Fuel-laden truck slams into WRAC

Brad Hahn and Thomas Wanat
The Daily Iowan

Iowa City escaped what could have been a large-scale disaster Tuesday afternoon when a runaway truck loaded with 200 to 300 gallons of diesel fuel jumped a curb on Market Street and crashed into the Women's Resource and Action Center, injuring one woman.

Dave Fruendt, the driver of the 2,000 gallon capacity fuel truck, Trowbridge Hall and the Union would have been in danger, he said.

"If it had lit, it would have blown all the windows out at the Union," Justice said. "We considered it a significant concern."

Evacuation of Trowbridge Hall and the Union parking ramp office began at 1:45 p.m., and fire officials were considering evacuating the Union, until they were able to get the natural gas supply under control after three to four minutes, Justice said.

WRAC acting Director Laurie Haag said she didn't know what had happened until she left her office and saw the debris from program assistant Linda Kroon's office.

Kroon was at her desk working on her computer when the truck crashed. She was taken to Mercy Hospital where she was treated for minor injuries and released.

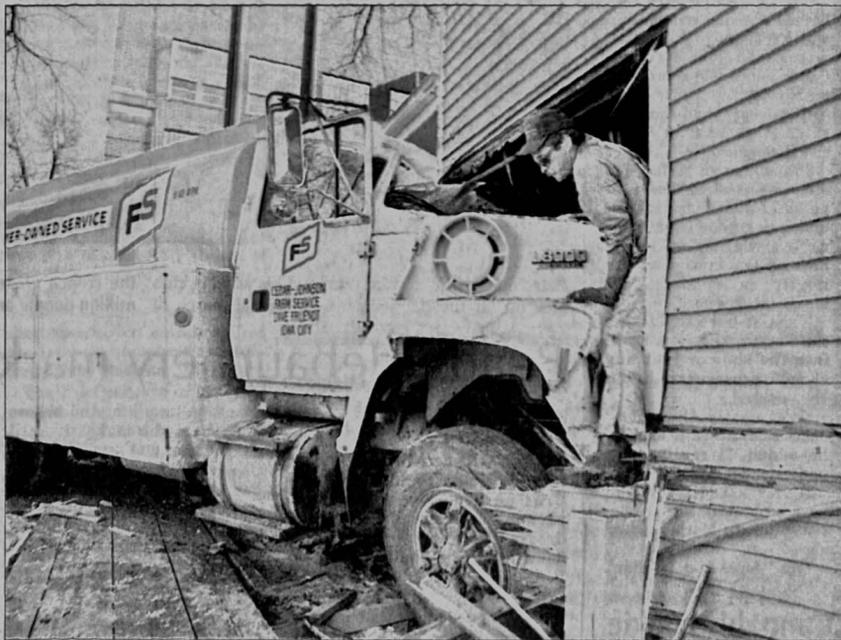

"It was a big bang, but not an explosion," Haag said. "I didn't realize it had hit until I walked out and saw her (Kroon's) computer in the hallway."

Kroon was in some pain Tuesday evening.

"I have a lot of bad bumps, cuts and bruises, but thankfully no broken bones," she said.

Kroon said she was struck by her

CORRECTION

In Tuesday's edition of The Daily Iowan, it was reported that former UI basketball star James Moses was arrested Feb. 12 and charged with robbing a house in Inglewood, Calif.

Moses

The Daily Iowan understands that the man arrested in California was not Moses the basketball player, but a man who had no identification on his person at the time of the arrest and falsely identified himself as Moses.

Moses, in fact, has been residing in Iowa City since December.

The Daily Iowan deeply regrets the error and would like to apologize to James Moses for any misunderstanding or embarrassment this may have caused.

Best-selling author, former UI Professor Christopher Lasch dead at 61

NEW YORK (AP) — Christopher Lasch, a UI history professor from 1964-65 and best-selling author, died Monday of cancer at his home in Pittsford, N.Y. He was 61.

Lasch's 1979 best seller, "The Culture of Narcissism," painted a picture of America filled with self-absorbed people who are afraid of their impulses and easily dominated by those in power.

"The Revolt of the Elites and the Betrayal of Democracy" is scheduled for publishing this fall.

He had been a professor of history at the University of Rochester from 1970 until his death.

Fast-food employee opens fire, wounds six

TULSA, Okla. (AP) — A fast-food restaurant employee angry that a manager asked him to start work early opened fire Tuesday, wounding the boss and five other people during the lunch rush.

Marcus Muriel Thompson, 26, walked out of Wendy's Old Fashioned Hamburgers as the first cruisers arrived and surrendered, police said.

The man, armed with a .38-caliber handgun, fired roughly 10 to 12 shots.

Faculty Senate questions regents', UI's policy procedure

Tory Brecht
The Daily Iowan

The UI administration and Iowa state Board of Regents' procedure for finalizing the sexually explicit materials act for the university was called into question again at Tuesday's Faculty Senate meeting.

Sen. James Andrews, a professor of mechanical engineering, drew up a motion stating: "The Faculty Senate wishes to remind the UI central administration and the Board of Regents that together we share the responsibility for effective university governance, and that the faculty is expected to play the primary role in matters of curriculum and instruction.

"The Senate is concerned that the process recently followed to establish the explicit materials classroom instruction policy not only undermines our collective efforts to maintain sound practices of shared governance on this campus, but also jeopardizes the hard won reputation of this university."

The Senate was unable to vote on the motion because a quorum was called for, requiring a majority of senators to be present to vote. Only 34 of the 75 senators were present, Andrews said he will introduce the motion again at the next meeting.

"The issue for me is process," he said. "The board was waiting for faculty response (to the sexually explicit materials act), and what happened was a presidential response."

Andrews said a 1966 document created by the American Council on Education and the Association of Governing Boards of Universities, titled "Joint Statement on Government of Colleges and Universities," calls for facul-

I.C. basements saturated by break in main

Jim Snyder
The Daily Iowan

The basements of Iowa State Bank and Trust, 102 S. Clinton St., and Hands Jewelers, 109 E. Washington St., were flooded with more than a foot of water Tuesday morning after a water main broke at the corner of Clinton and Washington streets.

Damage estimates were undetermined as of Tuesday.

The flood occurred when an elbow pipe, joining the 12-inch main water vein running along Washington Street and a fire hydrant at the corner of the two streets, broke, Water Superintendent Ed Moreno said.

Approximately 110 pressures per square inch were released when the main broke, enough to lift two concrete slabs of the sidewalk outside the bank.

"It's pretty impressive. There is a lot of power in water," Moreno said. Moreno said the exact cause of the break would be hard to determine. He added, however, that one possible explanation could be the amount and depth of frost in the ground due to summer flooding and intense cold weather.

With the warming temperatures, the frost could have thawed, causing the ground to shift and break the water main, he said.

Iowa State Bank and Trust President Dick Summerwill said water in several areas of the building was knee-deep, and there was at least 10 feet of water in the elevator shaft.

"It was like a river," Summerwill said. "Water was pouring almost unimpeded."

Becky Hora, a safe deposit box attendant, was sitting at her desk when she noticed water leaking into the building.

"I turned the corner to tell somebody, and by the time I got back, the water was everywhere," she said. "We could hear a gushing sound."

Bursting water pipes prevalent this winter

Jim Snyder
The Daily Iowan

Water main breaks like the one that flooded two businesses Tuesday have been unusually common occurrences this winter as temperatures fluctuate between frigid and moderate.

Water Superintendent Ed Moreno said there have been 44 breaks since Jan. 1, which is a record pace.

"We generally have anywhere from 50 up to 90 breaks each year,"

Moreno said. "With 44 at this stage, it looks like we could exceed 100. It seems like we have one a day."

The cause for the breaks is probably a combination of things, Moreno said. This summer's flooding left the ground saturated. The intense cold froze the water at a deeper level than normal, and the abrupt warm temperatures then thawed the ground causing a shift which could damage pipes, he said.

Man's foot fetish leads to stealing

NEW YORK (AP) — Marla Trump's former publicist says he had a sexual relationship with her shoes.

It wasn't just a fetish, Chuck Jones told a prosecutor Monday.

"It's deeper than that," he said. More like an "irresistible impulse."

Jones is on trial for allegedly stealing dozens of pairs of shoes, boots and underwear from Trump, formerly Marla Maples. He said he was fascinated by the imprint a woman's foot makes inside a shoe.

"Does it have to do with the woman whose foot goes into the shoe or is it any shoe?" prosecutor Kevin Hynes asked.

"It's mostly the shoe," Jones said. Asked to explain, he added, "I really don't understand it myself."

Hynes asked, "Did you have a physical, sexual relationship with Marla Maples' shoes?"

"Yes," Jones said. He didn't elaborate.

Cannabis cookie catches cop cold

ST. PETERSBURG, Fla. (AP) — Baking a batch of chocolate chip cookies with marijuana seemed like a harmless weekend diversion to James Fowler until a visiting in-law sampled one and got into trouble.

Fowler's dilemma: How do you tell a police officer that he's just eaten marijuana?

Fowler didn't say anything to Kenneth Kokotek, his wife's son-in-law, until after the police officer tested positive in a random drug screening four days later, Kokotek said.

Internal Affairs investigated and decided urine tests backed up Kokotek's account of a one-time culinary encounter with the drug last month, Lt. Tim Story said. A regular user would have shown traces of tetrahydrocannabinol, the active ingredient in marijuana, for a longer period of time.

Kokotek, who said he never felt high, was allowed to return from an administrative leave. Police said they doubted Fowler would be investigated for drug use.

Burglar stopped by pig (not cops)

HOUSTON (AP) — Call it pig justice: A 200-pound pig named Mona had her snout wrapped around a fleeing suspect's leg when police arrived.

Jonathan Lamas pleaded guilty Monday to car theft, burglary and drug possession stemming from his encounter with Mona on Nov. 11.

Lamas and a companion allegedly burglarized two homes and fled in a stolen pickup truck, authorities said. They drove through a radar checkpoint and were pursued by officers. The two ran the truck off a road and fled on foot.

The companion ran into a home and was chased off by an 87-year-old man who fired several shots at him. Lamas ran into a back yard and jumped over a fence in the dark. He landed in Mona's sty.

Prosecutor Larry McDougal said Lamas, who had no criminal record, will have to serve about a year of his 10-year prison sentence.

Beads, debauchery mark fat Tuesday

Mary Foster

Associated Press

NEW ORLEANS — Revelry replaced reality Tuesday as Mardi Gras packed the streets with parades and people — some dressed up and some stripped down — for the final fling before Lent.

