment last year in comparison to 14 in FY 1991-92.

Sagen said the harassment complaints reflect increased societal awareness of the issue.

"It's gender discrimination as well," she said. "I had a senior science major that was told by a professor, 'See, women just don't get it. Women shouldn't be in science.' That's the kind of stuff we're watching for as well."

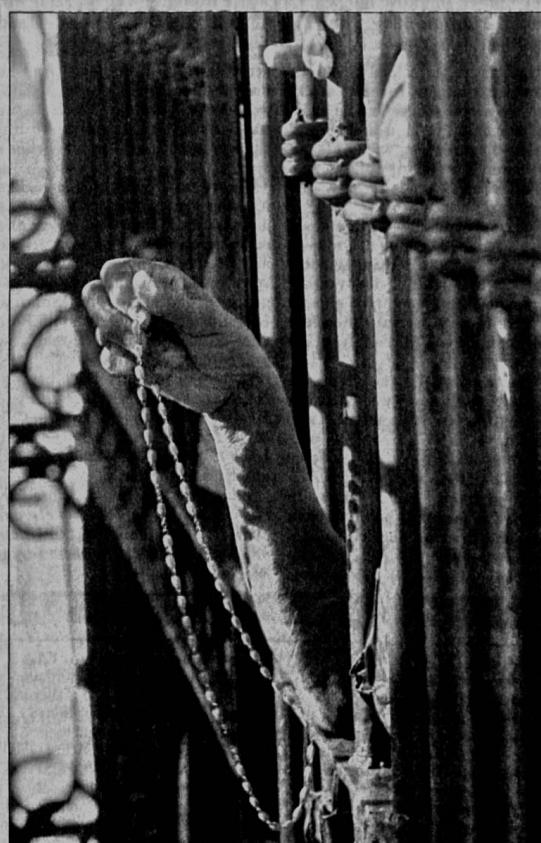

The annual report cites four main concerns: work place harassment, gender discrimination, unrealistic expectations for graduate students in their work assignments and the high number of complaints from the College of Medicine.

UI Ombudsperson Nancy Hauserman, appointed July 1, 1993, said the report shows where concerns should be directed.

"I think it signals there are areas we need to pay a lot of attention to," she said. "It shows people are more aware of sexual harassment. It suggests we have a continuing problem, and we need to pay attention to it."

Hauserman said general human rights is the main concern.

"Our biggest concern is the mistreatment of people," she said. "By 'people' I mean faculty, staff and students. 'Mistreatment' is sexual harassment, lack of respect, failure to communicate, and there are others."

Prof. argues for learning

Rima Vesely
The Daily Iowan

Always the objector, Richard Fumerton likes asking questions. "In junior high and high school, I loved to argue," the Canadian-born head of the UI philosophy department said. "I would always enjoy finding something to object to. When I didn't agree with something that was going on or something problematic, I would always have a lot of fun asking questions — giving the teacher a hard time."

Fumerton, now a professor himself, has been carrying that trait into his classrooms at the UI for almost 20 years.

David Guttenfelder/The Daily Iowan

Richard Fumerton sits in his Ford Mustang convertible. As the head of the UI philosophy, department the self-proclaimed hedonist spends most of his time dealing with metaphysical questions. The rest of his time is spent cruising.

"In philosophy, perhaps more than any other subject, argument is the very essence of the field and so a good teacher in a class small enough to do it always strives to engage the students in a give-and-take philosophical argument," he said.

"You want to start them asking questions, then they disagree with you," he said. "You want them to start disagreeing with each other, and you've got yourself a good class. I always try to get the discussions lively."

Lively discussions, Fumerton said, help students learn.

"If you inject humor into the discussion — in making distinctions and objections to views and so on — students remember the distinctions, remember the argument, remember the objection in a way that they might not if they didn't have that kind of humor," he said. "You want students to learn, and they learn better if they're genuinely enjoying the class."

Fumerton said he's always enjoyed philosophy classes, and he looked for a career that gave him a chance to argue and question.

Born Oct. 7, 1949, Fumerton grew up in Toronto, Ontario. He received a bachelor's degree from the University of Toronto (Victoria College) in philosophy in 1971, a master's degree in 1973 and his doctorate the following year from Brown University. In 1974 he began teaching as an assistant professor at the UI.

In addition to teaching, Fumerton has directed seven dissertations and published 29 articles. He has written three books including "Metaphysical and Epistemological Problems of Perception" and "Reason and Morality: A Defense of the Egocentric Perceptive." His third, currently a manuscript called

"Metaepistemology and Skepticism," is a book on the analysis of epistemic concepts and the implications of such analyses for traditional problems of skepticism.

However, Fumerton says he loves teaching.

"I really miss it when I go on developmental leave," he said.

"It's one of the things I enjoy most. I think you never stop learning from students. There's a kind of unpredictability; you never quite know what someone's going to say. Every so often someone comes up with a point that makes you think about things in a way you've never quite thought about them."

Students, indirectly, often help Fumerton with his research.

"Teaching and research are things that really complement each other," he said. "When a student asks questions or raises arguments, his or her views and arguments often find its way into your research."

Sideshow to feature the strange and gross

Tasha Robinson
The Daily Iowan

The demo video for The Jim Rose Circus Sideshow starts off with a theatrical but serious warning: "The performance you are about to see is real. The acts in this program have been created and refined through years of painful and unfortunate trial and error. The producers of this program assume no responsibility or liability for the imitation or attempted imitation of the acts presented in this program. Under NO circumstances should any of these acts be performed by anyone, anywhere, at any time. We're not fucking kidding."

It's a timely and necessary warning in a week where Disney is re-editing its football film "The Program" after a teen-ager was killed and two were injured attempting to imitate one stunt the movie portrayed. But even lying in the middle of a highway watching cars drive by inches away is probably safer than the average Jim Rose Circus Sideshow stunt.

Not to mention less gross. Rose's show, scheduled to appear tonight at the Union Bar & Grill, 121 E. College St., garnered a surprising amount of the press coverage at 1992's Lollapalooza tour. Essentially an old-fashioned freak show without the "born freaks," as Rose puts it, The Jim Rose Circus Sideshow specializes in genetically normal human beings doing extremely abnormal things to themselves.

Consider The Amazing Mr. Lifto, who specializes in hanging heavy objects off of his pierced body parts — lifting irons with his earrings, suitcases with a coat hanger through his tongue, concrete blocks with his nipple rings. Or The Enigma, who eats live bugs and worms. Or The Torture King, who puts out blowtorches with his tongue and plunges skewers through his cheeks and arms.

For the even less squeamish, there's Matt "The Tube" Crowley, who specializes in putting a 7-foot tube up his nose and down his esophagus, then pumping a ghastly mixture of beer, catsup, chocolate and Pepto-Bismol directly into his stomach.

It gets worse. In the video, he then forces the mixture back out and invites audience members to drink it.

It gets worse than THAT. Some of them do drink it.

Rose himself specializes in putting his face in a bed of broken glass and inviting audience members to stand on his head. He staples money to his face. He pushes screwdrivers up his nose. And he does the announcing for the show, delivering a yelping monologue halfway between a traditional carny's spiel and a punk-rocker's vocals.

According to Rose, who looks like a young Frank Zappa, the show is a break from common, mundane entertainments. "I believe people are tired of things that are slick, contrived, manipulated, choreographed and clean," he explains. By contrast, he says, The Jim Rose Circus Sideshow is "live, real, raw and dangerous."

Well, it certainly isn't boring. Neither is it for the squeamish. But it's certainly an interesting diversion for anyone bored with Iowa City's usual Monday night entertainment fare.

Admission to The Jim Rose Circus Sideshow is $8. Tickets are available in advance at the Union or Apollo Records. The show begins at 9:30.

SAFEWALK members believe new program needs to expand

Megan Penick
The Daily Iowan

A program established last spring to assist Hillcrest residents who don't feel safe walking home at night needs to be expanded, coordinators and volunteers say.

The pilot program SAFEWALK, which received funding last week from the UI Student Association, provides escort services for Hillcrest residents daily: Sunday through Wednesday from 7 p.m. to midnight and Thursday through Saturday from 7 p.m. to 2 a.m.

SAFEWALK coordinator Wendy Ward said the program has been successful. She said in 36 days of operation this fall, about 81 calls have been received.

The program currently has 33 student volunteers and 10 students on the SAFEWALK committee, which selects volunteers and oversees the program.

Volunteer Jim Davoux said while the program is for Hillcrest residents only, SAFEWALK often receives calls from other students.

"We've gotten calls from people who don't live in Hillcrest, and we've had to tell them no," he said. "It's a good enough program that it should be campuswide."

Volunteer and committee member Heidi Foorde said the program has been averaging two calls a night.

"A man and a woman will escort the resident to a campus building, fraternity or sorority house, or to the Pedestrian Mall," she said.

It needs to be firmly established that the program is necessary before it can be expanded, SAFEWALK adviser Michelle Rivera said.

"We would like to see it expand to other residence halls on the west side," she said.

Volunteer Brad Schoeberl said a school as large as the UI needs the SAFEWALK program.

"Most colleges our size have a program like this," he said. "There is enough misconduct that a program like this should be established. Within a year or two SAFEWALK should be campuswide."

The program is waiting for approval from the UI, Ward said.

"We're trying to expand," she said, adding that she hopes the program will be servicing all west-side residence halls before the end of the semester. "We're hoping to expand to the east side next spring."

When SAFEWALK receives a call from Hillcrest residents, passwords are established and two volunteers are sent out, one male and one female, to meet callers and to escort them to their locations. The escorts carry radios and remain in contact with the SAFEWALK operator who remains in the office to ensure the trip is carried out safely.

