UI student, 23, dies from cancer-related seizure

UI student Pat Wagner, age 23, died Monday night after a cancerrelated seizure at his home in Omaha, Neb.

Wagner, who was majoring in political science and economics, was a member of Sigma Alpha Epsilon fraternity. He left school in February for treatment.

"Pat had the ability to make all those around him feel comfortable," friend and UI senior Erik Daley said. "He was always quick with a smile and a laugh.

NATIONAL Olympics most-watched event in TV history

NEW YORK (AP) — About 204 million Americans watched the Winter Olympics, making it the most-watched event in television history and crushing CBS' rivals in the February ratings sweep.

"On a household basis, 92.5 percent of all American households tuned in," David Poltrack, CBS vice president for research, said Wednesday. "That is also the highest-rated cumulative audience of any event in television history."

The Lillehammer, Norway, Games posted the highest average rating, a 27.8, of any Olympics, winter or summer, in history. A single ratings point equals 942,000 homes of the 94.2 million television households in the United States.

CBS' ratings will equal the combined ratings of ABC and NBC for the monthlong February sweep — one of three annual periods of intensive audience measurement that let affiliates set local ad rates.

"Skating was a major promotional factor," Poltrack said, "but for whatever reason people came into the Olympics, they stayed, they extend themselves, and they'll be back."

USI GETS LARGEST INCREASE

Final Class I budgets spawn varied reviews

Molly Spann

The Daily Iowan

UI student groups had mixed reactions Wednesday to their final budgets passed by the UI Student Assembly during Tuesday night's meeting. Danielle Bechtold, assistant campus director for United Students of Iowa, said USI was happy with the budget that gave them at least a 14-cent per student increase in fees from what they received

"We were pleased with the increase because last year we took about a 25-cent cut, so at least we got put to where we were before," she said.

USI received the largest budget increase of any Class I student

Amy Bendixen, chairwoman of the Committee on Student Health Service said her group was upset that all of its funding from UISA was cut.

"We are not happy," she said. "I've been on the phone all morning with John Gardner and Rakhi Roy trying to find other alternatives. It was a shock and I had to read it in the DI this morning. I thought at least they could call us first."

Bendixen said the money was to be used for health-care packages with medical supplies and a booklet on health for UI freshmen.

Final Fiscal Year 95 Class I Budgets

Currently, each UI student is assessed a $19.50 mandatory fee, which is broken down among various Class I groups as shown in ①. In preparing budgets for Fiscal Year 1995, the groups requested the amount in ②. The Student Association Budgeting and Auditing Committee took the requests and formed two budgets, ③ and ①. ③ is based on the current $19.50 per student fee, while the preferred plan ① is based on the Board of Regents approving a 60 cent increase.

JERICHO, Occupied West Bank - Israeli soldiers killed two Palestinian youths Wednesday as rage over the Hebron mosque massacre spread to Jericho, where the PLO plans to set up its headquarters

Prime Minister Yitzhak Rabin and Foreign Minister Shimon Peres reiterated the government's refusal to budge on the settlement issue, which under the Sept. 13 Israel-PLO accord is not to be discussed until two years after the agreement is implemented.

But Peres, an advocate of flexibility, left the door open to further gestures. The government "is not blind" to the need to make concessions to the PLO to resume talks, he told Jewish media representatives in Jerusalem on Wednesday night.

Militant Palestinians, meanwhile, called for revenge attacks for the mosque massacre. And the government put its embassies and citizens abroad on alert. Rabin's terrorism adviser, Yigal Pressler, urged Israelis with gun permits to carry their weapons at all times.

In Jericho, a normally peaceful town, trouble flared when 400 Palestinians, some waving black flags, protested Friday's massacre of Palestinian worshipers by a Jewish settler in Hebron.

Protesters stoned army vehicles and a police station, and troops on rooftops opened fire at youths who were using slingshots.

One teen-ager was killed in the shooting and about 20 people were injured, including Saeb Erakat, head of the PLO's negotiating

NEW YORK - Minority groups have widespread prejudices toward each other while sharing animosity toward whites, according to a poll released Wednesday by a major accused the CIA and U.S. government of illegal activities and pursuing a secret war against Cuba to prevent the American public from seeing effective socialism in action, in a talk to nearly 200 people at Shambaugh Auditorium Wednesday night.

Ex-CIA operative accuses U.S. of illegalities Tory Brecht The Daily Iowan UI guest lecturer Philip Agee

What made Agee's lecture unique was the fact that he is neither a revolutionary or a radical politician, but a former CIA operative turned political activist.

Agee, who has written books detailing the activities of the CIA and was exiled from the country for 16 years, is lecturing on college campuses nationwide in the hopes of lifting the travel ban and trade embargo on Cuba.

It has been said that healing is an art, though you wouldn't usually expect watercolors and sculpture from the healers

But for the next month patients, visitors and staff will be treated to photography, paintings, drawings and pottery by UI Hospital and Clin-ics staff during their 16th annual Staff Fine Arts Show.

The show is coordinated by Project Art, the UIHC's arts program.

Project Art interim coordinator Ann VanderKoo said the arts are just as important for healing as medications and staff - not to mention a bonding opportunity for the staff itself.

"Co-workers can see what each other's outside interests are," she said. "It is fascinating for co-workers to know.

Clinical nurse specialist and photographer Wendy Gronbeck, who has been shooting photos for 20 years, will be showing her work for the fourth time.

"I'm surprised how many see them and say something," she said. "It's worth entering. You see everybody's interests and viewpoints."

Gronbeck had always been interested in activities at work that show the whole person, such as the staff art show. Co-workers can't always reveal themselves in the daily highpressure routine of a medical environment, she shot and framed photographs he has taken in Lobby of the UIHC.

Watercolorist and pathology laboratory technologist Chris James said the UIHC is not just a hospital, but also a community center.

"I take my breaks in the lounges. I can't tell you how gratifying it is to view other people's art and the ideas that come from it," he said. Though talented and even passionate, many of the professional, clerical and service workers are reluctant to call themselves artists. For Charles Read, professor emeritus in pedi-

"When I see a scene that is emotionally exciting, I attempt that picture and try to capture those elements that excite," he said. "I ask myself, 'What makes it beautiful - why is that?' Then I try to capture it."

Read said he's gotten up at 4 a.m. to drive as far as 600 miles to capture the right photo.

"You have to make an effort to be there to get a photo," he said. "The payoff is that I'm so much more sensitive to what's around me. I'm always looking at the scenery, what's going by, paying more attention to it."

Oil painter and unit clerk Linda Lockridge had her own 15-piece show in Boyd Towers in 1991 and from time to time sells her work, yet she doesn't describe herself as a professional

"It is very difficult to get rid of it, to sell it," she said. "I like to hold onto it. I don't think sales are a way to gauge the success of it.

"I think that is the difference between commercial artists and artists who do it for their own benefit," she said. "I have to have it - I have to do it. I think most artists do.'

$25,000 PRIZE

The Bears play the Bulls in new stock market

Liza Roche

The Daily Iowan

Lucky sports fans with a mind for the stock markets could stand to make a killing during this year's March Madness with a new sports game that is an offshoot of the Iowa Political Stock Market.

