Council rejects Dubuque elevation proposal

A resolution that would fund the elevation of North Dubuque Street was voted down at Tuesday night's Iowa City City Council meeting.

The city would have been required to provide a 25 percent local match for the project, which would total $625,000. It was rejected due to the amount of money needed and because last summer was the first time both lanes of the street were closed for an extended amount of time.

Police provide breakthrough in Alzheimer's research

UI associate professor of neurology, Dr. Rodrigo Kuljis, and his colleagues in Chicago have reproduced Alzheimer's disease in mice.

Kuljis presented their findings Nov. 10 at a meeting of the Society for Neuroscience in Washington, D.C. In their research, they developed "transgenic mice," which contain human genes believed to cause Alzheimer's disease.

"It's a significant step forward, one that many scientists have been trying to make for years," Kuljis said.

The transgenic mice will allow scientists to learn about the disease and could lead to the testing of experimental treatments. Kuljis said it is nearly impossible to do tests on Alzheimer patients as readily as the mice would allow.

Iowa women injured in British bus crash

FAVERSHAM, England (AP) — A bus carrying American tourists to Canterbury Cathedral careened on a rain-slicked highway Wednesday, killing 10 people and injuring more than 30 when it plunged down an embankment. Two Iowa women were among those injured.

Nine Americans and the British driver were killed, the State Department said in Washington. George Cemore of Waterloo died Wednesday that his wife, 54, and her mother, Lola Miller, 74, of Belle Plaine were killed in the crash.

Clinton: NAFTA gaining ground

Martin Crutsinger
Associated Press

WASHINGTON — President Clinton asserted Wednesday that free-trade supporters had gained critical momentum from a showdown debate with Ross Perot. He predicted the three-nation trade pact would win House approval next week, "and that's not just political puff."

Opponents suggested it was, claiming enough votes to defeat the North American Free Trade Agreement exactly one week before the House vote.

"This is not an athletic contest," declared a testy Perot, when questioners suggested he had performed weakly against Vice President Al Gore and might have cost his side support.

The White House was treating it as a contest, though, and one that Gore had won handily.

"You were great last night," Clinton told

Gore in a telephone call to Denver, Colo., where the vice president was appearing at a NAFTA rally.

Clinton praised him for "appealing to people's hopes instead of their fears" and said poll results showed "you really can make these arguments to the American people and tell the truth and prevail."

A CNN-USA Today poll, surveying 357 adults before and after the debate, found that the pro-NAFTA percentage jumped from 34 percent to 57 percent while those opposed went down slightly from 38 percent to 36 percent.

As for the support that will count Wednesday, Clinton told reporters at the White House, "I honestly believe we are going to win it now, and that's not just political puff."

The administration named a handful of new supporters, but one opponent, Rep. Gerald Solomon, R-N.Y., said there were 221

New attack reports spur ICPD search

Rima Vesely
The Daily Iowan

Five more women have reported assaults since Tuesday's Daily Iowan article on a pattern of attacks by a man, primarily in areas east and north of downtown Iowa City.

The man is described by all the victims as a large African-American male, 6 foot to 6-foot, 2-inches tall and weighing about 200 pounds.

One of the assaults happened on a Cambus and two occurred while the victims were waiting for buses. One woman was sitting on a bench in the 10 block of East Washington Street on Oct. 20 when the man brushed her leg and said, "Sorry, babe, I gotta go."

Another victim was assaulted while waiting for a Cambus in front of the UI Field House on Oct. 5. The man ran his right hand across her pubic area and backside.

Two other women also reported being grabbed in the pubic area. On Nov. 4, a woman was approached while walking to her car at the corner of Ronalds and Linn streets. The man walked behind her and tried to talk to her. He touched her and sprinted away.

Another woman was "grabbed by the butt and in the pubic area" at the corner of College and Summit streets on Oct. 19. The man held her, then sauntered off laughing.

Iowa City Police Department Capt. Don Strand said it appears that the assaults are being made by the same person.

"These descriptions are close enough to make us think that," he said.

"Investigators are working on approximately three different suspects. The individual's description has been put out to patrol officers."

Strand said there doesn't seem to be an age pattern to the attacks. The five recently reported cases have been from women ranging from 23 to 50 years old.

"There's not really much of a pattern unless you consider one happened on a Cambus, one happened while waiting for a Cambus and one happened while waiting for a bus," he said. "They all have taken place on public property."

INVESTIGATION NOT COMPLETE

Injured student wants 'outdated' lift replaced

Kristin Berg
The Daily Iowan

On Oct. 28, UI student Jaia Rosenfels, 21, fell 4 to 6 feet from the wheelchair lift in Schaeffer Hall, breaking her clavicle, right leg and three facial bones.

Although they have not yet considered suing, the Rosenfel family wants the UI to replace the "outdated and dangerous" wheelchair lift without a hassle.

"We are hoping something will be done about the lift without us having to fight the university," Rosenfels' mother, Jamie, said. "We need a lift safer for people with disabilities."

UI Vice President for University Relations Ann Rhodes said the lift and the wheelchair are being examined for problems. She said the investigation is not complete, but the UI has moved Rosenfels' classroom to a more accessible location.

Jamie Rosenfels said the accident was caused by the lift. She said the gate on the lift does not fully lock so it did not prevent Rosenfels from rolling off.

"Regardless of if it was the lift or Jaia's scooter, the lift is not truly safe because her scooter went forward off the lift," Jamie Rosenfels said. "There was nothing there to stop her, and that's why it is ultimately the lift's fault."

Jamie Rosenfels said the family has formally complained to the UI but has not received a response.

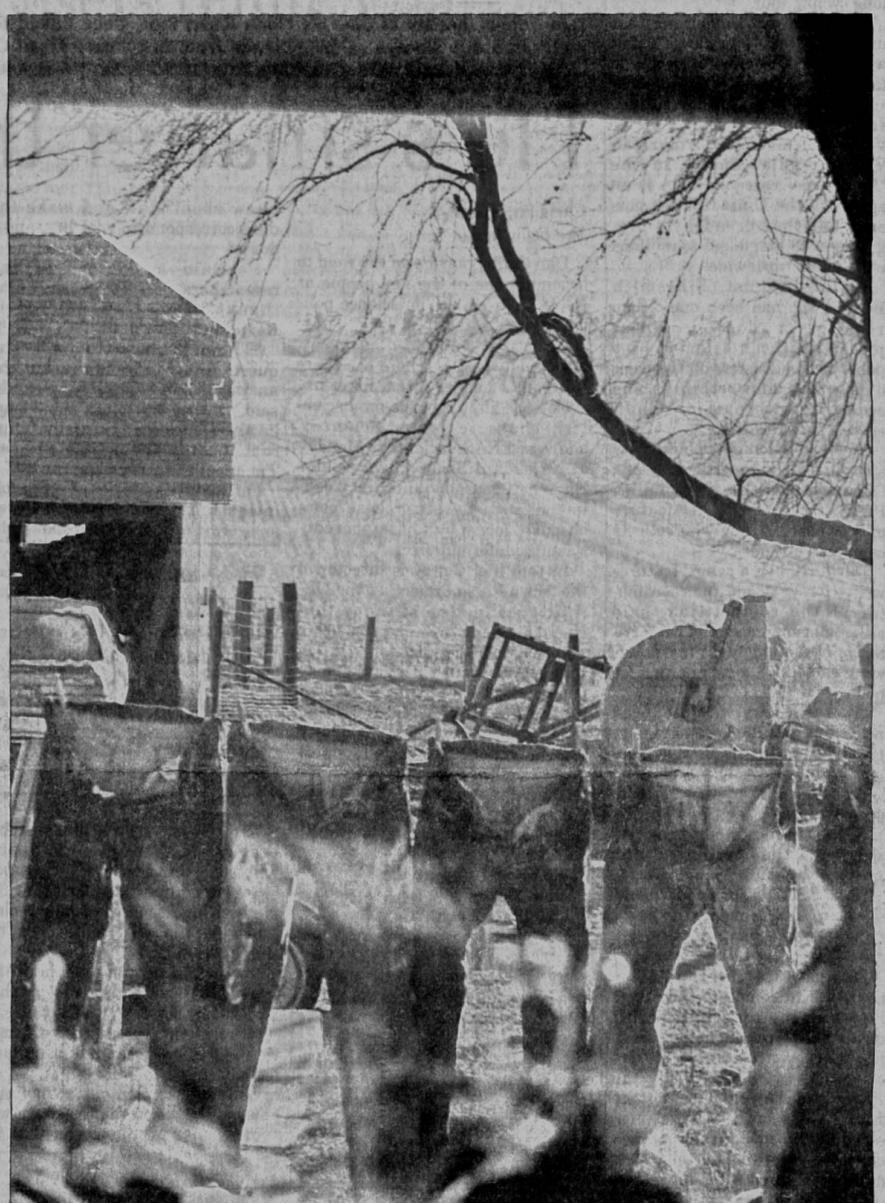

"The purpose of the Americans with Disabilities Act is to encourage persons with disabilities not to sit on their butts their whole lives," Rosenfels said. "If parts of the campus are not accessible or are too dangerous, the UI will prevent many of us from going to school."

Rosenfels was taken to the UI Hospitals and Clinics Emergency Room and was released Oct. 30.

She returned to the UIHC Friday for facial reconstructive surgery and is now recovering at her home in Maquoketa, Iowa.

"She was pretty much out of it

UI's $9.8 million for faculty leave far outspends other state schools

Molly Spann
The Daily Iowan

UI students and Iowa taxpayers paid about $9.8 million for salaries and benefits of UI faculty on leave, a state audit released Wednesday said.

UI faculty accounted for 65 percent of all the faculty on paid leave at the three regents' universities from 1990 to 1992, the audit said.

For the the 1993-94 academic year, the UI had 108 leaves issued to faculty. There were 44 leaves granted at Iowa State University and 21 at the University of Northern Iowa.

Deputy Auditor Warren Jenkins said the number of approved faculty leaves for 1993-94 does not mean all faculty will actually leave their respective universities.

UI Vice President for University Relations Ann Rhodes said the large number of UI faculty reported on leave compared to those at ISU and UNI can be misleading.

"The numbers are a little deceptive because other universities have other programs for research, while we rely on this one," she said.

The UI has traditionally had a significantly larger number of faculty than UNI and ISU, said Wayne Richey, executive secretary for the regents.

"It has always been that way," he said. "Even though the UI has more leaves, it hasn't been excessive."

WIFE GOES TO TRIAL NOV. 29

Severed penis trial ends in acquittal

Anne Gearan
Associated Press

MANASSAS, Va. — John Bobbitt was acquitted Wednesday of sexually assaulting his wife after a jury rejected her argument that she sliced off his penis to retaliate "at the very thing that harmed her."

"I'm thankful to the jury. They believed me," Bobbitt said. "I just want to get on with my life."

Bobbitt's wife, Lorena, will be tried Nov. 29 on a malicious wounding charge. The same prose-cuttor will handle that case and wants to use the testimony against her. She faces up to 20 years in prison if convicted, as her husband had on a charge of marital sexual assault.