Two of the 4,700 racers in the 17th Annual Parsons Technology Hospice Road Races vie for position approaching the finish line of the 5K run Sunday morning.

Volunteers make road race success

Holly Reinhardt
The Daily Iowan

More than 4,700 road racers from 24 states and four countries, ranging in age from three weeks to 81 years, were in Iowa City Sunday participating in the 17th Annual Parsons Technology Hospice Road Races.

Anne Rawland-Warner, media coordinator for the race, said she was pleased with the turnout. "The community and Iowa City came out for the race. We couldn't be more proud of the people in the community," she said.

Although the 5K walk was the most popular race, Rawland-Warner said there was a race for everyone.

At press time, she said final tabulations were yet to be made on whether the fund-raising goal of $150,000 had been met, but $132,000 was the last count.

"We suspect we'll be close," Rawland-Warner said. An estimated 850 volunteers from throughout the community gave their time to help with the race.

"The community support is tremendous," Rawland-Warner said.

She credited the UI greek system with volunteering its time and efforts.

"The Tri-Deltas have been with the race for more than 10 years. That sorority puts in advance labor," she said. "Some other greek houses get involved; you've really got to hand it to them."

Tri-Delta member and race participant Lauren Gallaher said the races provide her house with its annual philanthropy project.

"It's a great cause. So many people show up for it, and it is very professionally put together," she said. "There are a lot of positions for volunteers. It lets volunteers throughout the community be active."

Rawland-Warner said volunteers make signs, help with traffic control, staff the registration area, and staff the race's spaghetti supper and "breakfast blast," among many other activities.

From Iowa to Virginia, the race winners represented a variety of states. Some of the winners were:

- 10K run: Rodney DeHaven, Madison, Wis., 29:15; Laura Lamena-Coll, Eugene, Ore., 33:59.

New education plan hurts Iowa most

Associated Press

DES MOINES - Iowa would lose a larger percentage of federal remedial education aid than any other state under President Clinton's proposal to shift the money to areas with more poverty.

Iowa educators are upset by the proposed shift, saying that it would put hundreds of teachers out of work and cloud the outlook for thousands of low-achieving students.

"The greater share of poverty might be in the inner cities, but don't leave us out in the cold. We have children crying out for help, too," said Sandy Nelson, a Denison, Iowa, elementary teacher who tutors first-grade students.

Under the plan, which has yet to be debated in Congress, Iowa would lose $13.8 million in federal money for remedial education, a drop of 29 percent. Fifteen other states would also lose money in the shift, but none has a greater percentage loss than Iowa.

Eighty-one of Iowa's 99 counties would lose money, and three - Black Hawk, Scott and Woodbury - would each lose more than $1 million.

There are gainers as well. Most of the counties along the southern two tiers of counties would get an increase in funding because they have a high percentage of children living below federal poverty standards.

Decatur County, for example, would get an additional $68,000. Twenty-five percent of public school children there live in poverty.

Polk County would also get a boost, gaining about $1.2 million.

"It should have been that way for a long time. It's not a gift to us," said Sharon Castelda, supervisor for remedial programs in the Des Moines district. About 3,150 children are enrolled in remedial programs in Des Moines, and another 2,175 are eligible but not served.

Aside from Polk and the 13 southern counties, the only other counties getting increases would be Buchanan, Palo Alto, Emmet and Monona. Only the counties with child poverty rates above 17 percent would receive more federal aid. Polk has a lower percentage but qualifies for more aid because of the concentration of the poor.

In Crawford County, which includes Denison, the loss would be 46 percent, a drop of $206,000.

Denison Superintendent John Finnessey said he is outraged.

"This is just political chicanery. This is a payoff, and it's going to hit a lot of kids. Big cities are going to get a lot of money, and rural areas are going to be hurt," he said.

FEMALE LAWYERS FIGHT FOR EQUALITY

Campbell launches UI law conference

Molly Spann
The Daily Iowan

Iowa Attorney General Bonnie Campbell challenged potential women law students to continue the fight for women's equality in the legal profession Saturday morning at the UI College of Law.

About 100 women heard Campbell kick off the annual Women in Law Recruitment Conference held by the Organization for Women Law Students and Staff.

Campbell said much work lies ahead for women entering the field, although some strides have been taken to improve numbers of women practicing law. Twenty years ago, 3 percent of the lawyers in the United States were women, and today that number has risen to 20 percent, she said.

"You will note that's not 50 percent," she said. "There's no time, especially now, to rest on our laurels. It's true that progress has been made, but many aspects of the legal profession still ache for change."

One gap which has actually widened over the years between men and women practicing law is in their salaries, Campbell said. In 1983, female lawyers made 64 cents for every dollar earned by male lawyers, and in 1991, women made only 59 cents for every dollar made by men, she said.

Campbell said in law schools across the country only two out of 10 faculty members are women.

These figures prove that women aren't holding an equal place with men in law and must be changed, she said. "Welcoming more women into the practice of law is essential to the effectiveness of the legal profession," Campbell said. "I know that, and I live it and I see it every day."

Campbell urged the potential law students to follow examples set by women lawyers and other role models who have paved the path for women — noting the United States' first woman Attorney General Janet Reno and first lady Hillary Rodham Clinton.

Campbell herself is the first woman to be Iowa's attorney general, and she is also running to become the state's first woman governor.

"I know that if you choose the legal profession, you will make similar strides, both in the lives of your clients and in the attitudes of the bar and the bench — which need to be changed," she said.

She also encouraged the women to accomplish their own "firsts" and "seconds" if they enter the field.

"We have an obligation to those who follow us to make the study and practice of law more responsive to the needs of the less powerful in our society," she said.

To speak a louder voice in law, women must take the lead and make a difference, Campbell said.

"By and large, it's not the legal profession that changes women — although it does have a profound impact," she said. "More importantly, it is women who are changing the legal profession, and that's all for the good."

Lutheran bishops reject proposal to recognize same-sex marriages

Associated Press

CEDAR RAPIDS — Iowa bishops of the Evangelical Lutheran Church in America issued a statement saying the church continues to recognize only heterosexual marriages.

The bishops on Friday rejected the first-draft report of a church committee which recommended that Lutherans also recognize homosexual marriages if the union is loving and the partners committed to each other.

The draft also says the Bible supports homosexual unions. The bishops disagreed.

"It is a significant departure from Lutheran tradition, and we cannot support it," said Bishop Steven Ullestad of Waverly. Ullestad, head of the ELCA's Northeast Iowa Synod, was joined in a statement by Bishop Curtis Miller, Storm Lake, of the Western Iowa Synod, and Bishop Paul Werger, Iowa City, of the South-eastern Iowa Synod.

The most controversial portion of "The Church and Human Sexuality: A Lutheran Perspective" says that relationships should be judged on the love and commitment of the people involved, not their sexuality.

"It is the binding commitment, not the license or ceremony, that lies at the heart of biblical understandings of marriage," the report says.

"In those circumstances where a legal marriage is not feasible, communities of faith may need to consider other ways of publicly affirming and communally supporting a loving, binding commitment between two people." The draft report also says that masturbation is healthy and that teaching teens how to use condoms to prevent disease is a moral imperative.

The bishops emphasized that the report has not been approved by the Conference of Bishops and has not been adopted by the church. A final draft and voting by church representatives is scheduled for 1995, after a period of study.

A separate Lutheran body, the Lutheran Church-Missouri Synod, also responded to the ELCA draft report. In a statement distributed Friday, A.L. Barry, president of the 2.6 million-member denomination, said the Bible does not in any way support homosexual behavior or the idea that masturbation is healthy.

Cable TV 'outlawed' in Iowa jail after inmates bicker over MTV

Associated Press

COUNCIL BLUFFS, Iowa — Inmates at the county jail couldn't agree on what to watch so the sheriff pulled the plug on cable TV.

Pottawattamie County Sheriff Jeff Danker said many inmates preferred watching music videos on MTV and were testy when other inmates wanted a change.

Danker also said he didn't want inmates watching the "Beavis and Butt-head" show.

He said he saw excerpts from the show "and I was amazed at the stuff in there. I was amazed, cutting the finger off of the other one with a chain saw, a pencil sticking in someone's eye. ... You don't want to be giving people ideas."

Pulling out cable won't save taxpayer dollars, however. Danker said inmates paid for the service themselves.

D.C. MURDERS

Operation: tourism

In the boring post-Cold War era, there are few crises that do not inspire American military action. No longer enmeshed with an ideological enemy as dangerous as ourselves, the United States settles now for confronting implied or even imagined threats — little dictators, big terrorists, very big drug dealers and Somalians. And as our troops dash around the world, crushing tiny empires in defense of something or other, one notices that it cannot last. There simply are not enough adversaries left in the world. Unless we turn inward.

Washington, D.C. — epicenter of all things American: democracy, power, guns — may shortly become the site of the most ironic United States military action since Ronald Reagan's rescue of medical students from the grasp of scheming Communists in Grenada. D.C. Mayor Sharon Pratt Kelly, calling the city's incredible murder problem "a war," has asked President Clinton, D.C.'s de facto governor, for 500 military police from the National Guard to assist the city's 4,250-member police force combat violent, drug-related crime.

Since January, 378 people have been murdered in the capital. The death toll will probably not exceed 1991's record of 489, but it will come close. Kelly wants the National Guard, which has been used against drug crime in Sumter, S.C., and Puerto Rico, to operate road blocks and ride with police officers patrolling D.C.'s high crime areas. The MPs would not be allowed to make arrests and the weapons they would carry are undetermined, but since Washington has one of the highest cop-to-citizen ratios in the nation, it seems unlikely that they would need much help in apprehending or shooting suspects.