This generation of tournament pools will make players the traders of "shares" of teams in a college basketball stock market via a computer and Internet. The College Basketball Stock Market Challenge, which is geared toward college students, will give away a grand prize of $25,000.

"In college, many students are experts in the subject matter of sports. You can liken that level of knowledge to people who do this for a living," said Boaz Weinstein, co-managing director of Sports Markets Inc., the company that created the game.

He said each contestant would start out with $100,000 in "sports dollars" to invest. An earnings portfolio will be kept for every contestant during the tournament and the top 75 will win at least $50. In addition, the top 50 college students will receive $100, he said.

Continuous, 24-hour trading will take place, even during games offering sheer excitement up until the final horn.

"Trading during games will be very volatile," Weinstein said. The game is equipped with an ade"Electronic markets are the way for the country," said UI economics Professor Forrest Nelson, one of the three owners of the IPSM software. "It showed it can work for a lot of applications.'

Software from the Iowa Political Stock Market was licensed and altered for the basketball stock market. The adapted game, sponsored on campus by the Financial Management Association, is one that Weinstein thinks will interest students more.

"The stock markets always dealt with a subject matter that is out of reach for a lot of students. In this format, as traders, they are experts in what they trade." Weinstein said the sports market would take more students out of "outsider"

Nelson said this stock market may hold more learning value than other popular market games for people who don't know much about the stock market.

"The trouble is the only people who participate in the AT&T Stock Market Challenge already have a pretty strong background in economics and finance," said Nelson.

He disagreed with the idea that the basketball market isn't a useful way to learn about the markets because it's entertaining.

"In that respect, it's a lot like computer games. But sometimes it's those games that make kids aware about other things," Nelson

Keene State frat holds party; milk flows freely

KEENE, N.H. (AP) - A frat party without beer is enough to make the boys at "Animal House" cringe. Serving milk and cookies instead would floor them.

A STEP CLOSER TO BARGAINING ...

COGS-SEIU clears hurdle, plans elections

Eric Marty

The Daily Iowan

The Campaign to Organize Graduate Students - Service Employees International Union Local 150 has cleared another hurdle in its quest to unionize.

COGS-SEIU Local 150 was notified Tuesday by the Public Employment Relations Board that they had collected considerably more than the 766 required signed authorization cards needed to call for a union election.

Todd Schmitz, campaign coordinator for COGS-SEIU, announced the election dates and said this is another momentous step in the drive for better treatment of graduate employees.

We are pleased to announce that an election has been scheduled for April 12 and 13 and that the ballots will be counted on April 14 by PERB," Schmitz said. "This should go a long way in getting the graduate employees some bargaining power."

Julie Monroe, co-chairwoman for COGS-SEIU, said she was glad to see the election

"We never had any doubt that we had enough support to call for an election, but it is exciting to finally make the dates official," she said. Schmitz said COGS-SEIU, which first began organizing in April 1993 when 80 graduate students met to express concerns over issues like tuition waivers, health care and job security, continues to gain support.

"It really helps with the efforts when people and especially the undergraduate population recognize the importance of our efforts. The more voices we have pushing for this, the better."

Todd Schmitz, campaign coordinator for COGS-SEIU Local 150

"So far COGS-SEIU Local 150 has collected over 1,400 cards from 126 departments and from every college at the university calling for

The announcement of the election dates, coupled with Tuesday night's endorsement of COGS-SEIU by the UI Student Assembly, has made this a big week for the campaign.

Schmitz stressed the importance of gaining the support of the undergraduates in an issue that has mainly focused on graduate students.

"It really helps with the efforts when people and especially the undergraduate population recognize the importance of our efforts," Schmitz said. "The more voices we have pushing for this, the better."

COGS-SEIU Co-chairman Dan Swinarski said just because an election date has been set doesn't mean the work is over - it's just begin-

"Between now and the election, it's our goal to talk to the remaining 25 percent of graduate employees in the bargaining unit that we have not yet contacted and find out where they stand on this issue," said Swinarski. "We'll be using a variety of tactics including phone interviews, mailers and, most importantly, meeting the people door to door."

Bosnian Serbs breach cease-fire, continue to block U.N. convoys

Srecko Latal Associated Press

SARAJEVO, Bosnia-Herzegovina - Bosnian Serbs launched three rocket-propelled grenades Wednesday at government troops in Sarajevo, prompting a gun bat-tle that violated the U.N. ceasefire and raised fears that the city's recent calm will shatter.

The skirmish around the Jewish cemetery in downtown Sarajevo ended after the U.N. commander in Bosnia, Lt. Gen. Sir Michael Rose, threatened to send in British U.N. troops, said U.N. officials speaking on condition of anonymity. No casualties were immediately reported.

Elsewhere, Serbs pounded two Muslim enclaves and continued to block relief convoys - despite their encouraging promise a day earlier to open an airport in the region to relief flights.

In the capital region, Serb artillery also fired Tuesday on the Muslim town of Breza, just north of Sarajevo, said U.N. spokesman Lt. Col. Bill Aikman.

While the Breza and Sarajevo attacks clearly breached the 3- Serb commanders. week-old U.N. cease-fire, they were apparently not serious would get tough with Serbs to enough to trigger a NATO air ensure smooth movement of relief strike under the alliance's Feb. 9

Grenade launchers were not listed among the heavy weapons that had to be removed from a 13-mile radius around Sarajevo, and Breza is outside the zone.

U.N. officials quoted Serbs as saying they fired the grenades because Muslim-led government forces were violating the cease-fire themselves by reinforcing their trenches. The United Nations had reported government forces were doing so last week.

Russian troops are in the Jewish cemetery on the Serb side, French soldiers are on the Bosnian side, and "tensions are certainly increased in that area," Aikman

Problems with aid convoys also continued. Serb, Muslim and Croat leaders all have signed accords pledging free passage for aid convoys, but they have been ignored repeatedly, especially by U.N. officials had suggested they convoys, but two of them remained stranded Wednesday.

Kris Janowski, spokesman for the U.N. high commissioner for refugees in Sarajevo, said a convoy for Sarajevo, blocked since Monday by Serb women, was still stuck at Hadzici, 10 miles from the capital.

Another convoy for Maglaj in northern Bosnia was stranded in Zenica, and it may take two or three days before permits are approved by the Serbs to proceed through a half-mile of Serb territory past the last Croat checkpoint at Brankovici, Janowski said.

Some 19,000 refugees in Maglaj have been under siege most of the past year. The town depends almost entirely on airdropped aid, which is risky to retrieve from combat zones and often does not reach intended recipients.

Bosnian radio said Serbs fired 300 tank, howitzer and mortar rounds at Maglaj early Wednesday, and at least two people had been

NEW YORK - A Lebanese man and two Jordanians were arrested Wednesday in the shooting attack on a van of Hasidic students that left one young man brain dead and another critically wounded and stoked fears of Mideast terrorism in the city's streets.

