Vietnam vets advise lifting trade sanctions

Jim Abrams
Associated Press

WASHINGTON — Twenty years after the last American soldier left Vietnam, two senators who bear the scars of that war helped convince their colleagues Thursday the time has come to lift trade sanctions.

It's time to "put the war behind us," said Sen. John Kerry, D-Mass., a Vietnam veteran who was wounded three times. Better relations will enhance the search for MIAs, said Sen. John McCain, R-Ariz., a former POW who spoke of going to sleep every night in prison camp "memorizing the names of those who were with us" so they would not be left behind.

The 62-38 vote urging the administration to lift the trade embargo "expeditiously" was not binding, but it provides considerable impetus for the administration as it moves toward normalizing relations with the former enemy.

Veterans' groups, most strongly against relaxing restrictions on Vietnam until there is a full accounting of Americans still missing from the war, were angered by the vote.

"We were somewhat stunned that they didn't listen to the veterans and families" who feel Vietnam is still not forthcoming on the POW-MIA issue, said Phil Budahn, spokesman for the American Legion.

Yet it was the Vietnam veterans in the Senate — led by Kerry and McCain — who were the most eloquent in urging an end to the enmity and the beginning of trade relations.

"If you want to serve the families, you will vote to lift the embargo. If you want to put the war behind us and act in a statesman-like fashion and move to the future and protect the interests of this nation, you will vote to lift the embargo," Kerry said.

McCain spoke in a hushed voice of his own six years in captivity in

Henning moves for new trial in hit-and-run case

Lawrence Henning, convicted of vehicular homicide in the death of 13-year-old Chris Harding, has made a motion for a new trial.

Henning was acquitted of leaving the scene of a fatal accident, but found guilty of vehicular homicide after striking Harding as the teen rode his bike on Highway 921 last summer.

Henning's attorney has asked the court for arrested judgment and a new trial on the grounds that the jury received evidence out of court, namely Henning's three previous OWI convictions. He also submitted a motion for a change of venue, saying that a previous request was overruled erroneously.

A hearing on the combined motion is scheduled for today.

Rawlings address included in speech compendium

UI President Hunter Rawlings' 1992 university convocation address has been included in "Representative American Speeches 1992-93." The volume, part of a series called "The Reference Shelf," is published by H.W. Wilson Company of New York.

Other speeches recognized include President Clinton's inaugural address, former President Bush's farewell address, and speeches by Secretary of State Warren Christopher and author Carl Sagan.

Summer commencement to be held at Carver-Hawkeye

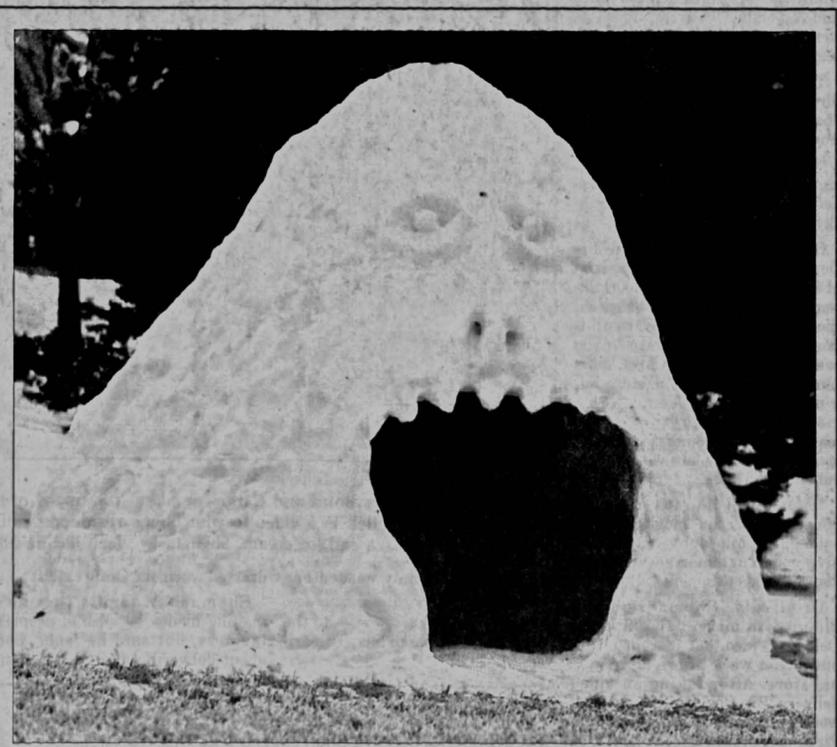

Because of the planned renovation of Hancher Auditorium next summer, 1994 commencement ceremonies following the summer session are set to be held Saturday, Aug. 6, at 9 a.m. in Carver-Hawkeye Arena.

The decision follows a recommendation from a committee representing students, faculty and administration.

The fact that Carver is not air-conditioned played an important role in scheduling a morning ceremony. Because the arena will accommodate a larger crowd, undergraduate and graduate ceremonies will be combined.

SAYS SHE COMMITTED NO CRIME

Harding admits knowledge of attack

Bob Baum
Associated Press

PORTLAND, Ore. — Tonya Harding, her hands trembling and voice shaking, admitted Thursday she didn't tell authorities what she knew about the attack on Nancy Kerrigan and pleaded for "my last chance" at an Olympic gold medal.

Harding denied "prior knowledge" of the attack on her figure skating rival, saying she learned details of the Jan. 6 assault in Detroit shortly after returning to Portland Jan. 10.

The U.S. Olympic Committee said it was "deeply concerned" about Harding's admission that she failed to come forward with that information.

The USOC and the U.S. Figure Skating Association have said Harding could be removed from the Olympic team if she is linked to the attack, and the USFSA Thursday created a panel to investigate her. It was the first step toward what could be her removal.

A source told the Associated Press that Harding's statement may have done her more harm with U.S. Olympic officials than anything that has come out so far.

"It is heating up the temperature," the source said. "What she said today came creeping very, very close to a lot of things. It could solidify a lot of thought."

Harding made her emotional admission following a 30-minute workout. She did not answer questions after reading the statement.

"Despite my mistakes and my rough edges, I have ... done nothing to violate the standards of excellence, of sportsmanship that are expected in an Olympic athlete," Harding said.

"I had no prior knowledge of the planned assault on Nancy Kerrigan," Harding said. "I am responsible, however, for failing to report things I learned about the assault when I returned home from nationals."

"Many of you will be unable to forgive me for that. It will be difficult for me to forgive myself."

Harding said she respects Kerrigan and is sorry the attack happened.

Stephanie Quintero, a close friend with whom Harding has stayed recently, said the skater was "very relieved" after making the statement.

The statement came as Harding's ex-husband, Jeff Gillooly, spoke to investigators for the second consecutive day in what a source said was an attempt to cut a deal in exchange for implicating her in the attack.

TV film to explore worship of Elvis

David Briggs
Associated Press

Men and women wave their hands in the air ecstatically, first spelling, then calling out the name of the man they have come together to praise. A Pentecostal revival? No, an Elvis festival.

A father pacing before his son undergoes a serious operation feels someone touch his shoulder, gets a "lovely, warm feeling" inside and knows everything is going to be all right. Did he think it was an angel upon his shoulder? No, Elvis Presley.

More than 16 years after his death, hundreds of thousands of devoted Elvis fans still revere "The King," holding festivals in his name, decorating their homes with his pictures, even praying to him.

Now, a British television documentary making its U.S. premiere Friday night raises the question of whether Elvis worship has become a religion.

"The King and Me," produced by Tullstar Productions and part of the weekly series "The Human Factor," will be shown on The Faith and Values Channel. The cable network, which reaches 20 million homes, will show the half-hour documentary again on Monday and next Thursday.

How well the late rock 'n' roll superstar has stayed alive in the popular imagination is indicated in the alleged sightings of Elvis regularly reported in supermarket tabloids. "The Two Kings," a new book from Bantam Books, satirizes the phenomenon by

TOUGH JUDGMENT CALL

P.E. skills requirement to see vote in 2 weeks

Heather Pitzel
The Daily Iowan

A recommendation to eliminate the UI physical education requirement struggled out of a committee Thursday to face the Faculty Assembly in two weeks.

Associate Dean of Liberal Arts Administration Jim Lindberg said it was a "close vote" in the Educational Policies Committee, where the debate over whether to retain the requirement has been mired since fall semester.

A coordinating committee last reviewed the pros and cons of keeping the General Education requirement in 1988 and several EPC members argue the group should gather new data and review the program to make this decision now.

"It's difficult for faculty to make a judgment they're completely comfortable with," Lindberg said.

During the meeting, EPC member Tim Robertson, professor of statistics and actuarial science, said if the reason for having the physical education GER is to build a lifelong interest in physical fitness, he couldn't understand why the UI exempts new students who are 23 years or older and transfer students with 60 or more credit hours.

A CALL FOR CENSORSHIP?

NOW wants stations to squelch degrading, violent music

Holly Reinhardt
The Daily Iowan

The Iowa City chapter of the National Organization for Women is asking 12 local radio stations to stop airing songs that promote violence.

Mel Dautremont, president of Iowa City NOW, said the request is being made in response to a Jan. 20 announcement that WBLB radio station in New York City would no longer play songs that encourage violent actions, or songs that are disrespectful to women.

"I thought it would be nice to do it in Iowa City as well," she said.

The request spans all types of music, including rap, pop, country and rock.

While some local radio stations are in support of the campaign, others feel regulating their music would be censorship.

"I agree with what they're doing, it is a worthwhile cause," Rob Norton, program director for KRNA 94.1 FM, said.

Rick Swann, program director for Q103 FM, agreed, but said radio stations should be able to make their own decisions to play appropriate songs.

"I think radio stations ought to police themselves and decide where to draw the line," he said. "It is unfortunate that they had to start the campaign."

Swann said Q103 reviews all songs before the decision is made to air them.

"If it is anything degrading we leave it out," he said. "We listen to every song before we play it. A lot of the more mainstream is what we select from — they don't use those lyrics. It's mostly the gangsta rap."

Norton said KRNA does not usually run into problems with the content of the songs it plays.

"We play zero rap music," he said. "We really don't play that type of stuff anyway. In the past we've had a few songs with sexual innuendoes."

Dautremont hopes listeners will take a positive message from certain songs not being played.

"It would be nice if listeners realize what they are hearing, instead of being brainwashed by the incessant repetition of those songs," she said.

Dautremont did not give the names of any specific songs or artists the group is targeting.

Swann said radio stations should be cautious about playing songs that are derogatory to anyone.

"Anything that's racist or promotes violence against a race or women should fall under that same context," he said.

The responses received by NOW have all come from radio stations that feel the request is censorship, Dautremont said.

"I acknowledge that, but I don't consider it to be negative," she said. "I'm sure a lot of people will be very into the First Amend-

New business delivers entertainment

Maria Hickey
The Daily Iowan

"Hey man, let's order a pizza."
"No dude, let's order 'Mystic Pizza.'"

Those late night urges can be fulfilled with one phone call to Big Dog Delivery Video. The store, which has been in business since mid-November, delivers videos as well as Domino's Pizza and Heys Ice Cream.

The owners, Bond and Catherine Shymansky, were both concerned about finding jobs after graduating from the UI.

"We thought we'd open a video store in Iowa City's saturated market that stood out," Bond Shymansky said.

Shymansky is trying to give Big Dog Delivery Video a more personal feel in a business that has traditionally been impersonal. He said the name Big Dog comes from his family's oft-repeated phrase "If you can't run with the big dogs, don't come on the porch." The store has a more relaxed feel because Shymansky does everything from learning his customers' names to accepting slightly late videos without charging a fee.

"People feel like it's a capital offense to turn in a movie late," he said. "My philosophy is that you give good customer service, and you get good customers."

Originally, Shymansky had planned to merge with Special Delivery Video, but it went out of business a week before he opened his store. After taking on video delivery, Big Dog also managed to work out contracts with Domino's Pizza and Heys Ice Cream. But Shymansky said they've been known to pick up extra items for their customers.

"This guy called around 11:30 and told me his wife was 8 1/2 months pregnant. She really wanted to watch 'The Breakfast Club' and eat some cherry cheesecake," he recalled.