Yet they do, according to Kelly. In addition to asking for the National Guard, Kelly has proposed a crime-control package that would try violent juveniles as adults and ensure that sentences are carried out. Earlier this month, a "strike force" comprising 150 city and federal police went into the streets of Washington and has not been heard from since.

Nothing terrible ever seems to happen outside federal buildings on Capitol Hill, aside from a few constitutionally protected demonstrations. But outside residential buildings near Capitol Hill, within sight of the Supreme Court and the Capitol itself, drive-by shootings are commonplace, crack and liquor dominate the lives of the people and the mood of the neighborhood, homelessness is epidemic, and no one really foresees an end to the sense of despair and death.

The presence of police, military or municipal, can have no effect on crime in these neighborhoods if the people living there cannot free themselves from the oppression of miseries that are not crimes: unemployment, alcoholism, pregnancy, illness, poverty and the shameful negligence by the government that shares their city. Kelly can lessen the flood of murder in her city only if she addresses the fundamental problems of her constituents. Rather than spending her money and energy on more police and stronger tactics, she should invest her time in rebuilding the real Washington, D.C., the one the tourists and lawyers never think about.

GUEST OPINION • CAMPAIGN FOR ACADEMIC FREEDOM

Regents' explicit materials policy challenged

On Wednesday, Oct. 20 the Board of Regents voted to force a sexually explicit materials policy on the UI. Ignoring the counter-arguments of students, faculty and administrators, as well as a petition signed by 927 students and faculty, the regents voted 6-3 to cram a dangerous and restrictive policy down our collective throats. Iowa now has the dubious privilege of being the first state in the country to impose such a policy on its public universities.

As students and as members of the Campaign for Academic Freedom, or CAF, who attended and addressed the meeting, we were appalled by the lack of intellectual acuity brought to bear on this matter by the regents. The most generous interpretation that can be made of their behavior is that they simply do not understand the implications of the policy, which effectively endorses homophobia and paternalistically shields students from exposure to ideas they find controversial. The regents even ignored the arguments of the UI general counsel, who stated that their policy may constitute an attempt to expand the legal definition of obscenity.

The Faculty Senate has been put in the difficult position of having to pass a policy itself if it wants to do away with the very restrictive policy imposed by the regents.

Moreover, they appeared to have made their decision in advance, and although they gave lip service to appreciating our arguments, the whole proceeding had the air of a kangaroo court where the outcome was predetermined. Although every speaker who addressed the meeting argued strongly and convincingly against the policy, it was nonetheless passed over all objections.

The regents appeared unable to grasp the fact that singling out and requiring a prior warning for sexually explicit materials (and especially homoerotic materials) is not a neutral act but a highly subjective and political one which effectively stigmatizes the material in question. One regent even said, after sitting through all the counter arguments but apparently absorbing none of them, that the policy only sought to affirm "accepted mores." The obvious

Opinions conflict on effects of pornography

MacKinnon, we see such a person having strangled her own credibility with the rope in question.

It didn't take much. Her recently published book, "Only Words," contains 110 pages, minus notes. In it, she makes an extravagant array of claims about the status of women, the harms of pornography and the need she sees for the United States to sharply redefine its interpretation of the First Amendment.

MacKinnon, professor of law at the University of Michigan, is smart enough to know better than to play with the flammable rhetorical mixture she uses to fuel the logic at the heart of "Only Words." Still, she does it. Among her claims are the following:

- The "reality" of women who have been victims of sexual assault in this country — namely, says MacKinnon, that pornography is a direct causal agent of their abuse — has been and continues to be denied by a patronizing conspiracy of silence among powerful males.

- The cluster of traits we refer to as femininity would not exist but for the breeding ground of oppression and assault in which it was fertilized and grew. (MacKinnon defines femininity as a delectable amalgam of shame masked by bravado, inefficacy, secrecy and repression of unpleasant truths. "You develop a self who is ingratiating and obsequious and imitative and aggressively passive and silent — you learn, in a word, femininity.")

- "In the United States, pornography is protected by the state."

- Pornography has an astonishing power over men, "who are made, changed, and impelled by it."

- "Pornography is masturbation material. It is used as sex. It therefore is sex. Men know this."

- "Sooner or later, in one way or another, the consumers want to live out the pornography further in three dimensions. Sooner or later, in one way or another, they do. It makes them want to; when they believe they can, when they feel they can get away with it, they do. Depending upon their chosen sphere of operations, they may use whatever power they have to keep the world a pornographic place so they can continue to get hard from everyday life."

MacKinnon and co-crusader Andrea Dworkin have proposed a law that defines pornography as "graphic sexually explicit materials that subordinate women through pictures or words." She says this definition covers everything from Playboy to snuff films.

MacKinnon's book is an important document in an important debate. It is well-written and well worth reading. When you finish it, read the Oct. 18, 1993, New Republic article by Richard A. Posner, a 7th Circuit judge on the U.S. Court of Appeals and senior lecturer at the University of Chicago Law School. He provides a powerful antidote of fact to MacKinnon's tirade of tainted rhetoric.

He reminds us of the following:

- Hard-core pornography is, in fact, illegal in the United States. It does not enjoy the state protection MacKinnon claims.

- "Denmark, which has no law against even hard-core pornography, and Japan, in which pornography is sold freely and is dominated by rape and bondage scenes, have rates of rape far lower than the United States."

- "... the rate of rape in the United States has been falling even as the amount of hard-core pornography has undoubtedly increased because of the videocassette."

- "... women's status tends to be lower in societies that repress pornography (such as those of the Islamic nations) than in societies that do not (such as those of the Scandinavian nations)."

- "Pornography may be a substitute for intercourse (including rape) rather than a complement to it," a view shared by some conservative members of MacKinnon's anti-pornography axis.

In addition, Posner makes the significant point that the mistreatment of women "used" in the hard-core pornography industry is increased by the one fact MacKinnon wants us to ignore: It is illegal. Any time an economy operates outside the boundaries of the law, Posner reminds us, "... participants in that activity will resort to threats and violence in lieu of the contractual and other legal remedies denied them."

He concludes, "The pimp is an artifact of the illegality of prostitution, and the exploitation of pornographic actresses and models by their employers is parallel to the exploitation of illegal immigrant labor by their employers. These women would be better off if all pornography were legal."

The fervor of MacKinnon's convictions illuminates each page of "Only Words." It is an eloquence reminiscent of another shrewd instrument used to great effect: the axe of Carrie Nation, crusader for prohibition. Posner points out that MacKinnon's drive to outlaw all pornography as she defines it is similar to the Temperance crusades. The end result could also be similar: unwieldy, misguided legislation that misses the mark and devours huge amounts of resources to very little actual effect.

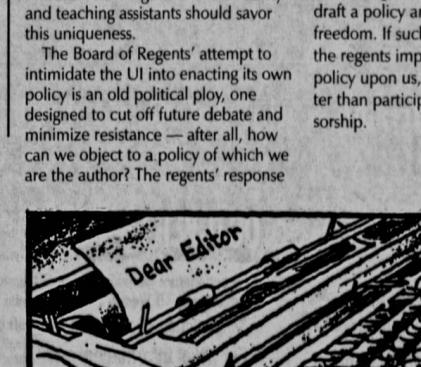

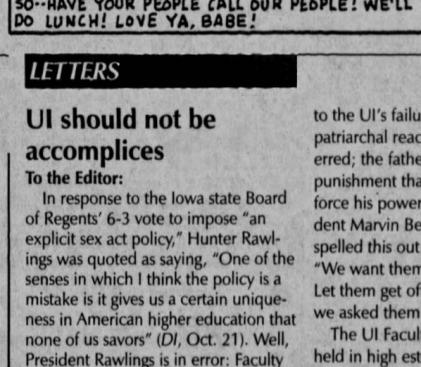

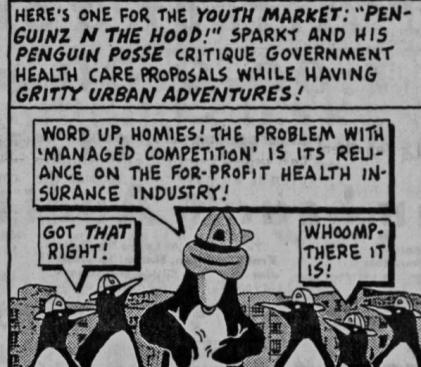

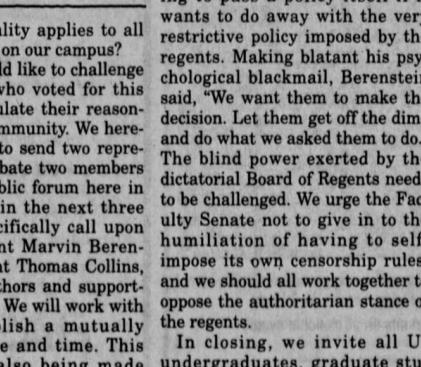

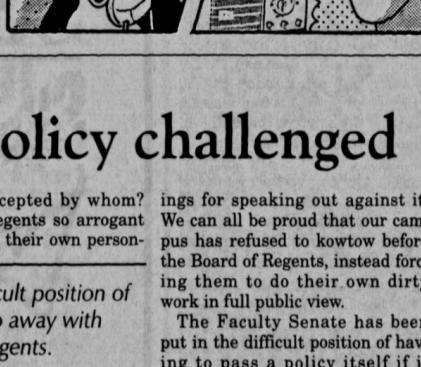

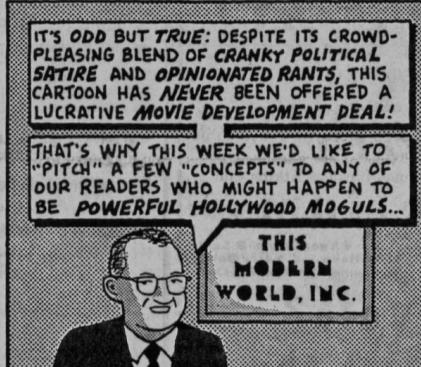

The fact is, we are as yet unequipped to make a decision on the issue of pornography and the ways in which it does or does not affect men and women in this country. There is a possibility that pornography has some effect on behavior; current evidence is simply inconclusive. MacKinnon, one of America's leading jurists, has put herself in the dicey position of pressing for legislation based on inconclusive evidence, using all the verbal flourish she can muster. Her main claim, that pornography does, in fact, constitute actual harm to women — not the mere idea of harm — is counterbalanced by far weightier evidence from societies in which the most demeaning forms of hard-core pornography are legal.