Police didn't disclose any motive for the attack, which came four days after a Jewish settler from Brooklyn massacred at least 30 Muslims at a mosque on the Israeli occupied West within a day of Tuesday's shoot-

Rashad Baz, 28, of Brooklyn, who came into the United States in 1984 on a student visa from Lebanon, was identified as the lone gunman who strafed the van with bullets. He faced 15 counts of attempted murder, four counts of assault and weapons charges, police Commissioner William Bratton said.

The other two suspects — Hlai Mohammad, 32, and Bassam Reyati, 27, both Jordanians living in Brooklyn - were charged with hindering prosecution and weapons possession, said police spokesman John Miller. They were believed to have helped Baz after the crime in disposing of the guns and the car he used, he

During a search of Baz's loaded shotgun known as a "street sweeper," a silencer and a stun gun, authorities said.

The blue car used in the attack was found in a body shop. Shells were found in the car, and that helped police locate the suspect, police said.

One of the victims, Aaron Halberstam, was declared brain dead early Wednesday.

President Clinton spoke by telephone with the Halberstam family.

"My prayers are with them, with their son, and with all of those affected by this spasm of brutal violence," Clinton said in a statement. "It is an outrage that this crime, which has overtones The suspects were arrested of a hate crime, could occur in our American community."

Halberstam was one among hundreds of Lubavitchers who had traveled from Brooklyn to visit Schneerson at Manhattan's Eye, Ear & Throat Hospital.

For the return trip, Halberstam and about 14 other students wearing the distinctive black hats and long sidelocks of Lubavitch Jews boarded an unmarked white van.

Shots rang out midmorning Tuesday on a ramp leading from the FDR Drive onto the bridge.

The van driver, realizing passengers were hit, stopped at the top of the ramp, police said. Two of the young men in the front went to find out what happened. They were standing outside when the driver of the blue car pulled ip and fired again.

In a panic, the driver sped off Brooklyn home, investigators toward Brooklyn. But the blue found a cache of weapons, includ- car caught up with the van again ng a submachine gun, a fully at midspan and fired once more, police said.

REBELS MAY SIGN PEACE TREATY

Mexican uprising ends in compromise

Associated Press

SAN CRISTOBAL DE LAS CASAS, Mexico - The government and Indian rebels reached a tentative accord Wednesday on most insurgent demands for ending their rebellion, including sweeping political reforms and aid to impoverished southern Indians.

The agreement to end the uprising that badly shook the government and left 145 dead must still be approved by Indian communities, the rebels said. It was not known how the Indian people, many of whom backed the rebellion, would react.

President Carlos Salinas de Gortari hailed the agreement, reached after 10 days of talks, and said rebel conditions "have been answered with a real desire to listen to and meet the demands for justice, welfare and dignity for the indigenous peoples."

"Let's hope that all of society backs the issues agreed upon ... We will seek to assure that all the details are taken care to arrive at a final signing of the peace

A statement from the Zapatista National Liberation Army praised the government's peace commissioner, Manuel Camacho Solis, and Roman Catholic Bishop Samuel Ruiz, mediator at the talks, and said the dialogue had traveled a "good path."

But Ruiz gave no date for the Zapatistas to return to sign a formal peace treaty and said he did not expect it to be this month. The rebels said they would sign a peace treaty if their local councils approved the accord.

The proposals, read at a news conference in the cathedral where the talks took place, satisfy 32 of the rebels' 34 demands and will likely reverberate throughout Mexico.

The government did not agree to a rebel call for Salinas to resign and for recognition of the guerrillas as a "belligerent force" under international law.

But the agreement includes a promise of reforms to make this year's presidential election more democratic than past elections and a pledge to consider similar aid and legal reforms for Indians else-

Camacho said Mexico's congress will hold a special session soon "for reforms that guarantee the impartiality of the electoral organs and the participation of citizens.'

Among other key government promises are greater self-government for Indian communities, a new criminal code and judges that respect Indian rights, mandatory education for all Mexican children about Indian cultures and antidiscrimination laws.

New Indian-dominated local districts are to be created. Districts in the legislature in Chiapas state, site of the rebellion, will be redrawn to increase Indian representation

"This whole effort opens the possibility of a historic change in the relation of the government and society with Indian communities," said Camacho.

The uprising has been confined to southern Chiapas state, where nearly a third of the 3.2 million people are Indian and nearly one fifth of the people speak an Indian language - double the rate for Mexico as a whole.

Other promises Wednesday range from new corn-grinding mills in rural villages to pledges of new roads, power lines, schools and clinics.

In Chiapas, people often must walk for hours to reach even a dirt road, schools commonly end before the sixth grade, and doctors and nurses often are nonexistent.

Altogether, it was a dramatic achievement for a previously unknown, ill-armed group that exploded into public view on Jan. 1 with the seizure of this city and several other towns. Officials at first dismissed the group as a tiny band of lawbreakers.

Zapatista leaders, who appeared in ski masks throughout the talks, were to head home - probably today - to begin consultations with their communities.

While revolts in neighboring Central American countries have lasted for decades, with tens of thousands killed, Mexico appears to be close to ending its revolt within months. About 145 died live with the dignity of human before a Jan. 12 cease-fire.

Estimates of rebel army strength range from several hundred to 2,000.

"We do not ask charity or gifts," said a blue-masked rebel who read out Zapatista demands but was not identified. "We ask the right to beings, with equality and justice."

believe in a theater of emotion, a theater of the body. The stage is the source of the fire, a hurricane, a storm where primal and dangerous forces clash.

Quotable

"It's a loud, strong and clear message to white America that you think things are better than your neighbors do."

Karl Berolzheimer

of the National Conference, which released a poll on Wednesday on perceptions of discrimination in America

MOVIE INDUSTRY

'Philadelphia' for blacks

nollywood has turned a new leaf with respect to its portrayal of the "newly oppressed." The big-screen illustration of people who have AIDS was considered taboo and beyond the regard of the moviegoing public until "Philadelphia" recently hit the theaters with Tom Hanks as the HIV-positive victim and Denzel Washington as the homophobic lawyer who nevertheless took his case. By playing up the overt discrimination and oppression suffered by these individuals and by equally downplaying the usual, although unimportant, questions of morality, "Philadelphia" confirmed its effect when at the end of the movie, the theater was packed with a sniffling, mostly white heterosexual audience somberly lining up for the exits.

For those of us who have been "historically oppressed," particularly the diaspora Africans who continue to suffer from the legacy of chattel slavery everywhere in the New World, this new face of Hollywood begs the question: Where is the movie that squares off against racism and jerks tears out of a white audience through a graphic presentation of America's violent, anti-black living history? If people are genuinely concerned about improving race relations in the United States, then a popular movie that does for the black community what "Philadelphia" did for the gay community would be extremely influential. Meanwhile, history tells us that at the end of the 19th century, white supremacists were making a killing in the mass media through literature like "The Negro, A Menace to American Civilization." Of course, today, we have its sequel in film: the so-called African-American, a "Menace II Society" only now, the authors are black.

