Possible axing of public intox law pleases students

Jim Snyder
The Daily Iowan

Local reaction to an Iowa Senate committee recommendation to repeal the state public intoxication law is as might be expected: students, yea; cops, nay.

The Judiciary Committee voted Tuesday 12-3 to recommend the full Senate vote to repeal the law. Officials in Polk County had asked the committee to look into the issue because the public intoxication law contributes to jail overcrowding and does little to deter habitual offenders.

Iowa City Police Department Capt. Don Strand said although police usually stop people for public intoxication only when they are violating other laws, such as public urination, disorderly conduct, assault or possession of alcohol under the legal age, repealing the state law would be a mistake.

"The law-abiding public doesn't like to see drunks lying around," Strand said. "Liquor, in our estimation, is a serious problem in Iowa City."

In 1993, there were 919 public intoxication arrests locally.

The public intoxication law, Strand said, is primarily in place to allow law enforcement officials to protect people from themselves.

"It seems like we lose the opportunity to protect them if we aren't allowed to put them in jail," he said. "If they fall and injure themselves on public property, there will probably be some litigation. In this day and age of frivolous lawsuits, we may lose."

But from some students' perspectives, the public intoxication law seems to have little effect and the time it takes to enforce it could be better spent.

Small airplane crashes near I.C. Airport, no one injured

A small, experimental "Varize" airplane flown by an Iowa City resident crashed 3/4 mile west of the Iowa City Airport at approximately 12:55 p.m. Thursday. No one was injured.

Richard Miller, 333 Governor St., told Johnson County Sheriff's officers he had been flying for about half an hour when he developed engine problems. He said the engine started to stall and sounded as though it had a fuel problem. Miller said while he was looking for a place to land, the engine started up again.

As he approached the airport, the plane developed problems again, forcing him to land in an open field. While attempting to land, he hit a barbed wire fence and the plane crashed.

The Federal Aviation Administration is investigating the accident.

Trial set for former officer accused of stealing

Former Iowa City police officer Russell M. Long, who pleaded not guilty to fifth-degree theft charges, had his trial hearing scheduled Thursday morning for April 6 at 10 a.m.

On Feb. 8, Target store security reportedly observed Long taking merchandise and then leaving the store without paying. Long, who was confronted outside the store, took one package of condoms and two packages of Gerber onesies totaling $23.97, police reports stated.

Long was subsequently fired from the Iowa City Police Department. If proven guilty, he faces a $100 fine or 30 days in jail.

Coralville police Chief Barry Bedford said the incident was unfortunate, but Long will not be let off easily.

"The investigation of the case has been closed with the filing of charges," he said. "It's always regrettable when something like this happens, but a police officer is going to be treated like anyone else."

JAPAN TARGETED BY ACT

Trade war weapon revived by Clinton

Martin Crutsinger
Associated Press

WASHINGTON - Unable to achieve a breakthrough in his battle to open Japanese markets, President Clinton brought back to life the most feared weapon in America's trade arsenal on Thursday.

By executive order, the president revived an expired provision of U.S. law known as Super 301. The president said he would put forward by Sept. 30 a target list of countries deemed to have erected the most harmful barriers to American goods and services.

If negotiations fail to remove those barriers, the administration would have the power to impose punitive tariffs of up to 100 percent against exports from those nations. The amount targeted would equal the sales being lost by American producers.

"This administration is committed to opening markets for high-quality goods and services produced by competitive American workers," the president said as he announced his decision. "This action will help us reach our objective - open markets that will create better jobs and increase wages at home and abroad."

Administration officials denied that they were trying to start a trade war with Japan, but they said the United States would not relent in its efforts to open Japan's markets as a way of narrowing a record $59.3 billion trade imbalance between the two nations.

Trade tensions were at the heart of an ABC News-Washington Post poll, released Thursday, in which 58 percent of Americans surveyed viewed U.S.-Japanese relations as not good or poor, while only 38 percent

PROCEEDS WILL GO TO PEDIATRIC UNIT

UI sponsored dance-a-thon incorporated in RiverFest

Students and community members will get their chance to waltz, polka, fox trot or hip hop the night away to music ranging from the Iowa fight song to that of the best local bands at the UI's first 36-hour dance marathon kicking off RiverFest 1995.

The UI received the idea from Pennsylvania State University. Each year PSU sponsors a 48-hour dance marathon to raise money for the Four Diamond Fund at Hershey Medical Center. PSU has held the marathon for 22 years and has donated more than $6 million to help children with cancer.

UI student dance marathon advisers Michelle Hebert and Rich Post attended this year's marathon. PSU donated more than $1.3 million in 1993 alone.

"It was an incredible experience," Post said. "To see the smiles it puts on the little kids' faces is the most important thing. It means so much to them and their parents."

Hebert said it's hard to express how it felt to be a part of the marathon. She said throughout the dance, the families and children with cancer came to cheer the dancers on. They shared stories of how the money helped to keep their children alive and prolong the lives of some a bit longer, she said.

Post said the UI is going to work with the Children's Miracle Network to donate the funds the UI raises to the pediatric unit at the UI Hospitals and Clinics.

"Our main goal is to keep all the money here in the community," he said.

PSU's marathon receives donations from dancer pledges, student collection and corporate sponsorship. Hebert said the greek community, student organizations and individual students participate in the event.

All the entertainment is donated. Hebert said this year the top local band approached PSU and asked if they could play. The community and local businesses donate food and services. The event uses 1,200 student volunteers and 540 dancers.

Gender bias at the UI: one professor's story

Tricia DeWall
The Daily Iowan

When Associate Professor of mathematics Margaret Kleinfeld arrived at the UI with her husband in 1968, she thought about getting a teaching job but knew it was out of the question.

At that time, a nepotism policy prevented a husband and wife from being hired in the same department. Soon the policy was removed and Kleinfeld was hired.

"We had a change of chair in the department and he decided I should only be half-time," Kleinfeld said. "I didn't know why. I thought it was unfair and eventually I filed a complaint."

Kleinfeld later found out the reason her job was suddenly cut.

"What happened was the Iowa Civil Rights Commission was doing a study," she said. "The university administration and department chair were worried because even when you multiplied my salary by two, it did not look good when compared to my background.

"So then they officially made me 40-percent time to make it look better. It was a blatant attempt to circumvent the investigation," she said.

Kleinfeld's complaint with the Equal Employment Opportunity Commission and the Civil Rights Commission was settled within the university and her full-time job was restored.

"I thought I owed a debt of gratitude to the women's movement of the '60s," Kleinfeld said. "The university felt pressure that, if they didn't act correctly, I could sue. The outside pressure was there,

New game slam-dunks sales, popularity

Terry Collins

The Daily Iowan

Dan Majerle of the Suns shoots for three — it's a brick. Shaquille O'Neal of the Magic grabs the rebound, passes to teammate Scott Skiles who has Charles Barkley in his face, when all of the sudden he throws for an alley-oop to Shaq, who slams it home. The crowd roars as the announcer says, "Oh, what a spectacular move!"

No, this isn't a sports article, just a brief description of one of the hottest video games around — NBA Jams. The game, which features basketball superstars from all 27 teams in two-on-two competition, makes its home video debut on Sega Genesis and Super Nintendo game systems beginning today.

Due to its enormous popularity, video stores such as Software Etc. in the Old Capitol Mall took more than 60 names from callers requesting the game in advance, according to Sean Porter, senior sales assistant at the store. Porter received special permission from Acclaim Electronics, the maker of NBA Jams, to release the game on Thursday.

"The demand was so high not only here, but everywhere, that we only got half of our requests," he said Thursday. "People have been coming in asking for the game all day."

"NBA Jams is fun because it's not a shoot'em up or go through maze type game. You don't have to rip someone's head off to have a good time. The game is physical, but it's just basketball."

Sean Porter, senior sales assistant at Software Etc., Old Capitol Mall

Chris Binns, products specialist at Best Buy, 1963 Broadway, said he expects to be trampled by anxious customers when he opens the store's doors today at 10 a.m.

"We'll probably have a long line when we open," he said. "People better come early because we will be selling on a first come, first serve basis."

Binns said Best Buy has been averaging at least 20 calls a day from people asking about the game. He predicts the store will be sold out by the time the store closes.

"From the popularity, it seems like a big demand," he said. "I'd say at least 70 percent of our callers want us to hold a copy of the game for them, but we can't."

Although NBA Jams will sell for suggested retail prices ranging from $32.95 for Super Nintendo to $54.95 for Sega Genesis, the price could be right for players who think it costs too much to pay at the arcade.

UI junior Dan Griggs said he averages about $20 per week playing at the arcade. He is considering buying a home video system just to play the game.

"I probably will get one now," he said. "I will definitely save a lot of money."

David Greedy/The Daily Iowan

NBA Jams, the two-on-two action basketball game by Acclaim, hits store shelves across town today for Sega and Nintendo home

Griggs, whose favorite team to play on NBA Jams is the Phoenix Suns, said he discovered the game while walking through the mall one day and has been hooked ever since.