The jury of nine women and three men deliberated about four hours before clearing Bobbitt. Juror William Vogt said later that "the proof just didn't exist for the majority of us."

After hearing the verdict, Bobbitt, 26, jumped from his chair and hugged his lawyer, Gregory Murphy, then buried his face in Murphy's shoulder as Bobbitt's aunt shouted, "Oh Lord, thank you!"

"I look forward to the day when Lorena Bobbitt is not in the lexicon of the feminist movement because she's not telling the truth," Murphy said.

Lorena Bobbitt, 24, who had been cited by some feminists as a symbol of just how far abused wives can be driven, wasn't in court.

"Lorena Bobbitt lost the battle

WSUI reporter first in contest

Jude Sunderbruch
The Daily Iowan

A radio news feature on RAGBRAI originally broadcast on WSUI this summer has taken top honors in a Voice of America competition and has since aired around the globe.

Robin Finesmith, a news and public affairs producer with the UI's WSUI radio station, completed the report after several days of interviews with bicycle riders traversing Iowa during the week-long cycling tour.

"It was always something that interested me," she said. "I just went around looking for people to talk to. It was a lot of fun to do."

Later in the summer, Finesmith submitted the piece to Voice of America's "American Voices" radio contest in the "Americana" category. VOA is an agency of the United States government that broadcasts programs in 48 languages to millions of listeners worldwide.

In late August, Finesmith learned she had been one of two reporters nationwide whose pieces had been selected by a panel of broadcasters on the basis of interest, airworthiness and appeal to international audiences.

Western Michigan University station WMUK reporter Lorraine Goodrich won the "Personality Profile" category for her feature on a school teacher who collects campaign buttons.

David Hubler, a senior features writer for VOA and the coordinator of the competition, said although timeliness was not a criterion of the judging, Finesmith's work came at a very appropriate point.

"It was a very well-produced piece, and it turned out to be very timely given the floods this summer in the Midwest," he said.

Although Finesmith was quite happy to have been honored by VOA, actually researching the story was the best part of the process, she said.

"RAGBRAI is just a natural," she said. "It was neat to do a story where the people were the event."

Finesmith traveled throughout the state to complete the story, interviewing bicyclists in all manner of places. To help present listeners with a feel for the atmosphere of RAGBRAI — the Register's Annual Great Bike Ride Across Iowa — Finesmith stood by the side of the road and collected recordings of bicyclists as they whizzed into town. She also spoke with riders who came to Iowa from afar for the ride.

One interview in the piece featuring a couple from Great Britain was appropriate for VOA's audiences around the world, though was not a specific factor in the competition, said Hubler.

"It had an international flavor," he said.

Finesmith, who received an M.F.A. from the UI Writers' Workshop in 1989 and has worked at WSUI since 1987, said she didn't prepare the piece with the intent of submitting it to VOA but was glad it had found an international audience.

"It's nice to think that people in other countries heard it," she said.

Finesmith hoped the piece wouldn't perpetuate any stereotypes of Iowa held outside the state and would instead enlighten listeners about the distinctive culture of RAGBRAI.

"There's something very special I think about strangers getting to know one another," she said. "That's one of the reasons I wanted to cover it."

He's smarter than you

Chris Pothoven
The Daily Iowan

Dan Coffey may be on the road to becoming one of the key people at NASA, helping design science policy for the nation, but you'd better hope not.

God only knows where the space program is headed if that happens.

Coffey's alter ego, the mad scientist character "Dr. Science," addressed NASA scientists Monday at a Goddard Space Flight Center Engineering Colloquium in Washington, D.C., to spread some more obscure, loony bits of supposedly scientific information.

In real life, Coffey is director of the "Iowa Radio Project" at the UI.

"It's really kind of funny that they chose me because I'm not a real scientist," he said.

Jim Lobell, an electrical design engineer at Goddard and a member of the committee that selects speakers for the weekly colloquium, said NASA chose Coffey for a nice change of pace.

"We usually have a serious speaker, but we don't have to. I think that's pretty self-evident," he said.

Upon arriving at the Goddard Center, Coffey saw a poster advertising his speech. "Come see Dr. Science: He knows more than you do," it read.

He tried to live up to the publicity for his speech, which he titled "Pro Quid Per Diem Proptor Hic Ergo Hoc."

"I thought I was probably 10 times more interesting and more self-assured than 99 percent of the scientists who speak at these things," he said. "They have to know about stuff and make the data correspond to real life, and I don't."

He said a number of the researchers were Dr. Science fans thanks to his National Public Radio show, now in its 11th year.

"They all know the joke. The question has to be funny, but the answer has to be even funnier," he said. "If they try to ask some long, involved question, I usually interrupt them in the middle and say 'I'm appalled by your ignorance.'"

For his presentation, Coffey followed his usual format of just answering questions from the audi-

"He's kind of a commentary on all these middle-aged, white men who speak with assurance: 'Don't worry, nuclear power is not dangerous.'"

Dan Coffey, on his alter ego Dr. Science

ence. "I made fun of the Mars probe that got lost, the Hubble Space Telescope that's warped," he said. "I answered questions for about 30 minutes, and then the joke got old. I usually call it off when I sense it's starting to slide."

About 350 people attended his presentation, supposedly the largest turnout ever, Coffey said.

"One of the scientists told me this is the first colloquium no one fell asleep in," he said.

Lobell said almost everyone enjoyed Dr. Science's presentation.

"The only problem was that it was too short," he said, "but I did receive one phone call from a person who was irate about the speech and felt insulted by it. Everyone else loved it."

Coffey, a former member of Duck's Breath Mystery Theatre, developed Dr. Science with fellow Duck's Breath member Merle Kessler in 1982. He modeled the character on university professors, Henry Kissinger, his scientist father and the Jesuit priests in his high school.

"The character is an impossibly smug, arrogant, self-deluded expert," Coffey said. "He's kind of a commentary on all these middle-aged, white men who speak with assurance: 'Don't worry, nuclear power is not dangerous.'"

The NASA appearance isn't the only thing keeping Coffey busy lately. The "Iowa Radio Project," a radio theater series funded by the UI, is in the middle of its third season.

Coffey and Kessler also have a new book out, published by William Morrow. "Dr. Science's Book of Shocking Domestic Revelations" contains a number of scientific tidbits about home life.

"Contrary to popular belief, your home is trying to kill you," Coffey said. "That's why Dr. Science lives in his laboratory."

But his future plans don't include campaigning to get the good doctor some type of government position, Coffey said.

"What I'm really hoping they do is send me to Mars," he said. "I've wanted to go to Mars since I was a little boy."

$220 MILLION RAISED SO FAR

UI plans monument for contributors

Terry Collins
The Daily Iowan

Just when you thought construction on the Pentacrest was over, the UI has started yet another project behind Jessup Hall. The monument, named the IE 2000, will recognize major contributors to the university's largest fund-raising campaign to date.

IE 2000, short for the Iowa Endowment 2000 campaign which began in 1987, has raised more than $220 million so far. The goal of the campaign is to ensure quality in human resources for the UI into the next century.

Contributions to the campaign have established endowments for 46 faculty chairs, 23 endowed professorships, 113 graduate fellowships, funding to recognize excellence in the university's colleges and scholarships.

The monument, scheduled for completion in the spring of 1994, will include a sitting area surrounded by a series of bronze plaques recognizing more than 2,000 alumni and friends of the UI who have contributed $5,000 or more to the IE 2000 campaign.

The plaques will be installed on the monument next spring and include the names of distinguished contributors like Roy Carver and John and Mary Pappajohn as well as the names of those who will be making qualifying gifts through the end of this year.

The monument will be located behind Jessup Hall on the west slope of the Pentacrest lawn. UI Foundation President Darrell Wyrick said the location will be a great place to recognize those who have given significant contributions to the university.

"It is very appropriate that this monument, symbolizing support for the heart of the university — its people — will be located in the heart of the campus," he said. "Hopefully, it will stand as permanent testimony to the central role of human effort in the university's mission and to the generosity of so many people who are committed to the university's excellence."

Wyrick said that the monument should reinforce the importance of contributions and encourage more. He said those who have made contributions come from all walks of life.

"There are lots and lots of people who stretched their capacity in giving," he said.

Wyrick hopes the IE 2000 monument will settle in well with the other improvements that have appeared on campus like the T. Anne Cleary Walkway.

"I believe that the monument will be a great spot for people to sit and relax when it is completed," he said.

Wyrick thinks the monument will be a great site for visitors to the UI, especially those who have their names engraved on the plaques.

"It will give those who gave the golden opportunity to show their children and grandchildren and say that they helped the University of Iowa," he said. "Hopefully, they will pass on the tradition and help enhance the gift of giving."

CONCERN FOR CARRY-OVER

Parents criticize committee's Halloween policy

William Pepper
The Daily Iowan

The Iowa City Community School District's controversial letter to elementary school students last month regarding Halloween costumes was criticized by parents at Wednesday night's meeting of the district's Equity / Affirmative Action Advisory Committee.

administrators.
Cheryl Francis-Kutheis, parent of two children at Grant Wood Elementary, believed the letter was inappropriate and and cultures who come to America should have the opportunity to learn about "American" holidays because it will help to "unify" them as members of one society.

"What about the young children who come from other countries eager to learn about all our holidays? Why can't we share these holidays with different groups?"

Cheryl Francis-Kutheis, concerned parent formed a group called "Parents for Involvement in Equity / Affirmative Action Decisions" to respond to it. Members of the group attended the Wednesday meeting to see that the limitations on the celebration of Halloween would not carry over to Thanksgiving and Christmas.

Kutheis said children from all countries

"What about the young children who come from other countries eager to learn about all our holidays?" she said. "Why can't we share these holidays with different groups?"

In keeping with that spirit, she said schools should be decorated with symbols from all religions to celebrate each holiday.

Several members of the equity committee said education about different religions and cultures was important but expressed concern that Kutheis' suggestion would make some students uncomfortable because they would be singled out for having different beliefs from everyone else.

"America is a mosaic," committee member Susan Mask said. "If you start celebrating one aspect of it to the exclusion of others, you have a problem."

City High junior Tyler Schnoebelen agreed.

"Throughout the high school you have opportunities to learn about religion," he said. "It is not ignored, but it does not need to be celebrated."

He added that displaying different religious symbols "pushes it in (a student's) face even more" than their beliefs put them in the minority.

Campbell urges teens to make a difference

Heather Pitzel
The Daily Iowan

Iowa Attorney General Bonnie Campbell told students at City High School "we're both on our way to being state champs" as City High's football team advances in the playoffs and she campaigns for governor.

Her bid for governor was the worst-kept secret in state politics before she made it public Sunday, Campbell said to an auditorium full of students Wednesday. City High is the only high-school appearance she will make in Iowa.

Campbell's inspiration from Bobby Kennedy during his brief campaign for U.S. Senate was used to parallel the students' need for an inspirational leader.

"Education is the great equalizer; it erases all the barriers that separate us," she said. "Those pieces of paper give you credibility, expand your mind, broaden your horizons. When you have an education, you're mandated to do something with it."

She urged the students to make a difference and be involved in shaping Iowa's political agenda, just as she hopes to do as governor.

