Mascot decision delayed

The UI Board in Control of Athletics postponed consideration of its resolution to ban potentially racially offensive mascots and their depictions from Iowa athletic events at its meeting Tuesday.

Vice President for University Relations Ann Rhodes said the vote on the issue will be tabled until its next meeting, by which time there could be further discussion of the proposal among the UI American Indian community.

The policy, if passed, would ban mascots which depict a race of people from all UI athletic facilities and discourage behaviors that reflect a race and its culture in a demeaning manner.

Senate committee: repeal public intoxication law

DES MOINES (AP) — The state law against public intoxication should be repealed, a Senate committee voted Tuesday.

The Judiciary Committee voted 12-3 for the proposal by officials in Polk County, which handles more than 2,000 public intoxication cases a year. The existing law contributes to jail overcrowding and does little to deter habitual offenders, county officials said.

"We're putting a lot of resources into a health problem that is diverting resources from other areas of the criminal prosecution process," Fred Gay, an assistant Polk County attorney, told the committee.

Supporters of the bill said people who are intoxicated and cause problems can usually be arrested on other charges, such as trespassing or public disorder.

"If they're just intoxicated, then we leave them alone," Gay said.

Alabama to brewers: ice-brewed beer too strong

MONTGOMERY, Ala. (AP) — Miller Icehouse is being sent to the doghouse and other ice-brewed beers could join it.

The Alabama Alcoholic Beverage Control Board began sending letters to brewers Monday, telling them to remove from stores any new beers that contain more than the 5 percent alcohol allowed by state law.

Miller Icehouse has an alcohol level of 5.5 percent.

Israel frees 500 captives; PLO scoffs

Palestinians say releases 'irrelevant'

Said Ghazali
Associated Press

HEBRON, Occupied West Bank — Israel released more than 500 Palestinian prisoners Tuesday to coax the PLO back to peace talks suspended after the Hebron mosque massacre and said another 500 will be freed by the weekend.

Palestinians scoffed at the gesture. "I think the Israelis are releasing us now to make the Palestinians happy. This is not a real step for peace," freed prisoner Wael Salameh, 38, said when he arrived in Hebron, where dozens of Muslim worshippers were slain by a Jewish settler Friday.

That was the PLO line, too. Samir Ghosheh, a member of the PLO's ruling executive committee, dismissed the release as "irrelevant to the real issue of providing protection for our people."

He called it "cosmetic surgery" to dampen the violence that has swept the occupied territories and parts of Israel since Friday's massacre.

The PLO won't resume peace talks with Israel unless "certain guarantees are provided" to protect Palestinians living under occupation, he said.

But amid intense diplomatic maneuvering, there were signs that these may now be forthcoming.

Electronic-mailers seek more secure measures

Holly Reinhardt
The Daily Iowan

Electronic-mailers across the country are banding together to oppose a Clinton administration announcement they say threatens to infringe upon their right of privacy.

In an era when electronically transmitted information is taking on increasing importance in people's everyday lives, many individuals, businesses and especially the federal government have been searching for a more secure way of sending information than allowed by standard e-mail.

The National Security Agency's answer, the "Escrowed Encryption Standard," has been approved for purchase by government agencies for use with telephones, fax machines and computers. Their electronic encryption technology, known as the Key Escrow Chip or the Clipper Chip, will allow virtually unbreakable coding of messages between any two communication devices using the encryption.

That's a virtual godsend for protecting top-secret government information as well as juicy e-mail between friends.

The catch? The government gets to keep the master key, essentially allowing the government back door access to any information transmitted using the technology — including e-mail.

Dave Banisar, policy analyst for Wiretap technology to be upgraded

Jude Sunderbruch
The Daily Iowan

In addition to pursuing the use of the Clipper Chip, the Clinton administration wants to guarantee that U.S. law enforcement agencies don't lose their ability to tap into phone conversations with a proper warrant.

In recent years, digital technology has become increasingly standard throughout the nation's telecommunication networks, replacing older analog equipment. Digital equipment transmits data as a series of zeros and ones, similar to the way computers process information.

Because these new systems can carry huge numbers of phone conversations on one fiber-optic cable, the administration is concerned officials will not have the technical ability to tap into the new lines as they can now with the current analog lines.

Nestor Michnyak, a spokesman at the headquarters of the Federal Bureau of Investigation, said the FBI supports the administration's proposed legislation because it will help ensure that officials can tap when needed.

"The longer we wait, the more difficult it is to put in effect," he said.

The plan calls for new software to be installed on the nation's phone networks to make it easier

See WIRETAPS, Page 10A

Computer Professionals for Social Responsibility said an electronic petition is currently being circulated among e-mailers opposed to putting the key only in the hands of the government.

It provides users of e-mail the opportunity to voice their opposition to the Clipper Chip, Banisar said.

Currently, more than 35,000 people have electronically signed the petition. More than 700 colleges have students, staff or faculty who have signed it.

"I think it will have a pretty good effect on Capitol Hill. It is a clear statement from computer users," he said.

As of now, no fixed date has been set for the presentation of the petition.

At the UI, some e-mailers are signing the petition in hopes of

COUNTY CONTROVERSY CONTINUES

Board of Supervisors appoints Sehr to post

Kristin Berg
The Daily Iowan

The search for the new Johnson County supervisor began with controversy and ended with controversy Tuesday morning, when two of the three-member selection committee voted to appoint former supervisor Don Sehr.

Johnson County Auditor Tom Slockett, Treasurer Cletus Redlinger and Recorder John O'Neill made up the committee. There was disagreement from the start when Redlinger and O'Neill voted to appoint rather than elect a new supervisor after Betty Ockenfels resigned earlier this year for health reasons. When it came down to the final decision, O'Neill and Redlinger voted to appoint Sehr, while Slockett voted against him.

"I don't feel the best applicants were nominated. I thought there were better applicants," Slockett said. "I feel he will not be in favor of any significant changes. He's a good old boy who will do exactly what the board has done in the past. The time has come when we need some changes and updating in county government."

Redlinger and O'Neill said Sehr's 12 years of experience speaks for itself, and Ockenfels' endorsement confirmed their beliefs.

"Don Sehr has been elected by Johnson County three times," O'Neill said.

Supervisor Joe Bolkcom, who wanted an election, said Sehr will work out fine and he is looking forward to working with him. But he believes the committee missed its chance to work on gender balance.

"I think there was an equally qualified woman candidate who was passed over," he said. "I think the selection committee, in replacing Betty, had the opportunity to work on gender balance and they failed. In other county positions we encourage women and minorities to apply."

An election is still a possibility if UI graduate student Jeani Murray and her 20 volunteers are able to collect 5,274 signatures by March

Auction helps raise money, awareness

Prasanti Kantamneni

Iowa City residents will be able to take home their favorite original works of art this Sunday at the Seventh Annual Fine Art and Fun Auction.

The event, which is being sponsored by the Domestic Violence Intervention Program, begins at 1 p.m. More than 118 pieces, including oil paintings, jewelry, baskets and ceramics, have been contributed by 86 artists and artisans from all over the country and will be auctioned off to help raise money for the program.

Sue Chase, vice chairwoman of the DVIP board, said the event has traditionally been a good time.

"This is one of the times that people who support the program

"The auction promotes community awareness on battering. Most people don't think things like battering and domestic abuse happen in Iowa."

Becca Smith, community service chairwoman of Chi Omega throughout the year get a chance to see each other in a social setting," she said. "It's a wonderful day."

Chase said DVIP appreciates the support it receives from the community.

"Iowa City is a very strong volunteer community," she said. "It is a very strong women's community, supported by both women and men. One of the reasons we started the auction is to say thank-you to the people who have supported us."

Over 150 volunteers, including many from the Chi Omega sorority, will be participating in Fine Art and Fun 1994. Chi Omega has taken on the auction as their community service event. This is the second year a sorority has helped with the event.

"Everyone's really excited about it," Becca Smith, community service chairwoman of Chi Omega, said. "As a women's organization, it's important to keep up with women's issues. We're glad we can help with this auction."

Mark Ginsberg holds a mixed media sculpture titled "Canadian Goose" by Anne Gochenour. The sculpture is one of 118 pieces which will be auctioned this Sunday during the Seventh Annual Fine Art and Fun Auction sponsored by the Domestic Violence Intervention Program. All pieces are currently on exhibit at M.C. Ginsberg Jewelers Inc., 110 E. Washington St.

The DVIP is the only program in Johnson, Cedar, Iowa and Washington counties that provides a safe shelter for victims of abuse 24 hours a day. Along with counseling, the program provides food, clothing and transportation to its clients.

Since it opened its doors 13 years ago, the shelter has housed over 2,100 people. On average, the home shelters 30 women and children a day in its 15 bedrooms.

In Iowa, police intervened in 6,200 domestic incidents in 1991 alone. Nationally, a woman is battered every 18 seconds. Twenty to 30 percent of all women entering hospital emergency rooms are victims of battering, and over half of the women murdered in the United States are killed by their partners.

Smith said many people don't realize the number of women who are battered each year.

"The auction promotes community awareness on battering," she said. "Most people don't think things like battering and domestic abuse happen in Iowa. But battering is the leading cause of injuries found in women."

*Silently it falls, silently,
Sheeting over places on earth
I love to be around and move in.
The ground has been taken from under my feet.
Where or who or what am I,
Half blind, trying to see
To get where I'm supposed to be.
A soft apocalypse blots out
The sun.
Is this the end of the world?
Who can tell me why, my friends?
I ask you this morning, as I slip and slide
Around in this mess, before I fall
On my face in a drift, or on my ass
Who in the name of the cruel almighty
Makes this stuff, who, and why?*

150 EXPECTED

Former CIA agent to lecture

Megan Penick
The Daily Iowan

Illicit Central Intelligence Agency activities in Cuba and other Latin American countries will be discussed by former CIA agent Philip Agee in Shambaugh Auditorium tonight at 7:30.

Laura Smith, co-chairwoman for the Central American Solidarity Committee, which is co-sponsoring the program, said Agee was invited because of Cuba's recent attention in the media.

"Through his work in Latin America, he realized the CIA was supporting the elite in those countries," she said. "They work to keep in place conservative governments that protect U.S. economic interests."

Agee, who just returned from a trip to Cuba, formerly worked as a secret operations officer in Ecuador, Uruguay and Mexico until he defected from the CIA in 1969 for ideological reasons. During his time in exile he wrote two books which revealed the CIA's alleged activities of undermining democratic institutions, overthrowing civilian governments and stopping grassroots movements.

After his defection he lived in exile for 20 years, not returning to the United States until 1989. Smith said the United States never pressed charges against him when he returned, but during his exile he was never able to live in one country for any length of time. His homes included London, Paris and Jamaica, she said.

"He was systematically being thrown out of all the NATO countries," Smith said.

Smith, who expects 100-150 people to attend, said Agee will be analyzing why the United States supports counterrevolutionary forces.

BOARD REASSERTS POSITION

Religion policy remains intact for I.C. schools

William Pepper
The Daily Iowan

Despite months of debate, the Iowa City School Board reaffirmed its position on not revising the district's 20-year-old religion policy at a work session with the district's Equity / Affirmative Action Committee Tuesday night.

Last fall, a group of Iowa City parents criticized the district for not allowing such religious items as Christmas trees in the schools and for discouraging children from wearing Halloween costumes that depict groups such as hobos, African-Americans or witches because they might be offensive to other students.

The policy was last reviewed by the district in 1989. At Tuesday's meeting, committee member Del Holland quoted the line from the policy which reads, "With respect to matters of religion, the district is neutral." He said the committee agreed with this statement.

"With one exception, the committee members back the policy as it is," he said.

Board members agreed the district is not an appropriate place to celebrate religions because of the risk of offending some students but stressed that educating students about religion is important.

Superintendent Barb Grohe said teaching the history of all religions is a more balanced way to educate students because celebrating some holidays means excluding others. "By the time you're done, you've offended just about everyone," she said.

Board member Betsy Hawtrey, however, said it was unfortunate that the district could not at least endorse religion as good for society.

"Religion is a very personal response to your maker, creator or power out there, whatever you call it," she said. "It's too bad we can't say something about spirituality, but I'm not sure the school can do that."