"Just about every version of the game in Iowa City has my name on it somewhere," he said.

Scott Erickson of Cedar Rapids, who spends at least $10 each time he goes to the arcade, said he and his brother Bryan chipped in together to preorder the game.

"The graphics are excellent because they have the real players unlike the other games," he said. "I like how easy it is to control the players because they are doing exactly what you want them to do." Porter thinks the demand for NBA Jams will be the biggest for a video game ever, even higher than another game made by Acclaim, Mortal Kombat.

"I think it will be more popular than Mortal Kombat because there's no controversy involved with its content," he said.

Griggs said playing the game is just pure fun. "NBA Jams is fun because it's not a shoot'em up or go through a maze type game," he said. "You don't have to rip someone's head off to have a good time. The game is physical, but it's just basketball."

FANS 'BEAM IN' FROM ALL OVER

Exhibit provides learning that's out of this world

Elizabeth Weise

Associated Press

SAN FRANCISCO — The planet of Kutta faces destruction from a rogue asteroid. Red alert sirens wail, muffled thuds echo through the room. At the helm of the U.S.S. Enterprise, 8-year-old Travis Buck positions a reverse tractor beam that will deflect the asteroid and save the planet.

A schematic on his screen gives the position of the beam and the projected path of the asteroid. He presses the blinking "fire" button. Slowly the asteroid curves to the right, out of the path of the planet.

"You are a true warrior," Lt. Wolf congratulates him.

Travis has saved the inhabitants of Kutta — and learned a few elements of basic physics, too.

Even on Wednesday morning, the Star Trek: Federation Science exhibit at the California Academy of Sciences in Golden Gate Park is full of fans beaming down to planets, helping Lt. Gordi LaForge realign the Enterprise's navigational computers and zeroing in on a distress signal from a shuttle craft with a breached warp core.

Or, for the science teachers in the audience, they're learning about virtual reality, triangulation and how waveforms affect the signal-to-noise ratio of radio transmissions.

Either way, everyone's having a lot of fun. Travis is here for a special birthday present. He's a major "Star Trek" fan, something that seems to run in the family. His uncle has fun in all the way from Montana just to spend the day at the exhibit with Travis and his parents.

"They're both big fans. They collect everything to do with 'Star Trek,'" says his mother, Kristen Wells. The family drove for more than an hour to spend the day at the museum.

His mother says "Star Trek" is a good influence on Travis, who wants to grow up and invent warp drive.

"He uses words and concepts that really surprise me. He's a complete science buff because of the show," she says.

The exhibit, built around concepts from the "Star Trek" phenomenon, flows seamlessly into intriguing science lessons. Pressurized air-powered rockets illustrate the physics concepts of action and reaction.

All across the exhibit children stare in rapt attention at their screens, moving effortlessly between 20th- and 24th-century science.

Not so their adult counterparts. Michael Gaylord of San Francisco failed in his attempt to save the planet Travis so ably defended.

"You are relieved of duty!" Lt. Wolf barks from the screen.

Mutters Gaylord, "I don't know how to use these computers." The education exhibit, which was designed by the Oregon Museum of Science and Industry in Portland, opened there in January 1992. Two identical traveling "Star Trek" exhibits will tour throughout this country and Canada.

Teen seeks individuality with new legal name: Trout Fishing in America

CARPINTERIA, Calif. (AP) — A teen-ager casting about for a new name has reeled in a golden one: Trout Fishing in America.

The 17-year-old wanted to do something different for his upcoming graduation from Carpinteria High School. So he went to court last week to legally change his name from Peter Eastman Jr. to Trout Fishing in America.

Trout said he decided to change his name to break away from tradition. "I am just saying I am not this little kid anymore. I want to be my own person."

The name was inspired by Richard Brautigan's 1967 counterculture classic, "Trout Fishing in America."

"I really liked the book," Trout said. "He looks at the world in a way I like."

Peter Eastman Sr. said he supports his son's decision but was sad that the family torch has been passed to a fish.

Still, the senior Eastman paid the $182 name change filing fee as a graduation present for his son. It should become official in a couple of weeks and the name Trout Fishing in America should appear on his diploma in June.

The boy's mother isn't sure what to call her son.

"Trout Fishing in America is a little long," Addie Green said.

SCIENCE EDUCATION REFORMED

PAL program stresses interactive learning

Megan Penick
The Daily Iowan

Parents of Iowa City elementary school children, the UI and the Iowa City Community School District are beginning a partnership in learning through a four-year $1 million grant awarded by the National Science Foundation.

Parents, Activities and Language is geared toward making science learning a more integral part of young students' lives and making parents a part of the learning process. PALs will bring new science teaching methods and materials into the classroom by combining science with liberal arts and reading. It will also train parents in how to help their children learn science at home.

"We are building on the notion that the whole village educates the child, and in science that would be true as well."

James Shymansky, PALs project director, on parental participation

UI science education Professor and project director James Shymansky said PALs' method of teaching should greatly influence students' desire to learn science and increase science literacy.

"I would say the combination of using the student ideas, integrating science across the curriculum and utilizing parents as partners is really what makes this cooperative venture unique," he said. "We are optimistic that it's going to become a model for not only the state, but for the nation in science education."

Shymansky said the project is only one in a major science education reform movement taking place throughout the United

"The Iowa City School District over that last several years has been restructuring its own K through six science program," he said. "This was an opportune time for the efforts to get money through the National Science Foundation, coinciding with the district's efforts to restructure their program."

Shymansky said the money will help teachers increase their backgrounds in science and give them new strategies.

"These ideas color and contribute to their science learning," Shymansky said. "We are going to be focusing efforts with the teachers to really learn how to identify and use those ideas in their instruction."

The parent component is essential to the program, he said.

"We are building on the notion that the whole village educates the child, and in science that would be true as well," Shymansky said. "We're going to be working with parents to give them some specific strategies and meaningful activities to do with their children at home."

Parent Deb Dunkhase, who is taking part in a PALs pilot program at Longfellow Elementary School, said the idea of parents as partners in learning is key to the project's success.

"In the pilot we had at Longfellow Elementary, we had over 100 percent parent participation. Sometimes, we had two parents come for one child," she said. "We feel that parents becoming partners with their child will be a big impact on the science program."

This spring, 16 advocate teachers will be trained in the PALs method. The program will be implemented in all 16 Iowa City elementary schools starting next fall. The program will be implemented in all classrooms throughout the district in the spring of 1995.

UNION DROP-OFF SITE OFFERED

Coalition promotes magazine recycling

Holly Reinhardt
The Daily Iowan

The UI Environmental Coalition has set up a magazine recycling drop-off site in the Union to help City Carton's first drive of the year.

The coalition began collecting magazines Thursday, and they will be accepted through 3 p.m. today.

Scott Darlington, co-chairman of the coalition, said it is important to give college students a drop-off site.

"For anyone this is a useful service, but especially for students because they subscribe to a lot of magazines," he said. "If the word gets out, students are potentially a great source."

City Carton, 3 E. Benton St., has four magazine recycling days scheduled for this year.

Magazines may be dropped off Saturday at City Carton; Texaco Mustang Market, corner of Highway 965 and Holiday Road, Coralville; or Texaco Mustang Market, corner of Main Street in Solon. All sites will be open from 8 a.m. to 4 p.m.

City Carton Manager John Ockenfels said his business hopes to recycle 40-50,000 pounds of magazines.

Kaye Eckhardt, vice president of administration for City Carton, said the event is an effort to extend service to customers.

"It is kind of a customer service what does comes in must be monitored, Eckhardt said.

"There didn't used to be a market for magazine-type paper, but it is slowly being created," she said.

Only magazines with 100 percent shiny pages, such as Rolling Stone and Time, are usable. Periodicals with dull pages, like TV Guide and Reader's Digest, will not be accepted. Phone books will also be collected.

Eckhardt said help will be available for unloading magazines. Recycling information will also be distributed.

Darlington said the magazines collected at the Union will be taken to City Carton on Saturday by members of the coalition.

He said it is sometimes difficult to encourage students to participate, but he is hoping for a good turnout.

"We didn't get the word out as soon as we'd have liked to," Darlington said. "It takes a lot of urging to get students out of their room and to the Union to do anything, but I hope everyone comes out and recycles a magazine."

CABLE ACCESS ONLY OPPOSED

Board holds first taped meeting, looks to radio

Kristin Berg
The Daily Iowan

The Johnson County Board of Supervisors experienced a couple of firsts at its meeting Thursday with the appearance of new supervisor Don Sehr and television cameras in the room.

The board voted last Thursday to televise its Thursday morning meetings for a four-month trial period. Sehr was appointed as former supervisor Betty Ockenfels' replacement Tuesday.

As a whole, the supervisors said the first televised meeting ran smoothly and believe the pilot project will work out. But supervisors Patricia Meade and Sehr still have reservations about accessibility to cable.

