Clinton lifts Vietnam trade embargo

George Gedda
Associated Press

WASHINGTON — President Clinton made a controversial gesture of reconciliation toward Vietnam on Thursday, lifting the 19-year U.S. trade embargo against a nation whose divisive war left a legacy of suspicion over the fate of missing American soldiers and airmen.

The move opens an important emerging market for American goods in Southeast Asia and was greeted with enthusiasm by U.S. business interests already setting up operations in the former enemy capital of Hanoi.

Clinton made his announcement after describing his thinking in several private meetings with veterans groups and anxious family members of the missing servicemen. Reaction from those groups was largely negative.

Clinton said he was convinced the step would further efforts to get a full accounting of the missing Americans, and that his decision was not based on enabling U.S. business to make profits there.

"We would lose leverage (on resolving MIA questions with Vietnam) if there were no forward movement," Clinton said. He said there had been much progress in recent months in accounting for 2,238 American MIAs and POWs in Vietnam, Laos and Cambodia.

He added, "Whatever the Vietnam War may have done in dividing our country in the past, today our nation is one in honoring those who served and pressing for answers about all those who did not return."

Senate Republican leader Robert Dole of Kansas said, "While many of my colleagues think lifting the trade embargo on Vietnam is the right course, I believe it is the wrong decision at the wrong time for the wrong

ROLE OF PARENT DEBATED

Lawmakers embroiled in abortion battle

Mike Glover
Associated Press

DES MOINES, Iowa — The Legislature launched a bitter fight Thursday over abortion rights in its first full-blown debate on the issue in more than a decade.

The debate was centering on the role that parents and other adults play when a young woman is faced with a decision about abortion. There are no proposals before the Legislature for more drastic abortion restrictions.

Supporters said they were seeking to assure parental involvement in crucial decisions, while critics argued the highest priority was in protecting health.

"It is absolutely essential that we help this child," said Rep. Minnette Doderer, D-Iowa City.

Backers painted the measure as not putting significant barriers in the path of young women seeking an abortion. Rep. Dan Boddicker, R-Tipton, noted that approval isn't required from parents.

"This is simply a notification law," said Boddicker.

Rep. Dorothy Carpenter, R-West Des Moines, said the measure would put young women under pressure at a point in their lives when they are already suffering trauma.

"If parents have the right to make the decision, there would be many more abortions, not fewer," said Carpenter.

After a landmark 1973 Supreme Court decision legalizing abortion, the Legislature reached an uneasy compromise on the issue. Legislators agreed to prohibit spending state money for almost all abortions, but to remove restrictions on abortions during the first six months of pregnancy.

The issue has not been seriously debated since that agreement.

But with conservatives making gains in the last election, there has been new momentum to act.

Study: AIDS virus raises hemophilia death rate

NEW YORK (AP) — The death rate for people with the most common kind of hemophilia has tripled since 1979 and their longevity has dropped by 30 percent, due chiefly to AIDS virus infection, a federal study says.

The median age at death for people with hemophilia A fell from 57 years in 1979-81 to 40 years in 1987-89, researchers said.

Death rates jumped from 0.4 per million Americans in 1979 to 1.3 per million in 1989, said the report from researchers at the Centers for Disease Control and Prevention in Atlanta.

Preliminary data suggests similar numbers for 1991, said study co-author Dr. Terence Chorba of the CDC.

"HIV appears to be the major contributor to those changes," he said.

About 17,000 Americans have hemophilia A, caused by deficiency in a natural clotting substance called factor VIII, the National Hemophilia Foundation says. Many people with hemophilia A became infected with HIV through infusions of factor VIII derived from blood donors.

College student convicted of first-degree murder

SPRINGFIELD, Mass. (AP) — A college student was convicted of first-degree murder Thursday and sentenced to life in prison for fatally shooting two people and wounding four others during a rampage at his school.

Wayne Lo, 19, received the mandatory sentence and won't be eligible for parole. He listened impassively as the verdicts were read.

Teresa Beavers, who was wounded in the 20-minute spree at Simon's Rock College of Bard and uses a wheelchair, clutched a handkerchief to her face and cried.

A Hampden County Superior Court jury deliberated 18 hours over three days before reaching its verdict.

JEWS CALLED 'BLOODSUCKERS'

Farrakhan dismisses top aide for 'mean-spirited' remarks

Sonya Ross
Associated Press

WASHINGTON — Nation of Islam leader Louis Farrakhan today dismissed a top aide for making anti-Semitic remarks that were "repugnant" and "mean-spirited." But he coupled the rebuke with attacks on a Jewish organization and on Vice President Al Gore.

Farrakhan dissociated himself from the words of his national spokesman, Khalid Abdul Muhammad, who had referred to Jews in a speech last November as "bloodsuckers."

"In that instance, he was not representing us. He was representing himself," Farrakhan said at a news conference.

The Muslim minister said, "I found the speech ... repugnant, mean-spirited ... and spoken in mockery of individuals and people ... against the spirit of Islam."

"While I stand by the truths that he spoke, I must condemn in the strongest terms the manner in which those truths were represented," he said.

Farrakhan left open the possibility that Muhammad could be reinstated and said he remains a member of the Nation of Islam.

The outspoken Muslim leader said he remains convinced that the Anti-Defamation League of B'nai B'rith is prejudiced against blacks and is trying to destroy him and the Nation of Islam.

Farrakhan called the Jewish organization "self-centered, bigoted and malicious."

"The obsession of the ADL with my destruction has blinded them to the terrible need in the black community for a unified, programmatic approach to solving our problems," he said. The ADL ran a full-page

The Deadwood, 6 S. Dubuque St., is one of the many Iowa City bars which now has the new "ice" beer that comes in a variety of different brands. Steve Leventhal, a UI senior, takes a break from classes Thursday afternoon to have a drink.

Ice, ice, baby: New beer hits I.C.

Holly Reinhardt
The Daily Iowan

First there was light, then came dry, now the latest trend in beer brewing is ice, and its new taste and higher alcohol content are sending sales through the roof.

Although ice beers have been in Iowa City for a short time, many distributors are having trouble keeping it in stock.

"It just hit it," said Vince D'Agostino, manager of the Union Bar and Grill, 121 E. College St. "It has taken over everything."

Business in ice beer is booming at the Sports Column, 12 S. Dubuque St., as well.

"It's awful popular," Manager Tom Pate said. "We're selling the dickens out of it."

The reasons for the beer's popularity differ, he said.

"There's a couple of reasons, I think," Pate said. "It's a brand new product, and all the major breweries have it, and second, people think it's stronger."

"It just hit it. It has taken over everything."

Vince D'Agostino, manager, Union Bar and Grill

Dudley Fleck, president of Fleck Sales Company, a beverage distributor for Iowa City, Cedar Rapids and Burlington, said there is a higher content of alcohol in ice beer.

He said Miller Icehouse has a

5.5 percent alcohol content with 148 calories; Molson Ice has a 5.6 percent alcohol content with 160 calories; and Bud Ice has a 5.0 percent alcohol content with 159 calories.

In comparison, Bud Light has a 4.2 percent alcohol content with 111 calories, and Miller Lite has a 4.2 percent alcohol content with 96 calories (percentages by volume).

"Usually a little higher alcohol equals higher calories," he said.

Fleck said it is important to drink responsibly when drinking beer with a higher alcoholic content.

"Responsible drinking is always a concern," he said. "Beer is a beverage for moderation. Ice beers do have a slightly higher content, but College radio — in this case, KRUI with Andy Quinn and Mike Ferrari — can be both a training ground and a progressive trendsetter. Many of today's alternative rock bands, such as Smashing Pumpkins and Primus, had their start on college radio.

College radio more than meets the ear

Holly Reinhardt
The Daily Iowan

College radio today may be just as hard to define as the alternative music it plays. Even though the alternative music scene may be beginning to flirt with mainstream, college radio remains an enigma, vaguely symbolizing what music may mean to students.

John Barker, general manager and disc jockey for KRUI FM 89.7, said the meaning of college radio is difficult to convey.

"It is hard to put into a sentence," he said. "DJs are trying their hand at the real world industry. The really unique thing is that every DJ programs all their own music — there is an incredible amount of freedom."

While Barker sees college radio as a stepping stone into the professional industry of broadcast, Mark MackLeod, executive director of the National Association of College Broadcasters, said college radio is also an opportunity for DJs to approach their audience without the presumption of professionalism.

"College radio is an opportunity for people to hear DJs that are tr-ly spontaneous and amateur — in a positive, cool sense," he said. "Listeners come at it for the excitement, it's shock radio."

KRUI jock and UI graduate student Megan Mong agreed, commenting that for a college radio DJ there is more room to move.

"As a college radio DJ, you can make some mistakes — there is more leeway. Everything doesn't have to be just right," she said. "You don't have to have a radio voice — some do, but there is a nice balance."

College radio has been responsible for the explosion of many "alternative" bands into mainstream listening.

"College radio plays things that sound cool," Barker said. "We play songs months and even years before commercial radio picks it up."

He said songs like "Cherub Rock" and "Alive" are notably absent from KRUI.

"We no longer play those songs. They were picked up by the commercial stations," he said.

Mong said college radio is an effective outlet for smaller bands.

"It is a way for all these small bands to get their music out to young people who are going to listen, and it is so college people have something else to listen to," she said.

UI sophomore alternative music fan and KRUI listener Paul Schiavone said college radio provides access to a few good tunes.

"They play at least some of the music I listen to," he said. "They're in tune and know what we like."

"College radio cuts out a lot of the bullshit and useless advertising," Schiavone said.

Another important aspect of the college radio scene is the freedom artists have in making their music. College radio allows the artists a lot more room to develop a unique sound.

"The most important thing is that for college radio the artist doesn't have to compromise. In college radio, people are listening for what's different, new and challenging. The artists appreciate the fact that they're not asked to compromise," MackLeod said.

Barker said the original definition of alternative applied to any band that released an album on any record label other than the "big six."

"College radio can be challenging in that people have a tendency to want to go for what they can be comfortable with," MackLeod said. "We encourage people to take that challenge."

The actual listening process needs to become more active, too, he said.

"Radio tends to be background. College radio is definitely foreground," MackLeod said.

Weightlifting not just for buff, ripped jocks anymore

Megan Penick
The Daily Iowan

With February comes the real challenge of the year — will those New Year's resolutions to start a workout program die, or will they become a way of life?

Judging by the number of leopard, shorts and tank-top clad bodies in the UI Fitness Loft and the over-stuffed free-weight room at The Field House, many students have managed to take their workout schedule past being simply resolutions.

UI junior Sheila Spinnar said starting a routine is the hardest part.

"This semester is my first at the Fitness Loft. I just started working out for the first time in three years," she said. "I like it sometimes. It's hard to get out, but once you're in, it's fine."

On her second day in the gym, UI freshman Jeana Guy said working out in the free-weight room is not too bad once you get started.

"Last night when I looked around and saw it's just all these beefy men, I was scared," she said. "I guess I've just been too much of a weenie to try anything but walk."

"But I won't lose any flab worrying about who's watching me," Guy said.

For many, body building or lifting weights is a way of life — some thing they have been incorporating into their everyday lives for years. The motivations for lifting can be anything from appearance to just wanting to feel stronger emotionally and physically.

Tom Wilson, a UI senior, does squat exercises Thursday afternoon at Body Dimensions, 111 E. Washington St. Many students find that working out is a productive activity which also relieves stress.

"Buff" UI senior Phet Sadakhom, who began body building seven years ago, said he did it to change the image of Asian people.

"Pretty much I just wanted to try and change the stereotypes of Asian people. They're little and small. I'm still small, just a little bigger," he said. "It takes years and years of training consistently to get size."

UI junior John Scott said he started working out in high school, and now he lifts all the time.

"I wanted to do something I could do on my own — to work on my own physique and look good," he said. "It makes me feel great actually. I can even go home and study after I go to the gym. It gives me more energy."

A higher energy level is just one of the benefits that weightlifting offers, said New Life Fitness World trainer and UI senior Jay Mitchell.

"Basically, you're going to end up looking and feeling better. It will increase your bone strength and your bone mass, not to mention increase your muscle strength. It will affect your cardiovascular endurance and it will strengthen your heart some," he said.

Many weight lifters say they just like the way working out makes them feel, but Mitchell said to be a serious body builder it takes a lot more than just pumping iron.

"True body builders will do a lot of heavy lifting with good cardiovascular workouts," he said.

Sadakhom, who works out six days a week, said what he does in the gym is only a small part of being a body builder.

"Body building is 80 percent dieting, 20 percent inside the gym. You have to be careful what you eat," he said. "What you do outside the gym is most important."

I.C. STOP SCHEDULED

Branstad to speak with area leaders

Holly Reinhardt
The Daily Iowan

Gov. Terry Branstad is scheduled to make a stop on the UI campus today to discuss his welfare reform plan with a group of area leaders at the John Pappajohn Business Administration Building.

At 11:45 a.m., the governor will present information on Project PROMISE to the Iowa City Area Chamber of Commerce Community Leadership Program and other community leaders, said Jill Koehel, administrative assistant to the governor.

Bob Quick, executive vice president of the Iowa City Area Chamber of Commerce, said about 80 people are expected to attend.

"Having the governor in town provides an opportunity," he said. "We wanted to pull together a group of people to talk to him."

Quick said area business and community leaders will make up most of the governor's audience and will be provided time for questions.