"I'm 73 years old, and I've seen things in public here that I never even saw in private before," said Fred Jefferson, a retired grocer from Des Moines.

Beads — which are bartered for flashes of flesh — were plentiful and no one had more than Valerie Dillon of Chicago, a student at Bates College in Maine. She had an artist paint a black and white checkerboard on half of her face and her right breast, which she exhibited readily for strings of bright plastic beads.

"I've been at it all night and about 9 o'clock I just decided, 'What the heck, why not?'" she said. "I've never done anything like this before, but it's sure fun."

The annual carnival celebration begins Jan. 6 and shuts down promptly at midnight, when "fat Tuesday" becomes Ash Wednesday.

"I've been at it 64 years," said Marilyn Nonenmacher of New Orleans. "All my life. And believe me, anyone who makes it until midnight is glad to see Lent and a little restraint get here."

Police claim more than 1 million people lined parade routes and packed the French Quarter for one last day of drinking, dancing and debauchery.

"We don't have any official count, but I've been at this for 16 years and I believe the crowds this year are the largest ever," said

"I'm 73 years old, and I've seen things in public here that I never even saw in private before."

Fred Jefferson, a retired grocer from Des Moines police Sgt. Barry Fletcher.

Despite the crowds, Mardi Gras was very peaceful, Fletcher said.

Costumes ranged from simple to elaborate, from profane to posh, from silly to satirical.

A half-dozen people, including a baby, were costumed as a bloody body part and carried signs labeling them the "John Wayne Bobbitt family," "Tonya Harding" on roller skates made her way through the crowd carrying a baseball bat.

One woman wore a "Freudian slip," and an elderly man wore a bridal veil with makeup covering his mustache. Three tall men made no attempt to cover their beards but vamped in lace underwear and outlandish wigs.

Michael Ourlian of Detroit wore a series of black leather straps covered with metal studs.

"I guess I got in the spirit of the thing pretty quick," Ourlian said. "I'll sure never get to wear this in Michigan."

Along St. Charles Avenue, with its mansions and huge oak trees, Mardi Gras is more a family celebration with camp outs, cookouts and familiar faces.

Children and adults in costume staked out their parade-watching spots during the night — long before Zulu and Rex, the day's largest processions.

"We get here about midnight," said Tom Boudreau. "My parents come, my wife's parents come, our kids come. It's like a family reunion, and the family includes the other people who always watch the parades along here. We all got to know each other grabbing beads together."

ONE GIANT LEAP FOR COMMERCIALISM

Commercialization of moon next video game?

Harry F. Rosenthal

Associated Press

WASHINGTON — Many uses have been proposed for the moon and space: putting human ashes into eternal orbit, advertising on giant signs seen from all of Earth, an orbiting sunlight collector to beam down enough energy to electrify whole cities.

Add the newest idea: an unmanned vehicle on the moon steered by a theme park visitor on Earth. You pay your money and drive on Tranquility Base.

LunaCorp, a maker of space-oriented CD-ROMs, said Monday it will try to raise $110 million to launch such a vehicle to the moon on a Russian rocket. It would land at the same place where Neil Armstrong and Buzz Aldrin laid the first footsteps on the moon in 1969.

Instead of one small step for man, it would become a giant leap for commercialism.

"Our goal is to provide the world's first interactive space exploration event by giving the public the opportunity to drive the rover on the moon via telepresence," said David Gump, president of the company, based in Arlington, Va.

Earlier schemes came to naught. The ashes idea involved the Celestis Group of funeral directors who wanted to charge $3,990 — about the price of an upscale funeral and casket — to put ashes into orbit. They would stay up there for eternity or 63 million years, whichever came first.

LunaCorp hopes to raise the cash from theme park operators, television networks, corporate sponsors and advertising agencies. About 25 percent of the rover's work will be devoted to science, Gump said, and the company is hoping for a little financial help from the National Aeronautics and Space Administration.

"Our goal is to provide the world's first interactive space exploration event by giving the public the opportunity to drive the rover on the moon via telepresence."

David Gump, president of LunaCorp

The United States spent $24 billion to put 12 astronauts on the moon between July 1969 and December 1972. But there has been no program to return.

The company has enlisted William Whittaker of Carnegie Mellon University in Pittsburgh, an inventor of robotic vehicles, to design its lunar rover. He told a news conference that the technology for a rover has been developed by NASA and is there for the taking.

"A thousand days from now, the technology challenge will be over," Whittaker said. He added that the moon offers significant advantages: you can get there quickly, an abundance of solar power is available and communication with Earth is good.

LunaCorp hopes to finance two rovers and has plans for a third if something goes wrong.

Arrangements for carrying the robot to the moon will be made by International Space Enterprises of San Diego, which will pay Russia $50 million for use of a Phobos rocket. Each primary customer will pay $6 million to $18 million, Gump said.

The vision doesn't stop with the moon. On Earth, an automotive company could have a replica visit dealerships, some firm could sponsor a computer mailbox on the moon and a relay could be set up so long-distance telephone customers could have their calls routed via another planet.

And Gump sees the grandest stunt of all: a contest to find the first person to steer the vehicle on the moon. "I can just see it," he said. "Billy Smith from Peoria at the controls."

MEMBER SAYS HEARING 'RIDICULOUS'

Charges against IISO to be heard

Holly Reinhardt
The Daily Iowan

The UI Student Activities Board unanimously voted to hold a formal hearing regarding charges brought against the Iowa International Socialist Organization in November. SAB chairman Matt Lathrop reported to the UI Student Association Tuesday night.

A Feb. 28 hearing has been scheduled for 8 p.m. in the Big Ten Room of the Union.

The charges stem from a Sept. 23 meeting of the Coalition Against Terror, during which the group allegedly attempted to remove about 30 members of the public through intimidation and calling campus security. The coalition no longer exists, but was organized by IISO members.

The charges were filed by former UISA Sen. Keith Chiavetta.

"All that's going to happen is the complainant and the IISO are responsible for calling their own witnesses," Lathrop said. "Then a decision will be made whether or not we need to recommend that IISO hold a different status as a student group."

The opposing sides will present their cases and question their own witnesses, Lathrop said. However, the SAB can also ask questions of the witnesses.

Also attending the hearing will be Kristi Finger, faculty adviser to the SAB, as well as Mike Ryan, who will act as the hearing officer.

Lathrop said IISO members Donna Flayhan and Jeremy Buck have been notified of the hearing.

Buck said he expects the IISO to be cleared of the charges.

"We should be found not guilty if there's any sense of justice in the student judicial courts," he said.

He added that the entire idea of the hearing was irrational.

"It is ridiculous," Buck said. "It wasn't even our meeting. No student guidelines were violated. This is basically a grudge match."

WHITEWATER DEBATED

Leach speaks to business students

Eric Marty
The Daily Iowan

Iowa Congressman Jim Leach addressed students in what he called "the most exciting business school in America" Tuesday at the John Pappajohn Business Administration Building. Leach spoke to around 35 undergraduate and master of business administration students on topics ranging from free trade to community banking to life in the 21st century.

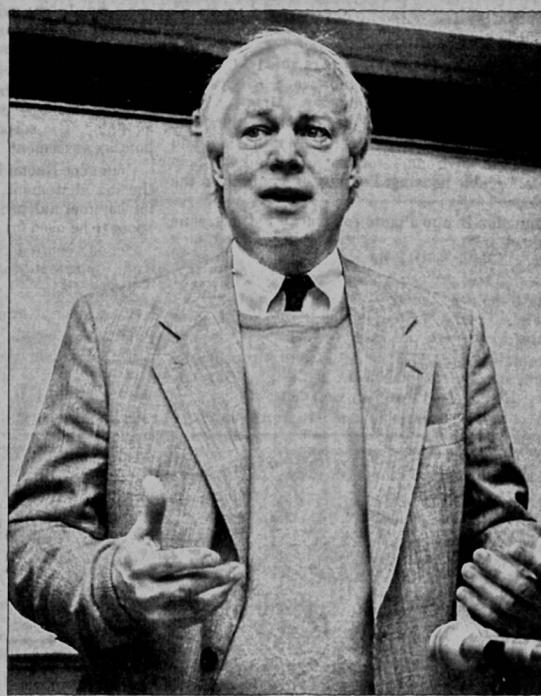

Leach, who has made recent news in his stark criticism of President Clinton and his dealings with the Whitewater Development Company, opened with a short speech, but quickly shifted the focus to questions and concerns of the students.

The chief concern of students was the alleged business wrongdoings of Clinton — generically termed "White Watergate."

"White Watergate" allegedly links Arkansas banker and businessman James McDougal and Clinton in the 1989 failure of Madison Guaranty Savings — an Arkansas savings and loan which cost the taxpayers approximately $47 million.

Leach said banking rip-offs are all too frequently becoming the norm, which forces those left in the wake of these scandals to pick up the pieces.

"A savings and loan is a license to do certain things with other people's money. When it makes mistakes, they look to the taxpayers to pick up the pieces," he said. "It's the taxpayer of Iowa that's picking up the losses of improper things occurring in the state of Arkansas."

Leach vehemently denied that "White Watergate" will have a lasting impact on Clinton's presidency, but thinks the president should be held responsible for his improprieties.

"This is not a presidency toppling circumstance. This is a political embarrassment and an issue of accountability," he said. "It is impressive in the American system that no one is above the law."

Leach, the ranking Republican on the House Banking Committee, has been called a headhunter by some in his quest for the truth, but shrugged off these attacks.

"All I want is full disclosure," he said.

Leach concluded his address by speaking on the recent U.S.-Japan trade summit and stressing the importance of the countries reaching a free-trade agreement.

"This is a very dangerous period between the United States and Japan," Leach said. "Japan is at its pinnacle in strength in the world, and their power will be decreasing in the economic sphere without a free-trade agreement."

The United States is seeking an agreement which would eliminate import taxes on U.S. goods and help improve the country's strained relations.

"A free-trade agreement with Japan would be a wonderful model to the world," Leach said.

THREE CRITICALLY INJURED

Inmates assault prison employees

Associated Press

FORT MADISON, Iowa — A prisoner swinging a metal bar injured four employees of the Iowa State Penitentiary, and another guard was injured in a separate attack a short time later.

Four of the employees were transferred to UI Hospitals in Iowa City, where only one remained in serious condition late Tuesday. The fifth was transferred to a Keokuk hospital, where he was reported in good condition.