"I have a problem with the fact that cable doesn't reach enough people in the rural areas," Meade said. "I don't want to serve the people who can afford it. I want to serve everyone."

In order to solve this problem, Meade is trying to find a radio station interested in broadcasting the meetings.

Sehr said he has always been against televising the meetings, because he was afraid the cameras would intimidate the public and board members. He was also concerned about the cost of the project, but he sees it as a necessary evil. He said there is nothing wrong with giving it a try and also believes radio would be an asset.

"If some (radio) station would broadcast it, I think more people would listen to it on the radio in their tractor cabs and at work," he said.

Board Chairman Steve Lacina, who is a farmer, said using the radio may bring the meetings to more people. Lacina and supervisor Charles Duffy feared the cameras would disrupt the meetings, but both said it didn't seem to make a difference.

"It went well," Lacina said. "There were no changes in the way business was conducted."

Lacina said the board and public attending the meetings will have to be more careful about what they say in the midst of argument. He said it's going to be important to try not to hurt anyone's feelings.

The newly appointed Sehr, who has previously served on the board, said he is glad to be back and already feels comfortable.

"I felt like I hadn't been gone," he said. "I'm happy to be back, but I'm sorry to replace Betty. I would like to be working with her rather than replacing her."

In response to charges of being a "good old boy," Sehr said the board has been progressive in the past and that will continue.

Fiber-optics system gets Iowans' OK

Associated Press

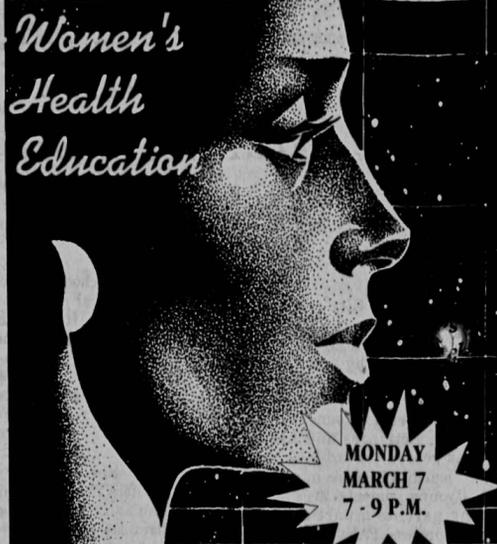

DES MOINES — Iowans may not know much about the state's fiber-optic network, but most still support the decision to build it, a new poll shows.

In an Iowa Poll conducted last month by the Des Moines Register, 47 percent of respondents said they supported the decision to build the network — cost overruns and political hassles notwithstanding. Only 13 percent of the 717 adults polled thought it was a bad idea, while 40 percent weren't sure.

Lawmakers approved the network with little debate in 1989 after being told the state would save money by routing all its telephone traffic through the system. Supporters billed it as a network that would enable schools across Iowa to share quality teaching.

Since then, the still unfinished network has become a key issue in the Republican primary campaign for governor, and the cost of building and maintaining the network has risen higher than anticipated.

About two-thirds of those polled said they didn't know much about the network. According to the study, which has a margin of error of plus or minus 3.7 percentage points, support for the decision to build the network is strongest among those familiar with the project.

Colombian rebels release kidnapped American

1 BOGOTA, Colombia (AP) — Leftist rebels released an American gold miner to a priest and a Red Cross delegate after holding him in captivity for a year, authorities said Thursday.

Louis Manning was handed over Wednesday by four rebels in a jungle region of Choco state in western Colombia, said the Rev. Guillermo Vega, the priest who participated in the release.

A message purportedly from the National Liberation Army, the group that abducted Manning, was faxed to local media this week, threatening to kidnap more Americans.

Manning was abducted on Feb. 22, 1993, Vega said. His age and hometown were not immediately available, but Vega said Manning appeared to be in his 50s and was apparently from Texas.

"Manning seemed to have been somewhat affected by his experience," Vega said in a telephone interview from Quibdo, the provincial capital. "He was very quiet. He did say he had to walk a lot during his captivity."

Manning, who was bearded and had long hair, appeared to be in good health but was slightly underweight, Vega said.

Police said the release occurred near the village of Tutunendo, 180 miles west of Bogota.

Manning had been held for a $1 million ransom. It was unclear if one was paid.

Aristide supporters join U.S. plan that does not guarantee his return

2 PORT-AU-PRINCE, Haiti (AP) — Key supporters of exiled President Jean-Bertrand Aristide have joined Washington in backing a plan aimed at resolving Haiti's political troubles, but not ensuring his return.

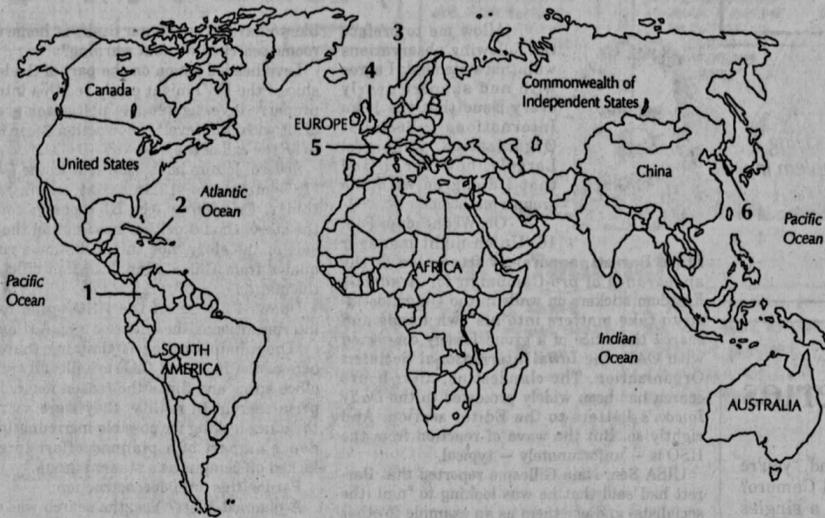

The proposed plan also would keep in place much of the military that overthrew Aristide in 1991.

The plan, devised by U.S. officials and Haitian parliament members last month, represents a major shift in Washington's stated policy of supporting Aristide's drive to regain his leadership.

Aristide has dismissed the plan and implied that Washington has betrayed him.

But in a symbolic move intended to put more pressure on Aristide to give in, Haiti's lower house of Parliament voted 35-10 Wednesday night to approve the plan in principle.

The majority includes several previously pro-Aristide lawmakers, who argue that implementing the plan could induce the world community to lift the sanctions that were intended to punish the government but have brought widespread misery to the Americas' poorest country.

The proposal provides for the retirement of army commander Lt. Gen. Raoul Cedras after the designation of a new premier and the passage of a law giving amnesty to the military for crimes committed after soldiers seized power from Aristide.

Million-dollar demand offered for return of Munch painting

3 OSLO, Norway (AP) — A lawyer connected with anti-abortionists said Thursday that one of his clients will arrange the return of the famed Edvard Munch painting "The Scream" for $1 million.

The statement by Tor Erling Staff on national radio was the second time the country's small anti-abortion movement has been linked to the theft of the painting last month.

Staff said he faxed the client's demand to Culture Minister Ase Kleveland on Wednesday.

"The man who contacted me is not the thief, but someone who has the possibility to produce the painting," he said.

Staff is a well-known lawyer whose large clientele includes members of the anti-abortionist movement. He filed a court appeal in an unsuccessful attempt to halt the deportation of 12 American anti-abortion campaigners on Feb. 11, the day before the painting was stolen from the National Museum.

On Feb. 17, Lutheran minister Rev. Borre Knudsen, who had invited the American campaigners to demonstrate during the Winter Olympic Games, said on radio that the painting would be returned if national television broadcast "The Silent Scream," a film showing a fetus being aborted.

Police have expressed little public interest in the claims of Knudsen and Staff.

Man with knife arrested before Prince Charles arrives

4 LONDON, England (AP) — Police arrested a knife-wielding man waiting in a crowd for Prince Charles to arrive at a movie premiere Thursday night.

The man was among thousands gathered in Leicester Square for a glimpse of Charles, the stars of "Shadowlands" — Sir Anthony Hopkins and Debra Winger — and the film's director, Sir Richard Attenborough.

The movie stars had arrived and were in the Odeon theater when the man was seized.

He was acting suspiciously and produced a kitchen knife and threatened police when challenged, Scotland Yard said.

No one was hurt, a spokesman for the police headquarters said, speaking on condition of anonymity.

The 33-year-old man, whose name was not revealed, was disarmed and arrested 20 minutes before Charles arrived for the film's British premiere.

Charles was accompanied by the Duchess of Kent, his cousin's wife.

There was no indication whether Charles was an intended target.

On Charles' trip to Australia in January, a man ran toward him with a starting pistol and was thrown to the ground within feet of the prince.

Two suspects held in assassination of anti-crime legislator

5 TOULON, France (AP) — Two men were charged Thursday in the killing of a Parliament member who had crusaded against organized crime, court sources said.

