Abortion protesters refuse to pay fine

Tricia DeWall
The Daily Iowan

Two abortion protesters who have spent 18 days in jail will remain there until they pay a three-year-old fine for trespassing at an Iowa City abortion clinic, Johnson County Magistrate Stephen Gerard said Wednesday.

Mary Adam, 57, and Sharon McKee, 38, both of Omaha, Neb., were arrested at the Emma Goldman Clinic for Women, 227 N. Dubuque St., on Nov. 26, 1990 and were convicted by jury for criminal trespass on Feb. 14, 1991.

McKee and Adam refused to pay a fine of $100 and court surcharges. They were given the opportunity to make the fine payable to a charitable organization, but refused that option as well. In the meantime, Johnson County has spent $1,728 to keep the women in jail at the cost of $48 a day.

"It goes against our principles," McKee said. "We don't feel it's wrong to save an unborn child from death. Paying the fine would be one more action that would further diminish the sanctity of an unborn child."

Gerard said warrants were issued for their arrests in November 1991 when the women failed to appear at a hearing.

"A rule to show cause hearing was scheduled and Ms. McKee and Ms. Adam failed to attend. Subsequently, a warrant was issued for their arrest," Gerard said.

The warrant was not acted upon for more than two years until McKee and Adam stopped at a gas station near Des Moines on Jan. 15. Their license plates were run through a police computer, and both were arrested on the outstanding warrant.

"The arrest definitely caught us by surprise," Adam said, adding that she and McKee were having a cup of coffee at a Kum & Go convenience store when it happened.

Gerard said both women said they could pay the fines, but will not.

"They refused to do anything," Gerard said. "They will be imprisoned until they perform the action that caused them to be found in contempt of court."

McKee and Adam have been active in the pro-life movement for many years. However, they stress that theirs is a form of peaceful resistance, and that they are only there to offer women an alternative.

"I really dislike being called violent. We are very, very nonviolent. We just sit in front of the door until they take us away," Adam said. "We're there mainly to offer an alternative. It's like their last chance. Abortion clinic."

Flag to fly at half-staff for UI student killed in crash

The flag atop the Old Capitol will fly at half-staff today for UI freshman Sarah Polito, of Naperville, Ill., who died Saturday after an automobile accident Friday night in her hometown.

Polito died from head injuries sustained in the accident, Naperville Police Sgt. Lisa Burghardt said.

The three-vehicle accident occurred at 7:24 p.m. Friday night. Polito had one passenger with her, Merideth Musolf, also of Naperville. Musolf was treated for minor injuries and released from the hospital. Both drivers of the other two vehicles are in good condition.

"The roads were bad that night — there was snow and ice," Burghardt said. "There is not much more to do with the investigation."

STATE

Dreaded heroin wave alarming health officials

A new wave of heroin has hit Iowa.

It's cheaper. It's stronger. It has state health officials sounding an alarm.

"The people that use heroin say this is the best that's been around here in years," said William Shepherd, director of the Mid-City Addiction Team in Des Moines.

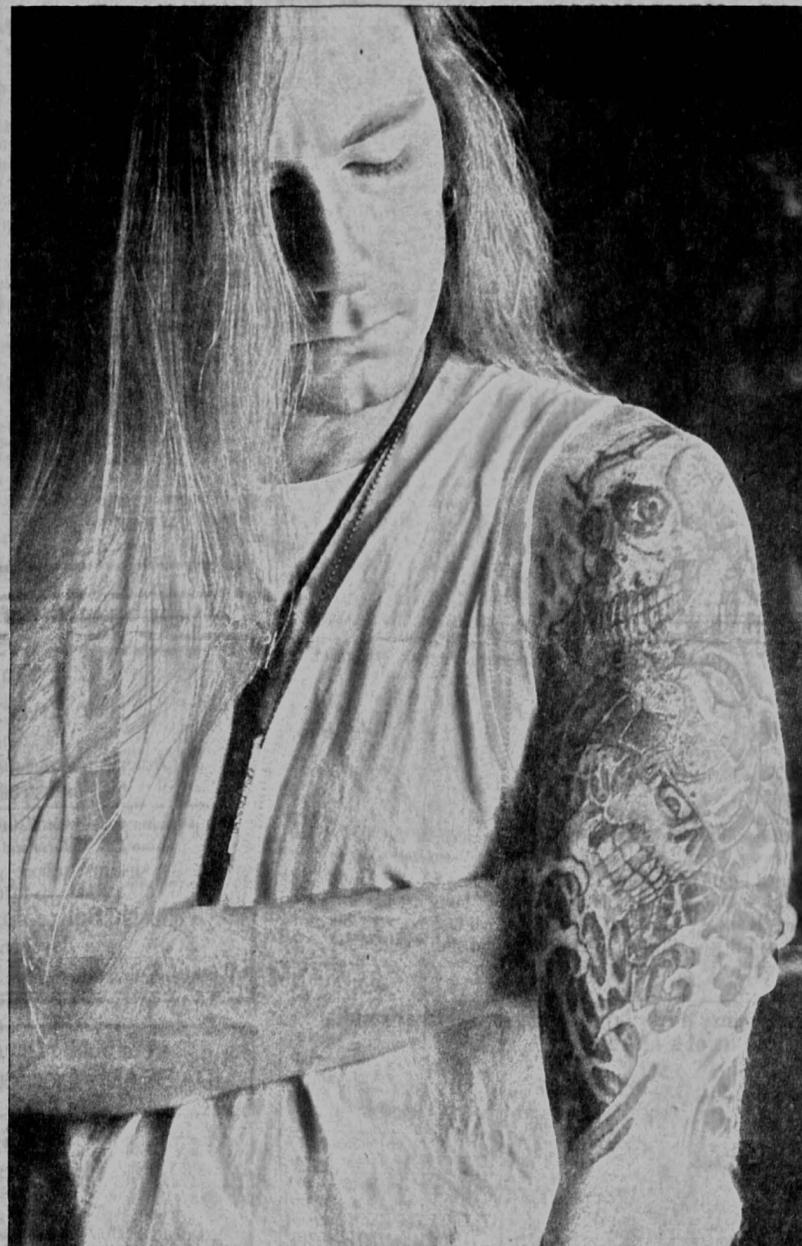

Once the most feared of illegal narcotics, heroin fell from popularity in the 1970s. Two years ago, its use shot up on the East and West Coasts and has been spreading across the country ever since, including Iowa.

In the past three months, treatment centers in Des Moines, the Quad Cities and Cedar Falls have reported increase in the use and availability of the powerful, habit-forming drug.

Shepherd, who has worked with heroin addicts since 1971, said the pain is affordable. Typically, pills for $25 for a quarter-gram or "button," he said.

MANY 'VERY MAD, VERY UNHAPPY'

Housing law halts 'discriminatory' ads

Chris Pothoven
The Daily Iowan

The Daily Iowan and other local newspapers are no longer accepting classified housing ads which directly or indirectly indicate the applicant desired, in compliance with Iowa Fair Housing Laws.

The DI implemented the policy last week after meeting with a member of the Iowa Civil Rights Commission, who visited several Eastern Iowa newspapers to educate them about the laws.

"Because of the regulations, we can no longer run ads that say 'Christian female seeks same,' or ads that specify male or female roommates," said Cris Perry, DI classified advertising manager.

The Iowa City Press-Citizen and the Cedar Rapids Gazette also are now complying with the regulations.

In Iowa, access to housing and equal housing services may not be denied because of race, color, creed, sex, religion, national origin, physical / mental disability or familial status / presence of children.

Perry said a number of callers have been upset when they call to place ads and are told the new policy.

"A lot of people are very mad, very unhappy about the whole situation, especially women," she said. "A lot of women only want to live with another woman."

"One disabled woman called to place an ad for a personal care attendant and roommate. She was very upset that she couldn't ask for females only in the ad."

UI junior Laura Bleke found out about the new policy when she called to place an ad for a female roommate.

"It seems kind of ridiculous that I can't advertise for a female, but it wasn't a big deal," she said. "When guys call I just say it's already rented."

Feeling a bit jittery? Don't blame sugar

Kristin Berg
The Daily Iowan

The sugar in Cap'n Crunch, chocolate chip ice cream, Gummy Bears and Coca-Cola may give children cavities and cause other problems, but researchers have found they don't contribute to out-of-control behavior.

For years parents have blamed sugar for causing hyperactivity rather than other physical or environmental factors, UI Associate Professor of pediatrics Scott Lindgren said. But a recent study conducted by the UI College of Medicine and Vanderbilt University has determined that sugar, saccharin and aspartame or Nutrasweet are not to blame.

"When children are hyperactive or irritable they shouldn't blame food," Lindgren said. "If a child is wild after school, parents often blame it on a sweet snack, not thinking it is because the child has been cooped up in school all day or at a birthday party where all the children are excited and running around wild."

Forty-eight children and parents from Iowa City and Cedar Rapids participated in the nine-week study conducted through the UI General Clinical Research Center. The children were divided into two groups — 25 normal preschoolers, ages 3 to 5, and 23 allegedly "sugar-sensitive" children between the ages 6 and 10.

Lindgren and his associates prescribed a different diet for three blocks, each lasting for three weeks. The first three-week diet was high in sugar, the second in aspartame or Nutrasweet and the third was sweetened with saccharin. To make sure the children were actually eating the food given

OFFICIALS SEARCHING OUT CAUSE

Pipeline fire under investigation

Liza Roche
The Daily Iowan

The 36-hour fire at Mid America Pipe Line Co. was extinguished Wednesday afternoon, but repair work and inspection are far from over.

The five-explosion fire erupted when a main line booster pump leaked and ignited propane, forcing 12 workers to evacuate the building, which is located 6 miles east of Iowa City. The fire is the facility's fourth in 20 years.

Rick Neal, vice president of public affairs at Mid America, said officials were waiting for the remaining residual propane to seep out and burn off before inspection and repair work could go full force.

He couldn't give a dollar estimate of damages, but Neal said two of the four main line booster pumps were destroyed.

"We expect to move propane through there at a reduced horsepower Thursday morning," Neal said. It will take a few days for investigators to find out why one of the booster pumps leaked and caused the explosion, he said.

West Branch Assistant Fire Chief Kevin Stoolman said two fire marshals went to the site Wednesday.

"They take all the precautions that they can take. They've just got some really bad luck."