Three inmates involved in the attacks were subdued and all prisoners were confined to their cells, prison spokesman Ron Welder said.

Welder said movement by prisoners at the prison would be restricted until a thorough shake-down is completed. But Welder said regular visits at the prison would continue effective today.

Welder said the first attack took place in the dining hall, where four workers were injured by a single inmate, and the second was in a cellhouse 30 minutes later where a guard was attacked by two inmates. Welder said he did not know what caused the attacks or if they were related.

Welder said the dining hall assault occurred at 8 a.m. when inmate Dennis Henderson, 32, went on a rampage. He said Henderson clubbed his victims with a metal bar that was part of a kitchen appliance. A prison spokeswoman later said the appliance was part of an industrial can opener.

Henderson, who entered the prison in 1987, is serving a term of up to 50 years on two counts of first-degree robbery from Polk County.

The injured were identified as food service director Glenn Jones, 65, of Fort Madison; food service coordinator Dave Englund, 46, of Warsaw, Ill.; another food service coordinator Robert Kurrle, 46, of Dallas City, Ill., and guard Robert Alfred, 22, of Fort Madison.

The four were taken to Fort Madison Community Hospital and transferred to University Hospitals in Iowa City. Hospital spokesman Dean Borg said Tuesday night that Jones was in good condition but still undergoing examination, Englund was in fair condition, Alfred was in serious but stable condition and Kurrle was in fair condition.

They suffered injuries to the head and upper body, Welder said.

Injured in the second assault was guard Rodney Jenkins, 35, of Hamilton, Ill. Jenkins was in good condition at the Keokuk Area Hospital.

Welder said Jenkins was assaulted by two prisoners, Johnny Johnson, 26, and Troy Mure, 29. Johnson was serving a 20-year sentence for robbery and burglary from Scott County, and Mure was serving a 10-year sentence from Polk County for receiving and transporting firearms and terrorism. Mure has been at the prison since May 1993, while Johnson has been there since October 1986.

All three inmates were placed in segregation pending a review of the incidents, Welder said.

Bill Russell, a stepson of Robert Kurrle, said the food service worker suffered a skull fracture. Russell said his mother also works at the prison and went with Kurrle to Iowa City Tuesday morning.

WETLANDS PROTECTED

Council votes on annexation

Rima Vesely
The Daily Iowan

Iowa City City Council members voted 7-0 for the annexation of 422 acres of land owned by Sycamore Farms at Tuesday night's Council meeting.

"There are two reasons I said I would vote for the annexation," councilor Karen Kubby said. "It would cause major environmental protection and will help with affordable housing. I'm putting my faith in the developer."

Councilor Bruno Pigott congratulated everyone involved and was pleased that the Synder Creek Bottoms, wetlands that have been an environmental concern in this project, will be protected.

"It's terrific to see a community working together," he said. "I'm nervous too, but I'd like to see us grow in ways we haven't grown before."

Councilor Jim Throgmorton had opposed the annexation, but felt the work of the Planning and Zoning Commission was very well done.

"We do not necessarily need to annex land for more people," he said. "But I don't want to stand in the way of Planning and Zoning and (developer) Steve Bright because of the work they've done."

Council members also addressed a proposal by Hieronymi Partners to erect a six-floor building in which parking, storage and office space would be available. The corporation is asking for a $1.3 million tax abatement.

Councilor Naomi Novick said that if the city offers the tax abatement, the building should be strictly for commercial use. Current zoning permits some space to be used for residential services.

"I don't want to change the whole zoning," she said. "I just want to change the tax abatement."

Kubby disagreed.

"I would not mind the tax abatement if it was affordable housing," she said.

Cal Lewis, the project's architect, asked the Council to vote soon.

"Time is critical," he said. "Our goal is to expedite this and move as quickly as possible."

Cross talks racial reconciliation

The Daily Iowan

More than 200 UI students and local residents gathered at Clapp Recital Hall Tuesday night to hear an emotional outpouring on racial reconciliation.

"Cross Colors ... Bridging the Gap," presented by Haman Cross Jr., focused on healing racial tension.

"To understand other people we need to confront our prejudices and preferences," Cross said. "But it's not enough to confront them. We need to examine them and change them. We need to break our shells and cross colors."

Cross said he believes today's generation can contribute to racial reconciliation.

"Historically, the changes in America are a result of student initiative," he said. "Today's students are the generation that can bring about serious change in racial reconciliation. They represent the greatest possibility in making a difference."

To do that, people need to start making changes today, Cross said.

"Carpe diem — we need to seize the day. This generation can make a change, and I believe they will," he said.

UI junior George Bennett said Cross helped to make people more aware of the differences between races.

"He was very eloquent," Bennett said. "He was able to relate to all people on an equal basis. His speech was very relevant to today's society."

UI freshman Heather Holiday said Cross put a new perspective on things.

"He made people aware of racial tension and brought a new light to the issue," she said.

Cross is the founder and pastor of Rosedale Park Baptist Church in his hometown, Detroit, Mich. The nationally and internationally known speaker hopes his multiracial church will help people understand other cultures.

"Cross Colors ... Bridging the Gap" was preceded by "Voices of Soul," the UI's gospel singing group. The presentation was sponsored by Campus Crusade for Christ, the Black Student Union and Alpha Phi Alpha fraternity.

LAWMAKERS STILL DISGRUNTLED

Last-minute legislative attempts to block sale of WOI prove futile

The House approved a non-binding resolution calling on the Board of Regents to cancel the sale of WOI.

Mike Glover
Associated Press

DES MOINES — Both chambers of the Legislature were again on record against the sale of state-owned WOI-TV, even as officials prepared to close the deal.

The House approved on Tuesday a nonbinding resolution calling on the state Board of Regents to cancel the sale. The resolution already had cleared the Senate, which also approved a bill that would block the sale outright.

Critics labeled the moves meaningless, saying the issue of selling the station has been fought in court and in the Legislature and is settled.

transfer of the broadcast license. Regents lawyers say that's largely a formality.

The sale has been opposed for two years, since the regents agreed to a $14 million deal selling the station to a New York-based broadcasting company. Opponents of the sale lost a legal battle in the Iowa Supreme Court.

Those foes were successful in rejecting the renomination of former regents President Marvin Pomerantz. The regents have since moved ahead with the sale, though some legislators have vowed to retaliate.

Opponents of the sale say the station is now generating a healthy profit and the state would lose an asset it can't replace if it's sold.

Rep. Teresa Garman, R-Boone, also said lawmakers should make it clear that appointed boards such as the regents shouldn't make big decisions like selling WOI, an ABC-TV affiliate owned by Iowa State University.

"We must decide whether we believe that nine appointed officials have the right to sell off state assets," Garman said.

Hanson said that the state simply doesn't have any business running a commercial television station.

"I think government should not be involved in competing with private, profit-making enterprise," Hanson said.

desk. "The next thing I knew, I had ended up across the room up against a filing cabinet with my chair and a lot of plaster on top of me," Kroon said. "I feel pretty shaken up, but the emotional impact really hasn't hit me yet."

WRAC educational programmer Rita Liberti said Kroon's office looks like a complete loss. "I thought it was just a truck coming down the hill. Then I realized the building was caving in," she said. "Then I just saw debris, and we had to pull Linda out from under the stuff."

Ray Anderson, adjunct assistant geology professor, was crossing the street when he saw the truck coming at him. It was moving slowly, and he didn't notice there was no driver.

"Then someone was running after it yelling, 'Stop that truck,'" he said. "We watched it go the rest of the way down, and when it hit the house, the guy said, 'Well, it hit.'"

As the truck went down the hill, Fruendt said he was thinking only of trying to stop it.

"I kept saying, 'Stop that truck,'" he said. "I wasn't thinking much of anything, just praying."

Fruendt said his first impression was that he had engaged the truck's emergency hand brake.

"Now I don't know for sure that it even got set," he said. "I'm afraid now that maybe it didn't."

Fruendt said he has driven similar trucks for 30 years. This particular truck from Farm Service Co. was less than a year old.

WRAC phone lines are still operating at 335-1486, but their offices have temporarily been relocated to the Michigan Room of the Union. A brown bag lunch scheduled at WRAC for today has been moved to the Old Gold Room of the Union. Saturday's Club WRAC event has been canceled.

FLOODING

Pam Stevens, who works in the cash vault department, was also there when the water began flowing into the bank.

"In a good five minutes, where I work, the water was knee high," she said.

"In a good five minutes, where I work, the water was knee high."

Pam Stevens, Iowa State Bank and Trust employee

The employees said they tried to build dams to help stop the flow.

"We got everything we could," Hora said. "We flipped tables over, we used every plastic bag in the place, even computer print-outs."

The 10,000 square feet of flooded area housed the safe deposit boxes, cash vault, customer service department and an electronic section that records daily banking information, Summerwill said.

Several customers were concerned with the safety of their deposits.

"We got a lot of calls. Word spread rapidly," Summerwill said.

He said no one's personal data was damaged.

Next to the bank, workers at Hands Jewelers were cleaning up as well.

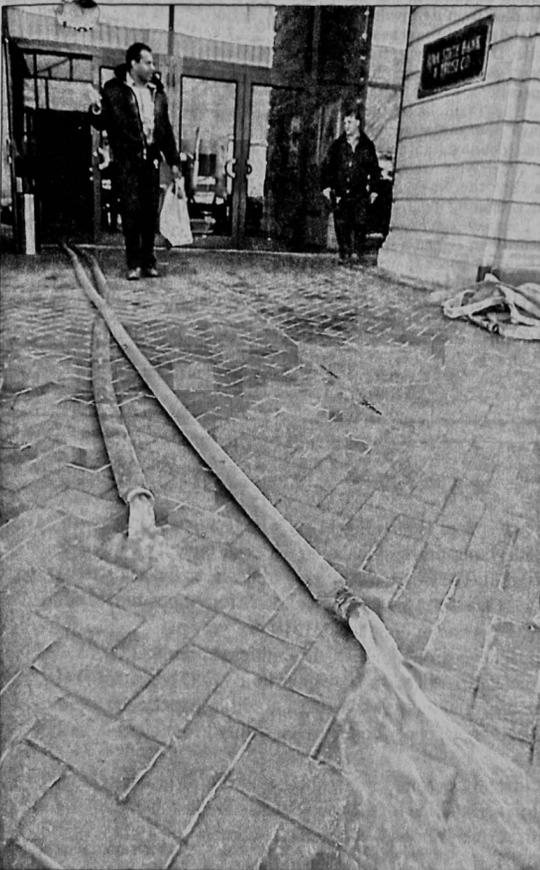

Store Manager Ginger Mercier said about a foot of water covered the store's basement after the break. She said she and the store's owner noticed the water at 8:30 a.m.