The suspects were charged with assassination and attempted assassination in the death of centrist legislator Yann Piat and the wounding of her driver, said the sources, who spoke on condition of anonymity.

Piat, 44, was killed by a gunman who was riding as a passenger on a motorcycle, firing at her car as it approached her home in Hyeres, near Toulon.

Epifanio Pericolo, 29, is believed to have driven the motorcycle and Denis Labadie, 27, is believed to have fired the shots, police said.

Piat's driver told police that the men fell off the motorcycle as they started their getaway. The suspects bore bruises and scrapes indicating they had suffered such an accident, authorities said.

Police said both men had past links with Jean-Louis Fargette, considered the Riviera's crime boss until he was killed a year ago in San Remo, Italy.

Piat was spearheading an anti-corruption drive in the Riviera, which is rife with racketeers preying on the lucrative real estate market and casinos.

Atomic energy experts resume inspections

6 VIENNA, Austria (AP) — Experts from the International Atomic Energy Agency began inspecting North Korean nuclear facilities Thursday for the first time in more than a year.

Spokesman Hans-Friedrich Meyer said at agency headquarters in Vienna that a seven-member team had started work at Yongbyon, the location of a large nuclear research complex.

The start of inspections follows months of stalling by North Korea while concern mounted among its neighbors and Western governments that it may be hiding a nuclear-weapons program.

North Korea, however, still refuses to allow outside visits to two other sites that inspectors suspect could be involved with nuclear weapons.

IAEA officials have not conducted a full inspection at Yongbyon since February 1992, although representatives were allowed in last May and August to change film and batteries in monitoring equipment.

The current inspections, expected to take about two weeks, are intended to determine whether any nuclear materials have been diverted to possible weapons development.

SOCIAL SECURITY NUMBERS

One in a numbered series

"Yeah," the guy on the phone breathed to my friend, "you're petite and blonde, and don't you have a very hot red Camaro? You're the kind of person who would love to take a singles cruise to Mexico, right?"

The ridiculous heavy breather on the phone, my friend told me later, was not an obscene caller, but instead a telemarketer who knew where she lived, where she shopped, where she worked and how she used her credit cards. Suspecting that he probably even knew her measurements and what she ate for breakfast, she was sufficiently creeped out enough to ask him where he had gotten such detailed information. As it turned out, copious amounts of information were on file for my friend as well as for every other living American, via vast data bases accessible by anyone with curiosity.

Commercial and public access to science and media data bases became available in the late '60s and early '70s, and it is believed by researchers that the '90s will be the decade for increasingly available on-line public records access. Information on individuals can be attained from three sources, says Database magazine: from government public records, credit reports and various volunteered information.

The numbering of Americans over the last 50 years has been the great facilitator of the extensive tracking of Americans. Social Security, an advent of the '30s, was a program designed to keep meticulous records of people in the work force so that benefits in the case of disability, retirement or unemployment could be meted out more equitably. Social Security numbers were only given to workers; children and adults not in the work force were not required to have numbers.

Social Security cards were not intended to be used for identification purposes — in fact, they were originally printed with a warning against using your number to identify yourself. A subtle shift occurred midcentury in the move toward an Orwellian regimentation of citizens, when requirements were enacted to ensure that every American alive was counted. Schools began rejecting children without numbers — essentially, a child was a nonperson until he or she was bar coded.

Now, credit is unobtainable without a Social Security number. Taking national exams in school is impossible to do without a number. Getting insurance is impossible without a number. Your credit cards, driver's license, phone line, utilities and voting record, in addition to many other things, are all tied in to your number. Students are denied access to one of the UI's library computer indexes without a Social Security number. Not only does the UI have records of our grades, campus affiliations, financial aid and personal statistics, it has records on the books we read and the subjects we research. Resistance seems useless at such a level: No compliance, no materials for school work.

Frightening, isn't it? Scientific American magazine presented a survey done by Louis Harris and Associates in a June 1991 article showing that Americans value privacy: Seventy-nine percent of Americans are concerned about threats to personal privacy. If you pair that statistic with survey data showing that 78 percent of U.S. workers are pessimistic about the future of the Social Security system, you might begin to wonder why we have these numbers. With the Social Security program quickly disintegrating due to a lack of money, all that will remain of the program in America are the numbers — numbers which increasingly serve the purpose of allowing your government and others to find you and find out about you. Remember, in both Orwell's "1984" and in Nazi Germany, blue work suits and totalitarianism followed closely on the heels of the numbering of humans.

Justice for Thompson

To the Editor:

The presumption of innocence does not exist for Daryl Thompson. Cedar County authorities are hell-bent on making an example of the black Fort Worth trucker and don't care how badly they trample on his and our rights in doing so.

Thompson was pulled over for speeding on Interstate 80 near Tipton last Sept. 20. Thompson tried to flee after the state trooper who pulled him over, Donovan Wright of Tipton, patted his gun and said, "I'm going to write these other guys up, then you and I are going for a ride." In arresting Thompson, Trooper Robert Smith of Durant nearly broke Thompson's jaw with a nightstick. One witness heard Wright tell Thompson over the CB radio, "Shut up, boy, you're going to jail."

This case is a textbook example of judicial lynching. Thompson was brutalized by Iowa state troopers. Cedar County authorities want to railroad him, while the state of Iowa wants to put him away so that he can't seek compensation for the injuries he suffered. Thompson spent six weeks in the Cedar County jail and lost his trucking job. Authorities refused to let his wife and friends bail him out and tried to force him to accept a plea bargain. Thompson was released on bail only after the NAACP intervened. The court refused to grant Thompson a change of venue, there have been irregularities in jury selection and the state has paid for Assistant Attorney General Tom Miller to try Thompson.

There will be a panel discussion by representatives of the NAACP, the UI Black Law Students' Association, and the Iowa International Socialist Organization on Friday, March 4 at 5 p.m. in the Ohio State Room of the Union. People who want to support Daryl Thompson, denounce the ordeal he is being subjected to and oppose the workings of a racist justice system are invited to attend a protest rally in front of the Cedar County courthouse in Tipton at 9 a.m. Monday, March 7.

JONATHAN LYONS

Socialists may be victims, but not of conspiracy

Allow me to preface the following observations with this statement: I agree with and support nearly every issue that the Iowa International Socialist Organization supports. Largely, however, I find that I disagree with the group's methods.

On Wednesday, Feb. 16, Union night manager Steve Barrett, apparently frustrated at the appearance of pro-Campaign for Academic Freedom stickers on walls in the Union, decided to take matters into his own hands and search the office of a group loosely connected with CAF: the Iowa International Socialist Organization. The clandestine, after-hours search has been widely protested in the Daily Iowan's Letters to the Editor section. And rightly so. But the wave of reaction from the IISO is — unfortunately — typical.

U.S. Sen. Naia Gillespie reported that Barrett had said that he was looking to "nail (the socialists) and use them as an example to other student groups on campus." If this is the case, then Barrett's actions can only be described as spiteful. And possibly, if CAF members were committing acts of vandalism in the heat of their collective passion (while trying to get members of the Iowa state Board of Regents to stop brushing them off), his motivation for the search is even understandable.

But rummaging through the IISO's cubicle and desk without warning, without even a phone call, was an improper action at best. Barrett's actions would rightly be investigated at this point, and an effort to determine the legality of that search should be undertaken.

On the other side of the aisle, though, the IISO, having had their office ransacked without notification, are in an absolutely sterling position: They have every right to be angry and every right to call for legal action in this matter; after all, how many of the rest of us would like to have — say — our desks at home or our rooms searched without warning?

Levelheaded action on the part of the leadership of the IISO might easily see this intrusion properly investigated, its instigator properly dealt with. But levelheaded action doesn't seem to be the call of the day.

Several letters have been sent to the DI from IISO members stating that, among other things, Eric Marty, the DI reporter covering the story, should neither have gotten the other side of the story, nor should he have run the quotes from Union administration officials on the matter.

Donna Flayhan of the IISO opted to take interpretation of the offense a step further:

"The administration is claiming that members of the IISO and CAF are illegally sharing office space and that's the reason for their surprise search. In reality, they were searching the office looking for possible incriminating evidence as part of a planned effort to get us kicked off campus as a student group."

Pardon this brief deconstruction:

A planned effort? Yes, the search was wrong and likely even illegal, but how much of a stretch of the imagination is required, exactly, to decide that the administration is attempting to toss out the socialists? Is it possible (even likely, perhaps) that a tired night manager found a bunch of pro-CAF stickers pasted up and, being irritated that the building under his supervision had been vandalized, decided to check his one likely lead? Is it possible that a reporter attempting to cover a story might not be interested in giving one side or the other favoritism in a story she or he is covering (and might, therefore, obtain and print quotes from both sides)?

This is not to imply that the search — even if it turns out that it was legal — was justifiable. But I am suggesting that the IISO, faced with an obvious travesty, does not appear to be satisfied that the world know their office was rummaged through; they have to transmogrify it, link it up with some massive McCarthyist movement.

