Spacewalkers earn stars in latest NASA mission

Harry Rosenthal
Associated Press

SPACE CENTER, Houston — NASA decided Sunday to turn one of the Hubble Space Telescope's troublesome solar wings into instant space junk by simply dumping it overboard during an overnight space walk.

For the mission's first spacewalk early Sunday by the fix-it crew of the shuttle Endeavour, the verdict was "we got everything accomplished."

Story Musgrave and Jeff Hoffman spent nearly eight hours in the open cargo bay. When they left, the space telescope had six working gyroscopes again to guide it, three electronics units to run the gyros and a new set of eight fuses.

"Jeff and Story today have definitely earned their Dr. Goodwrench certificate and service station Endeavour has qualified for a triple A rating," said David Leckrone, a Hubble program scientist.

The task of installing a new planetary camera and corrective lenses for the Hubble's other instruments was still ahead. But the mission's second spacewalk, beginning late Sunday, was reserved for replacing the telescope's twin solar panels.

"We're ready for EVA two," shuttle commander Richard Covey, using the NASA acronym for spacewalks, said after the crew awoke Sunday night. "The epic continues."

The 40-foot-long panels have provided reliable electricity for the telescope, but they caused a vexing vibration.

One of the panels responded to a ground command to roll up tight like a window shade for transport back to Earth. But the second panel, badly bent out of shape, stuck with 70 percent of it still unrolled. Mission Control decided Sunday to get rid of it after it is removed from

Bates pleads not guilty to simple assault charges

UI junior football player Toney Bates pled not guilty to two charges of simple assault Friday morning in Johnson County District Court.

Bates will enter a plea to a third count of simple assault Tuesday morning at 8 a.m. A trial date has been set for Jan. 25.

The charges stem from a series of alleged assaults in the campus area of Iowa City. During the past five to six weeks more than 20 women have reported being touched or grabbed by a 6-foot to 6-foot-2-inch African-American male weighing about 200 pounds.

Men's Athletic Director Bob Bowlsby said the athletic department is not in a position to react until Bates has gone through his hearings. If Bates is found guilty, the department will meet with the football coaches and consult with the dean of students.

Bates, a criminal justice major, attends the UI on a football scholarship and has no prior criminal record.

Field hockey star Gleason picked up for OWI

UI field hockey standout Kristy Gleason was arrested early Sunday morning in the 10 block of South Dubuque Street for operating while intoxicated.

Gleason

Gleason, a 22-year-old UI senior, was charged at 2:06 a.m. after stopping to pick someone up, said Gleason's attorney Randy Larson. She refused to take a blood alcohol level test by Larson's advice.

Gleason has no previous traffic violations, Larson said.

"Her attitude is she feels sorry," he said. "This embarrasses her team as well, and she takes responsibility for her mistake in judgment."

Gleason is Iowa's all-time leading scorer and helped the Hawkeyes to their second consecutive Final Four appearance this season.

Shakin' it up

Hoard's tree farm, located off of Highway 218 near Hills, Iowa, was busy with Christmas tree hunters Saturday afternoon. Brent Hoard makes use of the "tree shaker" which shakes almost 90 percent of the loose needles out of the trees. Watching their tree being shaken are Brad, Shannon, Mary Pat and Tyler Bodell. Although this particular tree wasn't the "perfect" tree, the family was tired of looking.

2ND CONSECUTIVE LOCAL WINNER

UI senior Husain chosen as Rhodes scholar

Chris Pothoven
The Daily Iowan

For the second year in a row, a UI student has won the prestigious Rhodes Scholarship to study at Oxford University in England.

UI senior Ali Husain, a microbiology major from Knoxville, Iowa, was selected Saturday as one of 32 U.S. recipients of the award.

Husain

"I was shocked at first. The interview really hadn't gone like I'd wanted," he said. "But I'm excited to get it, and a little apprehensive, too. It's a big honor with a lot of responsibilities."

Husain plans to study biochemistry at Oxford. He hopes to eventually become a doctor and specialize in infectious diseases within the field of internal medicine.

The scholarship provides a $20,000 stipend and tuition for two years of study at Oxford, with the possibility of renewing for a third year. Rhodes scholars are selected on the basis of intellectual and acaademic achievement, integrity of character, interest in and respect for others, leadership, and physical fitness.

"I don't really know why they chose me. I think it was just luck," Husain said. "The thing that helped me was that I had traveled a lot, and I had some idea of what was going on in the world. They didn't want someone whose knowledge was limited purely to science."

Andrew Wildenberg, a computer science and mathematics major from West Branch, Iowa, won a scholarship last year. President Bill Clinton is also a former Rhodes scholar.

Husain was one of four winners selected from the 14 state nominees in Iowa's district, which includes North Dakota, South Dakota, Minnesota, Nebraska, Missouri and Kansas. A student's district is determined by his or her hometown.

The district winners were announced Saturday after being interviewed in Minneapolis by an eight-member selection committee. The other three winners attend school at Harvard, Washington University and MIT.

2-WEEK SEARCH ENDS

Missing student turns up safe at family's home

Megan Penick
The Daily Iowan

Missing UI freshman Gantry Miller turned up unharmed in his parents' garage in West Des Moines at 3 a.m. Saturday, after disappearing more than two weeks ago.

Miller's mother, Lynn, said the fear is over, but the family still has a lot to get through.

A West Des Moines Police Department press release said Miller left because he became depressed with his current situation.

"We feel relief, but the exhaustion is not quite over yet," Lynn Miller said. "We can only say he's home safe. We're going to give him a little time."

Miller disappeared Nov. 14 after his grandfather dropped him off in front of Hillcrest Residence Hall following a weekend at home with his family. He was reported missing Nov. 22, at which time the family, volunteers and UI Public Safety began a search effort, contacting media and posting and sending thousands of fliers throughout the county.

Lynn Miller said her son was found Saturday morning lying inside the family car.

"Yesterday morning when we woke up, he was in the garage," she said. "I'm pretty much in the dark, too. I have a million questions I can't ask now."

Lynn said Gant spent two weeks at the family's cabin in Clear Lake, Iowa, and the rest of the time he was hitchhiking. She said authorities checked the cabin, but because there was no sign of forced entry they concluded he had not been there.

The press release said after Miller left the cabin he walked two days before he showed up at his parents' home.

She said Gant has not seen or talked to anyone outside of the immediate family.

"He won't even talk to Grandma and Grandpa," Lynn Miller said. "I think we're going to try and get some professional help, so we know what to do."

Gant, who was unavailable for comment, has not disclosed whether he plans to return to the UI next semester, Lynn Miller said.

Tom Miller, Gant's uncle, said the family is going to lay low for a while.

"There are three weeks of emotion that need to be worked out," he said. "He's in good health and the family is in seclusion."

A 'GRAVE CONCERN'

ICLU berates sex act policy

Jim Snyder
The Daily Iowan

The Iowa Civil Liberties Union has joined the Faculty Senate, Campaign for Academic Freedom and the American Association of University Professors in denouncing the Iowa state Board of Regents imposed sex act policy at the UI as a threat to academic freedom.

In a letter sent to regent President Marvin Berenstein, ICLU executive director Cryss Farley wrote his group's board of directors has a "grave concern over the threat of academic freedom of University of Iowa faculty members and students inherent in the Iowa state Board of Regents' policy."

Farley added, "No policy regulating class use of instructional materials should supersede an instructor's professional integrity and judgment."

He went on to write that while the ICLU recognizes the regents' policy does not prohibit the use of sexually explicit materials in classrooms, "it is only too clear, given

"All we want is a warning. This policy does not jeopardize academic freedom at all."

Marvin Berenstein,
regents president

the context in which the policy mandate has arisen, that the intent is to suppress one form of expression in the classroom — a de facto prior restraint."

Farley's letter follows one sent in early November by Robert O'Neil, president of Committee A of the American Association of University Professors. O'Neil expressed his committee's similar concerns about the consequences of the regents' policy.

Berenstein said the ICLU letter, although well written, is nothing new.

"I don't happen to agree with the conclusions reached in the letter," Berenstein said.

Berenstein said he wasn't sure what the intent of the letter was, because it doesn't directly ask the regents to rescind their policy. Farley did write, however, that "responsible governance of a university should embrace unequivocal support for the principles of academic freedom and freedom of expression."

"All we want is a warning. This policy does not jeopardize academic freedom at all," Berenstein said. "Everybody that is dealing with me wants to tell me what my position is. Nobody is trying to resolve the problem, short of ignoring it."

Berenstein had worked out a compromise with UI President Hunter Rawlings and UI Faculty

ARIES (March 21-April 19)
While attempting to fix the Hubble telescope, NASA astronauts drop a screwdriver which falls all the way from space into your yard. Fortunately, it was a tool paid for by tax dollars so it is worth $17,000. Merry Christmas.

TAURUS (April 20-May 20)
You wake up in the middle of the night to find your roommate standing above you holding a file knife. He's been under a lot of stress lately, so don't even mention the incident in the morning. Just remember to call him "your highness" like he asked you.

GEMINI (May 21-June 21)
Christmas is coming and the goose is getting fat. And so are you. So quit eating Oreos for breakfast, you pig.

CANCER (June 22-July 22) In a surprise development at their December meeting, the Iowa state Board of Regents bans learning on the UI campus. "Learning can lead to people finding out about bad and naughty things," one member says. "We decided to enact our policies according to Gov. Branstad's philosophy that ignorance is bliss."

LEO (July 23-Aug. 22) With Christmas right around the corner in Tama, Iowa, the annual "40-pound fruitcake baking contest" is set to be held in Francine "the sugar queen" Snodgrass' kitchen. Your entry, a delectable mixture of apricots, fudge, cauliflower and Spanish rice takes first prize.

VIRGO (Aug. 23-Sept. 22)
Fred "Gopher" Grandy will be elected the next governor of Iowa. He will decree every Friday happy hour and appoint Capt. Stubing to the transportation committee. You will lose privileges at the governor's mansion after dunking Stubing's daughter, Vicky, in a bucket of whiskey sour.

LIBRA (Sept. 23-Oct. 23) After years of frustration and much lobbying, the United Nations finally agrees to try your solution to find permanent peace in the Middle East — a pillow fight between Yasser Arafat and Yitzak Rabin. Arafat wins after faking his own injury then side-swiping Rabin with a vicious down-filled throw pillow. Now instead of rocks and plastic bullets, the combatants in the Gaza Strip use stuffed animals and couch cushions.

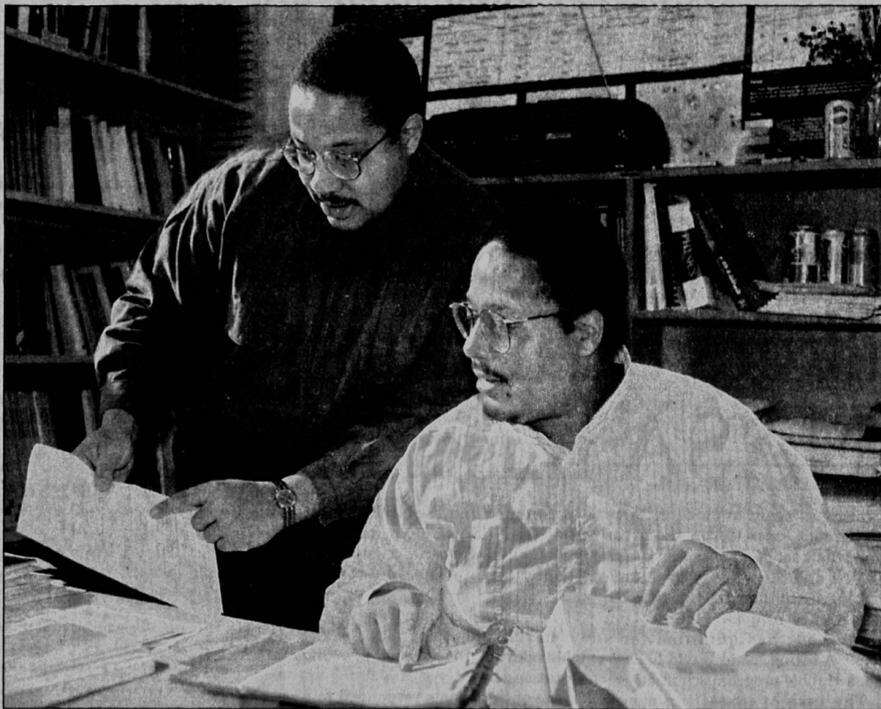

SCORPIO (Oct. 24-Nov. 21)
Your first venture into the world of business is a complete failure. It seems America just isn't ready for the "You Toast 'em, We'll Roast 'em Drive Thru Crematorium."

