Retired admiral to head defense dept.

Susanne M. Schafer
Associated Press

WASHINGTON — President Clinton quickly chose retired Adm. Bobby Inman Thursday as his new secretary of defense. Inman, a veteran of intelligence posts in both Republican and Democratic administrations, said he hadn't sought and didn't want the job but accepted because of "duty and country."

He told Clinton he would try to make sure the nation got "a dollar value for a dollar spent in defense" along with standards of integrity "that will be a beacon for the rest of government."

Clinton made the announcement in a Rose Garden ceremony flanked by Inman and an unsmiling Les Aspin, who had announced his resignation for "personal reasons" less than 24 hours earlier.

The president said he was acting swiftly to "ensure the greatest continuity" at the helm of the nation's armed forces.

"I know he will be a national asset as secretary of defense," Clinton said of Inman, who was head of the National Security Agency for President Carter and deputy chief of the Central Intelligence Agency in the Reagan administration.

Clinton recited the 62-year-old's resumé of government service, saying the son of an East Texan gas station owner had risen on the strength of "his brains, his talent and his hard work."

Inman, as if to underscore his independence, immediately stated he'd voted for George Bush — and against Clinton — in the 1992 election.

He went on to say he hadn't sought the job and didn't want it, but accepted it out of "duty and country" and what he felt was the president's "absolute commitment" to build bipartisan support for a military policy.

Sounding as if he'd interviewed Clinton for the job instead of the other way around, Inman said he had had to become "very comfortable" with Clinton's role as commander in chief. "I have found that level of comfort," he said.

"I am an imperfect human being who has been provided many wonderful opportunities. ... I have not done all of them as well as I would like, but I have always worked hard at them, and I will work hard at this one," Inman declared.

Clinton's relationship with the uniformed military services has been rocky since his election, not only based on his avoidance of military service during the Vietnam War, but more recently his attempt to lift the ban against homosexuals in the military.

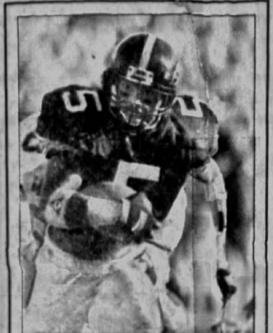

The Senate must confirm Inman, but expressions of strong bipartisan support indicated there would be no problems.

Sen. Sam Nunn, D-Ga., said he See APPOINTMENT, Page 7A

Fire causes $10,000 worth of damage to I.C. building

Approximately $10,000 worth of damage was caused by a fire Thursday at the United Technology Automotive Building, 2500 Highway 6.

The Iowa City Police Department was called to the scene at 9:23 a.m. Four hundred people were evacuated from the building. The fire took seven minutes to control. There were no injuries.

The fire began when an overheated electrical motor ignited some vinyl powder in the Plastisol compounding area of the building.

Teens sentenced in killing linked to viewing movie

MILWAUKEE (AP) — Two teenagers accused of robbing and killing a motorist after getting "hyped up" watching a movie received lengthy prison terms.

"What we have is two kids who decided to see a movie and write their own sequel," Circuit Judge John A. Franke said Wednesday as he sentenced Mighty Howell, 17, and Danyelle Wiley, 18.

Authorities said the teens watched the crime drama "Menace II Society" before trying to rob Roger Buchholz as the 50-year-old businessman paused at an intersection. Buchholz was shot to death as he tried to drive away.

"If (U.S. Attorney General) Janet Reno needs another example of the connection between entertainment and real acts of violence, this is sure a good one," Franke said.

The judge sentenced Howell, who was the fatal shots, to life in prison with no possibility of parole for 45 years. Wiley got 25 years in prison and will be eligible for parole in about six years.

LEAD, COPPER LEVELS ANALYZED

Officials say water safe despite failed tests

Tricia DeWall
The Daily Iowan

Environmental Protection Agency testing has shown there is too much lead in tap water at several sites on the UI campus.

The UI water plant conducted tests for lead and copper in tap water in February and May. Eight locations on campus exceeded the EPA's allowable concentration of lead in water, which is set at 15 parts per billion, in one of two tests. One location, the men's restroom near room 46 of the Union, failed the test both times.

"The water is safe and there is no immediate danger to anyone," UI Water Utilities Manager Kenneth Lloyd said. "We're kind of in the midst of an effort by the EPA to reduce lead in the environment as close to zero as possible. But saying this does not mean in any way that the water is unsafe to drink."

Lloyd said the EPA procedures for lead and copper testing target buildings that represent the highest risk. EPA rules also require that samples be taken from taps that have been unused for a minimum of six hours.

"Many of the samples taken under this procedure came from places where people would not normally get drinking water, such as restroom sinks," Lloyd said.

"Drinking fountains and other places where people normally go for drinking water tend to be used more often than the sources we sampled," he said. "The frequent usage at a drinking fountain would probably flush most of the lead out of the water."

In addition to alerting water system users of the test results and

SOBER CEREMONY

UI cracks down on alcohol at graduation

Jim Snyder
The Daily Iowan

While graduation ceremonies might seem like more of a nuisance than a special event, the UI administration is hoping students will respect the tradition of the ceremony and what it represents — a lot of hard work for the kids and a lot of money from the parents.

"It is the kind of occasion that frequently people look back on as a symbol, it is an experience that can only be explained in terms of the tradition of the institution," Dean Phillip Jones said. "It's really a very serious kind of tribute when one considers the pain one undergoes to get an education and of course the amount of money it costs."

UI public safety officials will be there to detain students who bring in alcohol, and will kick any perpetrators out. Jones said in the past he has personally escorted students out of the ceremony.

He said when he went to school, students often didn't attend graduation. While attendance has increased over the years, a sense of respect has given way to celebration represented by champagne bottles.

"Champagne corks were going off all during the ceremony," Jones said. "It was ridiculous. It turned out to be not just a celebration but a drinking party."

Students are also asked not to decorate the cap and gown, such as spelling out on the top of the cap how long it took them to get to the ceremony.

"Every student will be recognized," Jones said. "I would hope that people wouldn't detract from the moment of introduction by defacing or decorating the academic outfit."

Jones said until about three years ago the administration would usually receive a dozen letters from parents or other family members who were appalled at the antics of students at the ceremony. Since then, the college deans have increased the number of letters they send to their students, congratulating them and explaining proper etiquette.

For the past few years students have observed the proper respect for graduation, according to Jones.

"The students are to be congratulated for the amount of decorum they have displayed," he said. "It's up to this year's class to keep the standards high."

DRUG-FREE PROGRAM

Athletes say being noticeable a burden

Lynn M. Tefft
The Daily Iowan

Let's say it's Friday night and Joe and Mary Student, weary and stressed from a hectic finals week, head downtown to have a few beers with their friends. Things get a little out of hand, and after standing atop the downtown playground equipment yelling, Joe and Mary end up being arrested for public intoxication. On Monday, their names appear in the police log of the newspaper along with others like them.

Change the story a little and make it Joe and Mary Athlete. They too go downtown, have a few beers and get a little too rowdy. They're also arrested for public intoxication, but instead of being only in the police log with the Students, they find themselves on the front page as well.

"With the opportunities and benefits of being an athlete come some burdens as well," UI Athletic Director Bob Bowsby said. "One of those burdens is having a lot of eyes on you. There's a higher standard for athletes because there's higher interest in them."

Student athletes said the stress of practice and competition, combined with the stresses of exams, papers and busy schedules that all students face, can cause as many athletes as other students to find escape on the weekends.

"It's fun to socialize and meet new people too," UI senior and field hockey all-American Kristy Gleason said. "The team is a really close family, and sometimes there's not an opportunity to meet people."

Gleason, 22, pleaded guilty to operating while intoxicated Wednesday and was sentenced to probation. Johnson County District Associate Judge Sylvia A. Lewis said Gleason was placed on probation because she doesn't have a prior criminal record and because of the nature of the offense.

Gleason said that while participating in sports offers many benefits, it also keeps athletes constantly in the spotlight.

"You can't get yourself into any trouble if you don't want to be perceived as something you're not,"

If the events in today's installment of the year in review seem like they happened just yesterday, that's because they did. After a brief glance at the triumphs and trials of the fall semester 1993, it's time to ring out the old and ring in the new.

September

At the UI, classes started on time despite flooding to many campus buildings. Mayflower Residence Hall, however, remained closed, forcing many students to live the "temp housing" life — sharing lounges in other halls.

At the request of the Board of Regents, the Faculty Council came up with a policy on warning students about sexually explicit class materials and forwarded it to the Faculty Senate for approval. The Faculty Senate delayed voting on the policy indefinitely.

Graduate students, hoping to form a labor union that could negotiate with the UI on such issues as tuition waivers, health-care fees and child care, formed the Campaign to Organize Graduate Students (COGS).

Pieces of the AIDS quilt, an enormous memorial to the thousands who have died from the disease, were displayed at the Union.

Sparking fury from many of his fellow UISA officers, President John Gardner rescinds his previous offer to switch jobs with Vice President Micah Hobart in November.

The Coalition Against Terror formed after the DI ran a controversial piece by columnist David Mastio and the Campus Review displayed its "gerbil quilt" in the Union. CAT called for Mastio's dismissal from the DI and the banning of the Review.

"Gunplay," a production nearly two years in the making, debuted at the Riverside Theatre. Commissioned in response to the Nov. 1, 1991 campus shootings, the play took a comprehensive look at the proliferation of guns in America.

UI student Kelly Gordon died from the rare Wilson's disease, after only a month of her sophomore year.

"Gunplay," opened in September at the Riverside Theatre nearly two years after the Nov. 1 shootings on the UI campus. The play took a comprehensive look at the proliferation of guns in America.

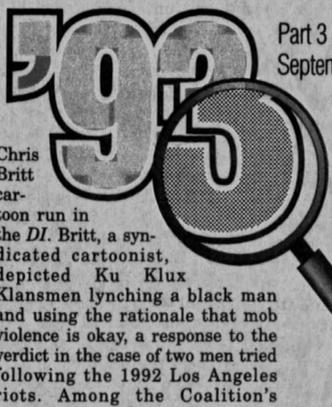

The administration okayed the reopening of Mayflower Residence Hall and announced that losses related to the closure of the building during the flood totaled almost $1.2 million.

Citing the need for sensitivity, the Homecoming Council banned all American Indian depictions during Homecoming Week and the football game against the University of Illinois.

UISA finally resolved its Class III budget woes, after Dean of Students Phillip Jones threatened to step in and administratively finish the budget. Debate erupted early in the year when some Class III groups were given only 10 percent of their budget requests.

The Iowa City School District drew national attention when it issued a Halloween letter advising parents of "acceptable" and "not acceptable" costumes. While some Britt, a syndicated cartoonist, depicted Ku Klux Klansmen lynching a black man and using the rationale that mob violence is okay, a response to the verdict in the case of two men tried following the 1992 Los Angeles riots. Among the Coalition's requests was a front-page apology from the DI for publishing the cartoon.