Please do not misunderstand; films like "Boyz In The Hood," "Juice" and "New Jack City" are wildly entertaining. However, with limited access to the media, writers, directors and producers of African descent must become less concerned about commercializing the oft-exploited aspect of our culture which totes guns, sells drugs, talks "black," acts "black," dresses "black," dances "black" but does not think black, and more concerned about the part of our culture which is self-determined to view the world in a way that is positively Afrocentric. There must be a dynamic screenplay somewhere about two individuals fighting to bring racial justice and a higher level of consciousness to a university setting or judicial courtroom with the same passion and righteousness that characterized Washington's and Hanks' depictions in "Philadelphia."

There is a beginning in Robert Townsend's classic film "Hollywood Shuffle." Yet this film and others like it are shunned precisely because they do not conform to the white theater patron's notion of the typical black movie filled with hip-hop, slang words (including the continuous use of the mentacidal "n" word), violence (because it is presumed to be our nature) and utter realism. How many times have you heard that "Menace II Society" was real? Drugs, violence, good music and death: That's just the way it is in the "urban jungle." No. What is real are the black people who may be in these inner-city blues but are not of them. What is real are those who struggle every day to remain mentally free and literate - and conscious of an impending victory - in this depressing state.

What is helpful are films like Jawanzaa Kunjufu's "Up Against the Wall." Many of us have never heard of it because it takes a proactive posture in a story about saving our diaspora African youth, not a pro-death stance which, at best, only gives young white kids new words to say or a new rap song to play and, at worst, further substantiates the claim of the middle class, both black and white, that it is "their" problem. Our Hollywood movie moguls of African descent must think hard, know the story of Africans in America and always seek to reproduce our best image in the best interest of the black nation. Said Ainsley Vaughan, "Since movies play an important part in our society, we must learn to serve the masses in a progressive manner and we must use our talent to influence the entire world with the greatest force."

Kobie Colemon Editorial Writer

A modest proposal

To the Editor: After witnessing last week's protest that "beat up" Marvin Berenstein in particular, and the regents and their "classroom materials policy" in general, I was led to draw a number of conclusions from this violent episode in UI history. Without a doubt, when it comes to academic freedom there can be no room for dissent; and it is not to be expected that the regents debate with such disrespectful students. It is, I think, unreasonable that buildings such as the Union be open to students who have no respect for the decisions of their regents. It is, moreover, offensive that a UI security guard be subjected to not only being unarmed, but also the unusual request of students to go where they please in their Union. That guard had to protect himself, President Rawlings and the regents with nothing but a forceful shove in an attempt to close a stairwell door. It is only a matter of time, in light of the unusual and unexpected behavior of students, before we submit, in the interests of the right to make reasonable decisions, to a more responsible environment of armed campus police, Teaching Assistant and faculty blacklists, and closed-circuit cameras in classrooms. Only with the appropriate protection for policymakers will knowledgeable choices be made, access to adequate information be had and the UI's duty to higher education be achieved.

Credit's demonic pitfalls of temptation

A new phenomenon has besieged our country, leaping over the latest Zima craze in a single bound (or so I've heard) and extinguishing the smoldering ashes of the Tonya Harding files. The phenomenon, dubbed "financial illiteracy" has been diagnosed by financial planners as a widespread epidemic with unlimited proportions. Don't let the sugar-coated label fool you, though; the term has obviously been extracted from its original predecessor, financially screwed.'

Financial and economic "experts" contend that symptoms of "financial illiteracy" range from easy credit access to fundamental ignorance. Uh oh - with the latter symptom in mind, I raced to my financial guru's office. Before I had a chance to finish explaining myself, he shushed me with his finger, butting in with, "You're suffering from a phenomenon known in the economic field as 'financial illiter-

In less than five minutes, my financial planner confirmed my deep-rooted suspicions, citing credit cards as the primary cause of my monetary plight in a penniless hell. At least I was cleared of fundamental ignorance, but then again, I never gave my planner a chance to fin-

Instead, I stormed out of his office, swearing over my shoulder that one way or another - l intended to get to the bottom of the very disease which consumed me. But before I could finish, the secretary interrupted me, "Excuse me, Mr. Lindsey. I hate to interrupt you, but I just wanted to remind you that you're still a payment behind on your balance.

I acknowledged her remark by nodding my head up and down, and she subsequently added, "Oh, by the way, we now accept Discover card for payment."

The first thing I had to do in curing my own bout with "financial illiteracy" was admitting to myself that I had a problem. As with alcoholism, drug addiction or a gambling addiction,

I had to come to terms with my disease. In mall solicitors. One advantage of the shopping doing so, I had to analyze the origins of my credit plague, formulating some logical explanation of how, why, when and where everything went wrong.

Envy. One day during my adolescent years, I went to the neighborhood market to purchase some candy. While standing in line at the check-out counter, the cashier asked the man in front of me how he wished to pay. The man answered, "Charge it."

Easy enough, I thought to myself. The cashier rang up my assorted candies on the register and said, "Sixty-five cents, son."

Without any hesitation, I replied, "Charge

The cashier responded by laughing in my face. I didn't understand why I couldn't charge it and the guy before me could. I assumed it was another one of those little secrets that adults had in establishing control over the oppressed youth. Although I couldn't help but envy the guy who said "charge it" in such an authoritative manner. From that day onward, I looked forward to the day I could buy a pack of Razzle Dazzles, Juicy Fruit and a Snicker's candy bar by merely exclaiming "charge it!"

Temptation. During my formative years, I learned the conceptual principles underlying credit. At this stage I also discovered that some people had more credit than others, and for some people the sky was the limit. I found that a credit card was like always having a wad of cash stuffed in your pocket, and if something tempted you from a department store shelf, you just reached for the plastic and bought the

Later on in life, I discerned that in a way credit was similar to the forbidden fruit on the tree of knowledge. The fruit solemnly hangs from its branches until the serpent (e.g. banking institutions) comes along and hisses subliminal reptilian messages like "19.9 percent A.P.R., no money down" and "C'mon - everybody's doing it" into your ears, tempting your will power.

Accessibility. Increased demand for credit = capitalism = competition = junk mail, phone hagglers and the ever convenient shopping mall solicitors is that this method uses temptation (see above) as a device for luring in the mall-dulled senses of the public by offering them a wide array of gifts ranging from a 2 pound bag of M&Ms to a plastic dinnerware set for filling out a credit card application. What they don't know is that you can fill out a false name and still receive the gift. Shhhhhhh!

The clichéd Dig Your Own Grave, Now Lie In It Syndrome. This syndrome helps establish why the "financially illiterate" find if, pdilemma persisting and only getting worse. Financial planners state that infected customers see unused credit as a savings account and try to use credit to remedy any current credit problems, thus perpetuating the cycle.

Consequently, the problem with plucking a chunk of credit / forbidden fruit from the tree of knowledge is that if you pluck another piece to replace the previous one, you'll still have a naked branch. Whew, I had to put this in layman's terms to prove to myself that I'm not fundamentally ignorant. A low self-esteem can be damaging to one's id.

I'll give credit to the financial planners of America for shining a light on the "financial illiteracy" epidemic. The only problem remaining is the question of how to cure the economic quandary. One way of ending "financial illiteracy" would be to abolish credit entirely.