After shutting off the power, they proceeded to clean up with squeegees and a Wet Vac, Mercier said. The jewelry and watch repair shops are located in the basement, she said.

The electrical system in the basement was damaged, but its extent was unknown, Mercier said.

Both businesses remained open despite the water. City workers have replaced the broken pipe.

In addition to the flooding, water service was interrupted for businesses along Washington Street between Clinton and Dubuque streets until around 2 p.m. Tuesday.

David Greedy/The Daily Iowan

The basement of the Iowa State Bank and Trust Company's downtown office, 102 S. Clinton St., had to be sump-pumped after a water main broke under Washington Street around 8:30 Tuesday morning. The downstairs portion of the bank was closed for the day while operations upstairs continued as usual.

PIPES

The total estimated damage the breaks will cause the city is unknown, Moreno said.

"A lot of it depends where it was, what size it was, if it was close to a business or company. But you're looking at parts, damages, overtime for staff," he said. "I'm sure it will be quite expensive."

Iowa City isn't the only city that has had problems with water main breaks. Larry Robinson, distribution manager of Cedar Rapids, said the city also has had 44 water breaks since Jan. 1.

Robinson estimated the costs for each water break between $800 and $2,000. He added this was by far the worst year he has seen in terms of the number of breaks.

Moreno said there is nothing businesses or residents can do to prevent the water breaks except call the water department when they see something wrong.

POLICY

ty primacy on issues concerning curriculum. He said the decision by President Rawlings to present the regents with a policy change drawn up without the approval of the Faculty Senate undermines the Senate's ability to make decisions with regard to curriculum.

"These are guidelines, not laws or rules, that have to be followed, and when the president took action, he was uncomfortable," Andrews said. "But we voted to remove the phrase the president put back in the policy. The Senate spoke on this issue."

The phrase added by Rawlings, which replaced the regents-imposed act, stated: "and to give students adequate indication of any unusual or unexpected class presentations or materials."

In his address to the Senate, Rawlings said adding the phrase was not the way he would like to make policy, but felt the resulting policy was better than the original one passed by the regents.

"The policy is a 95 percent faculty generated document and 5 percent administrative," Rawlings said.

In other business, the Senate passed a motion recommending the UI establish a center for teaching under the direction of the provost. The center would pull together faculty members from various disciplines in order to help orient professors and Teaching Assistants with teaching resources.

KELSO RETIRING EARLY

Surprise guilty plea entered by transient

Ron Word

Associated Press

GAINESVILLE, Fla. — A drifter already serving life in prison entered a surprise plea of guilty Tuesday to the 1990 murders of five college students, saying, "There are some things that you just can't run from."

Danny Harold Rolling, 39, of Shreveport, La., now faces a sentencing hearing to determine whether he will be sent to the electric chair.

"These crimes warrant the death penalty," State Attorney Rod Smith said.

The plea came just as the court was preparing to pick a jury. Starting today, a jury will be selected to hear the penalty phase of the trial and recommend the sentence for Rolling. But the judge will make the final decision.

Relatives of the victims quietly wept during the plea and while the prosecutor gave a chilling account of each of the crimes, which included one decapitation.

They later issued a plea for privacy through police Detective Sadie Darnell. "They need this time to process the information," she said.

Rolling's plea covered 11 counts — five of first-degree murder and three each of sexual battery and armed burglary.

"Your honor, I have been running from first one thing and then another all my life. Whether from problems at home or with the law, or from myself. But there are some things that you just can't run from ... this being one of those," Rolling told Circuit Judge Stan Morris.

Rolling is already serving several life sentences in Florida State Prison as a career criminal for robberies and burglaries.

Navy chief steps down in wake of Tailhook scandal

Susanne Schafer

Associated Press

WASHINGTON — Adm. Frank Kelso II agreed Tuesday to retire two months early, saying the Navy needed a new chief because he had become "the lightning rod" for criticism over the Tailhook sex abuse scandal.

"This issue ... won't go away. The lightning keeps striking all the time, so I think it's best for the Navy to give it another leader," the four-star admiral said.

Kelso's announcement that his retirement would be moved up to April 30 came shortly after Defense Secretary William Perry and Navy Secretary John Dalton issued testimonials attesting to his personal integrity.

Because of their endorsements, he said, "we can finally close this difficult chapter" of Tailhook. He said neither Perry nor Dalton asked him to step down.

After the 1991 convention of the Tailhook Association, a booster organization of Navy and Marine Corps aviators, female officers and other women alleged they had been molested during drunken debauchery in a Las Vegas hotel hallway.

In a ruling last week, a Navy judge accused Kelso of witnessing sexual misconduct at the convention and with interfering in the subsequent investigation.

Perry said the Pentagon's inspector general "found no credible evidence" that Kelso had specific knowledge of the sexual misconduct and found "no evidence" that Kelso sought to thwart investigations into the scandal.

Dalton's statement said, "I have never questioned the personal integrity and honor of Frank Kelso." He added that it was "important that we put the bitterness of Tailhook behind us."

Perry has recommended to President Clinton that he nominate Kelso for retirement at his full four-star rank, and "the president has indicated his intention to make that recommendation to the Senate," Pentagon spokesman Dennis Boxx said Tuesday evening. Senior level military officers of Kelso's rank serve at the pleasure of the president and must be confirmed by the Senate.

Kelso could have demanded a formal military court of inquiry to try to clear his name, but the process would have taken months. Instead, the admiral said he would bring his 37-year naval career to a close slightly earlier than he had previously announced.

The former submariner survived an attempt by Dalton to fire him last fall when that decision was overruled by then-Defense Secretary Les Aspin.

Adm. Michael Boorda, the four-star admiral in charge of NATO's operation in Bosnia, has been recommended to President Clinton as the top candidate to replace Kelso, Pentagon sources said.

Pentagon spokeswoman Kathleen deLaski said a replacement was expected to be named soon.

Some members of Congress were not appeased by Kelso's action.

Rep. Patricia Schroeder, D-Colo., a member of the House Armed Services Committee, said the investigation of Tailhook has been "mis-handled from its tawdry beginning to today's embarrassing finale, with Defense Secretary William Perry defending the chief of naval operations, Frank Kelso."

"The Tailhook scandal should have been investigated by an outside, nonnaval authority," Schroeder said. "What we now know, sadly, is that the Navy is incapable of investigating itself."

Fourteen congresswomen, led by Schroeder, signed a letter to House Armed Services Committee Chairman Ronald Dellums, D-Calif., urging "immediate review and action" of the Navy's Tailhook investigation.

Seles drops out of ratings

NEW YORK (AP) — Former No. 1 Monica Seles is out of the Women's Tennis Association rankings for the first time since May 1989.

Seles was stabbed in April during a tournament in Hamburg, Germany, by a fan of her top rival, Steffi Graf. Seles was the top-ranked player until June, when Graf replaced her.

Seles, 20, was dropped from the rankings because she no longer met a requirement of three tournament results in the previous 52 weeks.

She was ranked 18th last week, but was dropped when the new computer rankings were released Monday.

Graf held the top spot in the rankings computed through Sunday. Arantxa Sanchez Vicario was second and Martina Navratilova third.

CBS also confirmed that it will begin televising Southeastern Conference football and basketball starting in 1996. Last week, the SEC said it had agreed to a five-year deal with CBS worth more than $85 million.

Under the Big East and SEC contracts, CBS has the rights to televise regular-season home games of teams in both leagues. CBS also will continue to broadcast Big East basketball.

Daly off suspension; will play in Honda Classic

INDIAN WELLS, Calif. (AP) — John Daly will come off suspension and play in the Honda Classic at Fort Lauderdale, Fla., March 10-13, the PGA Tour announced Tuesday.

Daly, golf's biggest hitter and a former winner of the PGA Championship, was suspended from tour activity Nov. 6 after failing to complete pro-am play in the second round of the Kapalua International in Hawaii.

The suspension came on the heels of a series of similar incidents involving Daly, one of golf's biggest gate attractions.

The length of the suspension, imposed by PGA Tour commissioner Deane Beman, was not announced at that time. By the time he returns to action in Florida, Daly will have missed the first nine tournaments on the 1994 schedule.

The 1991 Rookie of the Year. Daly also won the 1992 B.C. Open.

Wells defies NCAA rules by cashing check

Joel Donofrio

The Daily Iowan

Former Iowa defensive tackle Mike Wells is among a group of 23 football players who cashed checks from a North Carolina man determined to show that college football players should be paid for the profit they produce.

Charlotte writer and self-employed businessman Dick

Mike Wells

DeVenzio put his belief that college football players should be compensated for the wealth they generate into action by sending $100 checks to nearly 100 senior football players at the conclusion of the 1993 season.

So far, 23 players have cashed the checks, which were post-dated Jan. 3, 1994, DeVenzio said. He called the check cashing a courageous stand on the issue of exploitation of Division I football players.

"I admire the athletes with the courage to take a stand against the NCAA and cash the $100 check," DeVenzio said. "No one cashes a $100 check out of greed ... the checks were sent specifically to circumvent the NCAA rules to the athletes' benefits."

DeVenzio stressed that those he sent checks to were football players who discussed with him their opinions on the exploitation of athletes. They corresponded through letters for six weeks, he said.

"It's not like a check appeared from out of nowhere in the mail. I sent letters to all the players and discussed the issue at stake," DeVenzio said. "All athletes should be compensated for their value, for the tremendous profit they generate for their schools."

Iowa associate athletic director Fred Mims said that although he doubted Iowa would be penalized for Wells' action, he would help the NCAA and the Big Ten Conference with any investigation.

"(Wells) has already graduated from the university, he's done with his eligibility," Mims said. "I don't know what could be done with that, so that's why we're investigating the matter."

Wells said he took the money because the UI used his talents to make a lot of money, none of which he received.

"As a player, I did the best for my team. It was nice to have a scholarship, and I appreciated the opportunity," Wells said. "But the school used my name, my picture and my credentials for their benefit, and they're getting all the money. I never had any extra money. Whatever I had always went for rent. It's tough living like that."

Other Iowa football players said they agreed with Wells' argument.