"Anytime you get someone like the governor, a senator or a state representative in town, it is good to give them feedback, as well as to listen to what they have to say," Quick said.

The governor's visit also provides a chance for increased communication and interaction within the community, Quick said.

In addressing Project PROMISE, Branstad is touching on a new enterprise, he added.

"What's good about this is the governor is talking about a new initiative," he said. "It is good to address the topic to a small group."

The governor is also scheduled to speak at an assembly at City High School at 10:15 this morning.

MEDALS, FLAGS WILL BE PRESENTED

Four Johnson County WW I veterans to be honored

Jude Sunderbruch
The Daily Iowan

More than 75 years after the last shots of World War I were fired, the four surviving World War I veterans from Johnson County will be honored in a ceremony Saturday at 1 p.m. in the Iowa City National Guard Armory.

Veterans Hugh Dunlap, Leslie Freswick, Charles Righter and Joseph Kerf will be presented with the Robert R. McCormick Commemorative Medal, which is patterned after the World War I Victory Medal.

Annie Tuttle, a public affairs specialist with the Iowa City Veterans Affairs Medical Center, said the ceremony is a way for the community to thank the veterans for their sacrifices.

"The medal is a gift to all living World War I veterans," she said. "It's a recognition of their contributions to our freedom."

The ceremony is being sponsored by the Military Affairs Association, a local group which was formerly part of the Iowa City Area Chamber of Commerce.

Bob Sentman, president of the Military Affairs Association, said honoring the veterans is an important reminder as the war becomes a part of the distant past for many Americans.

"We've got an American flag to present to each veteran, as well as letters from several political leaders," he said. "I think it's important to recognize the fact that people did serve."

For some veterans, the war has largely faded into the past.

"I'm almost 98 years old," veteran Charles Righter said. "I think about a lot of things, but I don't dwell on it."

Veteran Hugh Dunlap had a nonchalant attitude about the medal he will receive this weekend.

"I'm not laying awake nights worrying about it," he said.

Bud Louis, a subcommittee chairman of the Military Affairs Association, said he hopes people will come to honor the veterans by attending the ceremony and the reception to follow.

"Anybody interested should come down," he said. "It looks like it should be a fairly nice day."

SOLUTION PROPOSALS DISCUSSED

Water woes subject of forum

Prasanti Kantamneni
The Daily Iowan

Flooding problems Iowa City has faced since last summer have led UI and Iowa City officials to construct a comprehensive water plan, the details of which were discussed at a public forum Thursday night.

"The incredible flooding that was experienced this past summer riveted our attention to the sheer power of water and its importance in our lives," Johnson County Supervisor Joe Bolckom said. "It showed us that we are not only connected by watersheds, but that land use practices and our water quality future are inextricably linked."

Feature members of the panel, held at the Iowa City Public Library, were Water Plant Manager Kenneth Lloyd, acting Water

Superintendent for Iowa City Ed Moreno, UI environmental engineering Professor Rangaswamy Rajagopal and Resident Director of Howard R. Green Consulting Engineers Ralph Russell.

The plan, constructed in response to changing water regulations, begins with phasing out the existing water treatment site and constructing a new water treatment facility. Russell said there are many reasons for doing this.

"It is not economically feasible to upgrade and renovate," he said. "There is not enough land to construct new facilities without demolishing existing facilities, and the existing plant is not able to meet current demand without all existing facilities in operation."

Nor does the current treatment site, which is subject to flooding, have enough space to construct sludge processing facilities, Russell said.

The plan also aims to improve the quality of water.

"Iowa City has a long history of problems with drinking water," Moreno said. "It's been known to taste like Spic-n-Span."

The plan also provides for blending the Iowa City water supply, now drawn mostly from the Iowa River, with water from the Jordan and Silurian wells.

The new facility will be located along the Iowa River, upstream from Interstate 80.

Last November, design began of the new $46 million facility, which will be built in the next 20 to 40 years.

The panel was sponsored by the Johnson County League of Women Voters and co-sponsored by the Iowa Civil Liberties Union.

Welsh to deliver presidential lecture

The Daily Iowan

Dr. Michael Welsh, UI professor of internal medicine and Howard Hughes Medical Institute investigator, will deliver the UI's 11th annual Presidential Lecture at 3:30 p.m. on Sunday in Clapp Recital Hall.

The lecture, sponsored by the UI College of Medicine, is free and open to the public and will give the community a firsthand chance to learn and discuss the work of distinguished UI medical faculty.

Welsh, the director of the UI Cystic Fibrosis Research Center, is among a team of UI doctors and researchers who recently identified a defect in the genes of those afflicted with cystic fibrosis — the most common fatal recessive genetic disease among Caucasians of Northern European descent.

Welsh's speech, titled "The Pathway of Discovery in Pursuit of a Genetic Disease," will discuss the ups and downs in the team's pursuit of a cure for this disease, which kills nearly 400 Americans every year.

CLINTON'S HEALTH-CARE PLAN SUPPORTED

AFL-CIO official endorses graduate union

Kristin Berg The Daily Iowan

During a Thursday afternoon UI visit, AFL-CIO Secretary-Treasurer Thomas Donahue gave his support to graduate students in their attempt to unionize.

Donahue, elected secretary-treasurer in 1979, spoke at the Labor Center's second annual Advanced Union Leadership Conference to promote the federation's current agenda to local and international union and business leaders.

He said he has been keeping up with the UI Teaching Assistants' and research assistants' plight to unionize. He said 12 universities have unions and 26 are trying. "I am fascinated by it on two levels," he said. "One, I have read enough of the clippings to know something about the campaign, and I am fascinated by the breadth of the program, by its emergence on the campus and by the debate."

Donahue and the AFL-CIO hope to change labor laws prohibiting faculties from forming unions. He said graduate students should fall into that category and should have the right to bargain collectively with universities.

In other issues, Donahue said the AFL-CIO supports health-care reform as long as Clinton's proposal maintains three objectives: universal coverage, quality care and cost containment.

"We have been advocates of health-care reform and of a national scheme for health insurance for more than 40 years," he said. "We have been more outspoken than ever on that issue in recent years as it becomes obvious to us that the nation can't continue a health-care theme in which the costs escalate 15 percent each year, and 39 million people remain outside the boundaries of the system and essentially aren't covered."

Donahue said the AFL-CIO is prepared to help push Clinton's plan through Congress. He predicts a fight from the Chamber of Commerce and employers.

"We are educating and training our people on the subject of health care so they can participate in the debate," he said. "We are prepared to mount a serious legislative program in support of the Clinton legislation."

In terms of labor law in the United States, Donahue said the Occupational Safety and Health Administration needs to undergo change. He said OSHA needs to release safety standards quicker and develop a more efficient inspection policy.

There are more than 5 million plants in the United States and there is no way the government could employ enough inspectors, he said. The AFL-CIO advocates an internal employee-run committee inspection plan.

ISRAEL HUNTS FUGITIVES

Associated Press

A Palestinian boy hurls a stone at an Israeli army patrol in Gaza City Thursday.

Death of Palestinian generates PLO outcry

Neil MacFarquhar
Associated Press

GAZA CITY, Occupied Gaza Strip — Israeli troops killed a wanted Palestinian underground fighter during a shootout Thursday in a refugee camp in the occupied Gaza Strip, witnesses said.

The death of Salim Muwafi brought protests from PLO leaders who criticized Israel for pressing the hunt for fugitives at a time of peacemaking with the PLO. They said Muwafi's death could raise tensions and complicate the Israeli-PLO talks on Palestinian autonomy.

Muwafi, 24, headed a breakaway faction of the Fatah Hawks, the military wing of Yasser Arafat's Fatah faction, in the Gaza Strip, according to Jumaa Jaror of the Fatah press office in Gaza. Muwafi had been on Israel's wanted list since March 1993.

At least 18 fugitive Fatah fighters have surrendered their weapons and endorsed the PLO-Israel peace process as part of an amnesty offer from the Israeli army. Many are expected to become part of a Palestinian police force.

Muwafi headed a group named after Ahmed Abu-Rish, a former Fatah Hawk who had turned in his gun and was then killed by Israeli soldiers. The army later said his killing was a mistake.

Fatah called a three-day commercial strike throughout the Gaza Strip to protest the killing. Gazans already were disillusioned with the peace process since Israel-PLO differences on security have delayed the start of the Israel withdrawal for more than seven weeks.

Israel television broadcast excerpts Thursday of an interview showing Muwafi cradling a Kalashnikov AK-47 automatic rifle and vowing vengeance for the army's killing of other underground fighters.

"If I die, I will die with honor," he said in the TV interview.

The shootout occurred in the Shaburah refugee camp in the southern Gaza Strip, according to Palestinian and Israeli reports. Two other members of the Hawks were wounded in the fighting, and two soldiers were slightly wounded.

Jamalaat Shabaneh, 20, a college student, said she saw three Fatah Hawks on Al Maktab Street and moments later heard gunfire.

She said she went outside and saw Israeli undercover soldiers dressed as Arabs standing over the bodies of three men lying in a pool of blood.

Israel's national news agency Itim said soldiers disguised as Arabs had been operating in the camp, trying to capture armed fugitives.

Zakaria al-Agha, a top PLO official in Gaza, criticized the shootings and said Palestinians expected Israeli forces to ease up on such attacks to build Palestinian confidence in the peace process.

"I don't think we can convince our people that we are talking peace with the Israelis, because they see the opposite on the ground," he said.

But an army spokesman said Muwafi was a legitimate target.

The army shut down Shabura and the neighboring town of Rafah after the shooting and imposed a curfew.

Also Thursday, Israeli troops shot a 13-year-old boy, Mahmoud Hassan Abu Hajar, in the head in the occupied Gaza Strip after they were stoned by a group of youths.

Army regulations ban shooting at stone-throwers to kill and allow soldiers only to fire in the air as a warning.

UNANIMOUSLY VOTED IN

Senate OKs Perry as Pentagon's top gun

John Diamond
Associated Press

WASHINGTON — Acting with unusual speed, the Senate confirmed William Perry as defense secretary Thursday, turning over command of the Pentagon to a scholar, businessman and expert on high-tech weapons.

The 97-0 vote came slightly more than a week after President Clinton named Perry, until now the No. 2 man at the Pentagon, to replace Les Aspin. Shortly after the Senate vote, Perry was sworn in at the Pentagon.

"He does have the vision we need," said Sen. Carl Levin, D-Mich., a member of the Senate Armed Services Committee. "He is totally committed to the security of this country."

Committee colleague John Warner, R-Va., predicted Perry would rank "among the finest" of the 19 people to hold the job since its creation after World War II.

Perry takes over as the glow of Cold War victory fades, and the specter of nuclear weapons proliferation and simmering regional conflict emerges. And he will move into the spacious office overlooking the Potomac as the Pentagon is adjusting to new rules on women in combat and homosexuals in uniform.

Republican members of the Armed Services panel almost placed a hold on Perry's nomination because of their concerns about the administration policy on homosexuals in the military. After a series of telephone calls between Perry and committee members, the Republicans decided against it.

"We came to the unanimous decision that it's too important a position to be held up," said Sen. Dan Coats, R-Ind.

Although he voted for the nominee, Coats said on the Senate floor he wondered if the reserved, bookish Perry would "defer to louder or stronger voices" in the administration and on Capitol Hill.

But other senators lined up to speak in glowing terms of Perry, for his service in the Carter administration's Pentagon as the "godfather of stealth" technology and as a management innovator.

"Some people have said he is not charismatic, that we need a charismatic secretary of defense. I disagree," Levin said. "We need somebody who has the experience to change the culture there."

Britain upset with IRA ally's U.S. hype

Shawn Pogatchnik
Associated Press

LONDON — Relations between Britain and the United States have undeniably soured because of Gerry Adams' headline-grabbing visit to New York, but the British are aiming most of their fire at the Sinn Fein leader rather than Washington.

Moving Thursday to seize back the public-relations spotlight, Britain likened Adams, head of the IRA's main political ally, to Hitler's chief propagandist. It also suggested it would push ahead with reforms in Northern Ireland — with or without Sinn Fein.

Sir Patrick Mayhew, Britain's top official in the province, said he would introduce within two weeks an outline plan aimed at bringing peace to Northern Ireland.

"Progress in Northern Ireland cannot and will not wait for Sinn Fein," Prime Minister John Major told Parliament.

In New York this week, Adams portrayed himself as Northern Ireland's chief peacemaker. But he refused to say whether he would persuade the IRA to lay down its arms — the key to earning his party a seat at the negotiating table.

In a Dec. 15 declaration, the British and Irish governments offered to allow Sinn Fein into peace talks if the Irish Republican Army ended its 23-year campaign against British rule in Northern Ireland.

The British worked hard behind the scenes to prevent Adams' U.S. trip, but they want to keep private their anger with President Clinton and those U.S. politicians who successfully argued for his special 48-hour visa.

Adams had been denied a visa eight times because Sinn Fein, though a legal party, is linked to the IRA and its violent campaign against British rule.

The U.S. ambassador to Britain, Raymond Seitz, was summoned to Major's official residence Tuesday. He acknowledged Wednesday the visa debate had caused "a big tussle" in the Clinton administration.

British officials say it will encourage Adams not to compromise.

A senior official in Britain's Foreign Office said Major wanted to avoid a "public row" with America. But he added that the visa effectively let Adams "play the democrat" while the IRA went on with its violent campaign.