Board members said they understood the problem teachers face in deciding how much or how little to say about religion.

In response to that problem, Doug Jones, parent of a child at Lincoln Elementary, suggested that teachers approach the issue of religion the way politics is taught, by presenting all the viewpoints without advocating one over the other.

"We demand that the school educate them about politics and help them learn to take a stand, and we somehow manage to do this without advocating a particular platform," he said.

Board members advocated increasing the discussion of the religion policy between the district and the community.

"We could always say the policy is the policy and we don't want to talk about it," board member George Matheson said. "Or we could do what we've done and encourage a dialogue."

CONFLICTS OF INTEREST REVIEWED

UI to form ad hoc committee to update research policies

Holly Reinhardt
The Daily Iowan

An ad hoc committee to review a preliminary conflict of interest policy will be formed soon, Stephana Colbert, senior associate counselor for research, told the UI Faculty Council Tuesday.

David Skorton, UI vice president for research, said efforts are currently being made to work out a policy.

Colbert has led a committee in an effort to gather information and draft a conflict of interest policy for the University Operations Manual, prior to the release of guidelines for federal funding by the National Institutes of Health.

Skorton said the policy works as a security for federal agencies that provide money.

"One way to look at it is the assurances that the university has to give to federal funding agencies of various kinds to keep receiving funds," Skorton said.

Federal guidelines were supposed to be outlined by the NIH last December, but those guidelines have yet to be announced. It may be 1995 before federal guidelines are released, Skorton said.

"They will be rules about assurances related to searching for financial conflicts of interest," he said.

Colbert said the committee will work to gather information and faculty input.

"I would hope that the development of policy in the form of what goes into the manual is not simply done with input from the faculty, but with consent from the faculty."

Richard Hurtig, vice president of the UI Faculty Council

"Basically to this point what we have done is gather information — what the law is, what the university policy is today, what other colleges and universities have been doing, and what our best guess what the government will do," she said.

Richard Hurtig, vice president of the Faculty Council, was concerned that the faculty have input into the policy.

"I would hope that the development of policy in the form of what goes into the manual is not simply done with input from the faculty, but with consent from the faculty," he said.

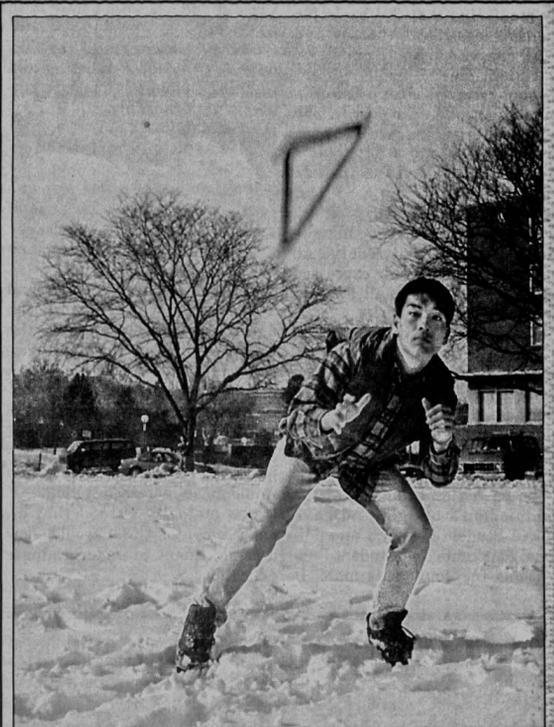

A preliminary draft of the policy has been formed, Colbert said. Currently, the committee is working to solicit input from faculty members.

However, Skorton explained that some of the policy will not be up for discussion.

"There is a certain piece of what we have to do that is going to be mandated by federal rules and regulations that won't be up for discussion. We're going to have to meet certain requirements," he said. "Beyond that we want to have not only faculty, but staff input."

Colbert said the ad hoc committee to review the draft will be formed within the next two weeks.

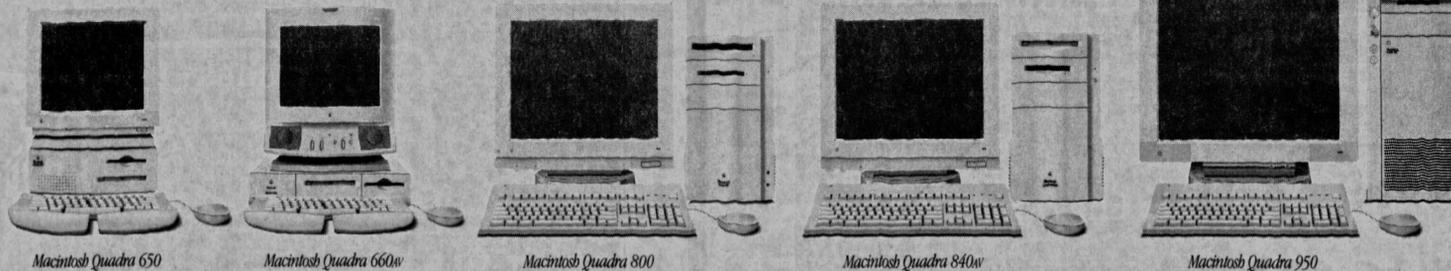

"What we have done to this point is to develop a framework," she said. "How we do it, how we implement it and what form it takes is where all the input from other elements of the university will come into play."

U.S.-JAPAN RIVALRY POSES RISKS

UI profs warn of trade tensions

Tory Brecht
The Daily Iowan

With a failed trade agreement between Japan and the United States and grumbling from U.S. corporations about closed markets, some economists fear the war of words between the two economic powers may develop into a full-blown trade war.

In a poll of 14 UI economics department faculty, it was unanimously agreed that a trade war with Japan would be a mistake for both countries.

Gary Fethke, dean of the UI College of Business Administration, said the bashing of Japan is for the most part unfounded and that the trade deficit is a symptom of the United States being fiscally irresponsible in saving.

"Someone once said that the United States has decided to eat our lunch at breakfast," Fethke said. "We consume more than we produce and leave the debt to future generations. The problem with this is that these generations have no say in the matter."

Fethke said the United States is dangerously close to a trade war with Japan and that trade restrictions go against stated economic policies of the past few years.

"We have been advocates of free trade, we've passed GATT and NAFTA," he said. "It seems to be a misguided mistake to threaten quotas and sanctions against one of our strongest trading partners. Free trade is helpful for everyone."

Fethke said the trade deficit has actually decreased to around 2 percent of the U.S. gross domestic product in the last 18 months.

Economic historian Donald McCloskey warned that the tough talk against Japan could lead to disastrous results.

"The metaphor of war is bad and dangerous," McCloskey said. "The 'war' talk was a contributing factor to actual war between Britain and Germany in 1914 and Japan and the United States in 1941. For all the ink spilt, Japanese-American trade is small potatoes compared with the trade we do with ourselves inside the country."

UI economics Professor Ray Riezman said the Japanese feel they have been unfairly singled out for blame regarding the United States' trade deficit.

"We borrow a lot," Riezman said. "They feel like they're being blamed for something that is not their fault."

Riezman said even if the U.S. government attempted to sway the practices of the Japanese government, markets would not necessarily open up in Japan for U.S. products.

"There are firms there that produce those products, and they will pressure the Japanese government not to open up the market for our products," he said.

Both Riezman and Fethke said U.S. practices, such as subsidizing farmers, close American markets to foreign competition. They agreed that if the United States wants to shrink the deficit, spending must be curbed — something the Japanese have no control over.

Riezman said a trade war will occur if the United States starts keeping Japanese imports out of the country and the Japanese retaliate by denying American imports.

It is a scenario UI economists say they would not like to see.

"A trade war would be irrational," Riezman said. "But irrational things happen all the time. We know from history that no one wins a war — and that's what would happen. Both countries would lose."

PROPOSAL CONSIDERABLY TONED DOWN

Lawmakers push family time bill

Mike Glover
Associated Press

DES MOINES — Schools got a little prodding Tuesday to offer a weekly respite from the games, recitals, plays, banquets and meetings that dominate life for Iowa's schoolchildren — and their parents.

The reason, a group of legislators say, is that "America's future depends on the strengthening of the family."

"It's basically a good family preservation bill," Rep. Robert Brunkhorst, R-Waverly, said.

Brunkhorst is one of five legislators who introduced a bill urging schools and high-school athletic associations not to schedule extracurricular activities after 6 p.m. on Wednesdays.

Wednesday night is the evening for midweek church services and Brunkhorst said that's a factor.

But there is a broader issue, he said.

"Families need time in their schedules, a dedicated time to spend with their children," he said. "This would allow that."

Church is only one way to spend the evening, he said.

"They can play games together, they can read books, they can go out on a tour," he said. "They also might want to have religious activities."

The bill, as introduced, is substantially scaled back from an initial proposal that would have required schools to grant the night off. Now it's a nonbinding resolution asking schools and athletic associations to take a look at the idea — beginning with the 1995-96 academic year.

"I toned it down," conceded Brunkhorst.

The proposal doesn't have a great future in a Legislature that has passed the halfway point, but Brunkhorst said it would give parents a little extra ammunition when they talk to school officials about getting a break for at least one night.

"This is taking a little of local control away from school districts, but it gives parents a little bit more power when they talk to their school districts," Brunkhorst said.

TUZLA AIRPORT TO OPEN

Associated Press

A U.S. A-10 warplane takes off Tuesday from the NATO air base in Aviano, Italy, for a mission over Bosnia to enforce the U.N. no-fly zone. Two American F-16 fighter jets operating out of Aviano shot down four Bosnian Serb aircraft violating the zone while bombing targets Monday.

Serbs pledge way for aid flights under NATO, Russian leverage

Samir Krilic

Associated Press

SARAJEVO, Bosnia-Herzegovina - Under the gun from NATO and pressured by their Russian allies, Bosnian Serbs agreed Tuesday to open Tuzla airport to relief flights that could feed hundreds of thousands of civilians.

The decision to reopen the airfield was the crucial first step to beginning a relief airlift to the 800,000 people, many of them refugees, in and around the besieged Muslim city.

It was also the second major concession the Bosnian Serbs have made in as many weeks, demonstrating the results of NATO resolve to enforce U.N. resolutions. NATO jets shot down four Bosnian Serb fighters violating the no-fly zone Monday and had threatened also to open Tuzla airport by force.

Bosnian Serb leader Radovan Karadzic had opposed opening the airport because he believed arms could be smuggled to the Muslims controlling it. But he made the concession following talks in Moscow with Russian Foreign Minister Andrei Kozyrev.

Washington was pleased.

"I think the Russians are trying to further the peace process," said White House press secretary Dee Dee Myers. "I think they're trying to be helpful."

The Muslim-led government and Bosnian Croats, meanwhile, agreed Tuesday on the framework for establishing a federation. The United States has spearheaded efforts to push the former allies back together.

"It shows that peace is possible," U.S. Secretary of State Warren Christopher said at a signing ceremony Monday night in Washington.

The Muslims and Croats will combine the territory they control in Bosnia into a federation with a central government responsible for foreign affairs, defense and commerce.

The next step would be to induce the Bosnian Serbs, who have captured about 70 percent of the former Yugoslav republic, to agree to a two-republic state. Under the U.S. plan, the federation of Muslims and Croats would also seek economic ties with Croatia.

The former allies against Serbia recently signed a cease-fire to quell bitter fighting in central Bosnia. The cease-fire appeared to be holding for a fourth day despite reports of sporadic gunfire.

But the head of the U.N. operation in former Yugoslavia, Yasushi Akashi, said he needed 4,000-5,000 more U.N. troops to enforce the truce. He flew Tuesday by helicopter to Tuzla from Vitez in central Bosnia.

Elsewhere:

• Serbs were reportedly continuing attacks on the northern enclave of Maglaj. Gen. Rasim Delic, commander of Bosnian government forces, said many of the Serb artillery pieces pulled out from around Sarajevo were targeting Maglaj.

The United Nations planned to send a convoy to Maglaj today but was still awaiting Serb permission to pass through Serb territory. The last to reach the 19,000 people there was October.

Bosnian radio also reported heavy Serb attacks on northwestern Bihac and said there were large numbers of dead and wounded.