Pat Klinger, Office of Pipeline Safety day to investigate.

Pat Klinger, who works at the Office of Pipeline Safety in Washington, D.C., said pipelines are the safest form of product transit in terms of miles traveled and people injured. Eleven fatalities and 105 incidents were reported in 1992 due to incidents at pipeline companies. "It doesn't happen every day," Klinger said. "It's a very safe industry."

Five of the 11 fatalities and 35 of 71 reported injuries occurred because of outside forces, such as back hoes or tractors used on the land above the pipelines.

Although this is not the facility's first blaze, Stoolman did not believe the fire was caused by negligence.

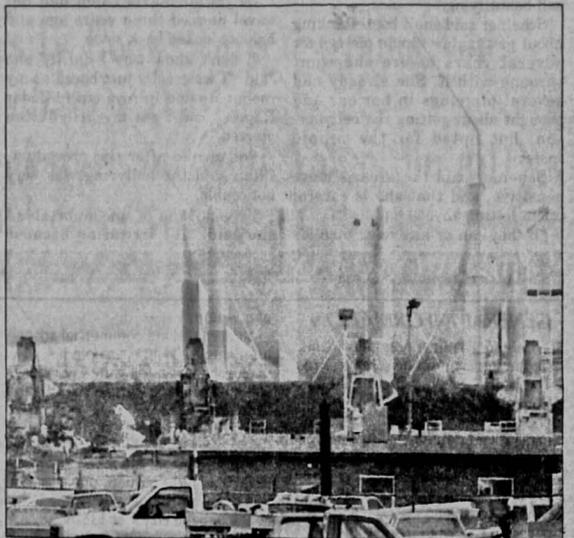

"They take all the precautions that they can take," he said. "They've just got some really bad luck."

Stoolman said because Mid America has experienced problems before, the West Branch Fire Department prepares for these types of fires.

While concerned about the number of fires that have taken place at Mid America, neighbors do not feel in danger.

Body art illustrates personae

Tory Brecht
The Daily Iowan

Tattoos are no longer just for sweaty Hell's Angels with the word "Mother" surrounded by thorns stenciled on their arms. With the cultured UI Museum of Art featuring a tattoo art show and more "clean cut" college kids getting Tasmanian devils on their arms and barbed wire encircling their ankles, tattoos have truly come out of seedy back alleys and into the mainstream.

"I think tattoo art is becoming more popular all the time," Jo-Ann Conklin, a curator for the museum said. "Body adornment in many cultures goes back many generations. I think there's always been an interest in body adornment."

The museum is featuring a show by Don Ed Hardy, a tattooist and artist from San Francisco, featuring tattooed chairs, photographs of people covered in tattoos and prints in a "tattoo art" design.

"It's been a very popular show, both for the university and the general public," Conklin said. "People are very open to it. Maybe a reason for this is it is something they can relate to. People like it because it's unusual, fun and approachable."

This comes as no surprise to Jerry Short, co-owner with his wife Lynda of the Beauty is Skin Art tattoo shop, 626 S. Dubuque St., and proud bearer of more than 50 tattoos.

"Tattoos let people express their feelings," Short said. "It tells other people what you like. I like dragons

"I did this guy's butt the other day — he already had a Harley Davidson on it — and he wanted me to put flames on it. I guess you could call him a flaming asshole."

Kevin Nutt, tattoo artist and lizards, so I get them tattooed on me."

Short, his wife and artist Kevin Nutt have been in business in Iowa City for nearly a year and said most of their clients are college kids.

"It's become very mainstream," Short said. "It's not just for bikers and stuff anymore. Doctors, lawyers, sorority girls, they're all getting tattoos."

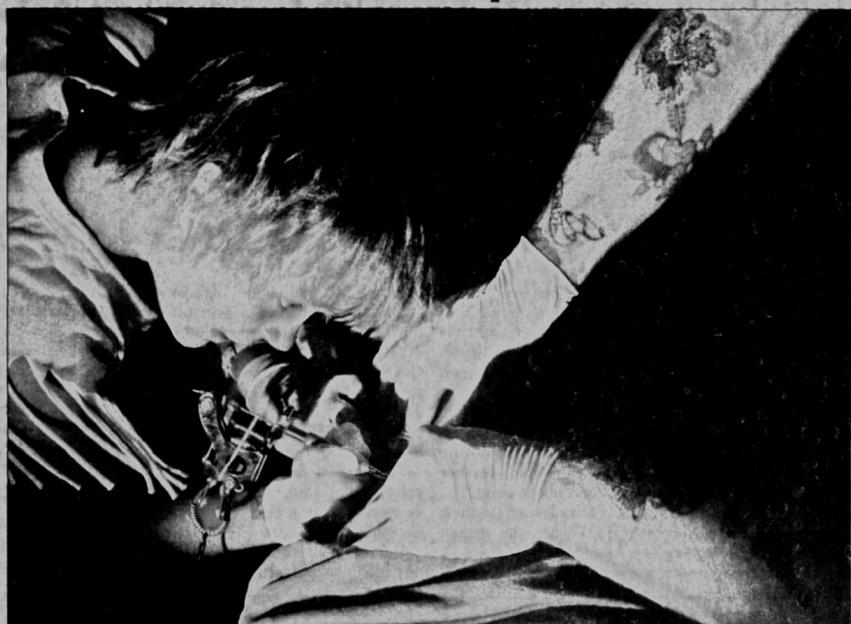

Short said he tattoos more women than men.

"Girls, once they make up their mind to do it — they go through with it," he said. "A lot of times guys will come in, say they'll be back and then never show up."

Nutt, who has been tattooing for four years and does custom designs, said the pain involved is minimal.

"It's not that bad. The anticipation will hurt you more than the actual tattoo itself," he said. "It feels like a cat scratch; paper cuts hurt a lot more."

Chris Fortney, who was in the store considering a new tattoo, said the design on his ankle hurt, but not the one on his shoulder.

"I chewed the hell out of a piece of bubble gum when I got the ankle done," he said. "But I would rather sit under a tattoo needle for 30 minutes than get a shot from a doctor."

Nutt said people get tattoos in all sorts of strange places. He's done women's breasts, thighs and one man's posterior that he recalls with some detail.

"I did this guy's butt the other day — he already had a Harley Davidson on it — and he wanted me to put flames on it," Nutt said. "I guess you could call him a flaming asshole."

Despite doing detail work in the neighborhood of people's intimate parts, Nutt said a tattooist can't afford to be distracted.

"I've seen it all," he said. "I see it as art — after awhile you get used to it."

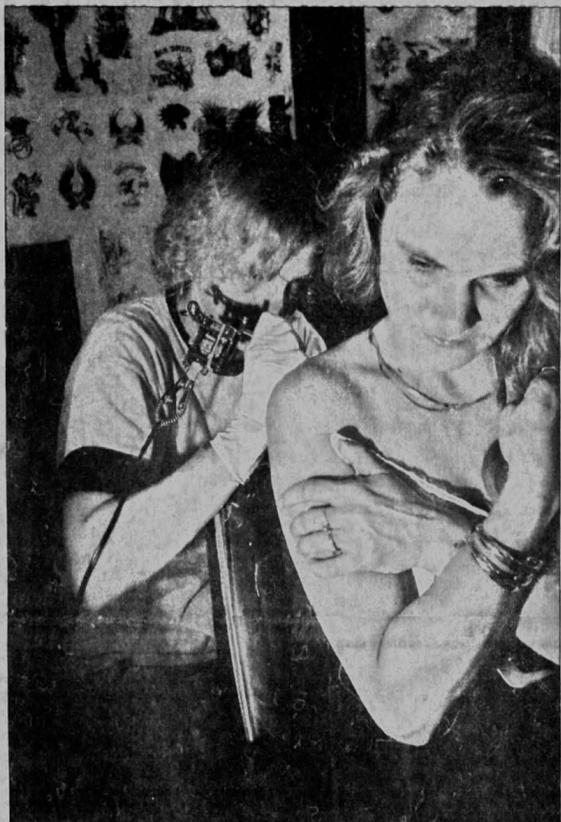

Short said people who think alcohol will fortify themselves enough to get up the nerve to be tattooed, will be out of luck at his shop.

"We won't do people if they're drunk," he said. "They ain't in the right state of mind. Besides, drinking thins your blood, you usually don't bleed much at all, but if you're drinking, you'll bleed a lot more."

In spite of the needles and blood, Conklin said there may be a future in tattoos as a fine art.

"I think the idea of art as elitist is something museum professionals are trying very hard to change," she said. "They are trying to bring in other publics to make the museums more enticing. I'd like to think the tattoo show is fairly adventurous."

That may be an understatement if Snake the Hell's Angel hears about the show and decides to ride his Harley through the main gallery looking for a new design.

OW! Holey noses: or nipple, or belly button, or . . .

Tory Brecht
The Daily Iowan

Some pundits say you have to suffer for beauty — but would a stud in the bellybutton or a safety pin through the nipple be too high a price to pay? Apparently not for some Iowa City residents.

Tiny holes are showing up in many unexpected places, including Kristi Scheiner's nipple.

"It hurts to be beautiful," Scheiner said. "But I've been through worse. I don't think it has anything to do with self-mutilation — it is self-beautifying."

Scheiner said she'd been thinking about getting her nipple pierced for several years before she went through with it. She already had several piercings in her ear and thought about getting the bellybutton, but opted for the nipple instead.

Scheiner said the area is more sensitive, and that she is careful about letting anyone handle it.

"If they can be nice to it, then it's OK," she said. "But if they beat the hell out of it, I'd rather they'd leave it alone."

Greg Arbuckle of Arbuckle's tattoos in Cedar Rapids did the piercing on Scheiner and said he will pierce just about anything.

"Anything you can get a hold of, you can pierce," he said.

Arbuckle said more people are getting various body parts perforated, but said he never asks them why they're doing it.

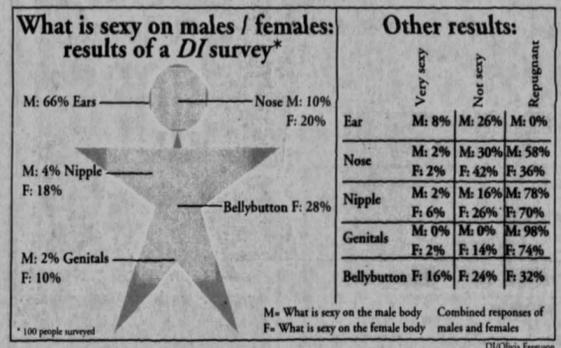

"I don't ask those questions," he said. "To them, it's not weird."