Larry Baker, Ernie Lehman, Naomi Novick and Jim Throgmorton were elected to the Iowa City City Council.

The Faculty Council, upset that the Board of Regents foisted a sexually explicit materials policy on the UI, started looking to draft its own policy. When presented with the new draft, the regents tabled its decision.

UI Provost Peter Nathan, withdrew from competition for the presidency at the University of South Florida, saying that he didn't want a presidential position but an academic administrative one.

Undergraduate Activities Senator Vy Nguyen was nominated and approved to succeed Micah Hobart, who stepped down from the UISA vice presidency to take a job at Gov. Terry Branstad's office in Des Moines.

Iowa Attorney General Bonnie Campbell announced her bid for the 1994 gubernatorial race, vowing to end, "12 years of cute gimmicks and slogans."

Michael Coleman received a 50-year sentence for the murder of Iowa City resident Ryan Wagehoff, while Kevin Williams received 10 years.

A rash of assaults on the UI campus prompted an investigation by the Iowa City Police Department. The investigation continued despite the arrest of UI football player Toney Bates, suspected in some of the assaults.

Nicholas Gates, a 19-year-old UI freshman, was killed when his car swerved off the roadway and hit a sign outside the UI Art Building.

UI football coach Hayden Fry garnered his 200th victory in a win over Minnesota.

Manassas, Virginia, resident Lorena Bobbitt captured national headlines when she severed her husband John's penis after he allegedly raped her. She faces charges of mutilation.

December

Local anti-rape organizations

picketed a female strip show at The Field House bar, saying it promoted the attitudes that lead to violence against women.

UI senior microbiology major Ali Husain was chosen as a Rhodes Scholar, making him the UI's second Rhodes Scholar in two years.

UI freshman Gant Miller, whose late November disappearance resulted in a search throughout the Midwest, returned home to West Des Moines. He had been staying at his family's cabin in Clear Lake for two weeks.

Trial began for Lawrence Henning, who was charged in the May 20 hit-and-run death of Iowa City teen-ager Chris Harding.

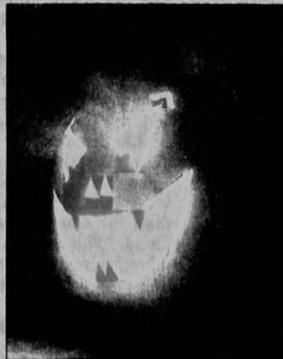

The Board of Regents voted down the Faculty Council's latest version of the sexually explicit materials policy, after the Iowa Civil Liberties Union denounced the whole policy idea.

Heavyweight boxer Tommy Morrison pleaded not guilty in Johnson County court to charges of simple assault and public intoxication after allegedly hitting a UI student at a local Country Kitchen.

The UI administration announced it was conducting an investigation of a "wild" rhetoric class taught by teaching assistant Molly Leahy, after receiving complaints that students brought beer to class and wrestled in their boxer shorts.

In national news, astronauts on the space shuttle Endeavor attempted to fix the Hubble telescope's problems.

Disgruntled gunman Colin Ferguson, citing racial prejudices as a reason, opened fire on a New Jersey commuter train and killed five people.

After it was announced that a teaching assistant had been reprimanded for showing the film "Paris is Burning" in a UI class, the administration revealed that the letter of reprimand had been rescinded.

In national news, President Clinton unveiled his health-care agenda, promising universal health care and a reform of the health-insurance industry.

In the Middle East, Israeli Prime Minister Yitzhak Rabin and Palestine Liberation Organization Chairman Yasser Arafat signed a historic peace accord.

October

The Board of Regents, displeased by the Faculty Senate's decision to delay voting on the sexually explicit materials policy, forced the UI to adopt the Board's version of the policy. Later in the month, the Campaign for Academic Freedom formed to oppose the policy handed down by the board.

applauded the Equity Advisory Committee's efforts to protect the feelings of students who might be offended by costumes such as Indian princess, hobo or scary monster, many said it was "political correctness" taken one step too far.

Bus loads flocked to the Coralville Reservoir to view fossils unearthed by the summer of flooding.

Iowa City 16-year-old Thomas Lerner died from sniffing butane, prompting a police investigation into how rampant the activity is among teen-agers.

Charles Pence, the driver of the snowplow that struck and killed Chris Street in January, filed a counter suit against Street's family, asserting that Street failed to maintain a proper lookout and yield the right of way. He said he waited to file his suit so that he would be entitled only to liability insurance as compensation for his physical and mental injuries.

PUBLIC SAFETY ISSUES WARNING

Danny Frazier/The Daily Iowan

With an increase in break-ins during the holiday season, UI students should take precautions to protect their property. UI officials are advising students to take their valuable possessions home with them if their rooms or apartments will be vacant.

Students cautioned to lock up valuables

Prasanti Kantamneni
The Daily Iowan

An annual increase in break-ins during the holiday season should alert students to take precautions in protecting their property.

There are many ways for students who live off-campus to protect their homes from burglaries, Iowa City Police Department Sgt. Craig Lihs said.

"The best thing would be to have someone you trust stay in your apartment or home so it won't be vacant," he said. "If your home is vulnerable to break-ins, take your valuable stuff home with you, leave it with someone here or put it in a storage unit."

If students do leave valuable items in their homes, they are advised to inventory all property for description and identification purposes. Students are also advised to have their mail held and newspapers stopped.

Lihs said there is a noticeable increase in the number of breakins during the winter months.

"When students get back to school in January, many report stolen items," he said.

The ICPD will check off-campus homes three times daily for students who ask to be put on the watch list, Lihs said.

Students living in residence halls should not be worried about break-ins, UI Public Safety Chief Mitchell Jones said.

All residence halls, except Mayflower and Quadrangle, will close at 5 p.m. Saturday, Dec. 18. Once buildings are closed, students will not be able to enter them until they reopen Saturday, Jan. 15.

"All doors will be locked and entrance door locks will be changed so no one can get into building," Slater Residence Hall Coordinator Mike Kimbel said.

Jones said the likelihood of things happening increases when students are gone.

"As usual, we will have daily walk-throughs, but we will also increase our patrols in the residence halls over break," he said.

RULES DIFFER IN DEPARTMENTS

Students stymied by grievance process

Graduate College Dean Leslie Sims admits it would be difficult to have an overarching grievance policy with so many students in so many different disciplines.

Maria Hickey
The Daily Iowan

UI graduate students with academic grievances will find the filing procedure is not spelled out beyond individual departments.

"The reason we haven't written any of it down is because we try to tailor the grievance procedure in the best interest of each case," Graduate College Dean Leslie Sims said.

He said it would be difficult to have an across-the-board policy since the Graduate College has students in many disciplines. The ad hoc procedure provides flexibility needed in these situations, Sims said.

Martha Lutz, a UI doctoral student, had a difficult time finding out how to file a formal grievance in the spring of 1989. She went through her department, the Graduate College, the ombudsman and eventually to UI Provost Peter Nathan.

"Every time I went through the grievance procedure, I was told that I had not formally filed. But they wouldn't tell me how to go about filing it. ... There may be a grievance procedure within the university, but I'm not aware of one."

Martha Lutz, UI doctoral student, on her attempt to file a formal grievance with the UI in 1989

"Every time I went through the grievance procedure, I was told that I had not formally filed," she said. "But they wouldn't tell me how to go about filing it."

After spending more than a year trying to get the UI to address her grievance, Lutz went to a lawyer. Since the grievance was academic, she was told the law could not intervene. Eventually, Lutz switched to another department, but is still angered that her grievance was never addressed.

"There may be a grievance procedure within the university, but I'm not aware of one," she said.

Sims said the Graduate Council is planning to write the policy next semester, but said nothing new will be added.

"They've decided we need to write down some of it so students are clear on the issue," he said. "We're not doing anything new, we just want to clarify it."

The Graduate College advises students to try to resolve grievances at the lowest level. If graduate students aren't able to work problems out with their professors or in a departmental review, they can go to the Graduate College to file a formal grievance.

James Jakobsen, associate dean of the Graduate College, said a formal grievance procedure is rarely used since most students come to the Graduate College informally.

"We talk to a number of students on an informal basis. As far as formal grievances, there are less than a dozen a year," Jakobsen said.

In the formal grievance procedure, the involved parties sit down with Sims in order to reach a solution. If the parties are still unable to come to a decision, a committee made up of faculty and students from the Graduate Council will be put together.

Sims said there are other steps that can be taken if a student is still dissatisfied. The university ombudsman, arbitration and eventual legal action can be taken.

Jakobsen stressed that most students come to the Graduate College offices to gather information and explore their possibilities.

"Quite a few students want to explore the situation and look at possibilities rather than to file a grievance immediately," he said.

ELECTION IN FEBRUARY OR MARCH

Bargaining unit to be OK'd at brief meeting

Maria Hickey
The Daily Iowan

A stipulation finalizing the graduate student bargaining unit is expected to be signed today by representatives of the UI administration and the Campaign to Organize Graduate Students / Service Employees International Union Local 150.

"We have every reason to believe this will be a brief and cordial meeting," COGS / SEIU Local 150 co-chairwoman Julie Monroe said.

If the tentative agreement reached at a meeting Nov. 23 is followed, the bargaining unit would include teaching assistants, research assistants, and law research assistants. Saturday and evening adjunct instructors will be reclassified so that they will also be included.

Graduate employees must have at least one quarter-time appointment to be included under the definition. Currently, this would include approximately 2,500 graduate employees. Graduate students who don't provide services to the university or those with grants or funding will be excluded from the definition.

"We're assuming there will be no changes in the tentative agreement and we'll just go in and sign," said Monroe.

She said the organization was happy when they compared their list of inclusions and exclusions in the bargaining unit with that of the UI's and found no discrepancies.

UI Vice President of Finances Mary Jo Small said since COGS / SEIU is comfortable with the definition, the university plans to adhere to the original agreement.

"We're very pleased that we've been able to work constructively with COGS representatives," Small said.

COGS / SEIU needs to have at least 30 percent of the bargaining unit sign a petition in order to hold an election. They have already reached the needed percentage, and the signatures are still coming in, Monroe said.

Although they don't have an election date set, she said it probably will be held in February or March.

"We've gotten a good response from a lot of different departments," she said.

KILLING THE WINTER GRAYS

Students tone their skin at local salons

Prasanti Kantamneni
The Daily Iowan

It's the middle of December in Iowa and the sun is nowhere to be seen, but several people on campus are sporting a bronze glow.