A less drastic solution, though, would be to legalize loansharking. After all, they charge just about the same interest rates, and the threat of a broken arm or a poisoned pet is enough incentive for anyone to think twice about using credit. Besides, the image of a Neanderthal-like loan shark hacking up a serpent with a blunt garden hoe conjures up the feeling that there is hope and a chance for redemption.

Ahhhhh yes, I sure hope he takes Visa or Mastercard.

Dose of Nancy just what the shrink ordered

Kerrigan has saved me a considerable sum in psychiatric fees.

Only two days ago, I was preparing to schedule a series of sessions with a shrink to help relieve me of a painful sense of shame, guilt and embarrassment.

Actually, these dark feelings came on rather suddenly. I was feeling rather chipper until I happened to glance at a sports column in a screechy Chicago tabloid.

The column solemnly began, "A proud country, America is not today.'

Feeling alarmed, I read on, and it got worse. They're laughing at us, you know. And they should. Only in America could a genteel sport degenerate into a sick sort of boxing sleaze.

After rehashing the Kerrigan-Harding unpleasantness, the sports columnist issued this poignant plea to Kerrigan:

"She is integrity and honor. She can clean the muck off our nation's face. Nancy Kerrigan, save us from ourselves." Boy, did that put me into a funk. I immedi-

I explained that mine was an emergency case. "I have lost my pride as an American; I believe the world is laughing at us, and I think I have muck on my face and only Nancy Kerrigan can get rid of the muck."

"Ah, yes," the shrink said. "That's what everyone else is suffering from. It has broken out all over the country and has taken on almost epidemic proportions. I can hear people in my waiting room crying out, 'Nancy, get rid of the muck, the muck, oh, the terrible muck."

That's terrible.

"Yes, I have never seen anything like it. Oth- hit in head with bomb. Ha-ha. You Americans. I he fine performance by skater Nancy ers are just sitting in a fetal position, mumbling, 'I am an American and I have no pride. Nancy, give me back my pride. Save us from

> That's exactly how I feel, except a fetal position hurts my back, so I'm just slouching.

"I will book you for tomorrow afternoon," the shrink said. "Now I must go. Someone is using fire extinguisher to get rid of the muck on his

To pass the gloomy time, I turned on my television. And there was a special news report on how the world was laughing at America.

They interviewed a North Korean official, who laughed with great glee and said, "Ha-ha, you imperialist pigs. You pick on us for trying to build The Bomb. But you let Tonya skate after Nancy get hit on knee. Ha-ha. Now joke on you."

Then they switched to a correspondent in Russia, who said, "The sound of laughter is earsplitting. Boris, what are you laughing about?" Boris came on camera and said, "Hoo-hoo, big shots, with your fancy cars and TV and cheap vodka. So maybe our economy is mess; maybe you catch our spy in your CIA and now maybe you don't send us so much money; maybe we got civil wars ready to break out all over this part of world. Maybe we got crazy people run our government. But, yo-ho-ho, we don't have no skaters get hit on leg by some goofus. We laugh on you, ho-ho."

Then the network cut to Bosnia and a scene showing hundreds of people standing in rubble but doubled up with laughter. One of them said, "Oh, boy, and we thought we had problems here with Serbs, Croats, Bosnians, Muslims, Christians, everybody shoot, boom, boom, bombs, guns. But we don't know what trouble is. Big trouble is woman get hit on leg with bat. Lucky me. My wife only get You funny. Especially with muck on face.'

They cut to a meeting at the United Nations just in time to show a delegate from Italy giggling as he put a whoopie cushion on the chair of our representative, while the entire chamber howled with glee.

I couldn't watch any more. So I fled to my favorite bar, where I saw Slats Grobnik, tears dripping down his long beak into his beer.

Yeah, me, too," he said. "I always been proud to be an American. We ain't perfect. But, hey, we saved the world from Hitler and Tojo. It took awhile and a lot of lives, but we knocked out big-time communism. We've given a lot of money to countries that are down and out. We go into Somalia to help out. We invent most of the medicine that keeps people alive all over the world. And look at all the immigrants who come here and find a good life. So I was always proud

"Now I ain't got no pride, and the world is laughing at us, and I got muck all over my face. All because of Tonya and that Gillooly crew. Jeez, I hope history don't judge America too harshly. I think I'm going to go kill myself."

But at that moment, Tonya came on television and she skated poorly. Our sprease a bit. And before long, Nancy came on a skated

Imagine: The state Legislature just passed a law singling out all blacks, or lews, or any other ethnicity you can think of. The law, in essence, forced the minority group to go before the dominant group and notify them of profoundly personal decisions. But this isn't all — the dominant culture has the power (they term it a right) to punish any decision it dislikes. So, basically, extification is a polite way of saying to beg for permission and forgiveness. And remember, all of this is done under the guise of being "for their own good" and justified by the belief that the dominant group has an innate or maybe even "divine" right to control (own) the subordinate group.

In Slockett's defense To the Editor:

David Mastio's President's Day attack on auditor Tom Slockett as some kind of shady empire builder once again shows a disrespect for the democratic process and the voters of Johnson County.

In 1965, I helped register black Mississippi voters for the first time under the new voting rights law. Mastio's comments about "Slockett's troops taking advantage of students' naivete" in getting them to sign a petition is the same view white Mississippians had of our efforts at that

It's ironic that in a country that is supposedly based on the idea of "no legislation without representation," the government could directly attack an entire portion of the population that has no voting rights - and no one thinks twice about it. Lies and distortions about Slockett, Gilroy

To the Editor: I must write in response to the lies and distortions David M. Mastio wrote in the DI on Feb. 21. I was appalled to see decent, hard-working and respected Democrats Tom Slockett and Pat Gilroy vilified on the word of "several Democrats" who are too ashamed of the lies that they are spreading to allow themselves to be identified. And I am incensed that a few cowards who identify themselves as Democrats are being allowed to speak for the vast majority of the honorable Democrats in this county who have no time for this garbage.

Mastio says that Pat Gilroy doesn't follow through with commitments. I would call three terms on the lowa Democratic State Central Committee a strong commitment. Last fall, the Johnson County Democratic barbecue occurred shortly after Pat's husband had surgery. In spite of family obligation, Pat was there to be sure that the barbecue went on as planned. Throughout her husband's recovery, she has successfully balanced her family, political and job responsibilities. She recently stepped down from the county central committee after many years of service to allow a younger person the opportunity to serve. Most would call this party building.

Fom Slockett embodies what a public servant should be. He believes in the power and importance of the vote. And he wants everyone to vote, regardless of party. He is a forwardlooking county official who is constantly looking for ways to increase service to the voters at a reduced cost. He is pioneering the satellite voting stations in lowa so that every lowa voter will have a voice in lowa's future. I have been impressed by the positive voter response to this innovative way to extend the franchise to every Johnson County voter.

I am proud of the Johnson County Democrats because I know that the Democrats I have worked with have integrity, compassion and a strong desire for good government. Johnson County Democrats do not agree on every issue or on every candidate. But they do respect each other's ideas and pull together for the greater good of their party and consequently their country.