MacKinnon's treatise stands indicted by her refusal to face the possibility that legalizing all pornography — depicting adults and sold to adults — might more effectively neutralize its harms than attempts to sweep it under a legislative carpet. The reader is left with the impression that MacKinnon knew the conclusion she wanted her audience to reach and set about creating a bulwark of emotionally seductive arguments selected to support it. Still, her book, along with Posner's critique, constitute an important pair of readings on a complex issue. It is well worth taking the time to examine both.

THIS MODERN WORLD

THIS MODERN WORLD by TOM TOMORROW

question is, accepted by whom? Are these six regents so arrogant as to think that their own persons for speaking out against it. We can all be proud that our campus has refused to kowtow before the Board of Regents, instead forcing them to do their own dirty work in full public view.

The Faculty Senate has been put in the difficult position of having to do away with the very restrictive policy imposed by the regents. Making blatant his psychological blackmail, Berenstein said, "We want them to make the decision. Let them get off the dime and do what we asked them to do." The blind power exerted by the dictatorial Board of Regents needs to be challenged. We urge the Faculty Senate not to give in to the humiliation of having to self-impose its own censorship rules, and we should all work together to oppose the authoritarian stance of the regents.

In closing, we invite all UI undergraduates, graduate students and faculty to join the CAF at its next meeting Monday, Oct. 25 at 7 p.m. in room 64 of Schaeffer Hall.

Jean Fallow, David Hagan, Josiane Peltier and Brian Smith, co-authors of this guest opinion, are members of the Campaign for Academic Freedom.

UI should not be accomplices

To the Editor:
In response to the Iowa state Board of Regents' 6-3 vote to impose "an explicit sex act policy," Hunter Rawlings was quoted as saying, "One of the senses in which I think the policy is a mistake is it gives us a certain uniqueness in American higher education that none of us savors" (DI, Oct. 21). Well, President Rawlings is in error: Faculty and teaching assistants should savor this uniqueness.

The Board of Regents' attempt to intimidate the UI into enacting its own policy is an old political ploy, one designed to cut off future debate and minimize resistance — after all, how can we object to a policy of which we are the author? The regents' response to the UI's failure to comply is a typical patriarchal reaction: The child has erred; the father must now mete out punishment that is intended to reinforce his power status. Regent President Marvin Berenstein pretty much spelled this out for us when he said, "We want them to make the decision. Let them get off the dime and do what we asked them to do."

The UI Faculty Senate should be held in high esteem for refusing to draft a policy antithetical to academic freedom. If such refusal means having the regents impose an ill-considered policy upon us, so be it — it is far better than participating in our own censorship.

ETHICISTS URGED TO PREPARE

Cloning of human embryo raises questions

Connie Cass
Associated Press

WASHINGTON — Two researchers who cloned human embryos say science is a long way from duplicating human beings. But on Sunday they urged ethicists to prepare for the future.

George Washington University researchers said that over the past few months they have cloned human embryos using a method similar to one that already has allowed the birth of twin rabbits. The embryos used in the human study, however, were incapable of developing and were never implanted in a mother.

"It would be mere speculation to assume we could do it with humans," lead researcher Jerry Hall told a news conference Sunday night.

The university does not plan further research on the issue, he said.

Hall acknowledged the experiments raise science-fiction type questions, such as: Could cloned embryos be frozen and stored, then later implanted in a woman — perhaps to serve as an organ donor for an earlier child born from the same cloned embryo?

"Technically at this point we would not have the capability of doing that," Hall said Sunday in an earlier interview with CNN. "I think that is a far-off question that may be debated for the future."

Some researchers have shied from cloning embryos because of the ethical questions. The research on abnormal embryos was approved by the university's formal review committees, said Dr. Robert Stillman, director of the in vitro fertilization program.

"If society would look at this askance and not wish scientists to proceed, then it's better to have that ethical debate currently now, before anyone would do the real thing," Stillman told CNN. "This is not the real thing."

It is believed to be the first report of successful cloning of human embryos, although scientists knew the feat was possible in theory.

The news is "staggering, in terms of its ethical implications," said Arthur Caplan, director of the Center for Biomedical Ethics at the University of Minnesota, in a phone interview.

The researchers cloned the embryos into identical twin or triplet embryos, using methods similar to those already used by others to clone rabbit embryos. Cloned rabbit embryos have been implanted in a mother and successfully raised as twin rabbits, Hall said.

The abnormal human embryos — which were fertilized by more than one sperm — consisted of only a few cells. They were a byproduct of the in vitro fertilization laboratory's work to help couples who are unable to conceive. Sperm and eggs from the parents are mixed in the laboratory, then implanted in the would-be mother.

"If a woman has only a single egg to be fertilized, the chances of a successful pregnancy are only about 10 percent," Stillman said.

But if doctors could clone that embryo into quintuplets, the likelihood of the woman successfully giving birth would "rise dramatically," he said.

The researchers presented their work at an Oct. 13 meeting of the American Fertility Society and the Canadian Fertility and Andrology Society. The open meeting in Montreal was not publicized, but the cloning was reported Sunday in The New York Times.

19TH DEATH HE WITNESSED

Kevorkian-attended suicide ruled a homicide

Associated Press

PONTIAC, Mich. — The death of a 72-year-old woman who killed herself in the presence of Dr. Jack Kevorkian was a homicide, a medical examiner ruled Sunday.

Merian Frederick of Ann Arbor died of carbon monoxide poisoning, said Oakland County Medical Examiner Dr. Ljubisa Dragovic.

Kevorkian was present Friday when Frederick, who suffered from a degenerative neuromuscular disorder known as Lou Gehrig's disease, killed herself by inhaling carbon monoxide, his attorney said. It was the 19th death Kevorkian attended.

The woman's son and daughter-in-law and her minister were present, Frederick said.

Dragovic has ruled all 11 suicides attended by Kevorkian in Oakland County homicides. Four deaths in Wayne County where Kevorkian was present have been ruled suicides.

"The moment there is someone else's involvement in death it becomes a homicide," Dragovic said. "Assisted suicide is a misnomer. It does not reflect the actual happening. ... Assisted death is the proper term."

A ruling of homicide does not necessarily mean a murder has taken place. It indicates the involvement of a second person in a death that is not from natural causes.

Kevorkian currently faces trial in Wayne County on charges of assisting in the suicides of two men. He is free on bond.

Police were expected to deliver results of the Frederick investigation to Oakland County Prosecutor

Richard Thompson some time this week.

Thompson filed a murder charge against Kevorkian in 1990 following the first death in which Kevorkian was involved.

That charge, and two subsequent murder charges sought by Thompson, were dismissed when judges ruled there was no law at the time against assisted suicide.

Kevorkian, a 65-year-old retired pathologist, advocates for the rights of the terminally ill to commit suicide with a doctor's help.

Claiming the policy is homophobic, UI Teaching Assistant Pat Gallagher is "firmly against" the policy, saying the regents have stigmatized homosexuals in light of the policy.

"I don't know if embarrassing is the word, but it's embarrassing the regents would do this," Gallagher said.

Josiane Peltier, a TA and member of the Campaign for Academic Freedom, attended the regents' meeting Wednesday and said her opinion and the opinions of others in CAF were virtually ignored by most of the regents.

"The regents couldn't care less what we were saying," she said.

Peltier and CAF are planning further actions to repeal the regents' decision, beginning with sending letters to the regents challenging them to a debate.

"We are not going to stop at this," she said. "Iowa is the first state in the nation that's doing this, and we're going to fight it."

all over Iowa City will be another significant cost.

If FEMA does not come through with the money, Atkins said the city may have to go into next year's budget to cover the costs.

"There are a whole variety of issues we will have to undertake because we're not going to gut public-service programs," he said. "We can make gradual adjustments even if we have to do it over the next couple of years."

Another way the city hopes to gain funding for its repair projects is through fund-raisers organized by community members.

Mayor Darrel Courtney will announce details of a fund-raising program to offset the $850,000 bill for City Park restoration at a press conference Tuesday, Atkins said.

This program will raise money for the cleanup costs that FEMA will not pay for.

"There are more expenses like tree replacement, for example, that are not covered by FEMA," Atkins said. "FEMA has certain guidelines it will accept on certain items, and you just have to eat the difference."

Several baseball fields were also wiped out when the Iowa River took over City Park this summer and will have to be resodded if Iowa City boys' baseball is to continue next season.

COMPANY

"It seems like most of the companies are more geared to people who have already graduated," Glaser said. "I don't think they should gear their advertisements toward college students."

Matthew Lucas, chief executive officer of Progressive Media, said the firm always wants its customers to be satisfied and would be happy to provide Glaser and the other students with a refund.

"We've never denied anyone a refund, and all she has to do is send back the product," he said. "If anyone makes a concerted effort to get employed and doesn't, we'll refund their money."

In response to the students' contentions that firms in the book are not aware they are listed in it, Lucas said the companies are all contacted to ensure the timeliness and accuracy of their listings.

"They are all surveyed, both on the phones and through the mail, so at least one person in the company who responds knows," he said. "We update a minimum of two times a year."