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22-Dec. 22) You decide it's time for a lifestyle change after Tom Brokaw approaches you for a segment on his special report "Couch-sitting, beer-swilling, TV-watching lethargy — America's new lost generation."

CAPRICORN (Dec. 23-Jan. 19) You will be very embarrassed after your friends and family report you missing when you disappear for a few days before finals. When you finally show up, you have to announce on local news, "I went into the bathroom and fell asleep on the can. What can I say?"

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20-Feb. 18) After watching "It's a Wonderful Life" 50 times this holiday season, you become convinced you're possessed by the ghost of Jimmy Stewart. This hypothesis holds up until you see a Home Cookin' Soup commercial and realize he's not dead.

PISCES (Feb. 19-March 20) You get a significant refund from the Igloo corporation when you find out your cooler was one of those used to transport organs. "I wondered why my cucumbers always tasted like liver," you tell a company representative.

Victor and Vincent Rodgers sit in Vincent's office in Van Allen Hall. The two brothers are identical twins and UI professors, Vincent in physics and astronomy, and Victor in chemical and biochemical engineering. Both men went to the same college and came to the UI 4½ years ago.

Identical twists of fate

Tricia DeWall
The Daily Iowan

They say they came to the UI because of the friendly people, creative atmosphere and the positions they were offered — not because of their relationship.

Vincent Rodgers, a professor in physics and astronomy, and Victor Rodgers, a professor in chemical and biochemical engineering, were both hired by the UI four and a half years ago. The brothers said it had nothing to do with the fact that they are identical twins.

"The atmosphere was creative and the people were friendly," Victor said. "Iowa was the best offer, despite the fact that my brother was also going to be here."

Like many twins, the two have been together most of their lives. However, they claim this was not because they chose to be but because it was convenient.

The physicist and the engineer both obtained their undergraduate membrane separation, both said they didn't let the lack of minorities in high-status positions stand in their way.

Vincent said it was clear to them from the beginning that the "common jobs" were out of their reach unless they worked for something more. He said they had to "stick to their guns" and chose to fulfill their dreams.

"We grew up in a black and white neighborhood. We knew we weren't going to get the typical job that America strives for," Vincent said. "We knew that if you want something you better go out and work for it and be a cut above everyone else."

Victor said a big problem for African-Americans and other minorities today is that they don't perceive themselves in certain positions.

"It's the image black people have. The problem now is they don't perceive themselves in certain areas. When I was going through school I didn't know any black engineers, let alone a black physicist," he said. The images have already begun to change and someday, Vincent predicted, things will be entirely different where minorities are concerned.

"At the beginning of the century, blacks weren't supposed to play basketball because of their genetic structure," Vincent said. "I believe that 100 to 200 years from now some of the problems we look at today will seem childish. Racism then will seem like witch hunts seem now."

In the mean time, Victor said, blacks can only help themselves.

"We need black people moving at the highest level they can," he said. "It is the responsibility of black people to do what they can to help our people recognize their potential."

Victor said it would not bother him if he and his brother existed on opposite sides of the globe. Vincent said being a little further apart might help reduce cases of mistaken identity.

"Victor's angry students always confront me in the streets," Vincent joked. "I need to put a sign on my door that says 'I DO NOT TEACH PHYSICS,' so I can reduce the amount of violence in the area."

Victor said most people have preconceived notions about what it's like to have a twin. The assumption that twins, because they look alike, are alike is not always true.

"I want to write a book about twin perception of nontwins," he said. "I want to study the nontwin aspect of the rest of the world."

Professor Profiles

Victor Rodgers

Position: professor of chemical and biochemical engineering
Years at UI: 4 1/2

According to Victor, a lot of what seems like medicine is really engineering.

Victor specializes in membrane separation which aids in the development and improvement of artificial organs.

"It's engineering even though it seems like medicine," Victor said. "Engineers often don't get credit for what they do."

Vincent Rodgers

Position: professor of physics and astronomy
Years at UI: 4 1/2

In the realm of the ancient subject of physics, Vincent specializes in particle physics (i.e. extracting the mathematics and finding equations to explain the laws of nature).

He said he especially enjoys his position at the UI because he and his colleagues are part of a worldly elite group.

"We like the challenge of building a world renown group out of Iowa," Vincent, the elder of the twins, said. "We already write new theories to explain one thing or another."

"I believe that 100 to 200 years from now some of the problems we look at today will seem childish. Racism then will seem like witch hunts seem now."

Vincent Rodgers, UI professor of physics degrees at the University of Dayton, in Dayton, Ohio. But the twins said they went there only because it was economically feasible. The two went separate ways for several years and finally ended up together as professors at the UI in 1989.

Vincent said many people think he and his brother are the same often because they are both professors. Even so, he said engineering and physics are very different.

"Many people say we do a lot of the same things, but they seem different to us," Vincent said. "I think of myself as different from him even though we are genetically correct."

Moose manure mementos are pop poop

Associated Press

PORTLAND, Maine — There's something new on the market for tourists desperate for a unique memento of their visit to Maine — earrings, tie clasps and key rings decorated with genuine moose manure.

"They are the hottest selling items this season," said Richard Whitney, owner of Maine Line Products. The company introduced the "Moose Drop Jewelry" this season, promoting it as the ultimate in recycling.

The jewelry decorated with pellet-like moose droppings is made by naturalist Christopher Lewey.

Lewey, of Conway, N.H., leads natural history trips and teaches courses in ecology and ornithology, an occupation that has given him more than a passing familiarity with many varieties of animal excrement.

"Being in the business, it's second nature to stop and pick the stuff up," he said.

Lewey lacquers his raw material to make it odor free and durable.

He uses only winter droppings which are 99 percent wood, reflecting the ruminants' seasonal diet of twigs and bark.

Actually, the idea isn't totally unique.

An artist in Boothbay Harbor packaged "Freeze-Dried Sea Gull Poop" in small plastic bags a decade ago. Tourists by the hundreds grabbed it up at $1 per package.

The family of Kathleen Moyle would like to formally thank the Department of Neurology at the V.A. Hospital in Iowa City. The care given to my mother during the last three weeks of her life was remarkable.

A special thank you to the following:
Doctor Randy Hamilton for revealing the true meaning of dedication and compassion. Also for the extra time spent with my family. Your name will remain in my family's memory forever.
Doctor William Tallman for becoming involved in my mother's case. Also for displaying the wisdom to separate emotional attachment from realistic out come, at a time of great vulnerability.

Thank you also to Doctor Rhonda Wright, Doctor Zunkler and Doctor Wooldridge, for all your smiles and words of support.

We would also like to express our appreciation to the nursing staff on Five East. After getting off to a rough start, your ability to build a rapport with my family made a very unpleasant situation workable, almost to the point of rapprochement, and emotional bonding. You are all an asset to your profession.

With great appreciation,

REGISTRATION: 'IT KIND OF SUCKED'

Schedule of Courses, ISIS exhibiting discrepancies

Chris Pothoven
The Daily Iowan

Students beware: The UI Schedule of Courses is not the final word on which classes will be available at what times.

Several students have reported problems with registration for the spring semester. When they register on the UI's ISIS computer system, some have found classes that were listed in the Schedule of Courses have either been canceled or rescheduled in the computer list.

UI senior Tracy Donnelly said she first had troubles when she went to register her sister for classes.

"I entered the number for a Tuesday / Thursday business course, and it turned up as a Monday / Wednesday class," she said.

When Donnelly tried to register herself for spring classes, she discovered the time for one of the English courses she had hoped to take had been changed.

"It kind of sucked, because then I couldn't take it because it didn't fit in my schedule," she said. "It's not a huge deal, because I didn't need the course to graduate, but it was still kind of a pain to have to find a different class."

One of her sister's roommates also encountered schedule changes, Donnelly said.

Jane Omann of the UI Registration Center said such problems arise because the Schedule of Courses goes to print several months before registration.

"We have the course schedule printed so early that it's difficult for departments to get their schedules totally ready by that time," she said.

For the most up-to-date information, students should either check the course listing screen on the ISIS system or consult the individual departments, Omann said.

A number of factors may cause schedule changes, she said. A faculty member may leave a department or have to reschedule a course because of time conflicts.

Students may also be confused when a department lists a course as "pending," Omann said this may happen if a department has not yet secured funding for a class or is still searching for a new or current faculty member to teach a course.

ENGINE RESTORED

Michael Jackson's train fixed in secrecy

Associated Press

MOUNT PLEASANT, Iowa — Stan Mathews can restore steam engines and train cars, no doubt about that.

His project for pop star Michael Jackson shows he can also keep a secret.

Jackson contracted with Shop Services, where Mathews is president, to restore a train purchased from the Six Flags Over Texas amusement park. One part of the deal was that the project was to be done in secrecy.

For weeks, the 10 employees there welded, shaped metal, painted and sandblasted on the high-profile project but didn't tell anybody.

It wasn't until two weeks ago, when the restored engine and tender were on their way to Jackson's ranch in California, that the silence was broken.

"We didn't want a mob scene out here," said Mathews.

Mathews admitted he wasn't a Jackson fan, being more of a Glenn Miller type. "I hadn't even heard any of his songs before this. That's my age showing, I guess," he said.

He said it was his company's reputation that won the work.

Shop Services is an outgrowth of the Midwest Central Railroad, the little railroad that takes tourists on a one-mile ride around the grounds of the Old Threshers Reunion each Labor Day weekend.

Advertised as the only shop in the country that does train restoration full time, Shop Services' clients include Silver Dollar City, Opryland, Dollywood, Disneyland, Disney World and Euro Disney.

Law officials append to hit-and-run case

Tory Brecht
and Lynn M. Tefft
The Daily Iowan

Testimony from several local law enforcement officials Friday filled in more blanks of the state's case against Lawrence Henning.

Henning, 38, of Iowa City, is charged with vehicular homicide and leaving the scene of an accident in the May 20 death of 13-year-old Chris Harding, who was hit while riding his bicycle late at night on Highway 921 south of Iowa City.

Iowa City police Sgt. Richard Wiese said he examined Henning's pickup truck after it was determined to be a suspect vehicle and found damage which correlated to the accident. He also provided an explanation of how the accident may have occurred.

Wiese said Harding was likely struck from behind and thrown onto the hood of the vehicle. Wiese explained how a dent and scuffs on the hood and bumper could have occurred this way.

Dan Vincent, a detective with the Johnson County Sheriff's Department, testified that he checked county and Department of Transportation records to determine Henning's weight, a fact that could be later used to estimate his possible level of intoxication. One record showed a weight of 155 pounds, Vincent said, while another showed 190 pounds.

Vincent also testified that upon examination of Harding's bicycle, he determined that the brakes didn't work at the time of the accident.

In afternoon testimony, Calvin Rayburn, a criminologist for the Iowa Department of Criminal Investigation, testified that Henning's driving may have been impaired if he had consumed three or four 18-ounce glasses of beer, the number a waitress, who served him at the Ground Round Restaurant and Lounge, 830 S. Riverside Drive, said he drank.

Rayburn, who has conducted research on the effect of alcohol on driving for the criminal investigation department, was admitted as an expert witness by presiding Judge William Eads.

"After drinking four beers over three hours, you would see some loss of reaction time and peripheral vision," Rayburn said. "It could still measurably impair driving."

Jerry Jones, an accident reconstructionist for the Iowa State Patrol, said evidence showed that whoever hit Harding did not stop his or her vehicle after impact, and was traveling at least 37 mph, based on estimates of the speed Harding's body was traveling at after impact.