UI junior Maria Chen had her navel pierced three years ago and has not looked back since.

"I don't know why I did it," she said. "I was really just bored so my roommate and I drove out to Cedar Rapids, and I got my bellybutton pierced."

For awhile after the procedure, Chen said the bellyring was very noticeable.

"It was kind of uncomfortable," she said. "It's irritating because your clothing goes over it. But now I don't notice — it's basically like earrings."

Chen said she is planning on having her tongue pierced this weekend, but is having trouble finding someone willing to do it.

Marla Wright, a UI senior, had a bad experience getting her bellybutton pierced and cautions anyone considering it to make sure the procedure is done properly.

"I was in Flagstaff, Ariz., when I got mine done, and they used a gun which got stuck in my belly," she said. "I didn't find out until later that it should only be done with a hypodermic needle."

Wright said the infection became so severe she couldn't bend down or move her torso. Despite the pain, she tried again, this time at home.

"After I got better, I tried a safety pin," she said. "I had a friend help me with it, but it bled so much I just gave up."

So why do people bleed and wince in the name of beauty?

"I don't know, I guess it's just something that's a little more interesting," Chen said.

'IT LOOKS LIKE SARAJEVO'

Disheveled Art Building causes nuisance

Megan Penick
The Daily Iowan

UI art student Mike Murphy said going to class in the Art Building, which was closed during the fall semester for repairs, is like entering a war zone.

"We don't have a floor in the whole basement of the Art Building," he said. "It looks like Sarajevo."

In the basement, several rooms have no tiling, floor boards are missing and the walls are eroded at the bottoms. Walking from the east to the west wing of the Art Building, students and faculty must cross through sawdusty air and under plastic-covered scaffolding, where a ceiling is being repaired.

Art department Director Samuel Becker said the building hasn't been fully repaired because of possible spring flooding.

"The worst of it has already been repaired. They fixed up where there were electrical problems, and we are now occupying (the previously flooded rooms)," he said. "We had no heat for a while because there were problems with the heating system. It's an old building."

Photography Professor Peter Feldstein said the basement is dirty and moldy, creating bad smells and discomfort for everyone.

"It's depressing. Our classroom gets used a lot, and it's a disaster," he said. "The place being a mess just compounds the problems ... the place is really shabby."

Feldstein said he was told he would have more space for teaching when the Art Building reopened for the spring semester. But he said now there is less work space for faculty and students.

"We were encouraged that we might move back with a couple of new rooms to work in. But all we got was a rusty old green shelving unit and an abandoned desk," he said. "My grad students aren't complaining, because they're using my darkroom. It's more of a psychological drain on the faculty."

Becker said the delay in repairs is nothing unusual for the UI.

"The maintenance in the university's buildings was delayed for years because of a shortage of funds. All of that is catching up with this institution," he said. "As they come up with funds, they will repair."

UI Vice President for University Relations Ann Rhodes said many of the badly damaged areas around campus are still undergoing assessment before repairs will take place.

The areas yet to be completely repaired include: the Art Building, the Hancher and Union footbridges, stabilization of the slope behind the president's house on Church Street, the athletic fields on Lower Finkbine Lane, Mayflower Residence Hall and landscaping around the river. Rhodes said these areas will not be repaired until the spring.

MATTER OF PRIORITIES

House votes to cut Branstad's school funding

Mike Glover
Associated Press

DES MOINES — The House on Wednesday voted to cut Gov. Terry Branstad's school funding package by $6.6 million, setting the stage for intense bargaining over financing education.

Critics said lawmakers were injecting partisan politics into education policy, while supporters said they were acknowledging fiscal reality.

"Education has lost its place at the head of the table," said Rep. David Schrader, D-Monroe.

Proponents of the move countered that lawmakers over the years have promised schools big funding increases, only to find themselves unable to deliver.

"That's the real charade, promising more than you can deliver," said Rep. Ron Corbett, R-Cedar Rapids, head of the House Appropriations Committee.

The budget fight carries political significance and is closely watched by the 400 local school districts in Iowa.

Each year, lawmakers decide how much of an increase in general state financing for local schools is available.

In delivering his budget message this year, Branstad called for a 2.5 percent growth, which would give schools an additional $38.3 million.

The Senate, meanwhile, approved a 3 percent increase, which would call for $46.5 million more.

Republicans control the House on a 51-49 margin, and GOP conservatives argue that the state can't afford either increase. They agreed to a 2.1 percent increase, providing an additional $31.7 million.

"We can't keep going around and talking about our great educational system if we're not going to invest in it."

Rep. Dennis Cohoon, D-Burlington

The House ratified that increase on a 51 to 44 vote Thursday night, setting the stage for bargaining with the Senate over a final level, which all sides agreed is likely to be near what Branstad recommended.

"At some point, I suspect we will end up compromising," said Rep. Steve Grubbs, R-Davenport.

The school financing issue carries political weight because it affects schools in every legislative district.

Rep. Art Ollie, D-Clinton, said all the talk about balancing the state's budget is simply political cover for lowering the priority that schools have traditionally gotten in state fund-

"This is not a matter of fiscal conservatism, this is a matter of priorities," said Ollie.

"We can't keep going around and talking about our great educational system if we're not going to invest in it," echoed Rep. Dennis Cohoon, D-Burlington.

House Democratic leader Bob Arnould said the funding proposal doesn't make sense because the state's economy is rebounding, and tax collections are expected to grow by about 5 percent.

"In this budget cycle, it isn't necessary," said Arnould.

Rep. Rick Dickinson, D-Sabula, said the school finance issue has gotten entwined with a primary for governor between Branstad and U.S. Rep. Fred Grandy.

Instead of staying at the Statehouse pushing for his funding package, Branstad on Wednesday was on a glitzy tour around the state announcing his candidacy.

"He does stand for something — he stands for re-election," said Dickinson.

With House approval, the measure now returns to the Senate. A final version is likely to be hammered out in a House-Senate conference committee.

Lawmakers are also operating under a tight time deadline. State law requires them to set a school funding level by next week.

Both critics and backers of the package have conceded the Legislature is unlikely to meet that deadline.

UI MASCOT POLICY

Sensitivity and respect

A proposal by the UI's Board In Control Of Athletics that would ban all racially offensive mascots from participating in athletic events at the UI has recently "spawned generalization quibbles," to borrow from a DI headline of Jan. 31. People are wondering what happens when the policy is extended to include members of the Caucasian "race," or how members of the animal rights community will respond? Both of these knee-jerk reactions are indicative of the low level of sensitivity and respect white Americans maintain in regard to so-called "minority" concerns and the people themselves.

An examination of the language involved can begin to expose the truth behind the rhetoric. Many have had the audacity to compare Illinois' Chief Illiniwek to Michigan's Wolverine while scornfully speculating about how the rights of animals fit into the policy. Thus, with a wave of patronizing humor and the brazen deduction of an amateur sleuth, they dismiss the whole "mascot thing" with a laugh. However, implicit in such a statement is the mental cognition, perhaps subconscious, that an American Indian human being is worthy of no more respect than a dog. The distinction between human and animal is crucial, and the symbol of whiteness is used as the separating standard that reduces all other humans to animate nature for purposes of exploitation.

Leaving the reality of language, Chief Illiniwek has had similar comparisons to Purdue's Boilermaker: What does the positive portrayal of a strapping, "pull up the bootstraps and let's get to work" engineering white man have in common with another white man in stereotypical ceremonial dress with paint on his face? The only comparison is between the complexities of the dominant and the oppressed. "Pistol Pete" is a positive representation of an intended reality for white Americans. Chief Illiniwek is a minstrel character. While grossly appropriating American Indian culture for the entertainment of thousands of white people, he is a painful reminder of past injustices that American Indians have suffered by the hands of white Americans. Is this clear, or is an awful rendition of the "tomahawk chop" needed in order to bring the point home?

Why would the descendants of these culture crooks seek to preserve an institution that, in the eyes of the oppressed, is so blatantly racist and without reverence for American Indian culture? It is clear that the admission of wrongdoing here and now would mean that local and global, past and present white male power systems have dominated and oppressed groups of non-white peoples in a variety of ways, in some cases for hundreds of years. In such ways, their unearned, elevated status today would begin to be undermined.

Therefore, as Patricia Hill-Collins suggests, far too few white Americans are willing to acknowledge — let alone challenge — the actions of eurocentric masculinists, because they have benefited from them. Their intentions were expressed every time they participated in the "Indian chant" that preceded home basketball games at Iowa State University. Racism and stereotype were as American as "The Star Spangled Banner" there and elsewhere. As the audience rose for the singing of the national anthem, they remained standing as the band played their dehumanizing version of an "Indian war chant," and everyone perpetrated a fraud.

That particular form of domination has since been denied them as a result of consistent agitation from local American Indian activists. There was an example of our best recourse against institutional racism: American Indians (the First Nation), the Black Nation, La Raza and every oppressed group of people must pull up the bootstraps and get to work if change is going to take place. In the spirit of resistance, we call on the BICOA to buck the tradition of white supremacy. Pass the UI mascot policy. Surprise yourselves.

Rape a matter of violence, not sex

To the Editor:

Richard Weikart, how can you say the root cause of rape is "loose sexual mores" (guest opinion, DI, Jan. 26)? Rape and sexual abuse have happened throughout history and are not products of the sexual revolution. There has recently been an increase in reported rapes, and this is due to feminist activism of the early 1970s which raised public awareness against myths such as the one you cling to — "rape is just sex." A rapist is not motivated by his uncontrollable lust, but by aggression that he expresses through sexualized violence. Men who rape other men are rarely homosexual, they say they rape to degrade and feel powerful. Certainly the number of rapes occurring every year is staggering, but rape is a part of a sexist society — a society where the media insists on portraying violence as sexy, where pornos depict women enjoying rape, where victims fear stepping forward for fear of being thought to have "loose sexual mores" and where (when victims do step forward) rapists receive meager punishments — only one in 100 rapists is sentenced to more than one year in prison and one-quarter of convicted rapists are not sentenced to prison at all, but immediately released on probation.