JOINT U.S.-RUSSIAN MISSION

Discovery launches international team

Marcia Dunn
Associated Press

CAPE CANAVERAL, Fla. — Discovery rose with the sun and launched a new space age Thursday, carrying the first Russian into orbit aboard a U.S. shuttle.

The head of Russia's space program praised the prompt, and perfect, liftoff, considered a prelude to a shared space station and maybe, some day, a joint trip to Mars.

NASA's chief was so excited, he got goose bumps.

"We're going to change the whole way we look at space. We're going to do it together, instead of competing," said NASA Administrator Daniel Goldin.

Discovery blasted off at dawn, piercing a clear sky on its way to a 218 mile-high orbit. The rising sun gave the huge clouds of vapor left in the shuttle wake a pale orange glow.

Joining the five Americans on board for the eight-day science mission was cosmonaut Sergei Krikalev, who wore a Russian flag patch on the shoulder of his orange flight suit.

It's the first U.S.-Russian manned mission since the 1975 Apollo-Soyuz docking and the first time ever that astronauts and cosmonauts have been launched in the same spaceship.

In a statement from Moscow, Russian President Boris Yeltsin called the launch "a vivid manifestation of ever-growing cooperation and partnership between our countries and peoples."

The Russians were treated to a rare, trouble-free liftoff; even the weather was perfect.

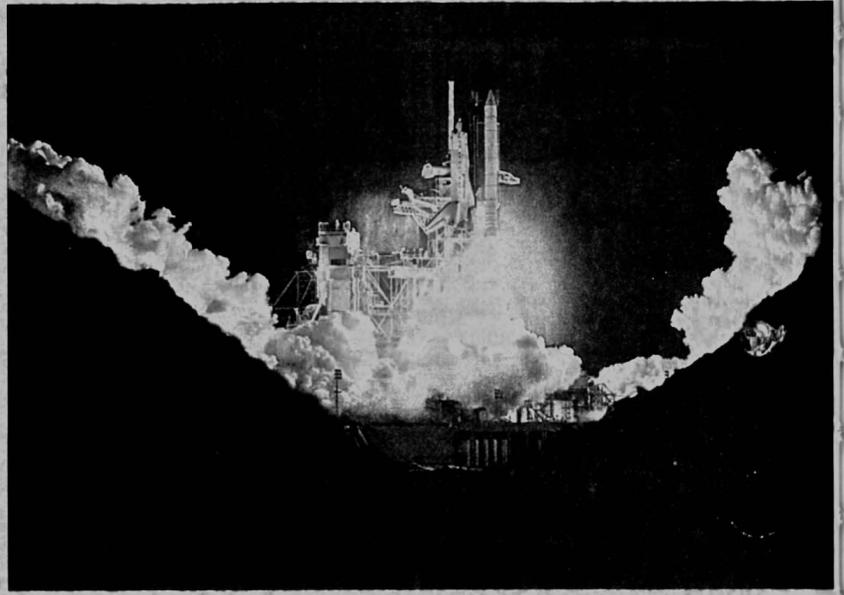

"It is remarkable that this launch has been on schedule, and everything is well, going all right," Russian space director Yuri Koptev told the shuttle launch team in Russian. "I hope that in our future cooperative projects, everything will be going as well, or right on schedule."

Koptev promised to return the favor early next year with a punctual Soyuz launch of a NASA astronaut to Russia's Mir space station.

Goldin later announced that astronaut will be Dr. Norman Thagard, with Bonnie Dunbar as his backup; they leave for Moscow in two weeks for a year of training. Dunbar's husband, astronaut Ronald Sega, coincidentally is aboard Discovery.

Atlantis is to make the first of up to 10 planned shuttle-Mir dockings in mid-1995, three months after Thagard's arrival at Mir. Thagard and the Mir cosmonauts will return to Earth aboard Atlantis, which will leave new cosmonauts in their stead.

Construction of a joint station is expected to start in 1997 and be completed in 2001. Once it's built

Associated Press

The Space Shuttle Discovery thunders off the pad Thursday, beginning an eight-day mission. Six crew members, including the first Russian cosmonaut to fly on a U.S. shuttle, are aboard for the mission.

and the U.S. and Russian economies improve enough, "it's on to Mars," Goldin promised.

Goldin said he's confident Russia's political and economic instability will not jeopardize the plans. "Yes, there's turmoil in Russia," Goldin said. Nonetheless, "we had about 18 to 20 launches and Russia had 40 during the peak of their maximum turmoil."

Within several hours of reaching orbit, Krikalev and the others had begun medical and radiation experiments, powered up the onboard laboratory and checked the satellite in the cargo bay that's supposed to be released Saturday.

The mission is due to end with a Kennedy Space Center landing on Feb. 11.

FRENCHMEN FEUD

Free flow frustrates fishermen

Patrick McDowell
Associated Press

PARIS — Swinging axe handles and iron bars, 1,200 rampaging fishermen broke through police lines and sacked France's largest wholesale food market Thursday to protest cheap imports they say are driving them out of business.

The fishermen fired flare-pistols into the shields of helmeted riot police, who replied with club-swinging charges and volleys of tear gas.

At least 18 officers and three fishermen were injured, police said. Protest leaders said one fisherman suffered a fractured skull and another lost an eye. Dozens of tons of fish were destroyed.

The fishermen are demanding that Paris and the 12-nation European Union take measures to set minimum prices and prevent cheaper, non-EU fish imports from flooding the market. They complain they can't compete with cheap imports and are being driven into bankruptcy.

The fishermen arrived at the Rungis market outside Paris at about 3 a.m. on buses from the Brittany region, where the fishing industry is badly depressed due to falling prices and increased competition from Africa, Eastern Europe and Scandinavia.

They emptied trucks carrying frozen fish and overturned containers and displays, seeking out imports. Tons of fish were scattered across warehouse floors and the facilities were damaged.

President's female aide will not join him in Egypt

1 VIENNA, Austria (AP) — Bowing to public pressure, Austria's president announced this week he would make an official visit to Egypt next week without a female aide with whom he has had an affair.

Foreign Minister Alois Mock and other officials were reported to have pressed President Thomas Klestil to travel without Margot Loeffler, a 39-year-old career diplomat, to avoid embarrassment.

Klestil announced last week he would part with Loeffler and split for good with his wife of 37 years in an attempt to end a highly publicized affair.

But he apparently insisted Loeffler be included in his official party for the visit to Egypt because she had made the preparations for the trip.

Loeffler has requested a transfer from the presidential office as soon as a suitable post opens abroad, a presidential statement said, but that seemed likely to take months.

A joint statement from Klestil's office and the Foreign Ministry said Loeffler would go on vacation starting Feb. 7, the day Klestil's trip begins.

Child warrior avenges older brother's death

2 MOGADISHU, Somalia (AP) — Before Salad Nuur Ali left home one morning, his mother prepared his breakfast of bread, oil and sweet-and-spicy tea.

Salad dallied and was late in joining his militia unit in war-shattered Mogadishu.

But his commander did not punish him — he's only 15 years old.

Two years ago, during the civil war, Salad saw his older brother's slain body brought home for burial.

"I became upset and angry and decided to avenge my brother," Salad said in an interview.

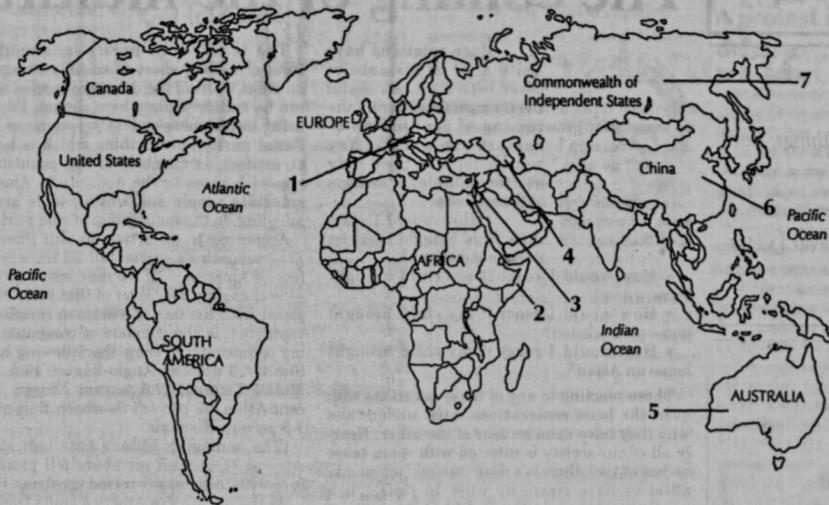

He took up his brother's assault rifle and, despite his parents' pleas, went to the Murosade clan unit commanded by Col. Dhoore Mohamed Gessy.

"We suspected he was too young for the job, and so I told him to remain in a defensive position. But he disobeyed me and crept forward, climbed up the back of a building the enemy occupied and shot dead the very machine gunner who had killed his brother," said Col. Gessy.

He said Salad's mother came to him, begging him to send the boy home as she had already lost three sons in the war.

Salad is small for his age and looks younger than 15. He is shy, smiling coyly when asked a direct question. His voice seems to have just broken, but he says he has already killed many men.

"I was not scared that day," recalls Salad of his first venture into the war. "But sometimes I am scared, especially if the war is going badly and there is shelling."

Unknown group claims assassination of diplomat, threatens Norway

3 BEIRUT, Lebanon (AP) — A previously unknown group claims it assassinated a Jordanian diplomat and warned Norway that its interests will be attacked if it facilitates talks between the PLO and Israel, a newspaper reported this week.

The leftist As-Safir daily reported that a man who said he represented the Palestinian Organization of Ouja telephoned the newspaper Tuesday night to claim responsibility for the assassination of Naeb Imran Maaytah, the second-ranking diplomat at the Jordanian Embassy.

It was the first such claim since Maaytah was shot to death in his car Saturday in the seaside Raouche district in Beirut. There was no way to authenticate the claim. As-Safir said the caller tried to fake a Palestinian accent.

Norway played a key role in secret negotiations between the Palestine Liberation Organization and Israel that resulted in the Sept. 13 agreement. It has since sought to mediate differences between the two sides.

Bomb blast kills Georgia's deputy defense minister

4 TBILISI, Georgia (AP) — Georgia's deputy defense minister died in a predawn bombing at his home in the Georgian capital Thursday.

There was no immediate claim of responsibility for the assassination of Deputy Defense Minister Nicholas Kekelidze, ministry spokesman Soso Margishvili said.

The bomb went off in Kekelidze's home in the old quarter of Tbilisi at 4 a.m., Margishvili said. No one else was injured, he said.

The deputy defense minister reportedly lived alone.

The bombing occurred as Russian President Boris Yeltsin and Russian Defense Minister Pavel Grachev were in the Georgian capital for talks on economic and military ties between the two former Soviet republics.

Russia wants to extend its leases on five army bases in Georgia and keep about 23,000 troops stationed there.

Since independence from the Soviet Union in 1991, Georgia has been embroiled in a series of civil wars and experienced a near-complete breakdown in law and order. Georgian leader Eduard Shevardnadze has increasingly looked toward Russia for help.

Two key charges to be dropped against prince's attacker

5 SYDNEY, Australia (AP) — The two most serious charges will be dropped against the student accused of firing blanks from a starter's pistol at Prince Charles, prosecutors said Thursday.

Charges of attacking and threatening the prince, filed under a law to protect visiting foreign leaders and officials, will be dropped because Charles is not covered by the law, said Attorney-General Michael Lavarch's office.

Prosecutors disclosed plans to drop two of the six charges during a bail hearing today for David Kang, 23, who is accused of firing the pistol at the prince during an outdoor ceremony Jan. 26 in Sydney. The prince was unhurt.

The worst charges carry a maximum penalty of 10 years imprisonment each. If they are dropped, Kang would face only four relatively minor charges: assault, breach of the peace, firearm possession and using a firearm. These carry penalties ranging from two to seven years in prison.

Kang, who fired the starter's pistol before thousands of spectators at National Day celebrations, jumped onto the stage with Prince Charles before being tackled by guards.

Kang is being held in the psychiatric ward of a prison hospital in Sydney.

The prince concludes his 12-day-long official visit to Australia on Saturday.

Defense lawyer Ian Barker argued the firearms charges should also be dropped because the starter's pistol was harmless.

China frees three Catholic clerics

6 HONG KONG (AP) — Chinese authorities have freed three Roman Catholic clerics who led prayers in defiance of the ruling Communist Party, a U.S.-based religious group said Thursday.

News Network International, a private news agency based in Santa Ana, Calif., said one of those freed was Bishop Su Zhiming, who was detained Jan. 20 after meeting U.S. Rep. Christopher Smith, R-N.J., in Beijing.

The agency said its information came from church sources in Hong Kong.

China bans worship except in state-sponsored churches. The Communists broke ties with the Vatican shortly after seizing power in 1949.

News Network said Bishop Su, 61, was freed Saturday and returned home.

The Rev. Placidius Pei Ronggui and the Rev. Jia Zhiguo, who were arrested in Hebei province in northeast China in early January, also were freed, it said.

Press barred from Cabinet for first time since Soviet collapse

7 MOSCOW, Russia (AP) — Russian journalists were barred from a Cabinet meeting Thursday for the first time since the 1991 Soviet collapse.