Prosecution attorney Janet Lyness said she will call one more witness to the stand today before resting the state's case.

GOVERNMENT FOOTING BILL

Floods called for fast contractors

Roger Munns
Associated Press

DES MOINES — When the government calls and wants emergency service, Jackie Kemp says nobody should be surprised if the price is a little high.

All of her husband's men and all of his bulldozers were scrambled to round-the-clock action last summer when the Rock Island Corps of Engineers asked for help in shoring up levees.

Regularly scheduled business for Bobbie Kemp & Sons of Letts, Iowa, was put on hold for weeks.

"When the government calls, we go," said Jackie Kemp, the office manager. "You make more money with the government than you do with small farms right now."

While some emergency flood suppliers charged more than normal when dealing with the government, a Des Moines pump supplier and a Des Moines portable toilet company charged the going rate.

One out-of-state company charged such high rates for portable toilets that it attracted attention from the Iowa attorney general's office.

On the other hand, a trucking company in Sully, Iowa, agreed to charge less than normal for hauling water.

An Associated Press survey of flood states determined that government contracting was done in a haphazard manner as officials made emergency purchases.

In Iowa, some were bargains. Some weren't.

Kemp said the government got its money's worth from her company, which was on the corps' "preferred contractor" list and recently won a government commendation for quality performance.

"The levees were breaking and they needed people now. They said 'We want a bid and get over there now.' He did enough work for them, they knew he knew what he was doing," she said.

She said Bobbie Kemp made a bid that was high because it disrupted all his other work. "It was probably high, but they needed it right now. He more or less shut everything down, loaded up the 'dozers and took 'em down there, four or five of them."

"We had to work around the clock, we had maybe 10 workers down there. We were down there I'm saying a month and a half," she said.

But some companies did not raise prices for the government.

"If you stick it to somebody, that will come around," said Dick Miller, owner of Electric Pump and Tool Co., Des Moines, which leased huge pumps, one of them capable of pushing 30,000 gallons a minute. "You don't raise your prices just for this thing."

Arland Vander Leest, co-owner of Sully Transportation of Sully, Iowa, said he had no idea what to charge when the corps called to say it needed trucks for hauling water to Des Moines. The government ended up with a bargain.

"I said, 'This is kind of strange, what are most of the others (trucking companies) charging?' They came up with a number. I said, 'Well, if that's what they're doing, we'll do it also.'"

"That was actually a discount for what we normally operate at. We figured it was an emergency and that was the main concern," he said.

Tony Gramling, manager of the Des Moines branch of Action Services, headquartered in Cedar Rapids, said he rented between 65 and 80 portable toilets to the corps for $65 a month, charging another $10 per cleaning.

Even if the rigs were cleaned every day of the month, the price would be much less than the $600-per-month charged to the corps by Deffenbaugh Industries Inc., of Shawnee, Kan., for 1,500 units brought to Des Moines.

Gramling said he did not inflate prices for his units. "That's what I rent them for right now. I get that no matter what, that's my rate."

"There are a lot of companies out of state that charged a whole lot more. Our feeling was, when the flood's over, I hope people remember who did all the extra work. We're not out there to rip people off," he said.

Gases in silo asphyxiate farmer

Associated Press

BEATRICE, Neb. — A Gage County man who died in a grain silo this fall must have believed he could hold his breath long enough to avoid toxic fumes, his mother said.

Robby Baehr, 25, died on Oct. 15 at the family dairy farm about four miles northeast of Beatrice after he entered a silo and was overcome by toxic gases.

Asphyxiation in grain bins or silos has claimed the lives of four Nebraskans so far this year, said Dave Morgan, a University of Nebraska-Lincoln farm safety engineer.

Summer rains could cause an increase in silo gas because many farmers had to harvest and store their grain wet, said Joleen Ten-Hulzen Hueke, a spokeswoman with the Farm Safety Program at the state health department.

Enclosed grain bins can accumulate carbon dioxide and nitrogen dioxide, which reduces the amount of oxygen. The gas can asphyxiate someone in the bin within 30 seconds.

Israeli border policemen aim at Palestinian stone throwers in the Shuafat refugee camp in Jerusalem Sunday.

Palestinian gunman kills 1 in bus attack

Dan Perry
Associated Press

HOLON, Israel — A Palestinian boarded a bus and opened fire with an assault rifle Sunday, killing a reservist before being gunned down by troops. It was the first major attack inside Israel since it signed a peace pact with the PLO.

Senior ministers warned Israelis to brace for a possible frenzy of attacks by opponents of the accord as the Dec. 13 deadline approaches for Israel to start transferring power to the PLO in parts of the occupied territories.

"In the interim period, the opponents to peace on both sides are flexing their muscles and won't stop at anything, they will use any means to frustrate the process," Health Minister Haim Ramon said Sunday.

A radical Palestinian group opposed to the accord, Islamic Jihad, took responsibility for Sunday's attack in a leaflet issued in the Gaza Strip.

In the occupied West Bank town of Hebron, Israeli settler leaders warned at a news conference Sunday that their attacks on Arabs would continue unless the peace process stops. Palestinian activists also threatened to step up violence in a protest at the home of an Arab victim.

In Egypt, meanwhile, Israel and the PLO resumed talks on Palestinian autonomy but made no progress on their major sticking point: security arrangements after Israel withdraws from the Gaza Strip and the West Bank city of Jericho, top PLO negotiator Nabil Shaath said.

Also Sunday, U.S. Secretary of State Warren Christopher toured the Middle East to push forward the peace process and was to meet in Amman today with PLO chairman Yasser Arafat and Jordanian officials.

Sunday's bus attack was the most menacing assault inside Israel since it signed the accord with the Palestine Liberation Organization on Sept. 13. It was likely to engender hostility in a public already skeptical about the peace process.

The Palestinian gunman jumped from a stolen car and tried to hijack the bus as it idled at a bus stop in the Tel Aviv suburb, police said. The gunman began firing into the bus, which carried about two dozen passengers.

A 32-year-old reserve soldier was fatally shot by the gunman, Israel's national news agency Itim reported.

The reservist was apparently sitting behind the driver, and radio reports said another soldier was lightly wounded in the head.

Prime Minister Yitzhak Rabin praised the soldiers who "eliminated this murderer" and vowed to fight terror while continuing peace negotiations.

ABORTION

Beyond legal means

The Cedar Rapids Clinic for Women, the only clinic with abortion services in the city, recently closed when its lease was not renewed. Referrals to out-of-town clinics are being made from a temporary office until a new location can be found for the clinic. The landlord of the temporary office has been scared away from letting the clinic operate in his building. He was fiercely lobbied by a roving band of anti-abortion Christians led by the Rev. Larry Johnson.

Johnson and his group are taking credit for hindering the relocation of the clinic. After the clinic lost its original lease — ostensibly so the landlord could expand his business — Johnson held minor demonstrations outside the temporary location to maintain pressure. A nasty analogy comes to mind:

Moral indignation is cause for protest, but it cannot justify the obstruction of legal services.

The Rev. Johnson forcibly closing clinics with all the arrogant disregard of those within shown by a woman frivolously aborting a helpless life.

The difference is that abortion is an inarguably legal, if unpleasant, choice, while interference with the operation of a medical service, elective or otherwise, is not. Even though Johnson has a constitutional prerogative to protest the legality of abortion, he does not have the authority to keep a clinic closed by means of intimidation. Hideous as abortion may be, it is a voluntary procedure. Until no one elects to have an abortion, they must be available. Moral indignation is cause for protest, but it cannot justify the obstruction of legal services.

Consider the fate of a liquor store owner whose wares have had a measurably deleterious effect on his community. Protest by concerned neighbors is valid and necessary to confront the problem; but as long as members of the community are customers of the store, the owner will sell them booze. If the store's opponents burn it down, kill the owner or physically prevent people from entering, they have exceeded their right to demonstrate. Only through reducing the demand for liquor will the protesters soundly defeat alcoholism in their community.

Larry Johnson has done nothing to reduce the demand for abortions in Cedar Rapids. He has only succeeded in making life more difficult for women who have already decided to get abortions. Johnson has compared the Clinic for Women to "a Nazi gas chamber killing people," an absurd, unconscionably offensive analogy that likens a pregnant woman in Iowa to a pitiless military maniac taking his pleasure in torture and death. His statement is ignorant in its imagery and evil in its intent.

It is not wrong in the least to oppose abortion. It is not wrong to demonstrate against it. But it is criminally wrong to prevent people from exercising their right to legal choice. The truly moral among us respect law and individual choice above all else. Larry Johnson needs to be reminded of that. He should also try to remember that it was the Nazis who raised restrictions on personal freedom to the level of national ideology. And they did it in the name of an angry God, too.

LETTERS

Suggestions for speaking out against racism

To the Editor:

Lisa Pride's courage in sharing the anonymous hate letter that she received from the coward hiding behind a white sheet of paper points out once again how important personal actions are in the battle that never seems to end. Here are just four concrete suggestions of how we can all try to demonstrate just one-tenth of Ms. Pride's courage.

1) Let's start calling people on their behavior: Let's renew our resolve never to let a racist comment or joke go unchallenged — no matter how much we risk destroying "the atmosphere" in a classroom, party or bar. Simply say: "I find your comment racist and personally offensive and am asking you to stop right now or I will leave." Then do it!

2) Let's be willing to go public in the community and in the workplace with the struggle. Speak out against racism and for diversity and democracy in staff meetings, in our organizations, labor unions or clubs, and in community forums. Put ourselves on the line as spokespersons for social justice. Demand real affirmative action and inclusion in all groups we belong to.

3) Let's get into the political life of the community. Attend our precinct caucus next February 7; raise the issue in political party platforms and with candidates for political office. Consider running for precinct chair or co-chair, which will make us members of our party's Central Committee and a more integral part of Iowa City's political life. Get involved in the campaigns for city and county offices. Even the progressive wing in our county desperately needs more diverse voices and candidates.

4) Let us show support personally and through institutions for people who are targets of hate and hate groups. They can too easily end up feeling isolated and victimized.

Our campus and our community are under a sustained and vicious attack by the monster of bigotry. Lisa Pride is its most recent target — but not its victim! Let's try to make her its last.

KIM PAINTER

I am Middle — hear me roar

The UI Lecture Committee invited two visitors of national stature to campus on Wednesday, Dec. 1. They came to address local free speech issues. That's the good news. The bad news is, aside from the opening comments and brief responses of Fred Barnes

(The New Republic) and Juan Williams (The Washington Post) to skimpy outlines of local events, little provocative discussion occurred.

Let me be more to the point: The much touted question-and-answer session was dominated by self-serving setup questions thrown at the guests by those on the far right and the far left. I am middle, hear me roar, and I was sorry to see the evening take such a turn. It is no wonder most of you stayed home. Low attendance underscored a trend that has diminished much public discourse in this community and across the nation: It has grown so childish that many well-intentioned, temperate people avoid it.

Throughout the Q&A, both extremes tantalized the guests with bits of biased information in hopes that a response would be woven around one, thereby scoring points for one side. The transparency of both sides in seeking a rah-rah-rah from either of these national media names resulted in a pathetic spectacle that made both groups look like sniveling children.

It was galling to hear Keith Chiavetta of the Young Americans for Freedom and the Christian Coalition say to Barnes, with no explanation of his setup, "University administration is considering the institution of mandatory sensitivity training sessions. What do you think of that?" Adding to the irony of the setup was the fact that Chiavetta serves on the Lecture Committee.

"I don't know," Barnes wisely responded. "I have no idea what such sessions might entail."

Tell it like it is, Keith: The administration is struggling to find a way to mandate decent behavior toward diverse peoples. They hope to put the kabosh on hurtful incidents based on race, gender, sexual orientation, religious creed or physical status relative to those of us on campus fortunate enough to be walking on two legs without the use of technical assistance. There may be an added hope. If you find such

Throughout the Q&A, both extremes tantalized the guests with bits of biased information in hopes that a response would be woven around one, thereby scoring points for one side. endeavors misguided, say so. Grow up. You will find yourself in much better company if and when you do.