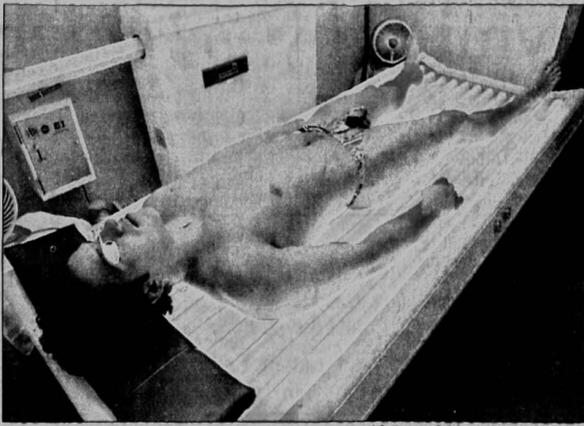

Kim Stern, owner of No1 Sun Tan and Travel, 100 S. Linn St., said "A lot of people tan because they travel over the holidays. But 90 percent of the people tan just to feel and look better."

Stern said many people also tan to relax.

"Tanning is warm, comfortable and relaxing," she said. "It is proven that UV light produces a hormone that helps the body relax."

The number of people who tan changes with the seasons, said Ron Miller, manager of Nautilus Health Spa, 213 E. College St.

"More people tan during the winter, especially during February and March because they are getting ready for spring break," Miller said. "A lot of people are getting ready for a vacation. They want to get a base tan so they can protect themselves from the sun during

David Guttenfelder/The Daily Iowan

Those who are looking for a little color during the gray winter months can pay for the UV rays at local tanning salons. Chris Crociani, who is a stripper for Little Joe's Entertainment and the Men of Beverly Hills, says tanning booths are a beauty aid for him.

their vacation."

Most people buy tanning packages, Miller said. Once they get a base tan, many tan only once or twice a week to maintain it.

The tanning business has been experiencing many changes. More men are tanning than ever before, Stern said.

"About 95 percent of the people who tanned a few years ago were women. Now, about 70 percent are women and 30 percent are men," she said.

UI sophomore Dawn Gaskill works at a tanning salon.

"Many people don't think guys tan, but just about as many guys as girls tan," she said.

Another change in the tanning business is the increase in professional people who tan, Stern said.

"A few years ago it used to be only college students. Now a lot more professional people are tanning," she said. "We have people with darker complexions, such as Asians and Native Americans, come in to tan all the time. A lot of them come in to even out their skin tone."

Both Stern and Miller believe tanning can be beneficial if it is not abused.

"Moderation is everything. The negative effects of tanning are a lot more evident when tanning is abused," Stern said. "Under regulation and supervision there are a lot of benefits to tanning."

MOTIVE UNKNOWN

Teacher murders 1, wounds 2 at meeting

Yuri Kaplana
Associated Press

CHelsea, Mich. — A high school teacher walked out of a staff meeting Thursday and came back with a gun, fatally shooting one person and wounding two others, police said. The teacher was arrested almost immediately.

The shooting at Chelsea High School happened about an hour after classes ended, during a meeting between administration and staff, police said. A motive wasn't immediately known.

The gunman allegedly left the room and came back moments later with a weapon, opening fire. He then went to another building, where he was arrested.

"I found him sitting in a chair in the classroom by himself. He said 'hi,' and he was taken into custody," said Police Chief Lenard McDougall.

"He was quiet, very quiet." A 9 mm semiautomatic gun was found outside the building, police said.

Joseph Piasecki, 47, superintendent of Chelsea schools, died at Chelsea Community Hospital of multiple gunshot wounds, spokeswoman Kathleen Griffiths said.

English teacher Phil Jones was treated at the hospital and was to be released later Thursday.

Principal Ronald Mead, 43, was reported in good condition with a gunshot wound in the left leg.

"This is a small, close-knit community," Griffiths said of the village about 15 miles west of Ann Arbor. "This has been devastating for us."

McDougall said school administrators and staff were holding a meeting when one of the staff members left the room. He didn't know what the meeting was about.

The gunman "came back a few minutes later. He opened the door and he shot one of the administration four times as near as we can figure and then he shot two others," McDougall said.

Bob Heil, who had picked up his son at the school, said two school employees "came bursting through the door saying, 'Get out of here immediately. There's a man with a gun and shots have been fired.'"

Margaret Steele, wife of village President Richard Steele, said her husband had called warning her not to take her usual afternoon walk at the high school track.

"He said there were a couple shootings up at the school," Mrs. Steele said.

Their son, Richard, is a senior at the school, but had left before the shootings, she said.

"Our little town Chelsea. I guess it's getting a little close to home," she said.

CHARGES DENIED

Rapper's alleged rape victim tells of threats

Samuel Maul
Associated Press

NEW YORK — The victim of an alleged sex attack by rap star Tupac Shakur has had her life threatened and has been warned to drop the case against him, a prosecutor said Thursday.

Assistant District Attorney Melissa Mourges reported the alleged threats at Shakur's arraignment on a nine-count indictment charging him and two other men with the attack on the woman in a hotel suite Nov. 18. All three are free on bail.

Defense lawyer Michael Warren denied that anyone from Shakur's entourage had threatened the woman, who has received an order of protection from the court.

Moul said people called the woman's workplace four times on Dec. 1 and told one of her co-workers: "Better drop the charges. We know where you're at." And: "Tell her to drop the charges or we'll smoke her."

Recently, a man posing as a cable TV repairman entered an apartment house looking for the woman, Mourges said. The intruder questioned people entering the lobby and tried to get into apartments where people with names similar to the victim's lived, she said.

"Obviously no one benefits by threatening or intimidating the victim but the defendants," Mourges told the judge. But she did not ask him to revoke the defendants' bail.

Survey: Public school violence now more common

Carole Feldman
Associated Press

WASHINGTON — Eleven percent of teachers and 23 percent of their students have been victims of violence in or near their public schools, according to a survey that suggests schools have become a place where children "learn to cope with the daily fear of being harmed."

Thirteen percent of the students said they had carried weapons to school at one time, mainly to impress others and make themselves feel important, according to the Metropolitan Life Survey of the American Teacher.

"Whether it is the shooting death of an associate principal in a Wisconsin high school, the self-inflicted wounds of a north-east D.C. teen-ager who carried a gun into school, or the stabbing death of a Manhattan student over a pair of sunglasses, there seems to be no refuge from the culture of violence," said Harry Kamen, chairman of MetLife.

There were 33 homicides in schools or on school grounds last year. So far this year, there have been six, according to William Modzeleski of the U.S. education department.

Though the survey found violence to be widespread, it said it occurred predominantly in urban schools and in those with poor academic standards.

Teachers and students said the most frequently reported violent incidents involved pushing, shoving, grabbing, slapping, verbal insults and stealing, according to the study.

Attorney General Janet Reno told a day-long conference on school violence that incidents among schoolchildren cannot be addressed without looking at society at large.

"What good does all the work of the schools do if they go to the world of violence in the afternoon?" she asked. "What good does all the supervision in the day mean if they go to a world where there is no supervision, no parent and no structure?"

She said parents, educators and community leaders must work together. "We've got to teach children now that you don't solve problems by guns and fists and knives," she said.

The study said 6 percent of the boys and 1 percent of the girls had threatened someone with a knife or gun in or around school. Those with poor grades were more likely to make the threats, the survey said.

Five percent of the students — and 21 percent of those with poor grades — said they had threatened a teacher.

Teachers and police officials attributed the problem to a lack of supervision at home, lack of family involvement in schools and exposure to violence in the media.

Students said violent acts occur most often because of provocation from others, trying to impress friends and jealousy over a boyfriend or girlfriend.

Students committed 95 percent of the violent acts against teachers, according to the survey.

The survey said teachers more likely to have been victims of violence were those who believe their school provides only a fair or poor education and those who teach at schools with mostly minority students.

GORE SIGNS ACCORD

Associated Press

Vice President Al Gore and Russian Prime Minister Viktor Chernomydin, right, raise their glasses Thursday after signing several agreements between Russia and the U.S. in Moscow.

U.S., Russia pen deal for stabilizing reforms

John King
Associated Press

MOSCOW — The United States and Russia signed space and investment accords and traded promises of goodwill Thursday, determined to show that political tumult would not stymie Russia's reforms or friendship with the West.

"The mood and spirit of our deliberations has been extraordinary," Vice President Al Gore said as the ink dried on 17 agreements, including a 300-page contract adding Russia to the international space station project. "I found the Russian leadership in a positive, determined and confident mood, committed to moving ahead with democracy and reform."

Despite the public celebration, a senior administration official with Gore said the electoral success of nationalist, anti-reform leader Vladimir Zhirinovskiy and the depressed Russian economy had convinced the administration that Western allies need to reassess their Russia aid strategy before President Clinton's January summit with Russian President Boris Yeltsin.

"It is inevitable that the West ... will have to grapple in a new way with the basic question of how Russia is pulled toward recovery and reform and away from the edge of the slope represented by Zhirinovskiy," the senior official said, speaking on condition of anonymity.

The official said Clinton believed nationalists like Zhirinovskiy would only gain strength if Russia's economy is not turned around, so the president is determined to do something. Western aid so far has been "historic, but insufficient," the official said, but added that "a lot of conversations have to take place before we can say" whether Clinton would seek a major new Western aid package.

The official predicted a new Russia strategy would be a major subject of the NATO summit immediately before Clinton meets Yeltsin.

The U.S.-Russian space cooperation deal heralded by Gore was struck months ago and Thursday's ceremony was arranged merely to sign the contract. The new investment accords were relatively modest, including a $125 million grant for Russia to buy energy efficiency equipment and new joint U.S.-Russian ventures in gold mining, heavy engine manufacturing and nuclear power plant safety.

Court won't decide in Ill. fetus case

Debra Hale
Associated Press

CHICAGO — The state's highest court refused to enter a dispute Thursday over an attempt to force a pregnant woman to have a Caesarean section to save her endangered fetus.

The Illinois Supreme Court's two-sentence order upheld an appellate court ruling and effectively ended an appeal by Cook County Public Guardian Patrick Murphy, the fetus' court-appointed guardian.

"The case is over, the mother doesn't have to have the operation," said Supreme Court spokesman John Madigan.

Authorities went to court to force the unidentified woman to have the C-section to save the fetus from death or severe brain damage. Murphy argued that the fetus' rights prevailed over the mother's.

Doctors say the fetus, which at 37 weeks is one and a half weeks shy of full term, is being deprived of oxygen and will die or suffer severe brain damage unless it is surgically removed from the womb.

The 22-year-old Chicago woman, identified as "Mrs. Doe" or "Mother Doe" in court papers, says God will protect her fetus through miracles, according to records.

SECRETARY'S TESTIMONY RELEASED

Ethics Committee receives Packwood tapes

Larry Margasak
Associated Press

WASHINGTON — Sen. Bob Packwood's tape-recorded diaries were delivered to the federal courthouse Thursday, after sworn testimony that Packwood made alterations last fall when he realized investigators would subpoena them.