The media ban appears to reflect the Cabinet's new, more Soviet style. Prime Minister Viktor Chernomyrdin recently reorganized the Cabinet, shutting out reformers and giving key posts to former Communist bureaucrats.

The state news agency ITAR-Tass reported with thinly veiled indignation that its reporters were barred from the session at the Russian White House, the former parliament building.

ITAR-Tass said it was told that only a reporter from the Cabinet's own newspaper, Rossiiskaya Gazeta, would be allowed to attend such meetings from now on.

DEPENDENT EXEMPTIONS

Like children for Cadillacs

Faster than a melting credit card, more powerful than a loan shark breaking your leg, able to mire you in lifelong debt in a single bound, it's a bird, it's a plane, it's a ... child of your own!

Children are luxury items which most Americans are not even beginning to be able to afford. By Census Bureau definitions, 20 to 25 percent of all American children are classified as poor. A significantly larger portion live marginally between subsistence and impoverishment, and the fastest growing population of teen-age workers are those from middle-class suburbia. Although two adult incomes are rarely enough to propel a family budget ahead of creditors by more than a month or two, more households are increasingly led by single parents. Predominantly, the responsibility for a child falls on the mother, so over two-thirds of the poor in this country are women and children.

Why do Americans continue popping out the warm little bodies they most certainly will not be able to afford? People, many economists agree, make the decision to procreate based on criteria they would use when deciding to buy a house, a car or to donate money to a charity. They base it on the fact that children can be used as an exemption on taxes. In effect, people with children are rewarded monetarily by the government for having families.

Giving such an incentive to Americans is rather like giving them a false sense of security. As with a majority of tax incentives and exemptions in America, the wealthy are the ones who benefit most from child exemptions. Because low-income taxpayers are in lower tax brackets, they get less back for each child. Tax exemptions for children miserably fail the poor and cost the federal government $23.2 billion dollars annually, less than 10 percent of which actually goes to helping impoverished families.

Eradicating the child exemption feature from taxes would be a strong first step to alleviating the high child poverty rate in America. Since it is a feature geared to helping wealthier parents, it is a feature of little use to the people who need it the most. Over $2 billion would be saved by the elimination of child exemptions that could be fed into other welfare programs to help the poor, not the wealthy.

Eradicating the child exemption feature from taxes would be a strong first step to alleviating the high child poverty rate in America.

Secondly, the government could begin paying citizens not to have children. Rather than rewarding the taxpayers with children, the government could take a first step in improving the quality of life for individuals without children.

Without the use of compulsory compliance, as the Chinese government demands of its citizens in an ongoing program geared to reduce the overpopulation of China, the U.S. government could significantly reduce poverty for both adults and children in America by offering a monetary incentive to remain childless.

A very basic foundation of such an incentive program would be to provide Americans with free post-secondary training or schooling in exchange for an agreement to remain childless. In lieu of such a promise, people agreeing only to postpone having children, perhaps until their 30s, would be greatly subsidized by the government in their educational endeavors. A better educated population would result in the enhancement of all aspects of our society, and the government and taxpayers would save the money currently spent on subsidies to young, uneducated people strapped with children and the resulting debts. If those who made the agreement to remain childless later had children, there would have to be a requirement for them to pay back their educational costs to the government. Lest this become a program aimed at decreasing the birthrate of the poor alone, correlating penalties and incentives would have to be created to affect wealthier Americans as well.

With a better educated existing population, in addition to a decrease in warm bodies used to feed the slave-wage jobs in an economic environment becoming more predominantly service-oriented, incomes for the traditionally poor and middle class might actually increase. Urban and rural schools suffering from overcrowding, dilapidation and a dearth of teachers willing to work for peanuts, would begin to recover from the effects of a decade of spending cuts.

People could also be given tax incentives to adopt instead of reproducing, thus saving millions of kids from having to live in orphanages, homes and on the streets each year.

Some fake, utopian dream society would probably never result from rearranging the tax system yet again in America, but for a large amount of Americans, standards would rise. Children rarely get repossessed from parents too poor to pay the bills; nonetheless, children are a luxury item for which most parents make payments over a large portion of their lifetimes. It is time to give Americans an incentive to take much better care of themselves.

The coming of the multiracial mainstream

Race relations have quite a lot of distance to cover before we can sound the trumpets and herald the coming of genuine unity against oppression. Any who doubt this need only ask the following questions of themselves:

- How would I react if my child brought home an African-American?
- How would I react if my child brought home a Jew?
- How would I react if my child brought home a Caucasian?
- How would I react if my child brought home an Asian?

Those reacting to any of these questions with even the least reservations must understand why they have done so: fear of the other. Nearly all of our society is infected with some sense of fear of the other. It's something which nearly all of us have grown up with. In fact, it is a fairly recent chronological occurrence that racially mixed couples have been granted even a facade of equal treatment alongside the rest of our predominantly racially segregated society.

But (however slowly it comes) the quite unenlightened philosophy of racial purism is receding into the background like the Hitler-era appropriation it should rightfully be recognized as. The United States is changing.

And it is not bleaching Aryan. Interracial marriages and, as a result, births are on the rise in today's United States, and that rather chafes the psychological posturing of many would-be defenders of the "purity" of their respective races. Racial purists, preaching the very same sermon they have for decades, fear racial mixing will result in the elimination of the "pure" stocks of their race(s). But that sort of Goebels / Metzger wet dream must be faced down.

The term racial purity is, among other things, nothing short of racially arrogant. (In an effort to avoid the debate over whether some can be racists while others cannot, I'll stick to using other, more-or-less synonymous terms.) Racial purity is something which is becoming an artifact, as members of less populous races mix with those in the majority in America — nonwhite people and white people are intermingling, to the indignation of said purists.

According to an article by Jill Smolowe in Time magazine's special fall '93 issue, even the face of America — if we may speak so broadly — is changing. The cover of that issue is emblazoned with the face of a woman racially mixed together (via the wonders of computer morphing technology) to show the following heritage: She is 15 percent Anglo-Saxon, 17.5 percent Middle Eastern, 17.5 percent African, 7.5 percent Asian, 35 percent Southern European and 7.5 percent Hispanic.

(The managing editor's note indicates that several Time staff members felt promptly in love with this racially mixed construct.)

As the majority in America shifts from "pure" Caucasian, the face of Americans will also shift — to reflect more of the characteristics evidenced by the computer-constructed woman pictured on Time's cover. And slowly — so ponderously that today's bigots may never see the day arrive, unfortunately — the races in the American population will mix. And all but small caches of inbreeding colonies will move into the new multiracial mainstream.

New developments will accompany this shift in American racial demographics, including a greater appreciation of and enjoyment of the variety of races, cultures and religious philosophies humankind has to offer. For alongside the increase in interracial marriages, there has also been an increase in marriages and relationships which intermingle faiths.

According to the aforementioned Time article, interracial marriages have increased from 310,000 to 1.1 million over the past 20 years. And these open-minded couples are having children at increased rates, as well. In the same time frame, "the incidence of births of mixed-race babies has multiplied 26 times as fast as that of any other group."

So, citizens, it looks like our pigmentation-segmented population is about to move from blockish leaps of color between the races to barely distinguishable shade-shifts. And it will be wondrous.

Scientists have been arguing lately over whether there is even enough variation in DNA between the so-called races for them to be properly classified as separate races. According to both an article by Steve Mirsky, which appeared in the January / February 1994 issue of Wildlife Conservation, and Jared Diamond's book "The Third Chimpanzee," we Homo sapiens are genetically closer to chimpanzees (we have more than 98 percent of our DNA in common with them) than are two birds classified within the same genus: the white-eyed vireo and the red-eyed vireo. So it seems that elitism based upon the concept of different races may at least be argued to be based upon the false assumption that we Homo sapiens actually even are different enough to be considered separate races.

So often, it is humankind's arrogance about not merely the differences between our so-called races, but our attitudes of supremacy as a result of those differences which leads to prejudice, dehumanization of others and separatism.

The philosophy of the various racial purity movements — from neo-Nazis and their Afrikaner Volksfront counterparts to the many African-American separatists — will, over time, be rendered moot. And with the close of the era of hatred, separation, arrogance and supremacist thought based upon one's race, goes the sadly misguided elitism of racial purism.

Here's to a population of mutts.

Additions to 'Life's Little Instruction Book, Vol. II'

If you're a fan of self-help books and pithy statements in large print, you've probably heard about or read the best seller "Life's Little Instruction Book, Vol. II."

"Life's Little Instruction Book, Vol. II," like its predecessor, is a wonderful compendium of "suggestions, observations, and reminders on how to live a happy and rewarding life." If you're like me, however, the first reaction you have after tapping this treasure trove of advice on the most important aspects of life is to think of words of wisdom learned from your own life's journey that could be added to the book.

Also, while most of the entries, such as "Never underestimate the power of love" and "Don't postpone joy," serve as timeless advice, they are often not specific enough to guide everyday living. Thus, I felt the need to add a few eclectic and more specific entries on how to successfully make it through a happy and rewarding life:

Love

- Guys: When it comes to sex, remember: "No" means no. However, "I'm gonna make you speak in tongues" means you're in for an interesting evening.
- Guys: Also remember that a woman has every right to ask you to wear a condom. However, in most instances, she has no right to ask you to dip your body in formaldehyde and have your genitals laminated.
- Girls: Consider dropping a boyfriend who laughs like a hyena at reruns of "Dukes of Hazard."
- Guys: Look into breaking up with a girlfriend who won't let up with the "Butt-head" impersonations.
- Guys: Do not respond to a personal ad from a SWF who describes herself as looking "kinda like Art Buchwald."
- In most cases, wait until the second date before trying the "pull my finger" trick.
- Guys: It is considered bad form when you are in public with your girlfriend to stare incessantly at female passers-by and exclaim "Whoa, baby! Get some fries with that shake!"

baby! Get some fries with that shake!"

School

- Consider dropping a Linguistics course in which the professor can't stop saying, "Bitchin'!"
- Look into dropping a Human Anatomy class in which the instructor giggles uncontrollably whenever he hears the word penis.
- You may want to study more for a course if, the next time you show up for class, the professor says, "I thought I flunked your ass months ago."
- You're probably not exceeding your potential in school if your adviser suggests you change your major to "studies in meat packing."
- You may be in over your head in a course in which your exams are returned with the words "Man, you're a bonehead" written next to your score.
- Do not show up at your first Beginning German course two months into the semester and raise your hand in the middle of class and ask, "Why is everybody speakin' some kinda weird moon-man language?"
- Do not continually pester your Human Sexuality professor with the question, "When we gonna start talking about 'doin' the nasty'?"
- Never cheat off anyone who bought most of their wardrobe at a Motley Crue concert.
- Keep in mind the increasing concern for political correctness when dealing with your instructors. Do not try to compliment a professor in the women's studies department by telling her she has "a nice snack tray."
- If political correctness is a major concern for you, do not matriculate in a college whose nickname is "The Aggressive Lesbians."
- Remember that what you wear to an interview says something about you. When interviewing at a law firm or financial institution, leave the "Official Bikini Inspector" T-shirt at home.
- Do not be fooled into accepting a job that's merely been given an important sounding title. "Junior vice president of the French fry division" is not a prestigious position.

Do not list all of your honors and accomplishments on your resume unless they are relevant. "Miss Big Cans — 1991, Dayton Beach" does not say much about your character.

- When interviewing for a job as a police officer do not continually ask, "So when would I get to start shootin' people?"
- Do not try to impress a female interviewer by stating, "I actually kinda like workin' for dames."
- When asked by an interviewer "What's your biggest weakness?", in most instances, do not flatly respond, "I'm an amazing loser."
- When asked about why you want the job, do not respond, "Drug money — period."

General life lessons

- Never share an apartment with a guy who's "Most Likely to Become an Intense, Desolate Loner."
- Do not spend a lot of time with a roommate who watches a lot of professional wrestling and is continually yelling, "These refs must be blind!"
- Do not tempt fate. Do not have your baby circumcised by a Rabbi Bobbitt.
- Be especially patient and courteous with the old, the frail and the sick, unless, like, they puke on you or something.
- If you and your date rent a movie titled "Cinderella," make sure it's the 1950 comedy starring Jerry Lewis.
- When you lose, lose without excuses, unless your back kinda hurt or maybe your opponent cheated.
- Never laugh at another's hopes and dreams. Calmly say, "Dude, that's like the dumbest thing I've ever heard."
- Do not continue seeing a physician who can't stop saying, "Ewww — Gross!"
- Keep a safe distance from anyone at a Grateful Dead concert who is running around shaking his pants, screaming "Damn squirrels!"

The 'filter' of skepticism

To the Editor:
Tom Hunter's column last Tuesday was given to me by a friend who works in Iowa City. As Christians our response was one of incredulity concerning Hunter's facts and logic.

Two things stand out. One, his reasoning that Christians labor under the myopia of faith, or the filter of faith, when examining ancient documents on the origins of Christianity and cannot be impartial and thus do not see the "myths" at the core of Christianity. We all have filters. Hunter's is skepticism and unbelief. We come to all issues of life with our filters, i.e., our basic values and presuppositions, and these filters have a common ground: faith. Faith is defined in the New Testament as being sure of what we hope for and certain of what we do not see. It is the only way to understand the things we do not see or did not experience. (Example: the formation of the universe and our creation.)