(I choose the term "McCarthyist" because it seems everyone who questions the actions or behavior of the socialists seems to wind up being pegged with that label. I have been so labeled in the past; even Kim Painter has been.)

Student groups whose office cubicles are housed at the Student Activity Center in the Union should all take into account the fact that the Union administration's chief argument seems to be that it's just fine to see these offices secretly.

In such an open and shut case, where the Union administration would appear to be doing nothing more honorable than butt-covering for a night manager whose judgment seems to have been lacking, why do the socialists have to insist that they, as a group, are under fire — victims of a "planned" campaign "to get (socialists) kicked off campus as a student group"?

A McCarthyist plot, perhaps?

And, of course, it becomes the alleged fault of the newspaper which reported the story as well, charges of editorial slanting of the news and secret movements on to abolish the socialists abounding aplenty.

There is no reason for it.

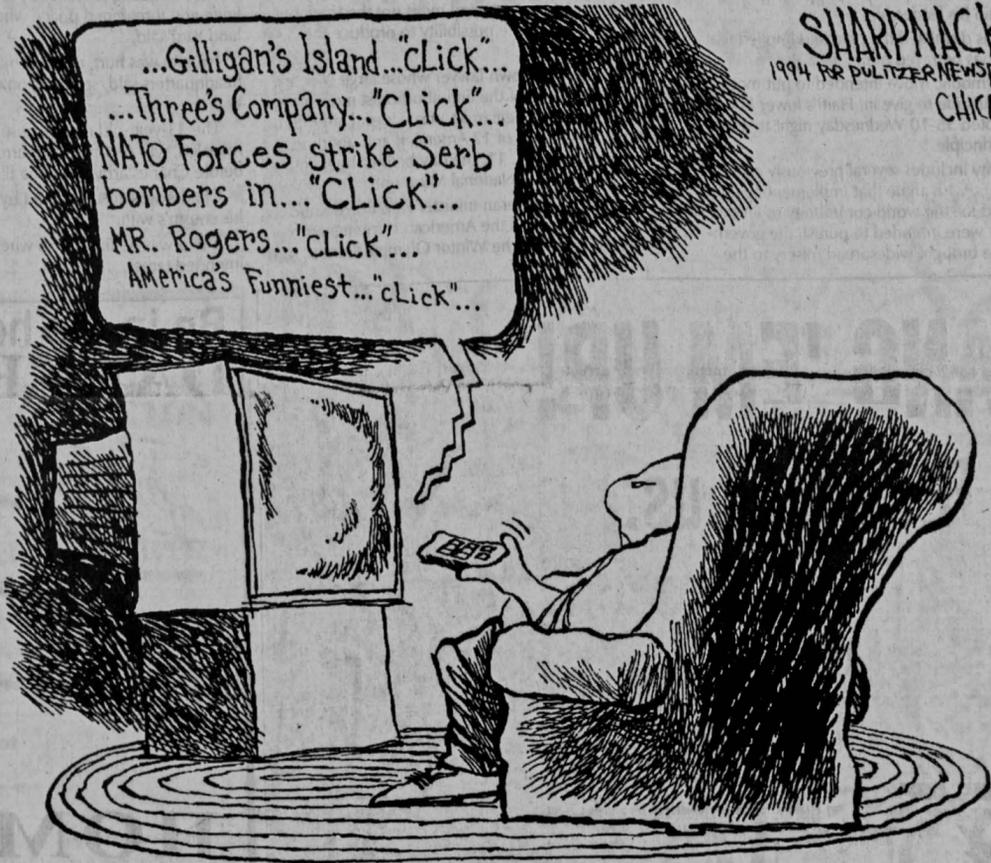

IISO members, please, just condemn the travesty without inflating it. The search of your office was wrong, and it appears that it may have been motivated by disdain for your organization on the part of an individual.

But that's all.

You need not place black hats on the heads of an exaggerated cast of villains to prove that the trespass in your office was a frightening invasion of privacy; delusions of elimination schemes do not help the case and may even cause some to see this as just another bout of whining protest — and this could easily detract from the attention this intrusion deserves.

Hard news, journalistic integrity no longer sell

Remember those commercials for U.S. News & World Report with the guy with the charisma of lint bitching about the trivial subjects of Time and Newsweek cover stories? "Look at these covers," he would begin in a sleep-inducing monotone. "Madonna, Michael Jackson, the royal family. This is news!"

he would ask. "At U.S. News we cover the issues you care about, such as the Federal Reserve and the new tax laws." The guy made Michael Dukakis look like Gallagher.

Well, the other day I thought about Sominex man while walking past the newsstand at Quik Trip during a beef jerky and moon pie run. As I made the usual cursory glance at the week's periodical offerings, I was stunned to see that among the mags from People to Popular Mechanics with the Tonya Harding story on the cover was a certain news magazine known for its reporting on the intricacies of the economy.

"Et tu, U.S. News?" I mumbled to myself. This had to be it. If ever there was a sign that the nation's mass media had at last sold itself out to the capricious whims of the citizenry in order to make another buck like anyone else, this was it.

But there was more. Over the next few days, it also became apparent that the other self-proclaimed bastion of hard news and journalistic integrity, "CBS News," had taken to reporting on the Harding story as if it were the Nuremberg trials.

The program that was built on the hard-earned journalistic credentials of Cronkite and Rather is now the outlet through which new co-anchor Connie Chung spent the last four weeks tracking around and pestering Harding as if her every move and mutter were of national significance.

Whereas, at one time, the network sent its most visible reporters to the scene of only the most important breaking stories, Chung was commissioned to first spend two weeks in Portland, Ore., snooping around a shopping mall ice skating rink, like an adolescent playing hooky, and then use the next fortnight to follow the skater all over Norway and bug the hell out of her with questions that were pointless even in the context of a trivial story.

As I made the usual cursory glance at the week's periodical offerings, I was stunned to see that among the mags from People to Popular Mechanics with the Tonya Harding story on the cover was a certain news magazine known for its reporting on the intricacies of the economy. "Et tu, U.S. News?" I mumbled to myself.

For one typically insightful interview (which Harding eventually walked out on), Chung, for some reason, wouldn't let up until she got a satisfactory answer to a series of enlightening questions such as, "Do you really believe people are interested in you for your skating?"

As if it weren't enough for "CBS News" to inflict its viewers with this nonsense during nearly every program for the last two weeks, they also committed a more egregious journalistic error by choosing not to adequately cover those news events from the Olympics that actually were of some significance.

For example, when Dan Jansen at last won his gold medal in speed skating, Chung announced the results on the evening news while the audience was shown a still picture from the race. Hey, all right! A picture. According to Chung, though, the network really wanted to show videotape of Jansen winning, but it couldn't because of International Olympic Committee (IOC) rules.

This ain't the case.

A CBS spokesperson later informed The Washington Post that the IOC had nothing to do with it, that the network withheld its footage of Jansen so that it could increase its prime-time ratings.

Oh, OK. No problem. The network wasn't doing a poor job of reporting on a story or trying to dupe the public, it was merely covering the story in such a way that it would promote their other programming. What could be more benign? In fact, maybe this type of reporting is actually the latest trend in journalism. Maybe we can look forward to news stories being tied into the networks' promos for their prime-time lineup. Maybe anchors could start adding footnotes to news items like "that rape and murder incident reminds me of tonight's episode of 'Jake and the Fatman.'"

Maybe, like the stuffed shirt in the U.S. News & World Report commercials, we take the news media too seriously. But with every other form of mass media seemingly selling out to the lowest common denominator, it would be nice if the news media could somehow, every now and then, rise above the need to make another buck.

PLO NOT SATISFIED

Associated Press

A Palestinian child waving a black flag in honor of the dead runs between burning tires at the Ein al-Hilweh refugee camp near the southern Lebanese port of Sidon Thursday. Christians joined Muslims in a nationwide shutdown Thursday to show Lebanon's solidarity with Palestinians over last week's massacre in the Israeli-occupied West Bank town of Hebron.

Pacification attempt continued in Israel with prisoner releases

Said Ghazali

Associated Press

RAMALLAH, Occupied West Bank — Israel freed 400 Palestinian prisoners Thursday in a further effort to soothe simmering violence over the Hebron mosque massacre, while Jewish extremists grew more defiant of efforts to rein them in.

The government has released 1,000 prisoners in the past three days. Yet there has been no sign that outraged Palestinians in the occupied territories would stop protesting and / or that their leaders would return to stalled peace talks.

"This release won't change the hatred between us and the settlers," said 19-year-old Yasser Sharabati, a Palestinian activist freed Thursday.

As part of efforts to salvage the peace process following the massacre last Friday by a Jewish settler, Prime Minister Yitzhak Rabin's government has ordered the army to disarm 18 militant settlers and banned them from Palestinian areas.