Shymansky ordered the cheesecake at Hy-Vee and was able to deliver it along with the video.

When the store first opened, the delivery side of their business didn't catch on right away, but the number of calls shot up with the cold weather. Until the cold snap

T. Scott Krenz/The Daily Iowan

Big Dog Video owners Bond and Catherine Shymansky will not only deliver a video to your door, they'll also bring pizza and ice cream. Shymansky hit, Shymansky only needed one driver each night.

"We're really busy now — to the point that we have to have two drivers," he said.

"This guy called around 11:30 and told me his wife was 8 1/2 months pregnant. She really wanted to watch 'The Breakfast Club' and eat some cherry cheesecake."

Bond Shymansky, owner of Big Dog Delivery Video, recalling one of his more unusual delivery requests

UI freshman Matt Craig, who delivers for Big Dog, said last Monday night was the busiest driving night he has had. He braved the cold to bring videos and pizza to returning students who were not so willing to step out into the frigid weather.

"People were offering me hats because it was cold out, and they thought I should have been dressed warmer," Craig said. Shymansky admits that he's making money because of people's laziness, but said he feels good about delivering to students without transportation and to the elderly, especially during the cold weather.

"I felt like I was doing people an entertainment favor," he said.

UI junior Scott Mison said he calls Big Dog even though he lives across the street from another video store. He likes having videos delivered when the weather gets bad, but said he would walk to a store if Big Dog didn't deliver. "I probably would go out," he said, "but most people don't have a video store right across the street."

Michelle Rychnovsky lives in Daum Residence Hall and gets together with friends on her floor to watch movies. She likes having videos delivered since she doesn't have a car.

"It's kind of nice, especially when it's cold, and I don't have to walk over there," she said.

A video and delivery costs $3.99 at Big Dog and around $10 for a video and a medium pizza. For an extra dollar, a driver will also return the video the next day.

"Call us and get a movie and a pizza delivered, and it's cheaper than going downtown and ordering a pizza and getting a movie," Shymansky said.

Hey dude, I wonder if they'd deliver some friends too?

Football ball fans tackle plans for 'super parties'

Megan Penick
The Daily Iowan

A couple of cases of Lone Star beer and a plate of greasy buffalo wings may be just the proper symbolism for this weekend's big game.

"That's right, although it'll be Dallas and Buffalo going head-to-head at the Super Bowl for the second year in a row, many hardcore football fans say this is the time of year they live for.

Take avid Dallas Cowboys fan Chad Siegall, a UI junior.

He said he hopes to see a repeat of last year — same game, same party.

"Last year at the Super Bowl we decided to get a case. Every time Dallas would score, I would do a beer bong. It was just a drinking binge. We are planning on doing it again this year," he said. "No one will watch a Buffalo or Dallas game with us, because we go nuts."

"I want Buffalo to win. They've been there three times, so it's due."

Larry Blue, Iowa senior defensive end

Chris Martelli, a UI junior, Siegall's roommate — and wouldn't you know it — a Buffalo fan, said he's hoping for a better Buffalo turnout this year.

"Last year, I finished my beer at the first half of the game, and I don't remember much after that," he said. "I was just really drunk."

The UI residence halls are also planning festivities this weekend when Burge and Daum residence halls host a Super Bowl party in Burge's Main Lounge, featuring two big-screen TVs and pizza.

Party co-organizer and Burge Resident Assistant Katie Cook said anyone is welcome to come.

"We're going to have soda and chips and things, and we're just going to watch the game. It should be pretty fun," she said. "A lot of it's just going to be people stopping by... It's a social thing."

Iowa football players Larry Blue, Ryan Terry, Harold Jasper, Lloyd Bickham and Bobby Diaco all plan to get together to watch the big game, yet they won't be cheering for the same team.

Blue and Jasper are both natives of the East Coast and will be rooting for the Bills, while Terry hopes the Cowboys will win another Super Bowl.

"I want Buffalo to win," Blue said. "They've been there three times, so it's due."

Local bars are also expecting good turnout, but Sports Column bar Manager Donny Stalkfleet said that's to be expected.

"I'm going to make my famous chili, other than that — same old, same old. If it wasn't Dallas and Buffalo, we might do something different," he said. "Everybody will come here anyway, if they're going to watch it."

The Union Bar and Grill will have more than the usual drink specials, too. Manager Vince D'Agostino said there will be free beer from 4:30 to 7:30 p.m., with 25-cent hot dogs and dollar drinks after the game.

Meanwhile, the Iowa City Police Department isn't planning for anything special. Actually, according to Capt. Donald Strand, Iowa City is usually pretty quiet during the Super Bowl weekend.

"Usually not a lot happens. People stay at home and listen to the game or watch it on TV," he said. "The problems usually occur in those cities where one of the teams is from. I can't recall we've had any problems."

Firefighters host winter tournament

Jim Snyder
The Daily Iowan

Firefighters who use their hoses to fight fires across the state will turn the water on themselves this Saturday in Coralville.

In what has become an annual event on the last Saturday of January, approximately 500 firefighters will take part in their version of tug of war.

Two pools will be set up outside at Morrison Park in Coralville. Across the pools, a ball will hang from a string extending from opposite ends. Two teams of four people will use hoses to try to push the ball to the side opposite them.

"It's kind of like a party for firefighters," Coralville firefighter Len Winkle said. "It's generally a summertime event, but we decided to have ours in the winter."

The competition starts at noon and usually lasts all afternoon, Winkle said. The tournament is like a basketball tournament, teams advance in the bracket as long as they aren't beaten. There are no seeds, and team matches are picked randomly.

"If it's cold and windy we can get pretty frozen," he said. Anyone can come see the event, but the competition is only for firefighters.

Winkle said the event primarily attracts volunteer fire departments, like the one in Coralville. However, it is open to professional firefighters as well.

The seemingly inhospitable season for the battle attracts many, Winkle said.

"We're basically known for being this wacky one in the wrong season," he said. In years past the Coralville Fire Department has done well, but not so in recent years, said Winkle, who has been with the department for 11 years.

The event itself comes from a tradition of training, although it is now mostly for fun, he said. It still may have some real benefit, however.

"I guess it can give you an idea of what fire fighting is like in bad weather," Winkle said.

AFRICAN-AMERICAN ISSUES TO BE DISCUSSED

Students to partake in summit

Terry Collins
The Daily Iowan

African-American students from colleges and universities throughout the state will meet today in Ames to address issues on their respective campuses in the Statewide African-American Student Summit.

The summit, conceived by student leaders in a meeting this past December, includes group sessions and workshops, beginning with a rally today and guest speaker Maulena Karenga.

Karenga, the originator of the African-American holiday Kwanzaa, will give a speech describing the impact of late civil rights leaders Martin Luther King Jr. and Malcolm X.

Co-organizer Denise Pate hopes the workshop "How to Create Unity within the Academic and Social Environment" will identify problems such as racism and how to combat it.

"I hope the summit will bring attention to all university and college presidents that racism exists when they use words like 'multiculturalism' and 'diversity' when they describe their respective campuses," she said. "I think a lot of students are fooled when they come to schools in Iowa."

UI Coordinator of Student Services Belinda Marner, who will be a participant in the workshop "How to Approach and Utilize Your Administrators and Faculty" said this will be a good opportunity for students and faculty to learn more about each other.

"I want to learn how I can be more effective in my position as to working with students in general," she said.

Marner also expects good conversation to emerge from students and faculty in this workshop.

"My expectations are there will be some good dialogue and discussion about the issues that are of concern to the students," she said. "This will allow me to be more responsive."

UI Dean of Students Phillip Jones, who will also be a participant at the student and faculty workshop, said he hopes the weekend's impending weather conditions will not play a major factor for the summit.

"I want the students to exercise good caution when traveling," he said.

Summit co-organizer Traevana Potter-Hall said she thinks people attending will leave Ames feeling confident. The goal of the summit is to establish a network for African-American students across Iowa.

"I would like to see all the students who leave Ames after the summit confident, more assured of themselves and have a sense of empowerment," she said. "Our goal is to raise awareness of the issues, strengthen the alliance among African-American students and organize the efforts more effectively for the future."

Super Bowl 'Sundae' to benefit park

Molly Spann
The Daily Iowan

A gooey mound of ice cream, bananas and nuts will be scooped out of a swimming pool Sunday to help raise money for playground equipment in Coralville.

About 150 adults and children from around the area are expected to come to the afternoon event at the Coralville Recreation Center, said Gwen Sheeley, assistant recreation director at the center.

Sheeley said the Super Bowl Sundae activity is just one event planned to help fund the playground equipment for the new 30-acre North Ridge Park in Coralville.

"We have $80,000 going just in playground equipment," she said.

"We may find some other creative ways to finance it because the funds just aren't always there."

All ages can attend the first-time sundae building and eating frenzy, but Sheeley said the activity is especially planned for children.

"The kids will be the ones who build the sundae, and everyone eats it," she said.

A plastic children's swimming pool will be the bowl in which the sundae will sit, and ice will fill the bottom so the ingredients stay intact.

Sheeley said the children will be divided into age groups, and each group will have its special sundae-building responsibilities. The "stackers" will put the ice cream into the pool, and the "gooey-gophers" will throw on the toppings.

Next, the "banana bashers" will add bananas, and the "nutty-nutters" will put nuts on top. Finally, adding the finishing touches will be the "creamers" with gobs of whipped cream and the "maraschino munchkins" with the cherries.

When the sundae is complete, other children will scoop out the dessert for everyone there.

Sheeley was unsure whether all the ingredients would be used, but said there would be plenty on hand. There will be 150 pounds of vanilla ice cream, four cases of syrup, four cases of whipping cream and about 15 pounds of bananas, she said.

A fee of about $2 will be charged for each person attending Super Bowl Sundae, and all proceeds will go towards the playground equipment.

APPOINTMENT PROCEDURE CHALLENGED

Citizens' group calls for election; Board of Supervisors resistant

Eric Marty
The Daily Iowan

The vacated seat of Johnson County Board of Supervisors member Betty Ockenfels may not be appointed by board members after all. If a group of concerned Johnson County residents have their way, the matter will be decided at the ballot box.

Concerned Citizens for Democracy in Johnson County has begun a petition drive which would force the board to hold a special election to fill the seat that Ockenfels resigned from last week.

The county auditor, treasurer and recorder voted Monday to appoint a replacement rather than hold a special election, which would cost the county around $20,000.

"My decision was based mostly on the money, and I think that $20,000 is too much money for this type of election at this time," said Johnson County Treasurer Cletus Redlinger.

Concerned Citizens met Thursday night to begin organizing its efforts. UI graduate student and committee spokeswoman Jeani Murray said it is important to hold an election rather than appoint someone to fill the three years left on Ockenfels' seat.

"This is a basic issue. We live in a democratic society and the question is, do you think three people should decide this important position or the people of Johnson County?" she asked.

Murray said the problem could have been avoided if the board had recommended an election.

"My decision was based mostly on the money, and I think that $20,000 is too much money for this type of election at this time."

Cletus Redlinger, Johnson County treasurer, on his vote to appoint a replacement for Betty Ockenfels rather than hold a special election

"If the Board of Supervisors had supported an election from the beginning, then we could have piggybacked this election with the Senate and House election in a couple of months and gotten the best of both worlds," she said.

County Auditor Tom Slockett spoke to group members about the legal processes involved in running a special election and supports their bid for an election.

"It's worth the cost and this position should be filled at the ballot box and not by three men," he said.

Slockett said the supervisors oversee Johnson County's $30 million budget, and that board members have an enormous influence on how the county functions.

"There is no position that is as important in decision making in Johnson County than the Board of Supervisors," Slockett said.

The committee must gather 5,274 signatures, 10 percent of the residents who voted for president in 1992, by Feb. 18. While Murray knows her group faces an uphill battle, she remains optimistic.

"It's not going to be easy, but we wouldn't be working on this if we didn't think it would happen," she said.

Slockett expressed further concerns with appointing, rather than electing someone to this position.

"I think replacing Betty with another woman should be a priority," he said. "At this time the board has only one woman, and to my knowledge, the candidates they are considering appointing are men."