Mastio needs to learn what honor and decency are. I hope that when he does so, he publicly apologizes to Tom Slockett, Pat Gilroy and all of the Johnson County Democrats he has offended.

Policy of hypocrisy To the Editor:

In the Feb. 11 issue of the DI. Jonathan Lyons is outraged that former Marine Lt. Colonel Oliver North is running for the U.S. Senate in Virginia. Lyons' reasoning is based on the premise that Col. North engaged in illegal activities and should therefore be exempt from public office. With this in mind, let's examine some novel criteria.

First, we have Carol Mosley-Braun, D-III., who during her '92 campaign, committed welfare fraud and tax evasion. Her mother, while on public aid, inherited land from which lumber was sold for $50,000. Mosley-Braun distributed the proceeds to relatives while "accidentally" forgetting to report the money to the proper authorities. By doing this, the inheritance was neither taxed nor deducted from her mother's public aid benefits. Only after increased public pressure, and a failed attempt at blaming the incident on racism, did Mosley-Braun pay the proper taxes and miraculously avoid prosecution. I don't recall Lyons questioning

Mosley-Braun's character, but then consistency and accuracy have never been characteristic of Lyons' writing. Next we have Bob Packwood, Ring some of his female employees Ore. He admitted to sexually harassand as punishment was re-elected by his constituents in the '92 election. Obviously, Oregonians forgot to observe Lyons' criteria when voting.

Finally, Lyons failed to mention¹ some of Col. North's opponent's very own improprieties. Charles Robb, D-Va., is currently embroiled in accusations of possible marijuana and narcotics use, while serving as Virginia governor. It is still unclear whether he

It is clear by the preceding examples that observing the law has unfortunately never been a prerequisite for holding public office. So, Mr. Lyons, why are you all of a sudden out-

This leads me to four possible explanations for Lyons' article. First: This facade is Lyons' weak attempt at opposing conservatism. Second: He may be unaware that lowans are not allowed to vote in a Virginia senatorienough common sense to research both sides of the issue and present an accurate argument. Fourth: He's just hypocritical and therefore falls right in line with the DI's policies of hypocrisy, inconsistency, inaccuracy and plain old-fashioned ignorance. I have a good idea which explanation James Moses would select, and I strongly concur.

In a guest opinion on Jan. 20, Jim Walters resurrected the 4-year-old story of the disposal of experimental animals at Oakdale. For those who do not recall, the questions raised by a newspaper article concerned the possible environmental effects on air pollution or contamination of the groundwater. The questions of safety were were answered satisfactorily by then Vice President for Research Dr. James Morrison, and further information was provided in a 12-page publication written by Lawrence Retting, assistant to the vice president.

Walters faulted the UI for failing to provide additional information that he requested: "the nature of each experiment; documentation on the sources of the research animals;

sources of the funding and verification that the experiments resulted in published data." The justification for a request that would require many hours of clerical work is not clear apart from their providing information for the Iowans for Animal Rights, which I have no reason to believe is a subdivision of the UI.

Walters did raise a question of concern to all of us in research about the sources of animals. I know of no one who wishes to obtain animals from a dealer who accepts animals that may have been stolen. Not having its own investigational unit, the Animal Care Unit of the university relies on the certification of the animal dealers by investigators from the U.S. Department of Agriculture as do all such units in the country. If a dealer is shown to have ignored regulations that are other than trivial, he should be dropped if those charges are shown to be true and if he continues to ignore them.

I have considered the view of animal rightists that the ethics that ideally govern the relations among humans should be the same as those that guide humans' relations with rats and mice. For reasons that seem to me to be self-evident, I reject it. I am concerned, however, about human suffering and about the welfare of the animals that are used in experimental studies that may ultimately reduce that suffering. I am joined in that concern by members of the University Animal Care and Use Committee and by the large majority of our citizens who have recognized the value of medical research and who request that it be carried out under conditions that eliminate or minimize discomfort. At this university, it is.

MINORITY POLL

Eight in 10 blacks in the poll believe their race lacks the opportunities enjoyed by whites. Six in 10 Hispanics and nearly as many Asian Americans feel the same.

Each minority group feels the others have been discriminated against, too, while most whites say minorities have equal opportunities, the poll found. "It's a loud, strong and clear message to white America that you think things are better than your neighbors do," said Karl Berolzheimer of the National Conference, as the group now calls itself.

Louis Harris, whose LH Research took the survey, is known for producing provocative results. In this poll, he did so by including ugly generalizations about minorities, which sizable numbers of Americans agreed with.

and Hispanics and 27 percent of whites concur with the stereotype that Asian Americans are "unscrupulous, crafty and devious

 Nearly half the Hispanics and four in 10 blacks and whites agree with the claim that Muslims "belong to a religion that condones or supports terrorism."

Two in three minority group members agreed with assertions that white people are insensitive to other people, have a long history of bigotry and believe they can boss other people around.

Sanford Cloud Jr., named Wednesday as National Conference president, said the poll showed that "there's a lot of work that needs to be done within communities of color regarding their feelings toward each other."

Cloud, the first black to head the organization, said he was surprised such a large gap remained between More than four in 10 blacks white and minority views. He attributed it in part to people isolating themselves in their homes and being exposed to repeated insensitive media portrayals of

"As long as we continue to have such differences of opinion, we cannot possibly come together and reach our full potential as a nation," he said. Discussing the intolerance exposed by the poll is necessary so the country can unite against problems like homelessness and street violence, he said.

An independent expert on polling, Stanley Presser, said he would not make too much of any single number in the poll but was not surprised by the pattern it showed "There's a lot of evidence that whites and blacks see the world through very different eyes," said Presser, a University of Maryland sociology professor.

LH Research said it polled nearly 2,755 people by phone.

AGEE

despite economic hardship is because a plan for education, health issues and health care has been in place since the beginning of the revolution, Agee said.

In the 1960s, the Cuban revolution was very influential in Latin America, especially in regard to agrarian reform and the redistribution of land. Agee, who had joined the CIA in 1960 "with a desire to have some adventure and see the world and a good deal of patriotism," was assigned to the Uruguay bureau, where efforts were being made to undermine the influence of the revolution in Cuba.

The goal of the CIA in Central America in that decade, he said, was to isolate the Cubans and pro-tect American holdings in the region. Agrarian reform was of particular concern because Americans held the largest and most productive land tracts.

"We were very successful," Agee said. "In my 12 years in the CIA, I did a lot of damage to Cuba and the Cuban revolution.

With the hope of the CIA, the U.S. government was eventually able to induce or force every Latin American nation to break diplomatic and trade ties with Cuba, he Having had no political education prior to joining the CIA, Agee began to question his role when he realized the U.S.-supported regimes were not improving conditions for the have-nots in Central America while bolstering the position of the elites.

"I came to the realization that all we were doing in Central America had only one goal - stability," he said. "Our job was to prop up political forces we considered friendly and to undermine those we considered unfriendly. Political repression was a large part of this undertaking."

Agee left the CIA in 1969 with no intention of becoming politically active but wanted to enter a doctoral program at the National University in Mexico.