The crackdown has focused on Kach and Kahane Lives, militant Jewish anti-Arab movements inspired by the late extremist Meir Kahane. The mosque gunman, Baruch Goldstein, was a Kahane follower.

Settler leaders Thursday called on the extremist Jews to resist being disarmed. One leader, Uri Ariel, said settlers shouldn't use violence against troops.

But the crackdown sharpened their confrontation with the government.

Five Kach members were arrested Thursday trying to disrupt a Jerusalem demonstration protesting the massacre. Two Kach leaders have been detained since Sunday. Three others are fugitives.

One of the fugitives, Nathan Levy, brazenly attended a brief news conference Thursday in Jerusalem with nine Kach activists, some carrying guns.

The national news agency Itim reported that radical settlers in Hebron and the nearby settlement of Kiryat Arba in the West Bank have said they won't surrender their weapons if attempts are made to disarm them.

Goldstein, a New York native, came from Kiryat Arba, and his grave there has now become a shrine for Israeli extremists, much to the government's chagrin. Goldstein was beaten to death by Palestinians after the massacre.

For the Israelis, the crackdown was a radical move on a highly emotive issue. But it hasn't cut any ice with the Palestinians.

The PLO, as a condition for resuming negotiations, has demanded that Israel dismantle some of the 144 Jewish settlements that are a source of special friction. These include three in Hebron, where 450 Israelis live among 80,000 Palestinians.

Russia alleges U.S. spying as tit for tat continues

Larry Ryckman

Associated Press

MOSCOW — Russia struck back in the spy vs. spy squabble with the West on Thursday, saying an American diplomat urged two Russian men to collect secret plans for Russia's most sophisticated battle tank.

Western arms experts expressed surprise at the news that the T-82 tank even exists; the spokesman for Russia's top spy-catching agency said Thursday's announcement was the first confirmation of its existence.

It was the latest in a flurry of charges and countercharges by Russian and Western intelligence agencies prompted by last month's arrest of an alleged CIA mole in Washington.

Russian officials have been miffed by the hand-wringing and rhetoric from U.S. officials who angrily demanded Russia stop spying on the United States.

Thursday's announcement further supported Russia's claim that the West still spies on it, too. On Tuesday, Russia disclosed it had charged a Russian defense industry executive with spying for Britain.

In the past week, Russia and the United States have both ordered the expulsion of diplomats in a tit-for-tat exchange reminiscent of the Cold War.

Alexander Mikhailov, spokesman for Russia's Federal Counterintelligence Service, told the Associated Press that the American diplomat in the tank spying case was Kelli Ann Hamilton.

The switchboard operator at the U.S. Embassy said there was no one there by that name. But a phone list from last spring lists a Kelli Hamilton as a second secretary at the embassy.

There were no details available on the tank, although Western experts said it would be the latest in the line of Russia's T-80 main battle tanks.

"They have to have better things to do than haul somebody in because they stumbled over a crack in the sidewalk," UI senior Chris Kane said.

UI junior Julie Kayman said many of the arrests are unfair.

"Somebody shouldn't get arrested just because they can't walk in a straight line," she said. "I never sit at the bars and think, 'God, I better stop drinking because I might get public intox.' Never."

She added that for some students the law may encourage drunk driving.

"People might be more afraid to walk," Kayman said. "They might think 'at least they won't be able to see me as well if I'm driving." UI junior Kathy Murray said police should spend less time looking for drunks.

"Why don't they focus on going up and down Washington Street where there are no lights instead of going in the Pedestrian Mall where you know everyone is drunk?" she asked.

Johnson County collects anywhere from $50 to $100 for each public intoxication fine. In addition, the arrested must also pay $25 for court costs and a surcharge fee, which is 30 percent of the fine.

Iowa City Mayor Susan Horowitz disagrees with the Senate committee's recommendation. Horowitz also works for Healthy People 2000, a nonprofit coalition that supports local human service agencies.

Based on findings from that organization, Horowitz said the biggest problem facing Johnson County residents is substance abuse.

While the public intoxication law may contribute to prison overcrowding, it allows court officials to track a person's history of alcohol or drug abuse and enables the city to better assess the individual's need for treatment, Horowitz said.

"I feel strongly that we need to keep the pressure up on public intox," she said.

cent thought they were excellent or good.

A solid 78 percent said they thought Japan was an unfair trader, and two-thirds believed Japan was not serious about reducing its trade surplus. The telephone survey of 1,531 was conducted Feb. 24-27 and carried a margin of error of plus or minus 3 percentage points.

The administration already has the power to initiate market-opening investigations and impose tariffs if the talks fail to produce results under the regular Section 301 of the 1974 trade act.

What Super 301 provides is a strict timetable for results. The clock will begin running March 31 with publication of an annual "National Trade Estimate Report" that provides a survey of unfair trade practices that are harming U.S. exporters around the world.

From that list the administration will by Sept. 30 designate "priority foreign country practices" that are blocking the largest amount of U.S. exports and begin a 21-day period of preliminary negotiations.

If those preliminary talks fail to produce results, the United States would initiate a formal investigation that could take up to 18 months and allow time for further negotiations.

Only if those talks proved fruitless would the United States impose sanctions. That period could stretch until March 1996, although administration officials said if the talks were going nowhere, sanctions could come much sooner.

In 1989, the United States targeted Japan, Brazil and India and reached successful agreements dealing with super computers, satellites and wood products with Japan and removal of restrictive import licenses in Brazil. Talks with India were unsuccessful.

Other countries have been universal in their condemnation of the Super 301 procedures, assailing the process as unilateral bullying.

female faculty has increased from 17.3 percent in 1989-90 to 20.7 percent in 1993-94.

But Susan Mask, director of the Affirmative Action Office, said female faculty members still are not being hired at the same rate as males.

"The numbers of women faculty at the UI have grown, but the overall percentage has remained the same," she said.

Still, the UI seems to be making improvements. Kleinfeld said she has experienced a great deal of change throughout her 32-year career at the UI, most noticeably the growing awareness that there is a significant number of female professors.

"I think things have changed very much," Kleinfeld said. "The type of open discrimination I experienced is gone. A consciousness has been raised and people are now aware that there are female professors.

Men's track travels to Last Chance Meet

Several members of the Iowa men's track and field team, most of whom will not be traveling with the team to California for meets on March 19 and March 26, will be competing today in the Last Chance Meet at Iowa State.

Mike Bakker, Pete McDowell, Dave Novotny, Chris Peters, Greg Fender, Tom Vanderbrink, Damani Shakoor, Sedrick Shaw, Ryan Terry, Tex Montgomery and Mike Seymour will represent the Hawkeyes.

"It will be a good chance for these athletes to bring their performances up, rehab a couple of injuries and get some valuable experience," head coach Ted Wheeler said.

Women's athletics to provide shuttle service

The Iowa women's athletic department will supply Cambus shuttle service from Hancher Auditorium to Carver-Hawkeye Arena for this weekend's women's basketball games.

Shuttle service will begin at 6 p.m. today for Iowa's game against Penn State and at 5:30 p.m. for Sunday's game vs. Ohio State. The shuttle will return fans to the Hancher lot following each game.

UNI player ties NCAA triples record

MINNEAPOLIS (AP) — Northern Iowa freshman Kevin Sawatzky tied an NCAA record by hitting three triples as the Panthers opened the season with an 11-2 victory over Augsburg at the Metrodome on Thursday.

Sawatzky, a shortstop from Saskatoon, Saskatchewan, also tripled in Northern Iowa's 18-1 victory in the second game of the doubleheader.

The triples in the opener came on Sawatzky's first three collegiate at-bats. He tied a NCAA record mark held by several players.

Indiana State coach fired

TERRE HAUTE, Ind. (AP) — Bates Locke, head basketball coach at Indiana State University since 1989, was fired Thursday after a 4-22 season.

Locke's 1993-94 team was the school's worst in his five years. The Sycamores failed to reach the Missouri Valley Conference tournament field and finished tied for last in the 10-team league.

"Coach Locke and his staff have worked hard for Indiana State, but the situation has reached a point where we feel we need new direction for the basketball program," said a statement by ISU athletic director Brian Faison.

Faison recommended Locke be fired Thursday morning at a meeting with the school's athletic committee. After a 40 minute discussion in private, the committee voted publicly to accept Faison's recommendation and send it to school president John Moore for action.

ORLANDO, Fla. (AP) — The wind howled and the scores of an elite field at the LPGA Tournament of Champions soared Thursday.

Betsy King's 71 was the only subpar score of the day and her 36-hole total of 1-under 143 was good enough for a four-stroke lead Monday through the $700,000 event on the tough North-South course at Grand Cypress Resort.

Nancy Lopez, one of three golfers trailing the leader at 147, shot 72.

Hawkeyes host Big Ten Conference Championships this weekend; Iowa looking for 21st straight title

Kris Wiley
The Daily Iowan

Iowa coach Dan Gable is expecting his team to come through during this weekend's "unpredictable" Big Ten Wrestling Championships.