The League of Women Voters has boarded the petition bandwagon and is officially endorsing the petition drive.

"We are supporting this petition because we think it's important to ensure that people have the right to choose the officials that represent them," said League President Cathy Penningroth.

HOUSE TO TACKLE ABORTION

Parental notification to be focus of debate

Mike Glover
Associated Press

DES MOINES — A legislative debate over abortion rights will be limited to the issue of whether young women should be forced to notify parents about an abortion, Republican legislative leaders said Thursday.

Those leaders, some of whom staunchly oppose abortion, ruled out allowing debate over more strict restrictions on abortion.

"There's no wish to include anything in there which would outlaw abortion," said House Speaker Harold Van Maanen, an Oskaloosa Republican and abortion opponent.

The House is set to debate the parental notification bill next Thursday, the first full-blown legislative debate on the issue in more than a decade.

"I don't have any interest in taking that bill and making it into an abortion restriction bill," said House Majority Leader Brent Siegrist, a Council Bluffs Republican.

It is likely to be an emotional battle that won't divide along purely partisan lines.

A House committee has approved a parental notification bill that requires at least one parent be notified in advance when a young woman intends to get an abortion.

That bill allows a judge, minister or school counselor to be consulted, rather than a parent.

That provision was put in by moderates worried that young women afraid to tell a parent would be forced into illegal abortions.

"This is not going to turn into a debate on the total issue of abortion," Siegrist said. "I think the debate will be strictly on the parental notification issue."

He said pushing for too many restrictions could doom the best chance in years to get some restrictions.

"The proponents of the bill want to have parental notification pass, and they recognize that if they bog it down or put other things on it, it decreases the chances in the Senate," he said. "It's a debate on parental notification."

Abortion bills have been bottled up in legislative committees for years, but both the House and Senate became more conservative after the last elections.

STUDENTS FACE MORE COMPLEX ISSUES

Superintendent eyes future for youths

William Pepper
The Daily Iowan

For Iowa City Community School District Superintendent Barbara Grohe, education means more than going to classes, taking tests and getting grades. It also means preparing the next generation of this country's leaders.

"There has to be a process in the United States where we become responsible for everybody's children," she said. "This is the generation that will run the country when we grow old."

In an interview Wednesday, Grohe discussed a number of issues facing education today, including violence in the schools and the role of technology.

Crime and violence among young people has become a fiercely debated issue in many communities, including Iowa City, she said.

A committee of district administrators, police officers and residents in Iowa City drafted a policy that would provide strict punishments ranging from automatic suspension to an expulsion hearing for students who bring a weapon into schools or school sponsored activities.

Grohe said the proposal sends a clear message that weapons will not be tolerated. "This is a serious infraction and if you cross that line, there will be serious and immediate repercussions," she said. "That's the message that we want to get out."

Grohe said providing a strict policy to deal with weapons is important to ensure safety, but other issues like homelessness, abusive homes and poverty need to be addressed as well.

"I think some of the problem with the way we've stated it is we have said education's agenda is that children count," she said. "I think it has to be America's agenda."

She said along with policies on crime, communities also need to consider summer child care, human service agencies, elementary counselors and stronger connections with families.

"If we don't have both discussions, we will always have to talk about getting tough on children as criminals," she said. "We'll always be at the point where we're putting out the fires."

Along with the welfare of students, Grohe is concerned with broadening their education through technology. "Project School Net" is a computer network being developed which will link all the schools in the district.

Grohe said School Net will also be capable of linking with the statewide fiber-optics network which could greatly expand audio and video links between schools and other facilities across the state.

"The impact that it could have on public education is probably more than we can imagine," she said. "That's the fun part of education."

Grohe said the new computer and communications technology will give students limitless potential to be innovative.

"Some of those kids will challenge anything we've ever thought of," she said. "That really excites me."

However, the district may not be able to afford joining the fiber-optics network once it is completed. State estimates have put the cost of the network at about $100 million, and it may cost up to $100 million more for school districts in the state to be linked to it.

Danny Frazier/The Daily Iowan

"Will we be able to afford the very technique that is supposed to be able to change the face of education?" she asked. "I don't want it to be everywhere in the state and have the schools again be the last group that gets to use it. That doesn't make any sense to me."

EDITOR WANTED

Iowa City's morning newspaper is also Iowa City's largest newspaper, with an editorial staff of more than 50 young professionals, an editorial budget of more than $200,000 and circulation of 20,500. The Board of Student Publications Incorporated and the publisher of The Daily Iowan will soon interview candidates for the position of editor for the term beginning June 1, 1994 and ending May 31, 1995.

The editor of the DI must have strong journalistic abilities and dedication, as well as skills in management and a clear sense of editorial responsibility. The board will weigh heavily such factors as scholarship, previous news writing and editing experience (including work at the DI or another daily newspaper), and proven ability to lead, organize and inspire a staff.

Applicants must be currently enrolled in an undergraduate or graduate degree program at the University of Iowa. Deadline for the candidate's submission of completed applications and supporting materials is noon, Wednesday, February 23, 1994.

FORGERY CHARGED

Teen-agers arrested for shoplifting

Greg Smith
Associated Press

Three teen-agers have been implicated in a forgery and shoplifting ring in Iowa City and Washington, Iowa, and an investigator said Thursday he was filing felony charges.

Washington police Sgt. investigator Lyle Hansen said the three youths, all students at Washington Community High School, are the instigators of a ring of at least eight youths in the Washington area.

Hansen said he was filing charges against a 16-year-old Brighton boy and two 16-year-old Washington boys. Hansen said he would not release their names, because they are juveniles. The matter will be turned over to juvenile authorities, he said.

They face charges of forgery, conspiracy to commit forgery, and aiding and abetting forgery. Hansen said they also have been involved in a shoplifting scam in Washington and Iowa City for the past six months.

"They'd go into discount stores and basically shoplift things out of the store. They'd give it to their buddies out in the parking lot, and their buddies would take it right back in and get returns for it," Hansen said.

Additional charges are pending against at least five other Washington area youths, he said.

In Iowa City, police Detective Ed Schultz said he's "in the middle" of his investigation and that charges are expected to be filed against two of the same three Washington County juveniles.

Hansen said the forgery investigation began when a forged convenience check turned up at the Washington State Bank. It was for $404.28 and had a false signature, he said. Another forged check later turned up at Iowa State Bank in Iowa City.

"The checkbook at the store was used to pay beer distributors," Hansen said. "It was kept in a rear office area. Apparently one of these juveniles went back to use the restroom and then stole the checkbook."

Hansen said one of the suspects filled out, either partially or completely, 15 checks.

JUSTICE DEPARTMENT SHAKE-UP

Style, chemistry force Reno's No. 2 man out

Michael Sniffen
Associated Press

WASHINGTON — Deputy Attorney General Philip Heymann, a veteran of four administrations who served as right-hand man to Janet Reno, resigned unexpectedly Thursday — a move they both attributed to differences in management style and chemistry.

And a special assistant to Reno, Lula Rodriguez, who is under Justice Department investigation over alleged vote fraud in a Miami-area election, also resigned, spreading turmoil to the top of a third key Cabinet department.

The sudden moves at Justice followed recent high-level changes at the Defense Department, where the secretary resigned and his proposed replacement withdrew recently, and the State Department, where the No. 2 man left last year.

There has been speculation that Reno herself has fallen from favor in the White House, which President Clinton denied as recently as last week. A special counsel has been named to investigate financial dealings in Arkansas including some by the department's No. 3 official, Webster Hubbell, when he was a law partner to Hillary Rodham Clinton.

Reno, a former state prosecutor, is the first attorney general in recent memory to operate without a chief of staff. Instead, she relied heavily on Heymann, who served in the Justice Department during the Johnson administration, worked for the Watergate special prosecutor during the Nixon administration and ran the department's criminal division during the Carter administration.

Most of the hottest potatoes and Reno's priority programs were sent to Heymann's office for handling, including a review of mandatory minimum criminal sentences, a report on the FBI's bloody siege of the Branch Davidian complex in Waco, Texas, and the department investigation of Rodriguez, which was later transferred to the internal watchdog unit.

Heymann's departure brought an instant Republican attack on Reno. Sen. Alfonse D'Amato, R-N.Y., told reporters, "The Justice Department ... is being run by someone who could qualify for the original amateur hour and who has been less than what this nation should be demanding as an attorney general."

At the White House, spokeswoman Dee Dee Myers denied the administration was embarrassed by the resignation. "Certainly not. I think Phil Heymann served well for a year. I think he made clear what his reasons were for leaving," she said.

Reno disputed any notion of disarray. "I think the American people understand ... how one goes through the process of building a team in which people are compatible, in which their styles are the same," she said.

Reno and Heymann sat side-by-side to announce his departure at her regularly weekly news conference.

"We don't have any great policy differences," Heymann insisted. "There is no precipitating case or event. The fact of the matter is our chemistry isn't good. We don't work as well together as we should, and that's the conclusion we've both come to."

With praise for Heymann's work "to bring great people on board and to move this department forward," Reno agreed that "it's a very mutual decision."

Heymann, a Harvard law professor, wrote Clinton that "the attorney general has concluded that our operational and management styles are too different for us to function fully effectively as a management team."

Heymann: one of two to quit

A department official, demanding anonymity, said Heymann likes to work intensively on long major studies and has done a number of those, but at the cost of deferring things Reno needed action on more quickly.

For several weeks, other department officials have mentioned rising tension between them.

Heymann said he would stay until a successor was chosen or until he became an ineffective "lame duck." In any event, he said he expected to be back at Harvard by summer.

Aristide urges Canadian human rights group to set up truth commission

1 MONTREAL, Canada (AP) — Haiti's exiled president urged a Canadian human rights group to set up a so-called Truth Commission that would facilitate the return of democracy to Haiti.

A similar commission was set up in El Salvador following U.N.-mediated peace accords in 1991 that ended the 12-year war between leftist rebels and the U.S.-backed government. It blamed security forces for most of the abuses.

Jean-Bertrand Aristide, who is on a five-day tour of Canada to drum up support, acknowledged Wednesday that a commission in Haiti would face risks.

"It is a challenge that has to be taken up in the name of human dignity," said Aristide, who was ousted by the army in 1991. "And if we flee from the challenge there could be many more people assassinated."

Ed Broadbent, head of the Montreal-based International Centre for Human Rights and Democratic Development, said his group was considering the proposal. The mandate of the panel and its personnel have not been determined.

Later, Aristide spoke to a rally of 3,000 supporters, some of whom wept when he began his speech.

"We are convinced that one day we will be back in Haiti to celebrate that faith in democracy and its fruits: justice, freedom, dignity, pride and economic development," Aristide told the gathering.

Aristide leaves Canada today.

Newspaper: Lagerfeld cancels appearances because of fear of attacks

2 BERLIN, Germany (AP) — Top fashion designer Karl Lagerfeld has reportedly canceled a public appearance in Berlin for security reasons after he infuriated Muslims by using verses from the Koran on a strapless gown.

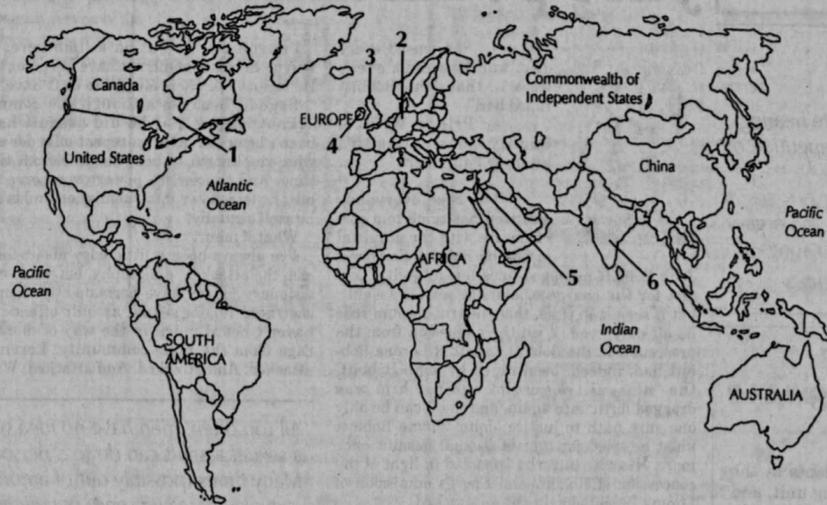

Muslims in several countries protested against the revealing dress with verses embroidered on the front. It was worn by German supermodel Claudia Schiffer in Paris earlier this month as part of the Chanel collection.