So, Hunter, don't dismiss our filter out of hand for yours. On what basis do you accept your sources concerning Christianity and reject the veracity of Scripture? Your skepticism, too, can be classified as myopic.

Secondly, I find it interesting that over this century the argument against Christianity has moved from the denial of Christ's existence to one of rejection of his words. No credible scholarship can now deny the historicity of the person of Jesus Christ. There is just too much evidence that he lived on this earth.

So now the theme is to trash his words. Why? I suspect because of his claims of divinity as being the son of God. He didn't come as another moral teacher but as the savior of humanity and the only way to God. He said things that cut to the core of our proud nature. So instead of accepting his teaching and his claims, "scholarship" finds ways to discredit him; the Jesus Seminar is just one example.

The bottom line, Hunter, is this: Are you willing to bet your eternal soul on the basis of your belief system — your filter?

For me, I will rest my soul in the person of Jesus Christ who said, "I am the way, the truth and the life, no one comes to the father except through me." I trust you will seriously consider his claims; your eternity depends on it.

Get involved

To the Editor:
To all students who have been unfairly treated, discriminated against, wrongly accused, felt neglected, poorly judged, harassed, taken advantage of, discouraged, led astray, misguided or anything else by the UI:

Are you fed up with your views not being heard or your needs not being met? Now is your time to act! If you are one of these students, you can bring your views and differences to the surface. The only person who can control your destiny and who can truly look out for your best interests is you.

How? Well, join or get involved with student government and let your voice be heard. Everyone has the opportunity to run for any position in student government and get involved. If there are more people involved then more views will be heard. Maybe someday the whole university will be adequately represented.

There are petitions available in the Union for all undergraduate students. Petitions are due Feb. 11. The graduate and professional students need to submit a letter of intent to the University Box Office. Graduate and professional student senators are selected on a first-come, first-served basis.

A protest in Grenée's defense

To the Editor:
In all honesty, I only started rereading the DI on an average basis since the Chris Britt cartoon episode. However, since that time one columnist has stood out in my mind, because she gets to issues and covers them in a powerful and straightforward style. Therefore, when I noticed Misty Benson's criticism of H. Fields Grenée's work, I had to write in my protest.

Grenée has written on AIDS from a personal point of view, coming to grips with one's ego, appreciating Martin Luther King Jr. Day and understanding the struggle of the black race. Grenée has tackled controversial issues which no other columnist has been brave enough to face, while maintaining the human element in each piece. Her work is neither "uninsightful," "constant bitching" or "hypocritical."

I've read the article which Benson felt a need to make a reference to "All we need is love," and if she had been paying attention, she would have noticed that Grenée was writing non-hate and understanding — despite the elements which might make you wish to do otherwise.

I and many of my friends view H. Fields Grenée's work as a blessing; at least she's making people think about the issue, which by the way is more than I can say for the other writers on the Viewpoints Pages.

Faith holds up under attack

To the Editor:
In regard to Tom Hunter's column, allow me to point out that scholars have known for a long time that the Bible is not a history book, it is a book of faith. Its purpose is to point people to God. The Gospel writers weren't trying to write history, they were trying to make disciples. The dates of authorship of the Gospels and the relationship between the four has been and continues to be debatable, and the final word on this hasn't been written.

The fact that there was a Jewish community at Qumran that preceded Christianity proves nothing, even if Christians adopted some of their practices and ideas.

Archaeology and sound scholarship will never be able to prove or disprove whether Jesus was the Christ. Jesus is known only by the eyes of faith, and I know this is precisely what Hunter finds objectionable.

The Roman Catholic Church is not involved in a plot to keep people in the dark. I don't understand why Hunter is so determined to destroy something that has, in its purest form, been such a force for good in the lives of millions. The faith has withstood the attacks of other critics and will still be viable long after Hunter's pen is at rest.

An exposé

To the Editor:
The Tom Hunter column titled "Messiah for hire: mystical curiosities" (DI, Jan. 25) will surely ruffle the feathers of the religious establishment and its devotees. On that basis alone, it took great courage and integrity to publish a truthful and accurate exposé of a book, the holy Bible, that has largely escaped public scrutiny.

But the Bible has had a few critics through the centuries. Among those who were not executed as heretics was intrepid Revolutionary War hero Thomas Paine. Paine exposed the Bible over 200 years ago in his 1792 book "The Age of Reason" for its "obscene stories, voluptuous debaucheries, cruel and torturous executions, and unrelenting vindictiveness... the words of a demon. It is a history of wickedness that has served to corrupt and brutalize mankind."

After all, in the Bible are found over 20 separate instances of divinely approved incest, uncounted numbers of approved rapes, murders and the slaughter of millions of innocent people. It is a book that tells tale of human cannibalism, castration and circumcision, abuse of children, child sacrifices, keeping of concubines, nakedness, scatology and coprophagy. It is a book of misogyny, explicit sex, drunkenness, religious and ethnic hatreds, homosexuality, atrocity, revenge, and wanton killings. Given many opportunities, nowhere does this book condemn slavery. Nowhere does this book encourage democratic governance, nor even recognize human and civil rights.

The fact that the Bible is also based on myths, folklore, hero tales, and corrupted and slanted history is slowly becoming public knowledge. For many believers, however, the current deluge of Biblical criticism and exposure is not only devastating, but it also undermines the supposed basis for their moral and ethical values. Just as hard-core Communists refuse to accept the bankruptcy and corruption inherent in Communism, so too will Judeo-Christian fundamentalists refuse to accept the reality of religious history and dogma as the fraud and hoax that they truly are.

reasons."

Clinton's decision to risk the wrath of veterans' groups was made easier by a nonbinding 62-38 vote in the Senate last Thursday favoring an end to the embargo. Some veterans and family groups maintain that Vietnam has recovered the remains of hundreds of MIAs, but refuses to turn them over to U.S. authorities.

John Summer, executive director of the American Legion, said, "The embargo was the only leverage that we had," and that he wouldn't be surprised if Vietnam's cooperation will begin to diminish.

Even though Clinton minimized the benefits American businesses would receive, it is no secret that Vietnam is regarded as ripe territory for foreign investors. It is one of Asia's fastest-growing markets, and nearly all other countries that had once joined in the embargo have re-established commercial ties with the communist nation.

American businesses have pressed for an end to the embargo.

In Hanoi, American business leaders hailed Clinton's move, saying it would finally give them the chance to compete in a $1 billion market.

Vietnam is "the hottest emerging market in the world right now," said Eugene Matthews, president of Ashta International Inc., an investment and consulting firm. Ashta is one of 34 U.S. firms that have opened offices in Vietnam in anticipation of the U.S. embargo being lifted. European and Asian nations already have invested hundreds of millions of dollars in the country.

Clinton's efforts to avoid military service during the Vietnam War — and his opposition to that war — made his decision all the more sensitive. But Clinton said that every American of his age knew someone who died or was wounded in the fighting.

Clinton insisted that removing the trade embargo was not the same as restoring full diplomatic relations with Vietnam.

"I want to be clear. These actions do not constitute a normalization of our relationship. We must have more progress, more cooperation and more answers," Clinton said.

Clinton also said he would establish a U.S. liaison office in Vietnam. The office would be responsible for handling MIA matters, human rights, trade and other issues.

Many family members and veterans' groups preferred that Clinton keep the embargo in place to encourage continued Vietnamese cooperation on the MIA issue.

Ann Mills Griffith, head of a Vietnam MIA-POW family group, boycotted Clinton's meeting with family groups because she was told by the White House that Clinton had already made up his mind to lift the embargo.

ad in The New York Times condemning Farrakhan.

Farrakhan also asserted that there was "racism at the highest levels of government" and accused Gore of conspiring with the ADL against blacks.

Muhammad's comments had caused a rift between Farrakhan and the leader of the Congressional Black Caucus.

Unless Farrakhan satisfied questions about his own views, any working relationship between him and the black caucus "is severely jeopardized," Rep. Kweisi Mfume, D-Md., said on Tuesday.

"Whether or not that means severing all ties and not being able to work on projects that deal with the salvation of young people in our community, I have to say to you: I don't know," Mfume said.

The Senate voted unanimously Wednesday to condemn Muhammad's comments, in a resolution offered by Sen. John Danforth, R-Mo., and Sen. Edward Kennedy, D-Mass., as an amendment to an education bill.

"If Mr. Farrakhan wants to enter the political and social mainstream, then his actions will have to speak louder than the words of some of his associates," said Senate Republican leader Bob Dole of Kansas.

Last month, Mfume asked Farrakhan to clarify whether Muhammad was reflecting official policy when he made the comments at New Jersey's Kean College on Nov. 29, and to reveal Muhammad's status within the Nation of Islam.

In that speech, which was quoted in a full-page newspaper ad by the Anti-Defamation League, B'nai B'rith, Muhammad said Jews are "bloodsuckers of the black nation and the black community" who control government, the news media and other black activists.

He also called Pope John Paul II a "no-good cracker," and urged mob murder of whites in South Africa.

Vice President Al Gore called Muhammad's comments "the vilest kind of racism" and told the United Jewish Appeal that "America is a tolerant country, but we should not tolerate hatred and racism."

Jesse Jackson, who has condemned Muhammad's statements, accused Gore of "scapegoating" and called on President Clinton "to give a major civil rights speech."

Last month, a House committee approved a bill requiring young women to notify a parent before obtaining an abortion, but agreed to several exceptions.

Critics of parental notification say young women from troubled families would be reluctant to involve parents in the decision.

Seeking to meet that criticism, abortion foes included a provision allowing a young woman to go before a judge if she chose not to involve her parents.

Pro-choice forces were able to attach other amendments, including allowing counselors and ministers to be substituted for parents and judges.

Because there's a judicial bypass written into the measure, there is additional cost to the state. Legislative fiscal analysts projected that cost at more than $200,000 a year.

That was based on the roughly 1,500 abortions obtained by minors in the state each year.

For Thursday's debate, pro-choice forces filed nearly 30 amendments, many aimed at expanding the options for young women considering an abortion.

House approval, however, is not the last word on the question.

In the Senate, parental notification would face a fight in a committee headed by Sen. Elaine Szymoniak, D-Des Moines. She is a pro-choice advocate who has vowed to bottle up the bill in her committee.

Gov. Terry Branstad has said he would sign a parental notification bill if lawmakers send it to him.

drink it more socially. You're not going to pound them down."

Willis Lyford, corporate communications manager for Coors, said that the idea an ice beverage conveys draws consumers.

"It strikes a familiar chord with consumers — it symbolizes cold," he said. "Domestic beer is meant to be cold — ice beer is supposed to be a cold product."

UI senior Rob Foster prefers the taste of ice beer to other brewing processes.

"It tastes a lot better," he said. "It's not so bland like regular beer."

Clark said the higher alcohol content really isn't a concern, because it is no worse than hard alcohol.

"It's still not anything close to doing shots," he said.

UI freshman Tina Urbanski likes the taste of ice beer, but said she hasn't become totally loyal.

"It's just good," she said. "I don't drink only that, but I like it. I didn't even know about the higher alcohol content."

Urbanski said bars are helping the sales of ice beers.

"A lot of bars are advertising it. It's become very popular, and it's more available now," she said.

Jeff King, keg and case driver for Fleck Sales, said the brewing process of the beer is responsible for the increased alcohol content.

"It has something to do with after it is brewed, the beer is frozen until it crystallizes and then filtered," he said.

Fleck agreed.

"The ice brewing process allows beer to be a full bodied beer with a crisp taste — it is easily drinkable," he said.

Olerud signs $17 million deal with Jays

TORONTO (AP) — Toronto first baseman John Olerud, who led the American League with a .363 batting average last season, agreed Thursday to a $17 million, three-year contract that propels him into baseball's top pay bracket.

Olerud, 25, will get a $1.5 million signing bonus, $3.25 million in 1994, $5.25 million in 1995 and $6 million in 1996. The Blue Jays have an option for 1997 at $6.5 million with a $1 million buyout. The option becomes guaranteed if he has 500 plate appearances in any of the next three seasons.

The deal's annual average value of $5,666,667 is the 15th highest in the major leagues.

Olerud wasn't eligible for free agency until after the 1995 season.

NFL

Ryan named skipper at Phoenix

TEMPE, Ariz. (AP) — The punch is past, and Buddy's back as a boss in the NFL.

A month after slugging a coaching colleague during Houston's final regular-season game, Buddy Ryan was hired Thursday as coach and general manager of the Phoenix Cardinals.

"You've got a winner in town," said Ryan, the Oilers defensive coordinator last season. "We're looking forward to winning. So today we start."

Ryan, who coached the Philadelphia Eagles from 1986-90 and led them to the playoffs three times, signed a four-year contract. He replaces Joe Bugel, who was fired Jan. 24 after a 7-9 season in which he failed to deliver on an ultimatum by owner Bill Bidwill to produce a winner.

The hiring comes as something of a surprise given that Ryan's stock was believed to have dropped considerably after he punched offensive coordinator Kevin Gilbrede during a nationally televised game.

But Bidwill was undeterred by this latest run-in with a colleague and gave him the additional job of general manager, the first time the Cardinals have put one man in the dual role. The Cardinals had been without a general manager since Larry Wilson resigned Dec. 14.

Ryan, who turns 60 this month, is entering his 25th year as an NFL coach.