The Senate Ethics Committee, which sought the materials for its inquiry into alleged sexual and official misconduct by Packwood, has now expanded its probe to determine "whether there was any perjury or obstruction," Senate Legal Counsel Michael Davidson told a court hearing.

U.S. District Judge Thomas Jackson signed an order to seize the materials.

Federal law makes it a crime to alter or falsify "any documentary material" sought by a federal agency or congressional committee. Davidson said it does not matter whether the Ethics Committee's subpoena actually had been issued at the time of the alleged alteration.

The Ethics Committee, which went to court to enforce a subpoena for Packwood's diaries, Wednesday released copies of its sworn deposition of Cathy Wagner Cormack, a former Packwood secretary, who has been transcribing his diaries for more than 24 years.

Davidson said, "At the very time the senator began his deposition (to Senate investigators) October 5th and 6th of this year, he was in the process of revising his diaries."

The newly released testimony showed that Cormack told the committee that Packwood took back tapes from her last fall and later returned them with alterations.

Asked why he did that, she testified: "As best I can recall, he said something about the possibility of a subpoena, and he didn't want me to have anything in my possession if that were to occur."

The Senate voted Oct. 20 to subpoena Packwood's diaries, a demand the Oregon Republican has so far defied.

Packwood's lawyer, Jacob Stein, told Jackson the subpoena is a broad general search prohibited by the Fourth Amendment and a violation of the senator's Fifth Amendment right against self-incrimination.

There is also a criminal investigation of Packwood's conduct under way at the Justice Department, which separately subpoenaed the diaries.

Stein argued the subpoena would allow the committee to "rummage at will through Senator Packwood's personal diaries in search of possible misconduct."

He said the committee believes

"it has the right to get anything" and has taken the attitude, "whatever we find, that's what we want." That's the horror.

Stein argued the committee's expanding investigation is like a balloon that "gets bigger and bigger. Where is the end of it?"

Jackson said the court would take custody of the diaries until he decides whether the Ethics Committee should gain access to the materials it demanded — those from the start of 1989 to the present. A decision is not likely until early next year.

The Ethics Committee began its probe by investigating allegations that Packwood made unwanted sexual advances to more than two dozen women, including Senate employees, and tried to intimidate some of the accusers to keep them quiet.

While Packwood willingly provided diary entries related to those items, he cut off access when the committee discovered 1989 material on a lobbyist's job offer to Packwood's wife. Packwood's action then triggered the committee and Justice Department subpoenas.

A Senate transcript shows that Packwood took the side of Mitsubishi Electric Co., which was represented by the lobbyist, in a Senate hearing on unfair trade practices in late 1989.

Cormack said she knew Pack-

Packwood: diaries altered?

wood altered the diary tapes because there was "background noise or, you know, just a difference in volume. I believe once or twice there might have been a break which was irregular."

She said Packwood used "sort of a body language" to confirm to her that he had altered the tapes, but she could not recall if he also flatly stated that he did so. In addition to changing the tapes, Cormack said, Packwood had her change written transcripts.

she said. While sometimes she wishes it never happened, Gleason has learned from the arrest.

"I have accepted it and pled guilty. I know I made a mistake," she said. "But I'm human. It could have just as easily happened to someone else."

UI senior and tennis team member Laura Dvorak said sometimes people forget athletes are students too.

"I'm not sure it's fair to single athletes when they get in trouble," said Dvorak, who has never been arrested. "I understand we represent the school and people look up to us, but we're still students like everybody else."

Gleason agreed. "I feel everyone is accountable for their wrong and right doings," she said. "But I don't feel just because I'm an athlete I should be exploited." She said the same is true for the good news — academic achievements of athletes shouldn't be publicized more than those of other students.

"I feel everyone is accountable for their wrong and right doings. But I don't feel just because I'm an athlete I should be exploited."

Kristy Gleason, UI field hockey player

When someone becomes a member of a UI sports team, they are told about the athletic department's policy on alcohol and drug use, which states:

"It is the goal of the Board in Control of Athletics at the University of Iowa to achieve a drug-free environment in which competitive intercollegiate athletics programs are conducted."

The department's brochure explaining the Drug Education and Testing Program for Student Athletes states that a drug-free environment is important for three reasons: to protect the health and safety of all student-athletes, to provide assistance for those who are found to engage in substance abuse, and to prevent an unfair competitive edge by those who abuse certain chemical substances.

UI Associate Athletic Director Fred Mims feels the athletic department does a good job of achieving a drug-free environment by following up on athletes who have been arrested for alcohol violations and testing athletes when appropriate.

"I think our program is as thorough as it can be," he said. "It has all the components to be as much of a service to each student as possible."

Bowlsby said alcohol violations are taken seriously by the department, and a substance abuse protocol has been developed.

"After the first positive test for alcohol or drugs, the athlete will go into our counseling program," he said. "The second will result in suspension from games or practice for a period of time, along with continued counseling."

A third violation, he said, can result in permanent suspension.

Mims said the counseling program focuses on education.

"It's a good process that not only educates those who may already have some problems, but it acts as a deterrent to substance abuse as well," he said.

In hopes of preventing many athletes from getting to the protocol stage, Bowlsby said, the department offers educational programs about drugs and alcohol, academic success and time management at least once every semester.

"It's a tremendous commitment being an athlete," he said. "Athletes are put in the situation where they're devoting a tremendous amount of time to their activity, and they need a lot of structure."

the way they are treating the water to see if they can find a way to make it less corrosive. With the help of the Howard R. Green Company, he said the water plant will submit such a recommendation to the Iowa Department of Natural Resources by Jan. 10.

"The DNR then has a six-month period to approve the recommendation," said. If approved, the UI water plant will have two years to implement the program.

"Our data indicates that our water is totally and completely safe," Lloyd said. "If there were any dangers at all, there wouldn't be a two-year period for us to fix the problem."

The best way to reduce exposure to lead in drinking water, Lloyd said, is to flush the cold water tap for about thirty seconds, especially if it has been unused for several hours.

"We certainly don't want to minimize our problem," he said. "The DNR estimates that about 25 percent of Iowa's water systems will fail these new EPA lead and copper limits for tap water."

intended to hold hearings as soon as Congress reconvenes on Jan. 25 and hoped to have Inman "on board" as soon as possible.

"I think he's an excellent choice, very popular on Capitol Hill," said Rep. Lee Hamilton, D-Ind., and chairman of the House Foreign Affairs Committee.

Senate Republican leader Bob Dole of Kansas called Inman "a very good person for the job." And Rep. Larry Combest, R-Texas, ranking Republican on the House Intelligence Committee, said Inman would mean a boost for morale inside the Pentagon.

But Dole and other Republicans said Inman could have some of the same trouble Aspin had had with Pentagon budget cuts ordered by the White House.

Dole said of Aspin, "I think that's probably why he left."

Inman's toothy grin is well known inside Washington power circles, where he is respected as an incisive thinker with a direct and gentlemanly style.

After retiring from the Navy in 1982, Inman worked with a number of high-tech and computer information firms in Texas.

More recently he has remained in Austin and done consulting work, served on corporate boards and taught at the University of Texas.

He served in the Carter administration in the late 1970s as the nation's youngest head of the super-secret National Security Agency. President Reagan tapped him as No. 2 man at the CIA, a post he resigned in 1982 because of policy differences.

Inman's image on Capitol Hill ran so high that he was unanimously confirmed by the Senate for the CIA post, and even granted four-star status in the deal.

He is one of a handful of "restricted line officers" who reached the four-star status after spending most of his nearly 30 years in the Navy's intelligence field.

Opposing the 'sex-act policy'

The Campaign for Academic Freedom (CAF) is an organization open to anyone concerned about attempts to curtail classroom freedom. Its meetings run according to democratic principles. Members present vote on every action. The group is organized into several active, open committees.

At CAF's public, open meetings, there is no attempt to control ideas, nor do members experience personal pressure to conform to the political style of others in the group.

It is precisely the independent and open nature of the organization that has allowed it to be so effective in taking on the Board of Regents over the "sex-act policy." They have brought pressure to bear on the regents from academic and civil liberties groups of national repute. Publications covering the policy have included The Chronicle of Higher Education, Lingua Franca and The New York Times. You don't put together such a portfolio if you're spending all your time trying to control the thoughts and affiliations of your membership.

The simple fact is this: If we escape the next couple of months without falling under a permanent atmosphere of intimidation and stunted discourse in our classrooms, we will have CAF — and each member's unique political and social vision — to thank.

LETTERS

Threatened by the women and 'squishy men'

To the Editor:

Clearly Raymond M. Tinnian has a problem with women who speak the truth about our realities in the world (Dec. 13, D1). The reality for many women is that we live in fear of male violence, because we have experienced it and/or know others who have. To deny that many women have been victims of men's violence is to deny reality.

Tinnian's preoccupation with men who see that male violence is wrong ("squishy men") is a clear example of the uneasiness that is produced when men are not so obviously collaborating with the terrorism and silencing of women.

To control women, men have raped, threatened and terrorized us for thousands of years. In order to make these methods more effective, men have then silenced the women who speak about these tortures and denied that they ever happened. The denial also serves to make women question their reality and to think they're crazy, or "hysterical" — a belief men have encouraged. This is still happening today and is most obvious when women speak the truth about childhood incest. The denial encountered from the accused and all those involved in keeping the abuse quiet is staggering.

It is understandable that a man who is still in denial of the atrocities that men commit against women would be threatened by other men who are talking about the truth and, certainly, the women who are no longer being quiet.

Name-calling means argument is finished

To the Editor:

I am writing in response to the letter to the editor in the Dec. 6, Daily Iowan titled, "Free speech used for oppression." Most importantly I want to thank its author, Ms. Julia Daugherty, for writing that letter. It proves that the political left-wing is the generator and maintainer of intolerance.

The author cites right-wing conservatives as the cause for almost every social and political problem imaginable. According to the author, if you are conservative and (the author inferred) a white male, you are automatically racist, sexist and homophobic. You suppress free speech and are against minority rights. Some of my conservative friends who are black or female would be quite surprised to find out that they are anti-women and anti-minority. I thought tolerance was the practice of recognizing and respecting the opinions, practices, or behavior of others. I don't know about you, but I detect a tinge of intolerance in my socialist friend's comments.

The author also makes the accusation that conservatives suppress free speech simply because they oppose the political correctness movement. PC dictates what terminology is "acceptable" in order to be sensitive and compassionate to certain ethnic and minority groups. Haven't my left-wing friends ever heard of "sticks and stones"? The reason that PC is under such criticism is that mainstream America sees how childish and absolutely ridiculous it actually is. It's simply rhetoric, symbolism over substance. I'm one Western-European-Caucasian-American who judges people on their merit and character. Conservative commentator Rush Limbaugh often refers to PC as "political cleansing," since the PC movement wants to cleanse the speech of Americans. That sounds like intolerance to me.