Learning the history of Central America and fearing that CIA efforts in regard to Cuba would lead to another Vietnam-style military intervention prompted Agee to become the first CIA operative to go public about the work of the agency in the region.

"What my colleagues and I had been doing in Central America was the same as the CIA was doing in Vietnam," Agee said. "The Vietnam War grew out of failed CIA efforts."

Spurs' Robinson tabbed top player

NEW YORK (AP) — David Robinson of the San Antonio Spurs, who on Feb. 17 recorded only the fourth quadruple-double in NBA history, was named Player of the Month Wednesday.

Robinson averaged 30.7 points, 10.5 rebounds, 7.2 assists and 4.4 blocked shots in 13 games. The Spurs won 11 of them to move .008 percentage points behind first-place Houston in the Midwest Division.

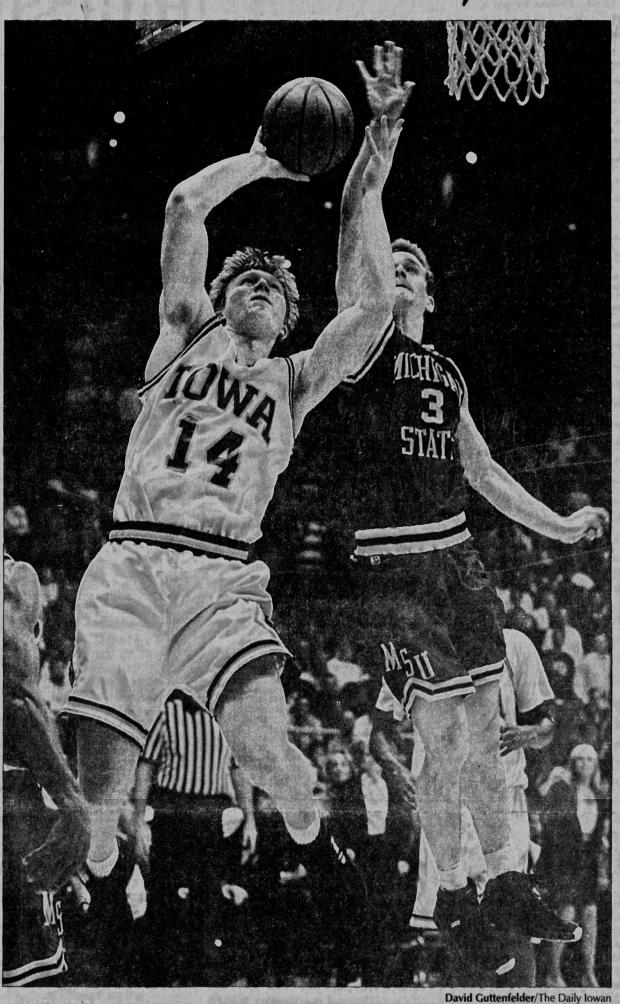

The 7-foot-1 center had 50 points in a victory at Minnesota and at least 30 points in seven of 13 games.

He had 34 points, 10 ebounds, 10 assists and 10 blocked shots in a 115-96 victory over Detroit, joining Alvin Robertson, Hakeen Olajuwon and Nate Thurmond as the only other players to get ble-figure totals in four offensive statistics in a single Robinson leads the league with five triple-doubles and is second in scoring (28.5 ppg).

Other candidates for the award were Jamal Mashburn of Dallas, LaPhonso Ellis of Denver, Rik Smits of Indiana, Steve Smith of Miami, Kenny Anderson of New Jersey and Shaquille O'Neal

Hawkeyes' Yarbrough steps up performance

Joel Donofrio The Daily Iowan

When the 1993-94 women's basketball season began, Iowa coach C. Vivian Stringer said one of her top priorities was to find a replacement for point guard Laurie Aaron, who graduated last year.

As the No. 14 Hawkeyes prepare to host No. 2 Penn State and Ohio State in their final home games of the year, junior Arneda Yarbrough will be directing the offense, hoping her team can head towards the NCAA tournament on a five-game winning streak.

"NeNe," as she is known by her teammates, leads the Hawkeyes in assists, averaging 3.2 per game, and is tied with Virgie Dillingham for the team lead in steals with 25. After a slow start in non-conference games, Yarbrough has averaged 5.1 points per Big Ten con-

"Definitely my jump shot has improved - not necessarily the form of my jump shot, it's just that I'm more assertive in taking it," Yarbrough said. "I'm not as hesitant as I was in the beginning, as far as taking the jump shot. Now, I'm just feeling more in tune with the team and what we're doing. I'm feeling more comfortable, and it's Ohio State's Katie Smith. "There are a lot of great point guards that I've played against, and with the point guards we have in the Big Ten, the only thing you want to try and do is contain, stay

"As a point guard, you really like to penetrate, get in the lane and make some good passes, and if you're guarding their point guard, you hate for them to do that on you, because you know how it is."

Although she scored a careerhigh 15 points in Iowa's 74-67 victory at Wisconsin Jan. 7, Yarbrough had two of her best Finishing second in both the Big Ten Conference tournament and the NCAA Championships last year, Iowa's Joel Sharratt is chomping at the bit to make it to the next level.

This season's 11-3 record, however, hasn't measured up to Iowa wrestling standards. The Hawkeyes have lost three dual meets - two to No. 1 Oklahoma State and one to No. 2 Minnesota. Only once since 1977 has Iowa lost three dual meets in a season. In the same

ISU drops men's tennis, gy gymnastics

Chuck Schoffner

Associated Press AMES - Moving to cut costs and increase gender balance, Iowa State is dropping men's gymnastics and tennis and adding women's soc-

The move will save $647,700 over the next three years, athletic director Gene Smith said Wednesday, and bring the percentage of athletic scholarships for men and women in line with Iowa State's enrollment - 59 percent male, 41 percent female. It also will give Iowa State more sports for women (11) than men (9). Smith said that while gender concerns were an issue in dropping the two sports, which offer a total of 10.5 scholarships, cost was the overriding factor. He also said the decision was no reflection on the coaches or athletes in either

"I want it to be understood that all of them, student-athletes and the coaches, have done a commendable job for Iowa State University and we thank them for that," Smith said. "But this is a fiscal decision that had to be made.

The two sports will be terminated when their current seasons end - gymnastics in April and tennis in May. Women's soccer will have 11 scholarships and start play next fall. Smith said he hopes to hire a coach within the next two months.

Gymnastics coach Dave Mickelson, who competed in the parallel bars and pommel horse on Iowa State's 1974 national championship team, said he knew his sport was on shaky ground because there are only 33 Division I programs

But tennis coach Mike Henrich said he was stunned by the decision to drop his sport. "It was really out of the blue," he said. "No one else in the Big Eight, I know of none in the country that are doing it, so it really did catch me off guard. I am unprepared for it. Henrich, in his fifth year at Iowa State, said his players were surprised and upset.