Although Glaser and the other UI students who purchased the book with her are not pleased with the product, Lucas said the "Cruise Employment Program" has been successful and has helped many find employment in the cruise and tourism industries.

"We've had great results from people who've bought the book," he said.

The UI students' problems with the book led them to start a quest to obtain a refund and point out to others the alleged problems with the book. Thus far, they have contacted the office of U.S. Rep. Jim Leach, R-Iowa; consumer protection agencies in Iowa and Washington state; and others.

The students also contacted Jude Rand, president of College Coupons, which prints 2 million coupon books a year and distributes them nationwide at approximately 50 colleges twice annually. Rand said Progressive Media has advertised with his firm for a number of years, and he hasn't had problems with them before.

"This is the first complaint I've had from someone that the service that they offered was not what they expected," he said.

Rand then contacted Progressive Media and found out that the company planned to give Glaser a refund. He reiterated that College Coupons has had good experiences with Progressive Media to date and added that he always tries to ensure products or services listed in "College Coupons" are of the highest quality.

"We have made, over the last eight or nine years in Iowa City, every effort to put in the best and most popular products and services for people, and I won't tolerate anything that runs counter to that," he said.

Glaser has been unable to reach the Better Business Bureau in Washington state to date but said she plans to try again today. Lucas said Progressive Media and Cruise Employment Services both have excellent records with the bureau.

"We check in with the Better Business Bureau. We're members here in Seattle — they review all of our products, all of our advertising, they give us approvals on every-

IRA bombing proves deadliest in 6 years

Shawn Pogatchnik
Associated Press

BELFAST, Northern Ireland — Some faces were hardened with hate, others streaked with tears as they looked Sunday at the spot where an IRA bomb exploded without warning, killing 10 people and wounding 58.

The Irish Republican Army took responsibility for the attack, which it said was aimed at a meeting of commanders of the Ulster Defense Association.

Both groups are outlawed. The IRA, which draws its support from Northern Ireland's Catholic minority, wants to unify the province with the republic of Ireland, while the Protestant-based UDA wants it to remain part of the United Kingdom. The UDA has killed 15 Catholics this year.

The bomb exploded in a fish shop on the Shankill Road at midday Saturday when the street was crowded with shoppers. It was the deadliest terrorist incident in Northern Ireland in six years.

Police said Sunday they had arrested an unspecified number of people and were interrogating them about the bombing.

Prime Minister John Major, in Cyprus for a Commonwealth summit, said Sunday the IRA could never achieve its goals by violence.

"The sort of atrocity we saw yesterday will isolate and marginalize the IRA increasingly," he said in a BBC interview. "People cannot bomb their way to a political objective; it simply cannot be done."

For the Protestants of the pro-British district, the bombing has underscored their belief that you can't talk with the IRA, only hope to destroy them.

"How many young lads are going to join up to the UDA now?" asked Alfie McCrory, 35, a local resident.

The shop's 63-year-old owner, John Frizzell, was killed along with his 29-year-old daughter, Sharon McBride. A 7-year-old girl and her mother and father were also killed by the explosion.

One of the bombers, 23-year-old Thomas Begley, also died in the blast. His comrade, identified in hospital records as Sean Kelly, was under police guard in critical condition.

Belfast City Councillor Joe Coggle, who lives near Shankill Road, said local residents helped the injured IRA bomber because they did not know who he was.

"We gave him our full sympathy. If we'd known, I hate to say it, but I don't think he'd have gotten out alive," said Coggle, whose son is in prison for loyalist paramilitary activities.

In a statement to Belfast media the IRA said it "regretted" the bombing and said it had intended to warn passers-by, but the bomb exploded prematurely.

Gerry Adams, president of the IRA-supporting Sinn Fein party, told the Associated Press:

"What happened yesterday was a terrible tragedy. No matter how well-intentioned the IRA people might have been, they need to be mindful of the potential for such tragedy.

"We have an IRA volunteer dead, and those women, children and other innocent people dead also. My sympathy is there with those families."

Kidnappings intensify Algerian insurgency

Associated Press

ALGIERS, Algeria — Gunmen killed a policeman and abducted three French diplomatic employees Sunday, and suspicion fell on Muslim fundamentalist militants who have begun targeting foreigners.

The two men and a woman were seized by an armed band as they left their residence in central Algiers, witnesses said. A policeman guarding their building was killed in a shoot-out. A fourth French worker escaped from the abductors.

The three who were kidnapped work in the French consulate's visa section, the French Foreign Ministry in Paris said.

The insurgency began in January 1992 when the government canceled parliamentary elections in which fundamentalists appeared assured to win a majority.

Since then, the government has declared strict curfews and conducted frequent sweeps against the fundamentalists. More than 2,000 people have died in the conflicts between police and fundamentalists.

Algeria's large foreign community includes technical experts working with Algeria's oil and gas industry, the main source of foreign exchange for a nation in economic disarray.

Thursday, three abducted foreign oil technicians were found dead.

No. 7 Iowa stuns top-ranked Penn State

Iowa blanks Lady Lions, 4-0; shuts out Spartans

Kris Wiley
The Daily Iowan

Rankings made no difference in Iowa's 4-0 rout of No. 1 Penn State Sunday at Grant Field.

The No. 7 Hawkeyes took control just three minutes into the game on a short corner execution by all-American Kristy Gleason, and handed the Lady Lions their first defeat of the season.

"We're peaking at the right time," Iowa coach Beth Beglin said. "If we beat the No. 1 and No. 2 teams, there is no question in my mind that we should be in the top four.

"That is a decisive victory and we should definitely move up."

Iowa defeated Michigan State, 5-0, Friday, and stands 14-3 on the season and 5-2 in the Big Ten.

The Hawkeyes also got their revenge on Penn State after the Lady Lions defeated them, 1-0, three weeks ago at University Park, Pa.

"We weren't going to get pushed around this time," senior Tiffany Bybel said.

The Hawkeyes credited their success to a complete team effort.

"We were just pumped up," Bybel said. "It was a team thing."

"We didn't excel together at Penn State," Gleason said. "Today we showed entire symmetry."

After leading 2-0 at halftime on an unassisted goal by senior Heather Bryant at the 11 minute, 11 second mark, the Hawkeyes knew they would have to come out strong in the second half to hold off the Lady Lions.

Goalie Jessica Krochmal came up with two saves midway through the second half on Penn State short corners to hold off the Lady Lions.

"We knew we had to come out hard and not leave anything on the field," said Krochmal, a freshman from Bow, N.H.

Gleason, the nation's leading scorer, added a goal on a free hit at 12:27 in the second half, and Kraybill shot the final goal on an assist by Gleason with 6:33 left.

"We dominated early in the game," Beglin said. "The second corner put pressure on Penn State, and took them out of the game."

Beglin said the Iowa defense played a crucial role in the win.

"The team defense was terrific. They did a terrific job as a unit," she said.

Iowa recorded 10 shots on goal on Penn State's 12. The Lady Lions also led on penalty corners with seven, while Iowa had five. Krochmal finished with six saves. Penn State's Shelly Meister had four.

Emily Smith led the Hawkeyes with two goals against Michigan State. The sophomore from Lake-wood, Colo. scored an unassisted goal at the 13:17 mark of the first half, and came back to hit another two minutes later on an assist by Gleason.

"Emily has progressed leaps and bounds," Beglin said. "She has good speed to turn it on and turn the corner. Now we have to get her to create more out of those situations."

Aimee Klapach got Iowa on the board first with a stroke. Ann Paré and Bryant added goals in the second half.

The Hawkeyes tallied 24 shots on goal to the Spartans' four. Goalies Jessica Krochmal and Rachel Smith recorded three saves. Michigan State's Tricia Gann had 15 saves.

"A lot of times we don't look at the outcome," Beglin said. "One, we want to score early and put the game away early, and two, we want to play the way we like to play early."

"We weren't going to show (Michigan State) anything. We were concerned about executing our game plan."

Iowa remains undefeated at Grant Field

Kris Wiley
The Daily Iowan

The Iowa field hockey team loves Grant Field.

After a 4-0 shutout of No. 1 Penn State Sunday, the Hawkeyes raised their winning streak at home to 37 games, dating back to a 1988 loss to Northwestern in Kinnick Stadium, where Iowa played before Grant Field was built.

"This is our house. We look at it like they're not going to take something from our house," Iowa coach Beth Beglin said.

Senior all-American Kristy Gleason said part of the magic of Grant Field is the name itself, which was dedicated to Iowa women's athletic director Christine Grant.

"This is our field. It's a dream come true to have your own turf. I look at it and say, 'how fortunate we are to have this,'" she said.

Grant Field is the newest addition to the Iowa athletic facilities. Completed in the fall of 1989, it is a $640,000 Astro-Turf field.

"This turf is an awesome field to play on because it's made for field hockey," Beglin said.

Gleason said it's a totally different game playing on Grant Field as opposed to going on the road.

"When you're at another field, it's hard to focus," she said. "It helps a lot more (to host). We love to host here."

The Hawkeyes tied the record for shutouts in a season Sunday with 14, also recorded during the 1982 and 1989 seasons, in front of a Grant Field-record 1,339 fans. The previous record was 1,205, set last season.

Beglin said Hawkeye fans got lost in the 70,000-seat Kinnick Stadium, but get into the action easily at Grant Field.

"Here, they're right on the sidelines," she said. "That bolsters the team a lot."

Gleason credits much of Iowa's success at home to its fans.

"I can't emphasize enough what it means to have the fans here," Gleason said. "We wouldn't stand

Hawkeyes end eight-game skid

Joel Donofrio
The Daily Iowan

The Iowa volleyball team picked up its first Big Ten victory of the season Friday night, defeating Indiana 17-15, 15-10, 16-14 at Carver-Hawkeye Arena.