The letter informed me that my views are promoting an atmosphere of intimidation on campus. I feel very secure in my beliefs. I don't feel threatened or intimidated by an opposing viewpoint from the left-wing majority on campus. So I ask my socialist friends, if you feel secure in your beliefs, why should you feel intimidated by mine?

The political debates I participate in often lead to my left-wing counterpart calling me a bigot, accusing me of being backwards-thinking or insensitive. I call these "argument enders." When my counterpart uses one of these terms, his argument has ended. He can no longer support his views with substance, so he turns to personal insults. In the case of Ms. Daugherty's letter, her argument and her tolerance both ended with the first sentence.

DAVE ASH

Seemingly random nocturnal meanderings

It's 2:38 a.m., Thursday of finals week. For the last three hours I have been attempting to study for the International Marketing final I have to take in roughly seven hours, with incredibly limited success.

For some reason it seems that there are other things I'd rather be doing. My less than laser-like focus on the finer points of global marketing might be the result of this being the fourth final I've had in as many days and the fact that I've slept less in the last week than an insomniac on crack. Possibly the duration of my attention span has been adversely affected by the pony keg of coffee I've had to drink in the last twenty-four hours. In any event, I can't concentrate on anything remotely related to what I'm supposed to be studying. I'm in finals hell. The mind wanders uncontrollably.

2:45 a.m. I begin thinking of other definitions of hell. The definition of hell is sitting next to Ross Perot on a long flight and being forced to ask, "So what do you think about NAFTA?" The definition of hell is being trapped inside a Kenny G concert. Also: sitting through "Sister Act 2."

3:04 a.m. I begin thinking about titles for pornographic movies based on names of restaurants. All I can come up with is "Pizza Sluts."

3:21 a.m. I begin thinking about what my name would be if I were a rap star. I decide my name would be "Grand Master M.C. Snoop Dave."

3:45 a.m. I start considering several questions I've thought of recently with no ready answer:

1) Now that Fred "Gopher" Grandy is running for governor, will democratic candidates ask for equal air time every time a rerun of "The Love Boat" is shown?

2) If LaToya Jackson and a donkey exchanged brains would anyone notice?

3) If you killed an MTV VJ, would you go to jail?

4) What if the actress who plays the really smart girl with glasses on "Beverly Hills 90210" begins menopause before her character loses her virginity?

4:17 a.m. I've got a good idea for a topic for an installment of "The Sally Jesse Raphael Show": "In-bred Family Members Who Are Technically Their Own Fathers."

4:52 a.m. I decide that if Saint Thomas Aquinas were a rapper his name would be "DJ Fresh Tom."

5:01 a.m. I attempt to come up with names for pornos based on titles of great novels. All I can think of is "Pleasure Island" and "Wuthering Dykes."

5:07 a.m. I've got another idea for a topic for "The Sally Jesse Raphael Show": "Co-dependent Transsexual Lesbians Who Are In Conflict With Their Inner Children."

5:37 a.m. I try to think of new names for Prince. So far I've got "the sign for infinity" and "the symbol for the deutsche mark."

5:40 a.m. I try to think of who is the most soulful singer in "New Kids on the Block." I have to go with Joe.

6:12 a.m. I've come up with a title for a term paper written by a sorority sister: "Really Bitchin' Accessory Ideas From Shakespeare's 'Macbeth.'"

6:35 a.m. I decide that if I were a Japanese porno actor my name would be "Ku Kong Shlong."

6:52 a.m. I decide to make a list of the all-time greatest Caucasian dunkers in the history of the NBA. I'll come back to this one.

7:04 a.m. I consider registering for one of those classes athletes take in order to remain eligible. "Introduction to Sticky Things" sounds interesting.

7:10 a.m. If Pope Pius XII were a rapper his name would be "Funky Ice Pius."

7:11 a.m. I really need to start concentrating on studying. I can't remember anything I've been reading. I decide to resort to mnemonic aids. I'll remember the five basic steps to formulating an international marketing plan: (1) Set Goals (2) Decide on Course of Action (3) Execute Strategy (4) Redefine Goals (5) Begin Process Again with the phrase "Greasy Debutantes Eat Gopher Butta." I decide this is how alternative bands get their names.

7:34 a.m. I reach the conclusion that someone other than myself will get the high score on this test. I decide that if I sit close enough to a monkey randomly filling in the answer sheet ovals, I would consider cheating off him. I've got to do something, but I can't concentrate. I think I need to get in one of those Zen states like those karate guys, where my mind is clear and I am one with my knowledge. I decide I'll relax during the exam by imagining Marsha Brady taking the test in her underwear.

8:12 a.m. There can be no more distractions. The exam will begin in less than two hours. This is my time. For the next hour and a half my name is Mr. Study Man. I will absorb the text like an incontinent sponge. I'll start by reading the topic sentences of the chapter summaries. I'm all over this one.

Then again, I'm really tired and if I don't get some sleep I will lose it. I'll set the alarm for 9:30. From 9:30 on I'm a study machine.

A sequel to the Korean War?

Is there another Korean war looming on the horizon? One could certainly draw that conclusion from the recent furor. "North Korea cannot be allowed to develop a nuclear bomb," said President Clinton on Nov. 7. "We have to be very firm about it."

Some have feared that the ultimatum might spur a North Korean invasion of South Korea. But in fact, it highlights a fundamental difference between today's crisis and the Korean War. This time North Korea has been put on notice that vital U.S. interests are involved. In 1950, precisely the opposite message was conveyed.

In an address to the National Press Club in January, 1950, Secretary of State Dean Acheson publicly excluded Korea from the U.S. defense perimeter in Asia.

Troops stationed in South Korea at the end of World War II to disarm the Japanese occupiers and then buttress the development of democracy in the fledgling Republic of Korea (ROK) had been withdrawn the year before. The effect of these U.S. actions was to isolate South Korea from outside support.

An attack from the communist-controlled North was thus unintentionally encouraged. For while South Korea was isolated, North Korea (and the Soviet-installed Kim Il-sung) was part of what was then termed the communist "monolith," under the personal direction of Josef Stalin.

The Korean War, it was believed at the time, was not over Korea, but instead part of a larger communist scheme to extend the Soviet Empire by force of arms. Accordingly, the United States sent more troops to Europe, where it was thought the main attack would come, rather than Korea. After China's intervention in the war in November, 1950, U.S. military strategy changed from the strategic offensive to the strategic defensive, where the best possible result was not military victory but battlefield stalemate.

That was achieved with the Korean Armistice of 1953, which remains in effect today. But much has changed in the intervening forty years. Now there is no ambiguity about U.S. support for South Korea. President Clinton made that plain during his first visit there last year. South Korea is the one place in the world, he said, where U.S. military force levels have not been cut. The ROK is now clearly well within our defense perimeter.

The aged Kim Il-sung knows full well that an attack on South Korea would trigger an immediate U.S. response. And he also knows full well that it is now North Korea, not South Korea as in 1950, that is isolated in the world community. While there is now general agreement, contrary to the conventional wisdom of the time, that it was Kim Il-sung, not Josef Stalin, who instigated the Korean War, there is no doubt that Kim Il-sung knew he could count on the Soviet Union and China for their full support.

Conservative estimates are that China alone lost some half-million soldiers on Korean battlefields, with another million wounded. And both the Soviet Union and China furnished untold millions of dollars in arms and equipment to North Korea before and during the war.

But, if it ever existed, the communist "monolith" is no more. For both political and economic reasons

Moscow and Beijing now have more to gain through better relations with Seoul than with Pyongyang. In 1950 most of Korea's manufacturing and mining industries were in the North and the South was an agricultural poor relation. Now South Korea is one of Asia's "little tigers."

With a population of some 22 million, North Korea's 1991 gross domestic product was $22.9 billion. South Korea, with a population twice as large, had a 1991 GDP of $289.9 billion.

With more than a million men under arms, North Korea's military is almost twice the size of South Korea's 633,000-man force. But the South Korean military is no longer the ill-trained and ill-equipped force of the 1950s. It is by all accounts one of the best military forces in the world. And, with the end of the Cold War, the United States is no longer on the strategic defensive. Free of fears of Soviet or Chinese intervention, it is once again able to bring its offensive powers to bear.

Thus, the danger of a conventional war on the Korean peninsula is virtually nil, for the outcome is preordained. Although it might make some initial gains, North Korea knows that without Chinese and Russian help it could not sustain such an offensive, and this time such aid is not in the offing. That's the good news. The bad news is that it is just this ebbing of North Korean power that makes it so reluctant to give up the one lever it has left — its nuclear weapons potential.

Warden under arrest following bloody prison riot

1 MEXICO CITY, Mexico (AP) — A warden was jailed in the state prison he used to run, a day after clashes between inmates killed 15 and wounded at least 10.

Roberto Moreno Amud, who was suspended hours after the Tuesday riot, will be prosecuted, an official told the state-owned news agency Notimex. He was locked up on Wednesday.

The official did not say what charges Moreno Amud will face, but state attorney general Luis Rivera Morales de Oca said earlier that the warden "might be involved in coercion, abuse of authority, concealment, and unlawful exercise of his functions."

The riot took place at a prison in Almoloya de Juarez, about 100 miles southwest of Mexico City. Local newspapers said 150 inmates were involved.

At least 300 police and guards surrounded the prison, and a police helicopter hovered over the compound. Authorities regained control by mid-afternoon.

Police say 3 stolen paintings recovered

2 STOCKHOLM, Sweden (AP) — Police have recovered three of the six Picassos stolen last month in Sweden's biggest art robbery, investigators said Thursday.

The recovery followed the arrest this week of two suspects. Prosecutor Sven-Erik Alhem said the paintings were found in Stockholm, but declined to give further details.

The two arrested, identified only as Polish men in their early 20s, have not been charged but remained in police custody.

The recovered works are Picasso's "Woman with Blue Collar," from 1941; "Dragonfly," from 1929; and "The Painter" from 1930.

Those works, along with a Picasso statue and two other Picasso paintings, plus two by Georges Braque, were stolen Nov. 8 by thieves who cut through the roof of the Museum of Modern Art. The artworks were valued at $60 million.

Police didn't comment Thursday on the whereabouts of the remaining pieces, but have said they believe the stolen goods are still in the country.

German recognition of Macedonia sure to anger Greece

3 BONN, Germany (AP) — Germany established diplomatic relations today with Macedonia, the Foreign Ministry said, a move that is sure to infuriate Greece.

A ministry spokesman, who spoke on condition of anonymity, said other European Community countries were also expected to establish relations with the former Yugoslav republic. The official did not say which countries.