HOUSE TO CONSIDER IDENTICAL PROPOSAL

Balanced budget amendment deliberated, defeated in Senate

David Espo

Associated Press

WASHINGTON - Falling four votes shy of a two-thirds majority, the Senate on Tuesday rejected a balanced budget amendment to the Constitution that supporters said would end the government's staggering run-up of red ink.

The 63-37 vote capped a debate that blended constitutional and economic arguments on an issue that Congress has wrestled with for more than a decade.

"We must not feed the nation this poison pill," Sen. Robert Byrd, D-W.Va., said shortly before the final vote. He said the amendment would damage the Constitution's balance of powers and undermine majority rule without necessarily erasing deficits.

But Sen. Paul Simon, D-Ill., countered that for "25 years in a row we have had deficits" and said the national debt has grown steadily in his two decades in Congress. Sooner or later, he warned, the government would resort to printing "funny money" to sustain that debt. "We ought to stop this before we get to the edge of the cliff."

Forty-one Republicans and 22 Democrats voted in favor of the amendment. Thirty-four Democrats and three Republicans were opposed.

There was one surprise: Sen. Harlan Matthews of Tennessee. Appointed to fill Vice President Al Gore's seat and not a candidate for re-election, he voted against the amendment even though he was a co-sponsor.

The House is expected to vote on an identical amendment at mid-month, and supporters there are within striking distance of a two-thirds majority. Regardless of the outcome, Senate Majority Leader George Mitchell said the issue would "absolutely not" return to the Senate floor this year.

Although close, the final Senate vote was largely drained of suspense. Sponsors said in advance they were likely to lose, despite a $4.5 trillion debt, to opposition that included the White House, Mitchell and Byrd, the 76-year-old chairman of the Appropriations Committee who patrolled the Senate floor for a week countering each argument made by supporters.

On a vote of 78-22, the Senate earlier brushed aside a milder version of the amendment, sponsored by Sen. Harry Reid, D-Nev., that would have sheltered Social Security from budget-cutters and permitted borrowing for permanent government projects such as highways and buildings. It also would have made it easier to run a deficit in a time of recession.

Many Republicans scorned it as a loophole-ridden proposal that would do little to rein in deficits and charged it was designed to siphon off support from their own proposal. "It is not a serious balanced budget amendment," said Sen. Orrin Hatch, R-Utah.

Backers bristled at the suggestion they were playing politics with the Constitution and said their approach was patterned after the type of restrictions that many states operate under.

Seven Democrats voted for Reid's alternative and then opposed the other version. They include Joseph Biden of Delaware; Kent Conrad of North Dakota; Barbara Boxer of California; Russell Feingold of Wisconsin; Tom Harkin of Iowa; Reid and Matthews.

The amendment would forbid a deficit unless three-fifths of both houses of Congress vote otherwise. The proposal would take effect in 2001, and Congress could waive the requirements in wartime.

With a vote approaching, President Clinton expressed opposition. "It runs the risk of endangering our economic recovery by requiring excessive tax increases, or very damaging cuts in defense or investments in technology and job training, or Medicare and Social Security," he told reporters at the White House.

The final day's debate blended constitutional and economic argument.

Since last Tuesday, said Sen. Dirk Kempthorne, R-Idaho, "we've paid $3.2 billion in interest. That $3.2 billion could have reduced taxes $40 ... for every tax-paying family. We're talking real money."

Opponents countered the amendment would upset the Constitution's balance of powers - to the detriment of Congress - and damage the economy.

Study blames traffic jams for heart attack deaths

Brenda Coleman

Associated Press

CHICAGO - Bad traffic is chiefly to blame for the dismal survival rate of anyone whose heart stops in a major U.S. city, a new study says.

"If you are talking about getting to the hospital, the ball game is over. Anybody who recovers is usually resuscitated in the street," Dr. Gary Lombardi, the study's lead author, said by phone Tuesday.

Researchers suggested that more police officers, firefighters and lay people need training in lifesaving techniques and equipment.

The study found that between October 1990 and April 1991, only 14 of 100 people in New York City survived after all types of cardiac arrest outside a hospital.

A Chicago study last year showed only 1.3 of 100 people survived under similar circumstances, Lombardi and his team reported in today's issue of The Journal of the American Medical Association.

Researchers compared survival rates in New York and Chicago to other areas by looking at a certain type of cardiac arrest - ventricular fibrillation witnessed by a bystander.

The survival rate for that type of cardiac arrest, in decreasing order of population density, was: New York City, 5.3 percent; Chicago, 4 percent; midsize suburban and urban areas, 33 percent; and suburban and rural areas, 12.6 percent, the researchers said.

TERRITORIAL DISPUTES

Exercise in futility

This land is ours. It belongs to us. These are the kinds of phrases that seem to come out of those beleaguered spots in the world where there are territorial disputes. In Bosnia and in Israel, two of the most violent centers of such disputes at present, the ongoing warfare is terrible to witness, but what is at least as distressing for those watching these conflicts is the sense that finding permanent solutions for them is such a remote possibility.

What do you do when two sets of people have staked out claims to the same land? For arbitrators trying to help out with peace negotiations, deciding whose claim is more justified seems a futile exercise. Even if one party clearly has the better claim, discovering this has no practical purpose if people on the other side of the dispute have the means to hold onto or influence territories that they feel are rightfully theirs.

It seems downright impossible to convince people that the land they live on is not theirs and that they should leave. As the Israeli-Palestinian conflict suggests, claims that have been ceded once may become matters of dispute again years, even centuries, later. Once a group of people has set up shop in a certain area, probably nothing will convince them that they do not belong there. If one group can marshal enough forces to kick the invaders / heathens / infidels off of land that it wants, what's to prevent the exiles from returning, better armed, to reclaim their lost territories?

Forcing resettlement on anyone seems to bring out such a plethora of anxieties and difficulties that any efforts at it seem doomed to failure. The forced resettlement of American Indians, the only example that comes to mind of such a thing being sustained over a long period of time, was not only an inhumane and unjust act, it also probably would never have "worked" had not diseases brought over from Europe decimated the American Indian population. Other disputes over land have shown the participants singularly undisposed to move anywhere. It might be easier, for example, for Catholics in Northern Ireland to move south and not have to put up with a bunch of overbearing Protestants and British police officers. It might be easier, but that clearly hasn't made them all pack their bags.

This is why the massacre of more than 45 worshippers in a Hebron mosque last Friday, horrific and sickening as that act was, should not have been a complete surprise. Israeli settlers in the occupied Palestinian territories are completely opposed to the notion of leaving, and this may have less to do with religious fervor than with some perverse but tenacious part of human nature.

Efforts at solving territorial disputes should be directed toward having groups share, rather than divide, land, resources and governing power. The notion that everyone on earth can learn to live together in a spirit of peace and harmony is so hopeless as to be a joke to most of us; but it is a possibility which seems no less remote than that of getting people to leave a place that they think is their own.

Stop indiscriminate tossing of trash

To the Editor:

As I make my travels each day on and around campus, I find it appalling the amount of trash that others leave behind. Some examples that come to mind are the newspapers blowing in the wind near the bus stop, the cigarette butts on the steps of the Pentacrest buildings and the downtown Pedestrian Mall, and the trays of half-eaten food left behind on the tables of the Wheel-room. The problem, I believe, is that there is a group of undetermined size that is lazy and inconsiderate of others.

Few will disagree that it takes a minimal amount of physical effort to carry a cigarette butt 50 feet or less, lift it 1 foot and drop it in a receptacle. Likewise, little time is expended. For those with little time and effort to spare, one can collect a few until he or she is ready to make the trip. Newspapers and sandwich bags require a little more effort, but the difference is negligible. There is no excuse for the laziness shown by throwing trash on the ground.

I find these acts to be terribly inconsiderate. It is obvious what an eyesore these acts create but consider some other, less obvious, damage created. What impression does this leave on visitors to the university? How do the permanent residents of Iowa City feel? How many students realize that $717,719.65 was spent cleaning up the university last year? That figure includes labor, supplies and equipment associated with refuse cleanup and was obtained from the Physical Plant. Granted, not all was spent picking up litter, but how many scholarships could have been funded with the money that was? I find it amazing how such a simple act can have such a wide-spread impact.

It is difficult to show sympathy for the students complaining about AUR in the Feb. 24 edition of the DI. The problem was created by residents for residents. It seems more logical to bring the problem to the door of those who created it. Forcing management to deal with it is bound to have some impact on rent in the future.

I hope I can spur others to think twice before inconsiderately tossing their trash to the wind. They may find gratifying the respect one earns by respecting others.

Clipper Chip plans need to be trashed

President Clinton repeatedly has talked about wanting to promote America's high-tech exports. His administration, however, wants to take a step that would have the exact opposite effect of decreasing the sales of American products abroad.

The administration's ill-advised plan to require installation of a special chip in every telephone and computer manufactured in the United States would ensure that the sales of such products abroad would plummet.

The special chip — known as the "Clipper Chip" — would enable snooping federal authorities to intercept computer and coded telephone communications. Any sensible buyer — both at home and abroad — inevitably will look elsewhere for computers and telephones, if "Made in America" means that the devices are easy prey for electronic spying by the U.S. government.

The Clipper Chip had its origin in the Bush administration. The FBI and other federal law enforcement agencies became concerned that digital communications were able to defy traditional wiretapping techniques.

Although law enforcement officials have legitimate concerns, the solution they now advocate is dubious and a flagrant violation of fundamental privacy rights. The federal law enforcement community wants the government to require all manufacturers to produce telecommunication products that would allow federal authorities to decipher the streams of digital information.

The Clinton administration should have dismissed this proposal out of hand but has chosen to treat it as just another milestone in the development of the information highway.

Although the administration apparently is not going to require manufacturers to install Clipper Chips, it reportedly will strongly encourage the computer industry to adopt the chip as standard. This may seem less heavy-handed. But the impact would be the same.

The government would include the Clipper Chip in its specifications for purchasing computers. The immense purchasing power of the privacy will be respected when the temptation to snoop will be far greater than it is now. Far more than conversations would be at risk. Everything from bank records to e-mail messages would be vulnerable.

Although law enforcement and the National Security Agency, the super-secret agency that spies on communications overseas, seem to be pinning their hopes on the Clipper Chip, they ought to think again.

The Clipper Chip is not a panacea. Every time there has been a technological advance in decoding electronic data, it has been countered by improvements in protecting the data from snooping.

Computer enthusiasts who are devoted to civil liberties are developing new software to shield computers from prying and are distributing it free over various computer networks.

The government should not stop this and, indeed, cannot stop it — unless officials turn to totalitarian tactics that are unacceptable in a free society.

It is only natural for computer users to try to protect themselves from snooping — whether by government or by private individuals. If the government insists on pursuing the Clipper Chip, those who want protection — whether they be honest citizens or criminals — will buy computers or acquire safeguarding software.

The Clipper Chip is a technological cul-de-sac off the information highway. The administration should abandon its misguided plan to force the Clipper Chip on America's high-tech industry.

The Clipper Chip is not a panacea. Every time there has been a technological advance in decoding electronic data, it has been countered by improvements in protecting the data from snooping.

government would have the effect of forcing manufacturers to put the Clipper Chip in all their products.