In reference to your comments on divorce, enough already! I am sick of divorced people being portrayed as criminals who are destroying the world. People grow and change, and a failed marriage does not make a person a failure. Good parents can raise happy kids whether the parents live together or apart.

TOM LINDSEY

Welcome to the land of litigation

On Jan. 19, 1993, a tragedy overwhelmed the Iowa City community with the untimely death of basketball star Chris Street — may he rest in peace. Or may he rest in peace?

A year has passed, and the spirit of Chris Street still lives on as the No. 40 lingers in people's hearts and minds, signifying a striving for excellence, hope, determination and an all-around class act.

Although I'm beginning to wonder if the No. 40 isn't more symbolic of the number of lawsuits which will stem from Chris Street's accidental death. The most recent lawsuit was a petition of intervention filed by Kimberly Vinton, Street's girlfriend and passenger at the time of the accident.

It appears that Vinton has jumped on the litigation bandwagon with the Street family, also claiming that the snowplow driver Charles Pence and Johnson County caused the accident. In turn, Pence has filed a countersuit claiming that Chris Street was at fault, thus completing the litigation triangle. This led me to think, why not make the triangle a square with another lawsuit filed on my behalf?

I contacted my attorney, Vincent Tarantino (alias, Vinnie the weasel) in Jersey City, who I've kept on retainer in lieu of potential libel suits, in order to discuss the possibility of a case. After running up a couple hours of lawyer fees, Vinnie decided that I had a pretty solid case.

So I've decided to file a lawsuit against the Street family, Charles Pence, Johnson County and Kimberly Vinton, claiming that they've caused me innumerable incidents of physical and mental pain and suffering. I'm willing to prove that this suffering is a direct result of the pending lawsuits and the continual bickering of who was at fault in the accident.

Vinnie decided that the first thing to prove is that both parties in the accident were at fault in the accident, and, therefore, my suffering is completely unnecessary and a direct result of the finger-pointing lawsuits. In doing so, we'll contend that Street was at fault for not yielding at a stop sign and not wearing his seat belt. Proving that Charles Pence is at fault will be a little more difficult, since Vinnie's associates were unable to obtain any evidence at the scene of the accident. Fortunately, evidence was obtained from Pence's earlier trial and by incorporating the following infallible formula: (skid-mark length X the volume of impact) / (the setting of the moon X the barometric pressure). This evidence indicates that Pence was indeed driving 52 mph in a 45 mph zone.

My colleague will then prove to a jury of my peers that I have endured damages resulting from mental suffering because of the lawsuits. Approximately 48 hours after the Street family initially pressed charges against Pence, I was left with no other choice but to place myself under psychiatric care with a reputable doctor. In the doctor's final synopsis, he diagnosed that I'm suffering from post-season depression and mental anguish caused by the lawsuits, which are inevitably triggered by anything related to Chris Street, basketball, unfounded greed and the judicial system.

Symptoms for post-season depression include perpetual sulking, waking up at nights bathed in a layer of perspiration and shouting at the top of my lungs "This could've been the year!", turning to the Chicago Cubs for guidance, nausea, and subconsciously cheering for whoever plays Duke in the second round of the NCAA basketball tournament.

The doctor derived his diagnosis of mental anguish from behavioral patterns and events observed over my continuing sessions. These include wearing a neck brace prescribed by my chiropractor whenever I watch the local news or read the local newspaper in fear that I might be mentally blind sided by another suit filed in behalf of the Street case. My inability to shed a tear when Michael Jordan retired. Consumption by a deep paranoia that all defendants and plaintiffs on Court TV, Divorce Court and The People's Court are involved in a conspiracy against me with the intent of driving me mad enough to open fire on a TCI cable office. The fact that I participated in a John Grisham book-burning in a mall parking lot just two shopping days before Christmas. And finally, my strong conviction that Satan will rise from hell disguised as Charles Manson who's disguised as one of those lawyers on TV commercials who begin their advertisements with, "If you or anyone you know has been the victim of a..."

Next, Vinnie will then prove my physical suffering by calling forth the testimony of my chiropractor. Not only will my chiropractor testify that my physical pain is a direct result of my mental anguish, but he will also prove that I suffer from a sharp pain in the back of my neck which pierces down my back every time I set my cruise control 7 miles over the speed limit or roll a stop sign in my car. He'll also argue that the pain in my buttocks is ignited by the words "let's sue," and the burning sensation in my shoulders is a product of carrying around a heavy tax burden upon my shoulders, which is prompted by thousands of absurd lawsuits consuming courtroom dockets.

As you can plainly see, I have the foundation for a pretty solid case, not to mention a few tricks I've kept up my sleeve. Not only do I intend to alleviate my pain and suffering for good, I also intend to set a precedent which will prevent any future occurrences of the same thing happening to anyone else. Which reminds me, if anyone feels that they suffer from the same thing and my lawsuit is just another stepping stone, merely perpetuating your suffering, feel free to file a suit against me. Go right ahead and jump on the litigation bandwagon and ride the vicious circle on the lawsuit express. But keep in mind, my representation, Tarantino and "Associates," has a notorious reputation of settling cases before they ever have the opportunity of festering their way into the friendly confines of a courtroom.

GUEST OPINION • NAVDEEP K. JASSAL

Family communication cannot be legislated

If you can't trust them with a choice, how can you trust them with a child?

This year, more than ever, I urge all pro-choice voters to take notice and concern with the parental notification bill. This bill, if passed, will require all girls up to the age of 18 to notify a parent if she chooses to have an abortion. In the 1993 Legislature, the bill was defeated in committee by a vote of 10-11. So far in 1994, the bill has come out of committee and onto the floor. Discussion will begin later this week.

A survey done by the Emma Goldman Clinic for Women (March-April 1991, October-December 1993) shows that 51 percent of all respondents involved at least one parent in their decision to have an abortion. Furthermore, 70 percent of all respondents involved at least one adult in their decision making. The point? Most young women are already talking with their parents regarding their choice to have an abortion. We must realize that family communication cannot be legislated.

What about the remainder of those surveyed, those who did not choose to discuss their choice with their parent(s)? Listed are some responses given by young women who decided not to tell their parent(s) of their decision:

"My dad is an alcoholic and wouldn't be able to deal with any of this in a civil way. I think there's a lot of abuse as is, and minors who are unfortunate and have abusive homes need rights to protect themselves."

"Because they (parents) told me if I have an abortion, they would disown me. If you have to notify your parents, it could cause more emotional distress."

"It would not have helped the situation, and there is not much they (parents) could do or say to help me. I believe parental consent is not needed in most cases and simply complicates matters as well as endangering those who have nowhere to turn with this rule."

"They (parents) asked not to be told if I ever got into this situation. I feel having the parents told would lead to more illegal and unsafe abortions, which in turn risks the life of the woman."

The fact is that 40 percent of teen-age women who become pregnant choose to have an abortion rather than bear a child at that time (National Abortion Federation, Fact Sheet, August 1990). If the young woman feels that she is in a safe environment and can disclose Restrictive laws imply that a young woman who is too immature to make an abortion decision may nevertheless be mature enough to raise a child. The reality is that teen-age girls are 24 times more likely to die from childbirth than from a first-trimester legal abortion.

this information to her parent(s), she will. If she feels that she cannot share this information with her parent(s), she must be given the right to decide.

Teens who cannot approach their parents are forced to justify a very private decision to judges, courtroom officials, lawyers and others, who are total strangers. Worse, in small towns, they may be acquaintances of the teen or her family — thus jeopardizing her confidentiality. In Minnesota, where judicial bypass is used, the teen woman goes through telling her situation to an average of 23 people — such a tremendous loss of confidentiality. Furthermore, studies show that some judges bully young women with inappropriate, insulting questions, or try to pressure them into a particular decision.

The passing of parental notification has also led to more second-trimester abortions, because of the delay of the bureaucracy with judicial bypass. When restrictive laws passed in Minnesota, the birth rate among teens in Minneapolis rose 38 percent, and the percentage of teens seeking second-trimester abortions rose substantially (National Abortion Federation, Fact Sheet, August 1990). The passing of parental notification will make some teens have to travel to another state where there are no parental notification laws. At the Emma Goldman Clinic, we often see teens who come from Minnesota, Missouri, Michigan, Wisconsin, South Dakota and Nebraska because of parental notification laws. When seeking an abortion in another state, the teen must also take travel time and missed school time into consideration.

I urge all of you to contact your state legislators, whether from Iowa City or your hometown. Call them and tell them to vote against parental notification H.F. 2012 in the House and S.F. in the Senate. Call me at the Emma Goldman Clinic, 337-2112, and get phone numbers for your legislators.

Restrictive laws imply that a young woman who is too immature to make an abortion decision may nevertheless be mature enough to raise a child. The reality is that teen-age girls are 24 times more likely to die from childbirth than from a first-trimester legal abortion.

Navdeep K. Jassal, a member of the steering committee of Action For Abortion Rights, is the community programs assistant at the Emma Goldman Clinic for Women and submitted this guest opinion for publication.

Muslim prime ministers visit Sarajevo

Srečko Latal
Associated Press

SARAJEVO, Bosnia-Herzegovina — As Serbs fired from surrounding hills, Benazir Bhutto and Tansu Ciller — women who beat the odds to lead Muslim nations — came to Sarajevo Wednesday to comfort its besieged residents.

After a brief visit to the capital, defended by Muslim-led forces, prime ministers Bhutto of Pakistan and Ciller of Turkey appealed to the world to act decisively to end the 21-month-old war.

Turkey and Pakistan have been among the strongest backers of Bosnia's Muslim-led government, whose troops are fighting a desperate battle against better-armed Bosnian Serbs and Bosnian Croats.

"Rarely in the annals of human history has a nation been subjected to such merciless savagery in the full view of the world," Bhutto and Ciller said in a joint statement.

"We who live in peace take life and peace for granted," Bhutto said later. "In Sarajevo, we saw shattered people, a shattered city and shattered lives."

Elsewhere in the city, at least five people were killed by Serb shelling Wednesday.

Bhutto later called for air strikes against Bosnian Serbs and exempting the Slavic Muslim-led government from a U.N. arms embargo imposed on former Yugoslavia. She spoke in Zagreb, Croatia.