Chanel has hired a bodyguard to protect Schiffer because of threats she received since modeling the gown, Schiffer's mother told Bild newspaper earlier this week.

The daily newspaper BZ said Wednesday that Lagerfeld had decided not to come to Berlin to accept the newspaper's culture prize today for "security reasons."

In a front-page story, BZ added that he was "threatened by Muslim fundamentalists."

Lagerfeld, a German designer who works in Paris, has apologized for using the Koranic verses and said he was told the verses were from a love poem.

Toddler's parents demand life for his 11-year-old murderers

3 LONDON, England (AP) — The parents of a toddler who was abducted and bludgeoned to death demanded Thursday that their son's 11-year-old murderers stay locked up forever.

"They took a life so they should serve life," Denise Bulger said of the two boys who abducted her son James at a shopping mall. "We are going to do the best we can to get them locked up for life."

Her remarks came a day after a newspaper reported that the boys' trial judge, Michael Morland, has recommended that Robert Thompson and Jon Venables be freed in eight years.

Morland convicted Thompson and Venables last November of kidnapping and murdering 2-year-old James in Liverpool on Feb. 12, 1993. The boys each were given an indefinite sentence, the standard for a juvenile murderer.

Indefinite sentences rarely are for life, and prisoners are freed at the discretion of the home secretary.

Home Secretary Michael Howard tried to soothe public opinion Thursday, assuring the boys will not be released if they are still dangerous.

Bulger, 26, and her 27-year-old husband, Ralph, said they were stunned by Morland's recommendation, included in confidential reports to Howard and published by the Liverpool Echo. Venables and Thompson were 10 years old when they lured James from his mother at a Liverpool shopping mall, then dragged and carried him 2 1/2 miles to a quiet railroad track where they beat him to death.

IRA attacks Britain; terrorists kill two in Northern Ireland

4 BELFAST, Northern Ireland (AP) — IRA firebombs set off blazes in three stores on London's main shopping street Thursday, and three people were killed in Northern Ireland in the first terrorist deaths of the year.

No one was hurt in the predawn firebombings on Oxford Street, which caused hundreds of thousands of dollars in damage, said police.

There were no claims of responsibility, but a Scotland Yard official said they were "clearly attributable" to the IRA, the outlawed paramilitary group fighting to end British rule in Northern Ireland.

The violence comes as the British and Irish governments await a response to their offer to include the IRA's allies, Sinn Fein, in peace negotiations if the IRA stops killing.

The firebombings were the first attacks in Britain since the initiative was announced in December, although IRA violence has continued in the province.

The fires damaged a Mothercare mother and baby goods store, the department store C and A, and the Silverdale Travel Goods store, police said.

In Northern Ireland, terrorists struck four times, killing three people and wounding two others.

Masked gunmen sledgehammered the front door of a south Belfast home and shot John Desmond Doherty, a 51-year-old Roman Catholic, through the head as he lay in bed, police said.

The outlawed Ulster Defense Association, based in Northern Ireland's Protestant majority community, claimed responsibility.

Later, unidentified gunmen forced their way into a house in Ballymena, 35 miles northwest of Belfast, and fatally shot Cormac McDermott, an electrician, as he watched television. A woman, apparently his wife, was shot in the neck. Both were believed to be Catholics.

Four accused in plot to kill Lebanon's president

5 BEIRUT, Lebanon (AP) — Three right-wing Christian militiamen and a presidential guard were charged with plotting to assassinate Lebanon's president in 1991. Three are in custody, and one apparently fled to Australia.

Documents made public Wednesday say the men planned to plant a bomb in a telephone or a flower pot in President Elias Hrawi's office. The plot was foiled by Samir Geagea, leader of the militia to which the three men belonged.

The guard was paid $800 for information about security at the palace.

When news of the assassination plot first surfaced in 1991, it was denied by the presidential palace. It was not clear why authorities decided to make arrests and issue charges in recent weeks.

However, the government, helpless during the 1975-90 civil war in confronting the militias, has recently flexed its judicial and military muscle. Its authority has been bolstered by the disarming of nearly all the militias.

No trial date was set. If convicted, the four could be put to death.

Rescuers locate 41 bodies inside coal mine

6 ASANSOL, India (AP) — Rescuers Thursday recovered the bodies of 41 miners who died from toxic fumes in a coal mine fire 300 feet underground in one of India's worst mine disasters in 20 years.

Fourteen miners were still missing more than 36 hours after the fire broke out Tuesday, but they may have escaped and fled in panic, officials said.

Fifty-five miners had been reported trapped in the mine, a figure concluded from the number of cap lamps that were missing after the rest of the mining crew deposited them on leaving the pits.

Most of the 500 workers escaped before the poisonous gases overcame the others.

The New Kenda Colliery, run by the state-owned Eastern Coal Fields Ltd., is about 130 miles north of Calcutta.

About 140 rescuers wearing gas masks reached the mine Wednesday after the main fire was brought under control. The operation was hampered by smoke and small fires in some of the coal field's 36 pits.

PET OWNERSHIP

Throwaway animals

The ultimate in home decorating for college students at the UI is not a beer keg, not a plywood-and-brick shelving unit, and not even a poster of some dead rock star; it is a living, breathing, furry little animal.

"Two times a year, right at each semester end, we get all the animals dumped by students when those animals are no longer convenient to keep as pets," says Lisa Goodman of the Iowa City Animal Control Shelter. As a college town full of transient lifestyles and highly unpredictable financial situations, Iowa City has a plethora of abandoned animals subsisting, and most often perishing, after being cast off by owners too immature, callous or unprepared to care for a pet. Goodman urges all students to "Wait! You certainly don't need a pet when you are in college. Wait until you have a real income and a settled lifestyle. For most students, having a pet presents an unmanageably long-term situation."

Over 2,500 puppies and kittens are born hourly in the United States. Twenty-seven million animals annually are taken in by Animal Control and only 10 million of these find owners and new homes. The remaining 17 million are euthanized, or taken by medical researchers for use in cruel and bizarre experiments in major research facilities across America. Cat and dog populations, in the last 20 years, have swollen astoundingly and uncontrollably. Gross negligence by pet owners, intentional and for-profit breeding by breeders, and the pervasive and illegal activities of animal dealers operating outside of the law have exacerbated this explosion in animal populations.

Breeders, pet store chains and others profiting from the trade in animals as a commodity continue to fight the proposal of a ban on pet breeding. Several years ago, proponents of animal rights attempted to initiate a voluntary zero population growth movement to decrease the animal population. Resistance has been so strong, and participation so low, that the efficacy of the proposed ban remains poor.

Cities and states waste millions of dollars per year trying to contain this overpopulation, when a concerted effort consisting of increased funding and activism would provide a real solution.

The resulting horrors of human negligence and greed are pervasive. The U.S. Department of Agriculture (USDA) estimates that 25 percent of the 3,500 federally licensed breeding kennels have substandard conditions. Hidden and more brutally involved in the animal slave trade are "puppy mill" operators, people who breed enormous quantities of animals for sale to laboratories, to dog-fighting enthusiasts and to buyers who prefer to secretly purchase animals for erroneous purposes.

More heinous still are "bunchers," or the folks who cruise around stealing pets from yards and houses and who answer "free to good home" ads in the classified sections. This is a highly profitable occupation. These bunchers sell stolen animals to Class B dealers, who are licensed by the government to sell large quantities of animals. In turn, these Class B dealers sell the stolen pets to researchers after fabricating and falsifying records to hide the true origins of the animals.

Obviously, living without a pet is not a viable option for everyone. If you must have a cat or dog, get one from the pound. Simultaneously, you will be saving an animal from certain death while keeping money out of the hands of pet shop owners and, subsequently, out of the hands of breeders. Sterilize your pet — true, it is a type of mutilation, but if bunchers get ahold of your pet's offspring, a lot more mutilation will occur. Before you decide to accessorize your life with a tiger stripe or a tabby, please consider how tedious having to be fully responsible for another individual might become. Then make the good choice and opt for a poster.

Astrological troubles

To the Editor:

This time Mike Fisch has gone too far.

His "Horoscopes" of Monday, Jan. 24, are clearly forged — I am certain that he did not consult the extensive charts and manuals that are necessary for the responsible practice of astrology. Therefore, I charge Fisch with gross negligence as the disseminator of dangerous misinformation.

I write as a staunch Libra with a complaint. As directed by Fisch, I purchased a Flo-bee hair-cutting machine and proceeded to sculpt my genital hair. In his column, Fisch assures that "the sculpture is an extension of yourself as surely as your nosering and rebellious leather coat." Perhaps I should have been skeptical, because I sport neither nosering, nor rebellious leather coat — but hindsight is, after all, 20/20. The fact of the matter is that I am left with a genital hair sculpture that is decidedly not an extension of myself. It's just not me. And, lest Fisch dismiss my complaint as that of a chronic malcontent, the cool people who were supposed to recognize my little project as an improvement have not. In fact, Fisch, they ignore me now.

I do not at this time call for Fisch's termination as a DI writer, although I must say I did at one point have some fairly strong petition urges. I do, however, call for Fisch to show some discretion when he next chooses to engage the awesome force of astrology in his writing. Spreading around the wealth he reserves for Virgo would be a start.

I can't help but think that had I been born a few days earlier, things would be different now...

Just punishment for sexual assault

"... (It wasn't every day, and it wasn't every week ... that John Bobbitt raped her."
— Prince William County commonwealth's attorney Paul Ebert.

The case everybody satirized has come to a sort of closure with the acquittal of Lorena Bobbitt. Somehow John Bobbitt managed to escape a "guilty" verdict for the charge of marital sexual assault, but it seems, in time, that the truth would rear its oft-ugly head. With the admission from the prosecutor in the Bobbitt case that Lorena Bobbitt had, indeed, been raped by John Bobbitt, the "not guilty" verdict against him was dragged forth once again, and there can be only one sure path to justice: John Wayne Bobbitt must be tried for marital sexual assault once more. His case must be appealed in light of the concession of Bobbitt and Ebert's admission of Lorena Bobbitt having been attacked.

It's been a media circus of rare degree in spectacle. (How many Bobbitt jokes have you heard in the last month?) But the time for sober reflection is upon us. Prosecuting attorney Ebert apparently felt he was doing John Bobbitt a favor in telling the court and jury that — sure — John raped Lorena. Sure he raped her more than once. But it wasn't an everyday or every week kind of thing.

In other words: She shouldn't be so shaken up; she was only sexually assaulted from time to time — not all the time.

Ebert's comments reflect something looming in the backs of many men's minds in the United States today. All too often, men have no idea what a sexual assault can do to a person. Many times (possibly out of an only vaguely perceived sense of guilt in the backs of these men's minds), the scope of the devastation brought on by sexual assault is so great that it is just not possible for those men to understand it completely. As a result, many don't take that devastation seriously.

While sexual assault runs rampant, from incestuous assaults of defenseless children, to the pushy, coercing forcefulness of a guy back in his room with a drunk young woman, to even worse cases — cases where the assaults just keep happening until finally, the victim either bails out or snaps, or does both.

I'm going to go out on a limb here: John Wayne Bobbitt should not have his penis today. He misused it. He is alleged to be (I have to say "alleged," because although it's commonly acknowledged that he did assault her, he hasn't been convicted) a repeat-offender rapist, who was known to beat his wife from time to time. And to exercise power over Lorena Bobbitt, he forced her into submission and gratified himself sexually.