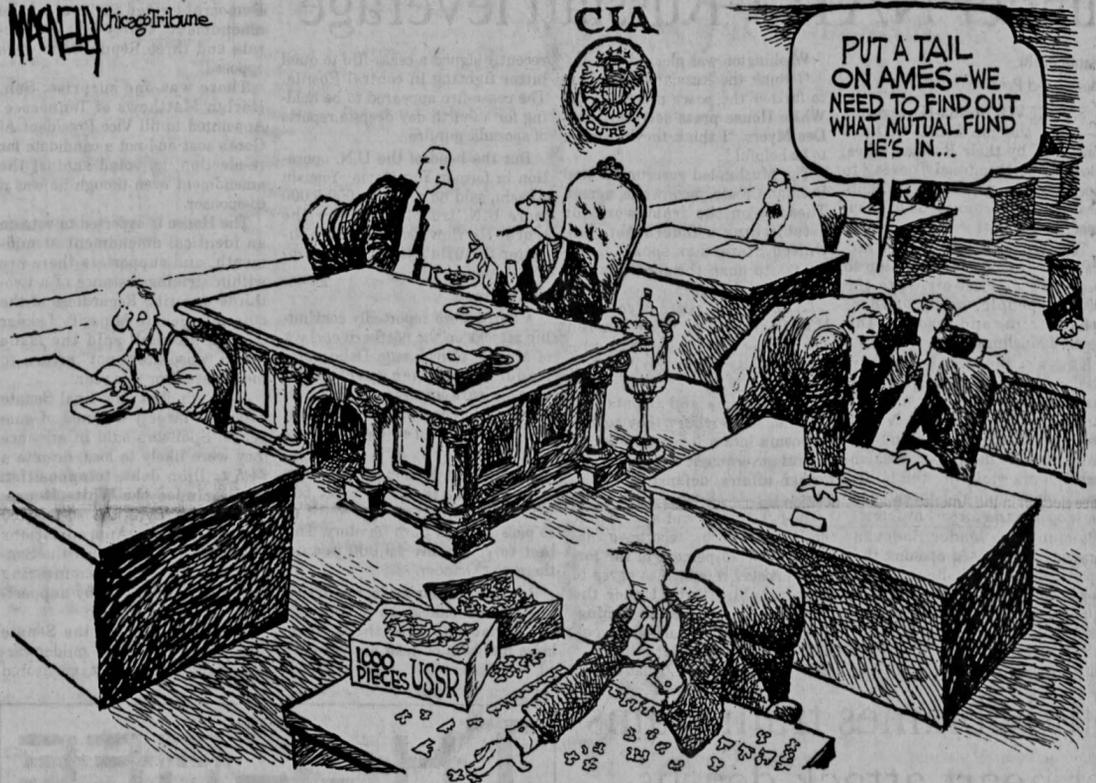

Not only would government agencies be required to buy computers with the Clipper Chip, anyone wanting to do business with the government could be forced to do the same.

In theory, two agencies — the National Institute of Standards and Technology and the Treasury Department — would safeguard the mathematical keys needed for the Clipper Chips. Supposedly, the keys would not be used unless federal agents obtain court permission to proceed.

But government has a checkered record in privacy matters. There is no assurance that

Unionization of TAs could be bitter medicine

Remember the traveling salesmen of the 1800s? They would travel around the countryside, hawking their wares to anyone who would buy them. The most infamous were the ones who sold magic "elixirs," guaranteed to cure "anythin' that ails ye." These elixirs often left people much sicker than before they ingested them. For a while, these elixirs gave medicine a bad name.

Things haven't changed much in the 1990s. Anyone who is trying to convince others that theirs is the best way will emphasize the potential benefits while downplaying the potential or real costs that might arise from enactment of their preferred course of action.

At the UI, this modus operandi is evident in the effort to organize graduate students into a union. We have heard much about the potential benefits of a graduate assistant union: We are told that a union will be able to bargain for higher stipends, more assistantships (through standardized working hours), better health-care coverage and formal grievance procedures.

While I do not take issue with the goals espoused by the effort to unionize, I do take issue with the dearth of discussion about the potential costs of such a strategy for both undergraduates and graduate students. It is time to begin discussing those potential costs. To those ends, I offer this disclaimer: CAUTION — THE FOLLOWING DISCUSSION IS LACED WITH VERIFIABLE FACTS.

One potential benefit espoused by the unionization effort is that the number of assistantships at the UI might actually increase. The logic is that the union will negotiate a standard number of hours for all assistantships based on appointments (i.e., 20 hours per week for a half-time assistant). Apparently, there is enough disparity in hours worked that such a standardization will increase the number of assistantships required to fill the current level of demand for their services. At the same time, the union will be successfully negotiating higher stipends and better (read "more expensive") health-care coverage for assistants. What is overlooked is that available resources are not growing at a rate sufficient to cover envisioned gains: The pie is not getting bigger fast enough. Simple mathematics tells that, with a constant sized whole, larger sized portions decrease the number of portions.

The record at other universities bears this out. Wisconsin and Michigan, two comparable universities where graduate assistants have unionized, have increased the net compensation of their assistants; respectively, they rank No. 1 and 2 in the Big Ten. They have paid a price, however. Both schools saw a drop in the number of supported Teaching Assistants. Over the past 10 years, these gains have cost Wisconsin 650 assistants. Meanwhile, the UI has kept the number of supported assistants relatively constant; in 1992-93, it ranked first among six comparable Big Ten institutions. In the same year, Wisconsin ranked fifth and Michigan ranked third.

The benefits the union procures will come right out of the UI's pocket. Failing to find state money from Des Moines, funding can come from only two sources, reallocations of UI general education funds or tuition increases. The UI has pledged to reallocate funds to help pay for the cost of the plan. Tuition and fee increases will hurt undergraduates and non-assistants right where it hurts the most — their wallets.

It is obvious what this might mean for graduate assistants; not all positions may be as secure as the union might have us think. Some graduate assistants may be victims of the union's "success." Undergraduates have a stake in this as well. If this trend were to take hold at Iowa, one might expect the student-to-TA ratio to soar. This would have serious implications for the quality of undergraduate education. This university has pledged, as part of the Plan to Revitalize Graduate Education, to bring net compensation of UI assistants to third in the Big Ten WITHOUT sacrificing positions.

The benefits the union procures will come right out of the UI's pocket. Failing to find state money from Des Moines, funding can come from only two sources, reallocations of UI general education funds or tuition increases. The UI has pledged to reallocate funds to help pay for the cost of the plan. Tuition and fee increases will hurt undergraduates and non-assistants right where it hurts the most — their wallets.

Perhaps the most troublesome potential cost to unionizing graduate assistants is the possibility of a distinct change in the collegial atmosphere at the UI. Unions are inherently adversarial organizations. While it is true that Iowa law prohibits strikes, one can only wonder how a disgruntled Teaching Assistant might channel his or her angst.

There is a real cost involved in unionizing dues. While Iowa is an "open-shop" state and union members are not required to pay dues, unions need dues to survive. Assistants who choose to pay dues will be paying about $10 per month. Collection of dues would probably begin in the fall of 1994, yet, if the union is approved, any benefits from it would not be seen by assistants until the 1995-96 academic year. This means that assistants might have to "ante up" $120 apiece for potential gains BEFORE they are even realized. I prefer to pay for a service AFTER it has been rendered.

Currently, I do not support the idea of a union for graduate assistants. I have come to this decision by weighing the potential benefits against the potential costs. I encourage all undergraduates and graduates to weigh the arguments on BOTH sides before making a decision on whether to support the efforts of COGS-SEIU. Making informed, not impassioned, choices is the way to better policy. Do not allow yourself to be wooed by the snake oil salesman's claim that it will "cure anythin' that ails ye." Before ingesting what could be some painfully bitter medicine, stop, step back and make an informed choice.

J. Mark Wrighton, a Teaching Assistant and graduate student in the Department of Political Science, submitted this guest opinion for publication.

Hands off the IISO

To the Editor:
Did Steve Barrett, the weekend night manager at the Union, find what he was looking for when he went rummaging through the IISO office? And what if he did find a few stickers or leaflets that IISO members who also are members of the Campaign for Academic Freedom might have left in the office overnight? Does this show that the IISO and the CAF were "sharing office space"? Regardless, such bureaucratic maneuvering in an attempt to deprive the IISO of its status as a student organization is not surprising. The IISO rubs the university administration the wrong way because of its ostensible "socialist" politics. It's natural to assume that the administration would like to eject them by any means necessary.

What should be pointed out is that Barrett was observed and confronted during his search. Suppose he wasn't caught? What else might he have been looking for? Membership lists? Contact sheets? Who else might he have given that information to? This incident should send a chill through every student group on campus. Hands off the IISO!

Search demonstrates disregard for First Amendment

To the Editor:
As a member of the diverse UI community, I wish to express outrage over the recent and unauthorized search by the university of the office of a student group, the Iowa International Socialists Organization. There is little doubt that the IISO has caused more than one headache for the UI administration and campus security. It is easy to have an intellectual concept of freedom of speech; however, when the exercise of that right is directed at one personally, it seems not so easy to accept. Chanting and the disruption of meetings goes against the grain of civility that is a part of certain educated classes. I was not surprised, therefore, to see priggish and annoyed expressions by some regents and UI administrators when they were confronted by chanters protesting the regents' homophobic and mandated policy governing classroom teaching materials. Some of those ruling class members looked as if they believed they would contract some kind of fatal disease if the contact with the proletariat got any closer than the 4 feet the unarmed campus security was managing to maintain without difficulty.

What conclusions can be drawn by a late night ransacking of the IISO office following on the heels of the protest? One that comes immediately to mind is that the UI would like to see perceived troublemakers rounded up and driven off campus and that whatever can be done to see that happen is justified — even if it constitutes illegal search and seizure as well as total disregard for rights guaranteed by the First Amendment.

The UI should conduct a full investigation into this unjustifiable attack on a student organization and fire or severely reprimand all those responsible for such action.

Advice for local conspiracy theorists

To the Editor:
Hey, Paul Boulay and all you freaks at IISO, listen up! So you think the DI and the university are out to get you. A few words of advice for you terminally worthless and weak. Try weaning yourselves off that steady diet of Oliver Stone films you've been feeding yourselves. You and Ollie are starting to sound ancient with this constant babble of everything in life being a "conspiracy." The only thing missing from your story were a couple of guys named Ruby and Oswald — Lee Harvey, you are a madman. Donna Flayhan, you can play Jim Garrison, because you're about as paranoid and act like some varmint from Louisiana. Paul Boulay, you can play yourself — if you know what I mean.

I'll call you and your organization alarmists, reactionists, but most of all I'll call you vain. You must think highly of your poser organization to think the DI or the university would waste their time coming up with something this elaborate.

Maybe Marvin Berenstein wasn't that far off when he mentioned the thought of arming campus security guards. Better yet, why not just declare open season on socialists? It would fit nicely between duck and deer and limit the socialist population.

This is one student who didn't consider the DI's reporting to be a "dis-service." However, I do consider having rodents like Flayhan and Boulay on this campus scary and disgraceful.

Paul, Donna and all you other tortured souls, do me a favor and PEACE OUT!

Column focused on sleaze, not issues

To the Editor:
The truest statement in David M. Mastio's column on Feb. 21 was in the second paragraph: "... truth, as usual, is the first casualty."

Mastio appears to believe that: 1) Johnson County politics are dominated by the university, 2) university staff and students are somehow less worthy of participation in county politics than Democratic Party insiders and 3) a free election in the American tradition would be "paradoxically undemocratic," whatever that means.

Mastio further contends that "according to Democratic Party insiders," Pat Gilroy would be the beneficiary of Tom Slockett's support for a special election. Now, Tom Slockett has earned himself a good amount of respect in the community and in the Democratic Party, but I hardly think he could be said to dominate the reconvened party convention. Likewise, Pat Gilroy would be a worthy candidate for office, but it's farfetched to believe that the party convention's decision has already been made.

After that, the column deteriorates into an ad hominem tirade that is cruel, untrue and unfair to a person who has made the contributions to this community that Pat Gilroy has made.

I think Pat would make a fine addition to the Johnson County Board of Supervisors. I'm for a democratic election, and, if she is fairly chosen by the party convention, I will be proud to vote for her. I agree with Pat that people ought to be paying attention to issues and this kind of sleaze just stands in the way.

Discussion goes beyond bounds of good taste

To the Editor:
I am fully aware that the editorial page is held to a different standard than "hard" news. I further realize that David Mastio's stock-in-trade is outrageous statements intended to generate strong response. I do not question in any way his right to express his opinions on the Johnson County Democratic Party, the Board of Supervisors' appointment process or the possibility of a special election. I am not even questioning his right to focus on Pat Gilroy's record of public service. That is the price public-spirited citizens are willing to pay. But Mr. Mastio egregiously crossed the line, even for him, when he discussed personal and private matters in Ms. Gilroy's family. Mastio is a young man, and I hope his life has not yet been touched by personal tragedy. Perhaps as he gains some life experience, he will also learn some lessons about compassion, privacy and good taste.

New experimental medication might delay Gehrig's disease

Daniel Q. Haney
Associated Press

BOSTON — An experimental new drug appears to be the first to slow the fatal progression of Lou Gehrig's disease, the illness that until now has defied all attempts at treatment.