The Macedonia issue has chilled relations between Greece and some of its EC partners for two years, as Greece has lobbied against international recognition for its neighbor, demanding that it change its name.

Athens says the name is historically Greek and that its use by Skopje implies claims on the northern Greek province called Macedonia.

Earlier in the day, Chancellor Helmut Kohl said Germany and "a number of other" EC countries were planning to recognize Macedonia. Asked when recognition would come, Kohl replied, "It's a matter of days."

Media reports over the weekend suggested recognition would come before January, when Greece assumes the rotating presidency of the European Community.

Toddler kidnapped 2 years ago returned to parents

4 DESSAU, Germany (AP) — A toddler kidnapped when he was 12 weeks old has been found and returned to his parents, police said Thursday.

Wilbert Grusser was found in the western German city of Duisburg, about 25 miles north of Bonn, in the care of a woman and her companion, said police spokesman Ralf Becker, head of the search team.

Wilbert, who was kidnapped in 1991, was given medical tests to prove his identity and returned to his parents Tuesday, the spokesman said. He was apparently healthy, he said.

The boy was found at the home of a 30-year-old German woman and her 28-year-old male companion, who are suspected of kidnapping him, Becker said.

The woman had had a miscarriage several months before the kidnapping, he said, adding that no other motive for the kidnapping was uncovered.

Becker said his team had tracked down dozens of tips received over the past two years on his possible whereabouts.

The names of the suspects were not released.

Wilbert was kidnapped on Nov. 12, 1991 from a baby carriage his mother parked at the entrance of a shop in the eastern city of Dessau while she went inside to make a purchase.

Iraq's chemical weapons nearly destroyed, U.N. official says

5 MANAMA, Bahrain (AP) — Destruction of Iraq's chemical arsenal under the terms of the 1991 Gulf War cease-fire is months away from completion, a U.N. official said Thursday.

Cees Wolterbeek, a Dutchman heading a 24-member team eliminating Iraqi chemical weapons stocks, told reporters that "by the end of February it could be all finished."

He said fewer than 100 barrels of nerve agents and waste products were left to be destroyed, as well as containers of raw materials, a few rockets and several hundred bombs capable of carrying chemical warheads.

With proper monitoring of Iraqi imports and the knowledge of dual-purpose industrial facilities that U.N. experts have accumulated, Iraq will no longer be able to acquire a chemical weapons potential, Wolterbeek said.

The U.N. Special Commission overseeing the elimination of Iraq's weapons of mass destruction said this week that 28,332 munitions, 84,918 gallons of chemical warfare agents and 382,393 gallons of raw materials already have been destroyed.

Wolterbeek said 23 warheads for long-range Scud-type missiles, some filled with chemicals, were among the destroyed items.

Iraq fired scores of Scud-type missiles at Saudi Arabia and Israel during the Gulf War, but none carried a chemical payload.

Tuntex signs agreement to turn former U.S. bases into theme parks

6 MANILA, Philippines (AP) — Tuntex Group of Taiwan signed an agreement with Philippine officials Thursday to develop two former U.S. military bases into a theme park.

President Fidel Ramos witnessed the signing ceremonies at the presidential palace.

Vicente Lim, chairman of the Bases Conversion Development Authority, said the agreement allows Tuntex to develop the former Camp John Hay in the mountain resort city of Baguio and the former Wallace Air Station in nearby La Union province into an integrated tourism complex.

The development is to include an international airport, a mountain resort, a light industry park, a sports arena, hotels, restaurants, a golf course, condominiums and other facilities.

The plan calls for Tuntex to put up investments worth $1.55 billion within five years.

John Hay was a U.S. military rest and recreation area and Wallace served as a communications and air defense station for the U.S. Air Force.

Both bases were turned over after the Philippine Senate rejected a new lease for the Navy's Subic Bay facility in 1991.

24 bodies recovered in plane crash

7 NAGA, Philippines (AP) — Rescuers recovered 24 bodies Thursday from the wreckage of a military plane that crashed while flying relief supplies to a typhoon-ravaged area.

Authorities were unsure how many people were aboard the C-130, which slammed into a hillside and exploded Wednesday while making a final approach to an airport near Naga, about 150 miles southeast of Manila.

The original manifest listed 28 passengers, but several prominent Filipinos, including congressmen and wives of Cabinet members, who were supposed to have been aboard backed out at the last moment because of bad weather.

The area was hit last week by Typhoon Lola, which killed at least 163 people.

Brig. Gen. Nicanor Rodriguez, commander of the Philippine air force, blamed the crash on pilot error and on bad weather that obscured the rugged mountains west of the airport.

Provincial Police Director Jose Angeles quoted residents as saying the crew was dumping some of the 28-ton cargo moments before the crash, possibly in an attempt to lighten the load and gain altitude.

Iowa football picks up another defensive end

IOWA CITY AP) — The University of Iowa is stocking up on defensive ends in its football recruiting.
Iowa received a commitment this week from Mike Darlington, a 6-foot-5, 215-pound defensive end and quarterback from Morris, Ill. Two other defensive ends committed to Iowa earlier — Jared DeVries of Aplington-Parkersburg and Chris Knipper of Dyersville Beckman.

Darlington considered Illinois, Michigan, Michigan State, Wisconsin and Boston College before settling on Iowa.

Two other Illinois high school players have committed to Iowa — 6-5, 265-pound lineman Derek Rose of Naperville and 6-6, 278-pound lineman Mike Goff of LaSalle.

Iowa also has commitments from Matt Reischel, a 6-5, 255-pound offensive lineman from Greendale, Wis., and linebacker-tight end Matt Hughes of Eastland, Texas.

Presidents oppose college football playoff

In light of the NCAA Presidents Commission's recent request to study the financial impacts of a football playoff, the Big Ten Council of Presidents / Chancellors Thursday reaffirmed its unanimous opposition to a playoff system.

"Big Ten Presidents and Chancellors reaffirm this is not the time to establish further competitive pressures in the sport of football by extending the season," said Arnold R. Weber, Northwestern University President and chairman of the Big Ten Council of Presidents / Chancellors.

UI president Hunter Rawlings could not be reached for comment.

Gwinn remembered at funeral

COLUMBUS, Ohio (AP) — Ohio State defensive end Jayson Gwinn was remembered Thursday as an unselfish young man who never let adversity melt away his warm smile or dim his outlook on life.

About 2,100 mourners, including Gwinn's teammates, attended a memorial service at Mershon Auditorium on the campus.

Gwinn, 20, was killed Sunday in an auto accident less than a mile from Ohio Stadium. He had just sought medical treatment for a teammate who had been shot in the buttocks after an altercation outside a nightclub.

"I believe ... Jayson's going to play football again. The next time he plays, he will play for the master coach ... and they'll go unbeaten. Jayson is a champ," said Ohio State coach John Cooper.

Players' union may not approve extra playoffs

The head of the baseball players' union doesn't know if his group will approve the proposed extra round of playoffs in time for next season.

"They said they want to start a new and different relationship and for cooperative bonds — partnership is the word they used — but these have been the most traditional of negotiations from the clubs," Donald Fehr, executive director of the Major League Players Association, said Thursday.

Owners in September approved the plan to double the playoffs to eight teams and split each league into three divisions, but players must agree to any changes in the postseason setup. Currently, they receive 60 percent of the ticket receipts for the first four games of each league championship series and the World Series.

Semester grades handed to Hawkeyes

Kris Wiley
The Daily Iowan

Iowa coach Tom Davis has some semester grades of his own to hand out to his men's basketball team.

"In terms of effort and willingness, you'd go just about as high as you could go. In terms of execution and 'X and O' stuff, we've got a lot to learn," Davis said at a press conference Thursday.

"There are certainly things we don't do very well. What we don't do well isn't because they aren't trying. You're proud of that as a coach. On the one hand, it hurts you because you know you haven't done a good enough job of teaching this and teaching that, but realistically, some of it just takes time," Davis said.

In particular, Davis said Iowa will need to work on its transitions. "We're pretty good on the first thrust of the fast break, but then to get from the fast break into what you're going to run offensively, that's a transition from the fast break to the offense, and we're not very good at that," he said.

"The same thing is true defensively. We're pretty good on the pressure, and we really play pretty good dropback, but we're not pretty good in between."

Freshman power forward Jess Settles thinks the team is developing on schedule.

"I don't think we could work any harder. We have to get sharper, especially on offense and getting back on defense. I think the effort's been there, but we have a lot to learn. We're still pretty young," said Settles, who is averaging 12 points a game.

The Hawkeyes (4-1) have a busy winter break, playing seven games in the next month. They begin by hosting Dartmouth Monday at 7:05 p.m. before playing No. 3 Duke Wednesday at Carver-Hawkeye Arena in a nationally televised game on ESPN. Tipoff is scheduled for 6:35 p.m.

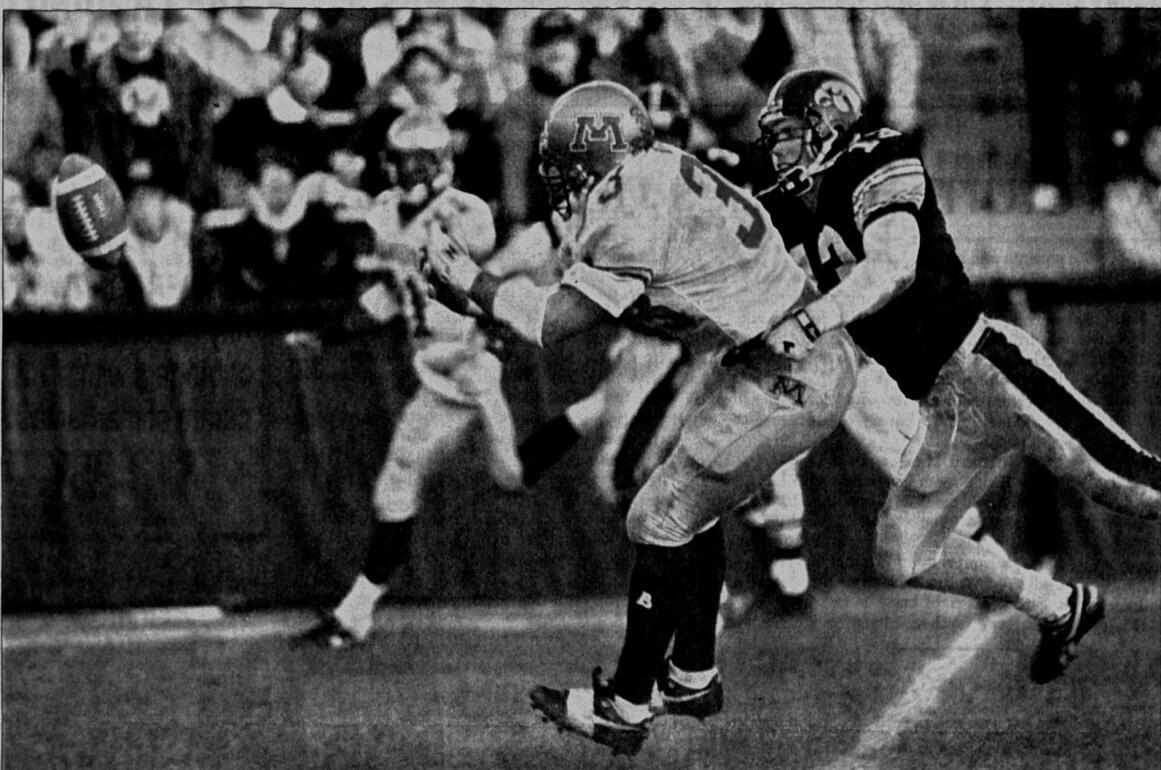

After Christmas, Iowa will travel to Cal-Irvine Dec. 29, host Eastern Illinois Jan. 2 at 1:05 p.m., and go to Ohio State Jan. 4 before playing Michigan Jan. 8 at 2:05 p.m. and Indiana Jan. 11 at 6:35 p.m. at Carver-Hawkeye.