After Iowa freshman Jill Oelschlagel slammed home a kill on match point, her teammates flooded the floor as their eight-game conference skid reached its end. Freshman Jennifer Webb led the Hawkeye attack with 19 kills, while Oelschlagel belted 16 kills behind a .375 hitting percentage.

"We came out ready for this game," setter Lisa Dockray said. "We were mentally prepared, and that's what helped us play better. We were determined that this was one we were going to get."

Dockray's game one-ending kill helped the Hawkeyes thwart a determined Hoosier comeback. Iowa had jumped out to a 13-6 lead, but Indiana battled back and had a game point at 14-15.

"The first game, it was huge," Schoensted said. "I think from a confidence standpoint it was pretty critical for us to hang on, because this is a team that doubts itself a little bit."

Another key factor in the Hawkeyes' victory was the relative good health of their team. Other than Jennifer Welu, who is still sidelined with a broken ankle, the entire team was healthy all week.

"This is the first Big Ten game where everyone's been healthy, and since we use our bench so much, it's important to have everyone ready to go," Dockray said. "It's great to have everyone healthy."

The Indiana match featured a new starting lineup, with freshman Teri Fleming joining usual starters Dockray, Oelschlagel, Webb, Staci Morley and Tiffany Meligan. However, Schoensted was quick to praise seniors Erin Weaver and Courtney Gillis for sparking the Hawkeyes with their combined 19 kills and 27 digs off the bench.

"We tried a new lineup and it did real well, but I thought our seniors came off the bench and did a nice job tonight," Schoensted said. "Also, Staci Morley came in when we were down 9-1 in game three and got us back into the game. We felt we could change the focus of the players from the score to concentrating on doing some good things for a new setter, and it worked."

Weaver added that it didn't matter to her whether she starts or comes off the bench, as long as the team plays well.

"Actually, I'm comfortable either way, but I think Linda likes me to come off the bench and kind of get things going," Weaver said. "I think that gives a lot more motivation to the team, and for me it's fun to come in and make a difference."

The Hawkeyes (9-13 overall, 1-9 in the Big Ten) were unable to keep their momentum going on Saturday night, dropping a 15-8, 15-9, 15-5 contest to Purdue. Iowa registered only 39 kills to Purdue's 62, while the Boiler-makers enjoyed a blistering .348 hitting percentage.

EAST LANSING, Mich. — Michigan State looked sluggish in a 24-10 win over Iowa, but there's no question the Hawkeyes were much improved over the team that was routed 49-3 by Illinois a week ago.

The Hawkeyes dropped to 0-4 in the Big Ten and 2-4 overall with the loss to No. 24 Michigan State (2-1, 4-2) in front of a homecoming crowd of 64,726 at Spartan Stadium Saturday.

Iowa quarterback Paul Burmeister doesn't believe in moral victories, but he admits the Hawkeyes took a step forward against the Spartans.

"There's no such thing as a moral victory," Burmeister said. "We're all disgusted with our win-loss record."

Burmeister completed 25 of 49 passes for 249 yards, topping his career-high at Michigan three weeks ago of 248 yards. Spartan quarterback Jim Miller connected on 13 of 20 passes for 120 yards. He was intercepted by Iowa cornerback Scott Plate for his first interception in 126 passes.

Michigan State dominated the running game with sophomore tailback Duane Goulbourne picking up a career-high 213 yards on 29 carries.

Despite Goulbourne's yardage, Iowa coach Hayden Fry said he was pleased with the Hawkeyes' defensive effort. Larry Blue brought down Miller for four sacks and Mike Wells had two.

Blue said he wasn't surprised by Goulbourne's performance.

"They ran hard and that's what running backs are supposed to do," Blue said. "We didn't get in position to make some plays and sometimes we did miss some tackles."

On Iowa's first possession, running back Ryan Terry returned a kickoff 44 yards to the Michigan State 48-yard line. The drive ended with a Todd Romano 23-yard field goal to tie the score at 3-3.

In the second quarter, Burmeister passed to tight end Scott Slutzker for a 14-yard gain. A facemask penalty against the Spartans set up the Hawkeyes' first touchdown, a 5-yard rollout pass from Burmeister to Slutzker. The Spartans led 17-10 going into halftime.

Michigan State coach George Perles said he talked to his team during halftime about coming out flat.

"I wasn't concerned about it before the game," Perles said. "I was concerned at halftime. The defense rose to the occasion in the second half and kept Iowa off the field."

Blue, Wells lift defense

Roxanna Pellin
The Daily Iowan

EAST LANSING, Mich. — Cornerback Scott Plate's fumble recovery on the Iowa 1-yard line against the Spartans Saturday reminded Hawkeye Mike Wells of the good old days.

"We just felt like the game was ours at that point," Wells said after the 24-10 loss. "Our defense was playing super. I felt great out there. There's a time I was playing and I came off the field just happy. Then I looked at the scoreboard and I was like, 'man, we're losing 17-10. I forgot for awhile that we were losing.'"

"The way we were playing felt like the old days when we won all the time. On the field, there's really no difference, just a couple of plays that make a losing season compared to a winning season."

The senior right tackle had a game comparable to last season's Northwestern game when he became Iowa's all-time sack leader with three sacks against the Wildcats.

Against the Spartans, he sacked Michigan State quarterback Jim Miller twice for a loss of 21 yards. He holds Iowa career records for tackles for losses (42) and sacks (27).

Wells was complimented by defensive end Larry Blue who had four sacks for a loss of 34 yards and a forced fumble.

Penn State coach Charlene Morette said home-field advantage plays a major role in any given game.

"You have to give Iowa a lot of credit," she said. "The Hawkeyes play very well on their home field, and we play well on our home field."

Iowa is 14-3 on the season and hopes its record, especially at home, will boost its bid for a post-season matchup at Grant Field.

The Hawkeyes host their last home game of the season next weekend when No. 2 Northwestern comes to Iowa City.

The Wildcats beat the Hawkeyes two weeks ago, and Iowa is looking for another upset.

"I hope we can show everyone that there can be some excitement going on in Hawkeye land," Gleason said.

was the best the Spartans have faced this season.

Iowa coach Hayden Fry agreed that his defense came ready to play.

"That's probably as good a job as anyone's done to Miller," Fry said. "There's no question in my mind that Blue and Wells played their best ball games since they've been at Iowa."

Iowa held Miller to 120 yards passing on 13 completions, nearly half the Spartans' 224 yard passing average. Last week against the Buckeyes, Miller completed 31 of 42 for 360 yards.

Michigan State piled up 330 yards of total offense, below the season's 412-yard average which ranks them fourth in the Big Ten.

Last week Fry said his team could be "lifetime members of the Salvation Army" for giving up 475 yards to the Illini. Saturday nothing came easy for the Spartans.

"I think Michigan State has a heckuva ballclub," Fry said. "They had to work for everything they got."

Blue said the Hawkeyes just played with emotion.

"We were very excited," Blue said. "We came out there and told each other not to be down if anything goes wrong. We were just intense."

ward.

Both teams went scoreless during the third quarter with Iowa's 61-yard drive ending when Romano missed a 45-yard field goal attempt.

The Hawkeyes were unable to score in the fourth quarter, getting poor field position off of punts. Iowa gained the ball at the Iowa 4- and 20-yard lines before the Spartans scored their final touchdown. Goulbourne scored on a 2-yard run to put Michigan State ahead 24-10.

Iowa's final drive ended on the Michigan State 12-yard-line when time ran out.

"Offensively, we just can't get enough points on the board," Fry said. "But we're getting better, I have to keep looking for the positive things. We worked our tail off to get 10 points."

The Hawkeyes had scored 20 points in their last four games prior to the Michigan State matchup.

Burmeister said the lopsided loss to the Illini and a pep rally held by fans during the week provided a spark for the Hawkeyes.

"I felt like I was individually challenged," he said. "People who boo and second guess don't matter, that motivates the hell out of me. I really wanted to show people that I'm a good quarterback."

Iowa hosts Purdue Saturday at Kinnick Stadium. Kickoff is scheduled for 1:05 p.m.

WORLD SERIES

Criticized Gaston joins elite coaches

Hal Bock

Associated Press

TORONTO — Let's hear what the critics have to say about Cito Gaston, now.

Let them criticize his moves. Let them second guess all they want. He's the guy sitting with two World Series rings. He's the guy traveling in the company of some of the game's most renowned managers.

"It doesn't matter what I do," Gaston said. "I'll still get criticized. I don't mind. Some people were really nasty with their comments and I think some people are jealous about it. I'm not a jealous person. No matter what happens, as long as I have the respect of my players, that's what I care about."

There's no problem with that, not after consecutive World Series championships — the first manager to accomplish that feat since Sparky Anderson with Cincinnati in 1975-76. Only nine others — Dick Williams, Ralph Houk, Casey Stengel, Joe McCarthy, Connie Mack, Miller Huggins, John McGraw, Frank Chance and Bill Carrigan — have done it in 90 years of World Series history.

Most of those pilots were high-profile guys in stark contrast to Gaston, who is the strong silent type.

"Cito doesn't speak loud," Series hero Joe Carter said. "A team meeting is maybe four or five words. That's the truth. But when he comes to the mound, it's not a conference call. He lets you know what he's there for in no uncertain terms."

Gaston is a big man — 6-foot-4, 220 pounds — and he walks with a purposeful stride. He rarely argues with umpires and he is fiercely loyal to his players.

"I love these guys," he said after the Blue Jays won the Series. "They make my job easy. They play hurt. They play every day. I'm really happy for the guys on the club who never won a World Series before."