Campbell said she will be a better governor than Gov. Terry Branstad and rhetorically asked, "Branstad, what do you think you can do in years 12, 13, 14, 15 that you couldn't in years one through 12?"

"If you're going to lead, you have to have an idea where you're going. We call it vision."

Questions from the students included asking her stance on the assault weapons ban and job opportunities to keep young people in the state. She responded that she doesn't know anyone who needs an AK-47 to shoot a pheasant and she supports a ban on semiautomatic and automatic weapons.

ACCUSE CANDIDATE OF 'NEGATIVE CAMPAIGN'

Branstad advisers refute charges of lax flood relief disbursement

Jim Snyder
The Daily Iowan

Gubernatorial hopeful Bonnie Campbell doesn't have her facts straight, according to Richard Vohs, press secretary for Gov. Terry Branstad.

Wednesday, Campbell charged the governor with allowing $40 million in flood disaster public assistance aid to sit undistributed for 45 days. Tuesday, Democratic Sen. Tom Harkin told a U.S. Senate committee he was "shocked" to see that such a large percentage of the FEMA funds sent to Iowa had not yet been distributed.

Campbell said the length of time the money has sat undistributed is, at best, indicative of an ineffective government, and at worst, the money may be going for undisclosed purposes while flood victims do without.

The $40 million was made available to Iowa by the federal government to help pay for public assistance projects such as bridge, city and county road repairs needed after this summer's flooding.

Vohs said Campbell's charges misrepresent the truth and are politically motivated. In past weeks, Branstad has sharply criticized the federal government for being slow in providing assistance for repair of levees in the state.

The charges, Vohs said, look like the start of a negative campaign against the governor, who has not officially declared his desire to run for a fourth term.

According to Gen. Harold Thompson, deputy adjutant general of the Iowa National Guard and the governor's project officer for the economic recovery of the state, it takes six to nine days to distribute the funding to municipalities after applications for FEMA funds have been received.

Other states have decided to give out money before completion of the application process. However, Iowa officials have not yet distributed the funds in order to protect municipalities from having to pay back money later if something in the application is determined to be ineligible for funding, Thompson said.

So far, $10.8 million has been processed, and the total will be raised to $30 million by the end of next week, Vohs and Thompson said. The remaining $10 million will be handed out when other communities that were damaged in last summer's flooding apply for public assistance relief. Ames, for instance, has not applied for the money yet.

Thompson said the number of applications for FEMA funding has greatly increased in the past week, and two additional staff members were hired to handle the paperwork.

Kansas and Missouri have a similar turnaround between when an application for funding is made and when the money is distributed, Thompson said.

Captopril benefits diabetes patients

Tory Brecht
The Daily Iowan

Diabetes patients facing kidney failure and possible death have new hope following a clinical study conducted at the UI Hospitals and Clinics.

The study, conducted by Dr. Lawrence Hunsicker of the UI College of Medicine, found the high-blood pressure drug Captopril reduces the risk of death or end-stage renal disease that often requires kidney transplant or dialysis.

"Short of death, kidney disease is the most serious consequence of diabetes," Hunsicker said. "This is the first time we've had anything really effective to manage kidney disease."

Renal failure occurs in diabetes patients because of a pressure buildup in the capillaries of the kidneys which act as filters, Hunsicker said. When these filters clog as a result of diabetes, normal kidney functions fail.

Hunsicker said Captopril reduces the pressure in the capillaries of the kidneys, allowing them to function normally.

However, the drug is not necessarily seen as a cure to kidney failure.

"You can never say you've found the cure after any study," Hunsicker said. "I think it is a step in understanding how renal disease progresses."

The full results of the study will be published today in the New England Journal of Medicine.

MAY ALSO PREVENT HEART ATTACK

Cholesterol drug reduces stroke risk

The Daily Iowan

Researchers at the UI College of Medicine and UI Hospitals and Clinics have found that a cholesterol-lowering drug may reduce the risks of future strokes and heart attacks.

The drug Lovastatin slows or reduces the buildup of plaque in the carotid arteries of people with moderately elevated cholesterol levels, according to the results of the five-year "Asymptomatic Carotid Artery Plaque Study." The results were based on an ultrasound analysis of the walls of the carotid arteries in the neck that supply blood to the brain.

The UI was one of four centers conducting the study, which was funded by the National Heart, Lung and Blood Institute.

Dr. John Corson, UI professor of vascular surgery and one of the study investigators, said data suggests that both men and women with moderately elevated cholesterol and early atherosclerosis — hardening of the arteries — can be safely treated with a cholesterol-lowering medication and diet modification.

"A second major benefit of this study was that it allows physicians to measure small differences in plaque buildup in the arteries over time and assess the response to treatment," Corson said.

In atherosclerosis, cholesterol and fat, known as plaque, collect in the arteries and can cause heart attacks and strokes, the first and third leading causes of death in the country, respectively.

The double-blind study followed 919 men and women (169 in Iowa) aged 40 to 79 for three years. Participants had no history of stroke or heart attack and were not taking insulin for diabetes or medication for high cholesterol.

The drug Lovastatin reduced the low-density lipoprotein, or LDL, levels in the blood stream. Elevated LDL is a known risk factor for coronary heart disease.

LOCAL EVENTS OBSERVE HOLIDAY

Marine general to talk at veterans' banquet

Chris Pothoven
The Daily Iowan

Local veterans' organizations will honor those who have served in the military today as part of the national Veteran's Day holiday.

"This is an important day for the veterans. It's basically the only day they get recognized," said Peter Vanderhoef, spokesman for the local Military Affairs Committee. "It's nice to remember the group that has made sure a lot of things we have in this country are possible."

The day is also important for letting people know more about the U.S. military, Vanderhoef said. "It's a little bit of a history lesson. A lot of people in college and other younger people don't know why we got into the various wars," he said. "As one historian said, 'Those who do not know history are doomed to repeat it.'"

Locally, there will be a Veteran's Day Banquet tonight at the Highlander Inn.

The banquet is organized by the Military Affairs Committee. Vanderhoef said this is the 13th year for the event, which usually attracts between 300 and 350 guests.

The principal speaker will be Maj. Gen. John Cronin, deputy commander of the Marine Reserve Forces. This is the first year the banquet has had a Marine Corps general as a speaker, Vanderhoef said.

"We've had some pretty big speakers come here," he said. "A lot of them come to Iowa because the military needs to tell people what's really going on in the military. There's a lot of misconceptions."

A number of awards will be presented, including the Will J. Hayek Award named in honor of the late Will Hayek, a longtime Iowa City resident and veteran of both world wars.

The recipient must be an area resident who has served in the military and demonstrated a minimum of 10 years of community service to Iowa City, Coralville or Johnson County.

The Veterans Affairs Medical Center also has activities planned for its patients, said Annie Tuttle, spokeswoman for the medical center.

"It's a special day for inpatients," she said. "They get a special meal and a number of special visitors. We get a lot of different people who visit that do normally come."

In addition, the center has an avenue of flags on Veteran's Day flying 36 different American flags.

"They're flown in memory of all the veterans throughout the state of Iowa," Tuttle said. "It's really a beautiful sight."

FREE THOUGHT

The paradox

(W)ARNING: This editorial might contain some material and information which could offend your sensitivities. If you feel yourself personally offended at any point during the editorial, feel free to immediately discharge the article into the nearest newspaper recycling bin. Your immediate response is essential in preserving your right against further offense and ridicule which might inevitably challenge your / society's thoughts. Once again, readers' discretion has been advised for the following material.)

For those of you who slumbered through the 1980s, welcome to the '90s, where catch phrases such as "think for yourself" and "you must face the consequences of your own actions" have been replaced by "think what others might think" and "it's not your fault, it's our fault." Themes have quietly segued from the "Me" generation of the '80s to the "Us" generation of the present. Ideally, the "Us" generation focuses on the concept of groupthink as a means of creating an atmosphere where everybody feels comfortable.

The concept of groupthink is absurd in the fact that it essentially represses free thinking among members who fear being ostracized for their input. This potential flaw has prompted the "Us" generation to remedy the situation by becoming the "More Sensitive Us" generation, offering a ubiquitous shoulder for everybody to shed tears upon in hope of alleviating the silence. What the "More Sensitive Us" generation failed to consider in its campaign is what might happen if its campaign becomes too successful and the shoulder blade snaps at the collar bone, eventually caving in to the likes of opportunists such as the following:

1) Ultrasensitives: This group is composed of people who are afraid to say anything before suspiciously looking over their shoulders for possible offenders. They can usually be found in closed quarters talking to immediate family members about the weather. They firmly believe that parody was created by an extraterrestrial species as a takeover device and that improvisational comedy will be the biblical stage for Armageddon. They also loathe satire, especially satire which depicts themselves.

2) Columbo Revisionists: Essentially an offshoot of Ultrasensitives, Columbo Revisionists differ in the fact that they deliberately seek out information which might be considered offensive and stir up controversy via the media. Members are characterized as one-dimensional thinkers with an overabundance of free time, except when they're perusing their video libraries for "Murder She Wrote" reruns.

3) Linguistic Contortionists: Considered people who absorb information, then contort the messages by twisting and turning the language. Members possess the inability to take things at face value and feel the archeological urge to dig further until the message satisfies their needs. Members are usually comprised of politicians, TV evangelists and tabloid editors.

Finally, free thought has been jeopardized by the very institution which was established to promote it. Hence the paradox: In order to have free thought, everybody must be included, but if everybody is included, thought is repressed in fear of infringement on other people's thoughts. Welcome to the '90s.

LETTERS

Education needed

To the Editor:

When I saw the Britt cartoon (Oct. 27, DI), my heart sank. Oh no, not here, not in the DI, I thought. I felt as if I were looking at a page in Klanwatch, the bimonthly bulletin of the Southern Poverty Law Center that monitors and reports on the activities of the Klan and other hate groups and their sympathizers. I could only imagine the pain African-Americans felt on seeing this cartoon. I'm Jewish-American, and I remember how I felt when I saw medieval cartoons of Jews being speared and burned. I can imagine how I might feel if I opened the DI one morning and saw a Jew with a huge hooked nose, his / her eyes popping out, being tortured to death or led to a gas chamber.

Britt and those at the DI who chose to print the cartoon can only be racist, ignorant or insensitive to all of those. I have no way of knowing. But those are the only reasons for equating an act of mob violence incited by conditions in a ghetto with the planned terrorism and murder of African-Americans for over a hundred years.

There is obviously a desperate need for education about the history of minorities in this country, for only education can bring about an end to the fear and prejudice that drew and printed the cartoon.

Britt and those DI staff responsible for the printing might begin their education by attending courses on the history and culture of African-Americans and other non-European people. "Teaching Tolerance," published by the Southern Poverty Law Center for teachers and laypeople, might also be helpful.

Errors were made in the transcription of two articles published on the Viewpoints Pages of The Daily Iowan. In a Letter to the Editor authored by Karen Michaeli and published on Nov. 3, the first line in the fourth paragraph should have read as follows:

"The students who originally complained about the films which led to the conception of the 'sexually explicit materials' policy, and who subsequently became mascots of the Committee Against Political Correctness, made poor representatives indeed."