When asked about the Big Ten women's basketball teams' decision to begin a postseason tournament, Davis said it is a good idea. Although he is supportive of a men's tournament as well, Davis doesn't think it will become reality in the near future.

"My view is that it will remain tabled until they need money. If we have another bad year where we don't get as many in bowls and maybe our tournament take in basketball starts to go down, they're going to need increased revenue, and (a tournament is) sitting out there waiting to be tapped," Davis said. "The time isn't right right now to go to the tournament."

Iowa defensive back Jason Olejniczak tackles a Minnesota player during the Hawkeyes' 21-3 win over the Gophers Nov. 20. Olejniczak and the 6-5 Hawkeyes head to San Antonio, Texas, to play the Cal Golden Bears Dec. 31 in the inaugural Alamo Bowl.

Coaches to face off again

Roxanna Pellin
The Daily Iowan

The last time Iowa coach Hayden Fry and Cal coach Keith Gilbertson were opponents, the Hawkeyes lost to Washington 46-34 at the 1991 Rose Bowl.

But history won't be a factor when Cal meets Iowa New Year's Eve, Gilbertson said. He said looking at the 1991 Rose Bowl next to this year's Alamo Bowl is like "comparing apples and oranges."

"This is a different football team in Cal than the one I went to Pasadena with," he said. "I'm sure Hayden feels like this is a different Iowa team going into San Antonio than the one he went to Pasadena with."

Gilbertson was the Huskies' offensive line coach during the 1990 season and later offensive coordinator at Washington before becoming the head coach at Cal in 1992.

Iowa will face Cal in the inaugural Alamo Bowl Dec. 31 in the Alamodome in San Antonio, Texas. The game will be broadcast at 8:30 p.m. on ESPN.

While Fry agreed this year's matchup is a "different environment altogether" from the 1990 season, he said Cal is similar to the Washington team he faced Jan. 1, 1991.

"A typical Pac-10 team, in terms of speed and quickness," Fry said. "They'll put nine or 10 guys, maybe 11, up on the line of scrimmage, just like Washington did two years ago. We don't know who's coming, who's dropping off. You can't read the defense, so it's a guessing game. We'll be better prepared, we just don't have the experienced athletes on this ballclub that we had at the Rose Bowl.

"He's got a real good ballclub. We've got a real young ballclub that's really coming on."

The Hawkeyes finished the season at 6-5 on a four-game winning streak. The Bears ended up at 8-4, winning their last three games.

Key injuries to Cal quarterback Dave Barr and running back Lindsey Chapman put the team out of Rose Bowl contention when the Bears lost four consecutive games midway through the season.

Gilbertson said the season's finish was especially gratifying since his team was ranked low in the preseason Pac-10.

"We really struggled putting the nucleus of our starters and our best players together," Gilbertson said. "We really fell off in terms of productivity, defense, offense, scoring and everything. I was really pleased with our guys. It was going bad and things were a struggle, but we hung in there and when we got back together we were a fine team again."

"All of the prognosticators and people who pick how you are going to finish said that we would be fortunate to win three games. We felt real good about what we've accomplished. We're just thrilled to have the chance to go to the Alamo Bowl and play a fine Iowa team and coach against Hayden Fry, one of the real legends in football."

Due to various injuries, 20 different players have started on the Cal defense. The Bears' defense gave up an average of 396 yards per game, but allowed 556 yards during a four-game stint.

Fry said he expects to see a healthy Cal defense.

"The thing I remember more about Pac-10 teams that we've played is they're just demoralizing on defense," he said. "They crowd the line of scrimmage because they can play man-to-man defense. They can run faster than we can. Even their linemen run fast. They do a good job utilizing what they have. It's wide open, they really throw the ball, blitz a lot. They have safety blitzes. It's a different philosophy out there."

Defensive tackle Mike Wells said Cal being favored could be an advantage for the Hawkeyes.

"They're so confident and everything, that just inspires us," he said. "We're working really hard in practice, and we hope to make a really good game out of it even though we're real big underdogs."

A dominant Cal defense may be one reason why the Bears are 10-point favorites, Fry said.

Oilers can close AFC Central

Dave Goldberg
Associated Press

What more can happen to the Houston Oilers this season?

The Oilers, on an eight-game winning streak, go into Pittsburgh on Sunday with a chance to lock up the AFC Central championship. They also go into the game in a state of shock following the apparent suicide of defensive tackle Jeff Alm.

The Oilers are trying to play through it and they could — the Detroit Lions used the paralyzing injury to Mike Utley two years ago to lift themselves into the NFC title game.

But this is a little different for Houston, which three weeks ago beat the Steelers 23-3.

Spencer Tillman urged general manager Mike Holovak to call in a psychologist to help the team deal with the trauma of Alm's death.

In that light, to talk about odds and betting seem silly.

But Pittsburgh, which seems back on its up elevator after winning in Miami Monday night, is favored by 3½ points.

In light of everything ...

Hurley may return to Kings next season

John Howard

Associated Press

SACRAMENTO, Calif. — Bobby Hurley, recovering dramatically from automobile crash injuries, should be released from intensive care soon and could be back at point guard for the Sacramento Kings within a year, doctors said Thursday.

Specialists at the University of California Medical Center said Hurley, 22, a two-time All-American at Duke and the Kings' No. 1 draft pick this year, was mending quickly, due in part to his peak physical condition, from last Sunday's accident.

"It looks like he'll be removed ... today or tomorrow" from intensive care, Dr. F. William Blaisdell, chief of trauma surgery, said during a hospital news conference attended by Hurley's parents and hospital officials.

"There's no question that we were really impressed with this young man's recuperative powers," Blaisdell said. "His recovery has been as dramatic as one ever sees. In the last 24 to 48 hours, it (his condition) has been one of dramatic improvement."

Doctors said Hurley could leave the hospital in a week if his recovery continues at the current pace.

Dr. Richard Marder, an orthopedic surgeon and a Kings team physician, said Hurley could return to the court in "about 9 or 10 months."

Hurley suffered a range of injuries — a severed left lung, broken ribs, a fractured shoulder blade, a compression fracture in the lower back and a soft-tissue back injury. He also has torn tissue in his right knee.

Hurley's mother, Christine Hurley, said her son was increasingly alert. "He's doing much better. Today, he asked for a television VCR. He's actually doing therapy," she said.

Last Sunday, Hurley was thrown from his light-sized truck into a ditch near Arco Arena after his vehicle collided with a station wagon driven by Dan Wieland, 37, a house painter. Wieland suffered a broken leg.

Police investigators reported that tests showed an amount of amphetamine in Wieland's system, but that further tests are needed to determine if the drug played a role in the accident.

On Wednesday, detectives interviewed Hurley in the hospital. He told them that Wieland was driving without lights when the crash occurred, officers said.

Wieland has denied taking any drugs, or that his lights were off.

Iowa starts season at Shakespeare's

Todd Heffernan

The Daily Iowan

The Iowa women's gymnastics team has a short vacation before its first official meet of the season, a Jan. 16 date in Columbia, Mo., for the Shakespeare's Festival.

The Hawkeyes' first and only competition of this season was at the Black and Gold exhibition on Dec. 11, where the Gold team registered a 112.2-104 victory. The Gold team was led by sophomore Kim Baker, who won the floor exercise and vault competitions en route to winning the all-around competition.

The Shakespeare's Festival opens a quick start for the Hawkeyes, and is the only invitational Iowa is scheduled for this season. The Hawkeyes will compete in three meets in two weeks following the festival.

Iowa hosts its home-opener against Southeast Missouri State Jan. 22 and then travels to Michigan State Jan. 29 to face the Spartans. The Hawkeyes also host Northern Illinois Feb. 5.

"I think we'll do really well because we've improved a lot since last year. If everyone hits their routines we should be able to win the meet," sophomore Shelly Burns said.

Burns is one of three returning all-Americans, along with Baker and junior Cathy Terrell, who will lead the Hawkeyes this season.

He said the Bears are among the top 10 teams in the nation when they are healthy.

"I love this ballclub and what they've accomplished, but I wish they would have been one of my stronger ballclubs to go down there," he said. "We'd have a better chance. Maybe that will help motivate the coaches, me in particular, to get them really prepared. It could be a big embarrassment playing this Cal team."

Gilbertson disagreed with his team being favored.

"I think Hayden's team should be favored based on the fact that he has 200 wins, and I have 40," he said. "I tried to figure this out at breakfast with my wife. I said, 'Hayden's got 200 wins, I've got 40. For me to get 200 wins, I'll have to coach until I'm 73 years old.'"

"Hayden's just an awesome figure in college football."

Bad year for NFC Central

Mike Nadel
Associated Press
Once known as the Black-and-Blue Division, the NFC Central is now mostly just Bad and Boring.

How boring?
Three of the four contenders — the Detroit Lions, Chicago Bears and Minnesota Vikings — have lost to perennial division doormat Tampa Bay. The fourth, the Green Bay Packers, barely escaped the Buccaneers' fury.

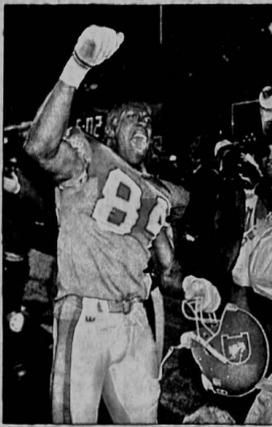

None of the five teams rank in the top half of the conference offensively. None has a quarterback with more touchdown passes than interceptions. Detroit's Barry Sanders is hurt and the division's No. 2 rusher, Chicago's Neal Anderson, has 3.2 yards per carry.