Gaston played for 10 seasons and never made it to the postseason. .256 for his career with 91 homers. He was a productive hitter with "I was a hitter," he said, "a so-called hitter."

Love III holds on for win

Bob Green

Associated Press

LAS VEGAS — Davis Love III eagled two of his first three holes Sunday en route to a 6-under-par 66 and cruised to an eight-stroke victory in the $1.4 million Las Vegas Invitational.

He started the day with a six-stroke lead and finished the five-day, 90-hole tournament at 29-under 331.

Love was 10 strokes ahead at the turn on the TPC at Summerlin and could have made it even more of a runaway had he not hit into water on the 17th and taken a double-bogey.

The victory was the eighth of his PGA Tour career and second of the season. It was worth $252,000 and increased his season's earnings to $727,259.

This was a race for second place from the start.

Love, already in command, holed a 100-yard wedge shot for an eagle-2 on his first hole. On the par-5 third, he reached the green with an iron and dropped a wide-breaking 30-foot putt for a second eagle.

From that point, attention centered on second place and the race for the last few positions in the 30-man field for the Tour Championship, which begins Thursday in San Francisco.

Only the top 30 money-winners through the Las Vegas tournament are eligible for the $3.5 million season-ending event.

Craig Stadler made it, dropping a double-breaking 25-foot putt on the final hole for a 65 that put him second at 339.

That was worth $151,200, increasing his earnings to 505,023 and vaulting him from 42nd to 26th on the money list.

MEN'S TENNIS

Iowa regains respect

Todd Hefferman

The Daily Iowan

The Iowa men's tennis team returned to form at last weekend's first-ever Midwest Intercollegiate in Bloomington, Ind., going 20-12 in singles and 11-4 in doubles.

"I think we regained the respect that we might have lost at the Ball State Invitational, we had some real good performances," Coach Steve Houghton said.

Freshman Tom Derouin, who went into the No. 3 singles flight bracket with an 8-0 singles record, beat Jamison Hawthorne of Illinois 6-4, 6-3 to advance to the championship.

Derouin drew Todd Koehler of Wisconsin, who hadn't lost a set in his first three matches. Koehler wouldn't lose a single set in his bracket, beating Derouin 6-3, 6-3 for the flight championship.

Senior Neil Denahan won his first three matches of the tourney at the No. 6 spot to advance to his first final of the season. Denahan defeated Bo Gibbs of Indiana 3-6, 6-4, 6-4 to advance to the finals against Chris Richey of Miami of Ohio. Denahan lost 0-6, 4-6 to finish second.

Junior Naguib Shahid finished second, falling to Wyeth Goode-nough of Northwestern in the finals 3-6, 2-6.

In other singles flights, junior Bryan Crowley finished 13th in the No. 1 flight, junior Bob Zumph finished fourth in the No. 2 flight, senior Carl Mannheim finished third at No. 4 and senior Todd Shale went 3-1 to finish fifth at No. 5. Senior Mike Marino finished fourth in the No. 8 flight.

The Hawkeyes won their only doubles championship of the tournament when Shale and Denahan tamed the No. 4 bracket. Denahan-Shale beat Bowling Green's Snyder-Terman 8-4 in the first round, Northwestern's Rizo-Young 8-6 in the second round, and Goldstein-Miller of Wisconsin 9-8 in the championship.

In other doubles action, Shahid-Zumph finished ninth at the No. 1 spot, Crowley-Mannheim finished second in the No. 2, and Derouin-Marino finished 10th at No. 3.

NFL ROUNDUP

Metcalf's heroics lead Cleveland

Barry Wilner
Associated Press

With Eric Metcalf returning punts, who needs much more offense?

Metcalf capped a day of big plays by both teams with his second punt runback for a touchdown Sunday, going 75 yards with 2 minutes, 5 seconds remaining to lift the Cleveland Browns over the Pittsburgh Steelers 28-23. That TD tied an NFL record because Metcalf had gone 91 yards with a punt return in the second quarter.

Packers 37, Buccaneers 14
The idea was simple: get the ball in Sterling Sharpe's hands. Green Bay (3-3) did by throwing to the record-setting receiver, letting him run and putting him at quarterback for two snaps, when he even threw a pass.

Sharpe caught 10 passes for 147 yards and four scores, three in the first half, when Green Bay (3-3) took a 24-0 lead.

Oilers 28, Bengals 12
The stormy week for the Oilers ended with a victory over winless

Cincinnati (0-7). Warren Moon threw for two touchdowns, including the first in the NFL for Gary Wellman, as the Bengals remained winless at the Astrodome since 1984.

49ers 28, Cardinals 14
At San Francisco, Jerry Rice and Ricky Watters spoke as loudly with their play as they did while complaining during the week.

Both said they weren't getting the ball enough. Against Phoenix (2-5), they were the focal points of the attack. Rice, with one touchdown catch in his previous five games, caught nine passes for 155 yards and two TDs. It was his 40th 100-yard receiving game, but the first this season.

Watters gained 95 yards on 20 carries.

Lions 16, Rams 13
Jason Hanson's third field goal of the game, an 18-yarder with four seconds remaining, won it for Detroit (5-2), which is in first place in the NFC Central.

Seahawks 10, Patriots 9

plays and threw a 1-yard touchdown pass to Brian Blades with 25 seconds left. John Kasay's extra point won it.

Seattle (4-3) beat New England (1-6) for the second time this season.

Bills 19, Jets 10
Darryl Talley's 61-yard interception return gave the Bills their only touchdown. Steve Christie kicked four field goals and Thurman Thomas ran for 117 yards.

Falcons 26, Saints 15
Bobby Hebert, the quarterback the Saints did not want, returned to New Orleans and hit 13 of 16 passes for 132 yards and two touchdowns.

Dolphins 41, Colts 27
Pete Stoyanovich hit two field goals and Brian Mitchell had 234 yards passing on the day to help Miami over Indianapolis.

SWIMMING AND DIVING

Hawkeyes get first taste of competition

Mike Egenes
The Daily Iowan

The Iowa men's swim team got its first taste of competitive swimming this weekend in the October Shootout at the Fieldhouse pool.

After seeing his team challenged for the first time this season, Iowa coach Glenn Patton now anxiously awaits the season, hoping the young swimmers will be able to fill the spots vacated by graduating seniors.

"We need to have the freshmen really develop to be competitive at all," said Patton. "This meet gave us a chance to see all of the freshmen (swim), especially at longer distances than they are used to compared to the high school level.

"This meet served as outstanding competitive experience."

The Shootout, hosted by the UI and the Iowa Swimming Coaches Association, consisted of non-varsity swim clubs from Iowa and Wisconsin.

As the only varsity team at the meet, the Hawkeyes used the event as a skill-sharpening opportunity for the approaching regular season, which gets underway in two weeks when Iowa hosts Wisconsin.

Sophomore Steve Rivers, one of Iowa's top distance swimmers, is encouraged by the performance of the team following one of its most difficult weeks of practice.

"I think we really looked great this weekend. Every day this past week was tough. We trained all the way through this week and let up a little on Friday, but every day was a lot of work," Rivers said.

Rivers finished first in the 500-, 1000- and 1650-meter freestyle events.

The Hawkeyes, who finished third in the Big Ten last year, are counting on continued leadership from their top two strengths, whom Patton refers to as the "Polish Connections."

Rafal Szukala and Krzysztof Cwalina, both from Poland, will be Iowa's biggest assets. Szukala and Cwalina finished second and third in their respective events at the Big Ten meet last season.

Cwalina finished first in the 50 and 100 freestyles over the two-day meet, while Szukala was the winner of five events, including the 200 individual medley.

Szukala and Cwalina are also preparing themselves for the World Championships following the collegiate season.

Patton has enjoyed considerable success in bringing Polish athletes to swim for the Hawkeyes. Patton's first Polish recruit, Tomasz Russa, came to Iowa in 1986. Russa, who was a member of the diving team, is now a teaching assistant in the physical education department.

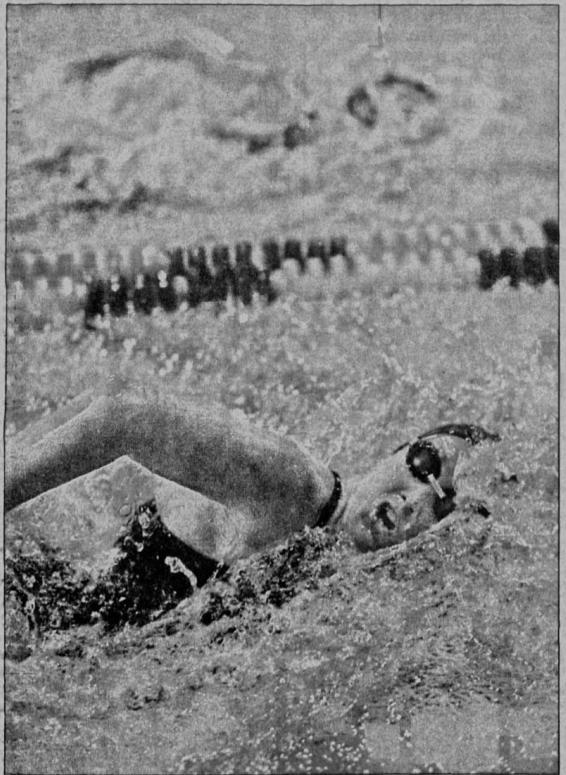

With the experience of Szukala and Cwalina and a foundation of willing freshmen, Patton thinks his team is at least capable of another third-place finish in the Big Ten.

"Michigan should be the dominant team (in the Big Ten) again," said Patton. "We probably fit in third behind Minnesota."

"But it's a long season and today was a good way to get it started."