The word "had" was inadvertently substituted for "made."

In the guest opinion authored by Lisa A. Pride and published on Monday, Nov. 8, the fifth line in the fourth paragraph should have read as follows:

"Some historians estimate that close to 100 million Africans died on these ships."

The figure was inadvertently transcribed as "1 million."

Congress considers underwear probe

The Christmas clothing catalogs keep coming, and I breeze through them, looking at all the people with good chins and straight noses. The catalog colors like terrier, fantasy, saddle, tile and cadet strike me as preposterous (those particular colors are culled from J. Crew and Tweeds).

I mean, terrier? You look good in terrier? Terrier suits you?

Little known fact: Consensual terrier / fantasy plaids are illegal in Georgia. But the way I see it, there's not a tartan on the face of the planet that isn't protected by the Constitution. Even cadet-saddle-fantasy combos that besmirch the good name of the U.S. Army.

Rumor has it that right-wing Sen. Jesse Helms owns a pair of terrier tile fantasy underwear. If that turns out to be the case, the political fallout will be enormous. Senate majority leaders long vexed by the prickly conservative will call for a bipartisan underwear probe.

The underwear probe will have to be handled delicately, what with the whole world watching on CNN. Americans will be shocked and dismayed but forced to face long-held misconceptions of kinky undergarments, and indeed, kinkiness itself.

Sen. Paul Simon is being considered as chairman, should the Senate select subcommittee on underwear vote to hear the case.

I imagine the committee discussions will sound something like this:

Simon: Sen. Helms, a person oughtn't to be telling another person what kind of underthings to wear, and quite frankly, if it were up to me, this entire probe would be handled in private. Not just the two of us, of course. I mean the whole committee. We'd all probe the underwear together. I'm not saying touch, here. Touching somebody's undergarments gets very tricky. There ought to be a nurse present when you touch things like that. We'd just look, as a way of getting at the motivation of the kinkiness.

Arlen Specter: What if we, the honorable senators of this fine country, see something icky? First we hear about odd underwear. Next it'll be doodee.

Ted Kennedy: Is doodee really relevant here, senator?

Arlen Specter: Wee-wee, poopie. That's not my point. What I'm trying to suggest here is that we've got a damned icky situation here that we, as Americans, shouldn't have to face. If the senator were from Georgia, he'd be in jail by now.

Pat Schroeder: As you all know, politically I am opposed to nearly everything Mr. Helms stands for, but I can't for the life of me figure out how this pair of kinky underwear will affect his work as a senator. It's actually kind of endearing.

Chuck Grassley: My wife'll tell you that I'm a Fruit of the Loom man. White, 100 percent, farm-grown cotton. I must say I am a bit uncomfortable with the canine element of this thing. My gut reaction is that this kind of fantasy underwear is very strange. Very strange and extremely kinky and perhaps unbecoming on a senator. There's at least a suggestion of impropriety there, and I'd like to hear more from the senator from South Carolina as to why he bought the peculiar garment. What led him to buy such a darned kinky thing?

Howell Heflin: I think the American people would like to see his toys.

Grassley: Like model airplanes and stuff?

Heflin: No sir, I mean his weirdo toys. The electronic gadgetry alluded to in his wife's testimony.

Specter: You see, this is a kind of symbolic displaying of a national doo-doo to the whole world. It's nothing short of icky and, quite frankly, a disgrace.

You can see how reading these seamy Christmas catalogs could make an average American uncomfortable. These catalogs are also disquieting because they remind me of the triteness of my existence.

The people who wear J. Crew clothes always get to do neat stuff:

"The J. Crew Barn Jacket. Seen taking bids at Christie's. Trekking near Santa Fe ..." The Crew people tip big at expensive restaurants that look like adobes, and then they fly off to high-stakes modern art auctions. And what do I do? I save up pennies to get racing stripes painted on my AMC Pacer. It just seems unfair.

Somewhere there's a catalog aiming at the kind of people I hang out with: "The 100 Percent Dacron 'bowler': Seen hunching in front of the toilet at the office Christmas party; sucking down a bun-licious clamroll at Denny's."

In a quick review of the winter prep catalog, J. Crew seems to have five important advertising techniques:

1) Clothing in denial: "Consider this a sweatshirt disguised as a sweater."
2) Exotic parts: "With zipfront placket." "A back flange that provides ease."

3) We know who you are and what you like: "A cardigan reminiscent of the sweaters you've always favored."

4) Circumspect grunge: "Two sweaters with a certain identifiable slouch."

5) The family tree: "Our relaxed flannel jacket. ... The close cousin to the sweatshirt ..."

Keeping those five techniques in mind, I've written an advertisement for a new polyester bowling jacket.

"The Dacron 'bowler.' Niece of the cummerbund. Consider this jacket a polyester coat you bowl in. A coat so slouchy you could beg for change in it. With crobed slithies for longer wear."

"A jacket reminiscent of the ones you get free when you work construction. Wide-cut chambray trussing for bigger bellies."

"Think of our Dacron bowler as more than the sum of its parts. Think of this jacket as your buddy on a three-day drinking binge. Made of the kind of polyester 'sick' rolls off of. Colors: tarragon, shiitake, Polish sausage, java, I Can't Believe It's Not Butter."

Mike Fisch's catalog appears Thursdays on the Viewpoints Pages.

Time for the CSA to dissolve

In response to the article by Megan Penick, titled "International groups still call budget unfair" (Oct. 8, DI), I would like to make a few comments.

First, the article explains that the UI Student Association, or UISA, has discriminated against the Chinese Student Association, or CSA. The CSA complains of unequal benefits in funding for its organization. However, a source from the group has indicated that the CSA did not apply for funding prior to the allocations. I would like to call upon the UISA to conduct an investigation into the CSA's unjustifiable claim. What I am talking about is the character of a group which uses the pretext of discrimination to make unjustifiable demands.

Secondly, the CSA claims to have 400 students. Most of these students come from Taiwan and do not consider themselves members of the CSA. Without consent, the CSA has inflated its numbers by including many Taiwanese students on its membership list.

In fact, the Taiwanese Student Association was founded a few years ago. All of its members come from Taiwan. The approach used by the CSA is an insult to the Taiwanese students and should be subject to scrutiny. The CSA continues to present itself as the "Republic of China from Taiwan," and lately, as the "Republic of China on Taiwan," or ROCT.

The CSA strives for a "one China" representation on campus. This is a nonviable goal. The present-day representation of the Chinese student body on campus is from one China — the People's Republic of China, or PRC — which is already represented by the Friendship Association of

The present problems concerning China stem from the old civil war between the Nationalists (ROCT) and the Communists (PRC). The Nationalists were defeated and took exile in Taiwan.

Chinese Students and Scholars. As far as I can see, the existence of the CSA should be scrutinized more thoroughly. The legitimacy of the CSA is neither rational nor acceptable. The CSA's existence is at stake.

The present problems concerning China stem from the old civil war between the Nationalists (ROCT) and the Communists (PRC). The Nationalists were defeated and took exile in Taiwan. Ever since, Taiwan has been a de facto independent state, and yet the Nationalists have occupied the island for almost 43 years and have subsequently claimed their sovereignty over the PRC, including Outer Mongolia, as the sole legitimate government of China.

The CSA president was quoted in the article as saying, "At the end of the year, we may have to dismiss our organization." The president of the CSA has shown his courage and intelligence to face the world willingly and move ahead to dismantle his organization. I admire his vision and wisdom.

Over the years, it seems that the CSA has placed a so-called "creative ambiguity doctrine" in practice on campus to mislead the public. The doctrine has created unnecessary confusion and chaotic situations among the Taiwanese students, and that confusion has spread among the UI faculty and administration. By and large, the confusion gives rise to fundamental questions for Chinese and Taiwanese students: Who are you? What nationality are you? Where are you from?

It is time to put this sort of confusion to rest. This issue can only be solved, preventing further identity crises among the CSA members, by dissolving the CSA. One has to realize that the creative ambiguity doctrine can work only for a while; it will not work forever.

As a long-time supporter of the TSA, I am sure that the TSA will be delighted to take up the remaining members of the CSA. Let's work together to struggle for Taiwanese solidarity in the framework of a "one Taiwan-China" formula, both abroad and at home in Taiwan. Once we have achieved this goal, we will have something to be proud of. Let's proudly say it loud and clear (in Taiwanese), "Lang Rong sh Taiwan Leng," which means "After all, we are all Taiwanese." Brady bill on gun control sweeps House

Carolyn Skorneck
Associated Press

WASHINGTON — Responding to public fear of street crime, the House approved the Brady bill Wednesday that would require a five-day wait and a background check on people who want to buy handguns.

The House voted 238-189 for the bill and sent it to the Senate.

The House also approved Brady two years ago, only to see it fail after being attached to a larger crime bill blocked by Senate Republicans. This time, it is being kept separate in the hope the Senate will send it to President Clinton, who has promised to sign it.

During the debate, Rep. Lucien

Blackwell, D-Pa., noted that his West Philadelphia neighborhood has hundreds of deaths each year from pistols.

"We need to stop these thugs from getting these guns rapidly, and if we pass the Brady bill, we will do that," Blackwell said. "What is wrong with waiting five days to get a pistol? What is wrong with that?"

The Brady bill, named for press secretary James Brady who was shot during a 1981 assassination attempt on President Reagan, would impose a five-day waiting period before a handgun purchase could be completed and would require a background check during that time on would-be buyers.

Brady, who waited outside the House chamber throughout the debate, said he was "euphoric" at the outcome. Sarah Brady, who joined her husband in a "thumbs up" for photographers, said there will be a tough fight getting the bill through the Senate. They have campaigned for the bill for a decade.

On the other side, Rep. Sanford Bishop, D-Ga., supporting a successful amendment to set a deadline of five years for developing a computerized, nationwide system of instant background checks and a phaseout of the waiting period, said:

"If we can check credit card purchases instantaneously, if we can have our policemen check driving records instantaneously, then certainly we can check criminal histories instantaneously."

But Rep. Butler Derrick, D-S.C., said a waiting period of five working days represents less time "than most people have to wait for their dry cleaning."

The amendment, backed by the National Rifle Association and proposed by Rep. George Gekas, R-Pa., was approved by a 235-198 vote. Gun control proponents characterized it as an attempt to gut Brady's effectiveness.

Rep. Mike Synar, D-Okla., called it "a very clever attempt to derail the five-day waiting period."

"Using this amendment's common sense," Synar said, "one would quit giving CPR to a heart attack victim after five minutes."

NAFTA

"firm votes against NAFTA" in the House — three more than needed to defeat the pact.

The administration challenged those figures and said the outcome would still be decided by a block of about 25 to 30 undecided lawmakers.

Perot, appearing at the Capitol, and Gore in Denver each said he had personally picked up several votes Wednesday, but neither would give names. Perot said, "I don't think it's smart to show the other side your cards."

The fate of NAFTA, which would create the world's largest free-trade zone by eliminating trade barriers among the United States, Mexico and Canada, has been in doubt because of staunch opposition to the proposal from organized labor, many environmental groups and Perot.