At 8-5, the Packers and Lions have the worst records of any NFL division leaders. Even more noteworthy: Chicago (7-6), with the league's 27th-ranked offense, and Minnesota (6-7), quarterbacked by a Chicago reject, both still have realistic shots at the division title.

Yes, in what many observers consider the least aesthetically pleasing season in recent NFL history, it doesn't get any uglier than the NFC Central.

Vikings coach Dennis Green said the division gets a bum rap: "It's just more defensive-oriented. And that's the way it's always been."

True, the Vikings rank first in

Associated Press

Broncos wide receiver Shannon Sharpe celebrates after Denver beat Kansas City 27-21 last Sunday. The Broncos meet the 7-6 Bears Sunday.

NFC defense, the Packers second, the Lions third and the Bears fifth.

But is that because the teams have great defenses? Or is it because each gets to play eight of 16 games against the inept offenses of the other division teams?

The men who stand behind center stand at the center of the division's woes.

The five quarterbacks who have started the majority of their teams' games — Detroit's Rodney Peete, Green Bay's Brett Favre, Chicago's Jim Harbaugh, Minnesota's Jim McMahon and Tampa's Craig Erickson — are in the bottom eight of NFC rankings.

Lions coach Wayne Fontes has gone from Peete to Andre Ware to Peete to Erik Kramer.

And Fontes might not be through juggling even though Kramer helped the team beat Phoenix last week.

Hawks to qualify for Winter Cup at West Point

Todd Hefferman
The Daily Iowan
After performing at the annual Black and Gold exhibition Dec. 4, the men's gymnastics team has almost a month off of competition before traveling to the West Point Open, a very important road trip to West Point, N.Y.

The West Point Open is a qualifying meet for the Winter Cup, which is the winter version of the U. S. Championships. To qualify for the Winter Cup, gymnasts competing in the senior division must score in the top 28 to qualify, while the junior division has a cutoff at the 15th best score. Scores will be examined if the participants have entered all of the events.

Freshman Sean Juguilon has already qualified for the Winter Cup. He holds one of the six spots already reserved at the Cup by being a member of the Junior National Team.

Masucci, sophomore Jay Thornton, and freshman Tyler Vogt will all try to represent Iowa at the Winter Cup competition.

The Hawkeyes also travel to Chicago for the Windy City Invitational, where they have been successful, winning in 1985, 1987 and 1991.

"It gives you a pretty good idea of how you stand," Dunn said.

Hawkeyes to 'hang out' in sunny Florida

Mike Egenes
The Daily Iowan

Lately, the weather in Iowa has been relatively mild compared to previous years, but apparently not warm enough for the Iowa men's swimming and diving team to hang around the Midwest.

The Hawkeyes travel to the International Swimming Hall of Fame training camp in Fort Lauderdale, Fla., Jan. 2.

The 15-day trip will serve as additional training as the swimmers make their Glenn Patton final preparations for the postseason, which begins Feb. 24 with the Big Ten Conference Championships at Minnesota's facilities in Minneapolis.

Iowa coach Glenn Patton calls the trip "a return to a natural environment."

"Everyone learns to swim outdoors," Patton said.

"Swimmers like to get out and swim in the sun. It will be nice for us to get out."

The training camp, which will host 1,800 college swimmers from around the country, is sponsored by the College Swimming Coaches Association of America.

"We (Iowa) have been going back there off and on since about 1935," said Patton, who served as president of the CSCAA from 1989-90. "We've had such a good time there in the past, that we just wanted to keep going back."

The coaching staff will be focusing on further improvement of physical conditioning.

"We'll work on stroke technique, starts and turns. But it will also give us a little mental break," Patton said.

The swimmers are scheduled to train at the Field House Pool facilities Dec. 18-23 before the two-week stay in Florida.

Conditioning during winter break for the Hawkeyes will consist of two workouts each day and weight training for the team in between.

"It will be the toughest training of the entire season," Patton said.

Let the joyous holiday revelry begin!

Tad Paulson
The Daily Iowan

"My head feels like a frozen pineapple." — Lazarus, replying to an inquiry about his health after being raised from the dead by Jesus (later revived in the abhorrent film version of "Less Than Zero").

The still, chilly evenings of Iowa City have been relatively mellow so far this December. It's been a sneaky winter season; we have yet to witness the vomitous downpour of snow, sleet and ice. Things have been oddly, serenely quiet. Students have been bent over books for weeks, studying for exams and slurping down beers at shadowy corner tables.

But all of this placid silence is about to erupt into a bloodcurdling shriek this weekend. Finals are over and Christmas break has commenced. Brace yourselves. Ancient Rome hath returnethed.

Expect to see naked frat boys swinging off the top of buildings, grasping strings of Christmas lights, this weekend. Expect to see many a violent melee between whiskeyed-up reindeer and doped-out elves — both parties being out on a final blast-off before relinquishing their holiday working hours to the fat, white-bearded man up north.

As always, Iowa City bar owners are stocking up for the occasion, washing hundreds of pint glasses and loading both barrels of hidden shotguns. Expect teeming hordes to be stumbling around the Iowa City Yacht Club, 13 S. Linn St., Saturday night, hoping to catch a glimpse of legendary blues siren Koko Taylor (see story below).

Among the other virulent music pursuits this weekend:

• Tonight at the ICYC, local band Sheltering Sky will hold a CD release party for its new pack o' tunes, Travellin' the Land. Like other local faves High and Lonesome (who've been napping recently while lead crooner Dave Zollo tools around Europe), Sheltering Sky is a relatively young band that finds stronger musical feet and a broader audience with every gig. Go check it out, ladies and gents.

• Iowa City's pleasure dome of music, Gabe's, 330 E. Washington St., has a blow-out weekend planned for all of you starved, over-studied students. Tonight the bar will host the smashing euphoria of the Blues Instigators, featuring the ballsy, resonant vocals of front man Kevin "B.F." Burt. Saturday night the bar will host the reggae haze of Tony Brown and the Landing Crew — a rousing act not to be missed (unless you have Koko Taylor tickets).

• If finals have left you totally bush-whacked, then The Sanctuary Restaurant and Pub, 405 S. Gilbert St., may be the resting place for you this weekend. The Steve Grismore Quartet and the Bob Washutt Quartet — two fine, exceedingly talented jazz ensembles — will play tonight and Saturday night, respectively. Have some pizza and kick back, man.

• The Mill Restaurant, 120 E. Burlington St., Iowa City's folk refectory, will host the acoustical pickings of Larry Myer tonight and Saturday night.

That's it for this round of weekend roundups. Take note, if you're staying in town, of the Iowa City premieres of the much-acclaimed "The Remains of the Day" (with Anthony Hopkins and Emma Thompson) and the Julia Roberts-Denzel Washington flick "The Pelican Brief."

Have a merry Christmas, and heed my warning — fruitcake and tequila don't mix. I speak from experience.

Naked Gypsies to play benefit

Shayla Thiel
The Daily Iowan

Although the Brazilian rain forests are thousands of miles from Iowa City, a local business is reminding us that the rain forest is not such a foreign concern. The New Pioneer Co-op will sponsor a Rainforest Benefit Dance with the band the Naked Gypsies Saturday at 8 p.m., 10 S. Gilbert.

Proceeds from the benefit dance will be given to Team Rainforest, a California group linked to Cultural Survival, an environmental group whose members visit rain forest sites. However, New Pioneer has specific projects in mind for the money.

"We wish to actually provide taps for the Cobaiba trees in the forest which are used for their oil that is put in beauty products," said Donna Palmer, New Pioneer's marketing representative. "They usually just slash them with machetes and let the oil run all over the ground."

"In addition to that project, we hope to help with reforestation by establishing tree seedling nurseries," she said. "The cost for each is just over $100, so we hope to earn enough from the benefit dance."

The dance will be 8 p.m.-12 a.m. and admission is $4.

LIFE IN HELL

Queen of the Blues Koko Taylor to return to roots in club concert

Ian Corwin
The Daily Iowan

Is renowned blues singer Koko Taylor touring in support of her 14th album, Force of Nature, or is she just touring to support the blues in general? When you've been around as long as Taylor has, a new record seems to be just another volume in the oeuvre, more fodder for a live assault; and whether it's new songs or old favorites, a Koko Taylor attack on any live venue is not to be missed.

The Daily Iowan

Editor's note: The following are some responses to Stuart Reid's "Top 10 albums of 1993" column. Space limitations kept us from printing everyone's alternate top 10 lists, but here are a few of the better-argued recommendations. Think "last-minute gifts."

Verve — A Storm in Heaven. Floats like a butterfly, stings like a bee.

Madder Rose — Bring it Down. Hey, for once Spin magazine is right. Enjoyable.

Tool — Undertow. Harsh yet delicate, emotional.

Living Color — Stain. Best yet. Obscure, yet not too obscure, like their 2nd CD was.

Rush — Counterparts. Best three-piece ever.

Michael Zachmeyer

Pearl Jam — Vs ... Come on, think about it. A band that sells almost 1 million copies within its first week without any MTV video is quite an accomplishment in this video generation. Aside from that, it is one of the best rock albums ever.

Kate Bush — The Red Shoes. Kate takes on another journey with very unique style ... this album is very diverse. Three listenings and you will like it.

Smashing Pumpkins — Siamese Dream. A high-energy, explosive album. Winding guitars and vocals make this a great one.

Suede — Suede. You would have had to have lived in an igloo to not have heard the band's name this year ... You must check this album out.

Jamiroquai — Emergency on Planet Earth. This album is one of the best albums of the decade ... this disc left my player probably three times this year and that was to let people borrow it.

Paul Arnell

Viraflo — Liquidpitymingle. I realize these guys aren't mainstream and haven't even released a real album yet, but they are a real treat to listen to.

Fishbone — "Give a Monkey a Brain ..." Headman Angelo Moore gives Fishbone tons of energy and their psychadelicfunkrock really gets you going.

Porno for Pyros — Porno for Pyros ... Sounds nothing like Jane's Addiction, but is still typical Perry Farrell and no one should miss this one and people who judge Porno for Pyros on the basis of the song "Pets" shouldn't.

A Tribe Called Quest — Mid- night Marauders. Q-Tip's and Phife's lyrics are the best in the business and the music that goes with it is top-notch.

Rage Against the Machine — Rage Against the Machine. An awesome band to mosh to ... All of their songs make you want to go out and box 10 rounds or go out and pick a fight with someone 10 times bigger than you.

Brian "Woody" Whitaker

The Mummies — Play Their Own Records. '60s garage slop. I've talked to these guys and they know what's up. Bad recording, but angry heartfelt funk!

Jack-o-Fire — Jack-o-Fire. Blues for the '90s. Noisy, sloppy, influenced by Little Walter and Hound Dog Taylor.