The medicine, called riluzole, is not a cure. But a study financed by the maker of riluzole found it seemed to delay crippling symptoms and death.

"Survival almost doubled in some patients. That's just unheard of," commented Dr. Jeffrey Rothstein of Johns Hopkins University, who is co-directing another larger study of the treatment.

Rothstein described riluzole as "a big, big step" in the treatment of Lou Gehrig's disease.

A drug that has any effect would be noteworthy. At present, there is no treatment for the illness, formally known as amyotrophic lateral sclerosis, or ALS. Victims' life expectancy has changed little since the disease killed Gehrig, the Yankees' first baseman, in 1941.

The disease is rare but has had prominent victims, including U.S. Sen. Jacob Javits, actor David Niven and singer Dennis Day.

ALS is a nerve disease that robs people of muscle control, resulting in weakness and wasting. Eventually, victims lose all control of their muscles, including breathing and swallowing. Survival averages three or four years, although some victims live with the disease for decades. About one or two cases are diagnosed for every 100,000 people in the United States annually.

The latest study was financed by the French pharmaceutical firm

Rhone-Poulenc Rorer, which developed riluzole (pronounced rill-you-zoll). It was conducted by Dr. Gilbert Bensimon and others from Hopital de la Pitie-Salpetriere in Paris and is being published in Thursday's issue of the New England Journal of Medicine.

Whether this drug will turn out to play a major role in the illness remains to be seen. Some experts are skeptical and worry that the initial study's seemingly positive findings could have been a statistical fluke.

"We don't know how it works, and quite honestly, we don't know if it works," commented Dr. Stanley Appel of Baylor College of Medicine in Houston.

He said he feared the study will raise false hopes that "could set patients back emotionally and physically."

RELEASE

Israeli sources were optimistic that the suspended talks will resume after Prime Minister Yitzhak Rabin's government offered a new package of concessions that go partway toward meeting PLO demands.

Western and Arab diplomats in Tunis, the PLO's headquarters, said Israel's concessions include strengthening a Palestinian police force being deployed under the Sept. 13 PLO-Israeli peace accord in what will be self-rule areas in Gaza and the West Bank town of Jericho. Israel also would disarm settlers in those areas.

Officials said the government also has offered to allow international observers into the territories for the first time since Israel captured them in the 1967 Mideast War. The PLO wants a multinational protection force.

Israeli officials indicated the observers would be empowered to supervise Israel's military withdrawal from Gaza and Jericho and oversee the handover of authority to Palestinians.

Gad Yaacobi, Israel's U.N. ambassador, told Israel radio, "They won't have a military presence or have the power to interfere."

Israel has ignored U.N. Security Council resolutions demanding it withdraw from the occupied territories.

Rabin has ruled out putting the future of Jewish settlements on the agenda now, a key PLO demand. But some Cabinet ministers appear more flexible and proposed closing settlements in Hebron and other heavily populated Arab areas.

In Washington, Robert Pelletreau, assistant secretary of state for Near East affairs, said the PLO should accept the concessions "if they implement them fully and the implementation goes beyond tokenism to really address the question of militant settlers."

Yasser Arafat, chairman of the Palestine Liberation Organization, met with top advisers overnight in Tunis to consider the offer.

The violence touched off by the massacre seemed to be abating Tuesday. But the chief of staff, Lt. Gen. Ehud Barak, warned that Arab "revenge attacks" are expected.

Two guerrillas were killed Tuesday in an abortive raid on Israel's self-styled "security zone" in south Lebanon, the second such attack since the massacre. For the first time, the army released its figures on the number killed in Hebron, listing 35 Palestinian fatalities rather than the 39 reported earlier by Israel radio.

The army said 30 were killed in the mosque by the Jewish gunman, New York-born Baruch Goldstein, with five others killed in clashes with troops elsewhere in the town Friday.

Palestinian organizations say 50 men and boys were slain inside the mosque. Hebron hospital checked by the Associated Press reported 49 slain in the West Bank town Friday, including the mosque.

By AP count, the overall death toll since Friday now stands at 64, with about 400 wounded.

One prisoner released Tuesday, 23-year-old Fuad Ali Hamad, said he hoped the peace accord would be salvaged.

"I think the settler who killed those Palestinians in the mosque wanted to kill the peace process. But I hope it won't be killed," he said.

Most of those freed had served the bulk of their sentences. At least 8,200 Palestinians remain behind bars.

maintaining their privacy. There are 13,681 e-mail addresses registered in the UI's central e-mail directory. However, Chris Pruess, manager of the Weeg Computer Center User Support Center, said that number doesn't include all e-mailers on campus.

UI freshman Courtney Ward said she signed the petition and has passed it on to several fellow e-mailers.

"I pass it on to anyone I talk to. It is something they ought to be aware of," she said.

Ward questions the government's rights to look into her transactions, and she wonders how far they will go.

"What else are they going to start looking into?" Ward said.

UI senior Lee Brindle agreed.

"The government is basically setting a precedent that our citizens don't have the right to communicate privately," he said. While Clipper's main focus is not currently e-mail, Brindle said the potential is there.

"Clipper is targeted at phone conversations. It's really not targeted for e-mail yet," he said. "Clipper will allow the government to unlock e-mail. It just depends on how much you trust the authorities."

Anne Enright-Shepherd, spokeswoman for the National Institute of Standards and Technology, said the Escrowed Encryption Standard is by no means mandatory, although it will be highly recommended.

"EES is a federal information processing standard, but it is voluntary," she said. "Administration sources say it won't become mandatory."

According to Enright-Shepherd, Clipper is mainly for targeting criminals.

"It has been promoted largely because of the law enforcement effects it has," she explained. "It's for the law enforcement community to decode information sent by criminals."

But Banisar said Clipper is still dangerous as a potential infringement upon rights to privacy.

"It is a chip designed by the National Security Agency that they want to become standard. It does some scrambling; it is supposed to work for privacy protection," he said. "The kicker is they get to keep the key — they can listen in anytime they want."

More information about Clipper is available by e-mailing "Clipper-info@cpsr.org."

for officials to access communications sent through digital systems, in addition to current analog lines.

According to UI law Professor Robert Clinton, the new proposal wouldn't give the government any more authority than it currently has to tap into phone lines.

"It's mostly a response to the change in the technology and not a change in the legal standard for when a wiretap is lawful," he said.

"We're fighting the process," she said.

An election would cost the county $20,000. Redlinger and O'Neill said since the appointment is only for eight months, it is better to save the county money.

"It's not like (Sehr) is a stranger from nowhere," O'Neill said. "The public has voted for him before."

Iowa men's gymnastics holds fourth place

The Iowa men's gymnastics team remained fourth in the nation in the latest poll released by the National Association of Collegiate Gymnastics Coaches. Big Ten rival Ohio State is ranked No. 1.

Iowa's Jay Thornton is second on the floor exercise, Garry Denk is fourth on still rings, Rick Uptegraff is tied for fourth on parallel bars and Aaron Cotter is tied for 18th on still rings.

Stec, distance medley ranked sixth

Senior Tina Stec and the Iowa distance medley are ranked sixth nationally, according to Trackwire. Stec has qualified for the NCAA Indoor Track and Field Championships March 11 in the mile.

The distance medley team of freshman Briana Benning, senior Marlene Poole, senior Christine Salsberry and Stec also have qualified for the national meet.

UI ticket prices to increase

The UI Board in Control of Athletics approved a proposal by its ticket committee that will raise ticket prices for football, men's basketball and Goal Card events.

The price increases, which take effect for the 1994-95 school year, passed unanimously by voice vote with one abstention at the Board's Tuesday afternoon meeting.

Ticket prices for the six-game football season will increase $1 per game for student and public season tickets and $2 per game for staff season tickets and public single-game tickets.

Men's basketball tickets will go up $1 per game for all season tickets, while single-game ticket prices increase $2 per game.

Goal Cards, which allow admission to all women's athletic events, will increase from $35 to $45 for general admission seating, and from $45 to $50 for reserve seating. The student price of $20 will remain unchanged, and 1994-95 Goal Cards can be purchased at 1993-94 prices before May 15.

Final men's basketball game set for March 13

IOWA CITY (AP) — The Ohio State at Iowa men's basketball game, listed on the schedule for either March 12 or March 13, has been set for March 13, Big Ten Conference officials said Tuesday.

The Raycom Television Network will carry the game from Carver-Hawkeye Arena.

There was a delay in setting a date for the game while CBS-TV decided if it wanted to televise it. The network has chosen instead to televise either the Illinois-Purdue or the Wisconsin-Indiana game.

The Buckeyes and Hawkeyes will tip off at 2 p.m.

Former Hawkeyes to play in Quad Cities today

Four former Iowa men's basketball players, who currently play for the Fargo-Moorhead Fever of the Continental Basketball League, will play the Quad City Thunder today at The Mark in Moline, Ill.

A pregame party begins at 5:30 p.m.

Roy Marble, Ed Horton, Les Jepsen and Ray Thompson, who played for the Hawkeyes, are now with the Fever.

Marble is 13th in the league in scoring at 18.3 points per game. Thompson is averaging 17.9 points a contest, 15th in the CBA.

Tickets for the game are $6 and are available at The Mark box office and at Quad City TicketMasters.

Kris Wiley
 The Daily Iowan

Without lone senior James Winters, the Hawkeyes could start focusing on next season. But Coach Tom Davis thinks the best way to play for next year is to play for this year.

"I really feel the best way for us to become a good ball club down the road is to be the best we can be against Michigan State, see if we can knock off Michigan State," Davis said. "That's how you improve the fastest, I think, is to really focus on this game right now, on this opportunity."

Iowa will play its first game without Winters, who is out with an ankle injury, tonight when it hosts

Michigan State in Carver-Hawkeye Arena. Tipoff is scheduled for 7:05 p.m.

Russ Millard, a 6-foot-8 sophomore, gets the start for Winters. Davis said this is an opportunity for the Hawkeyes to step up their game.

"The way I view it, it's a chance for them to really measure themselves and see how much they have to improve if they're going to be key players in this league," he said. "They're going to get a chance to do it right now. It's going to be quite a learning experience over the next two weeks."

The Hawkeyes (10-13, 4-10) have just four games left in the Big Ten. They travel to Minnesota Saturday and Sunday at Carver-Hawkeye Arena. See BASKETBALL, Page 2B

WRESTLING

Stiltner solidifies starting role

Roxanna Pellin
 The Daily Iowan

There are three days remaining until the Big Ten Championships, but Iowa's Greg Stiltner may have already wrestled his toughest match of the season.

Stiltner went up against teammate Matt Norem Tuesday afternoon in practice for the chance to wrestle at 177 Saturday. If he lost that match, he would have to compete for a position at heavyweight against Mike Manganiello.

Fortunately for the junior from Grundy, Va., the wrestle-offs have stopped. Stiltner beat Norem Tuesday and is set for the 177-pound weight bracket for the conference meet.

"I know I can be more effective at 177. I'm not big enough to wrestle at heavyweight because I've lost so much weight to wrestle at 177. It's where our best team will be."

Greg Stiltner, Iowa wrestler

"It was a lot of pressure on me," Stiltner said. "I just wanted to get that match out of the way. That was a big obstacle to overcome."