Hawks brace for Robinson, Purdue

Roxanna Pellin
The Daily Iowan

Four days to prepare for No. 8 Purdue will hopefully be enough to find a way to stop forward Glenn Robinson.

Iowa coach Tom Davis said after a 92-88 win over No. 22 Minnesota Wednesday that he hadn't come up with a plan to slow Robinson.

"I've thought about it because every time you watch him you think about it," Davis said. "But I haven't got a plan. Maybe there isn't a plan. For us to do well against a great player, you have to kind of spread it around. We need help from a lot of people."

Iowa freshman guard Chris Kingsbury said Robinson deserves his reputation.

"Everybody says he (Robinson) may be the best player in the nation. He is the best player in the nation, in my opinion," he said.

Davis said forwards James Win-

Packer, McGuire to reunite for broadcast

Kris Wiley
The Daily Iowan

College basketball fans who missed the television commentary duo of Billy Packer and Al McGuire will get their chance to hear the veteran sportscasters again when they call the Iowa-Purdue men's game Sunday afternoon from Carver-Hawkeye Arena.

Packer and McGuire have not worked together since 1981 and were asked by CBS a couple weeks ago to broadcast the game. Since all play-by-play announcers are in Lillehammer, Norway, for the Olympic Games, CBS Sports decided to reunite the color analysts.

"The head of CBS Sports called and said, 'How about if you and Al worked the game together?' even though neither one of us has experience as a play-by-play announcer, and we thought about it and it will be fun getting back together and hopefully we don't do anything to hurt the game," Packer said.

Because McGuire, who was coach of the 1977 NCAA champion Marquette Warriors, cannot wear an earpiece and talk at the same time, Packer said he will be in charge of going into commercials. He said there won't be a play-by-play like viewers are used to.

"We don't program anything when we're together," ters, Russ Millard and Jess Settles will get Robinson's number.

"We'll switch up a lot. Many people are saying he's the best player in the country. I wouldn't go so far as to name him, but I certainly think that would be a great choice.

As a coach, I don't see Donyell Marshall from Connecticut in person. Somebody who sees them both play and then they name him, then that has some credence. In our league, he's special," Davis said.

Robinson leads the Big Ten and NCAA Division I schools in scoring, averaging 28.1 points per game. He is second in rebounds with 11 per game. He has scored in double figures in 42 straight games.

Carolina stuns Devils

Jim O'Connell
Associated Press

CHAPEL HILL, N.C. — The first half lived up to the hype. The result was true to form.

Second-ranked North Carolina beat No. 1 Duke 89-76 Thursday night, the fifth consecutive week the country's top-ranked team has lost.

The Tar Heels (18-3, 6-2 Atlantic Coast Conference) broke the game open in the second half with a 15-3 run that gave them a 59-48 lead with 12:35 to play.

Duke (15-2, 5-2) never recovered and couldn't get closer than six points the rest of the way.

It was the first 1-2 matchup since top-ranked UNLV beat Arkansas 112-105 on Feb. 10, 1991.

The first half Thursday night was something special as Duke took a 50-48 lead into the locker room.

Except for the Blue Devils' 8-2 run to open the game, neither team was able to take more than a three-point lead and there were eight lead changes and six ties in the opening 20 minutes.

The first-half shooting percentages — Duke was 64 percent (16-for-25) and North Carolina was 55 percent (18-for-33) — belied the excellent defense that was being played. Of the 15 fifteen players who played in the first half, all but Kevin Salvadori of the Tar Heels scored.

Duke started the second half as it ended the first half with Chris Collins hitting a 3-pointer, his third in a row. Duke managed the two-point halftime lead when Collins made two 3-pointers in the final 1:38 around one by North Carolina's Derrick Phelps.

But the Tar Heels continued their torrid shooting while the Blue Devils tapered off.

At one point Duke went 4:10 without a field goal. When Grant Hill finally hit a baseline jumper with 8:03 to play, it cut North Carolina's lead to 68-57, but by then the sellout crowd of 21,572 was as loud as it has ever been at the Smith Center.

Derrick Phelps led the Tar Heels with 18 points, while Eric Montross had 16 and Rasheed Wallace 14. North Carolina played without leading Donald Williams, who missed his fourth straight game with a separated left shoulder.

Hill topped the Blue Devils with 20 points.

WRESTLING

Gable seeks steady lineup

Kris Wiley
The Daily Iowan

Iowa wrestling coach Dan Gable is looking for one thing from his Hawkeyes this weekend — consistency.

The Hawkeyes travel to Dixon, Ill., to face off against Big Ten opponent Northwestern and Boise State tonight.

"We don't really have time to go back to square one, but we are definitely working on some very key and valuable things that we need this time of year," Gable said.

Gable has shaken up his lineup for tonight's meet by bringing true freshman Joe Williams out of a redshirt season at 158 pounds. Williams, who was a four-time Illinois state champion, beat out Daryl Weber for the position.

Gable said the Hawkeyes will need to get a team together soon. "Yeah it bothers me (not having the lineup set). The idea is not just to throw the team together, the idea is you have to put them in there as needed to get the best team you can," he said.

Iowa is coming off a 26-12 win over Wisconsin last Saturday. Prior to that, the Hawkeyes lost two dual meets in a row to Oklahoma State and Minnesota, the first time that had happened during Gable's 18 years as head coach.

"We needed a win badly against Wisconsin," Gable said. "I hadn't been 0-2 since I was an athlete in high school. Sometimes when things are bleak, they're really bleak."

Iowa will need strong performances tonight to get ready for its dual meet rematch with top-ranked Oklahoma State Feb. 11 in Stillwater, Okla.

"It's good to get a couple good competitions before we head off to Oklahoma State," Gable said. "We have to wait and see how we do,"

Hawkeyes face tough Big Ten weekend

Joel Donofrio
The Daily Iowan

Because Ohio State and Iowa shared last season's conference title and advanced to last year's Final Four, many thought they would be the teams to beat in the 1994 Big Ten women's basketball race.

But as the No. 8 Hawkeyes begin a four-game road trip with contests at Ohio State and Penn State this weekend, it is the Lady Lions (16-0 overall and 7-0 in the Big Ten) who reign as both the conference and the nation's lone undefeated team.

Like Iowa, the No. 22 Buckeyes have struggled recently, dropping home conference games to Penn State and Wisconsin prior to tonight's 6:30 p.m. matchup with the Hawkeyes.

While point guard Katie Smith continues to play well, leading Ohio State with 21.1 points and 7.8 rebounds per game, she does not have the same talented players supporting her who led the Buckeyes to last season's championship game.

"She's an outstanding player, but you will see that she's as good as her teammates — and they have been struggling," Iowa head coach C. Vivian Stringer said. "Katie has to work much harder to get her shots. Some games she has not been nearly as effective, and you don't see anyone else stepping it up to make it easier for her."

Besides stepping up its defense against Smith and the other Buckeye players, Stringer knows her team must reduce turnovers and rebound better than it has recently if the Hawkeyes hope to win.

"We've been struggling so bad, to be honest with you, that I'm very concerned with how we'll play," Stringer said. "We can't turn the ball over like last weekend, otherwise we'll get blown out. We've got to rebound with both of them; this is the first time we might be experi-

KERRIGAN ATTACK

Investigation could go past Games

Bob Baum
 Associated Press

PORTLAND, Ore. — As Tonya Harding skated Thursday, investigators considered whether she hindered prosecution by initially lying about what she knew of the attack on rival Nancy Kerrigan.

The U.S. Figure Skating Association, meanwhile, was proceeding with steps that could lead to revoking Harding's membership for unethical conduct. But that process could drag on far past the Lillehammer Games, and the U.S. Olympic Committee wasn't commenting on what action it might take in the meantime.

Asked as she finished a practice skate what she thought of suggestions that she should remove herself from the Olympic team, Harding replied: "I don't listen to what other people say."

Harding, who has not been charged, admitted to authorities that she lied in the first part of her 10½-hour interview at FBI headquarters Jan. 18.

She first told investigators she knew nothing about any involvement of her ex-husband, Jeff Gillooly, in the plot. She changed her story and implicated him only after one of her interrogators warned her it was illegal to lie to law enforcement authorities about her knowledge of a crime.

Under Oregon law, a person hinders prosecution by deceiving authorities to prevent the apprehension of someone who has committed a felony.

Norm Frink, Multnomah County deputy district attorney, said a New York Daily News report that Harding will be charged with hindering prosecution next week was incorrect.

"I am not excluding the possibility that the grand jury might choose to return hindering prosecution charges against someone in this case," Frink said. "But at this point, it's mere speculation and no final decision has been made."

Four people have confessed to plotting the attack on Kerrigan to knock her out of the U.S. Figure Skating Championships, and thus enhance Harding's chances of winning. They initially were charged with conspiracy. Harding also could face that charge if the grand jury determines it has sufficient evidence that she participated in the plot.

Harding has said she had nothing to do with the plot but admits she did not come forward after her return to Portland, when she said she learned people around her were involved.

NBC News reported Thursday that Harding has been asked to voluntarily submit a handwriting sample and fingerprints to the FBI. The FBI is examining scraps of paper found in a Portland restaurant trash bin that could back up Gillooly's claim that Harding took part in the plot.

The garbage included an envelope addressed to Gillooly and notepaper scribbled with doodles and the words "Tunee Can Arena, Cape Cod" on one page and "Tony Kent Arena, Cape Cod" on another.

Gillooly has told investigators that Harding made telephone calls to pin down Kerrigan's practice schedule at Tony Kent Arena in Massachusetts, where an earlier attempt to attack Kerrigan was aborted. Gillooly said Harding had trouble understanding the name of the rink in a message left by a free-lance reporter on her answering machine and he watched as the skater wrote it down.

Frink refused to comment on the NBC report. A special committee formed by the U.S. Figure Skating Association is to hold its second meeting tonight in Colorado Springs, Colo. Bill Hybl, the former USOC president who heads the panel, has said the committee may have a recommendation by Saturday.

If the committee decides there are reasonable grounds for revoking Harding's membership, the skater would have 30 days to respond to a request to appear before the panel.

That would drag the process out long after the Lillehammer Games, which begin Feb. 12.

difference in the Big Ten," Keady said. "If you don't have a bench you probably won't win. It was really one of the things I tried to emphasize in the Penn State game. We have to have good bench scoring if we're going to win, home or away. Getting it done was a problem. It really hurt us."

Purdue's bench contributed two points in the loss to Michigan.

Iowa has a more balanced scoring attack with all five starters coming away with double figures in the Gopher win. Freshman Settles led the Hawkeyes with 19 points.

Settles said after the Minnesota win the Hawkeyes proved they could beat a ranked team at home.

"It gives us a big confidence boost," he said. "I think we're still in it. You lose tonight and things start looking pretty slim. But we've got another big one coming in this weekend in Purdue, and it's great to go into that game with a win."

Keady said he's impressed with what he's seen of Settles.

"He's a tremendously talented young man," he said. "We knew that when he was in high school that wherever he went he was going to be a good player. He's done that. He's played beyond what they thought he could do this year."

Packer said. "We don't ever go anywhere where we don't have fun. Maybe if somebody was along with us they'd say, 'You know, those guys are weirdos,' but we have a good time, sometimes doing nothing, just two guys who like to get along."

Packer, who broadcast the first game ever played in Carver-Hawkeye Arena on Jan. 5, 1983, said with the Big Ten having a good year from top to bottom, Sunday's game will be another tough matchup.

"For Iowa you have the pressure, they're not going to win the Big Ten Championship this year but they have the pressure of maintaining a position somewhere in the middle of the road to enhance their chances to be in the NCAA Tournament. So I think there is a lot of pressure on them in a home game," he said. "For Purdue, you have a situation where it's a team that really thinks they can win the Big Ten and with that get a very good seed in the NCAA Tournament plus the prestige of being a champion so there is the pressure on them to make some breakthrough games.

"Both teams have tremendous pressure on them in this particular game as a must game to win and that normally makes for pretty good competitive basketball."

encing two teams who are quicker than we are."
 Should the Hawkeyes manage to defeat the Buckeyes, an even tougher task awaits as they travel to Pennsylvania for a showdown with Penn State. Lady Lion guards Katina Mack and Tina Nicholson average in double figures for scoring and have been named Big Ten players of the week this season. Meanwhile, senior Helen Holloway (averaging 13.7 points and 7.3 rebounds per game) has provided the punch in the Penn State loss post attack.

"Penn State is a legitimate No. 1," Iowa assistant coach Angie Lee said. "They've got a great perimeter game, and they've got inside people who will do the job."

 After being named the No. 1 team last week, the Lady Lions remained undefeated despite facing two tough road tests. Penn State came from behind to beat Ohio State 74-66 Tuesday in Columbus, then went into Tennessee and easily defeated No. 9 Vanderbilt 66-51.

The Lady Lions closed out their week by knocking off conference foe Wisconsin 73-53 in University Park, Pa. The Badgers were coming off their impressive 99-90 victory at Ohio State.

"Everyone in the country knows that Penn State can do it all," Stringer said.

right now."
 Defending national champion Lincoln McClravy is still out with a knee injury as is 167-pounder Ray Brinzer.

"It's slower than I thought it would be," Gable said of McClravy's recovery. "He probably could go, but I don't think it's necessary."

Gable said Northwestern and Boise State should provide good competition for the Hawkeyes.

"They're both very competitive teams. They don't seem to be a threat from a team point of view, but they have outstanding individuals in at least half the weights," he said.