What a man. I've always been a little edgy about the "disarm the attacker" philosophy, but when certain visionary judges have permanently chemically castrated repeat sexual assault offenders, we haven't heard much in the way of moral outrage from the male community. Lorena was attacked. And attacked. And attacked. Was she

All too often, men have no idea what a sexual assault can do to a person. Many times (possibly out of an only vaguely perceived sense of guilt in the backs of these men's minds), the scope of the devastation brought on by sexual assault is so great that it is just not possible for those men to understand it completely. As a result, many don't take that devastation seriously.

insane when she struck back? Hell, I don't know. But I will not blame her for her retaliation against John Bobbitt.

And I'm not the only one. According to a Jan. 24 USA Today / CNN / Gallup poll, 51 percent of all women surveyed side with me on this one. And there's a reason for that.

Women in America today are treated as second-class citizens; they are greeted with borderline histrionics when any attempt is made to pass an Equal Rights Amendment (Pat Robertson's learned assessment of the Iowa ERA as "a socialist, anti-family movement that encourages women to leave their husbands, kill their children, practice witchcraft, become lesbians and destroy capitalism" comes to mind). Men don't want to face the fact that women are physically assaulted many times every day. By men.

Rather than deal with this hell-truth, some take refuge in debating sexual assault statistics. As I have in the past, I cite the statistic arrived at by Robin Shaw in her book "I Never Called it Rape," which found that as many as one of every three women has been the victim of a sexual assault. (Sexual assault is defined for these statistics as forced penetration. No ifs, ands or buts.) And I think, as those who seek solace from the true horror of what in debating the statistics do, that this statistic is flawed.

Keeping in mind the stigma attached to sexual assault — society's tendency to blame the victim — it seems quite likely that at least some of the respondents to these surveys on sexual assault didn't feel comfortable telling a complete stranger that they had been assaulted.

In my experience, incidence of sexual assault has been even higher than Shaw's one-in-three. Relatives of mine have been assaulted, some on more than one occasion. Relatives of friends have, as well, been attacked. More friends than I can count have been pounded and assaulted, many more than once. The figure of one-in-three doesn't do my exposure to sexual assault justice.

And so, to the degree that I am able to without having been sexually assaulted myself, I understand why Lorena Bobbitt retaliated against John Bobbitt and why she chose the manner in which she did so.

Lorena Bobbitt was aware of what had happened to her and of the fact that nothing she had done could stop it. She was aware of John Wayne Bobbitt's guilt in assaulting her. She had a right to judge that guilt and to retaliate.

If one cannot be trusted with a gun, one should never be allowed to have one. If one cannot stop from driving while intoxicated, one should have one's right to pilot an automobile taken away, so that one cannot endanger the health and lives of others with that vehicle. And if one sexually assaults repeatedly, without remorse, even insofar as to have the assaults brought up as though they're just business as usual, the attacker should be disarmed.

JOHN E. JACOB

Where will employment come from in 1994?

In 1994, as in past years, the big question is: Where are the jobs?

The recession is long over, at least according to the experts who keep the statistics. But for most of the working population, the recession still rages.

The December unemployment rate was well over 6 percent, and it is really higher than that, since the method used to count the jobless vastly understates unemployment in our economy.

If you count as unemployed those who want to work, but have given up trying to find jobs or can only find part-time jobs, the true unemployment rate is closer to double the official rate.

And unemployment among African-Americans is over double the white rate and has been for as long as anyone can remember.

The economy's inability to generate decent jobs for all is at the root of many of our most pressing problems.

The lack of job opportunities is behind the crime problem. It accounts for our urban problems, since the loss of manufacturing jobs and tax revenues forces cities to the wall.

And it is the underlying cause of a host of other national problems, from rising poverty to family breakup.

Will 1994 be a better year for jobs? Maybe, but the evidence thus far doesn't give much ground for optimism.

Recently, several major corporations announced plans for massive layoffs and plant closings. And a poll of employers found that almost half of the companies polled cut their payrolls by an average of 10 percent last year, while a fourth expect to do the same this year.

For all the publicity given to white-collar layoffs, it is blue-collar workers who are most vulnerable to unemployment.

The Labor Department says managers and professionals — who make up only 27 percent of the total labor force — got more than 60 percent of the new jobs created over the past year. Many of the remaining new jobs were temporary.

National leadership has to make job creation

For all the publicity given to white-collar layoffs, it is blue-collar workers who are most vulnerable to unemployment. The Labor Department says managers and professionals — who make up only 27 percent of the total labor force — got more than 60 percent of the new jobs created over the past year. Many of the remaining new jobs were temporary.

a top priority. Congress especially, has to temper its concern about the budget deficit with some serious action to close the job deficit.

It needs to move on two fronts. One is short-term job creation, focused on the people most vulnerable to layoffs.

That can be done by an infrastructure rebuilding program that can quickly train and employ today's low-skilled jobless.

The second front is long-term measured in education and training that prepare people to hold the higher-skill jobs that a modern economy needs.

Given the changes in technology and the global economy, many of the low-skill manufacturing jobs are lost forever. They can be done cheaper by machines or by low-wage areas overseas.

Many people think it's good to lose those jobs because they'll be replaced by better ones. But the people who lose low-skill jobs don't have the skills to get the better ones — programming a computer is different from operating a lathe or a sewing machine, and it is dishonest to pretend otherwise.

That's why it is necessary to have a two-tier jobs policy. While we train and educate people for the jobs of tomorrow, we still have to find ways for people to work today.

Since those most vulnerable to unemployment are the unskilled, we need to create jobs with minimal skills and include training components that enable people to advance to higher skill jobs.

The Clinton administration is addressing those problems, but Congress and the public are still indifferent to the vast human suffering involved and to unemployment's enormous drain on America's economy and its social system.

Human version of divine message

To the Editor:

The Daily Iowan should be rightfully proud of columnist Tom Hunter and his work as, for the first time, he has actually given me an opportunity to critically respond (and I consider myself a moderate conservative and Christian, at best!).

Tom, I let your first column of "definitions" go as I considered that to be your attempt to brand yourself as a bigot and as closed-minded. Your recent column on "mystical curiosities" gives me real reason to respond, however, because of the grave inconsistencies that you present. Regardless of your faith (or apparent lack thereof), you do point out in your column what Christians have known for centuries — that the Bible is a human-written and human-interpreted work. You seem to assume that because it is "manmade," all Christians should immediately lose faith and destroy established religion. Just as a point of comparison, Tom, are we to assume that because the DI is written, edited, managed and published by humans that we cannot, as fellow human beings, get the main drift of the paper? The answer, of course, is no! Because — despite frequent typographical errors, misquotes and faults in the settings found daily in the paper — most of us can understand what the paper has to say, and, yes, can get to the main point.

The larger point, Tom, is that Christians accept the human version of the Bible because it is backed by a greater power that you are unwilling or just unable to accept. And as an American, a Christian and a human being, I must accept your opinion as merely that.

My only reservation is this, Tom. In your first column, you thoughtfully blasted the wrongs of conservatism and now in your second, you have seemingly exposed the "myth" of religion. My question is, when you get done blasting capitalism for upholding certain class structures that are unfair to the working class in next week's column, what indeed will you have left to write about? Oh, and Tom, just to use your famous last words in this week's column at your expense: Now that the facts of communism and socialism have come to light, when will you accept the day that these defunct ideologies and systems have already joined astrology on the shelf of mystical curiosities?

Court ruling will impact labor

To the Editor:

The Supreme Court ruling on Monday, Jan. 24, in which anti-abortion protesters who block abortion clinics or otherwise prevent women from obtaining abortions may be sued as racketeers under the provisions of Racketeer Influenced and Corrupt Organizations (RICO) legislation, has negative implications for organized labor.

What will happen now when a strike, or a threat of a strike, "intimidates" a company's clients? What if the bosses feel "harassed" by picket lines in front of the company gate?

Under Monday's ruling, union leaders could be sued for a criminal act committed by any union member or individual, if that act could in any way be perceived to be connected to a labor dispute.

The Supreme Court didn't give a unanimous ruling in this case, because it favors abortion rights; it did it, because it serves business interests. The lady Dobermans of the National Organization of Women might be slobbering with joy at the prospect of bankrupting their anti-choice foes, but in calling on the state to crush the anti-woman bigots of Operation Rescue, they have handed the bosses another legal precedent in the war on labor.

Mass picket lines, plant occupations and sit-down strikes, secondary sympathy strikes, etc., were important means to winning strikes and building the union movement. Some of these tactics were and still are illegal. What the new ruling helps to do is make them all illegal and recriminalize unions as "organized conspiracies." For America's working men and women, the victory of the bourgeoisie ladies' auxiliary of the Democratic Party known as NOW is their loss.

Working conditions not unacceptable

To the Editor:

While I support many of the ideas put forth by COGS-SEIU, it is time for graduate students to stop whining. The working conditions are far from unacceptable, as Mr. Deslippe would have us believe. A meat-processing plant where the open blades present a constant danger of injury or dismemberment has unacceptable working conditions. The UI graduate students may not have some of the privileges provided at other Big Ten schools, but the conditions are not hazardous or life-threatening.

If some of the graduate students are convinced that they are getting a raw deal from the UI, why do they stay? Why don't they transfer to a school that compensates them "appropriately" for their efforts?

We have no right to complain about our standing when millions of hard-working people are homeless and hungry. How dare we assume that we deserve free health care when tens of millions of Americans have no access to the most basic medical insurance? Surely, budding academics can see the hypocrisy and egocentrism of such positions.

I do not deny that graduate students do much of the work of a professor for a fraction of the pay. Perhaps we should be compensated at a higher level, but it is wrong to claim that the working conditions are unacceptable or intolerable.

One of the few strengths of the free-market system is the mobility of the labor force. If COGS-SEIU members are certain they are undercompensated for their efforts, they should try working as ditch diggers or migrant workers for six months. Academia may suddenly appear very appealing.

Good News For Customers Of Our Downtown Banking Facility!

We're On The Move To Serve You Better!

Main Entrance Reopening! The Washington Street entrance of our main banking facility will be reopening on Monday January 31st. This means you'll once again be able to enter the bank from both the south and the west sides of the building!

Consumer Lending Moving! Our Consumer Lending Department, which has been located in the Paul-Helen Building, is moving back across the street into our main building. Once again, you'll be able to take care of all your banking needs in one location, under one roof!

New Downtown ATMs! Our temporary ATM in the Paul-Helen Building, recently removed from service, has been replaced with four new units: two enclosed ATMs on the south side of the bank, a walk-up unit on the Dubuque Street side of the building, and an ATM in the main bank lobby!

Grand Opening Coming! These changes are all part of the final phase of our remodeling and expansion project. We'll be holding a formal Grand Opening this spring. In the meantime, feel free to stop by anytime and visit us in one of the state's finest community banking facilities!

a North Vietnam prisoner-of-war camp. He said the fates of those still missing could best be learned by expanding relations with Hanoi.

"I don't often discuss my past experiences in the Vietnam War," McCain said, recalling how his communist jailers threatened that those prisoners who didn't cooperate would never return home.

"Therefore, many times, at great physical risk, we did everything we could to account for those who were imprisoned," McCain said. He said that while the fates of some MIAs may never be known, "every name that I knew of has been accounted for."

Six of the eight senators who served in Vietnam approved the legislation, including Sen. Bob Kerrey, D-Nebr., a Congressional Medal of Honor winner who lost part of his leg in Vietnam.

"I understand there is still a considerable amount of fear," Kerrey said. But he said he believed strongly that lifting the embargo was in the best interests of the families and the country.

The legislation, written as an amendment to the State Department authorization bill, includes a provision that Vietnam must do more to improve its human rights record. Kerrey said this must not be ignored.

"I believe it is time for us to end these sanctions, but it is not time for us to stop fighting for the freedom of the Vietnamese people," Kerrey said.

Sen. Bob Smith, R-N.H., led the battle against the amendment, arguing that it violates the will of veterans and the families of MIAs. "They are petrified that this amendment is going to pass, and they will lose the leverage they have to get the answers about their loved ones."

Smith was in the Navy during the Vietnam War, serving in the Gulf of Tonkin. He proposed an opposing amendment that would have required the president to certify that Vietnam is fully complying with the search for MIAs before trade sanctions could be lifted. It was defeated 58-42.