"I'm counting on my kids to be predictable," said Gable, who is shooting for his 21st consecutive Big Ten title at Iowa. "Right now, I'm counting on my guys, from bottom to top, to wrestle in the type of frame of mind that have made them the best when they are the best."

The conference tournament begins with preliminary and quarterfinal matches at 11 a.m. Saturday. Semifinal and consolation matches start at 6:30 p.m. Saturday. The championship and consolation finals begin at noon Sunday. All events will be held at Carver-Hawkeye Arena.

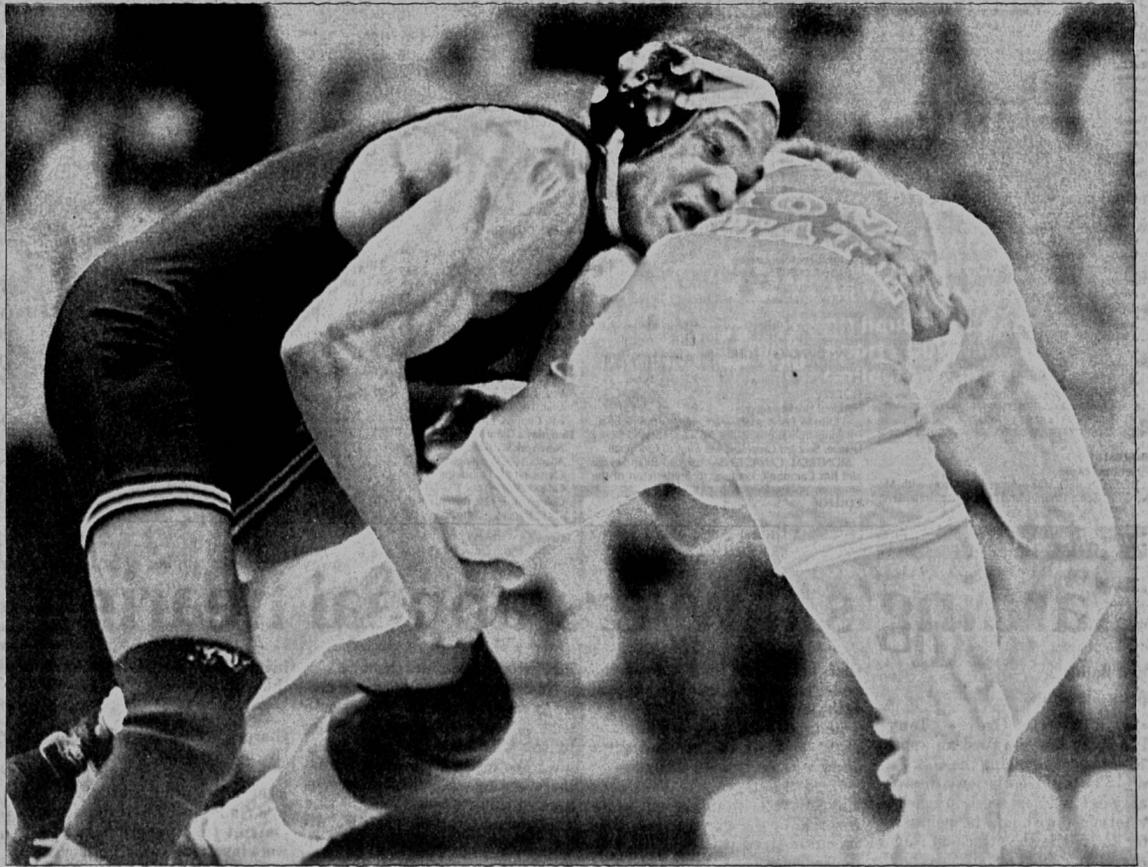

While No. 2 Minnesota, No. 3 Iowa and No. 4 Penn State are the favorites, Gable said some teams may surprise the field.

"There could be some other teams that sneak in there and score a lot of points. It's very unpredictable," he said. "It's very difficult to say who is going to finish high. There are going to be a lot of teams that affect this team championship because there are a lot of teams with individuals that have wrestled well at times during the year, which makes it a very unpredictable type of meet."

Penn State coach John Fritz said the balance between teams makes it tough to predict a winner.

"All of the teams have vulnerable spots," he said. "You need to wrestle 100 percent. If you don't do well, it's the end of the road."

Minnesota coach J. Robinson, who was an assistant at Iowa for eight years, said Iowa is the team to beat, even though the Golden Gophers topped the Hawkeyes 23-11 Jan. 28.

"They're in the driver's seat," he said. "Every year, people don't want Iowa to win so they rationalize them out of it."

"You can't do that. That's a huge mistake."

Gable said Minnesota is a team entering the tournament on a mission.

"Minnesota, from a balance point of view, looks like the team to so-called beat as far as rankings and what they've done during the year," he said. "I guess from a conference point of view, Iowa is the team to beat considering we've won 20 Big Ten championships in a row, and we still hold the title, and we haven't conceded it by any means." This season has been different than past years for the Hawkeyes. It's the first time since 1988 they lost three dual meets, going 11-3 on the season. Saturday will be the first time Gable's lineup will compete together this year.

That doesn't mean the Hawkeyes won't be ready.

"We're good. It's just a matter now of them proving it," Gable said.

If the Hawkeyes win, they will stand as the only Big Ten school to own more than 20 consecutive conference championships. Gable doesn't have any intention of letting the string end.

"If we don't win it, we have to start over," he said. "Let's make our mark. You only get this once in a lifetime. Let's take the opportunity."

BASKETBALL

Hawks ready for revenge

Joel Donofrio
The Daily Iowan

As the Iowa women's basketball team hopes to close out its home season with two victories, No. 2 Penn State invades Carver-Hawkeye Arena tonight at 7:30 in search of its first Big Ten basketball title.

With four games left to play, the Lady Lions (22-1 overall, 13-1 in the Big Ten) hold a one-game lead over Purdue with four conference games remaining. Penn State's potent offense leads the league in scoring, averaging 83 points per game, and its pressing defense is tops in steals (303 overall and 13 per game) and turnovers forced (548).

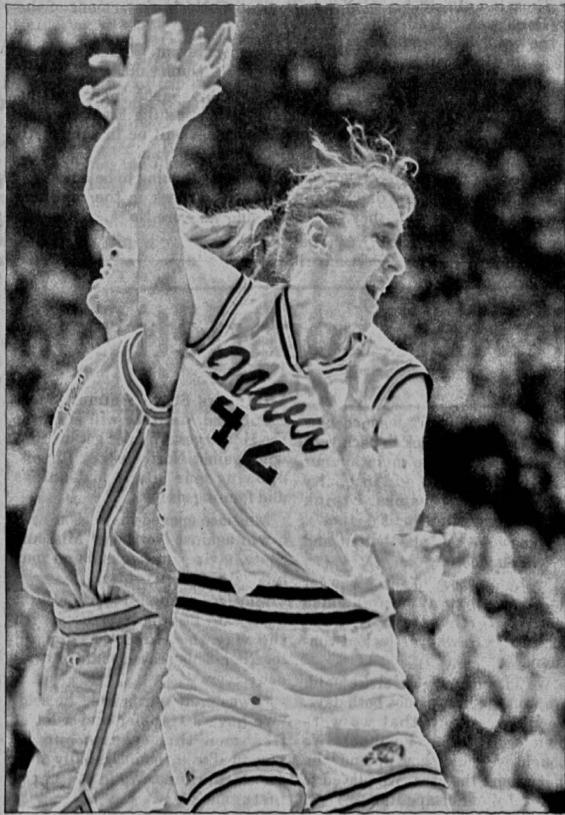

"Penn State, in my opinion, is very clearly a Final Four team. They deserve their No. 2 ranking, and it is going to be very difficult for us."

C. Vivian Stringer, Iowa women's basketball coach

Despite those daunting statistics, the No. 14 Hawkeyes and Coach C. Vivian Stringer are looking forward to challenging the Lady Lions.

"Penn State, in my opinion, is very clearly a Final Four team. They deserve their No. 2 ranking, and it is going to be very difficult for us," Stringer said. "I really enjoy coaching against these types of teams, and I think our team enjoys playing against these types of teams."

One month ago, the Hawkeyes (18-5, 11-4) went into University Park, Pa., and played then-undefeated Penn State down to the wire in a 63-61 loss. Nicole Tunisil scored 28 points to lead all scorers while Penn State's Tina Nicholson led her team with 16.

Danny Frazier/The Daily Iowan

Iowa center Cathy Marx will lead the Hawkeyes against the No. 2 Penn State Lady Lions tonight at Carver-Hawkeye Arena.

Because the Hawkeyes are last in the Big Ten in scoring, they must keep the total points down in order to compete with the high-powered Lady Lion offense. In addition, as Iowa point guard Arnela Yarbrough noted, a strong effort on the defensive end is necessary to help the Hawkeye offense.

"We always stress defense, no matter who we're playing. Defense makes our offense go," Yarbrough said. "If we're clicking on defense and our offense sputters in the beginning, keeping our effort up on defense will help our offense pick it up. We may not shoot well, but we'll execute a little better."