Opponents contend the pact will cost thousands of American jobs as U.S. companies set up factories in Mexico to take advantage of cheaper wages and lax enforcement of environmental regulations.

The administration says it will lead to many more American jobs than it costs because it will expand markets for U.S. goods.

Clinton held another round of meetings with undecided lawmakers at the White House and also met with House Minority Leader Robert Michel and GOP Whip Newt Gingrich for an update on Republican support.

Rep. David Bonior, D-Mich., who is leading the House effort to kill the agreement, contended opponents had picked up seven votes to the administration's five and insisted that the Gore-Perot debate had not hurt anti-NAFTA forces.

"The NAFTA debate isn't about Al Gore or Ross Perot," Bonior said. "If NAFTA passes, Al Gore and Ross Perot won't lose their jobs, but 500,000 Americans will.

issue because the renewal of faculty is essential. It helps to keep an excellent faculty excellent."

The paid faculty leave program is vital to the universities, the nation and the fulfillment of regent goals, Richey said.

UI Faculty Senate President Jerry Schnoor said the program helps to recruit a top-notch faculty and better the UI.

"I'm proud of this program," he said. "It ensures an excellent recruitment of faculty."

Rhodes said the faculty leave program helps faculty to better themselves.

"Sometimes people need these uninterrupted blocks of time to learn how to teach new classes and get prepared to utilize new technology in the field," she said.

The audit said several UI departments had from 11.6 to 28.4 percent of their faculty members on paid leave during the 1990-1992 period.

Salaries and benefits paid during leave at UNI and ISU totaled about $4.9 million, the audit said.

In order to replace faculty on leave, $1.2 million for the two-year period was budgeted for all three regents' universities.

ACQUITTAL

in the process raised issues that got the attention of the whole country focused on marital rape and domestic violence," said Kim Sandy, executive vice president of the National Organization for Women.

In closing arguments, both sides focused on inconsistencies in the couple's stories of what happened the night of June 23.

"Why did she cut his penis off? Nothing happened, and I submit you something sexual happened that offended her and drove her over the edge," prosecutor Paul Bert said.

She "struck out at the very thing that harmed her, the thing that hurt, and she severed it," Ebert said.

Lorena Bobbitt testified that her husband woke her, pinned her to their bed, yanked off her underwear and raped her.

Bobbitt testified that he initiated sex, and his wife didn't resist. Murphy said Lorena Bobbitt concocted a story of sexual abuse because she is angry over the dissolution of her four-year marriage.

"The prosecution tells you that two wrongs don't make a right. Well, that's right," Murphy told the jury. "The emasculation of John Bobbitt is the first wrong. The second wrong is the fabrication of facts in this case."

Murphy listed a half-dozen points where Lorena Bobbitt's testimony contradicted other witnesses or her previous statements.

He said she gave conflicting statements about where she was on several days preceding the alleged attack and took scissors to her underwear to make it appear they were ripped off her body.

A crime lab scientist testified the tear appeared to come from force, but an expert witness for Bobbitt said the panties were cut.

Murphy also noted testimony from a woman who accidentally hit Bobbitt on his bicycle with her car a few days before the mutilation. Murphy said Lorena Bobbitt was jealous of the woman when she delivered a new bike and stared out the window while her husband talked to the woman in a parking lot.

Bobbitt was charged with marital sexual assault, not rape, because under Virginia law the latter only applies to couples living apart or if the victim is seriously physically injured.

After the verdict, Ebert said he brought the charge against Bobbitt because "I believed her, and I didn't believe him." He said Bobbitt's acquittal will have no bearing on Lorena Bobbitt's trial, and that he plans to use her testimony against her. The final decision rests with the judge.

Bobbitt, too, still has trouble on another legal front. Beatrice L. Williams, 21, of Niagara Falls, N.Y., named him as the father of her 10-month-old son and filed a paternity lawsuit against him, her lawyer said Wednesday.

Cyclones looking into natural turf

AMES, Iowa (AP) — Iowa State athletic officials are looking into replacing the artificial turf in Cyclone Stadium, and Athletic Director Gene Smith is leaning towards a natural surface.

"I would prefer grass if it's possible," said Smith, who played on grass as a defensive end at Notre Dame in the 1970s.

"We have the expertise here in our horticulture department to help us evaluate our options," he said.

The present turf was installed in 1985 and is expected to last two more years. Bill Goldring, assistant athletic director for business, said replacing it with the same surface would cost nearly $1 million.

A turf consultant evaluated the turf last year, testing its resiliency and whether it measured up to minimum safety standards.

Goldring said the turf passed the test, but the school was advised to consider replacing it in two or three years.

He said estimating the cost of a grass surface involves many variables.

Chiefs' Saleaumua among players of the week

NEW YORK (AP) — Dan Saleaumua, the Kansas City nose tackle who almost singlehandedly beat Green Bay Monday night, was one of five NFL players receiving player of the week honors Wednesday.

Saleaumua was named the AFC defensive player after recovering one fumble and returning it for a touchdown, and forcing another is Darrell Thompson was about to score the go-ahead touchdown late in the game. The Chiefs wound up winning 23-16.

Other players honored:

— AFC offensive player: John Elway of Denver, who completed 7 of 23 for 244 yards and three touchdowns in the Broncos' 29-14 win over Cleveland.

— NFC offensive player: Detroit's Barry Sanders, who gained 187 yards on 29 carries in the 23-0 win over Tampa Bay.

— NFC defensive player: cornerback Darrell Green of Washington, who had eight tackles, knocked down five passes and returned a fumble 78 yards for a touchdown in a 30-24 win over Indianapolis.

Special teams honors went to kick returner Kevin Williams of Dallas, who had 158 yards in return yardage against the Giants, and Kurt Barber of the New York Jets, who made four tackles on kickoffs.

Montana Go sit out

KANSAS CITY, Mo. (AP) — Joe Montana of the Kansas City Chiefs will miss Sunday's game against the Los Angeles Raiders.

It will be the fourth game the star quarterback has not started since signing with the Chiefs last spring. He has been nursing a pulled hamstring for more than a month.

Dave Krieg, who started in Monday night's 23-16 victory over Green Bay, will start against the Raiders in Los Angeles.

The Chiefs said Wednesday it is not known how much longer Montana will be sidelined.

AL Most Valuable Player Frank Thomas follows through on a swing during a July 28 game.

Thomas unanimous AL MVP pick

Ronald Blum
Associated Press

NEW YORK — This time, Frank Thomas was pleasantly surprised. Slighted in the past in the Most Valuable Player voting, the Chicago White Sox first baseman Wednesday became the eighth unanimous pick since the AL MVP award was first given in 1931.

"I was really shocked I got all 28 votes," he said. "I was like, 'Wow! There was no better way to win it.'" Thomas hit .317, was second in the major leagues with 128 RBIs and set a club record with 41 homers. He easily beat out Toronto's Paul Molitor, who received 13 second-place votes in voting by the Baseball Writers Association of America.

The other unanimous winners of the AL MVP were Hank Greenberg (1935), Al Rosen (1953), Mickey Mantle (1956), Frank Robinson (1966), Denny McLain (1968), Reggie Jackson (1973) and Jose Canseco (1988).

"This was the longest day of my life," Thomas said. "There was a lot of anticipation going on, and when the call finally came, I got it on the first ring."

Appearing with his wife, Elise, and their 16-month-old son, Sterling, at a Comiskey Park news conference, Thomas said the White Sox have to concentrate on reaching the next level. Toronto beat Chicago in six games in the AL playoffs.

"We might need to go out and get another hitting threat," said Thomas, who last month agreed to a $29 million, four-year contract extension that runs through 1998.

Thomas' victory gave the White Sox three of the four AL postseason awards. Jack McDowell was voted the Cy Young Award and Gene Lamont was voted Manager of the Year.

AL batting champion John Olerud, Molitor's teammate, was third in voting, followed by Texas outfielder Juan Gonzalez. Seattle's Ken Griffey Jr. was fifth.

Thomas was among the AL's top 10 in walks (112), runs (106), on-base percentage (.426) and slugging percentage (.607). Plus, his 77 extra-base hits broke the White Sox mark set by Joe Jackson in 1920.

Thomas' award may have eased his disappointment with last year's MVP voting. He finished eighth behind winner Dennis Eckersley, and said he felt his .323 average, 24 home runs and 115 RBIs should have placed him higher.

Thomas has hit more than .300 with more than 100 RBIs and 100 walks in each of his first three full seasons in the majors.

At 25, Thomas already is a rare package of power and patience at the plate. For all his home runs, he is willing to take walks and struck out just 54 times.

Thomas got off a strong start last season with 21 RBIs in April, the most by a White Sox player since the team starting keeping records in 1964.

He had an 18-game hitting streak in June, longest for Chicago this year.

Ryan Bowen, a 6-foot-9 senior forward from Fort Madison, Iowa, has signed a letter of intent to play basketball at Iowa.

Bowen averaged 24.1 points, 10.4 rebounds, 5.5 blocked shots and 3.4 assists as a junior, shooting 70 percent from the field and 40 percent from 3-point range. His 1,709 career points rank third all-time at Fort Madison. He is among the top 25 forwards in the country.

"He has played every position on the floor for us," Bowen's high school coach, Mark Bigler, said. "We're excited Ryan is going to Iowa."

A starter the past three seasons, Bowen has been a first team all-state selection the past two years and last season was also named first team all-state by the Des Moines Register. He has been MVP of the Southeast Seven Conference for the last two years.

"In Ryan Bowen we are not only getting a promising basketball player, but also a fine student and a terrific person who comes from a great family," Iowa coach Tom Davis said.

Kosar goes to Dallas

Denne H. Freeman
Associated Press

IRVING, Texas — Jimmy Johnson got one of his "Miami boys" as insurance for another Dallas Cowboys' Super Bowl run, signing Bernie Kosar to a one-year deal Wednesday as a backup to injured Troy Aikman.

Kosar, who was cut unexpectedly on Monday by the Cleveland Browns, made it clear he's not after Aikman's job and just wants a chance at a Super Bowl ring. Three times he led the Browns to the AFC title game only to lose.

"There's no question Troy Aikman is one of the most brilliant quarterbacks in the league and no way am I here competing for his job," Kosar said. "The shot at a Super Bowl ring was a big factor why I came to Dallas."

Miami, Kansas City and Philadelphia tried to woo Kosar, but his loyalty to his old college coach, Johnson, was too strong.

"Loyalty means a lot to me," Kosar said. "They showed a lot of confidence and trust in me. I don't intend to let anybody down."

Aikman, who is trying to overcome a pulled left hamstring, took the arrival of the veteran Kosar in stride and didn't see him as a threat.

"I think it's good," Aikman said. "I think it's good for the team." Aikman's hamstring was still sore on Wednesday and he said "if there was a game today I couldn't play."

The Cowboys signed Kosar to a one-year deal in the $500,000 range. Kosar got a check for more than $2 million when he was paid off by the Browns.

"We jumped at a chance to get someone the quality of Bernie," said Cowboys owner Jerry Jones. "To have him on this team is a tremendous luxury."