It was no more appealing to be treated moments later to a lengthy tirade that, among other things, called into question the United States government's motives and methods of controlling information during the Persian Gulf War. I believe this public service came to us courtesy of the Iowa International Socialist Organization. The evening was meant to showcase audience concerns and panel responses to the sexually explicit materials policy, and to examine what the obligations of newspapers might be with regard to their opinion pages. Much fascinating coverage exists of the Persian Gulf War and the government's relationship to media during wartime. The lecture hall was not the place for a leftist recap.

Organized socialism is about as palatable to me as organized religion, and for much the same reason: Once a person has been infused with missionary zeal, you cannot get him to listen. There is no way to engage in meaningful discussion with him because he is convinced that each dawning day brings nothing to lose and everything to gain. People are more complex than such zealotry has this means to acknowledge. Civilized, set in our ways, disliking trouble, we nonetheless wait to be convinced of the most decent and productive stance to take on the important moral issues of the day. Don't talk to us like we are a bunch of peasants waiting to rise up and take back the economy. It serves us pretty well. We all want to find ways to help it serve more of us better.

I do not intend to imply that there is anything inherently evil about either socialism or Christianity. We should be free to study, practice, promote and criticize either. It is simply a fact that unveiled zealotry in either camp produces trouble of an especially irritating and substandard variety.

Provocative thought ennobles individuals and serves the entire spectrum of a free society. In our newspapers, we want it as well-reasoned and factually solid as possible. Even when it isn't, most find provocation more palatable than doctrine, which nauseates no matter who is serving it up. This logic is apparently beyond the grasp of the missionaries of the hard right and left. Now that they have it in writing, we can only hope it will do some good when the next public discussion including a Q&A segment comes along.

As for the evening with Williams and Barnes, once polarized groups got into the act it dipped to dismal levels. Those of us who people the vast expanse of the middle were left wishing we'd stayed home.

Kim Painter is a flaming liberal one week and a hard moderate curmudgeon the next. This averages out somewhere in the middle. Deal with it Mondays on the Viewpoints Pages.

Symbols offer victims no compassion

It is a general rule of column writing that you don't respond directly to criticism from the public. Rather, we allow the public to have the last word in the letters section. The times I have stepped on the toes of this community's overwhelmingly leftist ideology, the space devoted to those who disagree with my viewpoint has outweighed my column's space by a factor of as much as 10.

The letter writers have not been alone in their criticism of some of my columns. Inside The Daily Iowan, the criticism by our writing coach, who critiques the paper every day, has been particularly harsh. In two pages devoted to my AIDS column's journalistic flaws, she called it, "poorly reasoned and poorly written." She also criticized my editors for even printing it. Another person at The Daily Iowan said, "I felt it belonged in the Campus Review." I also spent almost an hour with a colleague of mine discussing whether I had done my position more harm than good. It's one thing to be called a "Nazi" or a "fascist" by someone that I neither know nor care about; it is quite another to be so harshly critiqued by people I consider friends.

The people who have written letters this time have been different than the usual suspects who deliberately twist and misrepresent my words every week. I think these writers are more likely the "real" people of the UI and Iowa City. When people like these write in, you have to stop and consider their words. When readers miss the point I was trying to make, the only person I have to blame is myself.

The central theme of much of the criticism aimed at me in the last week has been that I am utterly devoid of compassion. I think that the problem is that my definition of compassion and that of this community are quite different.

In Iowa City, you can be compassionate by voting to take other people's money and give it to those who politicians feel have more need. No sacrifice on your part is necessary. You can also be compassionate by wearing an "awareness" ribbon for whatever cause: AIDS, breast cancer or some such. Again, no sacrifice is needed. You can even get the ribbons for free.

It's appalling that this community allows voting and ribbon-wearing to substitute for real

There are so many people in Iowa City who give of their time, their money and the sweat of their collective brow. Yet, hiding among them, never sacrificing anything, are those who wield their cheap and public compassion like a sword to intimidate their political foes and further their political goals.

compassion which involves action, effort and sacrifice. There are so many people in Iowa City who give of their time, their money and the sweat of their collective brow. Yet, hiding among them, never sacrificing anything, are those who wield their cheap and public compassion like a sword to intimidate their political foes and further their political goals.

Compassion is something that you must do for yourself. You must sacrifice your money and your time. No one else can do it for you and you can't vote to have the government do it for you.

Many of the doctors and researchers have despaired of ever finding a cure for AIDS. AIDS may not have a cure at our current level of technology. What is more compassionate — telling people the cold hard facts and focusing on the areas of greatest transmission, or sugar-coating the reality of AIDS in order to make the afflicted feel better and the populace more likely to feel sorry for its victims? Shall we hold people responsible for their actions or cry for them and blame Reagan? I know the choice that I think will do the most good and save the most lives.

HBO has made the opposite choice. HBO recently made the great historical novel "And the Band Played On" into a movie. They deliberately left out, or altered, many of the scenes from the book which might have caused a lower willingness to pay for the AIDS epidemic among the viewers. For instance, the director wildly changed the bathhouse scene from the book, where men were depicted as lying naked with open cans of Crisco next to them, waiting for anonymous partners to happen along.

Maybe the essential problem in our society that this whole sensitivity debate has brought to the fore is that many believe that symbolic acts are as important as real action. This wrong-headed notion infects every level of our society, including the response to my column on AIDS last week. I was watching C-SPAN yesterday when the chief political correspondent for Newsweek said of the Brady bill, "Of course it won't work, it's symbolic, but it's an important symbol in our struggle against crime." I suppose he sees no irony in the fact that seven years, innumerable votes and debates, as well as millions of dollars have been spent in a battle over something that will do nothing.

There is no compassion for crime victims' symbols. No compassion is found in sugar-coating AIDS. When I watched the first gay man I knew die of lung cancer, stripped from a robust handsome man to a 75-pound living corpse, the only compassionate thing I could do was sit someone from making the stupid choices my friend had made.

Piercing analysis: Not keeping up with the fashions

Although I'm not certain what the "mainstream" is, I've always thought I was part of it. Family, home, mortgage, job, dog, beer, pizza, Cub games, button-down shirts, stained ties, minivan, Pings and a nerdy watch.

But now I have serious doubts. Whatever the "mainstream" is, I appear to be outside of it.

I realized this the other day when I read a news story in The New York Times.

The headline said: "Body Piercing Moves Into the Mainstream." And the story began: "It is easy to pinpoint the moment when body piercing went mainstream. Christy Turlington came out at a London fashion show, her midriff bared between two slices of creamy knit. And there in the middle of her navel was a ring."

The next day, Naomi Campbell was tugging at the waistband of her Vivienne Westwood micro-mini kilt to show the world that anything Christy could do, so could she. A gold ring set with a small pearl pierced her navel."

One pierced person said she was inspired to have her navel pierced after seeing the "beautiful decoration" in the nipples of the actor Jaye Davidson, who appeared in "The Crying Game." (I didn't see that movie, and that's good because I'm impressionable and easily inspired.)

The story went on to say that body piercing has become the rage. And not just navels, either. Nostrils and all sorts of places, public and private, if anything is private these days.

The story quoted a Los Angeles body piercer as saying that she has been kept very busy piercing eyebrows, nipples and even her own tongue.

One pierced person said she was inspired to have her navel pierced after seeing the "beautiful decoration" in the nipples of the actor Jaye Davidson, who appeared in "The Crying Game." (I didn't see that movie, and that's good because I'm impressionable and easily inspired.)

The story offers some sociological analysis as to why so many people are dangling jewelry from their noses, navels, nipples and other body parts.

"With the fragmenting of the former communist empire, the not-so-gorgeous mosaic of New York and demands for secession from Ukraine to Staten Island, maybe it is not surprising that fashion should reflect tribalism."

I suppose that makes sense. The Soviet Union collapses, and the natural reaction is to go out and get your nose pierced. Or one day you notice that New York is crowded and messy, so you instinctively start wearing gold rings in your nipple. After all, you have to do something to show you care.

The story also gives some history of this sort of thing.

"The idea of decorating the body is ancient history. Nose rings were worn in India, throughout the Middle East, and by tribal groups like the Berbers as a sign of wealth and status for marriageable women. The more metal weighing down the nose (some nose rings had to be attached to an ear piece), the bigger the bridal dowry."

Those were the good old days. And now they're returning. We live in exciting times.

After I read about this new mainstream trend, I went to lunch. As I strolled through downtown Chicago, I looked closely at other pedestrians, but I didn't spot even one nose ring.

And I was embarrassed for myself and my fellow Chicagoans. Why are we always so far behind? We're only 800 miles from New York, an hour or so by plane.

Yet, The New York Times story said: "In the downtown street scenes, both sexes display rings through the nostrils and multiple earrings..."

But here in the third-largest city in the United States, I didn't see even one ring through a nose, or even bells on their toes. As it was a cold day, I can't speak for nipple rings, but I didn't see anyone who looked the type.

When I got to my lunch place, I took a stool at the bar and said to a couple of acquaintances, "With the secession of Ukraine and other former Soviet states, have you felt a surge of tribalism that might lead you to having your nose or nipples pierced and wearing gold chains?"

They stared at me, then got up and moved to the end of the bar. Some people are indifferent to global affairs. Little wonder they are out of the mainstream, the hicks.

But on my way back from lunch, I had a flashback. And the memory made me again proud to be a Chicagoan.

I had remembered a story I wrote at least 12 years ago. And that story proves that Chicago was many years ahead of New York at being in the mainstream. And I exclusively reported it.

It was about a young man named Adolfo, who was the leader of a Northwest Side street gang. A tribal group, of sorts.

One night, Adolfo forced his erotic attentions on a young woman. She had him arrested, and they went to court.

Adolfo denied everything, but the woman said she could prove it. She said a rather private part of Adolfo's body had been pierced, and that was where he wore a gold ring.

It was not the sort of thing a woman would forget.

The judge asked Adolfo to lower his trousers. He did, and there was the evidence, gold ring and all.

Of course, the judge didn't realize that Adolfo had leaped into the mainstream. He thought he was just a creep and sent him to prison. It just shows that a person can be too far ahead of the times. Had it happened today, Adolfo could have said, "The secession of Ukraine made me do it."

'Free speech' used for oppression

To the Editor:

CAF's "Canned" Film Festival" and panel discussion showed me that the right's long attack on political correctness, diversity and multiculturalism has been successful so far. "Paris is Burning" contained no sex scenes, explicit or otherwise, and few words that could not be used in front of a sixth-grader. But the debate has shifted so far right that this mild movie is now deemed offensive. How very far down the wrong road we've come!

When the attack on political correctness began two years ago, only the IISO and a few other leftists opposed it openly and unapologetically as a right-wing campaign against diversity. Liberals almost universally caved in to the right, climbing over each other to proclaim themselves "politically incorrect."

There was a political correctness to the left. Political correctness was originally a tolerant, self-deprecating inside joke among leftists; to call oneself or someone else politically correct was gently poke fun at that person's high moral seriousness over details of his or her personal life or consumption habits, such as whether he or she used Styrofoam packaging.

But the right perverted this joke into its exact opposite, claiming that we wished to force our ideas down the throats of intimidated and helpless college students, silencing all debate. Then the right began to spread its own racism, sexism and homophobia in the name of free speech. That was when the IISO decided to take the joke more seriously, saying that if it was politically correct to oppose these oppressions, we were "politically correct, and proud of it." In this way, we sparked the very debate the right said we were trying to stifle.

Right-wingers at the UI have since lost every debate they didn't run away from, so they have instead used the UISA budget process, the Union display cases, DI columns, and the Board of Regents and Liberal Arts College policies to step up the attack on the rights of blacks, women, gays and les-BIANS, international students, and socialists like former DI columnist Jeff Klinzman. Contrary to all the right's claims of being victimized and silenced by "PC Thought Police," they have done the victimizing and silencing in every case we have seen at the UI. Their attacks have been sanctioned by those "even-handed" liberals who blind themselves to the real-world context and consequences of their views and call the blindness objectivity.