Bosnia's Muslim president, Alija Izetbegovic, said the two were ready to give "material and other help to our country. I thank them for that." He was not specific.

Sporadic gunfire sounded from the Serb-held hillsides surrounding the city as Bhutto and Ciller arrived at the downtown Bosnian presidency building. A crowd of about 150 braved the dangers of the open street to cheer the two premiers and shout "Bosnia, Bosnia!"

"Turkey and Pakistan are our biggest friends," said Mustafa Jusufbegovic, 70, a Muslim in the crowd.

2,000 SHOW UP

Groundhog Day brings out crowds

Jeffrey Bair
Associated Press

PUNXSUTAWNEY, Pa. — Punxsutawney Phil should have stayed in bed. Despite overcast skies, the famous rodent predicted six more weeks of winter when he was pulled from his cozy, hay-filled burrow this morning.

About 2,000 people showed up at Gobblers Knob outside this western Pennsylvania town to find out whether Phil would see his shadow — a sign of six more weeks of winter, according to tradition.

They jeered the bad news, delivered as a light snow fell and the temperature hovered at 2 below.

"Remember the Roman adage, 'Don't kill the messenger,'" said Jeffrey Lundy, a member of the Inner Circle Club that stages the town's Groundhog Day festivities.

The groundhog's prediction actually has nothing to do with the sun — the Inner Circle Club drafts the forecast in advance.

The groundhog forecast is based on a German tradition brought to the Pennsylvania hills in 1887. If a woodchuck, or groundhog, emerged from its burrow in early February and saw its shadow, it would be frightened and return to its hole for another six weeks.

Groundhog handler Bill Deeley pulled the 15-pound Phil from his burrow at 7:28 a.m. and kissed him on the mouth. Circle President Bud Dunkel Jr. cocked his ear for the forecast.

"What are you going to remember more? A chemistry test you studied for or a road trip like this?" said Sumo Kim, a student at Lehigh University who drove four hours from Allentown to be here.

The cold weather prediction was Phil's 98th in 108 years of forecasting. Four of the 10 spring predictions have come in the last 10 years.

IRA ALLY MUST MAKE NEXT MOVE

Sinn Fein leader back in Britain

Edith Lederer
Associated Press

LONDON — Britain is planning to offer fresh proposals for a political settlement in Northern Ireland aimed at satisfying both Catholics and Protestants, a government official was quoted as saying.

The announcement by Sir Patrick Mayhew, Northern Ireland secretary of state, apparently was timed to wrest attention from Gerry Adams, the IRA's main political ally, as he returned from a highly publicized U.S. visit.

British newspapers Wednesday lamented what The Times called Adams' "propaganda coup" during his two-day visit to New York, which ended Wednesday.

In an interview with the Financial Times to be published today, Mayhew said the proposals involved new ideas for reducing Britain's role in running the province and formal mechanisms for enhancing cross-border cooperation with the Republic of Ireland.

Mayhew, the Cabinet member responsible for the province, said the proposals would be presented in the next two weeks.

While not breaking any major new ground, Mayhew seemed to be attempting to hammer home his government's point that Sinn Fein, the legal political party headed by Adams, is the one that needs to take the next step toward peace.

Prime Minister John Major was furious about Adams' portrayal of the conflict in Northern Ireland, and believed the visit did not advance peace prospects, a senior government source told the Associated Press on condition of anonymity.

Adams told Americans he hoped one day "to take the gun out of Northern Ireland politics" and see the IRA disbanded. But he did not renounce IRA violence or say whether Sinn Fein would sign the British-Irish framework for peace — key demands by the British, Irish and U.S. governments.

Instead, Adams repeated his call for dialogue with Britain and clarification of the Dec. 15 declaration signed by Major and Irish leader Albert Reynolds.

Britain and Ireland have refused to clarify the joint declaration, insisting that any issues raised by Sinn Fein can be sorted out after the IRA lays down its arms.

It was not clear if the reported proposals in Mayhew's interview would satisfy the demand for clarification.

In the interview, Mayhew repeated the British government's invitation to Sinn Fein to enter talks within three months of a permanent end to violence.

Mayhew stressed that the new proposals on cross-border cooperation would not involve any joint authority between Britain and Ireland over the province.

Major's office had no comment on Mayhew's interview late Thursday. Advance copies of the newspaper were made available Wednesday night.

The IRA favors uniting with the predominantly Catholic Irish Republic, while Northern Ireland's Protestant majority wants to stick with Britain.

EDITOR WANTED

Iowa City's morning newspaper is also Iowa City's largest newspaper, with an editorial staff of more than 50 young professionals, an editorial budget of more than $200,000 and circulation of 20,500. The Board of Student Publications Incorporated and the publisher of The Daily Iowan will soon interview candidates for the position of editor for the term beginning June 1, 1994 and ending May 31, 1995.

The editor of the DI must have strong journalistic abilities and dedication, as well as skills in management and a clear sense of editorial responsibility. The board will weigh heavily such factors as scholarship, previous newswriting and editing experience (including work at the DI or another daily newspaper), and proven ability to lead, organize and inspire a staff.

Applicants must be currently enrolled in an undergraduate or graduate degree program at the University of Iowa. Deadline for the candidate's submission of completed applications and supporting materials is noon, Wednesday, February 23, 1994.

ics do not offer life. They're there to make money."

McKee said she and Adam initially thought they would be held in jail indefinitely, but now believe they will not be held longer than 30 days and after that time will be given another hearing.

"We would have been willing to stay indefinitely," Adam said. "At the hearing our attorney asked the judge if the state would consider time served in lieu of our fine, but he chose not to. I still don't think he'll take it, but he may just drop the charges."

However, Gerard said no hearing is pending.

"There isn't anything going on," Gerard said. "Nothing happens at the end of 30 days. I think that maybe some people think 30 is a magic number, because they can be sentenced for that amount of time for such an offense. But they weren't."

However, Gerard is aware of the accumulating cost of keeping the women imprisoned.

"I am definitely thinking about that, but the real dilemma is how do I treat everyone in the same situation the same way?" Gerard said. "If I don't require these defendants to pay the fine, what am I saying to others?"

"It's a real problem. I don't like their situation, but their situation is purely under their control."

Gerard said he is open to any alternatives which may resolve the problem. He also said in many similar cases, other people have paid the fines for the defendants.

McKee and Adam said they will continue to protest in the event they get out of jail, despite the wishes of their families.

"My family doesn't want me to do this anymore, because they're afraid for me," Adam said, referring to her 10 children.

McKee said her 17-year-old daughter understands what she is doing and why she is doing it.

"She is very supportive, although she wants me to come home," McKee said.

SUGAR

to them, vitamins were added to their diets and urine samples were taken each week.

UI General Clinical Research Center dietician Phyllis Stumbo and other dietitians removed food from each home and delivered each of the prepared diets. Stumbo said they sweetened juice, soft drinks, yogurt, cereal, cookies and pudding. Each family had no idea which sweetener was being tested, and the parents kept a diary of all the foods their children ate.

"We found that when parents didn't know if their children were consuming sugar, they couldn't tell a difference in behavior," he said.

The study received $600,000 to $700,000 from the National Institute of Health and Nutrition Foundation, the International Life Sciences Institute, and the food and drug industry.

Lindgren, Stumbo and their associates had parents and teachers rate behaviors each week. Among the supposedly "sugar-sensitive" children there was no difference in behavior. But researchers noticed a calming effect within some of the younger children during the high sugar period. Lindgren said some parents and teachers said they performed certain tasks a bit slower during that time. Overall, none of the children became more hyperactive.

Lindgren believes parents will not stop restricting sugar as a result of their study.

"It just shows sugar consumption isn't the cause of behavior problems in children," he said. "I'm more concerned that parents will dismiss the study because their child was not involved. I'm not worried that parents will let their children go wild with sugar, because sugar does cause other problems such as obesity and tooth decay."

Similar studies with similar results have been done, but Lindgren said people did not take them seriously because they were conducted in laboratories, were too short and did not resemble everyday life. If parents believe their child has a behavioral problem they should consult their doctor, he said.

"If a child has a behavioral problem, treatment is available," he said. "Medication is one form. There are also ways to teach children behavior management. Sugar and sweeteners really aren't the cause."

Bleke said she prefers female roommates because of safety reasons.

UI sophomore Steph Osbahr said the new policy didn't make any difference to her.

"I guess it is kind of unfair — people should be able to say who they want — but I can also see why it could be discriminatory," she said.

When advertising it is advisable to describe the property only, according to fair housing information provided by the Civil Rights Commission.

Ads for roommates should only say "roommate wanted" for the kind of housing offered and cannot describe the person seeking the roommate. By using terms such as mature, Christian, white, female, bachelor, Hispanic, athletic, male, etc., an ad implies a person is seeking someone with similar characteristics, according to the commission.

Housing ads may specify smoker or non-smoker, professional or graduate student, or other characteristics not covered by the housing and civil rights laws.

There are still a few ways to indicate in the ad what sex of roommate is sought, however, Perry said.

"One way to get around it is to place an ad like 'Room in house — call Lisa,' and put a name so people can tell what sex a person is," she said.

Don Grove, acting director of the Iowa Civil Rights Commission, said some of the regulations apply only to advertising.

"Let's say I rent from a landlord and pay $600 for rent. Under the contract, I can sublet to another person as a roommate. In choosing who I sublet to I am exempted from the fair housing laws, but I still must comply with the advertising regulations," he said.

However, there are no exceptions allowing discrimination because of a person's race, according to the Civil Rights Act of 1866.

Housing providers may use acceptable criteria to refuse housing, such as poor rental payment history, poor credit, short-term rental history, short-term employment history, record of disruption or destruction, misrepresentations on the application and a previous landlord who would refuse to rent to a person again, according to the commission.

to the site, said she isn't too worried.

"Something's not right over there, and I hope they get it solved, but I don't feel like our house is going to blow up or anything," she said.

Jeff Logan, who lives 300 yards from the site, said he's not concerned.

"It seems awfully strange that this is the third fire in seven years," he said. "I don't know if that's normal or not, but I don't really worry about it."

The first fire at the building, which killed two men, occurred in January 1975. Fire also erupted in 1987 and 1989. No fatalities occurred in those fires.

Iowa softball ranked eighth in first poll

The Iowa softball team is ranked No. 8 in the NCAA Division I softball preseason poll, released Wednesday.