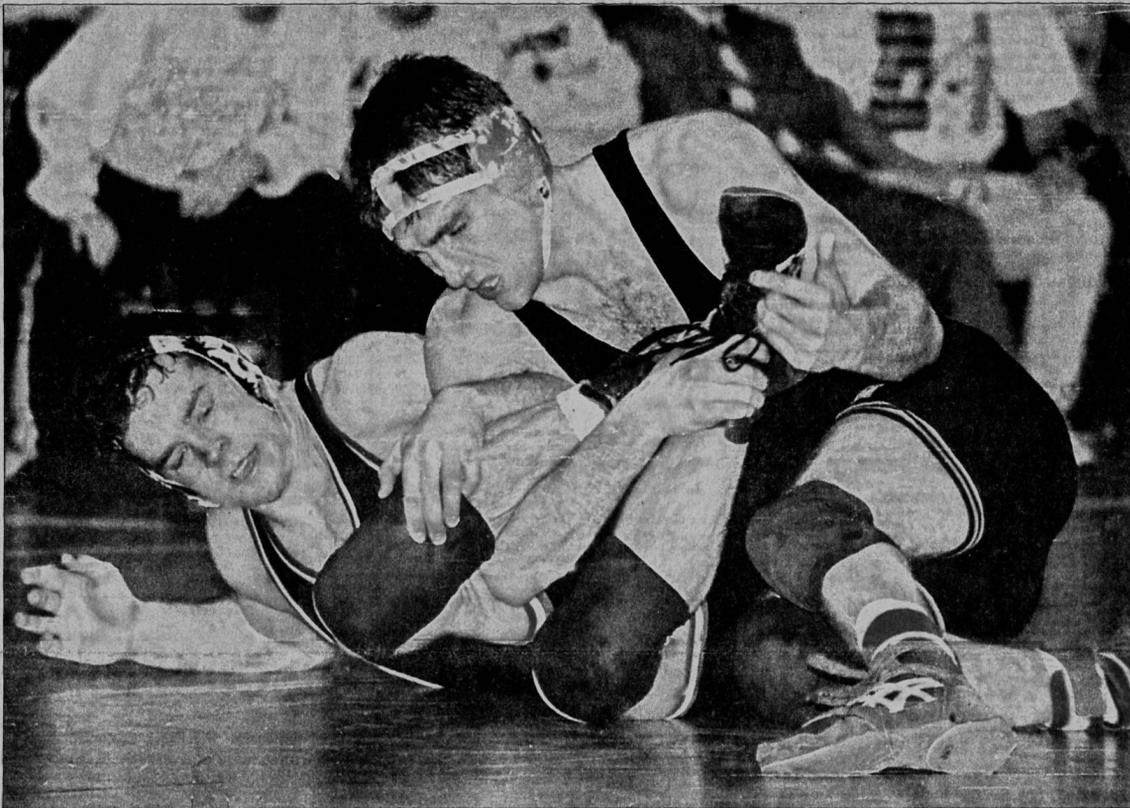

A set lineup earlier in the season would have been nice, but Stiltner isn't complaining about the situation.

"It's kind of nerve-racking, but (Coach Dan) Gable wants it like that," Stiltner said. "It keeps you on edge. It keeps you fighting. It motivates you."

Gable has been confident Stiltner will see competition during the Big Ten meet.

"Norem's going to have to perform pretty well to get himself on the squad," Gable said Monday. "Stiltner's the man right now, Norem's going to try and knock him out of there."

Stiltner posted a 21-7 record with three major decisions and three falls this season. He is ranked 17th nationally, and has wrestled at 177, 190 and heavyweight. He stands at 8-2 at 177 pounds.

Stiltner said he just wants to wrestle at the Big Tens, but 177 is the weight he prefers.

"I know I can be more effective at 177," he said. "I'm not big enough to wrestle at heavyweight because I've lost so much weight to wrestle at 177."

"It's where our best team will be." Stiltner finished with an 18-8 record and six falls last season. In high school, he was coached by former Iowa national champion Kevin Dresser. Stiltner was a three-time state champion, and went 68-0 his last two seasons.

Dresser taught him a little about the "Iowa Style" of wrestling and helped him with leg takedowns, Stiltner said.

"He talked about Iowa all the time," Stiltner said. "I just got to know the Iowa program from him. I wanted to go there because I knew so much about them."

The Hawkeyes finished the regular season at 11-3, 4-1 in the Big Ten. Stiltner said the losses won't matter at the Big Ten Championships.

"It's your last chance to put everything behind you. It's crunch time," he said.

"There's a little bit of pressure.

The last time it was held in Iowa City, we had 10 guys in the finals and nine champions. But there's not so much pressure on us, as a team. There's a lot of pressure on Gable."

Although No. 2 Minnesota is the favorite going into the meet, Stiltner said that shouldn't be a factor.

"They're on a high," he said. "They've got a lot of momentum going. I know they're tough, but I think we can break that high."

ChiSox pitcher out; Sanderson signed

Associated Press

Chicago White Sox pitcher Jose DeLeon will be sidelined three to six weeks with a knee injury.

He hurt himself during fielding drills Monday, sustaining a partial tear of the medial collateral ligament of his left knee.

The 33-year-old right-hander pitched only 10 innings with the White Sox last year. He spent the bulk of the season with Philadelphia, going 3-0 with a 3.26 ERA.

To bolster their staff, the White Sox signed right-hander Scott Sanderson to a minor-league contract. He split time last season between California and San Francisco.

White Sox reliever Roberto Hernandez, who saved 38 games last season, was one of 17 players to agree to one-year contracts. Hernandez said his contract has a base salary of $275,000. He made $195,000 last season.

SCOTTSDALE, Ariz. — Leonard Coleman, the head of baseball's marketing staff the past two years, was elected National League president on Tuesday and will immediately replace Bill White.

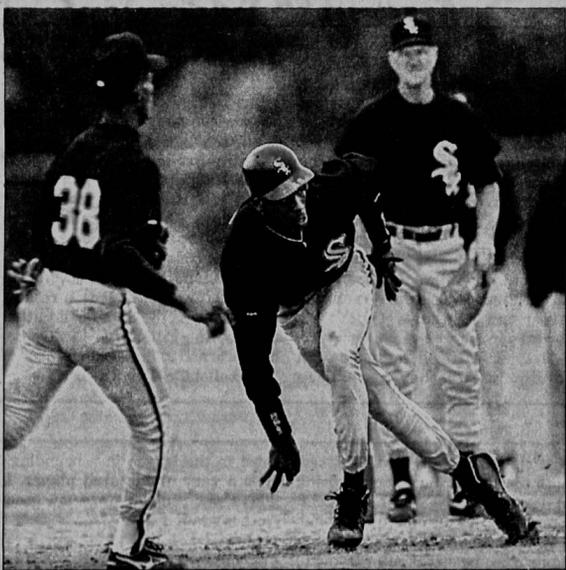

Coleman, 45, worked for the New Jersey state government for six years during the 1980s, then worked as a finance banker for Kidder, Peabody & Co. from 1988-92.

White's election as league president was considered a breakthrough following widespread criticism of baseball's lack of minority hiring in the front office. Coleman, like White, is black.

"I'm extremely proud of my African-American heritage," said Coleman, a former semipro outfielder in New Jersey. "I'd like to think I was appointed, and Bill was appointed, based on leadership abilities."

White, 60, intends to retire from baseball and return to his home in Pennsylvania. Two years ago, he expressed frustration at his experience as league president, saying: "I deal with people now who I know are racists and bigots. ... I'm bitter. I'm mad."

White refused to comment about his term Tuesday.

Coleman, ironically, was hired by then-commissioner Fay Vincent in December 1991 as baseball attempted to deal with its low fan base among minorities. While in the commissioner's office, he has worked to put baseball programs on black- and Hispanic-oriented television networks, and on inner-city baseball and softball programs.

He said he didn't believe that changes to the Major League Agreement passed by owners in January would hamper his job.

Hawkeyes split with NE Illinois

Iowa returns to action today against Northeast Missouri State at 8 a.m. in the Metrodome

The Daily Iowan

The Iowa baseball team opened the season by splitting a doubleheader with Northeastern Illinois in the Metrodome in Minneapolis Tuesday.

The Hawkeyes won the first game 6-2 and dropped the second 6-3.

Hawkeye pitcher Steve Weimer pitched six innings in the opener, allowing two unearned runs on four hits. He struck out six and walked one.

Junior transfer Matt Ostrom hit 3-for-4 with two RBI and a double.

Northeastern Illinois scored two runs in the second inning of the nightcap, and Iowa pitcher Scott Small got the loss. Small allowed five runs off eight hits in 4 1/2 innings.

The Hawkeyes face Northeast Missouri State today in the Metrodome at 8 a.m.

Blazers' streak halted

Associated Press

INDIANAPOLIS — Rik Smits had 24 points and 13 rebounds, his fifth straight game with double figures in box as the Indiana Pacers ended the Portland Trail Blazers' six-game winning streak Tuesday night, 106-94.

Reggie Miller scored 20 points for the Pacers, who have won three straight games, eight in a row at home and 13 of 15 overall.

Indiana took control in a wild third quarter when the Blazers were called for two technical fouls and had their radio analyst, Mike Rice, ejected from press row by referee Steve Javie.

The Pacers wiped out Portland's last lead, 51-50, with a 10-0 run that included a technical on Cliff Robinson, who led the Blazers with 17 points. Robinson objected when a foul call on Dale Davis was changed to a blocked shot, and Rice was ejected after complaining to Javie.

The Pacers put together an 8-0 run late in the period, which ended with Indiana ahead 81-70. During that run, Portland coach Rick Adelman was called for another technical.

Hawks 102, Timberwolves 99
ATLANTA — Danny Manning, in his home debut for Atlanta, hit a 12-foot jumper with eight seconds left, salvaging a victory over comeback-minded Minnesota.

The Hawks, who led by 28 points in the third period, still had a 94-69 advantage going into the final quarter, but Chuck Person's 3-pointer with 28 seconds left closed the Timberwolves to 100-99. The Hawks then worked the ball to Manning for the game-saving shot.

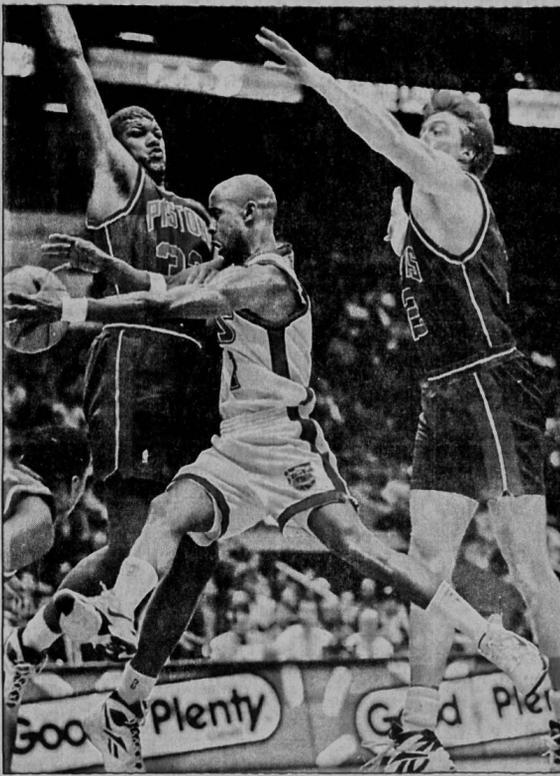

Manning scored 21 points on 8-for-13 shooting and Stacey Augmon also had 21 points on 9-for-12 shooting for the Hawks. Christian Laettner scored 21 points for Minnesota, which has lost 11 straight road games.

Mookie Blaylock set a franchise-record for steals in a quarter with six in the first period. He finished with a season-high eight to go with 14 points and 10 assists.

Nets 108, Pistons 98
EAST RUTHERFORD, N.J. — Chris Morris continued his tear from 3-point range by hitting a team-record six as New Jersey overcame a slow start against Detroit.

Morris finished with 23 points and Derrick Coleman had 25 points and 15 rebounds as the Nets won their 16th game in 22 starts. Isiah Thomas had 16 points and 14 assists and Joe Dumars 19 points as the Pistons lost their fourth straight and their 36th in the last 45.

Dumars had 11 points and Thomas six points and eight assists while New Jersey missed 11 of its first 15 shots in the first period, which ended with Detroit ahead 28-20.

Morris was 6-for-8 from 3-point range. He came into the contest 10 of 15 in his last three games and is now 16 of 23 in his last four.

Bullets 109, 76ers 103

PHILADELPHIA — Pervis Ellison had season highs of 25 points and 12 rebounds as Washington beat Philadelphia, ending the Bullets' six-game losing streak and extending the 76ers' loss skid to 10. Clarence Weatherspoon had 26 points and 14 rebounds for the Sixers, who hadn't lost 10 straight since they dropped 13 in a row in 1973.

A three-point play by Orlando Woolridge brought the Sixers to 99-97 with 2:44 left, but Adams and Ellison converted six of eight free throws in the last minute as Washington pulled away.