White House spokeswoman Dee Dee Myers said President Clinton has not decided whether to lift the trade sanctions, but "we certainly welcome the Senate's sentiment on that."

"Progress has been made, but the overall issue is still under review. We don't have a firm time line" for a decision on the sanctions, she said.

The administration has pledged that it will not lift trade sanctions, or take the further step of normalizing diplomatic relations, until it is assured Vietnam is cooperating in accounting for the 2,238 Americans still missing from Vietnam, Laos and Cambodia.

ATTACK

sources Thursday saying Gillooly would plead guilty early next week to a reduced charge, provided he passes a lie detector test.

Harvey Schiller, executive director of the USOC, said the organization "is deeply concerned with statements made today by Tonya Harding relative to her stated knowledge of the attack on Nancy Kerrigan at the national championships."

The USFSA said Harding would be on the roster submitted to the USOC for the Winter Games, but the association appointed a five-member panel to investigate the case.

"The panel will first conduct an investigation to determine if reasonable grounds exist to warrant a disciplinary hearing concerning Harding's status as a member of the U.S. Figure Skating Association," the association said.

The USOC noted that the women's figure skating roster can be changed as late as Feb. 21.

Schiller said the USOC "is prepared under constitutional procedures to initiate any action deemed appropriate relative to the conduct of any athlete entered in the Games."

Norm Frink, Multnomah County deputy district attorney, said investigators weren't concerned about meeting any Olympic deadline to file charges.

"We're on our own timetable," he said. "We're going to do a thorough and complete job."

The Oregonian newspaper reported in its Friday edition that Harding lied to authorities early in her Jan. 18 interview with them, then changed her story when her interrogators told her they knew she wasn't telling the truth.

The newspaper quoted unidentified sources as saying that after investigators said they knew she was lying, Harding conferred with her lawyer, then came back and amended her answers. In those amended answers, she implicated Gillooly, the Oregonian said.

Harding read her statement at a downtown athletic club after a workout at a suburban shopping mall rink, where she fell during one of her trademark triple-axels and held her lower back in pain.

Wearing the red, white and blue warm-up suit from the 1991 world championships, she stood on a stool in order to see over the battery of microphones and her hands, holding her statement, shook noticeably as she faced some 20 television cameras and dozens of reporters.

"Nancy Kerrigan and I can show the world two different types of figure skating," Harding said. "I look forward to being on the team with her."

Kerrigan was practicing in Stoneham, Mass., when Harding made her statement and was driven away afterward without looking at reporters.

Earlier, her coach, Evi Scotvold, said Harding's remarks were "not much of a statement." He declined to say whether he felt Harding should skate with Kerrigan at the Olympics.

Harding seemed close to crying as she reached the end of her brief statement.

"I have devoted my entire life to one objective: winning an Olympic gold medal for my country," she said. "This is my last chance. I ask only for your understanding and the opportunity to represent my country with the best figure skating performance of my life."

Harding said she has now told authorities all she knows about the attack.

"Although my lawyers tell me that my failure to immediately report this information is not a crime, I know I have let you down and have also let myself down," she said.

When asked if he agreed with Harding's lawyers' interpretation, Frink said, "We can't comment on the state of the law. That's their opinion."

Wayne Westling, a professor of criminal law at the University of Oregon Law School, said the crime of hindering prosecution generally cannot be committed by someone simply keeping quiet.

But if the goal of the conspiracy is viewed as putting Harding into the Olympics and cashing in on endorsements afterward, then it was continuing after the assault, and Harding could be viewed as a participant, Westling said.

"It's in the gray area of the law," Westling said. "You would never get an answer unless she was charged."

ELVIS

comparing Elvis to Jesus.

Depending on how the question is worded, several national polls in recent years have found from 6 percent to 16 percent of Americans believe Elvis still may be alive.

"The King and Me" producers estimate up to a million people worldwide are devoted followers of Elvis. Those interviewed make it clear they do not consider Elvis to be God, and some note Elvis himself would discourage such speculation.

But several of the trappings of religion are evident in the way Elvis fans express their devotion. On the anniversaries of his Aug. 16, 1977 death, thousands of Elvis pilgrims walk single file at his Graceland mansion, touching candles to torches fired from an eternal flame at the grave.

One woman, wearing a brightly-colored bowling shirt with the initials EP in large script, said sometimes Elvis could look at a person and make them feel special.

"He could also look at you, flash his eyes at you and you know you'd done wrong," she said.

"He's been my life since I was 10 years old. Nothing else ever mattered," said another woman interviewed in the documentary.

Wayne Rollins of Assumption College, head of the psychology and biblical studies group of the Society of Biblical Literature, said it is not unusual for people to transfer "their own center" onto another prominent figure who can make up for their perceived deficiencies.

But Rollins said it is difficult to understand, given Elvis' lifestyle, why religious values would be attributed to the singer. Elvis died at age 42 of heart disease, but it has long been speculated that he died of a drug overdose.

"There appears to be a kind of substitution of the Elvis figure for the divine figure. I don't know why," Rollins said.

"I think this is just an interesting piece of the human phenomena, people searching for meaning and wholeness."

Reports of numerous sexual partners and drug abuse do not deter Elvis' fans in their adoration.

One said no one can stand in the way of her allegiance to Elvis.

"My husband knew when he married me that he was marrying me and Elvis," she said.

It is just such devotion that prompted one disk jockey interviewed in the television show to speculate that "in 100 years' time, there may well be an Elvis religion."

education faculty, said the department plans on making a presentation to the assembly defending P.E.

"It has always supported the requirement, and I don't have any reason to think that would change," Slatton said. "There are enough procedural questions that even those who are interested in cutting P.E. probably will question doing so."

The Faculty Assembly will hear the EPC recommendation at its Feb. 9 meeting.

ment and freedom of speech, and that's their right."

John Barker, general manager of KRUI FM 89.7, is among those who felt the request is a call for censorship, but said it has merit.

"It is a form of censorship, but there is a line between censorship and good taste," he said. "We're not out to offend anyone. It's kind of a gray area — some of our music could be construed that way."

Though the final decision of whether or not to pull songs off the airwaves is up to the program director, Barker said KRUI is not likely to alter its programming until more requests are made or listener complaints are received.

Dautremont said the songs she is targeting are not needed forms of entertainment.

"These songs are completely unnecessary, they are recorded only in the desire to make money," she said. "The Iowa City chapter of NOW feels that at least reducing, if not banning, songs that constantly refer to women in a base and degrading nature and / or encourage rape, assault and murder may minimize a destructive self image for young women and men."

She said she understands she may be asking a lot of the radio stations, but she hopes the response will be positive.

"I feel like I've given them a big job," she said.

LOCAL

Linebacker wants to join Hawkeyes

IOWA CITY (AP) — A linebacker from a California junior college wants to continue his football career at Iowa, and Hawkeye coaches know he's serious. He's already enrolled.

Scott von der Ahe, a 6-foot-1, 240-pounder, is taking spring classes at Iowa after transferring from Saddleback Community College in Mission Viejo, Calif.

Von der Ahe made 119 tackles, including 15 sacks, last fall and earned all-conference honors. He was the league's Central Division player of the year.

Southern Cal, Brigham Young and Mississippi also had recruited von der Ahe, who has been timed at 4.5 seconds for 40 yards.

AUSTRALIAN OPEN

Martin upsets Edberg to reach finals

MELBOURNE, Australia (AP) — Todd Martin repeatedly slammed backhand returns for winners to undermine Stefan Edberg's serve-and-volley game Friday and move into the final of the Australian Open.

Martin, seeded ninth and playing in his first Grand Slam semifinal, defeated the fourth-seeded Edberg 3-6, 7-6 (9-7), 7-6 (9-7), 7-6 (7-4) in 3 hours, 50 minutes.

Martin will face the winner of the semifinal between top-seeded Pete Sampras and two-time defending champion Jim Courier.

NBA

Suns' Barkley tops All-Star vote-getters

NEW YORK (AP) — Charles Barkley of the Phoenix Suns led all vote-getters in the final tabulation of fan balloting for the NBA All-Star teams, released Thursday.

With 794,836 votes, Barkley will start at forward for the Western Conference team, along with Shawn Kemp of Seattle, who had 481,880 votes.

Fan balloting determines the starters for the game on Sunday, Feb. 13 at the Target Center in Minneapolis.

Also starting for the West will be center Hakeem Olajuwon of Houston (478,018), and guards Clyde Drexler of Portland (493,204) and Mitch Richmond of Sacramento (469,978).

The Eastern Conference starters will be center Shaquille O'Neal of Orlando (603,346), forwards Scottie Pippen of Chicago (496,505) and Derrick Coleman of New Jersey (482,261), and guards B.J. Armstrong of Chicago (529,065) and Kenny Anderson of New Jersey (493,690).

The coaches of the two teams will select the remaining seven players on each squad. Head coaches will be from those teams with the best records in each conference at the break.

BASEBALL

Jordan to get shot at making spring training

CHICAGO (AP) — Michael Jordan will bat again against Chicago White Sox general manager Ron Schueler and face a college pitcher before the team decides whether to invite the former NBA star to spring training.

Jordan faced 75 pitches from Schueler, a former major-league pitcher, last week. After the workout at Ed Comiskey Park, Schueler said, "He'd have to fall on his face not to do it, but I'm not ready to say for sure yet" if Jordan will go to Sarasota, Fla., next month.

"I would say we'll have a decision within 10 days — by next week," Schueler said.

Jordan has been taking up to 1,000 swings a day but had not faced a pitcher with major-league experience until he stepped in against Schueler, who won 40 games from 1972-79.

Dallas gets past adversity

Dave Goldberg
Associated Press

ATLANTA — Message to Jimmy Johnson from the Buffalo Bills: Getting to the Super Bowl isn't supposed to be easy.

Johnson has spent the latter part of the season whining about the problems his Dallas Cowboys have faced in their attempt to win a second straight NFL title.

He has cited everything from Emmitt Smith's holdout to an injury list that included the likes of Smith, Troy Aikman and Charles Haley.

But if injuries are part of the game, why should Johnson's Cowboys be immune?

"It's funny, but in football, we all live in our own little worlds," Frank Reich, Buffalo's backup quarterback, said Thursday. "We all think our own problems are the only problems in the world. It's just a natural tendency."

Added Walt Corey, the Bills' defensive coordinator: "Injuries? We all live with that all the time."

"When we were playing in their place the second week of the season, at the end of the game we were trying to stop them in the defensive line with a bunch of backups and a rookie."

A soft rain fell Thursday, although the elements won't be a factor Sunday, with the game played in the Georgia Dome. But the rain did force the Bills to practice in the Dome instead of at Georgia Tech. They worked for two hours in pads, the first time this week they have used them.

The Cowboys worked outside at the Atlanta Falcons' complex in Suwanee but Johnson shortened practice by 10 minutes because of the weather. Haley, the defensive end with a back problem, didn't practice but Johnson said he will play Sunday.

Johnson has kept an even higher profile than usual, especially with his longstanding tales of Dallas misfortune.

"I've never, in all my years of coaching, had as much adversity as what we've had to face this year," he said.

Maybe because in all his years of coaching, Johnson never won a Super Bowl before last year. So he doesn't know that it's an unwritten rule in the NFL that the locusts follow a year of plenty and that losing backup tight ends and special teams players isn't the end of the world.

But to the Cowboys, having to wait until overtime of the final regular-season game to clinch the NFC East apparently qualifies as adversity.