Defending national champion Arizona is ranked first, followed by UCLA, Oklahoma State and Southeastern Louisiana.

The Hawkeyes, who finished the season with a 39-15 overall record and a 20-7 mark in the Big Ten, are rated first in the Midwest Region.

Hardaway, Jackson league's best of the month

NEW YORK (AP) — Orlando's Anfernee Hardaway, who averaged 20.5 points, 7.0 assists and 5.7 rebounds per game during January, was chosen the NBA's rookie of the month Wednesday. Chicago's Phil Jackson was selected coach of the month.

Hardaway, the No. 3 pick in last year's draft out of Memphis State, also averaged 3.3 steals per game in leading the Magic to a 10-5 record in January, the winningest month in team history.

For the month, Hardaway scored 20 or more points in nine games, including a season-high 32 in a 145-120 victory over Charlotte Jan. 26.

Jackson, who has coached the Bulls to three straight NBA titles, guided Chicago to an 11-3 record, including a seven-game winning streak, in January.

The Bulls are 29-12, only one game behind Atlanta in the Central Division, and are allowing only 94.8 points per game, lowest in their 26-year history.

Phillies' Williams denies rape allegations

CINCINNATI (AP) — Former Philadelphia Phillies relief pitcher Mitch Williams said he took a lie detector test to support his denial of a woman's allegation that he raped her, his lawyer said Wednesday.

Cincinnati police said they are investigating the allegation by a northern Kentucky woman who said Williams raped her in September at a Cincinnati hotel. Williams has not been charged and no warrants have been issued, police Sgt. Richard Newson said.

"I am aware of the allegations against me and totally deny them. I am also aware of and welcome the investigation into these allegations," Williams said in a statement released by his lawyer, Martin Pinales. "I am totally cooperating with authorities. I have been asked, and have taken and passed a lie detector test."

The Phillies were in Cincinnati for a series with the Reds Sept. 3-5. The woman complained to police in late December, and Williams learned of the allegation about three weeks ago after returning from his honeymoon, Pinales said.

Iowa City native Tim Dwight talks with Iowa football coach Hayden Fry after signing with the Hawkeyes Wednesday afternoon.

Hawkeyes snare top preps

Roxanna Pellin
The Daily Iowan

It's official. Iowa City High football standout Tim Dwight is set to play football at Iowa next season.

The senior running back signed with the Hawkeyes at noon Wednesday at City High School.

Overall, 20 players, including five Iowans, signed with Iowa on the first day they were able to make written commitments.

While Dwight should help Iowa's running game, two highly recruited defensive players should make a difference on the other side of the ball. Eric Thigpen, a 6-foot-1, 185-pound defensive back out of Dolton, Ill., and Vernon Rollins, a 6-3, 220-pound linebacker from Hackensack, N.J., committed to the Hawkeyes Tuesday.

The Hawkeyes also picked up two Canadians, fullback Trevor Bollers, a 6-foot, 220-pounder from Edmonton, Alberta, and 6-2, 295-pound Chris Zdzienicki, a defensive lineman from Toronto, Ontario.

"We are extremely pleased with our 1994 recruiting class. My coaches worked as hard as they ever have and it appears as though they've been very successful," Iowa coach Hayden Fry said. "We needed help at linebacker and offensive line and we've done a very good job of recruiting in those areas. I think the people of Iowa are going to be very proud of the young men we've signed this year."

Five offensive linemen and seven linebackers or defensive ends signed with Iowa.

Dwight said signing with the Hawkeyes is just an official procedure. He committed to Iowa Dec. 24, turning down Stanford.

"It doesn't change much," Dwight said. "Once you commit you're pretty much done with everything. Signing just kind of tops it off with a cherry. The whip cream is already on and all that."

A 5-9, 176-pound all-American, Dwight has been picked as the top recruit in Iowa. He ran for 2,126 yards and scored a state record 43 touchdowns last season. He also played defensive back at City High and helped the Little Hawks win a state championship with four touchdowns in a 42-14 win over Sioux City Heelan.

"I think that he could start for any team in the country at defensive back," City High coach Larry Brown said. "Being from Iowa City, I always hoped he'd go to Iowa."

Immediately after Dwight signed the documents, he phoned Fry.

BASKETBALL

Iowa golden from 3-point land

Hawkeyes nail 13 3-pointers; upset No. 22 Gophers 92-88

JOEL DONOFRIO

The Daily Iowan

After several hard-luck losses in close Big Ten games, the Iowa men's basketball team had to believe luck was on its side as Wednesday night's game against Minnesota went down to the wire.

In the end, however, it was not luck but great outside shooting and clutch last-minute free throws which gave the Hawkeyes a 92-88 upset over No. 22 Minnesota in Carver-Hawkeye Arena.

"We've been so close, been up on a lot of good teams, and we finally finished it," said forward Jess Settles, who led the Hawkeyes with 19 points. "We weren't really worried down at the end; even though we were missing our free throws, we knew we were going to win it."

Following a closely played first half that ended with the Hawkeyes (9-8 overall, 3-5 in the conference) ahead 45-39, the Golden Gophers closed the margin to 60-59 seven minutes into the second half as guard Arriel McDonald sank two free throws.

At that point, Iowa regrouped to crank out a 17-2 run over the next six minutes, forcing Minnesota to play catchup the rest of the game. Hawkeyes Monte Glasper, Settles and Chris Kingsbury all hit 3-point baskets during the run, and forward Russ Millard capped off the rally by scoring two quick layups to give his team a 77-61 lead.

"It was raining threes on us tonight," Minnesota coach Clem Haskins said. "I'm very proud of my team to hang in there, to lose by four to a team as hot as the Hawkeyes were tonight. We could have very easily been blown out by 20, 25 points."

Minnesota (14-7, 4-4) was able to make one last charge at the Hawkeyes down the stretch, as Gopher guard Voshon Lenard connected on four 3-point plays — three from beyond the arc and the other on a drive to the basket and a foul shot. The latter cut Iowa's lead to 82-78 with 1:09 remaining.

"Lenard — he's a great player," Kingsbury said of the Minnesota guard, who led all scorers with 30 points. "He kind of reminded me of

Although the Hawkeyes struggled from the free-throw line, connecting on only 19-of-35 free throws, Glasper, Winters and Kenyon Murray went 10-for-12 from the charity stripe in the final minute of the game to clinch the win.

All five Iowa starters scored in double figures, as the Hawkeyes shot 46 percent from the field and 42 percent from 3-point range in the contest. The 13 treys Iowa connected on tied a Carver-Hawkeye Arena record, much to the delight of 15,500 boisterous Hawkeye fans.

"We've been pretty balanced all season (in scoring), but that's quite a stat line with all of the starters in double figures and eight and nine points from our top two reserves off the bench," Iowa coach Tom Davis said. "It makes us hard to cover, because the opponent can't just key in on one guy."

In addition to balanced scoring, the Hawkeyes rebounded well as a team with Murray, Settles and Jim Bartels snaring seven cars each. For the game, Iowa out-rebounded Minnesota 43-38 overall and 18-15 on the offensive glass.

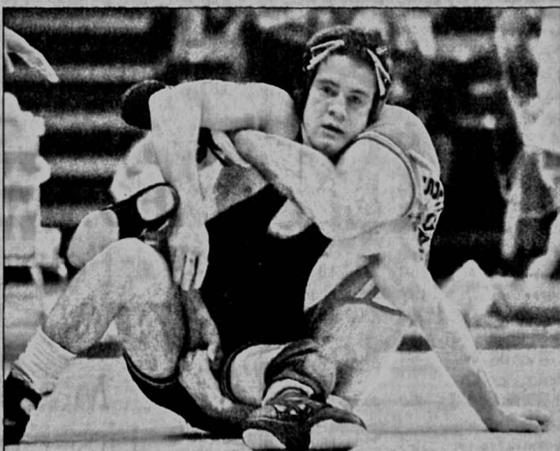

"We're always trying to out-rebound everybody," Settles said. "We rebounded terribly at Michigan State, we worked on it pretty hard. Coach Walker made a few new schemes, and we kept them off the boards."

WRESTLING

Jill Sagers/The Daily Iowan

Iowa's Jeff McGinness has compiled a 25-5 record at 126 pounds as a true freshman for the Hawkeye wrestling team this season.

Tattoo marks fulfilled dream for Iowa grappler McGinness

MIKE EGENSE

The Daily Iowan

More than anything else a tattoo represents permanence, and that is exactly how Iowa freshman Jeff McGinness sees himself in terms of his commitment to the Iowa wrestling program.

Following high school graduation and after academic acceptance to the UI, McGinness made a permanent — and at least, symbolic — dedication to Iowa and had a three-inch Hawkeye tattooed on his lower left leg.

For as long as he can remember, becoming a Hawkeye wrestler has always been McGinness' dream.

"Growing up, I've always been around the program. My dad is the treasurer of the Hawkeye Wrestling Club and I can always remember sitting on the bench or doing something like messing around with the wrestlers," McGinness said.

"I have a picture from when I was about six or seven. I had a broken arm and it was the same time Randy Lewis (Iowa wrestler from 1977-80) had a dislocated elbow. I can still remember those times," McGinness reflected.

And perhaps it was those times as a youngster that provided the inspiration for McGinness to chase his dream of becoming a Hawkeye just like the ones he was surrounded by at such a young age.

Little did he know that by the time his wrestling career was over at Iowa City High School he would have marked himself as one of the state's most accomplished wrestlers. McGinness tallied a 172-0 record including four state titles in four years.

With that kind of record it would be hard to imagine McGinness not competing in college immediately, but that was exactly what Coach Dan Gable was saying before the season began. During a preseason press

Kerrigan fit; hearing set on Harding eligibility

Associated Press

DENNIS, Mass. — A panel of figure skating judges Wednesday pronounced Nancy Kerrigan physically and mentally fit for the Olympics, despite an attack last month that knocked her out of the national championships.

ABC News reported Wednesday night, meanwhile, that the U.S. Olympic Committee is planning to hold a hearing next week on Tonya Harding's Olympic eligibility. The skating champion, who has been implicated by her ex-husband Jeff Gillooly in the Kerrigan attack, already is the subject of an investigation by U.S. figure skating authorities.