Ewing lifts New York

LANDOVER, Md. — Patrick Ewing bounced back from a miserable offensive outing to score 28 points Wednesday night, and the New York Knicks remained undefeated by beating Washington 92-84.

John Starks had 27 points for the Knicks, who never trailed in winning their fourth straight. New York needs one more win to match its best-ever start, set in the 1969-70 season.

Ewing, who also grabbed 14 rebounds, scored only eight points Tuesday against Philadelphia, ending a string of 106 straight games in double figures.

Former Knick Kenny Walker came off the bench with 18 points and 14 rebounds for the Bullets. Charles Oakley had 19 rebounds for New York.

PHILADELPHIA — Sherman Douglas scored four points in the final 1:27, lifting Boston over Philadelphia.

Kevin Gamble and Xavier McDaniel each had 17 points and Douglas scored 16 for the Celtics, who won their third straight game after an opening loss. Jeff Hornacek had 26 points and Clarence Weatherspoon 23 for the 76ers, who lost their third straight after a season-opening victory.

Boston took the biggest lead of the game at 77-67 with 10:15 to play, but the Sixers tied the score 87-87 with 1:39 remaining. Douglas then scored the next four points, offsetting a layup by Philadelphia's Michael Curry with one second to go.

Phoenix plans for new baseball stadium

Paul Davenport
 Associated Press
PHOENIX — Phoenix Suns president Jerry Colangelo announced Wednesday an effort to build a stadium to attract a major league club, saying baseball owners were sending "unmistakable signals" they'll add two teams soon.
 "Plans for the $200 million stadium, which would have a retractable roof and grass, depend on Maricopa County enacting a quarter-cent sales tax increase for up to seven years, Colangelo said.
 "Baseball has not officially established an expansion timeline. It has no committee formed, no formal process initiated. But it is sending unmistakable signals," Colangelo said, citing the proposed realignment of the American and National leagues into three divisions each.

 Bud Selig, the Milwaukee Brewers owner who chairs the ruling executive council, has said there aren't any plans to expand.
 Colangelo said he wants to present a proposal to owners by year's end and that he needs the county to tentatively enact the sales tax by early December. In anticipation of baseball's last round of expansion, the state legislature in 1990 authorized the county to enact the tax increase, but only after a franchise is awarded.
 "In public policy, as in sports, timing is everything," Colangelo said. "If Arizona wants major league baseball, now is the time to move."

County Board of Supervisors Chairman Jim Bruner, who attended Colangelo's news conference outside America West Arena, later was noncommittal about whether the board would tentatively enact the tax increase but said Colangelo's timetable was feasible.
 In Phoenix, state, county and city sales taxes add up to 6.8 percent, including a 0.1 percent increase approved by Phoenix that takes effect Dec. 1.
 The Dial Corp, a Phoenix-based corporation whose products include Breck shampoo and Dial soap, would be the lead investor, Colangelo said. Dial chairman John Teets confirmed his corporation's involvement. Dial is also a partner of the Suns.

Clark, agent to begin free agent touring with Rangers

Ronald Blum
 Associated Press
NEW YORK — Will Clark and his representative began their free agent tour by traveling to Texas on Wednesday night for meetings with the Rangers.
 Clark and agent Jeff Moorad were scheduled to have dinner with Rangers president Tom Schieffer, general manager Tom Grieve and manager Kevin Kennedy. They planned to tour the Arlington area on Thursday and see the Rangers' new ballpark, which is to open next April.

 "Will has spent his entire professional career with one organization," Moorad said. "As we evaluate his alternatives at this stage of his career, we feel it's only prudent for him to make some in-person visits to the teams that have expressed interest."
 Moorad said he was putting together plans for a visit to Baltimore late next week. Moorad also said the Giants made a contract proposal last week and that he will get back to them.

 Another prominent free agent, National League batting champion Andres Galarraga, said Wednesday that Baltimore, Los Angeles and the New York Mets are among the clubs trying to sign him. However, Los Angeles already has NL Rookie of the Year Eric Karros at first base and the Mets say they aren't looking at prominent players.
 "We're going to show the Rockies these offers to pressure them a little," Galarraga said during a ceremony in which the Caracas mayor honored him.

 Galarraga, who signed with the Rockies as a free agent last November and hit .370, made $850,000 in 1993 and is thought to be seeking a $5 million-a-year deal.
 His agent, Jim Bronner, couldn't be contacted Wednesday.
 The Rockies said Monday they were willing to consider a four-year deal.

 uniform with the No. 18 (punter John Jett has No. 19) and began study of the Cowboys playbook. He was on the field for the afternoon practice.
 Johnson said he would decide Sunday some 30 minutes before kickoff against the Phoenix Cardinals whether to start Aikman, Jason Garrett or Kosar.

"For the average quarterback it would be almost impossible to go to another team and start in four days but it could happen," Johnson said. "I'll watch practice and see how much he can pick up without errors. We'd have to scale down our offensive package. I don't rule out Troy or Jason as a starter. I do know this: Bernie Kosar is a winner. He took the Browns to the playoffs five straight years."
 The Cowboys released backup

Hugh Millen to make room for Kosar, who will become a free agent after the season. Millen hadn't played in a game this year.
 Dallas players were happy to see Kosar.
 Wide receiver Michael Irvin, who played with Kosar at Miami, said, "He can play the game. It's nice to have someone like Bernie. Coach Johnson will do anything it takes to win another ballgame."
 Aikman pulled a hamstring Sunday in the third quarter of Dallas' 31-9 victory over the New York Giants that propelled the Cowboys into sole possession of first place in the NFC East with a 6-2 record.

 Kosar played for Johnson at Miami in 1984. He led the Hurricanes to a national title in 1983, one year before Johnson became coach. Kosar left Miami with two years of eligibility remaining so the Browns could choose him in the 1985 supplemental draft.

GAME OF THE CENTURY

Holtz hopes to turn the tables

By Rick Warnock
Associated Press

SOUTH BEND, Ind. — The first time Lou Holtz coached against Bobby Bowden, it was a humbling experience.

Bowden's West Virginia team overpowered Holtz's William & Mary squad 43-7 in Morgantown Sept. 12, 1970.

After the game, Holtz complained that Bowden had run up the score.

"He said, 'It's your job to hold the score down, not mine,'" Holtz recalled.

Holtz will try to turn the tables Saturday when second-ranked Notre Dame plays Bowden's No. 1 Florida State Seminoles.

"Here I am, 23 years later, still trying to hold down the score against Bobby Bowden," Holtz said.

"Some things don't change." They first met in 1960 when Bowden was the coach at Samford and Holtz was a graduate assistant at Iowa.

"I went out there to watch them play, and Lou was kind of my paperone," Bowden said. "He was a great host, and we became friends right away."

In the early 1960s, Holtz and his wife Beth drove to Florida for a vacation. Along the way, they stopped to visit Bowden and his wife Ann.

"They had five children at the time, and that's all they needed as someone else as their house guests," Holtz said. "But we went and I met some other coaches for the first time. I had made a friendship."

The friendship has endured through three decades and four coaching confrontations. Bowden leads the personal series 3-1, with all three wins coming at West Virginia.

In addition to that 1970 victory, his Mountaineers beat William & Mary 28-23 in 1971 and Holtz's North Carolina State team 13-10 in the 1975 Peach Bowl.

Holtz's only win over Bowden came in the 1972 Peach Bowl, where N.C. State beat West Virginia 49-13.

"He's one of the most competitive people I've ever met," Bowden said. "I'm sure he still hasn't forgotten that game in 1970."

Holtz is more intense than the easy-going Bowden and has a more conservative coaching style, favoring size and strength over finesse and speed.

But they also have a lot in common, including a good sense of humor, coaching sons and tremendous records.

Bowden has more victories (236) than any active coach except Joe Paterno, has won eight straight bowl games and has led the Seminoles to six consecutive Top 4 finishes.

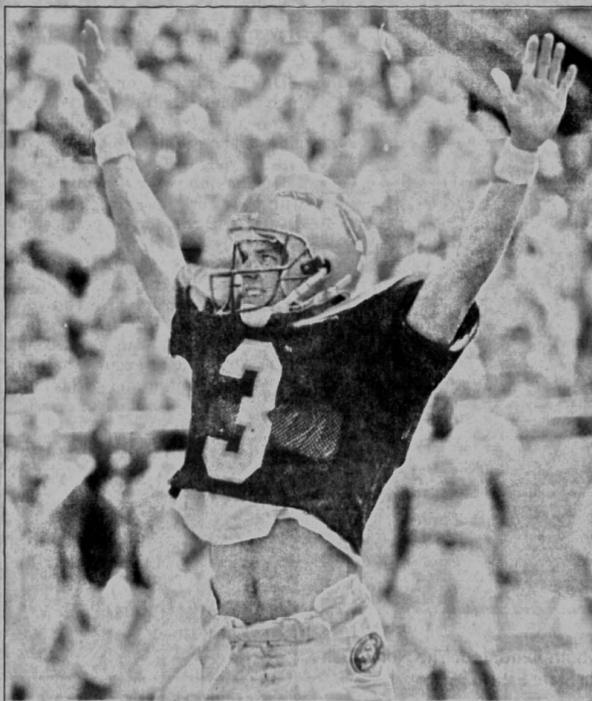

Holtz won the national championship in 1988 and won more games (66) in his first seven seasons at Notre Dame than Knute Rockne, Frank Leahy or Ara Parseghian.

Skip Holtz has coached under both men. He spent two years as a graduate assistant under Bowden at Florida State and is now his father's offensive coordinator at Notre Dame.

"They're very similar in many ways," the younger Holtz said. "They're both fundamental, technique coaches who stress blocking and tackling. ... Coach Bowden is more laid back and relaxed, while coach Holtz is more of a roll-the-sleeves up kind of guy. But they've got more similarities than differences."

Bowden said he's looking forward to meeting his old friend again at Notre Dame Stadium.

"It's going to be a great challenge," he said.

"This is Lou's element. No. 1, he's the underdog and he eats that up. No. 2, he's had an extra week to get ready. And No. 3, they're playing in their backyard in front of all those people. He should be feeling pretty good right now."

But Holtz, a notorious worrier, isn't acting that way.

"Florida State is the most impressive team I've ever coached against," he said.

"They're a team without a weakness and they're a team on a mission. They're capable of beating anybody in the country by 40 points."

Dolphins sign DeBerg

By Steven Wine
Associated Press

DAVIE, Fla. — Seeking a backup quarterback, the Miami Dolphins have signed the NFL's oldest player, Steve DeBerg.

At age 39, DeBerg gives Miami a cushion of experience at the position following Dan Marino's season-ending injury one month ago Wednesday. Scott Mitchell remains Miami's starter.

DeBerg, released last week by the Tampa Bay Buccaneers, signed with the Dolphins late Tuesday. They waived Tommy Hodson, acquired after Marino's injury, and kept quarterback Doug Pederson, who has never played in an NFL game.

"We just felt that we needed more experience behind Scott Mitchell," coach Don Shula said. "Getting DeBerg, we're getting a veteran with a lot of backup experience."