WOMEN'S GYMNASTICS

Hawks to host injured Huskies

Pat Regan
The Daily Iowan

The recovering Iowa women's gymnastics team will host an injured Northern Illinois squad Saturday in the Hawkeyes' first home meet of the season.

Iowa is coming off a loss last weekend at Michigan State and will carry a 2-4 overall record into the meet.

The Huskies are currently 0-2 and trying to deal with an onslaught of injuries. Last week Northern Illinois was forced to withdraw from a meet at Kentucky because of those problems.

"Our spirit remains undaunted. Normally I would be depressed after a loss, but the heart and perseverance of the squad is just incredible. Nobody is getting negative. Hopefully we will be at full strength before too long."

Diane DeMarco, Iowa women's gymnastics coach

Iowa has had its share of injured gymnasts this season but is on the road to recovery. Key sophomores Amy Bolton and Jodie Gray are expected to be back in action after sitting out last weekend's meet.

"I think everyone is starting to get it back together," junior Cindy Terrell said.

The meet is scheduled to begin at 2 p.m. in the North Gym of the Field House.

"I think we are going to be more fired up because we will have the home crowd," freshman Tawna Rathe said.

"They are really excited about our first home meet," head coach Diane DeMarco said.

Iowa will be led by sophomore Kim Baker and seniors Meredith Chang and Sandy Stengel. The trio finished first, third and fourth in the all-around competition against Michigan State.

Baker turned in her best performance of the year, scoring a 38.250 overall. Baker also took the top spots in the balance beam (9.675) and the floor exercise (9.625).

The Huskies top all-arounder is Margret Mroz, who has an all-around average of 37.775.

In addition to their injuries, the Hawkeyes could be down coming off a loss, but that is not the case.

"Our spirit remains undaunted," DeMarco said.

"Normally I would be depressed after a loss, but the heart and perseverance of the squad is just incredible. Nobody is getting negative. Hopefully we will be at full strength before too long."

Having gained some consistency in recent weeks, Iowa is expected to try to improve the difficulty in its routines.

Following Saturday's competition, the Hawkeyes will hit the road again for consecutive meets at Minnesota and Illinois State. However, at least one of the Hawkeyes can't help looking beyond those meets.

"We definitely want to get to regionals which is after the Big Tens," Terrell said. "We want to qualify for nationals for the first time ever."

MEN'S GYMNASTICS

Iowa sends 4 to World Cup

Pat Regan
The Daily Iowan

Four members of the Iowa men's gymnastics team will be competing for a spot on the U.S. national team this weekend at the Winter Cup in Colorado Springs, Colo.

The top gymnasts from across the country will be in Colorado Springs battling for a spot on the team.

Senior Garry Denk, sophomores Aaron Cotter and Jay Thornton, and freshman Tyler Vogt will represent the Hawkeyes at the two-day competition.

Iowa will also send freshmen Sean Juguilon and Peter Masucci to compete in the junior elite division. Top finishers at this level will compose the junior national team.

The Hawkeyes are in the midst of a four-week layoff between team competitions.

"We have looked real good for early in the season," head coach Tom Dunn said.

Iowa finished second at the Windy City Invitational in Chicago three weeks ago. That followed a second-place finish at the West Point Open where Denk won the all-around competition.

Denk is the only upperclassman on the young Iowa squad. Lack of veteran leadership could become a problem.

"It's a concern," Dunn said. "Some of the sophomores don't have a lot of experience, but I'm real pleased so far. Most of the freshmen have had good experience in high school. We're looking forward to the rest of the season."

Should any of the Iowa gymnasts make the U.S. national team this weekend, it will not conflict with their obligations in Iowa City.

"Academics and college meets take priority," Dunn said.

Hawks in must-win situation in final dual meets of season

Iowa hosts Southern Illinois, Northwestern, Penn State in seniors' last home meets; Hawkeyes need to sweep to clinch .500 season record

Mike Egenes
The Daily Iowan

Going into the final dual meets of the season, the Iowa swim team needs three victories to ensure a winning season.

As luck would have it, the Hawkeyes host Southern Illinois in a dual meet Friday night at 7 p.m. and Northwestern and Penn State in a double dual Saturday at 1 p.m.

The last sub-par season came from the 1983-84 squad, which went 3-7 overall and 1-4 in the Big Ten.

Going into tonight's contest, Iowa is 3-4 overall and 2-2 in the Big Ten, but Coach Glenn Patton doesn't want to make the record issue the focus of the weekend.

"We'd like to try to sweep all three meets. We feel we can win all three — we need to in order to come up with a winning record," Patton said.

"I don't think anybody in our program wants to have a losing record, but I wouldn't say that I'm focused on that so much."

All season long Iowa has had the Big Ten Championships in the back of its mind, but Patton doesn't want to overlook the final tuneup.

"We're really focused on trying to prepare for the Big Ten Championships," he said. "We're taking these dual meets in stride."

In addition to the winning record, another focus of the weekend will be the seniors. Mark Brown and co-captains Keith Gunderson and Dan Stoppenhagen will make their final appearances at the Field House Pool.

"It's the final go-around for our three seniors," Patton said. "They're all in good academic standing and in line to graduate either this year or next year."

Stoppenhagen realizes the significance of this weekend both for the sake of the team and himself.

"If we come away with three wins, we'll have a solid winning season," he said Thursday afternoon before practice.

But how important will it be to get at least two wins and finish even for the year?

"It's pretty damn important," he said.

"Especially to me ... it's probably more important to me than maybe the freshmen just because it's my last weekend in this pool."

"I don't want to go out in a mediocre-type way. I want to go out with a strong performance — individually and team-wise."

Stoppenhagen is careful not to put too much unnecessary pressure on a young team that has lost five out of its last six dual meets.

"There's a little bit of doubt there, but I wouldn't say it's dangerous."

Like the captain of his ship, Patton is remaining calm.

"I feel like (the swimmers) are maintaining their confidence and they're focused on the championship season ahead," Patton said. "But we're not looking by this weekend at all."

"They're not too rattled by their record because they're trying to keep zeroed in on the fact that we're a young team and rebuilding. We are making progress. It's definitely a team of the future."

WOMEN'S SWIMMING

Seniors finish home careers

Doug Alden
The Daily Iowan

After four years and countless miles, the seven seniors of the Iowa women's swimming and diving team are competing at the Field House Pool for the last time when the Hawkeyes host Southern Illinois Friday at 4 p.m.

Seniors Laura Borgelt, Pam Broad, Liane Burton, Melissa Eberhart, Alison Pennington, Nicole Widmyer and diver Jill Oboikovitz will end their Field House careers tonight and be honored in a short ceremony before the meet.

There is some emotion, but the Hawkeyes are looking past the farewell and concentrating on the Big Ten Championships Feb. 15-19 in Indianapolis, Ind.

"At this point I think you have to look beyond it — you look at two weeks from (Feb. 3). You don't really have a choice." Coach Pete Kennedy said.

"In all honesty, whatever happens at the meet on Friday doesn't mean a thing."

Iowa is in the process of tapering and Kennedy feels the times in Friday's meet are the most important aspect because they will give an indication of how the taper is going and keep the team on track for the championships.

"It will be good to swim again, but I think we're all concentrating on Big Tens," Borgelt said.

"No matter how fast we swim this weekend it's not going to matter. We have a lot of energy now

MEN'S TRACK AND FIELD

Hawkeyes get first test at Minnesota

Dave Herda
The Daily Iowan

For the Iowa men's track and field team, Saturday's meet at Minnesota is important because it will provide the Hawkeyes with their first real challenge of the season.

The meet should give them a better idea of who will be running what events, and most importantly, it will bring them one step closer to the start of a highly anticipated outdoor season.

"We're really looking forward to competing against conference-level athletes," sophomore Joe Estes said. "The coaches have been trying to find the right events for everyone and people have been starting to get more and more focused so we're ready for the outdoor season."

Minnesota has a strong team again this year after finishing fourth in the Big Ten last season. The Gophers are led by a solid group of sprinters including football player Omar Douglas, who finished third in the Big Ten in the 55-meter sprint last year.

"The competition is going to be very tough, but we are rested and well-trained and hopefully we can prevail in some events," head coach Ted Wheeler said.

For freshman Mike Bakker and junior college transfers Andre Morris, James Porter and Marco Loureiro, this weekend's meet will be their first opportunity to compete for an Iowa track program that is expecting a lot of them. "For the new guys, it's really their first workout, but I absolutely know that they will contribute," Wheeler said. "In fact, Bakker, Porter and Loureiro along with a fourth runner are going to make a great 3,200-meter relay team."

The other newcomer, Morris, will add some depth to a talented group of sprinters that includes senior Jerry Fisher, junior Baylor Goode, sophomore Estes and, when the outdoor season starts, all-American Anthon Maybank.

Joe Estes

Ted Wheeler, Iowa men's track and field coach

"We already know what Maybank, Fisher and Estes can do, and if Goode stays healthy we expect him to be a key to the team. If (Goode) reaches his level of achievement, we'll have the makings of a great sprint core," Wheeler said.

Throw in football players Sedrick Shaw and Ryan Terry, who are both training to compete this year, and Iowa's talented group of sprinters becomes even more impressive.

"Shaw hasn't run track in over two years and I think it's been about four for Terry, but they both feel they can contribute and they'll definitely get their chance," Wheeler said.

Besides the Hawkeyes and Minnesota, Mankato State and South Dakota will be competing.

WOMEN'S TRACK AND FIELD

Action awaits Hawks at Meyo Invitational

Dave Herda
The Daily Iowan

It's going to be a long and busy weekend for the Iowa women's track and field team, but it's a weekend that should be full of action and excitement.

On Saturday, the team travels to Notre Dame where it will be taking part in the Meyo Invitational along with Big Ten rival Michigan, Eastern Michigan, Eastern Illinois, Illinois State, Marquette, University of Windsor and a number of unattached entries.

"We're looking forward to competing against some tough competition at Notre Dame. Michigan has some of the best distance runners in the country and it should be a great test," head coach Jerry Hassard said.

On Sunday, Iowa will be sending its distance medley team of Briana Benning, Christine Salsbery, Marlene Poole and Tina Stec to Fairfax, Va., to compete in the Mobil Invitational.

"The Mobil is one of the premiere meets in the nation," Hassard said. "It's a Grand Prix event that definitely attracts top talent from around the world including a number of Olympic-caliber athletes."

The distance medley is one of Iowa's strongest events and the Mobil Invitational should provide a good idea of how well it stacks up against some of the nation's best talent.

"This is a special opportunity for us to set the relay team on the right course and eventually make a run at qualifying for the Nationals," Hassard said.

Without the distance medley team, the Hawkeyes will be substantially weakened at Notre Dame, but they are still expecting to take advantage of the unusually large track to post some very fast individual times, Hassard said.

Notre Dame's track is 352 yards around or one-fifth of a mile as opposed to the standard 200-yard indoor tracks. It is one of the largest indoor tracks in the country and should yield some of the faster times of the year.

"This is a pretty big meet for us because Michigan is so good and because we have a chance to run some real good times on the big track," junior Erin Boland said.

"Since we're missing four of our good runners, everyone has to just jump in there and contribute when they're asked. It should be a real exciting weekend," freshman Becky Coleman said.

MEN'S TENNIS

Hawkeyes hope to bounce back at home

Doug Alden
The Daily Iowan

Coming off a disappointing loss last weekend at Ball State, the Iowa men's tennis team hopes to rebound Sunday when it hosts Northern Illinois and Iowa State.

The Hawkeyes are 1-1 on the season and Coach Steve Houghton is not expecting a repeat performance of last weekend when Iowa was up 3-1 and needed only to win one of the last three matches to top Ball State.

Steve Houghton

"They really felt bad about letting that one slip away, so I think they'll be all the more determined to really put it these two teams," Houghton said.

"I think it was kind of good that we lost there," junior Bob Zumph said. "Hopefully we can learn from it and we can pull off the next tight one."

Sunday is Iowa's last competition before it opens the Big Ten season Feb. 20 against Minnesota. Although Iowa State and Northern Illinois do not have the depth of a Big Ten team, Houghton says they could still give the Hawkeyes some problems.

"I really expect two tough matches," Houghton said. "I think they're both good teams and we're really going to have to play well or else we've got trouble."

Iowa's probable singles lineup Sunday will be Bryan Crowley, who is 1-1 on the season, at No. 1, Zumph (1-1) at No. 2, freshman Tom Derouin (2-0) at No. 3 and Todd Shale (1-1) at No. 4. Carl Manheim, who is coming off a shoulder injury, should play at No. 5 and Neil Denahan at No. 6. If Manheim is unable to play, Naguib Shahid will play at No. 6 at Denahan will move up to No. 5.

In doubles, Houghton will most likely go with Zumph and Shahid (2-0) at No. 1, Crowley and Shale at No. 2 and Manheim and Derouin at No. 3.

In the series, Iowa is 39-4-1 against Iowa State and 16-2 with Northern Illinois.

"It's important to establish things right at the beginning of both these matches and just sort of remind these teams that we've had success with them before," Houghton said.

The Hawkeyes open with Northern Illinois Sunday at 9:30 a.m. and face Iowa State at 6:30 p.m. Both matches will be held in the Recreation Building.

Bookies win on Super Bowl

Associated Press

LAS VEGAS — Forgive bookmakers if they root for a third straight Dallas-Buffalo matchup in next year's Super Bowl.