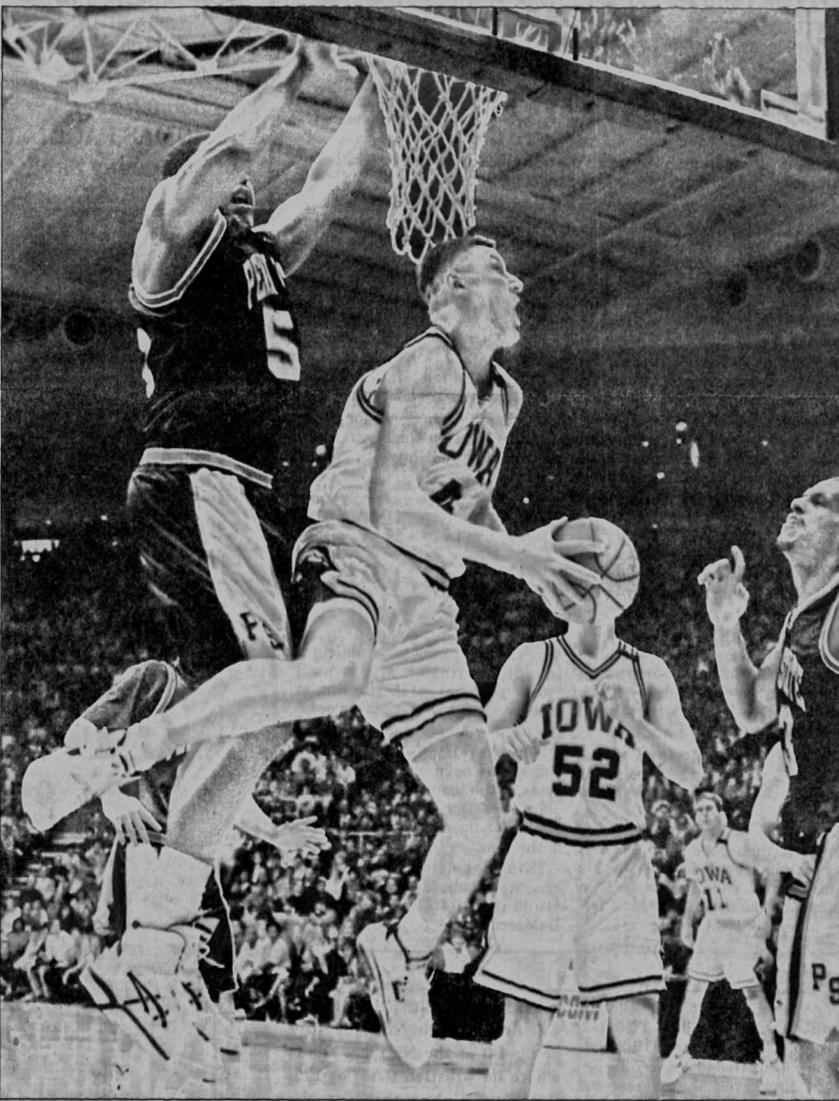

Coach Jimmy Johnson and the Dallas Cowboys look for their second straight Super Bowl title Sunday afternoon against the Buffalo Bills.

Dallas' problems started before the season, when Aikman underwent back surgery. Then Smith and owner Jerry Jones became entangled in a contract dispute and the running back held out. Backup tight end Alfredo

Hawks hope to slow Respert

T. Scott Krenz/The Daily Iowan

Iowa freshman forward Jess Settles goes up for a basket against Penn State's Phil Williams in Iowa's 81-70 win last Saturday at Carver-Hawkeye Arena. The Hawkeyes play at Michigan State Saturday.

Roxanna Pellin
The Daily Iowan

Not only does Michigan State have "one of the best guards in the country" in Shawn Respert, according to coaches Tom Davis and Jud Heathcote, but the Spartans also have the supporting cast to back him up.

"He's proven himself not only in our league, but internationally," Davis said of the 6-foot-3 junior. "(Eric) Snow has improved and that will only help to make Respert better."

Respert helped the United States to a gold medal in the World University Games last summer, averaging 12.1 points per game and starting all seven, Davis said.

He will be the man to stop when the Hawkeyes travel to Michigan State for a 7:05 p.m. game Saturday night. Iowa leads the series 43-39, but the Spartans have won their last five games at Jack Breslin Center.

Both teams are coming off wins on the road Wednesday night. Iowa (2-4 in the Big Ten, 8-7 overall) won at Northwestern (0-6, 9-6) 86-76, and Michigan State (4-3, 13-6) beat Ohio State (2-5, 9-9) 77-71.

Davis said beating the Wildcats at Welsh-Ryan Arena helped boost his team's confidence going into East Lansing.

"It helps a lot," Davis said. "And it's ironic that Michigan State won on the road. It was a lot better coming home with the five-hour trip. I think that if we would have lost, it would have seemed like 24."

Strong outside shooting in the first half helped Iowa take a 41-39 halftime lead. The Hawkeyes shot 69 percent from 3-point range in the first half, but were 0-for-7 in 3-point shots after halftime.

"I think it's going to get better," Davis said of the Hawkeyes' 45 percent shooting from 3-point range. "Inconsistency is going to be a good mark of this ballclub."

Sophomore forward Russ Millard, who was 7-for-24 from the perimeter going into the Northwestern game, hit 3-for-4 against the Wildcats.

Respert, who is the Big Ten's third leading scorer averaging 22.6 points per game, led the Spartans with 32 points against the Buckeyes. He scored 22 points in the second half, and had all the points in a 10-0 run to give Michigan State the lead in the second half. Respert shot 11-for-17 from the field, including 4-for-5 from 3-point range.

Senior center Anthony Miller added 16 points, and sophomore forward Jamie Feick came off the bench to add nine points and a career-high 10 rebounds. Snow, who leads the Big Ten in assists averaging 6.7 per game, had eight assists and nine points.

The Spartans have out-rebounded Wisconsin, Minnesota and Ohio State and have out-rebounded their opponents in 17 of 19 games this season.

Win 500 still on line for Stringer

Joel Donofrio
The Daily Iowan

After two tough losses on the road, the Iowa women's basketball team returns to Carver-Hawkeye Arena tonight in search of C. Vivian Stringer's elusive 500th win.

Michigan and Michigan State will invade Iowa City for a week-end of Big Ten women's basketball, with the Wolverines facing Iowa tonight at 7:30 p.m. and the Spartans squaring off against the Hawkeyes Sunday at 2 p.m.

On Tuesday night, the No. 4 Hawkeyes (11-2 overall, 4-1 in the Big Ten) seemed well on their way to a victory over Northern Illinois when they took a 48-39 lead with 7:30 remaining. However, the Huskies outscored Iowa 19-8 the rest of the way to literally steal a win from the Hawkeyes.

Although it might appear the Hawkeyes' losses are due to the pressure to produce win No. 500 for their coach, Stringer and her players insist that is not the case.

"Maybe I've misjudged this, but personally I don't think (No. 500) is that big of a deal," Stringer said. "I really don't care to celebrate 500. It's just like when you celebrate birthdays. You want to be 16 and you want to be 21, you want to be 30, maybe. After that, you don't want to talk about it. So that's how I feel about victories."

"After you've coached as many years as I have, to reach that particular milestone is no big deal," she added.

For senior Nicole Tunsil, who reached a personal milestone by scoring her 1,000th point against NIU, said the team has not let talk about victory No. 500 distract it.

"The truth of the matter is that even if we don't win another game this season, eventually she's going to get it," Tunsil said.

Cathy Marx, the Hawkeye center who scored a career-high 30 points against the Huskies, added that her team was more concerned with playing winning basketball than Stringer's 500th.

"We're not even worried about it. It's something that coach said don't worry about it, and we're not going to," Marx said. "We have enough to work on, we have enough things to be concerned about, so we've put

Hawkeyes take on Big Ten rivals

The Daily Iowan

The Iowa wrestling team has a busy schedule this weekend coming off a second-place finish at the National Duals a week ago in Lincoln, Neb.

The No. 2 Hawkeyes (6-1) face eighth-ranked Minnesota tonight in Minneapolis before hosting Wisconsin Saturday at 7:30 p.m. in Carver-Hawkeye Arena.

The Golden Glovers are coached by former Iowa assistant J. Robinson and are 12-1 overall and 5-0 in Big Ten action. Key matches will include the 126-pound division where Iowa's No. 8 Jeff McGinness will meet No. 4 Tim Harris. McGinness was 2-2 at the National Duals and stands 23-5-9 on the year.

Iowa holds a 52-14-1 series

Iowa Invitational a test for Hawks

Dave Herda

The Daily Iowan

For the Iowa women's indoor track and field team, Saturday's Iowa Invitational becomes the second question in a season-long test.

The Hawkeyes' impressive showing at last weekend's Purdue Invitational provided just the kind of fast start the team was looking for, but the competition was marginal and the meet was just a warmup for their Big Ten season. Iowa won seven of the eight events in which it was entered at Purdue.

Augustana and Wisconsin, last year's second-place finisher in the Big Ten, will round out the field for the Hawkeyes' first triangular meet of the season. The Invitational starts at 11 a.m. at the Recreation Building.

"Confidence builders like last weekend's meet are really important early in the season," senior Christine Salsberry said.

"The level of competition is definitely going to be a lot greater this weekend, but it will be exciting because Wisconsin is one of our biggest rivals."

For the second week in a row, Iowa will be without the services of two of its top runners. Two-time 5,000-meter national champion Tracy Dahl Morris has been sidelined with what appears to be a stress fracture in her fibia. No specific timetable has been set for her return.

Senior sprinter Tina Floyd is suffering from a stress fracture in her back but has begun training and should be back in action soon.

Because of the injuries to Floyd and Morris, Iowa has had to rely on a mixture of upperclassmen and freshmen to pick up the slack.

"Some of our freshmen may very well be called on to play an important role for the team, but I have confidence that when they're needed, they'll step up and perform well," head coach Jerry Hassard said.

Saturday's meet should feature a number of exciting individual matchups. Iowa has a handful of runners who have legitimate shots at qualifying for the national championships. Tina Stec and Christine Salsberry in the mile, Denise Taylor in the shot put and Marlene Poole in either the 400 or 200 all have the potential to qualify for the March 11th championship meet, Hassard said.

WOMEN'S SWIMMING

Iowa looks to Big Ten Championships

Doug Alden

The Daily Iowan

Beating a team just one week earlier can give a team confidence, but according to Iowa women's swimming coach Pete Kennedy, it does not necessarily mean that team will win again.

The Hawkeyes face Illinois State in a dual meet in Normal, Ill., Saturday after defeating the Redbirds by 56.5 points in the Illini Invitational Jan. 21-22 in Champaign, Ill.

"That was in an invitational and that's a whole different ball game," Kennedy said. "In an invitational you have other teams spliced in between you and your opponent, so depth plays a certain part."

Iowa enters the meet with a 5-4 record overall and although it is not looking past Illinois

State, Kennedy said the team's priority remains next month's Big Ten Championships, taking place in Indianapolis, Ind.

"This is my last away dual meet, so that's kind of important," senior Nicole Widmyer said. "But I think we're definitely looking more toward Big Tens."

"We have to put the best lineup we can out there and hopefully we'll beat Illinois State, but it's not really something we can worry about," Kennedy said. "We'll just have to let things take their course."

The Hawkeyes started their taper Wednesday but Kennedy does not expect to see a significant decrease in times this early.

"(Tapering is) very strange," Widmyer said. "You're cutting back yards but you're still tired."

We probably won't feel good until right before we go to Indianapolis."

Injuries are taking a minor toll on Iowa. In addition to several Hawkeyes swimming through the flu and colds Saturday, Iowa will go without freshman Jami Strauss who has mononucleosis and junior Mary Rhodes who is out with a shoulder injury.

Freshmen divers Jessica Riccobono, Amy Kaduce and Kelly McCreedy will get an additional test Saturday with the absence of diving coach Bob Rydze who is traveling with the men's team to Minnesota this weekend.

"It's a good, toughening experience for them," Kennedy said. "They'll be on their own and if they make mistakes they'll have to correct themselves."

WOMEN'S GYMNASTICS

Hawkeyes optimistic despite injury plague

Pat Regan

The Daily Iowan

A plague of injuries and sickness have hit the Iowa women's gymnastics team as it prepares for its first Big Ten dual meet.

Iowa head coach Diane DeMarco will lead the Hawkeyes into East Lansing, Mich., to face Michigan State today. However, the Hawkeyes will not be at full strength.

"I'm optimistic, although we have been hit with some interesting challenges," DeMarco said.

"The team's been staying pretty tough, but it's like going into a fight with one hand tied behind your back."

The Spartans are 2-2 overall and 1-1 in the Big Ten, coming off a loss to Illinois. Meanwhile, Iowa has competed in two invitationals, losing to Michigan in the Bahamas and placing third in the Shakespeare Invitational at Missouri.