That's an understatement. DeBerg is a 17-year pro joining his sixth NFL team.

He was sent to the bench by Joe Montana in San Francisco, by John Elway in Denver and by Steve Young and Vinny Testaverde in Tampa Bay. He also started for four years in Kansas City and spent his first training camp with Dallas.

"I'm probably past my prime," DeBerg said with a chuckle. "But I feel very comfortable with my skills. A team with the kind of athletes this one has on offense makes me a better quarterback."

"I went from Tampa to Kansas City and people thought I'd become a better quarterback. The truth was I was surrounded by better players. Then when I went from Kansas City back to Tampa, people thought I lost all my talent."

DeBerg wasn't the Dolphins' only addition at practice Wednesday. The team signed guard Tom Thayer, a starter for eight years with the Chicago Bears until he hurt his back last spring.

DeBerg probably will dress as Miami's third quarterback Sunday at Philadelphia, Shula said.

Notre Dame defensive players practice in sight of Library Tuesday in South Bend, Ind. The No. 2 Irish "Touchdown Jesus" on the Theodore M. Hesburgh take on No. 1 Florida State Saturday.

Florida St. has advantage

Rick Warner
Associated Press

SOUTH BEND, Ind. — The numbers don't look good for second-ranked Notre Dame in Saturday's showdown against No. 1 Florida State.

And it's not just because Florida State leads the nation in scoring offense (44.3) AND scoring defense (6.4).

Although Notre Dame has played in more No. 1 vs. No. 2 games than any other school, the Fighting Irish have never won when they were No. 2. They are 4-2-2 in Games of the Century, but 0-2-1 when ranked second.

The Seminoles have more offensive weapons than an international arms dealer, but their undisputed leader is Heisman Trophy favorite Charlie Ward. The senior quarterback is feeling fine after sitting out last week's win over Maryland with bruised ribs, and that's bad news for Notre Dame.

The bad news for Florida State is that Notre Dame could control the ball with its powerful rushing attack and keep it out of Ward's hands.

The weather also could hurt the Seminoles. If predictions of rain come true, that could negate their speed advantage and hamper their passing game.

Discussions terminated in Miami sale

Steven Wine
Associated Press

DAVIE, Fla. — For the second time in four months, negotiations between owners of the Miami Dolphins and a prospective buyer have fallen through.

Discussions were terminated with New York investment banker J. Morton Davis, the Dolphins said Wednesday.

Davis, owner of D.H. Blair Investment Banking Corp., signed a letter of intent July 29 to buy 65 percent of the club initially for $96.2 million. He signed a second letter of intent to acquire half of Joe Robbie Stadium for $12.5 million.

The parties were unable to agree on a structure to implement the terms of the sale, the Robbie family said in a statement.

The Robbies rejected an earlier bid for the team by investor Nelson Peltz when he reduced his offer to $120 million from about $150 million.

Davis' offer valued the team at $148 million.

The Robbies are pursuing a sale to raise money for estate taxes that came due after the deaths of Joe and Elizabeth Robbie.

Joe Robbie founded the Dolphins in 1966.

"We intend to continue our efforts to sell a majority of our shares in the Miami Dolphins in order to satisfy our estate tax obligations," the Robbies said. "We remain confident in our ability to ultimately reach an agreement that will serve the best interests of the Miami Dolphins, the Robbie family and the South Florida community."

A letter from Davis' legal partner to wealthy South Florida banks seeking additional investors prompted speculation the deal might fall through.

Davis offered 1 percent shares of the team for $1.6 million apiece.

HALL OF FAME

Daly among nominees

Rudy Tynan
Associated Press

SPRINGFIELD, Mass. — Chuck Daly wasn't about to look back after learning he was one of four coaches and seven players nominated for the Basketball Hall of Fame on Wednesday.

"The next win," said Daly, the New Jersey Nets coach when asked for a favorite moment in his coaching career that began in 1955 at Punxsutawney, Pa., High School.

"That's what it's all about in this game. Winning the next one," he said. "I'm very honored to be nominated to the Hall of Fame. It's something you just don't believe will happen to you as a kid starting out with a ball. But in this game all the things in the past are just history."

Daly's history includes NBA and Ivy League titles and an Olympic gold medal.

Louisville's Denny Crum, the retired Gene Shue and Italy's Cesare Rubini were the other coaches nominated.

Rubini amassed a 322-28 record and 10 Italian championships during his 31 years coaching in Milan.

"Fantastic," said Carol Blazejowski, whose shooting lit up women's basketball in the 1970s. "I've waited a long time for this."

Other players nominated were Richie Guerin, Johnny Kerr, Jamaal Wilkes, Buddy Jeannette and Vern Mikkelsen. Joan Crawford, an AAU star with Nashville in the 1950s, joined Blazejowski in being proposed by the women's committee. Jeannette, a standout backcourt player during the 1940s, and Mikkelsen, one of the NBA's first power forwards, were nominated by the veterans committee.

To be elected, the 11 nominees need at least 18 votes from the 24-member Honors Committee. The committee's selections are to be announced on Feb. 8, said Hall of Fame President Joe O'Brien.

"Now we wait," said Crum, calling his nomination "a very great honor."

Crum coached Louisville to NCAA titles in 1980 and 1986 after serving as an assistant to John Wooden when UCLA won three titles. One of the last players he recruited for UCLA was Wilkes.

A three time academic All-American as well as frontcourt standout, Wilkes helped lead UCLA to NCAA titles in 1972 and 1973. In his 12 professional seasons with the Warriors, Lakers and Clippers, he averaged 17.7 points, and added four NBA titles.

Associated Press

Chuck Daly

Shue, during his 22 seasons as an NBA coach, earned the reputation of taking struggling franchises and turning them into title contenders. He is the NBA's seventh-winningest coach with 784 victories with the Bullets, the 76ers, and the Clippers.

Philadelphia takes Perry

Associated Press
PHILADELPHIA — The Philadelphia Eagles claimed tackle William "Refrigerator" Perry Wednesday in an effort to bolster their leaky run defense.

The Chicago Bears waived the 335-pound lineman Tuesday after nine years with the team.

He was fourth among active Bears with 456 tackles, including eight this year. He trailed Richard Dent in sacks with 28½, none in 1993.

Eagles coach Rich Kotite said Perry would play Sunday against the Miami Dolphins as the Eagles (4-4) attempt to snap a four-game losing streak.

The Eagles, who have given up more rushing yardage in eight games this season than they did in all of the 1990 and '91 seasons, have been stung for 826 yards in the last four games.

"I think he has to help us under the circumstances," Kotite said. "We're glad to get him."

"I was concerned someone else would get to him. We certainly need help inside."

Perry, who on occasion has played fullback in short-yardage goal-line situations, was selected by the Bears out of Clemson in the first round of the 1985 NFL draft.

Gambling an issue in Toronto

Bill Barnard
Associated Press

NEW YORK — NBA commissioner David Stern says the entry of the new expansion franchise in Toronto is conditional on not having betting on NBA games in Ontario.

Stern stressed the league does not want a confrontation over the issue and added he's confident the Toronto ownership group can resolve the problem of sports betting in the province.

"Our goal is to eliminate sports betting on NBA games, period," Stern said Wednesday in a telephone news conference. "We don't want people to gamble on our games. It's a subject that unites the owners and the Players Association."

In Ontario, the government runs a weekly betting lottery that features games from the NBA, NHL, NFL, CFL and major league baseball.

Stern would not specifically address what action the league would take if the betting issue was not settled.

Toronto was accepted as the 28th NBA franchise in a unanimous vote of the Board of Governors last week. The team is to begin play in the 1995-96 season.

Stern also said he agrees with the NBA Competition Committee's recommendation that the 1994 draft lottery be redesigned to give more opportunity for the worst teams to get the highest draft picks.

The Board of Governors is supposed to vote this week on a plan that would give the worst team a 1-in-4 chance to win the first selection, and the best team a 1-in-200 chance. The current odds are 1-in-6 for the worst team and 1-in-66 for the best team.

On other subjects, Stern declined to speculate on how the owners would vote if Michael Jordan ended his retirement this year. Any team could block Jordan's decision.

"My sense is that Michael is not coming back this year," Stern said. "I take him completely at his word."

—reiterated that the salary cap has been good for the NBA, and the owners will try to keep it when the collective bargaining agreement expires after this season.

Weir's 'Fearless' explores life, death in visceral style

Tad Paulson
The Daily Iowan

The indiscriminate hand of death surrounds us, waiting to reach out, randomly, and take away those good or bad, young or old. The way we deal with this belittling possibility is what makes us survivors or victims of life.

When the chance comes to look into one of death's cackling faces — whether it be on the operating table looking up or on an airplane going down — we can either confront our dread of the beyond, conquering and accepting it, or we can surrender to our fear, thinking only of those we could lose and the pain we could feel.

This is the difficult choice that lies at the heart of Peter Weir's extraordinary emotional drama "Fearless," starring Jeff Bridges, Rosie Perez and Isabella Rossellini. Weir, the Australian responsible for such films as "Dead Poets Society" and "Witness," has already proven himself to be deft at handling a story with this much intensity and feeling to it. "Fearless" is a harrowing, gut-wrenching film of profound spiritual truth. It's one of this year's best and not to be missed.

Following the plane crash that kills his business partner and best friend, as well as dozens of others, Max Klein (Bridges) walks unscathed out of a hazy, smoldering corn field, cradling an infant and holding a young boy's hand. His face is blank, utterly calm. Turning the children over to paramedics, he jumps into a taxi and heads for a hotel.

There, staring into a mirror, Klein examines himself in a state of stony serenity. "I'm not dead," he observes, amazed. He feels invulnerable, ecstatically happy. Life has opened up his senses for the first time, and every gust of wind, every grain of sand becomes immediately relevant to him. As a youth, he almost died of an allergic reaction from eating strawberries — now he wolfs them down whole.

When the FBI and an airline representative show up at his door, wondering why he hasn't made contact with his family, he shrugs. Later, he tells the dumbfounded airline rep he wants a free flight home, first-class. The airline's therapist, Bill Perlman (John Turturro), suggests Max is suffering from a form of Posttraumatic Stress Syndrome — a psychological affliction common among Vietnam vets. Because of the intensity of his experience, Perlman tells Klein, he now feels he can survive any life-threatening situation and is addicted to the recreation of the feelings of invulnerability he developed during the crash. He walks, unflinching, through heavy traffic and dances on the roof of a building.

Klein's wife Laura cannot fathom the changes in her husband; his newfound sense of immortality is terrifying, confusing and, ultimately, shut off from her. Rossellini ("Blue Velvet") brings a broad, believable range of emotions to her performance — she is amazed and aroused by her husband's transformation, but angered and hurt by his refusal to share his new self with her.

Jeff Bridges stars in 'Fearless.'

The one person Klein does share with is Carla (Perez), another survivor Perlman introduces him to, who lost her toddler son in the crash. Closed off from her husband and wracked with grief and guilt, Carla is terrified of the world she has survived to endure. Unlike Klein, who considers the crash one of the best things to ever happen to him, Carla has shut herself off from life, surrendering to her religion and the fear her memories of the crash conjure.