Figures released Thursday show the state's legal bookmakers scored big for a second consecutive year on the Super Bowl, thanks mostly to Buffalo again failing to cover the point spread.

The state Gaming Control Board said some $54.5 million was wagered legally in Nevada on the game, with sports books keeping $7.5 million of that in profits.

The handle was down slightly from last year's record win of $56.8 million. For that game, bookmakers won $7.2 million in the state's 103 legal sports books. Board chairman Bill Bible said the last two Super Bowls were abnormally good for bookmakers, who generally keep 2 to 5 percent of whatever is bet on a game.

By comparison, the books won only $301,000 out of $50.3 million bet in 1992, Bible said.

The win this year came only after bookmakers narrowly avoided a disastrous final score by Buffalo as time ran out in the game.

Had Buffalo scored a touchdown on its final possession, bookmakers could have lost both ways on the game because the point spread ranged between 9 and 11 points.

One bookmaker said his sports book would have lost 25 percent of all that was wagered.

Art show mixes exacting detail, morbid humor

Charles Monson
The Daily Iowan

Rod Serling would probably love the new UI Museum of Art exhibition "James Valerio: Recent Paintings." The amazing detail in Valerio's works seems to place them within a universe, but the strange things happening in his images could only take place in an eerie twilight zone beyond normal experience.

It's easy to appreciate Valerio's work on a visual level. His ability to reproduce complex forms is exceptional, and his eye for detail allows him to flesh out his drawings to the point of near-photographic quality. With a few exceptions — namely his apparent inability to get a handle on the dynamics of amorphous shifting things like water and fire — Valerio's images are so realistic that they are distinguishable from reality only because they are two-dimensional.

Despite his exacting approach, Valerio describes himself as a "naturalist" rather than a "realist." It's much more than a simple matter of semantics; while he may take a realist approach, the situations he places his subjects in are far more complex and darkly ironic than reality could ever be.

Sometimes the surrealism is easy to spot, as in "Night Fires," in which a flaming dream landscape overlaps with reality. Many of Valerio's ironic touches, however, take the form of odd insider humor — jokes that are meaningful to the artist, but practically impossible for anyone else to pick up on.

For example, it's likely that the average viewer would never guess that the innocuous-looking fruits portrayed in "Still Life on a Bedspread" are supposed to constitute an erotic still life. Check the exhibit guide, however, and you'll discover that the piece is Valerio's satiric response to a critic who rebuked him for doing too many studies of nudes. What's worse, viewers may not get this joke even after it's been explained to them; seeing the eroticism in the painting requires knowledge of some fairly esoteric artistic trivia, such as the split apple (or, in this case, watermelon) as a symbol of the vulva.

Valerio seems to enjoy injecting

"Still Life on a Bedspread" is one of nine works in which will be on display at the UI Museum of Art the "James Valerio: Recent Paintings" exhibit, through March 4.

hints of danger and morbidity into his paintings. The macabre elements are played up in a couple of paintings — the disgusting skinned-chicken study "Reflective Still Life" being a case in point — but are usually more subtle.

For example, the man in "Jump in the Lake" seems to be leaping into a practically endless expanse of deep water. Check the dynamics of the waves, though, and the swath of brown under the water — is he actually about to dive head-first into a sandbar?

The Museum of Art exhibition contains only nine paintings, but one could spend hours looking at them. Between the detail of the images and the multilayered dark humor they contain, there's always something more to see in the pictures. Discerning art lovers owe it to themselves to check this one out.

"James Valerio: Recent Paintings" will be on display at the UI Museum of Art until March 4.

Jackson returns to the stage, along with most of his family

Associated Press

LAS VEGAS — Michael Jackson will perform with his family on Feb. 19, his first time on a stage since settling a child molestation lawsuit.

Jackson will appear on the "Jackson Family Honors" show from the MGM Grand Hotel. The show will be broadcast Feb. 22 on NBC, the family said Tuesday in a written statement.

Jermaine Jackson, the show's co-producer, said the show will include himself and most of his other siblings: Jackie, Janet, Marlon, Randy, Rebbie and Tito are scheduled to appear. Their parents, Katherine and Joseph Jackson, also will perform.

Estranged daughter LaToya was invited but hasn't responded, said Jackson family spokesman John McLaughlin.

Net proceeds from the two-hour show will be donated to charities, including an earthquake relief fund.

"This event marks our family's first on-stage performance in two decades," Jermaine Jackson said. "The 'Jackson Family Honors' is an opportunity for us, along with some of the country's greatest stars, to come together to help those less fortunate."

Elizabeth Taylor and Motown Records founder Berry Gordy will be honored for charitable work.

Michael Jackson hasn't performed in public since he canceled his "Dangerous" tour in November of 1993, saying accusations that he molested a young boy led him to become addicted to painkillers. On Jan. 25, he settled a lawsuit filed on behalf of the 14-year-old for an undisclosed sum, rumored to be in the area of $15 million.

Leno brags he eavesdropped on decision not to fire him

Scott Williams
Associated Press

NEW YORK — Jay Leno hid in order to eavesdrop on a conference call of top NBC executives deciding whether to offer his "Tonight" show job to David Letterman.

"It's wonderful," Leno said in an interview with talk-show host Tom Snyder. "I was having the time of my life ... It's like (being) Huck Finn at your own funeral."

The story was first reported in "Late Shift: Leno, Letterman & the Network Battle for Late-Night Supremacy" by Bill Carter, a TV reporter for The New York Times.

In the book, Leno said he learned on Jan. 6, 1993 that NBC executives, still debating whether to keep him on "Tonight" or to pay out his contract and give Letterman the show, had scheduled an evening conference call.

Leno sneaked into a tiny office adjoining the offices of NBC Entertainment President Warren Littlefield and NBC Productions Chief John Agolia. When the call came in, Leno listened in and took notes.

He said he wasn't worried about being caught. In the book, he recalled thinking, "What are they going to do, fire me?"

Leno said he didn't feel insulted or angered by the executives' frank discussions of him and his show. "The people that I knew were on my side were on my side. It wasn't somebody patting me on the back and then stabbing me," he said.

"It was fun. It was exciting. It was very enlightening," Leno told Snyder. "The best part of it was using the various information the rest of the week."

Leno said he'd gleefully tormented the executives, approaching them individually and watching their panicked reactions while he asked them questions based on what they had said during the call.

Leno said he began eavesdropping early in his comedy career to get honest reactions to his act. "When I was a kid, and I really wanted to know what people thought of my act, I'd come off the stage, then I'd run into the men's room, close the stall and put my feet up on the john," he told Snyder. "Guys would come in ... and then you'd really hear what they liked about you."

Returning Hitler play offers another side of Holocaust story

Tad Paulson The Daily Iowan

As Steven Spielberg's epic "Schindler's List" settles into residence in a local movie theater this weekend and the masses throng to re-experience a particularly unpleasant time in the 20th century, Iowa City residents will have the unique opportunity of experiencing another side of the Holocaust - the maniacal mastermind behind it.

"Fictional Episodes in the Life of a German Corporal," a one-man play exploring the myths Hitler built around himself, is returning to an Iowa City stage three years after its writer/director, Todd Ristau, first premiered it in the Iowa Playwrights' Festival. It will be presented Sunday at 8 p.m. at the Unitarian Church, 10 S. Gilbert St. Tickets will be $5.

The play centers on the last hours of Hitler as he paces the length of the bunker dictating to his secretary his final political testament, of which three copies were made and sent out by runners. Ristau described these scenes as "a set of fevered dream flashbacks," in which Hitler (played by James Thorn, who originated the role) is "taken back through significant extremely open about it." Both fervently reject claims that the play glorifies the leader by presenting him as a passionate, intense man.

"There's no question we don't approve of what he did," Ristau said. "We present his own words because nothing could damn him more thoroughly."

The set for "Fictional Episodes" is described by Ristau as "very minimal." Aside from sound effects of air-raid sirens and explosions, there are few technical complexities to the show. Mostly, it's just the audience and Thorn, and the energy created between them.

"Jim's ultimately the one who creates the setting," Ristau said.

While Ristau emphasizes the textual basis of the play - which he says is almost totally based on historical records, direct quotations and paraphrases of conversations - he also considers his play to be "a legitimate piece of theater" dealing with questions of humanity, ambition and power, as well as "national pride taken to an obscene limit."

"What we've ended up with is a show that allows you to suspend your disbelief and experience, something akin to being in the room with Hitler, as opposed to being in the room with an actor," Ristau said. "That, in itself, is more disturbing than you might think."

Following Sunday night's show, audience members are invited to stay for an open discussion with Ristau and Thorn. There will also be a free performance tonight at 7:30 in Mount Vernon, at Cornell College's Armstrong Hall.

moments in his life." This means recreating two-way conversations; and though Thorn is costumed as Hitler, at any given moment he may slip into one of six or seven other characters.

Ristau and Thorn both see a great deal of contemporary relevance in their recreation of Hitler on the live stage. Ristau says he has been astonished, in past performances of the play, by the "apathy and ignorance" of some audience members towards the infamous dictator. In one sense, "Fictional Episodes" is Ristau's attempt to demolish revisionists' claims that the Holocaust never happened.

"It doesn't take more than a cursory reading of 'Mein Kampf' to see the breadth and depth of this man's hatred - he was using it as a political tool to gain power," he said.

Thorn agreed. "The hatred that he was putting forward was not something secret and shameful that he kept hidden - he was

DOWNTOWN ROUNDUP

'Schindler,' upcoming Samples concert top list of weekend plans

Tad Paulson
The Daily Iowan

"Little bitty tear let me down / spoiled my act as a clown." — Burl Ives (voice of the heroin-addled "Silver and Gold" Snowman in "Rudolph the Red-Nosed Reindeer"), who also originated the profound musical nugget "Tiny Bubbles"

Welcome to the "undiscovered country" of February — this bold, eventful time of year when snow turns into sandy, messy snot in the streets and people finally lose those bronze tans they got dry-humping the Florida beaches over Christmas break. Take a look around and you'll notice that everybody's pale as rice (except, of course, for those lizard-skinned people who microwave themselves at tanning salons).

Not that March is any better. Sorry to be constantly muttering about the weather, but we're in the dead zone of seasons and it ain't getting any better until May, and then it'll just start raining. Maybe I should move to Las Vegas or Pittsburgh or something, hunh? But hey, who needs sun when we've got Tonya Harding, ice-filtered beer and a balding Bruce Willis? Who needs warmth when we've got a TV miniseries version of "The Stand" starring Molly Ringwald, Tom Cruise playing the vampire Lestat and Al Pacino playing Manuel Noriega? I can't think of anything.

We've got another of those whammo, pucky weekends facing us — how many among you are looking down those long double-barrels of intoxication this time around, I wonder. Looking to get a public intoxication charge? A sound beating? A pistol-whipping? Then this is the weekend for you, and only you. Dr. Seuss couldn't have offered up a better smattering of bump-and-grind tuneage, even if he had played the guitar.

So what've we got going this gray weekend, aside from the opening of "Schindler's List"? Let's see:

• As of press time, a few tickets were still available for the Feb. 23 benefit concert for the burned-out Phi Kappa Psi fraternity. SCOPE has reined in The Samples — a Colorado-based pop-rock band whose album The Last Drag was definitely one of '93's best — and opens High and Lonesome to play the show. This should be a really good one, and tickets are only $12, so skeddadle to the University Box Office or a Ticketmaster outlet ASAP.

• Gabe's, 330 E. Washington St., should be packing it in tight this weekend — they'll have a show tonight by the throttling local aces of the Blues Instigators and a shuffling, tequila-tinged jamboree with I.C.'s own Orchestra de Jazz y Salsa Alto Maiz. On Sunday night, the bar will host a Bob Marley birthday party with Truthhawk and friends (those friends being members of Divin' Duck).

• The Iowa City Yacht Club, 13 S. Linn St., is also looking to snag the weekend hordes this time around the track. Tonight the bar will sport a happy hour performance by Blues Instigators frontman Kevin "B.F." Burt, followed by a gig by Bug (yes, just "Bug"), with opener Fatlip. Saturday there'll be a night of reggae with Ethical Treatment (although I can't tell you if that's the name of a band or the evening's philanthropic purpose).

• A few blocks up from Gabe's and the ICYC, there's that little drinking and grubbing hole called The Sanctuary Restaurant and Pub, 405 S. Gilbert St., which will host two nights of groovin' solo pickings by David Williams. Again, pizza and imported beer rule.

• Then there's The Mill Restaurant, 120 E. Burlington St., a fine Italian-American restaurant that usually sports performances by upscale bluegrass and folk ensembles. Tonight at 9, the restaurant will host The Mud Bugs, a "swamp pop and Cajun country" blues group, and Saturday at 8, Guy Drollinger and Ron Hillis will perform. Both shows are free.

• Last but not least, The Airliner, 22 S. Clinton St., will host the Chicago-based band The Groove Merchants on Saturday night.

For those of you who haven't heard, Bo Diddley will be jamming it up at Gabe's on Feb. 16 with opening acts the Blues Instigators and the Diamondbacks. Tickets are $20 in advance and $23 at the door. And they'll go fast, believe me, so you best check it out if you're stopping at Gabe's this weekend.

Have a nice, serene, tranquil weekend, and don't forget to put the seat up after you flush.