In Portland, Ore., Gillooly met with investigators at the FBI office one day after pleading guilty to a racketeering charge in the attack. Multnomah County Deputy District Attorney Norm Frink refused to disclose anything about the two-hour session, which also was attended by Gillooly's attorney, Ron Hoevet, except to say that it was "part of the ongoing investigation."

Under the plea bargain, Gillooly will be exempt from further charges in exchange for serving two years in prison, paying a $100,000 fine, and testifying in the case.

Gillooly said Harding gave the go-ahead to carry out the attack by saying, "OK, let's do it." Harding denies any involvement in the attack, in which Gillooly, her bodyguard Shawn Eckardt, and two other men have been charged.

Although Kerrigan could not skate at the championships in Detroit after the Jan. 6 attack in which her right leg was smashed with a collapsible baton, she was named with Harding to the U.S. Olympic team anyway — contingent upon Wednesday's evaluation of her skating.

"If there were any doubt or any questions about Nancy Kerrigan's skating condition, she answered them for us this afternoon," said Chuck Foster, secretary to the U.S. Olympic Committee and one of the four judges who watched Kerrigan perform at her practice rink. "We expect that she is going to do very well in Norway."

The judges, who watched Kerrigan Wednesday at a closed performance at Tony Kent Arena, said they were impressed by her stamina after she skated her long program twice, which Foster said "people in the best of conditions haven't done."

"We have given the green light for her to go to the Olympics," James Disbrow, chairman of the figure skating association's international committee, said from Minneapolis after speaking with the judges.

Harding also skated Wednesday at a suburban Portland shopping mall, but she fell the first two times she tried her trademark triple axel before successfully landing a third one.

Her workout lasted only a half-hour because she encountered trouble starting her truck and was 45 minutes late to practice. A TV crew gave her truck a jump start as Harding yelled at them and a newspaper photographer not to take her picture.

She left practice without talking to reporters. ABC News said it had learned the U.S. Olympic Committee is planning to hold a hearing on Harding's Olympic status next week in Colorado Springs, Colo. Gillooly and Harding may be called to testify at the hearing, ABC said.

USOC officials could not be reached by telephone Wednesday night to comment on the report.

Turner takes helm at Washington

Matt Yancey
Associated Press

ASHBURN, Va. — The Redskins hired Dallas Cowboys offensive coordinator Norv Turner as their new coach Wednesday with instructions to win next season and get Washington back to the playoffs by 1995.

Turner, after helping take the Cowboys to two consecutive Super Bowl championships, replaces Richie Petitbon, fired last month after only one season, the Redskins' worst in three decades.

The Redskins gave Turner — their third head coach in less than a year — a five-year contract, according to one team official, speaking on the condition of anonymity. No salary was disclosed. Petitbon had a two-year contract with an annual pay of $450,000.

Owner Jack Kent Cooke put high expectations on Turner to reverse the Redskins' rapid descent from the Super Bowl championship just two seasons ago.

They were 10-8, including the playoffs, in Joe Gibbs' last season in 1992, but fell to 4-12 under Petitbon.

"I have high hopes that pretty soon, and soon to me means this coming year, we're going to embark on winning ways," Cooke said. "And shortly thereafter, the winning ways will turn into playoff ways. That may be as late as 1995.

Associated Press

Norv Turner signed a five-year contract as head coach of the Redskins Wednesday.

"Three Super Bowl trophies are not enough for Mr. and Mrs. Turner and me and my son," the 81-year-old billionaire added.

"There are going to be more, and it's not going to be in the distant future; it's going to be in the near future."

Gibbs delivered all three of those trophies in his 12 years before resigning last March, only one year into a three-year contract.

Since December, after Petitbon's team faltered under limping quarterback Mark Rypien with no protection from an injury-decimated line, the Redskins have looked upon Turner as almost a clone of Gibbs.

"That's amazingly flattering; I've been an admirer of Joe Gibbs for a number of years," Turner said. "But there's no way I can be Joe Gibbs and there's no way I'm going to try to be Joe Gibbs. Only one thing will make the comparison valid, and that's the test of time."

Turner, 41, is widely credited with turning the Cowboys' 28th-ranked offense the year before he arrived from the Rams into a Super Bowl powerhouse two years later and keeping it through last week's second championship victory over Buffalo.

Eight Pro Bowlers on Dallas' offense this year helped, and the Redskins haven't had a single offensive player there in the past two years.

But his first priority, he said, is putting a staff together by the end of the week. Turner spent Tuesday night contacting most of the assistants he wants and said Wednesday the only thing that remains is bringing them here "over the next three days" to sign contracts.

Four members of Petitbon's staff will stay — defensive backs coach Emmitt Thomas, offensive line coach Jim Hanifan, tight ends coach Russ Grimm and offensive assistant Charley Taylor.

Duke, N. Carolina battle for No. 1

Jim O'Connell
Associated Press

CHAPEL HILL, N.C. — Just what a Duke-North Carolina game needs, something to make it a little bigger.

When they meet tonight in another edition of one of the best rivalries in all of sports, it will also be a matchup of college basketball's top-ranked teams.

No. 1 Duke (15-1) took over the top spot this week, the fifth team in as many polls to hold the honor. North Carolina (17-3) was the preseason No. 1 and held the spot for two weeks during the season.

The schools, just eight miles apart, have won the last three national championships. North Carolina ended Duke's two-year reign last season.

Since 1980, they have played 32 times and there has been a No. 1 team in 11 of those games. Both have been in the top 10 14 times, including five of the last seven meetings.

Still, this is the first time they have ever met as No. 1 and No. 2.

"It seems like we were 1-2, no I guess it was 1-3 when we opened the building," Tar Heels coach Dean Smith said of the 1986 game his top-ranked team won 95-92 to open the arena named after him. "It seems like they've been No. 1 a lot when we play them."

"It's always been an exciting game and we're usually in the top 10 and the rivalry has really surfaced since 1980. I just think it's going to be a typical Duke-Carolina game."

The depth of the Tar Heels will be a big factor with the continued absence of shooting guard Donald Williams, their leading scorer at 16.2 points per game. He missed three games early in the season with tendinitis in his left foot and then badly bruised and slightly separated his left shoulder two weeks ago against Virginia.

Williams was not expected to play, but Smith left the door open just a bit.

The attention should be in the middle where North Carolina has 7-footer Eric Montross, averaging 14.5 points and 8.4 rebounds. Duke has 6-11 Cherokee Parks, who is averaging 16.3 and 9.6.

One win, one loss in salary arbitration

Ronald Blum
Associated Press

NEW YORK — Players and owners split the first two salary arbitration decisions on Wednesday, with Tom Gordon winning over Kansas City and Mel Rojas losing to Montreal.

Gordon, who made $890,000 last season, nearly tripled his salary when arbitrator Rolf Valtin awarded him $2,635,000. The Royals offered $1.4 million to Gordon, 12-6 last season with a 3.58 ERA.

Rojas, who went 5-8 with a 2.95 ERA last season and made $300,000, will get $850,000 instead of his request for $1.2 million, arbitrator Reginald Alleyne decided. Both cases involved right-handed pitchers and were argued Tuesday in Los Angeles.

Montreal's victory over Rojas was the 200th for clubs since arbitration began in 1974. Gordon's win was the 161st for players.

Last winter, owners won 12 of 18 cases, but the 118 players who filed for arbitration increased their salaries by an average of 110 percent.

Kenny Rogers, who made $1 million last season, agreed to a $2.3 million, one-year deal late Tuesday just before his scheduled hearing. Rogers, also a right-handed pitcher, asked for $2.5 million and the Rangers offered $2 million. Last year, Rogers was 16-10 with a 4.10 ERA. In the new contract, he can earn an additional $25,000 if he makes 30 starts.

Another right-hander, Stan Belinda of Kansas City, agreed to a $1.6 million, one-year contract late Tuesday night.

Fifty-one players remain in arbitration, which runs through Feb. 18. No hearings were held Wednesday.

The First American Brewed Ice Beer!

What is ICEHOUSE?

- ICEHOUSE is the first authentic American ice beer. ICEHOUSE has a bold, crisp finish and its alcohol content is higher than that of many other premium brands - 5.5% by volume.
- ICEHOUSE is brewed using a unique ice brewing technique. This produces ICEHOUSE's smooth, bold taste. Ice brewing occurs when the beer's temperature is lowered to below freezing. Ice crystals then form to eliminate watered-down taste.

Manos: minimalist musical manifesto

Paul Ferguson
The Daily Iowan

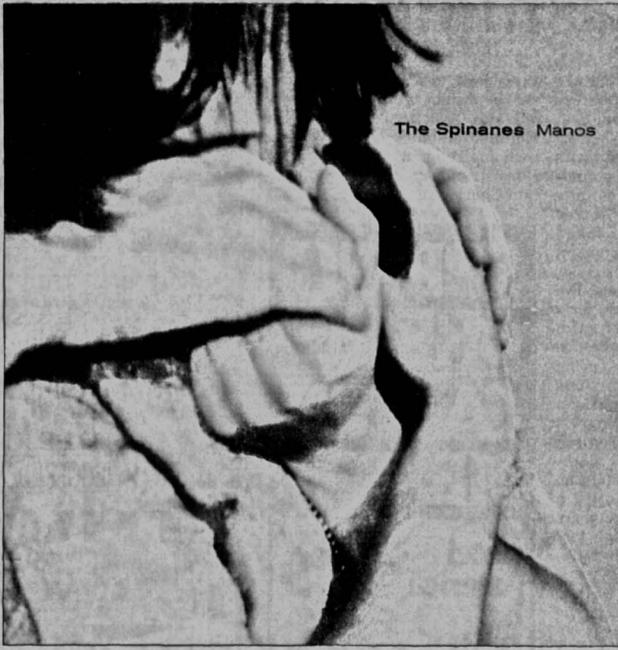

Juliana Hatfield has been quoted, a bit too often, as saying that women are naturally inferior guitar players. While she has received plenty of opposition, the most convincing proof may be in a rising band out of Portland, Ore. Rebecca Gates, vocalist / guitarist and fully one half of The Spinanes, takes on roles normally handled by several of her male counterparts and doesn't even break a sweat. If that sounds difficult to believe, Manos will come as an even more delightful surprise.