Iowa starts strong

Douglas Alden
The Daily Iowan

The Iowa women's swimming team had a strong performance at the Fieldhouse pool Saturday at the Iowa Senior Shootout.

The Hawkeyes captured first place in six of the seven events.

Senior Nicole Widmyer led Iowa with victories in the 50 freestyle (24.65 seconds) and the 100 butterfly (59.19).

J.J. DeAth (200 backstroke), Melissa Eberhart (100 breaststroke), Alison Pennington (400 individual medley) and Mary Rhodes (200 freestyle) were Iowa's other first-place finishers.

Coach Peter Kennedy was pleased with his team's performance.

"I think we had some really good swims," he said. "I was kind of encouraged. We had some good times for this early in the season."

"We all swam really well," DeAth added.

"For this early in the season, I think the times were really good. I was surprised."

No team points were kept in the meet. Kennedy said it was basically a chance to evaluate the squad and for the Hawkeyes to "shake out the cobwebs."

"It gave us a chance to see where we are at," he said. "It takes away a little bit of the speculation and it puts some facts on the table."

Kennedy was encouraged by the upperclassmen's overall performance and with several freshmen, including Niamh Campbell and Lynn Dustin.

Testosterone-ridden films rounded out career for '70s star Steve McQueen

Ian Corwin
The Daily Iowan

[Part 3 of a three-part series on Steve McQueen.] When Steve McQueen made "The Getaway" for director Sam Peckinpah in 1972, he had already established himself as one of the mega-stars of the '70s; between McQueen, Paul Newman and Jack Nicholson, the bell-bottom era of cinema was never in need of star power or off-screen demonstrations of perilous, machismo-oozing activities. Highly paid and highly sought, this group of actors became just as famous for their fast drinking and stock-car driving behind the scenes as they did for stepping in front of a camera. In fact, it was McQueen's inclination toward activity injected with equal parts of virility and stupid risk that paved the way to his doing his own stunt driving.

Sam Peckinpah must've been after McQueen for years, lusting after the chance to fraternize with yet another member of Hollywood's stalwart elite. Peckinpah loved to travel the rough and ready roads which always seemed to be paved with the blood and sweat of men's men. By the time he got together with McQueen for "The Getaway," he'd already worked with Charlton Heston on "Major Dundee" (1965) and assembled perhaps the most testosterone-drenched cast of all time for his magnum opus "The Wild Bunch" (1969). William Holden and Warren Oates alone probably kept Peckinpah's sense of manliness afloat on a sea of tequila while shooting that one.

As for McQueen, "The Getaway" gave him a chance to chalk up yet another film with a top-notch director. Although his best collaboration (1973's "Papillon") was still a year into the future, his list of partners was already impressive: John Sturges helmed his performance in "The Magnificent Seven" (1960) as well as "The Great Escape" (1963), and Norman Jewison worked well with him in 1968's "The Thomas Crown Affair."

So with all of this earthy, crotch-grabbin' maleness coming together head on, one would expect nothing less from a McQueen / Peckinpah match-up than pure machismo in its pristine form. Parts of "The Getaway" deliver that kind of manly kick, but most of it is surprisingly funny and even, dare I say, shockingly sensitive.

"The Getaway" stars McQueen as an ace bank-robbler whose wife (McQueen's actual spouse at the time, Ali MacGraw) gets a rich investor to spring him from prison for another job. The investor wants McQueen and two accomplices (Al Letieri from "The Godfather" and Peckinpah perennial Bo Hopkins) to pull a job in a small Texas town. The job is botched when someone gets nervous and scratches their itchy trigger finger, killing a bank guard. McQueen must take it on the lam not only from the law but from the investor's surly bunch of hoods as well.

The film generates its own subtle brand of humor, something one would never expect from someone as ostentatious as Peckinpah. The crook played by Letieri runs to a vet to get his injured collar bone looked at after the robbery, and who should be cast as the vet's wife but Sally Struthers. Fortunately, in this flick she doesn't sound like she's on the verge of tears all the time (a quality she reserves for her requisite celeb pandering for "Starving Kids" organizations), and her interplay with Letieri is a gas.

Apart from the actual robbery and a grisly final shoot-out in Peckinpah's characteristically pictorial slow-motion style, the movie focuses not so much on violence and manly activities as it does on its own sense of humor and MacGraw's attempts to turn McQueen around and straighten him up. Peckinpah has never been one to understand women, which shows in his direction of Struthers' character, but MacGraw has a depth here that most of Peckinpah's women have sadly lacked.

To close out a look back at McQueen's libido-driven career, I'd recommend renting "Tom Horn" (1980). In his second-to-last film, McQueen plays real-life cowboy and bounty hunter Tom Horn, who built a reputation as a tracker during the "Indian Wars" of the late 19th century. Horn moves northwest into the Wyoming Territory, where he is befriended by a rancher (the incomparable Richard Farnsworth of "The Grey Fox") who is having rustling problems. He hires Horn to clear away the rabble "any way he sees fit." But Horn goes too far in his "cleanup" duties, and the local bigwigs set out to bring him down.

Stunningly photographed and well acted, "Tom Horn" provided the perfect framework of mythical clichés that McQueen needed to round out his career. With a loyal horse and a big mouth, McQueen's Horn sparkles with a naive rudeness that is made all the more laughable by the actor's bright blue eyes, which sparkle with innocent glee, even as he inadvertently insults those he shouldn't.

This is the way McQueen needs to be remembered — not as the man who got top billing over Paul Newman on the "Towering Inferno" promo posters, but as a boyish imp, a man who grew beyond the boundaries of the screen itself but who never really seemed to take the whole thing that seriously.

Hubbard Street Dance Chicago will be performing two nights of dance at Hancher this week; the performance was originally scheduled for early September, but was canceled due to flooding. "Read My Hips," pictured above, is part of Hubbard Street's mixed-repertory show, which will be performed Tuesday night. Tonight, the troupe will perform an all-Twyla Tharp show.

Hubbard Street finally hits town

Molly Faulkner
The Daily Iowan

Hubbard Street Dance Chicago is coming. Really, this time it's true. The first performance dates in August were canceled due to flooding. But today and Tuesday this jazz-dance company will present a veritable cornucopia of works at Hancher Auditorium.

Tonight is Twyla Tharp night, featuring "The Golden Section" from the full-length dance/drama "The Catherine Wheel," with music by David Byrne. This work was produced in 1981 on Broadway and was on PBS' "Dance in America" series. Also on tonight's bill is the audience pleaser "Nine Sinatra Songs," which premiered in 1982, danced by Mikhail Baryshnikov. This piece has been in the Hubbard Street repertoire since last season. "Sue's Leg," to 1920s and 1930s recordings of Fats Waller, was originally choreographed in 1975 and revived by Hubbard Street in 1990. Another of Twyla Tharp's works, "Baker's Dozen," will be one of the many dances performed Tuesday night.

Hubbard Street is lucky enough to have so many of Twyla Tharp's works because after Tharp disbanded her company, she selected this company to preserve her choreographic legacy. By putting most of her important pieces into its repertoire, Tharp has guaranteed that her works will not only be performed, but performed well.

"It is hard to think of a better group than the Hubbard Street Dance Company for Twyla Tharp to have approached about reviving some of her older dances," wrote The New York Times Jennifer Dunning. "A jazz-dance company with a strong ballet base, Hubbard Street has a clarity, sophistication and drive — along with strong dance technique — that is ideal for Miss Tharp's demanding choreography."

Tuesday's line-up includes Tharp's "Baker's Dozen" and two works each by Daniel Ezralow of Momix and Margo Sappington of "Billboards" fame. Also being presented is "the '40s" by Lou Conte, artistic director of Hubbard Street.

Preceding the performance tonight, artistic associate Warren Conover will offer a pre-performance discussion. Conover, a former soloist for American Ballet Theatre, has been ballet master of Hubbard Street since 1985. The discussion starts at 7 p.m. and is free to audience members.

Tuesday's pre-show plan is a demonstration of the UI women's gymnastics team at 7:15 p.m. in the Hancher Lobby.

Curtain is at 8 p.m. both nights. Ticket prices are $22 and $20 per night, with a 20 percent discount for students and seniors and a 50 percent discount for those under 18. Call Hancher Box Office, 335-1160, for ticketing information.

Big Fish Ensemble to offer diverse music, biting lyrics

Tad Paulson
The Daily Iowan

It's always refreshing to hear a band which can carry a witty sense of humor into its music without allowing inside jokes to confound its listeners. Too often, a band forgets its most important element — the music — in an effort to lure giggles out of a crowd.

Where's Frank Zappa when the world needs him the most? Who will fill his shoes? Read on.

Striding into Iowa City tonight will be Big Fish Ensemble, which will play at Gabe's, 330 E. Washington St. The Atlanta-based band traverses the line between humor and black sarcasm with precision and subdued intensity, and it manages, at the same time, to come up with a really refreshing sound.

For starters, the five members of Big Fish Ensemble play a variety of instruments such as violin, horns and accordion — all in addition to the standard rock line-up of bass, guitar and drums. The music itself is melodic and guitar-heavy, a blend of influences ranging from folk to punk to zydeco.

But the biggest lure the band has is its attention to songwriting and biting lyricism. Big Fish Ensemble falls into a category that has become known among critics and reviewers as "American Music," sharing rank with bands such as the Violent Femmes and American Music Club. Its lyrical musings target the decay of the American suburban dream, the lure of alcohol, passivism, and the pretensions and attitudes that keep us all divided in one way or another.

Songs like "Where the Fuck-heads Roam," "Greenland" and "Floating" all highlight Big Fish Ensemble's caustic, bitterly funny disillusionment with the nitwits of our land — yet it keeps its jabs (and haymakers) within the framework of some masterfully written songs. That makes a world of difference — we're laughing with the music, not at it.