The friendship that grows between these two scarred individuals is beautifully played by Perez and Bridges. They trust one another implicitly, sharing the powerfully intense emotions they are unable to describe to their spouses. Klein tells Laura he feels "an overwhelming sense of love" for Carla, and though Laura takes this as a sexual challenge, it's obvious the bond between the two survivors goes far beyond sexual, frivolous attraction. They need each other desperately, if only so they can learn to heal themselves and put the crash behind them.

A masterful character actor, Bridges brings a certain brooding quality to his film roles, constantly appearing as if he were choking back both words and feeling, his eyes displaying a thousand emotions in one glance. As Klein, Bridges digs deep and comes up with a visceral performance that is deeply affecting — a performance that should be remembered come Oscar time.

Perez is deeply effective, too, though the street-smart sass that peppered her stints in "White Men Can't Jump" and "Untamed Heart" is all but absent. In Perez's hands Carla is a deeply troubled woman on the verge of complete mental breakdown, and we feel her pain tangibly.

Turturro brings a sensitive, open demeanor to his role as the therapist; Perlman cannot possibly comprehend what his patients have been through, but he knows the healing process is a slow, internal battle he can only nurture along. Tom Hulce ("Amadeus") turns in an atypical "slimy lawyer" performance as Klein's money-grubbing attorney, who is trying to milk the crash for as many lawsuit dollars as possible.

Peter Weir has directed a moving, uplifting film here — "Fearless" is an achievement to be admired. It confronts the broader questions of our lives and how we deal with (and ignore) the ever-looming possibility of our death. It's a film that will stand out, for sure, when all the other clunkers of '93 have disappeared in the mists of obscurity.

New collection kicks off 'Neil November'

Tasha Robinson
The Daily Iowan

Will comic fans ever get enough of Neil Gaiman?

DC Comics doesn't seem to think so. Prepare to spend November buried under a wave of Gaiman releases and "Sandman"-oriented merchandise. Fans who can't get enough of Morpheus and his sister Death can look forward to the release of "Death: the High Cost of Living" in trade paperback, a series of "Sandman" trading cards, a Death watch, a Death T-shirt, a new Death poster and "The Death Gallery," a collection of Gaiman-inspired art.

Kicking the wave off is "Children's Crusade" No. 1, a "frame" issue written by Gaiman and tying together a crossover spanning the main Vertigo Comics titles. "Crusade" stars a number of kids from the Vertigo line, but notably features the return (finally!) of Tim Hunter from Gaiman's "Books of Magic" and the two dead but lively boys who wandered off to find their fortune in "Sandman" No. 25.

But the best part of Neil November is the release of the latest "Sandman" collection, "Fables and Reflections." A diverse book which gathers nine stand-alone Sandman stories, "Fables" is not only a must for the Gaiman completist, it's the most interesting collection to date.

While the quality of storytelling — and, more noticeably, of art — varies widely in "Fables," the book is unique in its breadth and variety. It includes six regular issues of "Sandman" (numbers 29-31 and 38-40); a short (and hideously illustrated) piece which appeared in the publicity collection "Vertigo Jam"; the special-edition "Sandman" No. 50; and the lengthy special-issue story "Orpheus." Each one of these stories stands on its own merits; most of them feature Dream and his pantheon only in passing, if at all. "Fables" is thus an especially good book for new readers who are wondering why Gaiman's name comes up constantly in comic circles, why he keeps winning awards or just why DC is putting out all this merchandise. The tenor of the stories varies widely, from a traditional Arabian folktale presentation to a whimsical childrens-comics style. The stories range from historical explorations — what prompted Marco Polo to seek out distant lands, how Robespierre's bloody reign was brought to an end — to a retelling of an old myth and the creation of a more modern myth.

P. Craig Russell / DC Comics

Morpheus, or Dream, is the star of Neil Gaiman's popular "Sandman" series and the indirect focus of a group of stories in "Fables and Reflections."

The latter, which takes place in "The Hunt," is probably Gaiman's most compelling contribution to this book. Partially a traditional fairy tale, partially an interaction between the storyteller and his all-too-modern granddaughter, "Hunt" combines humor, emotion, wonder and excitement with a grim (or perhaps Grimm) world view.

But other stories, like "The Parliament of Rooks" (which is itself both a compilation of mythical trivia and an exploration of the art of storytelling) and "Ramadan," the "Arabian Nights" pastiche, will draw in new readers and old fans in similar style. Gaiman's great talent seems to lie in pulling together old myths and real facts, then re-presenting them in a deceptively simple format. His straightforward dialogue and prose creates far more of a mood and flavor than many comics writers' wordy and complicated stylings.

With proficiency like this, Gaiman may well be capable of maintaining this frenetic pace of new releases and re-releases. Certainly his fans won't be complaining about overexposure, so long as the exposure is this enjoyable.

Back to the Drawing Board is a weekly review column on comics, animation and the graphic medium. It appears Thursdays in The Daily Iowan.

Dennis Quaid and Meg Ryan face themselves in "Flesh and Bone," a new Paramount film.

Director maturing with 'Flesh'

Ian Corwin
The Daily Iowan

Writer / director Steve Kloves now has two intricate and moody character studies to his credit, offering up proof positive that "The Fabulous Baker Boys," his 1989 debut, was just the beginning of what could be a marvelous career.

"Flesh and Bone" has just as much to offer as Kloves' first effort in the acting and atmosphere departments, but with this latest film, the director comes up with something "Baker Boys" sadly lacked ... a story with the narrative complexity and moral ambiguities one would usually find in the films of a seasoned, veteran storyteller.

Kloves' maturation process has occurred quickly and cleanly; where "Baker Boys" offered us complex characters who wind up revealing their quirks and nuances with all the subtlety of a Central Park flasher, "Flesh and Bone" leaves the mild eccentricities who populate its landscape shrouded in a sense of enigmatic mystery through the end of the film. It is largely left to the actors to fill the gaps with their performances and leave us with a sense of closure. Dennis Quaid, Meg Ryan and James Caan each show that they are more than up to the challenge.

The film's dark and shocking prologue introduces us to the theme of blood ties to sordid histories that haunt the characters of "Flesh and Bone." A young boy wanders onto an idyllic family farm, and the mother of the clan takes him in and cares for him for a night. She notices that the boy has a star tattooed on his forehead and remarks "What kind of parent would do this to a child?" What kind, indeed. When the boy's father shows up, we are treated to a graphic display that tells us exactly what kind of parent he is.

Thirty years later, the boy Arliss (Quaid) has grown up, and the star on his hairline is covered by a big, good-natured cowboy hat worn at a jaunty angle. Arliss has become a stocker of vending machines (from candy to condoms), a life which keeps him from planting roots and dealing with his nefarious history. But since Arliss won't stop running, his past finds him and deals with him on its own terms. Through coincidence as well as calculated cunning, people begin to drift into Arliss' life ... people whom he doesn't want to see and who will force him to come to grips with his flesh and bone, his blood ties to a history he finds morally reprehensible.

Ryan is a mysterious woman whom Arliss meets at a bar — she's supposed to jump out of a cake, but she's so drunk she falls out. Ryan's work in this film deserves more praise than it has been getting; her portrayal of a feisty innocent who fits into Quaid's past more than she's aware of is the most stirring, startling work I've ever seen her do. Mention should also be made of newcomer Gwendyth Paltrow, who plays Ginnie, a thief whose latest racket is stealing jewelry from the recently deceased at open-casket funerals. She shows a flare for the dynamic here that promises much.

But the true shock of "Flesh and Bone" is the performance Quaid delivers. Controlled, subtle, almost claustrophobic in its quiet intensity, this role provides Quaid with something he's never had before — a true challenge. Watching Quaid in this role is deceptive at first; his eyes never reveal too much, his mouth is always set and seldom smiles, and his way with words seems to be all too simple. But as Kloves chooses to withhold and reveal Arliss' past, he also chooses to let Quaid show through in rough and raw streaks. We're left not quite knowing what to think of Quaid's Arliss, but then again, we're also sure Arliss doesn't know what to think of himself.

The supporting cast is rounded out by a truly disturbing James Caan as Quaid's father and a very underrated Scott Wilson ("The Ninth Configuration," "The Right Stuff") as Quaid's associate. Praise is also due to cinematographer Philippe Rousselot, who can make the Texas prairie just as dark and brooding as a seedy motel room, thanks in part to a brilliant coupling with Thomas Newman's haunting musical score.

In "Flesh and Bone," Steve Kloves has shown us a talent which is maturing at a frightening rate. The depth of the moral questions raised here and the deft touches of eccentricity in his writing announce Kloves as a major talent with the ability to ask questions without necessarily giving his audience the answers.

Weekend 'Meet the Writers' conference spotlighting Latin American stories, play

Amy Weismann
The Daily Iowan

Latin American literary identities and the politics of storytelling will be the subject of "Meet the Writers," a conference to be held Friday and Saturday.

The conference will include writing workshops, panel discussions, a staged reading of Venezuelan writer Gustavo Ott's play "Quiere me Mucho," short story and poetry readings, and a concluding concert exploring the music of Bolivia. Presentations will be given in both Spanish and English. Some readings will be simultaneously translated.

Scheduled panel discussion topics include "Narrating Nations: History, Exile and Subjective Experience"; "Food, Feminism and the Art of (Re)Telling"; and "Irony and Magic in Mexican Short Stories."

In addressing these topics, the writers will bring both common realities and divergent reflections to bear.

Carmen Suarez, a fiction writer and educator from Colombia, will read a number of her recently published short stories, including stories published in a German anthology of Latin American erotic texts titled "America Latina, Mi cuerpo, mi continente" at 2:15 p.m. Friday.

Suarez believes that common denominators can be found in the work of Latin American writers. The simultaneous expression of "humor with sadness," a pervading tradition of oral narrative and a "sensuality" that involves both the spirit and the body, says Suarez, are all elements which pervade national and historical experiences in Latin America.

Juan Jose Delaney, a writer of suspense and fantastical fiction from Argentina, says of Latin Americans: "The principal element we share is language." A powerful and in some ways, determinative force, Spanish and Portuguese bridge many cultures and histories.

But, says Delaney, beyond this legacy of a common colonial past lies a deeper identification with personal and national stories, stories which often preclude common cause. He will deliver a paper titled "La literatura policial y de misterio en Argentina" (Literature, Suspense and Mystery in Argentina) Friday at 4:40 p.m. and will read his short story "Las mujeres del sur" (The Women of the South) Saturday at 9:45 a.m.

Ott will direct the staging a performance of his play Friday at 8:30 p.m. In addition to playwriting, Ott is also the director and editor of TextoTeatro, a journal of theater arts. In addition to presenting his play, Ott will address contemporary social and political debates in Venezuelan theater.

Registration for the "Meet the Writers" conference begins Friday at 8:30 a.m. at the Chicano / Native American Cultural Center, 308 Melrose Ave. Most events will take place in rooms 213 or 214 of Phillips Hall. Contact Rebecca Byron, 335-3897; Ibon Izurieta, 335-2236; or the Department of Spanish and Portuguese for a complete schedule. All events are free.