"We should get more money than we do. Coaches, administrators can make a profit off athletics — quite a lot of money — but you as an athlete don't see any of it," said Paul Burmeister who was a co-captain of the 1993 Hawkeye team with See ATHLETES, Page 2B

U.S. skiing earning respect in gold

Larry McShane

Associated Press

LILLEHAMMER, Norway — Two races, two gold medals, two surprising winners. The U.S. ski team — most often modified with "much-maligned" — is turning a lack of respect into a lode of medals.

The revived skiers, who spent a decade out of the Olympic winner's circle, collected their second gold in as many races Tuesday with another unlikely medalist — Diann Roffe-Steinrotter, who hadn't won an international race since the Reagan Administration.

The skier, the "old timer" of the women's team at 26, picked up her Super-G gold on a day when the grande dame of the Olympics scored a bronze. Finland's 38-year-old Marja-Liisa Kirvesniemi, competing in her record-tying sixth Olympics, finished third in cross-country skiing.

Roffe-Steinrotter, who snapped a nine-year winless streak, wasn't the only American woman making noise in Norway.

Defending gold medalist Donna Weinbrecht qualified for the finals in mogul skiing, while U.S. luger Cammy Myler skidded out of medal contention. And half a world away, skater Tonya Harding began her long (and longshot) trip to Lillehammer.

As for the men, the U.S. hockey team still hasn't won — but it hasn't lost yet, either. The Americans tied Slovakia 3-3, following the same script as their first game: A third-period comeback fueled by two late goals.

For those seeking omens, it marked the first time since 1984 that the U.S. failed to win in its first two games. The 1984 team finished seventh after opening with two losses.

Losses? The ski team doesn't know about them. With the U.S. leading the rest of the world 2-0 in skiing golds, Roffe-Steinrotter offered this explanation for its sudden rejuvenation: Nobody expects them to win, so there's no pressure.

"I can relax. I'm just a dark horse. I'm not a favorite. I can just ski," said Roffe-Steinrotter, whose dream race ended a nightmarish stretch of her career. Since winning a World Cup race in 1985, her closest brush with victory was a silver medal in Albertville.

Associated Press

Jean-Luc Brassard, of Grande-Ile, Quebec, competes in the Olympic men's freestyle moguls elimination race Tuesday at Hunderfossen.

And then, stunningly, the gold in Lillehammer, her third and last Olympics. Roffe-Steinrotter announced this will be her last season of skiing, and she already made it quite memorable.

"It's just amazing. I surprised myself," she confessed after swooshing down the mountain in 1 minute, 22.15 seconds. "I haven't skied very well this year."

That's hard to turn a team-wide problem when it comes to the Winter Games. In the last two Olympics, the U.S. had won zero gold medals on the slopes. But as underdog Tommy Moe did two days earlier for the men, Roffe-Steinrotter — whose previous season-best in the Super-G was an eighth — ended a decade-long gold drought for the women.

The last American woman to win a gold medal in Alpine skiing was Debbie Armstrong in the giant slalom at Sarajevo in 1984, when Bill Johnson won the men's downhill that same year.

The Super-G silver medal went to Svetlana Gladischeva of Russia

Brassard placed first in the event and moves on to the finals today. Canada has earned two bronze medals at this year's games.

— the first Alpine skiing medal ever for a Soviet, Unified Team or Russian skier. The golds are the United States' only two medals; the Soviets, with eight medals, and the Norwegians, with five, are the leaders.

The Russians grabbed the top two spots in the pairs figure skating. Ekaterina Gordeeva and Sergei Grinkov took the gold medal, beating Natalia Mishkutenok and Artur Dmitriev. Canada's Isabelle Brasseur and Lloyd Eisler, the reigning world champions, took the bronze medal. Gordeeva-Grinkov, the 1988 gold medalists, took advantage of a rule change allowing professional skaters to return to the Olympics.

The medal-hungry U.S. hockey team, which struggled to tie lightweight France, faced a tougher task Tuesday in Slovakia but wound up with the same result. Goals just 90 seconds apart by Peter Ciavaglia and John Lilley — the second with four minutes left — turned a two-goal deficit into the Iowa is hoping for an NIT bid, but in order to play in the postseason, the Hawkeyes will need to win a majority of their last nine games.

Tonight Iowa (9-10 overall, 3-7 in the Big Ten) begins its final stretch of the regular season against Big Ten leader Michigan (17-4, 9-2), a team Iowa coach Tom Davis has never beaten in Crisler Arena.

"We just have to try to win them all, and knowing that it's going to be hard, maybe it is impossible, but you don't know until you try," Davis said of the rest of Iowa's Big Ten schedule. "We have to go in there and try to knock off Michigan knowing that it's a real tough task. I think with our team, they feel they can do it. They know a lot of things have to fall into place for them."

"I'll be surprised if we don't play well at Michigan."

The Hawkeyes are coming off a 93-91 loss to Indiana last Saturday. It was their fourth Big Ten loss that was decided by less than five points.

Part of the problem has been linked with Iowa's abysmal free-throw shooting. In those four games, the team has not shot better than 57 percent.

"It's hard to turn free throwing around quickly," Davis said. "It takes time. It's such a fragile thing."

While Iowa leads the conference in scoring at 81.5 points per game, the Hawkeyes are last in scoring defense, allowing 83.8 points a contest.

They will be facing a team that is ranked first in defense at 68.1 points.

"Michigan is a very good defensive team," Davis said. "We'll get a good test of our offensive capabilities."

eye Arena, Iowa led by as many as 19 points, but fell apart late in the game and lost 71-70 on a last-second shot.

Michigan is coming off a 72-70 win over Ohio State Sunday, with Jalen Rose leading the team with 18 points.

That win, Davis said, has put the Wolverines in the "driver's seat."

"For Michigan to get that win, I'm sure the whole team recognized how big that was in terms of winning the Big Ten Championship this year," he said.

Davis said the Wolverines are like an NBA team, that they play as well as their opponent.

"Michigan has that extreme confidence in themselves that they can turn it on," he said. "You have to have really talented people to do that."

So instead of jumping out to a quick lead like they did in their last game, Davis said the Hawkeyes are going to do the opposite.

"What we're going to do is get off to a real slow start up there, we're going to turn the tables on them and come back ourselves," he said.

Sox's Jordan struggles in open workout

Ben Walker

Associated Press

SARASOTA, Fla. — They came to see if Michael Jordan can hit. They heard the answer. He can't, at least not yet.

Seldom did the sharp crack of Jordan's bat echo through low-slung Ed Smith Stadium. Instead, there were mostly dull thuds, the sound mushy softballs make.

Using a right-handed swing that looked more manufactured than natural, Jordan hit nearly 100 balls and only one managed to roll across the crushed-seashell warning track and reach the fence. There were plenty of pop-ups, lots of weak flies and a bunch of balls beat into the dirt.

Still, after his first outdoor workout that outsiders were allowed to observe, the newest Chicago White Sox rookie — and the world's greatest basketball player — was satis-

Victims of conspiracy awarded judgments

Ronald Blum
 Associated Press

NEW YORK — A total of $59.48 million was awarded to the 18 victims of baseball owners' conspiracy against free agents, including a top judgment of more than $2 million to Jack Clark.

The decision, which covered only lost salary and interest for the 1986 and 1987 seasons, was issued by arbitrator Thomas Roberts to the Major League Baseball Players Association on Monday. Details of the decision were disclosed Tuesday.

day to The Associated Press and were to arrive at players' homes by mail later this week.

Seven players were awarded $1 million or more. Clark was awarded $800,000 each for the 1986 and 1987 seasons, and interest through Dec. 31, 1990, increased his award by more than $512,555.63.

Clark, now out of baseball, is first at $2,112,555.63. Lance Parrish, who on Monday agreed to a minor league contract with Detroit, is No. 2 on the list at $1,786,763.61. His $1,526,085.91 for 1987 was the largest amount give to a player for one season, based on an award of $1,191,666 plus interest.

Andre Dawson, now with Boston, is third at $1,280,632.25, followed by Carlton Fisk, who retired last season, at $1,218,342.60.

Tim Lincecum was fifth at $1,131,109.04, followed by Rich Gedman at $1,114,961.25 and Tom Seaver at $1,046,670.98.

Seaver was the largest adjustment made by Roberts, who heard appeals on 49 objections filed to the preliminary list issued by the union in December 1992. The union originally had attributed half of Seaver's claim to a lost job opportunity, rather than lost salary, and awarded him $358,654. While the union intends to make recommendations later on lost job claims, Roberts moved Seaver's claim entirely into the earlier category, advancing the Hall of Fame pitcher's award.

Twenty players were awarded between $500,000 and $1 million. Checks will be sent to players by the union on Feb. 28 or March 1 by overnight mail.

Veterans receive minor league contracts

Ronald Blum
 Associated Press

NEW YORK — With spring training just one day away, Jeff Reardon, Frank Tanana, Rich Gossage and Geno Petralli finally got contracts for this season on Tuesday.

Reardon, No. 2 on the career saves list, agreed to a minor-league contract with the New York Yankees that could earn him as much as $1 million if he makes the major league roster.

The 38-year-old right-hander was 4-6 with a 4.40 ERA last season for the Cincinnati Reds. He had eight saves in 59 relief opportunities and made $1.5 million. The new deal calls for a $250,000 base if he makes the Yankees and five levels of bonuses worth $150,000 each.

Tanana, a 40-year-old left-hander, returned to the California Angels 14 years after leaving. Tanana was 7-17 in 32 starts with a 4.35 ERA last season for the New York Mets and New York Yankees. He pitched with the Angels from 1973-80.

Gossage, 42, agreed to re-sign with the Oakland Athletics for a minor-league contract, and Petralli left the Texas Rangers to sign a minor-league deal with the San Diego Padres.

The moves means 79 of the 97 free agents have signed for the 1994 season.

Meanwhile, players and owners split a pair of arbitration cases Tuesday, leaving owners with a 6-4 advantage in decisions this winter.

Infielder Pat Kelly won his case against Yankees and will be paid $810,000 this season, more than five times the $160,000 he earned in 1993. Arbitrator Pat Hardin, who heard the case Monday, chose Kelly's request instead of the $575,000 offered by the team. Kelly, 26, hit .273 last season with seven homers, 51 RBIs and 14 steals in 25 attempts.

Third baseman Todd Zeile lost his case against the St. Louis Cardinals and will make $2.7 million instead of $3.25 million, arbitrator Ira Jaffe decided. Zeile, 28, made $1,025,000 last year, when he hit .277 and drove in 103 runs.