But there are many different people at the UI who don't like the current atmosphere of bigotry and intimidation. Those of us who support diversity should unite on the basis of that support, remaining free to discuss and disagree about other issues. We can turn back this tide of intolerance, but we have to work together.

Intolerance growing

To the Editor:

We are writing to take a stand against an increasing trend of intolerance on campus which takes the forms of homophobia, racism and sexism. One of our friends was recently "indicted" as a lesbian TA in a "lesbians on campus" list in a public space. The message inferred by this and adjacent graffiti was that these people are threatening to women. This and other such incidents create a hostile environment. This public "outing" threatens her professional standing in her classes and unjustly forces her into a defensive position.

This incident is not unrelated to the sexually explicit materials policy, the Britt cartoon, the DI's sensationalist coverage of sexual assault and editorial articles trivializing violence against women.

We feel that these incidents are fostered by the general inaction of the administration when the rights of minorities are attacked. We encourage the administration to take a stand against demonstrations of intolerance. It is important that they support their own mission to develop diversity and actively create a nonhostile atmosphere on campus.

NUCLEAR TACTICS CHANGE

Report: U.S. may cease aiming missiles at Russia

Associated Press

NEW YORK — U.S. and Russian military officials are discussing a proposal to end the Cold War practice of aiming nuclear warheads at each other's territory, The New York Times reported.

"If somehow a missile is launched accidentally ... our main worry would be maybe hitting a bunch of whales."

An unidentified American general

The change would be largely symbolic, but some Pentagon officials believe it would also reduce the chance of an accidental nuclear war, the Times reported in today's editions.

Under a draft Pentagon plan, American missiles would be aimed at coordinates in the ocean instead of at Russian missile silos and military bases, according to the report.

Officials from both countries have discussed the idea recently, and the Pentagon is waiting for a detailed plan from the Russian side on how that country would remain its missiles, the Times said.

"If somehow a missile is launched accidentally, the idea is that it would come down in the Arctic or North Atlantic, and our main worry would be maybe hitting a bunch of whales," said an American general the newspaper did not identify.

Nuclear missiles have both primary and reserve targets. While the primary targets would be shifted to the ocean under the plan, the reserve targets would remain Russian military sites. Switching the target back to a Russian site would take 15 minutes or less, the Times quoted an unidentified American official as saying.

One expert said the proposal doesn't go far enough to remove the risk of nuclear war.

Bruce Blair of the Brookings Institution said both countries should reduce their reliance on rapid launch by, for example, removing all warheads from missiles and storing them or de-targeting all missiles.

Body of girl abducted from sleep over found

Michelle Locke
Associated Press

PETALUMA, Calif. — A lone candle that burned in a window at Polly Klaas' home was gone Sunday and the shades were drawn. Two months after her abduction at knifepoint from a slumber party, her body was found in a roadside thicket.

Sometime during the night, people started lighting candles in front of the headquarters for the search for the missing 12-year-old. By morning more than three dozen flickered in a chill wind, surrounded by flowers and plants

"There are a lot of broken hearts here," said Gary Judd, one of the people who helped organize the widespread volunteer search effort for Polly.

A Polly Klaas Foundation had helped spread word of the girl's disappearance nationwide. Actress Winona Ryder, a native of Petaluma, offered a $200,000 reward.

On Sunday, a team of FBI agents combed the area 30 miles north of town where Polly's body was found late Saturday. They looked for clues to how she was killed, who did it and whether she was still alive when a suspect was briefly confronted by deputies about an hour after her abduction.

A palm print found in Polly's room that matched prime suspect Richard Allen Davis apparently persuaded him to help authorities locate the body, FBI agent Rick Smith said. He would not provide any other details.

Davis, 39, was held without bail in the Sonoma County Jail after being booked Sunday for investigation of kidnapping and murder. Authorities said they will pursue formal charges early this week.

"You're pregnant."

Those words were hard to hear. The decision was harder to make.

After I struggled with what to do, I realized that I just couldn't face a pregnancy at that point in my life. I decided to have an abortion, but I didn't know where to go or who to turn to. Then a friend recommended that I call Planned Parenthood.

No one at Planned Parenthood was judgmental. They left the decision up to me and they assured me that my visit would be completely confidential. I appreciated that.

From the start, they were kind, sensitive, and professional. They explained everything in detail and answered all my questions. They really seemed to care about me.

I'm thankful that Planned Parenthood was there for me. I hope none of my friends ever have to face such a hard decision. But if they do, I know Planned Parenthood will be there for them, too.

the telescope early today.

Lead flight director Milt Heflin said spacewalker Kathryn Thornton would hold the panel up high over the cargo bay and conduct "a gentle jettison procedure."

"She's just going to let go of it," Heflin said. "It's going to stay right there. There will be no pushing."

Shuttle commander Richard Covey planned to fire a small burst from the ship's smallest jets to move the ship away from the panel, leaving it one of 6,700 pieces of space junk tracked by the North American Aerospace Command.

It was expected to slowly drop into the atmosphere and burn up, a process that might take a year.

Each day's activities begin just when television's prime time is over, unfortunate timing for NASA because the action beamed from 360 miles above Earth in space is dramatic.

The first of the mission's five spacewalks, the second longest by American astronauts, lasted seven hours, 54 minutes beginning late Saturday. Musgrave and Hoffman successfully completed their assigned tasks but not without some difficulties.

With practiced ease, they replaced two of three pairs of gyroscopes, two of three electrical units to guide those gyros and exchanged eight main fuses.

But when they tried to close a 7-foot-high access door, its four latches would not meet. The door, one of a set of double doors, must close tightly to protect sensitive star trackers from unwanted light.

It took two hours of pulling and tugging by Musgrave and Hoffman before the doors would close.

Ken Ledbetter, the telescope's program manager, said the misalignment was caused because the light metal doors were warmed by different amounts of sunlight when they were open and expanded at different rates. The astronauts were told to close them for one orbit and the latches' position matched again.

On Tuesday, the astronauts are to install the new planetary camera, on Wednesday corrective optics for other instruments on the telescope will be installed and on Thursday more electronics will be replaced.

The solar arrays are gold-colored, flexible plastic blankets — wings that extend from each side of the telescope. They convert energy from the sun into electricity to power the telescope's instruments.

In 1990, shortly after NASA discovered that the telescope's main mirror had the wrong shape to focus accurately, the panels developed a slight shaking each time they crossed from sunlight to darkness and vice versa — a sudden temperature change of 200 degrees 32 times a day.

The frames around the arrays did not accommodate the expansion and contraction caused by the cooling and heating cycles. Engineers blamed that failure for a kink in a supporting stem that caused the array to twist and bend, making it impossible to be rolled up.

Engineers developed computer software to counteract the jitter but that solution absorbed too much computer memory.

The new arrays, built — like the old ones — by the European Space Agency, work with springs that should not be subjected to the same contraction and expansion, experts said.

Senate President Jerald Schnoor that may have met with the entire board's approval and replace the regent imposed policy. However, the compromise, which would have been an amendment to the UI Operations Manual, was shot down in debate at the Nov. 16 Faculty Senate meeting.

The Senate voted to excise a phrase from the proposal that required instructors to warn students about materials that might cause a strong emotional response. Berenstein has since stated that without that phrase, he would not support the Senate's proposal.

The regents will vote on the Senate's proposal at their next meeting on Dec. 15.

RHODES SCHOLAR

Husain did not feel very confident after his 20-minute interview, which began at 8:30 a.m. There were a number of tough questions, he said, including ones about the U.S. policy in Bosnia and President Clinton's meeting with Salmon Rushdie.

"It wasn't very smooth, and I didn't feel very comfortable about it," he said. "Afterward, I was feeling kind of bad about it. I went back to the hotel and basically said, 'Well, this is done. Now, I'll just go enjoy Minneapolis.'"

Before returning to await the committee's decision, Husain went out and ate a large meal.

"I wouldn't have eaten so much if I thought I had a chance at winning a scholarship," he said. "I was kind of sleepy and lethargic in the afternoon."

While the other candidates were very tense, Husain said he was pretty calm until they announced the four winners.

"My first thought was 'Oh, no, I got it!'" he said. "It was kind of a dread. I thought, 'Can I handle this? Did they mean to call me?' Obviously, my interview wasn't nearly as bad as I thought."

Sandy Barkan, executive director of the UI Honors Program, said she and other UI faculty and administrators who have worked with Husain are very pleased.

"Ali truly represents the best of the University of Iowa," said Barkan, who works closely with UI students applying for the scholarship. "He's taken full advantage of the opportunities that the university provides outstanding students."

Husain was born in Hyderabad, India, but his family immigrated to the United States in 1976. Besides serving as co-president of Phi Beta Kappa and treasurer of Omicron Delta Kappa Leadership Honor Society, Husain is also a member of Alpha Phi Omega coed service fraternity, the Microbiology Undergraduate Students Association and the Muslim Student Association. He has also volunteered at the UI Hospitals and Clinics.

Husain has been working as an undergraduate scholar assistant with UI microbiology Professor Caroline Harwood since his freshman year at the UI.

"I'm very proud of Ali. He really deserves it," Harwood said. "He's an exceptional human being. He'll have a great time in England, and I'm sure he'll get a lot out of it."

Wrestlers take third

Lincoln McClravy was the lone Hawkeye champion at the Las Vegas Tournament Friday and Saturday in Las Vegas, Nev.

The Hawkeyes finished third in the meet with 90 points. Oklahoma State won with 131.5 points, followed by Oregon State with 96.75.

No. 1-seeded McClravy beat Michigan's Brian Harper 11-3 to take the 150-pound title.

Other Hawkeyes placing included Mike Mena, who placed fourth at 118 pounds; Daryl Weber, sixth at 158; Matt Norem, fifth at 167; Ray Brinzer, sixth at 177; Joel Sharratt, third at 190; and Greg Stiltner, fifth at heavy-weight.

Four wrestlers won championships at the Northern Open Saturday in Cedar Falls.

Sophomore Curt Heideman was second in the heavyweight division and junior Aaron Aure placed fourth at 142 pounds.

1994 Hawkeye Invite field announced

Illinois State, Pepperdine and Cal-Irvine will join the Iowa basketball program in the field of the 1994 Hawkeye Invitational.

Illinois State is attempting to become the first team since Louisville (1967-69) to win three straight Missouri Valley Conference regular season championships. The Redbirds have made three NCAA and two NIT appearances over the last 10 years.

Pepperdine won the 1993 West Coast Conference regular season title, compiling a 23-8 overall record and 11-3 conference mark.

California-Irvine and Iowa played during the 1986-87 and 1987-88 seasons, and will square off at Irvine Dec. 29.

COLLEGE

Iowa State may join new conference

HOUSTON (AP) — Athletic directors from several Southwest Conference and Big Eight schools are discussing a new conference with membership conditions that could exclude up to four SWC schools, the Houston Chronicle reported Sunday.

According to unidentified sources, the new league would include: the Western Athletic Conference's Brigham Young University; the Big Eight's Colorado, Iowa State, Kansas, Kansas State, Missouri, Nebraska, Oklahoma and Oklahoma State; and the SWC's Baylor, Texas, Texas A&M, Texas Tech, Rice, University of Houston, Southern Methodist and Texas Christian.

But the Chronicle reported that guidelines for the new league may be so expensive that four SWC schools — Houston, Rice, SMU and TCU — could be priced out of the competition.

Members of this new league would be given several years to meet the requirements.

Badger fans go crazy

MADISON, Wis. (AP) — Two squad cars were damaged after thousands of Wisconsin football fans surged into Madison streets in a wild celebration of their team's Rose Bowl-clinching victory in Tokyo.

Screaming fans poured out of bars, restaurants and dormitories onto nearby State Street for a raucous demonstration early Sunday that included hugs, high-fives, the repeated singing of "On, Wisconsin," the school's fight song, and shouts of "Rose Bowl, Rose Bowl."

The number of citations issued by Madison and UW police was not available Sunday.