The Spinanes are the wondrous product of what might be considered a post-grunge, punk-pop revolution, and their first album for Sub Pop is something of a manifesto. In short bursts with resonances in early Breeders, Unrest, Tsunami and a handful of other bands, Gates and drummer Scott Plouf create an alluring, minimalist presence.

Gates' ever-changing rhythms skip and stomp atop Plouf's deft percussion, sometimes floating on their own. The result trends the increasingly populated line between punk and pop, but The Spinanes' sparse, playful songs are a far cry from the din of most of their Sub Pop label mates. They may not get you moshing, but they will have you dancing, quietly but urgently.

Most of the songs on Manos begin in a particular mode and then change subtly, in mood or in form. After a few bars, Gates' vocals simply meander in, like those of a shy schoolgirl singing about her first falling in love. Once she has you in her confidence, though, you realize that she knows very well what she is doing. Gates maintains a sort of knowing innocence that lends The Spinanes' songs both worldly experience and curious optimism. Her skill doesn't diminish when moving between moody pieces like "Entire" and "Base-ment Galaxy," and the rougher terrain of "Manos" and "Grand Prize," or even when she lets her guitar do the singing on "I ♥ That Party with the Monkey Kitty."

As the title suggests, hands domi-

nate the title song, whether they are violent, mischievous or gentle. Gates' somewhat cryptic lyrics cast life's daily struggles in terms of how our hands dominate our lives and get us into and out of trouble. Love is clearly a bigger concern to Gates in these songs, though, and she explores it from a multitude of angles. Fading love is scattered through "Dangle," where Gates intones, "We can call it a story / But he makes me promise / Every time I say I love him / I tell the truth." "Entire" and "Shellburn" reveal similar sentiments, but Gates always plants a seed of hope among the sadness, however small. Sometimes she glides around the edges of love with odd, inventive wisdom, and sometimes she simply teases. "Noel, Jonah and Me" has her probing the heart of an unknown other, as she asks, "Did you give up punk for lent?" The Spinanes' spartan lineup defines, but never detracts from their character, and it is difficult to imagine an already powerful song like "Spitfire" with a bass line. With styles ranging from closely cropped, angular constructions to folksy acoustic, Gates' guitar carries these songs beautifully. She even plays and sings her own back-up on several songs. Plouf is no slouch either, keeping up with Gates' tempo changes when he isn't creating underlying rhythms of his own. Their honest approach and lack of convoluted musical ideas bring a small-town aesthetic to their big-city success story. The Spinanes may be the first two-piece ever to leave you so dreamily contemplative, even if you never notice how many members there are.

ALL TYPES OF ACTORS SOUGHT

Auditions planned for local feature film

Shayla Thiel
The Daily Iowan

So, you wanna be in pictures? Wanna be a star? Here's probably one of the best chances you'll get if you have no plans to abandon Iowa City for Hollywood anytime soon.

Auditions for the full-length feature film "The Last Supper" will be held today, Friday and Saturday by appointment at the Iowa City Public Library, 123 S. Linn St., in Meeting Room B. Director Jim Levi says he is looking for "all types" of actors, 12 years and older. "This is the real thing," Levi says. "It's a very thoughtful film geared towards all audiences."

The script, written by Los Angeles actor and comedian Dan Rosen, centers around several friends who gather once a week to have dinner with different guests. Levi says the group gets "carried away with how smart they are," and therein lies the film's hook and impetus for conflict with good and evil.

"We say it's 'The Big Chill' meets 'Ten Little Indians,'"

Levi says.

Levi, a UI graduate student in film production, has previously served as head writer for television programs on Nickelodeon and MTV in New York. He might be recognized by locals for his film "5, 6, 7, Go!," which was shown in Shambaugh Auditorium in December; the work was recently nominated for an Iowa Film Award.

Casting for "The Last Supper" begins in Iowa City, but the production crew will travel to other cities for auditions as well. Levi says acting experience is not required, but is preferred, and audition material will be provided. He says the principle photography will be shot in Iowa City in June. "I think it will be a lot of fun to work on," says Levi. "We have a really great script and topnotch people working on it."

For an appointment to audition, people are asked to call 354-6133. Auditions will be scheduled at the actor's and director's convenience throughout the three days.

Lawyer's family claims 'Philadelphia' stole his story

Associated Press

NEW YORK — Relatives of a New York lawyer who was fired after contracting AIDS say the makers of the movie "Philadelphia" ripped off his story, and they are demanding $10 million from the filmmakers.

Geoffrey Bowers' family filed suit in federal court Tuesday against Tri-Star Pictures, director Jonathan Demme and producer Scott Rudin. Bowers' relatives said they shared their memories with people involved in the movie expecting to be paid an undetermined amount and to see Bowers mentioned in the credits.

"We made the mistake of trusting people," said Dana Bowers, one of Bowers' brothers. "They betrayed us."

Tri-Star said the movie was inspired by dozens of cases.

"Philadelphia" is a fictional story which addresses a regrettably recurring theme of AIDS discrimination in this country," spokesman Ed Russell said.

Bowers died in 1987 at age 33. In December, the state human rights board ordered the New York firm of Baker and McKenzie to pay $500,000 for discriminating against him.

'Honor': a novel in a comic-book body

Tasha Robinson
The Daily Iowan

It's rare to find a comic book that should have been a novel.

Most comics, good or bad, are suited to their medium. Some, like the bulk of Marvel and Image titles, are too action-oriented and art-dependent to work in a text-only medium; in Image titles, in particular, any text whatsoever seems to hinder the art. Arguments might be made for textualizing other, more cerebral or story-oriented comics — Neil Gaiman's "Sandman" or Dave Sim's "Cerebus" are at least complex enough to work in prose form. And a few comics, like the Pinis' "Elfquest," have actually been novelized with some success.

But for the most part, anyone good enough to write a strong story is good enough to fully integrate the artwork that goes with it. (Alan Moore's "Watchmen" is a perfect example of a book with enough content to become a novel, but with a storytelling style so art-dependent that a prose adaptation would destroy the work.) On the flip side, anyone who can't write a strong story is likely to fall back on the artwork. Either way, comic-book text is generally not designed to stand on its own.

This is what makes Caliber Press' "Baker Street: Honor Among Punks" such an odd find. A trade collection of the first five issues of Guy Davis and Gary Reed's "Baker Street" series, "Honor Among Punks," is something of an Arthur Conan Doyle pastiche, with a spike-haired punk lord as Sherlock Holmes and a mousy med student as Watson.

The story is set in the slums of London, where a series of killings has two rival gangs at each others' throats. Harlequin, an ex-cop with a shaved head and a placid, inquisitive style that tends to annoy even her followers, is convinced that the murders were not part of the normal gang wars, but were planned by a third party to cause conflict — and to cover up a larger crime.

The story is mostly told from the point of view of Susan Prendergast, a naive American who moves in with Harlequin for the free rent and winds up following the punk lord around and marveling at her deductive power. Susan, who is given to demanding wordy explanations and setting the scene via blocks of expository text, is one reason "Honor Among Punks" might work better as a novel. Her Watsonesque first-person accounts are engaging and personable, more so than the bulk of the text. Her character also tends to get lost without such exposition.

Guy Davis/Caliber Press

"Baker Street: Honor Among Punks" is a modern Sherlock Holmes story, with a spike-haired punk lord as the famous detective, and a shy and mousy med student as her Watson.

But the main argument for novelizing "Honor Among Punks" is the poor story / art integration. Creator / scripters Guy Davis and Gary Reed have put together a unique, stylish story that mixes some of the cerebral elements of a Doyle mystery with a modern street-smart feel. Their characters — the mawkish Susan, the aristocratic Harlequin, and her coarse and angry roommate Sam — are well-developed and individualistic. Aside from the occasional dip into purple prose, Davis and Reed have done a fine job of fleshing out their story.

Davis' art, on the other hand, isn't up to the quality of his writing. While his backgrounds are often finely detailed and well-proportioned, his characters are distorted and cartoony, even sloppy. The variability of the images and the characters' limited facial expressions and ill-proportioned bodies constantly detract from the central mystery.

Another artist might well have been the answer: Vince Locke's cover painting for the "Honor" trade paperback features a more stylish and balanced version of Harlequin than anything Davis has to offer.

But with the mystery tale already fine-tuned by a pair of obviously skilled writers, novelization seems just as smooth a way to go. The story is already there; an all-prose form would be less distracting and would better highlight the talents of its creators.

In its current form, "Honor Among Punks" deserves a look; Gaiman, Sim and Moore fans who read comics for thoughtful stories rather than action-packed superhero fights are likely to find it intriguing. But it's difficult to read the book without wishing for a prose version: a book that would let readers concentrate on Davis and Reed's skills, not their shortcomings.

Pearl Jam singer called to court

Associated Press

BOULDER, Colo. — Pearl Jam singer Eddie Vedder doesn't think security guards belong in a mosh pit. Police think Vedder belongs in court.

Vedder, who chased security guards from the slam-dance area during a Nov. 27 concert at the University of Colorado, has been issued a summons alleging he obstructed government operations.

The charge is punishable by up to six months in jail and $750 in fines.

Police say security guards were trying to remove a "disruptive individual" from the pit when Vedder stopped singing and told the guards to get out.

The incident prompted the cancellation of the last of the band's three sold-out shows at UC.

MERCHANDISE TO BE DESTROYED

Store owner offers gun discount in exchange for McEntire albums

Associated Press

TULSA, Okla. — A pawnshop owner who likes Reba McEntire's singing but not her gun exchange program is offering his customers a chance to trade in Reba instead.

Bring a McEntire compact disc, cassette or concert ticket to Tulsa Gun and Pawn, and owner Buck Dickinson will give you a 10 percent discount on firearms.

The deal is his response to McEntire's offer to give 100 tickets to her Feb. 19 show to people who turn in their guns. McEntire's proposal is one of a number of recent programs offering rewards for citizens willing to turn in firearms.

But Dickinson thinks the program sends the wrong message.

"She hasn't thought the problem through," Dickinson said Monday. "We don't have a gun problem. We have a criminal problem."

So far, McEntire's exchange program has brought in 49 guns, but only one person has taken advantage of Dickinson's offer, which began Friday. Another person wanted to trade his Twisted Sister

McEntire: offering concert tickets in exchange for guns albums, but Dickinson turned him down.

Dickinson said he will throw away the McEntire merchandise he receives.

"We wouldn't let this stuff get back out on the streets," he said.