Houston left-hander Al Osuna had Tuesday's only hearing. Osuna, 1-1 with a 3.20 ERA and two saves in 44 games, asked Hardin for $975,000 while the Astros offered $375,000, a raise of $62,500.

He added.

DeVenzio, who played college basketball for Duke University from 1967-71, said the amount of money athletes produce is even greater today than it was when he played.

"I played at Duke, and you get the sense early on that you're a part of a big business. At that time, CBS paid around $10,000 to televise the (NCAA) Championship, and today they pay $143 million to show the tournament," DeVenzio said. "No one's forcing universities to run football programs as major entertainment enterprises."

JORDAN

fied. After all, this is why they have spring training.

"You have to be patient. I think it's going to be gradual improvement for me," he said. "The last thing I want to be is a sideshow."

"I have to work on my hitting every day. I know there are things I need to do — keeping my butt in, keeping my head on the ball, quickening my bat," he said.

The White Sox do not plan to rush him. Manager Gene Lamont said he expects Jordan, who has signed a Class AAA contract, to play in an intrasquad game March 3.

Up until now, the 6-foot-6 outfielder wearing No. 45 worked out behind guarded gates. The White Sox didn't want his presence to disrupt camp when pitchers and catchers report today, so they opened Jordan's two-hour session for 250 reporters.

Starting Thursday, any fan can walk in and watch. Some snuck in early and others sprawled belly-down behind the chain fence in left, peering through a two-foot opening beneath the "Florida Lottery" billboard.

Jordan looked good enough in the field and was speedy during the baserunning drills.

Facing batting practice pitcher Mike Maziarra and bullpen coach Roly DeArmas, Jordan showed a typical White Sox swing, chopping down and letting go with the top hand on the follow-through. That's the style — liked by some, loathed by others — taught by batting coach Walt Hriniaik.

"That's the first time I've seen him hit," Hriniaik said. "There are a lot of good things. His swing could be a little shorter. That would give him the bat speed he needs."

He needs more than that, offered former University of Miami coach Ron Fraser, one of the game's great teachers.

"He's not very explosive. The ball doesn't jump off his bat. He swings the bat instead of throwing the bat," Fraser said. "He has a canned swing, an organizational swing."

Jordan hasn't played baseball since his senior year of high school. No one doubts his hard work now, but the question is whether Jordan, who turns 31 on Thursday, can hit.

While in Sarasota, Jordan makes $700 per week expense money. He'll make $850 a month during the season if he's in the minors and the major league minimum of $109,000 if he's with Chicago.

"It doesn't help me or the White Sox to put me out there just because of my name. If my skills aren't good enough to be here, then I don't want to be here," Jordan said. "I'm talking to my friends and family to make sure I'm not embarrassing anyone, that I'm not embarrassing myself."

But suppose the White Sox send him to the Class A Hickory Crawdads. Even though they play near his home in Wilmington, N.C., would Jordan accept life in the bush leagues?

"I'm not too adjusted to royalty that I can't ride a bus," he said, adding with a smile, "as long as it's a luxury bus."

The answer drew lots of laughs, easily his loudest crack of the day.

ATHLETES

Wells. "The university is paying me $2,000, or whatever state tuition is per year, for me to go here, and that's not even close to what (football) brings in."

Burmeister and senior defensive lineman Maurea Crain said NCAA rules severely restrict the money-making ability of athletic scholarship recipients. Athletes cannot hold a job during the school year, receive sportswear with an Iowa athletic logo on it as a gift, or be taken out to dinner by the parents of a friend visiting town, they said.

However, Crain said that while he agrees with Wells cashing the check and his argument behind it, there are pros and cons to paying college football players.

"I definitely agree with (Wells), and I'd have cashed it myself. He was done with his commitment to the University of Iowa, graduated, so there's no reason he should be breaking any rules," Crain said. "I don't think any football player in the nation would complain if they were paid, but if you take the money, you'd have to produce."

"There would be extra pressure — if you're getting paid, you're going to start neglecting other things you need to do as a student. You won't be an amateur anymore, and people don't give you money for nothing," he added.

Both Crain and Burmeister agreed that the NCAA makes laws that are forced upon football players, but do not apply those laws to themselves.

"The people who make the rules in Kansas City (where NCAA headquarters are located) keep putting more and more restrictions on athletes, and it's not going to change anytime soon," Burmeister said. "Any other person who's here on a scholarship for academics, music or whatever can do what they want to. People can give them money, they can take a job."

"The presidents keep saying they want to treat us like everybody else. Then why not treat us like everybody else with a scholarship?"

AUBURN HILLS, Mich. — Joe Dumars, despite a sore left hamstring, scored 25 points Tuesday night as the Detroit Pistons defeated Washington 100-93, extending the Bullets' losing streak to four games.

Dumars, who pulled his hamstring in a game against Houston last Thursday, didn't practice Monday. But he started against the Bullets and led the Pistons to just their fourth victory in 28 games.

Nets 103, Knicks 83
EAST RUTHERFORD, N.J. — Kenny Anderson and Kevin Edwards each hit eight of their first 11 shots, and New Jersey continued its surprising domination of the New York Knicks.

The win was the Nets' third in as many games against the Knicks this season.

Cavaliers 111, Nuggets 99
RICHFIELD, Ohio — Gerald Wilkins scored 15 of his 27 points in the first quarter and made four 3-pointers.

The Nuggets lost their third straight game and their fourth in a row at Richfield Coliseum.

Timberwolves 97, Bucks 90

MINNEAPOLIS — Christian Laettner scored 23 points and 13 rebounds as the Minnesota Timberwolves snapped a seven-game losing streak.

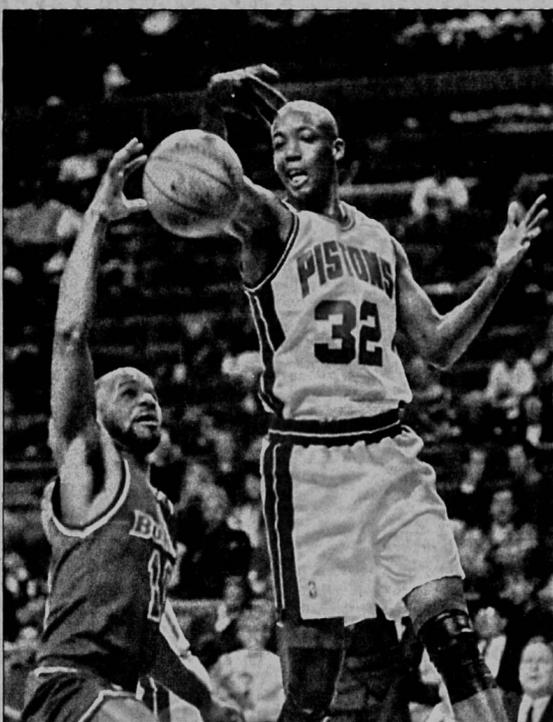

Chuck Person scored seven of his 16 points in the fourth quarter as the Wolves survived a 20-1 third-quarter run by the Bucks.

Magic 102, Celtics 92
ORLANDO, Fla. — Shaquille O'Neal grabbed 24 rebounds and scored 10 of his 36 points in the final 3:41.

The Magic fell behind 74-69 after missing 13 of 17 shots in the third quarter, and trailed 82-72 before putting together a 30-10 run to extend the Celtics' losing streak to five games.

Spurs 109, Pacers 100
SAN ANTONIO, Texas — David Robinson had 34 points and 10 rebounds as the San Antonio Spurs matched their franchise-record winning streak of 10 games.

The victory, which tied the Spurs' record set in January 1993, also was their 12th straight at the Alamodome and pushed their record to 21-3 since Dec. 26.

Detroit's Sean Elliot, right, returned to action Tuesday night after missing more than a week undergoing tests for a kidney problem. The Pistons beat the Washington Bullets 100-93.

Amateur boxer dies after collapsing during bout

Associated Press

ST. PAUL, Minn. — Donell Lindsey died Tuesday, two days after he collapsed during an amateur boxing tournament. He was 28 years old.

His coach, Clem Tucker, confirmed the death, as did USA Boxing, the sport's amateur governing body. St. Paul-Ramsey Medical Center, where Lindsey was listed in critical condition Monday, declined to release information at the family's request.

KSTP-TV reported that Lindsey's life-support system was withdrawn shortly after noon Tuesday.

Lindsey fell after his opponent landed a glancing blow to the side of his protective head gear during Sunday's Region VI Amateur Boxing Championships in St. Paul.

"To get an athlete like Donell, who was such a pleasure to train, always smiling and a pleasure to be around, is such a great loss at any time," Tucker said Tuesday. "But a situation like this makes it much more difficult."

Tucker said Monday that Lindsey was losing when the second round ended.

"He said, 'He stunned me,'" Tucker said. "I said, 'Are you OK?' and he said, 'Sure. I'm going to get him."

But as the third round was nearing the end, Lindsey's opponent landed the glancing blow. The two fighters clinched momentarily, and then Lindsey staggered back, seemed to stumble and fell on his back.

Tucker, the referee and a ring doctor came to his aid.

"All of a sudden, there was a blank look in his eyes and he started clutching Dr. McCafferty's hand real tight, and he started getting stiff. His leg got stiff as a board," Tucker said.

"We couldn't open his hand to cut the hand wraps off."

Lindsey was unconscious when he was rushed from the ring at the Midway Lodge to St. Paul-Ramsey Medical Center.

USA Boxing, in a statement from its headquarters in Colorado Springs, Colo., said the bout was "conducted in complete compliance with all of USA Boxing's rules and regulations."

Jim O'Hara, executive secretary of the Minnesota State Boxing Board, said his organization will conduct an inquiry. But he said there were no indications the fight was improperly conducted.

FOOTBALL

League franchises keep lids on premier players

Dave Goldberg

Associated Press

NEW YORK — This year's free-agent class may have lost some of its luster Tuesday when Deion Sanders, Louis Oliver, Eric Green, Michael Haynes and other NFL stars were listed as protected players by their teams.

Tuesday was the deadline for teams to declare their franchise and transition players.

The announcements were being reviewed by the NFL's Management Council, and NFL spokesman Greg Aiello said the league probably will announce the complete list today.

But a number of teams announced their decisions Tuesday.

Based on player moves last year, the designations will not prevent some players from moving to new teams.

Green, the Pittsburgh Steelers' tight end, was listed as a franchise player and the others were named as transition players.