The 41-20 Wisconsin victory over Michigan State earned the Badgers their first invitation to a Rose Bowl since the 1962 team.

6-5 guard Bartels makes 3-pointer a deadly weapon

Mike Egenes
The Daily Iowan

Since its introduction into college basketball in 1987, the 3-point shot has been a deadly weapon.

So far this season, Iowa guard Jim Bartels has become the Hawkeyes' main marksman from beyond 19 feet, 9 inches.

The 6-foot-5 guard has knocked down 12 3-pointers on 21 attempts over Iowa's first three games this season and scored a career-best 20 points against Lehigh Friday night in the first game of the Hawkeye Invitational.

He didn't take long to get warmed up in Saturday night's championship game against Long Beach State. Just 16 seconds into the game, Bartels lined himself behind the 3-point arc on the right wing and buried the game's first shot, which fueled the Hawkeyes to an early 10-0 lead over the 49ers.

"After I made the first shot I was pumped up right then. I just felt like any time I had the ball I could put it in," said Bartels, who was one of three Hawkeyes to earn all-tournament honors after the Hawkeyes' 101-79 win, which gave Iowa its 11th championship in 12 years of hosting the Invitational.

While Bartels' 3-point shooting has been an important part of the Iowa offense, which has averaged 98.3 points in its first three games, Iowa coach Tom Davis thinks Bartels' skills have been an important part Iowa's smothering defensive pressure.

"He's been a real good shooter his whole career. But the thing that's helped us the most is his defensive ability. That's where he helped us the most last year and now he's still doing those things, but adding in the 3-point shooting," Davis said.

"He's rebounding and if he's not our best defensive player, he's certainly one of our best defenders. He's really a well-rounded player, who happens to be shooting the ball well."

As much success as he's had in shooting from 3-point territory, Bartels doesn't want to take all the credit.

"I think it's really due to the point guards — Mon'ter (Glasper) and Kevin (Skillett) — you have to give them a lot of credit," he said. "I feel like all I have to do is get the rebound, give it to them and run down the court and if I'm open

Hawkeye women survive slow start

Defense, free throws lift Iowa in 67-55 win over Lady Bears

Joel Donofrio
The Daily Iowan

Despite another slow start and 28 turnovers, the Iowa women's basketball team stepped up its defense and converted 29 of 37 free throws in the second half to defeat Southwest Missouri State 67-55 Sunday afternoon in Carver-Hawkeye Arena.

Hawkeye seniors Necole Tunsil and Tia Jackson led their team's comeback, scoring 23 points each to lead all scorers. Virgie Dillingham's 13 rebounds helped No. 2 Iowa rebound SMSU 42-24.

The victory over the No. 20 Lady Bears helped Iowa avenge its 61-60 overtime loss to them in the 1992 NCAA tournament. However, Tunsil and Hawkeye coach C. Vivian Stringer said their team wasn't necessarily looking for "revenge." "I really don't think that the team approached it as a revenge game," Tunsil said. "We took that loss two years ago as a learning experience, and we knew what it felt like (to lose)... We just hate to lose, and when we lost that game, we just made up in our minds that if we ever play them again, it would be different."

Stringer believed that the emotional tension of the rematch may have led to the slow start by the Hawkeyes.

"I think both teams were jumpy. I think it was due to the tenseness of the situation," Stringer said. "I wasn't going to pretend; as I was telling the team, it meant a great deal to me. That's one of the few games that I felt a lot of hurt about last year (1992)."

"We just weren't going to take anything other than a win here in Carver-Hawkeye Arena. It did feel good, and I think that maybe we all wanted it a little bit too much because we had nice shot, easy shots that were a little forced (in the beginning)," she added.

The No. 20 Lady Bears (1-1) never trailed in the first half, as point guard Tina Robbins shot 4-for-4 from behind the 3-point arc. Pre-season all-American Melody Howard's lone 3-pointer of the first half gave the Lady Bears a 28-17 lead, their biggest of the game.

"They were leaving me open, that's the only thing there was," Robbins said. "We don't particularly practice shooting the three, but it was open so I took it."

From that point, the Hawkeyes (3-0) closed out the first half with a 12-2 run to cut the Lady Bears' halftime lead to 30-29. Iowa's run began when Tunsil spotted Jackson on a back door cut to the basket, which the 6-foot-0 shooting guard turned into a 3-point play after she was fouled on the layup.

In addition, Dillingham's continuous effort on the offensive boards kept SMSU from getting many scoring opportunities late in the half.

"Everybody knows their roles on this team," Dillingham said. "My major role is rebounding, and I try to address that in each game I go into."

Iowa's momentum carried over through the intermission, as SMSU could not score until three and a half minutes were gone in the sec-

Hawks break free-throw record in 101-79 win

Roxanna Pellin
The Daily Iowan

Long Beach State coach Seth Greenberg heard Iowa wasn't a good free-throw shooting team and his team put the rumor to the test Saturday night.

The Hawkeyes broke a school record with 61 free-throw attempts, but connected on just 37 in Iowa's 101-79 win over the 49ers at Carver-Hawkeye Arena for the Hawkeye Invitational title.

Iowa has won 11 of the 12 tournament titles and is 24-1 overall in tournament play. With the win over Long Beach State, the Hawkeyes moved to 3-0 on the season.

The previous record of 53 free-throw attempts was set Tuesday in a 90-86 win over Drake. Iowa shot 53 percent from the line against the Bulldogs.

"Obviously, it didn't work very well," Greenberg said of his plan to send Iowa to the line. "I thought I was going to have to suit up there pretty soon. They're a terrific pressing team."

Iowa senior forward James Winters led the Hawkeyes with 23 points and seven rebounds and was unanimously selected the tournament Most Valuable Player. Winters, who shot 9-for-16 from the line, said he wished Iowa would have set the record for free throws made.

"It seems ironic that we don't have a post man and we're setting records on going to the free-throw line," Winters said. "That's just because of (Iowa) Coach (Tom)

Seminoles, Cornhuskers match up for national title

Rick Warner

NEW YORK — Florida State and Nebraska got what they wanted — a championship showdown in the Orange Bowl. West Virginia also got a lucrative prize — a trip to the Sugar Bowl that could pay off with a share of the national title.

After weeks of speculation and controversy, the final pieces of the bowl puzzle fell into place Sunday when the Orange, Sugar and Cotton matchups were announced following release of the final regular-season polls.

As expected, top-ranked Florida State (11-1) will play No. 2 Nebraska (11-0) in the 29th meeting between the top two teams in The Associated Press media poll. The game is a rematch of last year's Orange Bowl, which Florida State won 27-14.

Florida State coach Bobby Bowden was thrilled to get the official word that his team was going to Miami. West Virginia fans thought the third-ranked Mountaineers (11-0) deserved a shot at Nebraska because they were the only undefeated teams eligible for a bowl.

"I felt a lot better when I heard the results today," said Bowden, who is unbeaten in his last 11 they'll pass it to me."

The 3-point shooting is relatively new to Bartels' career. During his freshman and sophomore seasons his main duty was on defense, which he takes great pride in.

"When I came in for role play the last couple of years, all I was really coming in for was to play some defense. I try to carry that over now and work hard on the defense."

"When I was a sophomore, I didn't really go in (to games) very confident. I think that was the biggest part of my game that I was lacking. I think that just because my mind wasn't set on what I wanted to do, what I wanted to achieve, I had some anxiety toward the game," he said.

Hawks sweep Invite

Mike Egenes
The Daily Iowan

The Iowa men's swim team won its own three-day invitational meet by tallying 1,031 points over the weekend competition at the Field House Pool. The Hawkeyes defeated two Division II teams, North Dakota and South Dakota, which registered 739 and 517 points, respectively.

Iowa used the meet as an intensified training session and entered most swimmers in as many as 18 events.

"This was like a basketball team coming in for a three-day tournament and playing a couple games a day," said assistant coach Rich Draper.

Junior Erik Marchitell led the Hawkeyes by winning three events. He finished first in the 200- and 400-yard individual medley with times of 1 minute, 54.49 seconds and 4:18.37 and won the championship of the 200 butterfly in 1:53.48.

Five freshmen also won events, including Jory Blauer and Todd Harvey, who won two events

Iowa's Bradon Hines competes in the 200-meter breaststroke Sunday at the Field House Pool. Hines finished fourth with a time of 2 minutes, 14.14 seconds as the Hawkeyes won the Invitational.

Blauer took the honors in the 100 backstroke (53.15) and the 200 backstroke (1:51.73), while Harvey won the 100 breaststroke (1:01.05) and the 200 breaststroke (2:09.77).

"These (freshmen) just keep getting better every week," said Draper. "I thought they would have success, but I thought it would be closer to the end of the year."

Draper said the key to the successful start of the season is the positive attitudes that he sees from the swimmers in both practices and meets.

"They're there every day on time, working hard. Whenever we have a hard set at the end of practice the last thing you hear from them is complaints," Draper said.

The Hawkeyes had plenty of "hard sets" during last week's workouts, averaging 12,000 yards per day, and still had quality performances. Swimmers reach their peak physical condition of the season after "tapering," which is cutting workouts down to 20,000 yards per week.

"By no means are we close to going as fast as we're going to go this year," Draper said.

Rockets rally behind Maxwell, Olajuwon

Associated Press

RICHFIELD, Ohio — Vernon Maxwell hit a 3-pointer with 31.9 seconds left and Hakeem Olajuwon was a force in the closing minutes Sunday night, rallying the Houston Rockets to a 99-98 victory over the Cleveland Cavaliers.

The Rockets improved to 16-1 after their season-opening 15-game winning streak ended Friday night in Atlanta. The Cavaliers (6-9) lost for the third straight time after blowing a big lead.

Cleveland, which led all the way until Maxwell's 3-pointer, was up by 11 points with about seven minutes left. The Cavaliers were up 93-86 when Brad Daugherty scored with 2:49 left.

But Olajuwon, who finished with 22 points, made the next three baskets before Maxwell's shot put Houston ahead 95-93. Olajuwon and Otis Thorpe each added a free throw before Gerald Wilkins ended Cleveland's scoreless streak with 6.2 seconds left with a short jumper.

Olajuwon's slam with 4.7 seconds left sealed it for the Rockets, and Chris Mills hit a 3-pointer at the buzzer for the Cavaliers.

Mark Price scored 13 of his 23 points in the third, as Cleveland built its lead to 75-67. Olajuwon had nine rebounds and Kenny Smith scored 19 points. Wilkins scored 16 for Cleveland, which received only 12 from Daugherty.

Suns 117, Bucks 98
MILWAUKEE — Charles

Barkley scored 23 points and Kevin Johnson 21 Sunday night as the Phoenix Suns used second-half runs of 10-0 and 11-0 to beat the Milwaukee Bucks 117-98.

Dan Majerle added 20 points and A.C. Green 19, allowing the Suns to win for the eighth time in nine games and finish a road trip 3-1. Johnson added 10 assists.

Ken Norman led Milwaukee (3-13) with 25 points and Anthony Avent had 17.

Johnson's driving basket just before the first-half buzzer put the Suns ahead 57-52 after a second quarter of spurts. Barkley had 17 points in the first two quarters and Norman 13 for Milwaukee.

Nuggets 115, Mavericks 110
DENVER — Dikembe Mutombo had 23 rebounds and nine blocks Sunday night to power the Denver Nuggets to a 115-110 victory over Dallas, the Mavericks' 12th straight loss.

Mahmoud Abdul-Rauf scored 22 points and Reggie Williams added 20 for Denver. Jamal Mashburn scored 28 points and Jim Jackson had 24 for the Mavericks.

The Nuggets made just 25-for-40 from the foul line and turned the ball over 21 times, leading to 23 points for the Mavericks.

Denver carried a 79-77 lead into the final period and three times pushed its lead to eight points, the last at 100-92 with 5:10 left. But the Mavericks answered with an 11-5 run, including four points from Jackson, to cut Denver's lead to 105-103 with 1:51 remaining.

Iowa women take first with 1,154 points

Doug Alden
The Daily Iowan

The Iowa women's swim team dominated at the Iowa Invitational Sunday at the Field House Pool.