Injured or not, the Hawkeyes will be looking to get revenge for last year's narrow loss to the Spartans in Iowa City. It was their closest dual meet of the season.

"We're looking forward to facing Michigan State. Thus far, we have scored higher in both of our meets than they have in theirs. I think it's going to be exciting," said DeMarco.

Nearly half of the Iowa roster has been out for one reason or another, but the Hawkeyes have taken the setbacks in stride. Among the injured gymnasts is senior Michele Myers, who is trying to come back from an ankle injury for the end of the season. In spite of all the negatives, she is trying to remain positive.

"As a team, our goals are to stay healthy and improve our difficulties in our routines," Myers said. "We've got what it takes to win, we just have a few things to iron out."

Along with its ability to deal with adversity, sophomore Kim Baker has been one of the bright spots of the team. Baker is coming off a sensational season in which she was named Big Ten Freshman of the Year.

"Kim Baker is an inspiration. She truly embodies what the word student-athlete means," coach DeMarco said.

Iowa leads the series 57-7-3. The Hawkeyes' Matt Norem and Ray Brinzer are both listed to wrestle at 177 pounds. Norem is ranked seventh with a record of 19-4-4. Brinzer is No. 2 at 167 after going 4-0 at the National Duals where he wrestled twice at 177. Brinzer finished third at the national meet last season.

Roberts was lost with a broken foot, along with backup cornerback Clayton Holmes, one of the better special teams players. Several other special teams types, along with strong safety Darren Woodson, also missed time with injuries.

Aikman's back was better by opening day, but Smith still was absent when the Cowboys opened at Washington and lost 35-16 to a team that finished 4-12.

Smith was out the next week when Buffalo came to Texas Stadium and won 13-10. The players were grumbling and Haley slammed his helmet against a wall in the locker room, leaving a large dent.

Jones finally gave in. Smith signed for $13.6 million over four years, and began his season midway through the third game at Phoenix. The Cowboys won, beginning a seven-game winning streak.

But Aikman pulled a hamstring against the New York Giants and the star quarterback replaced by Jason Garrett, was a World League refugee with no NFL experience.

Adversity? Actually, the Cowboys got lucky.

On the Monday after Aikman was hurt, Cleveland released Bernie Kosar and he relieved Garrett in the second quarter of the next game, a 20-15 win over Phoenix.

Aikman was still out for a game against the Falcons, Smith pulled a hamstring early, and the Cowboys lost 27-14. But both were back three days later for one of the flukiest Thanksgiving Day games ever.

For Iowa to return to its winning form, Stringer is hoping Marx and Tunsil will be able to produce offensively in the same game. Since Tia Jackson's injury, either Tunsil or Marx has led Iowa in scoring in every game but one.

The inside scoring of Marx and the outside shooting of Tunsil have not both been effective in the same game. When Marx has scored 30 against Northern Illinois, 22 against Houston and 20 against Indiana, Tunsil has managed only 10, 4 and 10 points. When Tunsil had the hot hand, scoring 33 against Southern Cal, 24 against Wisconsin and 23 against SW Missouri State, Marx scored eight, 11, and zero points, respectively.

With Tunsil shooting 9-for-27 from the field in Iowa's two losses, Stringer will be looking for her to step up her scoring this weekend.

"The long and the short of it is that (Tunsil) has to be the person we can count on both offensively and defensively," Stringer said. "She has to represent on the outside what Cathy Marx does on the inside. I think it has been a burden on Nicole since Tia went down. Ultimately, she has to want the ball and step it up."

MEN'S TENNIS

Hawkeyes spring back into action

Doug Alden
The Daily Iowan

Being ranked sixth in its region and fourth in the Big Ten is pretty good for the Iowa men's tennis team, but Coach Steve Houghton wants more.

The Hawkeyes open their spring season with dual meets at regional opponents Miami (Ohio) today and Ball State Saturday, and Houghton hopes for Iowa to improve its present standing.

Neil Denahan

"We have everyone back, of course, from the fall and I expect to have a real good spring," Houghton said. "We were fifth in the Big Ten last year and I thought we were actually a little bit better than that."

Ball State, currently tied for fourth place in Region IV and Miami, currently ranked 10th could both prove challenging for the Hawkeyes this early in the season.

"What most people don't realize is that Ball State is a big name in college tennis," Houghton said. "I think (the Mid-America Conference) probably doesn't get some of the respect that it deserves, particularly in the non-revenue sports."

Iowa beat Ball State last spring and Houghton feels the victory could inspire the Hawkeyes to beat the Cardinals again.

"I think what's motivating our guys a little bit this year is that (Ball State) kind of felt after we beat them last year that it was largely because it was in our facility," he said. "I think our guys are going to be fired up to prove they can beat them on whatever surface and whatever place."

Houghton plans on playing juniors Bryan Crowley and Bob Zumph in the top two positions, freshman Tom Derouin at No. 3 and senior co-captain Todd Shale at No. 4. Carl Manheim, who is suffering from a shoulder injury, will play at No. 5 if he is healthy. If Manheim does not play, co-captain Neil Denahan will take his place and junior Naguib Shahid would round out the top six.

Houghton was uncertain of who Iowa's three doubles teams would consist of and said he probably will not decide until shortly before the match.

Because of NCAA regulations, the Hawkeyes have been limited to practicing for just more than a week this semester. They do not see this as a factor.

"Everyone's really confident right now," Denahan said. "There will probably be some nerves for everyone, but we have a lot of experience."

"Everyone pretty much thought we could have had a better fall and they're motivated to do better."

The Hawkeyes begin Big Ten play Feb. 20 when they host Minnesota in a dual meet and Houghton says Iowa could surprise some people in the conference.

"It's a real, real competitive conference this year. There aren't really 'superteams' like there have been in the past," he said. "We're really in the ballpark to win it this year. I haven't felt that a lot of other years but I feel like we are there."

WOMEN'S TENNIS

Iowa to match up with national power

Doug Alden
The Daily Iowan

Although it is not starting conference play until late next month, the Iowa women's tennis team is not beginning the spring season with any pushovers.

The Hawkeyes travel this weekend to Tucson, Ariz., for the Arizona Tournament with dual matches against host and national power Arizona, Texas Christian and California-Santa Barbara.

Coach Micki Schillig is ready for her squad to return to competition.

"I'm really excited for it to be our first one and have the chance to play a great team like Arizona," she said. "But in a sense it's a little bit disappointing because it's tough to get these people scheduled and then not to have our team at full strength."

Injuries have already hampered the Hawkeyes. No. 1 player Laura Dvorak is in a walking cast with an ankle injury and senior Cara Cashon is out with a badly sprained ankle. Cashon will not make the trip but Dvorak will compete and does not expect the injury to affect her game a great deal.

"I only had to take two days off. It really only hurts when I walk, not when I play," Dvorak said. "I hit for a couple of hours (Wednesday) and it felt pretty good."

Despite practicing for just more than a week and starting against such strong competition, Schillig is confident her team will perform well.

"I know they all worked very hard over Christmas," Schillig said. "They're fired up for the tournament and they're going to go after the top teams."

The Hawkeyes are also confident going into the tournament.

"We all have really high expectations," Dvorak said. "We all know what we're capable of. We have the opportunity to do really well."

"I'm really excited. This is a really good meet with some really tough teams," sophomore Nikki Willette added. "It's a good opportunity for us. If we do well it will help our confidence a lot."

Iowa is coming off a perfect fall when they posted victories over Gustavus Adolphus, Iowa State and Marquette, and Schillig hopes the wins will give the Hawkeyes momentum going into the spring.

"We played well this fall. We didn't have a lot of strong dual matches but we had some individuals do well in some tournaments," Schillig said. "These are going to be dual-type matches and we haven't really been tested in those."

MEN'S SWIMMING

Hawks to meet Big Ten's best

Mike Egenes
The Daily Iowan

The Iowa men's swimming and diving team has dropped three of the last four dual meets, and the Hawkeyes may be in for more rough waters when they travel to Minneapolis, Minn., this weekend.

The 3-3 Hawkeyes square off Saturday with the Golden Gophers, an early pick to win the Big Ten Conference.

But Coach Glenn Patton isn't necessarily thinking of an upset.

"Minnesota is a strong team and it'll be in its own pool, but I would say that winning or losing isn't as important as performing well."

Patton wants the trip to Minnesota to be as positive as possible since it will be the site of the Big Ten and NCAA Championships.

"We'll need to go up there and perform well," Patton said, emphasizing the performance. "We want to develop a good attitude about going to the site of the Big Tens. We want everything about the University of Minnesota to be positive."

"If it's the worst blizzard and ice storm we've ever seen, we want it to be a positive experience," Patton continued.

Since starting the season with convincing dual meet wins over Wisconsin and Alabama, the Hawkeyes have dropped three of their last four. Patton said the wins and losses will take care of themselves as long as the swimmers' times improve.

"We're not performing up to the level I think this team is capable of," Patton said. "We've got to start posting faster times and things will take care of themselves in the wondrous column."

"If we perform well we'll see what the outcome is, but we can't control what our opponents do," Patton said. "Swimming isn't like basketball, no wrestling or football. There's no such thing as defense in swimming."

Randy "Pink" Floyd (Jason London, center) splits his social time between the football jocks and the stoner crowd in Richard "Slacker" Linklater's "Dazed and Confused."

'Dazed': young slackers on drugs

Tasha Robinson
The Daily Iowan

Now that director John Hughes has moved out of his "high school sucks but adulthood is worse" phase and into his "precocious kids who maim adults are funny" phase, it's fallen to a new filmmaker to play Voice of a Bored Teenage Generation.

Writer/director Richard Linklater has taken up the mantle in suitably fine style. His "Slacker" (1991) was hailed as a quirky, offbeat masterpiece. The follow-up, last year's "Dazed and Confused," got mixed reviews: Some viewers were glad to see Linklater's loose, wandering style and free-flowing dialogue crop up again, while others cried "Sellout!" at the fact that Linklater took studio money and produced something with a nodding acquaintance with a story line.

"Dazed," which plays at the Bijou this weekend, may be slightly more plot-driven than "Slacker," but it's just as free-wheeling and just as familiar for recent college graduates. Linklater's opted for a slightly modified version of his traveling-camera style; the result is something like Robert Altman's fabulous "Short Cuts" on a small scale.

The starting point for the film is high-school football quarterback Randy "Pink" Floyd, a passively friendly "Dukes of Hazard" reject who has friends in all circles. He vacillates at will between the jocks, the nerds, the freshman geeks and the stoners, apparently unsure what to do with his life, but lacking impetus to make a decision.

Floyd's big decision about whether to sign an anti-drug pledge sheet for the football team is the nominal subject of the film. But Floyd's really just the most convenient epicenter for an ambulatory mockumentary on small-town high-school life in the '70s. Freshman hazing, beer bashes, street cruising and Wood Shop bong-building — Linklater throws it all into a visual salad, and to the tunes of ZZ Top, KISS, Black Sabbath and Ted Nugent.

"Dazed" isn't quite as funny as "Slacker," nor is it as meandering; Linklater returns again and again to the same groups of students, whose antics are as depressing as they are amusing. For the most part, they're going nowhere and have just enough self-awareness to be furious about it, through the haze of beer and grass.

But Linklater's wry, black humor is still fresh and entertaining. His cast of virtually unknown actors is perfectly balanced; while some of the characters are standouts (among them, a much-abused freshman and a loathsome slinky graduate who still likes trolling for jailbait), the actors are simply apropos — neither so spectacular or flawed as to upset the even flow of the film.

"Dazed" is a snide look back for those of us who survived high school and the '70s. It offers the same sensation of mixed loathing and nostalgia that used to be John Hughes' main stock in trade; it offers the same smirks of recognition that "Slacker" provoked. But more than anything, this is a film that offers a chance for us '70s veterans to ask that age-old question: "Ye GODS, did we REALLY dress like that?"

"Dazed and Confused" will show at the Bijou tonight at 5 and 7, Saturday at 5 and 9:30 p.m. and Sunday at 6:45 p.m.