Among the transition players are Sanders, the baseball-playing cornerback for Atlanta; the Falcons' Haynes, one of the true deep receiving threats in the NFL; and Oliver, Miami's flamboyant safety.

The transition designation gives old teams the right of first refusal. Under the franchise designation, players are discouraged from leaving their own teams under the NFL's complicated free-agency system.

This is the first year of the NFL's salary cap, expected to be about $34 million per team.

That means teams not able to meet a player's demands probably will leave him unprotected, let him test the market and then sign him.

Green, a franchise player, can't move as long as the Steelers offer him a minimum of the average for tight ends as of next April 18. If they offer him the average at the end of the 1993 season — $1.43 million — he can seek other offers, but the Steelers have a chance to match or get two No. 1 draft picks in return.

Dallas' Erik Williams, the heir apparent to Jim Lachey and Anthony Munoz as the NFL's top offensive lineman, also received the transition designation. Williams just signed a new deal with Dallas but will be protected when that contract expires.

"I'm very proud that we've come back from a two-goal deficit in two consecutive games," U.S. coach Tim Taylor said. "It shows we have a lot of heart. What we have to work on is not getting ourselves in that position."

Especially this week, when the U.S. (0-0-2) faces two top teams — Canada and Sweden. The Swedes (1-0-1) defeated Italy (0-2), 4-1. Canada (2-0) easily handled France (0-1-1) in a 3-1 victory.

The Americans' ski slope gold rush could continue today, when defending moguls gold medalist Weinbrecht — winner of six World Cup races this year — and U.S. teammate Liz McIntyre compete.

"I'm pretty happy," McIntyre said. "I was gonna do a daffy twister (leap) and I got a little crooked in the air so I didn't get that off like I wanted to. But it gives me something to do tomorrow."

As good as it gets on Norway's ski slopes, that's how bad it's been for Americans on the luge run. One day after Duncan Kennedy's medal hopes crashed on Turn 13 of the course, so did the sled of Erin Warren.

Myler's medal hopes ended when she bounced off a wall on the same turn.

Myler, the best U.S. hope for a women's luge medal, fell out of contention on her second run. The opening ceremony flag bearer wound up in 11th place with two runs left today.

"I was a little tense on the sled, not really relaxed," Myler said. "But I was actually feeling really good on the second run. I'm doing the best I can."

American Diann Roffe-Steinrotter comes down the day. Roffe won the gold in 1:22.15 to give the women's Super-G course in Kvitfjell, Norway, Tuesday. Roffe won the gold in 1:22.15 to give the Americans their second gold medal of the Games.

The women's 5-kilometer classical-style cross-country race went to a familiar figure — Lyubov Egorova of Russia, who won three gold medals and two silver medals in 1992.

Manuela Di Centa of Italy, who took the first gold medal of the Winter Games, was second.

Third was Kirvesniemi, a mother of two competing in her record-breaking sixth Olympics. Only Swedish bobsledder Carl-Erik Eriksson and Australian speed-skater Colin Coates have appeared in as many Games.

"I'm pleased with the bronze medal," Kirvesniemi said. "It means a lot. Nothing beats the three gold medals in Sarajevo, of course, but this comes close."

Harding departs for Games; wants backing

Bob Baum
Associated Press

PORTLAND, Ore. — Tonya Harding, leaving her legal troubles behind for a time, headed for Norway Tuesday to fulfill her "dream of being able to compete in the Olympics."

The U.S. national champion figure skater arrived at Portland International Airport in a white stretch limousine.

In a brief statement to reporters, Harding said: "Thank you, everyone, for coming out today. ... I hope that my performance is as well as Tommy Moe's performance in the downhill ski. I was really excited when I heard about it."

Moe won the gold medal Sunday in the men's downhill Alpine skiing, becoming only the second American to take that prize.

"I just want to thank everyone for their support and I'm really excited," Harding said. "Keep believing in me and I'm going to go there and I'm going to win."

She then boarded a flight for Seattle en route to Lillehammer.

On Monday, Mike Pliska, who was engaged to Harding for 2½ months in 1991, appeared before the grand jury investigating Harding and said he was asked "pointed questions" about her character, such as whether she was capable of lying.

"I had to give a qualified yes on that one," Pliska said.

However, he said he didn't believe she could lie about anything as big as the plot to hobble Nancy Kerrigan.

Pliska also said he was asked what he knew about Harding's relationship with ex-husband Jeff Gillooly, who has accused Harding of having OK'd the plot. Pliska has said that he saw evidence that Gillooly abused Harding.

"They kind of steered things toward the effect on her, to see what kind of mindset she had on that, whether Jeff was controlling enough to get her to do things," Pliska said.

After lunch with some of her supporters Monday, Harding told KATU-TV: "I'm strong sometimes. But I need to sit down and cry. I haven't been able to cry yet. I haven't been able to do anything. I guess it will be one big happy victory when I win."

Harding issued a statement Monday saying she has reached an agreement with the syndicated TV program "Inside Edition" in which she will grant a series of exclusive interviews over the coming months.

Atlantic 10 supports Temple coach Chaney's suspension

Associated Press

PHILADELPHIA — The Atlantic 10 on Tuesday backed Temple University's suspension of coach John Chaney and will not punish him further for his wild outburst against Massachusetts coach John Calipari.

Chaney was suspended for one game on Monday for threatening to kill Calipari and have his players confront Calipari's when the teams meet again next week.

The announcement of the suspension by school president Peter Liacouras was accompanied by a blanket apology from Chaney although Calipari was never mentioned by name or title.

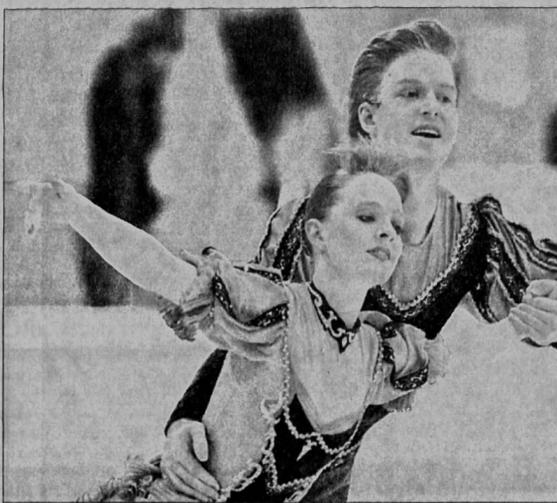

Atlantic 10 commissioner Ron Bertovich warned Chaney that his behavior following Sunday's game at Amherst, Mass., will not be tolerated.

"The Atlantic 10 Conference, after careful review, concurs with the actions taken by Temple University," he said in a statement. "The Atlantic 10 Conference has not and never will condone these types of actions and any further conduct of this kind by coach Chaney will result in more severe sanctions."

In allowing the school to take the first step, the Atlantic 10 followed NCAA procedure in which a conference's disciplinary measures are reviewed by the national body.

No coach had ever been suspended by the league and it was the first time Chaney had been disciplined by the school in his 12 years at Temple.

Power loses in pairs

Barry Wilner

HAMAR, Norway — Elegance beat power in the most magnificent show of pairs figure skating in Olympic history.

Ekaterina Gordeeva and Sergei Grinkov, the 1988 gold medalists, won the Olympic title again Tuesday night, edging defending champions Natalia Mishkutenok and Artur Dmitriev in a dazzling duel of Russian couples.

World champions Isabelle Brasseur and Lloyd Eisler won the bronze, as they did two years ago in Albertville.

"Tonight, we're the gold medal winners; if the pros aren't here, we're Olympic champions," said Eisler, a strong opponent of the 1992 rules change allowing professionals a one-time reinstatement of Olympic eligibility. "I said all along they shouldn't be here. In our minds, this is a gold medal performance."

The audience might not have agreed with the scoring or cared about the rule change, and some skaters and coaches questioned the judging. But there was no doubt about the quality of the performances.

"It was really a very hard gold medal," Gordeeva said after she and her husband earned a 6.0 for artistic impression from the Russian judge and eight 5.9s, enough to win their second Olympic crown and the ninth in a row for a Russian couple. "Everyone has been pushing on us, saying, 'You will have no problems, you will win the gold medal.' But tonight, everyone skated so well."

Especially their countrymen, whose spins, lifts and jumps surpassed their performance at Albertville and earned them praise from everywhere. Yet, it got them only one first-place vote, from Belarus.

"I think there are three categories in skating," Dmitriev said. "There are coaches, skaters and judges. ... All the categories work differently."

Disjointed 'I'll Do Anything' saved by strong comedic cast

Tad Paulson
The Daily Iowan

James L. Brooks' "I'll Do Anything" was originally supposed to be a musical, featuring songs by musicians like Prince, Carole King and Sinead O'Connor. But audiences balked at screening tests, and Brooks' comedic and dramatic force behind both "Terms of Endearment" and "Broadcast News" — was faced with a potential bomb.

So he did what any director would do. He snipped, cut, tucked and taped together a new "I'll Do Anything," which is what we've got in the theaters now. All hail the magic of Tinseltown.

Though Brooks' rearrangement

"S.O.B." It's the performances that count here.

Brooks has the power to draw extraordinary comedic performances out of his actors (see Albert Brooks' performance in "Broadcast News"). His abilities aren't wasted here with Nick Nolte, Julie Kavner (the voice of Marge Simpson), Brooks and newcomer Whittni Wright — a strong, diverse cast.

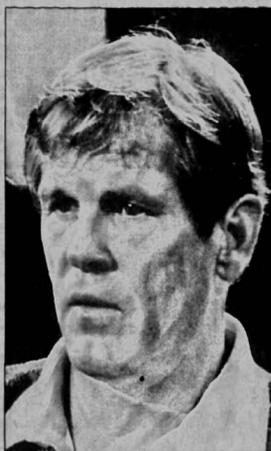

Nolte plays Matt Hobbs, a frustrated, unemployed actor living in Hollywood on the verge of poverty. One day he gets a phone call from his ex-wife (British comedian Tracey Ullman), demanding that he come take custody of their 6-year-old daughter Jeannie (Wright). It turns out Ullman is on her way to jail, and Hobbs is suddenly the proud father of a hideously spoiled daughter.

Meanwhile, he bombs out on an audition with a big-time Hollywood producer (Brooks), who winds up employing him as a chauffeur. Hobbs strikes up a friendly tryst with a production assistant (a nervous, quirky Joely Richardson) and gets to know Cathy (Kavner), a test screening analyst who's involved in her own liaison with Brooks' producer.