The Hawkeyes took first place in all six events Sunday and tallied 1,154.5 points in the three-day meet, placing them well ahead of North Dakota (783), Northern Colorado (402) and South Dakota (373.5).

Pete Kennedy

The meet gave the Hawkeyes their first taste of the Big Ten Championship format which involves qualifying and final heats. Coach Pete Kennedy feels the experience was important for Iowa.

"We have kids who have never swum this format and this gave them a chance to see what it is all about," he said.

Because all three visiting teams were Division II the competition was not up to the level the Hawkeyes are used to in Big Ten matchups. Kennedy feels the Hawkeyes still benefited from the experience despite the lesser opposition.

"This gave us the chance to use a lot of people and to get everyone involved and get into the meet," he said.

"I was really pleased. I think we did really well. We had some outstanding swimmers."

Tri-captains Liane Burton, Laura Borgelt and Alison Pennington continued to lead Iowa. Burton took first in the 100-yard freestyle with a time of 53.19 seconds, and joined Borgelt, J.J. DeAth and Nicole Widmyer on the winning 400-yard freestyle relay (3:34.75) and Pennington took the 200-yard breaststroke (2:25.10).

Burton feels the meet was good for Iowa.

"I think we had some really really good swimmers, and not necessarily just the times on paper," Burton said. "There were some girls who stuck in there and stayed tough."

Burton said sophomore Rachel Bayster was particularly impressive in the 1650-yard freestyle after her swimming cap came off early in the heat.

Hawkeyes returns to competition Saturday when they host Iowa State at the Field House Pool.

GYMNASTICS

Iowa's Black and Gold exhibition for men only

Todd Heffernan
The Daily Iowan

The annual Black and Gold gymnastics exhibition was supposed to have a little twist to it this year, but unforeseen difficulties dared to say otherwise.

For the first time ever, the annual scrimmage between a split squad of the men's gymnastics team was supposed to have a scrimmage of two split squads from the women's team following it, making the exhibition coed for the first time.

It wasn't to be, as the women's team was apparently unable to perform due to illness to a couple of the players, and the women's Black and Gold exhibition was postponed to this Saturday at 2 p.m. at the North Gym of the Field House.

Nevertheless, the men's team put on a surprisingly competitive show for the packed house at the Field House. After dividing the men's 9th-ranked team into two teams, Coach Tom Dunn thought that the Black team had a distinct advantage. In an effort to make the exhibition closer, he spotted the Gold team six points.

"We thought that would be fair, but they (the Gold team) were stronger than that, they really did well," Dunn said.

The Gold team won the exhibition 169.7-166.2, even though the Black team outscored the Gold in four of the six events. In the all-around final standings, the Black swept the first three places, with senior Gary Denk winning with a combined 55.50, followed closely by Jay Thornton's 55.10, and Aaron Cotter finishing third with a 54.50.

Tyler Vogt led the Gold team scoring with a combined 53.70, followed by Pete Masucci.

"It was a real good intrasquad start, Gary (Denk) and Jay (Thornton) look like they're going to have a good battle this year," Dunn said.

Badgers smell the roses

Eric Talmadge
Associated Press

TOKYO — In Japan, the flower is called "bara." But a rose is still a rose, and for Wisconsin nothing could smell sweeter.

"I've had some huge successes in my life, but to be sitting here 9-1-1 and going to the Rose Bowl, it just hasn't sunk in yet," Wisconsin coach Barry Alvarez said. "It's mind-boggling."

After their 41-20 victory over Michigan State on Sunday, the Badgers wasted no time celebrating the school's first Rose Bowl berth since 1963. Players broke out boxes of red roses and donned red-and-white Rose Bowl hats.

"We're going to Pasadena," yelled an elated Scott Nelson, who had a key interception in the first half for the ninth-ranked Badgers.

"It's like going from the outhouse to the penthouse," Nelson said of the Badgers, who ended their last three seasons 5-6, 5-6 and 1-10. "I'll never forget it."

Michigan State, a 17-point underdog, took a 7-3 lead after Jim Miller threw a 34-yard scoring pass to Mill Coleman with 3:50 left in the first quarter.

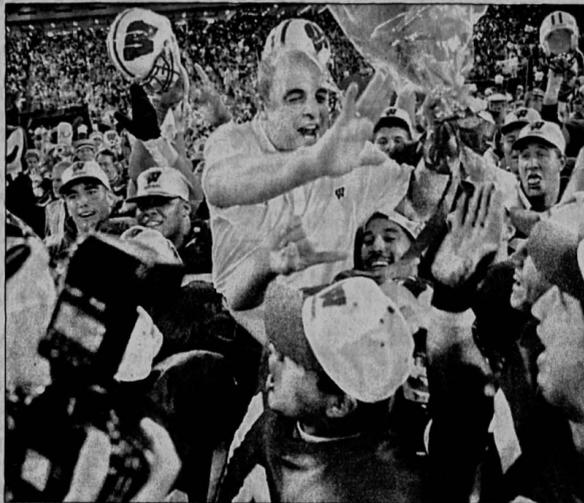

Wisconsin then stalled twice, and Rick Schnetzky, whose 35-yard field goal opened the scoring, missed a 22-yarder.

Michigan State (6-5) was poised to score again after two 12-yard passes by Miller put the Spartans on Wisconsin turf. But Nelson picked off Miller's next attempt.

"I was in the right place at the right time," Nelson said. "It's a good feeling."

Terrell Fletcher converted the play into a 1-yard TD run with 9:21 left in the half. Two minutes later, after Michigan State was forced to punt, Fletcher broke free on a 40-yard run to give the Badgers a 17-7 lead.

"I was kind of surprised at how relaxed I was, and the whole team," said Fletcher, who rushed for 113 yards. "We knew what we were coming into, and we knew what we were playing for."

"It's like going from the outhouse to the penthouse. I'll never forget it."

Scott Nelson, Wisconsin defensive back

Darrell Bevell completed passes of 41 yards to Lee DeRamus, and 12 and 17 yards to Michael Roan to set up the third Wisconsin touchdown. Brent Moss ran 9 yards to the Michigan State 3 and then scored on the next play to make it 24-7 at halftime.

Michigan State came out strong in the second half, driving to the Wisconsin 4 with 22-yard passes from Miller to Napoleon Outlaw and Scott Greene. But the Badgers then sacked Miller and the Spartans had to settle for a 26-yard field goal by Bill Stoyanovich that left Wisconsin ahead 24-10 five minutes into the half.

Wisconsin came back with a 27-yarder by Schnetzky five minutes later for a 27-10 lead.

Michigan State cut it to 27-17 on Duane Goulbourne's 2-yard run 45 seconds into the final period, but Bevell hooked up with DeRamus on a 7-yard TD pass to give the Badgers a 34-17 advantage.

Stoyanovich cut it to 34-20 with a 3-yard field goal, and recovered an onside kick to keep possession of the ball.

On the next play, Ken Gales picked off another Miller pass, starting a 92-yard drive Wisconsin capped with a 1-yard run by Moss, the nation's No. 3 rusher at 133 yards per game.

Moss ended the day with 152 yards, setting a school record with his 10th consecutive 100-yard-plus game.

NFL ROUNDUP

Steelers highlight defensive day

Associated Press

On a Sunday dominated by defense, the Pittsburgh Steelers made the day of the day.

Levon Kirkland made a leaping tackle to stop Drew Bledsoe's quarterback sneak on fourth-and-goal from the 1 on the final play, allowing the Steelers to hold on for a 17-14 victory over the New England Patriots.

"Man, we had a push on that play, I've never seen penetration like that," Steelers lineman Donald Evans said. "Joel (Steed) and Jeff (Zgonina) had so much pressure, they saved our season."

The Steelers, playing without injured All-Pro running back Barry Foster for the third straight game, possibly could have fallen out of playoff contention with a loss. Instead, Pittsburgh remained a game behind Houston (8-4) in the AFC Central.

The Patriots (1-11) lost their seventh straight game, the last six defeats by a combined 20 points.

Bledsoe committed six turnovers, but drove the Patriots from their own 5 toward the Pittsburgh goal line in the final minutes. The Patriots stopped the clock with 17 seconds left, and rather than ask erratic kicker Scott Sisson to try a tying field goal, coach Bill Parcells went for the win.

Bledsoe took the snap and jumped over the middle, but Kirkland met him in midair and stopped him.

On Monday night, Philadelphia is at Dallas.

Bears 30, Packers 17

At Chicago, linebacker Dante Jones intercepted a pass and lateral for one touchdown and returned a fumble for another score as the Bears beat Green Bay and created a three-way tie for the NFC Central lead.

Mark Carrier intercepted a pass by Brett Favre and returned it 34 yards with 1:41 left for another Bears' touchdown. Chicago, Green Bay and Detroit are tied at 7-5.

This was the first time in 30 years the Bears and Packers have met this late in a season with winning records. Chicago, which won its fourth in a row and stopped Green Bay's three-game winning string, leads the overall series 82-59-6.

Giants 19, Dolphins 14

At Miami, New York forced three turnovers, earned a safety on a sack and turned back three scoring threats to beat bloodied quarterback Steve DeBerg and the Dolphins.

DeBerg needed seven stitches in his chin after being flattened by two Giants. He missed parts of two possessions and returned to the game at the start of the fourth quarter.

The game between division leaders left both at 9-3.

Chiefs 31, Seahawks 16

At Seattle, Marcus Allen scored three touchdowns, increasing his AFC-leading total to 13, and Joe Montana completed 20 of 30 passes for 239 yards for Kansas City.

because of a pulled hamstring. The Chiefs (9-3) are 6-1 when Montana has been healthy enough to start.

Derrick Thomas scored on an 86-yard fumble return and Albert Lewis intercepted a pass and recovered a fumble. Seattle (5-7) lost to the Chiefs for the fifth straight time.

Oilers 33, Falcons 17

At Houston, Atlanta coach Jerry Glanville was hounded by his former fans at the Astrodome while the Oilers tied a team record with six interceptions.

Ray Childress recovered a fumble in the end zone as the Oilers (8-4) won their seventh straight game, their longest winning streak since 1962. Atlanta (5-7) had won five of six.

Glanville, forced out as the Oilers coach in 1989, was surrounded by three security guards in his return to Houston.

Vikings 13, Lions 0

At Pontiac, Mich., Lamar McGriggs returned an interception 63 yards for a touchdown and Minnesota sent the Lions their first shutout since the 1991 opener.

Jack Del Rio had three of the Vikings' five interceptions. Rodney Peete was picked off four times and Andre Ware was intercepted once. The Lions played without injured Barry Sanders, the NFL's leading rusher.

Jim McMahon made his first start since dislocating his left shoulder Halloween night in Minnesota. He guided the Vikings (6-6) to a pair of field goals by Fuad Revez.

Colts 9, Jets 6

At East Rutherford, N.J., Dean Biasucci kicked a 38-yard field goal with one second left and Indianapolis beat New York in the rain and wind.

An interception by Eugene Daniel on a tipped pass by Boomer Esiason set up the winning kick. The Colts (4-8) ended a four-game losing streak, and won for the third time this season by a 9-6 score.

Raiders 25, Bills 24

At Orchard Park, N.Y., Tim Brown caught a 29-yard touchdown pass from Jeff Hostetler with 4:58 left, lifting Los Angeles over Buffalo.

Brown caught 10 passes for 183 yards, both career highs, and helped the Raiders (7-5) stay in playoff contention. The Bills (8-4) made two turnovers in the fourth quarter and blew an eight-point lead.

Chargers 13, Broncos 10

At San Diego, John Carney kicked a 34-yard field goal with three seconds left, lifting the Chargers over Denver.

Stan Humphries guided San Diego (6-6) on a 12-play, 79-yard drive to the winning points. John Elway went over the 3,000-yard mark in passing for the eighth straight season, but could not lead Denver (7-5) to another fourth-quarter comeback.

Browns 17, Saints 13

At Cleveland, the Browns sacked Wade Wilson nine times and ended a four-game losing streak.