Rockets 97, Magic 85

HOUSTON — Hakeem Olajuwon scored 26 points and Sam Cassell had all of his 16 points in the second half as Houston held off Orlando, snapping the Magic's seven-game winning streak.

Cassell didn't score his first basket until 1:19 remained in the third quarter before equaling his season high as the Rockets ended a two-game losing skid.

Anfernee Hardaway and Dennis Scott each scored 21 points for Orlando, which remained winless in The Summit at 0-7. Olajuwon also helped hold NBA leading scorer Shaquille O'Neal to 19 points on 8-for-19 shooting and was aided underneath by Otis Thorpe's 19 rebounds.

Heat 110, Bucks 102

MILWAUKEE — Glen Rice scored 25 points, including 16 in the first quarter, and Grant Long had a season-high 22 as Miami went five games over the .500 mark for the first time in franchise history by defeating Milwaukee.

The Heat, playing in their sixth season, are 30-25 after matching a season-high with their fifth consecutive victory.

Miami also tied a franchise record with its fourth straight victory on the road.

Long, who had 12 rebounds, scored 14 points in the third quarter as the Heat increased their 58-47 halftime lead to 91-74.

Vin Baker scored 26 points and Todd Day 23 for the Bucks, who got as close as eight points in the final period.

COLLEGE FOOTBALL

Former Michigan player charged

Associated Press

ANN ARBOR, Mich. — Former University of Michigan football player Shonte Peoples was charged with felonious assault, accused of firing shots at plainclothes police officers he thought were breaking into his Jeep.

The officers did not return fire early Sunday, and no one was injured. A warrant was issued Monday, and Peoples appeared this afternoon before District Judge Timothy Connors.

Connors scheduled a preliminary hearing for March 9 and ordered Peoples freed on $5,000 personal bond. He faces up to four years in prison if convicted.

Peoples, 21, is the sixth Michigan athlete to face criminal charges in the past four weeks. He is charged with assault with a dangerous weapon and faces up to four years' imprisonment if convicted.

He is a defensive back whose final year of eligibility was last season. He was rated All-Big Ten for the 1992 season.

The three plainclothes officers were investigating vandalism to five vehicles, including the player's Jeep, outside the player's apartment complex, Ann Arbor police Sgt. Phil Scheel said.

The officers set off an alarm in the player's Jeep that activated the player's pager but was not audible to police, Scheel said. The player then appeared on his second-floor balcony and allegedly fired seven to 10 shots.

The athlete's girlfriend had called 911 to report what they thought was an attempted theft. Sgt. Harry Jinkerson took the call, traced it to the athlete and talked him into surrendering.

The gun is registered with the Ann Arbor Police Department. The athlete told police he had just had $7,000 worth of stereo equipment installed in the Jeep.

Football coach Gary Moeller said he was "totally shocked" by the incident. "I'd never have envisioned a Michigan football player in this type of situation," he said.

Two other Michigan football players also were due in court Tuesday on charges of attempting to steal beer from a party store in January.

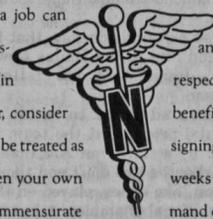

Freshman tight end Damon Jones, already on probation after pleading guilty in December 1992 to exploding a pipe bomb in a dormitory, was scheduled for a pretrial conference. And freshman Remy Hamilton was to surrender for arraignment on the same retail fraud misdemeanor this morning, Scheel said.

On Friday, basketball players Ray Jackson, Jimmy King and Chris Fields were ordered to perform 72 hours of community service and pay $238 in court costs after being accused of stealing beer from the same party store in a separate incident.

Moeller has suspended Hamilton and Jones. Basketball coach Steve Fisher suspended Jackson, King and Fields for one game last month.

IOWA STATE

Meyer not ready for Big Eight Tourney

Associated Press

AMES — Loren Meyer's broken collarbone has not healed enough for him to play in the Big Eight Tournament March 11-13, Iowa State coach Johnny Orr said.

But the 6-foot-11 junior might be fit to play in a postseason tournament, assuming the Cyclones are invited, Orr said Monday.

"The bottom part of the collarbone is healed but the top isn't," Orr said. He said X-rays taken Monday were inconclusive about Meyer's chances to play beginning in mid-March.

"The decision on whether he can play in a postseason tournament will be made after more X-rays are taken in two weeks," Orr said.

Meyer said he can do anything in practice that doesn't involve contact.

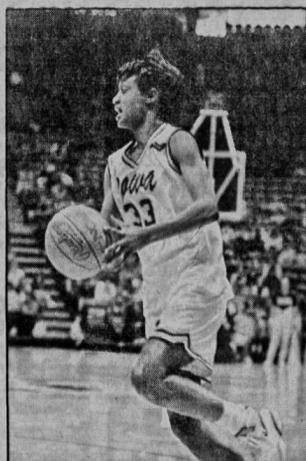

"I can raise my arm all right, and shoot. My weight is up to 250 pounds — about what it was when I was playing," he said.

Meyer broke the collarbone six weeks ago when a pickup truck in which he was a passenger was struck by a train at a crossing in Des Moines.

Dallas honored in D.C.

Michelle Mittelstadt
Associated Press

WASHINGTON — This year, the White House didn't roll out the AstroTurf for the Dallas Cowboys.

But then again, the Super Bowl champions didn't come out in full force either.

It was a small, albeit stellar, squad of Dallas players that showed up Tuesday at President Clinton's invitation for the traditional ceremony honoring the NFL champion.

Quarterback Troy Aikman, running back Emmitt Smith, receiver Michael Irvin and defensive tackle Russell Maryland represented the team, joined by owner Jerry Jones and coach Jimmy Johnson.

"I think that it is just the beginning of what will doubtless be years and years and years of stunning achievement if they can just keep their goals high and keep working for them," the president said during a brief ceremony in the Roosevelt Room.

"Coach Johnson, your team has a knack for coming to the White House."

It's a knack the Cowboys will repeat if Jones has any say in the matter.

As he handed Clinton a copy of the Lombardi Trophy given to the Super Bowl winner, Jones said: "We'd like to put on this trophy 1993 Super Bowl champions, 1994 Super Bowl champions, and we're going to leave a little space open."

Jones also presented the president a fist-sized replica of the Cowboys' diamond-studded Super Bowl ring.

"If you can find someone that fits, send him to the Dallas Cowboys," Jones told his fellow Arkansan.

Clinton admitted to "a bit of parochial pride" that the team is owned by a native of Arkansas. The Arkansas ties don't end there. Johnson, like Jones, played on the 1964 national champion Arkansas team.

A year ago the entire team was greeted in the East Room, which had been decorated for the occasion with a vast expanse of AstroTurf complete with hash marks. A fake goal post hung between the ornate portraits of George and Martha Washington.

This time, the Cowboys chose to bring only a few players. And Clinton received them in the much smaller Roosevelt Room, which was free of Cowboys' paraphernalia.

Jones said he wanted an "intimate" ceremony this year. But he conceded that with 23 of his players free agents — many crisscrossing the country to visit other teams — scheduling conflicts arose.

Their absence from the White House "should not be an indication that a large percentage of those veteran players that we had last year won't be on this team in the '94 season," Jones said.

"I think that the strength that we have for the '94 season is that we probably are going to be able to keep our continuity with this young, talented team more than any team in the NFL."

Hearing set to determine Harding's fate March 10

Bob Baum
Associated Press

PORTLAND, Ore. — As Tonya Harding slept in late in her first day home from the Olympics, the U.S. Figure Skating Association proceeded Tuesday with plans to subject her to a disciplinary hearing next week.

A five-member USFSA panel will determine whether Harding should be kicked out of the association for her role in the Jan. 6 attack on rival Nancy Kerrigan.

The hearing will begin March 10 in Colorado Springs, Colo., said Bill Hybl, the panel's chairman.

Harding's attorneys had asked for an indefinite delay of the hearing, which previously was scheduled for March 9, but the USFSA was willing only to move it back one day.

"They wanted more time but this was the best we could do to accommodate them," Hybl said. "We've got the world championships coming up."

The panel already has decided there were reasonable grounds to believe Harding was in on or knew of the Kerrigan plot. The committee ordered a hearing be held to determine what disciplinary action, if any, should be imposed.

The most severe potential penalties are suspending her association membership or banning her from the organization for life. Either action would bar her from the World Figure Skating Championships, scheduled for March 22-27 in Chiba, Japan.

The panel is to meet with USFSA attorneys on March 9 to lay the groundwork for the hearing, which could last as long as three days.

One of Harding's attorneys, Bob Weaver, would not say whether his client would attend.

"We will respond in some fashion, but I can't make any comment beyond that," Weaver said.

Harding is scheduled to meet with her lawyers today.

Hybl said the USFSA wants Harding to participate. She did not take part in the earlier hearing.

"She can either appear, she can send us a videotape or she can submit a statement," Hybl said.

The panel also plans to hear from Jeff Gillooly, Harding's ex-husband, who has admitted his role in the Kerrigan attack. Gillooly, who has pleaded guilty to racketeering in a deal with prosecutors, says Harding was in on the plot and gave the final OK — allegations the skater denies.

Multnomah County Circuit Judge Donald Londer refused to let Gillooly travel to Colorado for the hearing. But Gillooly could submit a video or written deposition.

"We're going to do something, but I don't know what it is," said Gillooly's attorney, Ron Hoevet.

The panel will hear testimony from witnesses, review evidence that has been made public as part of the Kerrigan criminal proceedings and examine material gathered by John Bennett, the Portland attorney hired by the USFSA.

The hearing will be closed, Hybl said.

Players union chief says future strike a possibility

Tom Saladino
Associated Press

WEST PALM BEACH, Fla. — Negotiations on a labor agreement with baseball owners apparently will be difficult, and a strike later in the season is a real possibility, players union chief Don Fehr said Tuesday.

Fehr made his comments as he began his 28-team tour of spring training camps, meeting for nearly two hours with the Montreal Expos.

In the meeting, Fehr said he reviewed what has happened the last couple of years, discussed the new television contract, antitrust hearings, revenue-sharing and the lack of a commissioner. Lesser issues such as licensing and pensions also were discussed.

"What we know is that a year ago the owners reopened the agreement and set the stage for bargaining," Fehr said. "We haven't had a proposal yet and it'll be sometime after March 7 before we get outlines from (owners representative) Dick Ravitch. So we really don't know what is at issue."

The two sides haven't met formally since Jan. 25, 1993. The next meeting is scheduled for Monday in Tampa.

"It'll be preliminary. I don't expect a proposal," Fehr said.

"What we do know is that the owners have done a number of things which could be construed as pretty militant. They've passed a revenue-sharing proposal which requires the players to accept lower salaries in the form of a salary cap without consulting us.

"They told the players to 'stick it,' in other words."

Another problem, Fehr said, was the lack of a commissioner. In the past, if there was difficulty with negotiations which affected the best interests of baseball, the commissioner would get involved.

"That power has now been taken away from any subsequent commissioner, and so looks like we're in for a very rough, long negotiation," Fehr said.

"I hope that's not true, but it does not look encouraging from where I sit," he said.

Asked if the strike issue was the utmost on the minds of the players, Fehr said there was no way to tell yet.

FIGURE SKATING

Kerrigan's image intact after silver-medal skate

Ken Guggenheim
Associated Press

BOSTON — She deemed her silver-medal performance flawless, questioned the scoring by the figure skating judges, and skipped the Olympics' closing ceremonies for a promotional gig at Disney World.

Has Nancy Kerrigan tarnished her golden image? Sports analysts and public relations specialists say she hasn't done herself irreparable harm — at least not yet.

"Those comments she made were relatively low-key," said Larry Unes, a Chicago-based talent consultant who links celebrities with advertising agencies. "The glow that she left is going to supersede anything that is going to be construed as negative."

Even before she was attacked Jan. 6 at the U.S. Figure Skating Championships in Detroit, Kerrigan had promotional contracts with Reebok shoes and Campbells soup. As she recovered from her injuries and as the attack was linked to the entourage of rival skater Tonya Harding, Kerrigan's girl-next-door image — and marketability — were enhanced.

She signed a contract worth a reported $2 million with Walt Disney Co., and on Monday she signed a contract to appear in advertisements for Revlon. She is scheduled to host "Saturday Night Live" on March 12.