"I'll Do Anything" mostly revolves around the development of trust and respect between Nolte and Wright. Their scenes together, while borderline sappy at times, are funny and believable, and the slow progress of their relationship provides a strong backbone to the other corollary plot lines.

These other plot lines — focusing on the difficult love affairs between Richardson / Nolte and Brooks / Kavner — are interesting and well-written, but don't conjure up any new angles on modern relationships.

What really counts in "I'll Do Anything" are the scenes between Nolte and Wright, and several other sincerely funny moments — like Brooks' unorthodox weight machine and Nolte's hysterical tirade at a group of snotty production assistants.

Nolte and Brooks are both on familiar ground here, playing their usual roles — Nolte is the introspective, somewhat disillusioned guy looking for a break, and Brooks is the self-centered, somewhat repressed executive who can never get anything right.

Thumbs up also to Whittni Wright for an impressive, if irritating, debut as the overindulged, screeching Jeannie Hobbs. We cringe for Nolte when she unleashes a belting scream or a cold shoulder. And we also feel happiness when it seems that the pair might actually be able to get along.

A word to the wise: Those looking for vintage James L. Brooks would probably do themselves a service by waiting for this one to come out on video and renting "Broadcast News" instead. Brooks may have saved "I'll Do Anything" from the "Last Action Hero" Club by slicing out the musical numbers, but it's definitely not the best film in his pantheon.

of the film makes it a little jumpy and disjointed at points, he did the right thing; it's immensely difficult to imagine this film with musical numbers. They would have made little sense in the context of this story — a light, somewhat manipulative little comedy-drama about fathers and daughters and how much Hollywood drains the souls of its inhabitants.

"I'll Do Anything" is a good film; it's a human, intelligent flick with a lot of truths to it. It doesn't matter that it takes an atypically critical, disillusioned approach to Hollywood that's been better articulated in films like "The Player" and

ALBUM REVIEW

Slowdive revitalized in latest release

Stuart Reid
The Daily Iowan

Slowdive's sophomore release, Sowlaki, paints an ambient dreamscape of watery vocals, blissed-out guitars and crystalline keyboards. What differentiates Sowlaki from its predecessor, 1991's Just for a Day, is a greater emphasis on formal song structures and harmonies. Where Just for a Day was technically impressive, but void of personality and emotion, Sowlaki adds a needed dose of soul to Slowdive's otherwise complete sound.

"Alison" opens the album, immediately showing a revitalization of the band's sound. The lyrics are clearly more significant than in the past and are given greater emphasis in the mix. Neil Halstead's vocal style, often reminiscent of the Reids from the Jesus and Mary Chain, is still dreamy, but far more distinct. "Your cigarette still burns / Your messed-up life still thrills me," sings Halstead, with a sort of wearied passion. Rachael Goswell's vocals, including those on the ineptly titled "Machine Gun," are more confident as well, making for a prettier batch of songs than last time around.

Brian Eno, who chose to collaborate with the band rather than produce the album, adds keyboards to "Sing" and "Here She Comes," and his presence adds a shimmering veneer of texture on top of the already multilayered tracks. Eno's unique style also makes the tracks seem somehow more majestic and otherworldly, canceling out the sometimes overwhelming production style. "Dagger" is undoubtedly Slowdive's finest achievement to date. The overlay of guitar-driven feedback is erased, leaving only Halstead's morose vocals and an acoustic guitar line. The shift in emphasis from the guitar wash of previous Slowdive releases peaks here, expressing a greater confidence in the band's songwriting skills. "You know I am your dagger / You know I am your wound," Halstead sings hauntingly.

Also impressive is the inclusion of four tracks not included on the import edition, including Slowdive's rendition of "Some Velvet Morning." The vocals of Halstead and Goswell intertwine like the criers outside some malignant circus freak show. "Some Velvet Morning" pulls off a difficult feat: being gothic without being goofy.

The other three bonus tracks, "Good Day Sunshine," "Missing You," and "Country Rain," are a contiguous set that stand out distinctly from the primary content of the album. Each seems to be inspired by bands such as Seefeel, who attempt to create music for the ambient club scene using the traditional tools of guitar rock. While it would be premature to report back as to the success or failure of this new approach, it is clear that Slowdive is committed to growth and risk-taking, a formula that works to near perfection on Sowlaki.

'Kalifornia' an uneventful waste of talent

Tad Paulson
The Daily Iowan

For some bizarre reason, Dominic Sena's "Kalifornia" was lumped together with the underrated "True Romance" last year by critics as part of a new ultraviolent wave of American cinema. But Sena's film has none of the wit of Quentin Tarantino's slick script for "Romance," nor does it have the quirky, obscure acting performances. It's a sincerely awful, self-centered, uneventful film — and a bad watch to boot.

Wanting so desperately to come off as an arty, brooding exploration of the psyche of the serial killer, all "Kalifornia" does is bore, throwing in a few splashes of bloodshed here and there to punctuate its elementary thematics about humanity. (Yes, murder is naughty, and you shouldn't do it. Yes, some people are so crazy they don't care and do it anyway. And yes, you should always check somebody out before inviting them on a cross country trip.)

"Kalifornia" also wastes the talent of its young star, Brad Pitt, (whose track record includes "Thelma & Louise," "A River Runs Through It" and the upcoming "Interview With the Vampire") on the role of the murderous red-neck Early. And Juliette Lewis ("Cape Fear," "Husbands and Wives") gives one of the most irritating, grating performances of 1993 as Early's idiot girlfriend, Adele.

David Duchevny plays Brian, a postgraduate writer under contract to write a book about serial killers. He and his photographer girlfriend, Carrie (Michelle Forbes), decide to escape to California for awhile, by route of the nation's most famous murder sites, where Brian can dictate notes to his tape recorder and Carrie can shoot photos. They put up an ad for somebody who can go halves on the trip.

Early, just released from prison, lives in a trailer home with Adele, whom he frequently addresses as "Mama." Harassed by both his parole officer and his landlord, Early decides to jump ship and flee the state. He and Adele answer Brian's ad, and all of a sudden, we've got a road movie.

Brian and Carrie realize early on that Adele is a sheer fool, a child, totally under the domination of Early, who keeps her from makeup, alcohol and tobacco, and even cuts her hair into a scraggly bob when he is displeased with the way she looks.

As the foursome drives along, Adele chirps and bubbles like a dizzy fourth-grader with kindergarten level intelligence, stupidly oblivious to her boyfriend's hobby. Early snorts, grunts and looks out the window, very calm and psycho-killerlike. Predictably, mayhem ensues as Brian and Carrie realize what kind of loonies they're hauling.

Also predictably, the violence starts to accelerate as Early turns the road trip into a living nightmare. Brian, the hero, must come to grips with his own fears and curiosities in order to protect Carrie, and David Duchevny, the actor, must come to grips with the utter boredom and lack of emotion in his performance. "Kalifornia" is, again, an uneventful watch. As bland as chicken broth, this is a film that has absolutely no feeling or aim to it. The acting performances are either uninspired (Duchevny and Forbes) or grossly exaggerated, the latter especially true in Lewis' case.

On the positive side, at least "Kalifornia" doesn't start promisingly, so it doesn't end disappointingly — there's really no room for a let-down when you're knee-deep in muck from the start.

"Kalifornia" plays at the Bijou tonight at 7 and Thursday at 8:45 p.m.

Squirrel Energy gives boost to local musicians

Stuart Reid
The Daily Iowan

This week: revitalizing the Iowa City music scene

Although Iowa City is home to many bands, the scene has become remarkably homogeneous. Local musician and UI student Adam Svenson concluded, "I don't like going and seeing the same blues-rock kind of thing. I'm not going to dis any of them, but it would be nice to see some bands who do different kinds of things at Gabe's."

With the support of local artists Ed Gray and Tom Armstrong, Svenson started the Squirrel Energy project last fall. Essentially an attempt to get some exposure for Iowa City's basement and garage rockers, as well as to build up more of a sense of a scene locally, Squirrel Energy has since released two cassettes: the compilation Squirrel Energy Now! and Randy Ike's Midwest Bear Worshipping Support Group.

Of the material on Squirrel Energy Now!, Gray's contributions are perhaps the most remarkable. "Mpls." is a pretty guitar instrumental laid on top of an almost subliminal string of bits recorded off the radio. The effect of hearing the warm guitar strains fade away, to be replaced by the tinny, distant sound of a country radio station, is nothing short of desolate.

"Friends," Gray's other contribution, takes a different approach, blending a wall of incandescent feedback over a disorienting set of spoken words. If it were not for the strong sense of originality pervading both tracks, one would never suspect that the same individual was responsible for both. Gray's material, comprised of equal parts experimentation and technical prowess, makes for a truly ambient experience in the best sense of the word.

While on the surface, The Blue Copybaras seem to be a one-trick band, their music is surprisingly winning. At once discordant and harmonious, tracks like "Rainy Halloween" and "Long Walk Home" are extremely listenable. While it is difficult to imagine this playing well in a live setting, it makes for great mood music, like the soundtrack to some demented kids' film.

Black Ink Pen is good stuff as well — typical college-rock croonery more than a little reminiscent of Soul Asylum. Ike's contributions are also strong — his songs seem more fleshed out than much of the material included. While Box Boy's "One Pounder" largely misses the mark, "Tuna Fish Wish" more than makes up for it. The track sounds as if it has been beamed in from space, and the lyrics are playful in a King Missile kind of way.

Looking down the road a bit, Svenson has a number of plans for Squirrel Energy. While no new tapes are planned over the next month or so, a number of different possibilities are being considered, including another compilation and plans for some sort of outdoor music event this summer to help fuel the sense of community needed to get some attention focused on Iowa City's music scene.

According to Svenson, one of the biggest problems in Iowa City's alternative scene is "nobody can find a drummer." Another part of the problem is the venue situation, which, for financial reasons, tends to favor the more predictable output of the blues / funk / rock scene.

For the moment, Svenson is working on supporting the Squirrel Energy Now! and Ike cassettes, as well as hooking up with others in the Iowa City area looking to get some exposure. After all, as Svenson points out, "You can only sit in your basement jamming with people for so long." He adds, "I just have faith that there's people out there who want to hear this kind of stuff," and if the first two cassettes are any indication, it's likely that Svenson is right on target with this assessment.

The Squirrel Energy Now! tapes are available at Record Collector, Apollo Records and Tofu Hut for less than the price of an Iowa City parking ticket. Musical submissions can be sent to Squirrel Energy, P.O. Box 603, I.C., 52244-0603.