"It's really hard for them to fathom why they're being dropped, especially given that no women's sports were dropped and one was actually added," he said. "That's very hard for them sport. to accept." Mickelson, in his 10th season as Iowa State's coach, said that because of the declining num-elsewhere so the two programs could be saved. But he finally concluded it couldn't be done and still maintain a balanced budget. The budget balanced for the 1992-93 fiscal year only because the university agreed to absorb the athletic department's $446,000 The tennis players and gymnasts can transfer to another school and be eligible immediately. Those who stay will keep their scholarships. Smith said the university will help Mickelson and Henrich find new jobs. The women's soccer team will be funded by $200,000 that Iowa State President Martin Jischke had set aside last year to add a women's

Smith said the number of women's soccer teams has grown 43 percent at NCAA schools over the last five years. Women's variety show returns to the wild side

Susan Shore will be the emcee and a featured performer at the latest Wild Women show Saturday at Riverside Theatre.

Shayla Thiel The Daily Iowan

There are few chances in Iowa City to attend a wild night of talent featuring only X chromosomes, minus the usual Dancer's Night Club repertoire. We're talking about real talent from women with clothes on — and it can be found Saturday at 6 and 9 p.m. at River-side Theatre in the fifth annual "Wild Women" variety show, "A Walk on the Wild Women Side."

This year's Wild Women show features a number of talented performers, including vocalists and instrumentalists, poets, puppeteers, dancers, painters, actors and performance artists of all ages and walks of life. Some are prominent in the Iowa City performing arena, while others are touted as new surprise talent.

Among the local legends is Mary Fickel, a jazz and blues singer on the Iowa City music scene for 20 years. Fickel is currently a member of the band Big Sister and has been a favorite at past Wild Women shows. Another hometown favorite, singer / guitarist Susan Shore, will present her unique brand of folk-style songs as well as serve as emcee for the program. Shore, who released the honest Old 218 last fall, is the producer of Wild Women and original founder of the show's concept.

"I think you can look around and see there are really very few women performing, especially locally," she said. "But mainly, the first time I did the first show, I did it just to do it. And it's since been refined and made more professional, but we've retained the original spirit of presenting powerful, talented women."

Saturday's Wild Women are not all of the legal age; in fact, Rachel Gilbert St., at 338-7672.

Kolen and Sarah Alward aren't even eligible for learners' permits in this state. The young comediennes, ages 12 and 13, respectively, will be giving a repeat performance of their Wild Women skit on the 1960s' etiquette / personal hygiene guide for teens about to burst into the pimply world of ado-

Also a returning hit from the November Cedar Rapids show are seasoned musicians Coleen Peter-son and Michelle Coleman, who play in a jazz / country swing / contemporary folk trio with Mold fiddler Nan Schwartz. Guitarist / vocalist Peterson is a veteran of the bands Wheel Hoss and Monel Sweeney and singer / songwriter / guitarist Coleman is a versatile vocalist who returns to the Wild Woman show. Betsy Hickock, of Hillis and Hickock fame, will sit in for Schwartz this weekend.

Be Jaw Fleming, an Ames guitarist and vocalist whose original tunes range from Delta blues to contemporary folk and jazz, will be making her Iowa City debut Saturday. Adding a new flavor to the show, Alice Hampton and Karin Stein, members of the group Alma Iowana, will perform tradi-tional South American music on stringed instruments and pan pipes with vocals.

"It's a very strong show," Shore said. "Frankly, I think we're all sick of having cabin fever. And Riverside Theatre is a great place to go to listen to music and get out on the town."

Tickets for "A Walk on the Wild Women Side" are $7 and will be available in advance and on the day of the show. For information call Riverside Theatre, 213 N.

'Ace Ventura' returns to No. 1; 'Sugar Hill' debuts in 3rd place

Associated Press

LOS ANGELES - "Ace Ventura: Pet Detective" snuck past Steven Seagal and Wesley Snipes to resurface as the nation's top-earning film over the weekend. The lowbudget comedy featuring Jim Carrey of "In Living Color" earned $6.5 million to take the top spot at ticket counters

After a week on top, Seagal's Alaskan-environmentalist "On Deadly Ground" dropped to second place with $6.4 million.

Snipes' new drug-dealer drama "Sugar Hill" made $5.7 million for third, while "8 Seconds," a rodeo movie starring Luke Perry, roped $3.4 million in its debut weekend theater locations nationwide.

"Blank Check" was fourth with $4.1 million, "Blue Chips" grossed $4 million for fifth and "Reality Bites" was sixth with $3.6 million. Following "8 Seconds" in eighthwas "Schindler's List."

The Holocaust draw moved down from sixth a week ago, bring. ing in $2.9 million. Its leading 12 Academy Award nominations have not boosted the film's ticket sales.

"Mrs. Doubtfire" was ninth with $2.78 million and is poised to pass the $200 million mark within a week. "My Father, the Hero" made $2.75 million for 10th.

The re-release of "Midnight Cowboy" was moderately successful; the film grossed $36,846 in two

Killing comic heroes: the right way and the wrong way Written by Garth Ennis, this sto-The Daily Iowan DC Comics' recent execution and resurrection of Superman may have been the most widely hyped and thus the most commercially successful - use of the old kill-offthe-character gimmick so far, but it was hardly an unusual event in any other respect. Hype aside, superhero comics have about plumbed that gambit to death over the past 30 years.

Marvel in particular has based a frightening number of its series on variants of the death stunt. But DC is hardly innocent either; Supes, like many of his contemporaries, has been "dead" before. And judging by the amount of money he made last time around, he'll probably eventually be dead again.

The problem, of course, isn't how often the gimmick's been tried - it's how often it's done badly, unbelievably, annoyingly. The cheesy excuses have ranged from robot look-alikes to clones to alternate dimensional duplicates to that old '60s standby, the "imaginary story."

There is, however, a right way to go about it. For proof, readers need look no further than the latest Vertigo Comics compilation, "Danger-ry line from the horror-oriented "Hellblazer" series shows how fan favorite John Constantine deals with the news that he's contracted terminal lung cancer - not from any of his renowned exploits with black magic and angry demons, but from a more mundane source: his pack-a-day-plus cigarette habit.

Constantine pals around with sorcerers, angels and witches; he deals with the supernatural on a daily basis. But when it comes to his own impending death, he seems to be as powerless as anyone else. The only problem is, his cocky antics haven't endeared him to God, and they've downright infuriated the devil. He doesn't dare die.

The result is a Vertigo-style exploration of mortality, humanity and evil. No stiff pontificating over superpowered fistfights here; this is a subtle horror, deftly handled. Constantine himself is a readily appealing character. His straightforward, arrogant style, his calculatedly flippant attitude and his talent for creative solutions to impossible problems make him one of DC's more involving personalities. And Ennis does an impressive job of fleshing him out as a complex character with human reac-

The story's appeal runs further than the basic themes, however. Ennis' clever plot twists and unexpectedly daring conclusion are gripping and purposeful; his prose is clean and frightening. Overall, this is a strong contribution to the horror comics genre.

ongoing success. The book has its flaws, most notably in the widely variable art and the bland and rushed-looking coloring. Though occasionally very striking, the visuals generally aren't up to the level of Ennis' powerful, gripping script. But that script is in itself more than a reason to pick up this book. If it's ever really necessary to kill off and then bring back a comics character, this is indubitably the More to the point, "Dangerous way to do it - with style, with tal-