Vinny Testaverde and Todd Philcox each threw a touchdown pass to Michael Jackson for Cleveland (6-6). New Orleans (7-5) tied a team record for most sacks allowed.

Cardinals 38, Rams 10

At Tempe, Ariz., Ron Moore became the first Cardinals player in 16 years to run for four touchdowns as Phoenix beat Los Angeles.

Moore scored once on a 19-yard run through traffic in the third quarter and three times from 1 yard out. Wayne Morris was the last to accomplish the feat, for St. Louis against New Orleans on Oct. 23, 1977.

Moore ran for 126 yards in 29 carries for Phoenix (4-8). Jerome Bettis ran for 115 yards on 16 carries for the Rams (3-9).

Redskins 23, Buccaneers 17

At Tampa, Fla., Kurt Gouveia returned an interception 59 yards for a touchdown and Darrell Green picked off two passes to spark Washington.

The Redskins (3-9) had lost six straight road games, and three in a row overall. Tampa Bay (3-9) was assured of a losing record for the 11th consecutive season.

49ers 21, Bengals 8

At San Francisco, Ricky Watters ran for three touchdowns, two after a failed fake punt by Cincinnati awakened the 49ers' offense.

San Francisco (9-3) won its sixth straight to open a two-game lead in the NFC West over New Orleans.

Cincinnati (1-11) was leading 8-7 when quarterback David Klingler went out with a right hip injury, sustained on an 11-yard scramble that left the Bengals with a fourth-and-9 at their 45.

Drake's Allen named MVC player of week

Associated Press

DES MOINES — Drake's Jeff Allen has been named the Missouri Valley Conference player of the week after scoring 42 points in the Bulldogs' last two games.

Allen made 6 of 9 3-point shots and finished with a career-high 28 points in a 90-86 loss at Iowa.

The senior then scored 14 points in a 90-87 overtime victory over Toledo, including Drake's final 6 points in regulation.

In the two games, Allen shot 54 percent from the field, grabbed 13 rebounds, handed out 8 assists and made 8 steals.

Riverside's 'Magi' a precious gift

Shayla Thiel
The Daily Iowan

Once again, Riverside Theatre has given Iowa City a gift more precious than gold, frankincense and myrrh — its dazzling version of "The Gift of the Magi."

Riverside commissioned the holiday musical in 1991 but is running it for one final season this year. Basing it on the ironic short story by O. Henry, award-winning playwright Carson Becker presents an innovative romantic comedy which may touch the hearts of all ages and bring about an excitement for Christmas in even the coldest of Scrooges.

The story centers around Jim (John Edward Lynch) and Della (Wendi Weber), an early 20th-century couple struggling with financial woes and literally living on their all-consuming love for each other. When Christmas time rolls around, both are afraid of leaving the other's stocking empty and are willing to go to great lengths to fulfill their fondest holiday wishes. The story can be taken as an anecdote about the funny things that happen when people are blinded by love, a reminder of the plight of the poor in a materialistic society or, most importantly, a tale demonstrating how the gift of love can be a true miracle.

The small cast of seven is a boon to the production's smoothness. Actors switch from character to character — using different accents and even dressing in drag to complement the quick personality switches. Lynch is tired but mooned as the overworked Jim, and Weber is sweet but cunning as ever as Della. Her singing voice rings clear as a bell, but its wistful nature suits the music perfectly.

Barbara Meyer wins the award for most convincing case of schizophrenia. Switching from jabbering secretary with a Brooklynese accent to the flamboyant French fake Madame Sofranie to a street thug, Meyer demonstrates a great knack for the stage. Although the other supporting characters were not given as much stage time to prove their talents, they added a necessary energy to the production which provided much of the pizzazz a small theater can sometimes so lack. The three also doubled as puppeteers.

Yes, there are even some puppets in the musical. While the angel — who must witness a Christmas miracle in order to gain some wings — might be a bit too abstract and cerebral for most young children to understand, the stray cat, flowers and fish puppets provide an added dimension to the performance for both kids and adults.

Director Ron Clark is superb as the narrator of "The Gift of the Magi." While Clark depicts the wise, all-knowing ominous type of guy throughout the production, he gets a chance to really ham it up as Jim and Della's greedy landlord. Introducing himself in a cute soft-shoe musical number, he instantly becomes a psychotic, monotonous renter who loves nothing more than collecting the rent once a month, even on Christmas eve. Clark has an incredible knack for storytelling and it's a treat to listen to him for an entire 90 minutes.

Riverside Theatre
Left to right, Wendi Weber, Rip Russell and Robert Hoyt appear in a scene from "The Gift of the Magi," which is playing at Riverside Theatre this month.

"The Gift of the Magi" doesn't set out to be a catchy musical in the sense of Rodgers and Hammerstein, but the production's music is sophisticated and fun and should not be overlooked. Local composer Mark Brunner creates an atmosphere with music, incorporating modern harmonies into the "traditional" musical number and funny lyrics.

The most unfortunate thing about Riverside's "Gift" is that this is its final run for the players; however, a New York producer and several regional theaters are interested in taking on the production, so the musical will live on elsewhere. "The Gift of the Magi" brings tears to the eyes and laughter from the heart. Catch it before it's gone.

"The Gift of the Magi" will be performed Dec. 9-11 and 16-18 at 8 p.m. and Dec. 12 and 19 at 2 p.m. at Riverside Theatre, 213 N. Gilbert St. Tickets start at $14; call 338-7672 for full details. College students can purchase special "rush" tickets for $7 starting 15 minutes before each performance.

The man who took on the Oscars — and won

Ian Corwin
The Daily Iowan

Occasionally, the academy likes to honor what it considers to be a renegade. In fact, many Hollywood insiders have agreed that, beginning in 1970, it became a kind of vogue thing to crap on the heads of the academy members, only to trot back up to the podium later in the day to pick up a prize, thus eating the same dung which earlier lay steaming and smeared in the face of the academy's reputation. It's nothing new — celeb plays pissed-off spokesperson for this or that social or political cause, celeb is ostracized for a bit (to keep up appearances), ugly rumors fly, then, in a flash of blinding light, celeb is taken back into the fold.

Jane Fonda, whose anti-war rhetoric during the leper in the academy's mind, was not punished by the voters but rather rewarded with a "forgiveness" Oscar for her work in "Klute" (1971). And after the Oscar ceremony that night, old Jane began a mysterious comeback, culminating in her second Oscar for her role in "Coming Home" (1978), coincidentally about Vietnam veterans.

It was this same attempt at showing the public the "seditious" side of celebrity, in the hopes of garnering new publicity, which led to Brando's Oscar for "The Godfather" in 1972. But rather than simply not showing up or turning the award down, Brando decided to become ringmaster of the circus by sending an American Indian woman to the televised ceremony to decline the award for him. Brando's point was swallowed up in Hollywood gossip and the academy got its highest ratings ever, topped only two years later when a man named Robert Opel ran across the stage naked behind David Niven.

Only one actor in history has survived the slings and arrows of Hollywood's deadly ego traps; he's been labeled by the academy as a "brat," a "rebel" and a "stubborn ass," but George C. Scott is the only actor I know of who has retained his dignity in the face of Oscar's horrors — he's also built a career well outside of Oscar's reach, with only marginal help from the academy's publicity department.

Fresh off the stage and just out of his motion picture debut in "The Hanging Tree" (1958), Scott received an offer from Otto Preminger to play the calculating, ruthless state's attorney in "Anatomy of a Murder" (1959). His electrifying performance cinched him a nomination as best supporting actor. An Oscar for the young Scott seemed inevitable.

But the political gears had already begun to mesh, perhaps even before Scott had set foot in Hollywood, and the statue went to Hugh Griffith for his less than capable work on the windbag epic "Ben-Hur," which would also pull down another 10 Oscars, topping even "Gone With the Wind" in total spoils.

Scott's youthful dreams had been crushed and after a serious reassessment of the awards and what they stood for, he denounced them publicly as "a fawning, dizzy meat contest." The academy, in all its wisdom, did the only thing it could do — it nominated him again, two years later, for "The Hustler." Scott responded by demanding his name be removed from the academy's nomination lists — the academy countered, ironically enough, with the statement that it was "Mr. Scott's work which was up for recognition, and not Mr. Scott himself."

Passed by on that occasion in favor of George Chakiris' spicy but benign work in "West Side Story," Scott would not be nominated again for nine years, as the academy completely ignored Scott's wonderful caricature of Gen. Buck Turgidson in Stanley Kubrick's "Dr. Strangelove" (1964) and his work in "The Flim-Flam Man" (1967). No, when they finally nominated Scott for the Oscar that they were actually planning on giving him, it was for "The Big One," "Patton" (1970).

As Ole' Blood-n-Guts, Scott showed the world that he was as versatile as Brando, as intense as Pacino and as dedicated as Hoffman, tearing up the screen in a performance that is almost too good to be true. Even Scott himself knew it was a splash of greatness, yet when Oscar night rolled around, the academy, for once in its life, got screwed.

Despite warnings from Scott that he would not accept the prize, the actor's name was called when they opened the envelope, but George was nowhere to be found.

To this day, George C. Scott's Oscar for best actor in "Patton" sits uncollected and lonely in an academy vault, and Scott's performance has only grown sharper with hindsight. Knowing what we know about Scott's attitude towards Oscar, we can almost see that look of contempt in Gen. Patton's eyes during those long monologues and speeches. It seems as though Scott and director Franklin Schaffner knew "Patton" would grab Oscar by the balls, and the fact that Scott squeezed as hard as he could is a testament not only to a great actor, but to a strong sense of pride — a pride that will never need a statue to legitimize it.

Next week: Part four in a four-part series examining Oscar's effects on film history — The Mercedes McCambridge / Linda Blair Connection.

ALBUM REVIEW

Latest Chapterhouse CD may alienate current fans

Stuart Reid
The Daily Iowan

Chapterhouse's Blood Music is a well-conceived and well-executed project which, nevertheless, is likely to alienate a fair portion of Chapterhouse's existing fan base. Its debut release, Whirlpool, was a guitar-driven affair that, like Catherine Wheel's Ferment, occupied the midpoint between grunge and shoe-gazing.

Blood Music, by contrast, is essentially a dance record which successfully merges Chapterhouse's previous wall-of-sound approach to mild-mannered techno beats and samples.

"Don't Look Now" opens the album and establishes the new musical agenda by merging dreamy vocals, some pseudo-guitar beats and a nifty cycling guitar sample. "We Are The Beautiful" seems to be the track being pushed, which is a bit of a shame as it is somewhat unrepresentative of the album. Other than the pleasantly universal lyrics, this song really fails to take advantage of Chapterhouse's new personality as many of the other tracks do. Incidentally, current pressings of Blood Music come with a bonus disk featuring two rather uninspired remixes of "We Are The Beautiful." However, it also includes a 15-minute sound experiment called "Picnic" which makes the extra disk worth having.

The album's high point is "She's A Vision," which is more than a little reminiscent of Spirea X's Fireblade Skies album, not to mention midera Xymox at their best. Other than one inexcusably inane line in the lyrics, this is a perfect track. Languid background vocals waft back and forth beneath the radio friendly keyboard and drum lines. This is what mainstream pop should sound like in 1993.

In a way, Chapterhouse's transformation is not entirely unexpected. Following the initial release of Whirlpool, the band released its best song to date, the single "Mesmerize." This track focused far more on the melodic elements in its sound and serves as a bridge between old and new Chapterhouse. The disk was reissued with "Mesmerize" and one additional track — however, the packaging was not altered to reflect the two added songs. So if you're thinking of getting a used copy of Whirlpool, you should probably do it in a store where you can check to make sure you're getting all 11 tracks, rather than just the nine listed.

One other element which works to make Blood Music so successful is the musical bridges that intersperse the album, tying one track to the next. These give the record a sort of tripped-out Primal Scream / Boy's Own feel which helps to smooth out any rough edges. While Blood Music is an excellent release, pushing "We Are The Beautiful" as the lead track might cause this disk to get shortchanged on the alternative circuit. Hopefully, the discerning listener will pick up on it anyway.