But her image began to change almost minutes after Oksana Baiul of Ukraine edged her for the gold. When she was told, mistakenly, that the medal ceremony had been delayed because Baiul was redoing her makeup, an annoyed Kerrigan was heard on television saying: "Oh, come on. So she's going to get out here and cry again. What's the difference?"

Associated Press

Nancy Kerrigan is joined by Mickey Mouse as they ride through the Magic Kingdom at Lake Buena Vista, Fla., Sunday.

In interviews in the following days, she said she questioned the judges for not deducting points for Baiul's mistakes.

She left Norway before the closing ceremonies to attend a parade at Disney World, even though Disney officials said the parade could have been held another day.

Callers to radio talk shows have begun voicing their disenchantment with Kerrigan. Some newspaper columnists are blasting her.

Earlier this week, KNBC-TV broadcast a videotape of Kerrigan sitting in a Disney World parade next to a Mickey Mouse character. On the tape, Kerrigan could be heard saying: "This is so corny, this is so dumb. I hate it. This is the most corny thing I've ever done."

None of this, though, is enough to destroy her image — or scare away corporate sponsors, analysts said.

NEW LOLLAPALOOZA TOUR APPROACHING

Beatles to Zeppelin: music in '94

Stuart Reid
The Daily Iowan
This week: the big honking summer 1994 new music preview

Despite recent evidence to the contrary, summer has, in fact, been confirmed for later this year. So cozy up next to that cheap space heater and bask in the warm glow of new music that is only a few tantalizing weeks or months in the distance.

Of course, summer just wouldn't be the same without the orchestrated anarchy of Lollapalooza performers and guest DJs have yet to be announced, it is likely that the presence of The Orb, as well as the general Lollapalooza bandwagon, will bring out a virtual who's who of the club scene.

Rumors continue to surface over other artists in negotiations to appear. While the Charlatans have apparently turned the show down, Beck, Johnny Cash, L7 and even The Stone Roses continue to be mentioned.

Speaking of The Roses, its Gef-fen debut is now scheduled for an April release. But the persistence of information trickling out of the music papers suggests it might really be happening this time. The album, which is titled, self-deprecatingly enough, Second Coming, supposedly will be preceded in a few weeks by a single. Also scheduled for April is a new EP from My Bloody Valentine, co-founders of the "we can't even average one song a year" club with The Roses.

Before March is over the summer rush will have begun, including the essential Best Of Frankie Goes To Hollywood collection, albums by the Charlatans, Nine Inch Nails and Morrissey, and a remix / reissue of the latest Pet Shop Boys album, titled Very Relentless.

April's current release list looks impressive as well, with new albums from Inspiral Carpets, Primal Scream, Blur and the first material from Lush to be produced by someone other than Robin Guthrie. Guthrie, in addition to doing the Cocteau Twins tour, which will come through the Midwest at the end of March, is apparently remixing material for Seefeel and Medicine.

Less firm summer release dates are scheduled by Frank Black, St. Etienne, Erasure and James, with the James album likely to be pushed back by the success of Laid, their current release. Also expected this summer is the full-length debut by Elastica, current holders of "next big thing" status in England, plus the new album by Ride, which had been originally scheduled to be out by last Christmas. Ian McCulloch's new album is also notable — it will feature guitar work by both Johnny Marr and original Echo and The Bunnymen guitarist Will Sergeant. Elvis Costello's first album with The Attractions in nearly 10 years is scheduled for summer as well.

By fall, new albums are expected from R.E.M., Belly and Suede. But the on-again, off-again Björk remix album is apparently off the schedule once again.

As for the "monster" tours of '94, there seem to be plenty, including Pink Floyd, the Rolling Stones, the Grateful Dead, an Elton John / Billy Joel co-headliner, Rush and Pearl Jam, with rumors of the Eagles and Led Zeppelin playing reunion shows seeming to be drifting towards reality. Finally, the rumors of a McCartney / Starr / Harrison summer concert in New York seem to have been firmly dispelled (for the moment).

Now if all that didn't get you warmed up for summer, thinking about tank tops, shorts, cookouts, beer and, uh, vendors at the Grateful Dead shows, I don't know what will.

Montreal multimedia group Carbone 14 returns to Hancher Friday night with "The Café."

Energetic, intense multimedia troupe brings dance / film / rock show to UI

Molly Faulkner
The Daily Iowan

The last time Montreal dance / theater troupe Carbone 14 performed at Hancher, one audience member recalled that no one wanted to go home — the show's intense energy left the crowd wanting to stay in the theater and see it all again. There is eager anticipation for what Carbone 14 will do this time.

"The Café," which plays this Friday night, is a multimedia event featuring film, dance, theater and music. In the show, artistic director Gilles Maheu takes an autobiographical look at his struggle to become an artist. Film clips of his life produce a cohesive narrative throughout a program marked by high-energy dancing and a live rock band.

"There is an inner message in this for everybody," said Jerry Snell, Carbone 14's lead rock singer, dancer and one of the poets responsible for the libretto. Snell is a founding member of Carbone 14 or, as it used to be called, "The Children of Paradise."

Along with their technological advances, Carbone 14 has won critical acclaim in the Americas and Europe. Maheu won best choreographer in Toronto's Dora Mavor Moor Awards for his work in "The Dormitory," the show which previously came to Iowa City. This show won a special jury prize from the National Capital Critics Association in Ottawa and was later made into an Emmy-winning film by PBS.

Snell feels that the ability to cut out all of the extras and present a clear point is the company's success. "You have to be pure in what you're saying," he said. "Pure in physical energy, musical energy and the visual."

Energy is key for the company, considering its rigorous touring schedule. Visiting more than 12 different countries presents Carbone 14 with quite a challenge. Snell admits that it is always interesting to see how countries react to their show. "The Café" was well-received in Spain, but in Portugal it didn't seem to go over as well. Snell was unsure why.

Nonetheless, he feels that the touring helps keep the show from getting stale. "You can't help but see what's going on in these different countries and try and put it through on stage," he said. "So many things are going on that are topical, not just what sells the newspapers." He feels that just walking down the street, seeing the extremes of life, adds to the baggage of emotions that the performer brings to the stage. That is the human level of the show.

On the home front, the company is getting their own theater in Montreal. Referred to as "Maheu's baby," the theater is intended as a future center for the arts, both visual and performing. The company's plans for next year depend on the demand, Snell says — they may create a new show or continue to tour. Certainly, if response to the show in Iowa City is as good as it was in 1991, Carbone 14 will be coming back again.

Carbone 14 will perform at Hancher Auditorium Friday, March 4 at 8 p.m. Tickets are $24 and $22. UI students and senior citizens qualify for a 20 percent discount; tickets for those 18 and under are half price. For information, call Hancher Box Office at 335-1160.

SHOW TONIGHT

African rhythms, fashion hit Hancher

Shayla Thiel
The Daily Iowan

Eight years ago, Paul Simon brought a new type of world beat to the forefront of the popular music scene on his album "Graceland." Inspired by Mbaqanga (pronounced um-bah-KON-gah), a style of party music which developed in South African townships in the early 1960s, "Graceland" led to an acclaimed overview collection called The Indestructible Beat of Soweto.

By releasing three of their cuts, the overview collection launched South African musical superstars Mahlathini and the Mahotella Queens into international fame. Now the group is on its fifth whirlwind U.S. tour, landing in Hancher Auditorium tonight at 8.

Since they first began performing in 1964, Mahlathini and the Mahotella Queens were among the important instigators of this style. Their record sales figures speak for themselves: Every one of the group's recordings since the mid-1960s has sold over a million copies.

Wearing traditional African clothing and brightly colored head-dresses, the group aims to give a worldwide audience a true taste of South African culture. Mark Mangwane, leader of Mahlathini's backup band, Makgona Tsohle Band ("the band that knows everything"), remarked on the unique style of music in a past interview. "The music is purely South African," he said. "What we did was take the music and modernize it. So we took out bits of this and that, added some modern drums and put it all together to make one delicious sound."

According to white South African musician Johnny Clegg, founder of the similar Savuka band, the music is also a manifestation of the spirit of the South African townships in times of oppression and turmoil. "If anyone is looking for the music which brought hope and represented a humanizing force during the darkest, dehumanizing days of apartheid, they should look no further than the incredible Mahlathini and the Mahotella Queens," Clegg has been quoted as saying.

Ching Ming/Verve

Mahlathini and the Mahotella Queens bring their Soweto beat to Hancher tonight at 8.

To enhance the dynamic South African music, there will also be an African style show held at 7:15 p.m. in the Hancher Auditorium lobby. Organized by Hancher and local artists Miranda and Oforio Akyea, the show will concentrate mainly on the fashions found south of the Sahara Desert.

"We're going to show what was traditionally worn, depicting what we had before contact with the Europeans as well as how imported textiles are worn," Miranda Akyea says. "In a very basic overview, we will be featuring specific regions in Ghana, like BouBou, which is a very distinct style, and also show the woven fabric, kente, which is very popular these days, and how it has been adapted to modern fashion. Finally, we will conclude with a model of a West African queen and her entourage in full dress."

Akyea encourages participants at the style show to follow along with a detailed guide focusing on the dress traditions, which will be available in the Hancher lobby. She also encourages people to come for the Mbaqanga music, which she finds especially exciting rhythmically.

"South African music is joyful, rhythmical — and just real," she says. "It's very, very appealing."

Tickets for Mahlathini and the Mahotella Queens are available through the Hancher Box Office, 335-1160.

Grammys: Houston sweeps, Bono bleeps, Sinatra weeps

Mary Campbell Associated Press

NEW YORK - Awards voters will always love Whitney Houston - at least this year. And the magic carpet for the music to "Aladdin" was riding high again at Tuesday night's 36th annual Grammys.

For her single "I Will Always Love You," Houston took the awards for best pop female vocalist and record of the year, which she shared with producer David Foster. The album of the year Grammy went to the soundtrack to the movie, "The Bodyguard."

Just three weeks ago, she collected eight trophies at the American Music Awards for the single and the soundtrack.

"I think everyone can dig and understand 'I Will Always Love You,'" she said backstage.

Dolly Parton, who wrote the torch song two decades ago, presented the Grammy to Houston. The single has been one of the fastest selling in music history, and the movie soundtrack has sold more than 10 million copies.

The "Aladdin" soundtrack received four Grammys before the telecast began. During the CBS-TV special, "A Whole New World (Aladdin's Theme)" won for song of the year, a prize that went to the composers, Alan Menken and Tim Rice. Last year, the movie's music won two Academy Awards (for original score and song).

"I would like to thank the Everly Brothers who got me going on American music," said Rice, an Englishman.

Peabo Bryson and Regina Belle won the award for best pop performance by a duo or group for singing "A Whole New World (Aladdin's Theme)."

The other awards for "Aladdin": best musical album for children and best instrumental composition written for a motion picture or for television. The theme song also won as best song written for a movie or television.

Besides sharing the record of the year prize with Houston, Foster won the Grammy as producer of the year for "I Will Always Love You" and for best instrumental arrangement of "When I Fall In Love" from the soundtrack of "Sleepless in Seattle."

"I just can't even believe that I'm up here at this point in my career," Foster said. "This is the greatest night of my life."

Tony Bennett and country star Mary-Chapin Carpenter also won Grammys as the recording industry honored its top performers. Other winners were Aerosmith for best rock group and U2 for alternative music.

Bono of U2 was greeted with cheers and gasps during his acceptance speech when he used a four-letter word in delivering "a message to the young people of America."

He returned a short while later to present a lifetime achievement award to Frank Sinatra and apparently didn't stray from his prepared introduction.

After a standing ovation, a tearful Sinatra said, "That's the best welcome I ever had."

He took a couple of deep breaths trying to regain his composure, then said, "This is like being in baseball, the bases are loaded and you're at bat - you don't know what you're going to do."

Carpenter, the country singer who grew up in New Jersey, won the best female country vocal performance. Lucinda Williams' "Passionate Kisses," which Carpenter covered, received the award for best country song.

Outside Radio City Music Hall, a group of protesters that included Kim Gordon of Sonic Youth and members of the Breeders criticized the elimination of the award for best female rock vocal.

And the winners were ...