Penn State's talented backcourt of Nicholson and Katina Mack should attract plenty of attention from Hawkeye defenders. Mack leads the Lady Lions in scoring with 14 points per game, while Nicholson is second in the Big Ten with 6.2 assists per game and connects on 42 percent of her 3-point shots, good for fourth in the league.

"(Penn State) has four starters who can easily step out and shoot the ball at 3-point range, and these shooters also have the ability to create," Stringer said. "There is a big difference between shooting jumpers and putting the ball down to create."

To stop Penn State's perimeter game, Stringer hopes junior Antonia Macklin can continue her improved play of recent weeks. The 5-foot-7 forward scored a career-high 13 points in last Sunday's 65-

Gophers expect victory at home

Roxanna Pellin
The Daily Iowan

Minnesota coach Clem Haskins would be surprised if Iowa came into Williams Arena and beat his team.

"We don't expect to lose at home," Haskins said at a press conference Tuesday. "We tell that to the world."

Purdue is the only team to beat the No. 18 Golden Gophers in Minneapolis, a 75-72 win Jan. 29. Minnesota's last home win was a 106-56 thrashing of then-No. 12 Indiana last Sunday, the Hoosiers' worst loss since 1905.

But Iowa coach Tom Davis won't be thinking about history when his team travels to Minneapolis for a 7:05 p.m. game Saturday. The Hawkeyes are coming off an 80-72 loss to Michigan State Wednesday night at Carver-Hawkeye Arena.

Iowa dropped to 4-11 in the Big Ten, 10-14 overall. Minnesota stands at 9-6, 19-9 after an 86-70 loss at Purdue Thursday night.

Davis said he isn't concerned about his team getting ready to play the Gophers.

"They understand we're predominantly a sophomore, freshmen team," Davis said. "I think they bounce back real well. I think some of these kids are going to be great players, not just good."

Freshman Jess Settles led Iowa with a career-high 29 points and nine rebounds against the Spartans. The Hawkeyes played without senior James Winters, the team's leading scorer with 18 points per game.

Settles said the Hawkeyes have a good team to build on for next season. Iowa's starters include two freshmen, two sophomores and a junior.

"We got a lot of minutes this year, that's a positive for us," Settles said. "I guess we have to look at next year because this year, as far as any postseason, out of it."

The Hawkeyes continue to struggle shooting, hitting 39 percent of their shots against Michigan State. Iowa is at the bottom of the league in 3-point field goals, averaging 33 percent per game.

Voshon Lenard, an all-American from Detroit, leads the Gophers with 18 points per game. He shoots 43 percent from 3-point range and 86 percent from the free-throw line, second best in the Big Ten. Senior guard Arriel McDonald ranks third in the conference in assists, averaging 5.5 per game.

Saturday's game will be senior night for the Gophers, their last home game of the season.

"That's going to be a tough night, a night of emotion," Haskins said. "We can not let our emotions run away from us because the Hawkeyes are a tough team."

Harding's lawyers appeal hearing

Bob Baum
Associated Press

PORTLAND, Ore. — Tonya Harding's lawyers filed an appeal Thursday challenging the U.S. Figure Skating Association's disciplinary hearing next week to consider whether she should be penalized for her role in the attack on Nancy Kerrigan.

A special five-member panel is to meet March 10 in Colorado Springs, Colo., to decide whether Harding violated the association's code of ethics.

Harding's attorneys contend that, because of their appeal, the panel lacks jurisdiction to proceed with the hearing.

Reached at his home Thursday night, USFSA executive director Jerry Luce declined to comment.

Harding's appeal, filed with the USFSA executive committee, seeks reversal of the panel's refusal to consider Harding's objections to the hearing.

The objections are:

—Harding had insufficient time to prepare;

—The panel is not impartial;

—The proceedings would prejudice Harding's position in the criminal investigation into the attack.

"Ms. Harding's attorneys continue to contend that the appropriate time for any disciplinary hearing by the USFSA is after, and only after, the resolution of the criminal investigation," Harding's attorneys said in a statement. "While this matter is on appeal, the disciplinary panel lacks jurisdiction to proceed with the hearing."

The panel is considering whether to kick Harding out of the association because of her role in the Jan. 6 clubbing of Kerrigan. The committee already has found reasonable cause to believe Harding was involved in the attack or knew of the plot.

Harding, who has not been charged with any crime, contends she had no prior knowledge of the plot. She says she learned only after her return from the U.S. Figure Skating Championships in Detroit that people around her were involved.

Harding's ex-husband, Jeff Gillooly, has pleaded guilty to racketeering for his part in the attack. He says Harding was in on the scheme and gave the final go-ahead.

SPRING TRAINING

Jordan misses in White Sox debut

Associated Press

A couple of "Ks" and an "E" for Michael Jordan.

Baseball's most celebrated rookie took the field under game conditions for the first time since high school Thursday.

He went 1-for-3 with two strikeouts and an error in an intrasquad game for the Chicago White Sox. His team lost 12-7 after his two-out error allowed the go-ahead run to score.

"Some critics may see it as a setback, but I saw it as an opportunity to go out and see what a baseball game is like," Jordan said after playing all six innings.

"It was my first game and I felt nervous and out of my element. Hopefully, I'll get another chance and be a little more comfortable."

White Sox manager Gene Lamont said Jordan would not start today in the exhibition opener against Texas. But Lamont said Jordan is likely to play some right field.

It was in right field Thursday that Jordan had his worst moment. With two outs, two runners on and the score 6-6, Joe Hall sliced a high fly into the 25 mph gusts. Jordan, instructed to play deep, ran in and toward the line, but the ball glanced off his glove, a model specially made by Wilson with his name in it.

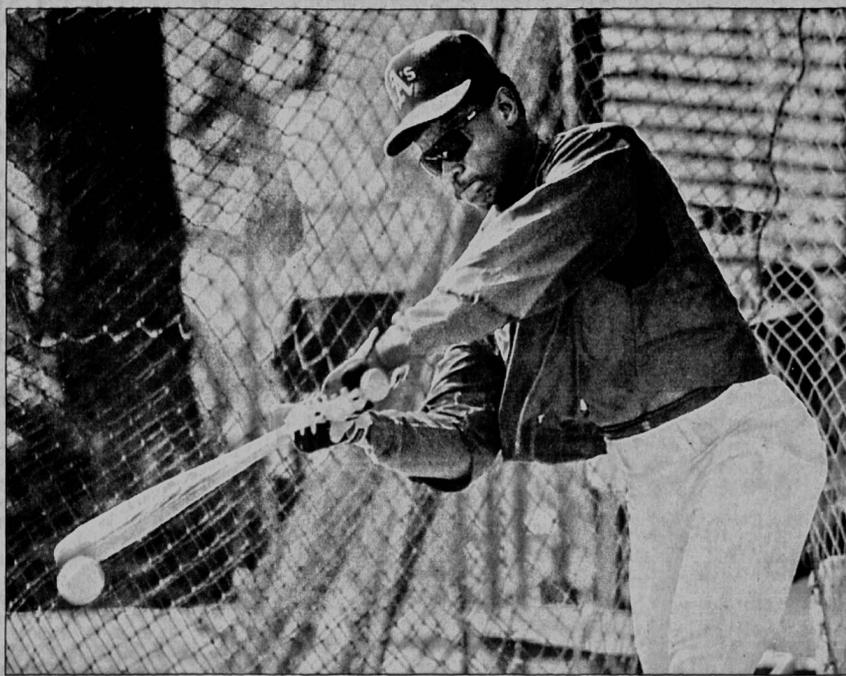

"That was one of those mistakes you don't want to happen because everybody is paying attention to you," he said.

Jordan struck out on off-speed pitches from rookies Rod Bolton and Scott Christman. In the first, he was robbed of a hit by outfielder Warren Newson on a diving catch in left field.

Pirates 7, Twins 5

At Bradenton, Fla., Orlando Merced had a three-run homer and a two-run double and Alejandro Pena got a save in his return from a year long absence.

Merced, the subject of off-season trade rumors, hit a three-run homer in the third inning off loser

Keith Garagozzo to give the Pirates the lead for good at 4-2. He added a two-run double off Rick Aguilera in the fifth as the Pirates extended their lead to 6-3.

Pena, who missed last season after undergoing elbow surgery, retired Minnesota in order in the ninth, striking out two.

Braves 10, Georgia 5

At West Palm Beach, Fla., rookie Ryan Klesko had three hits and one of Atlanta's four home runs. The others were hit by rookies Mike Kelly, Troy Hughes and Javier Lopez.

Deion Sanders, Jeff Blauser and Fred McGriff helped the Braves to a pair of first-inning runs. Sanders walked, stole second and scored on a double by Blauser, who later scored on McGriff's groundout.

Royals 4, Central Florida 2

At Haines City, Fla., Phil Hiatt singled in the go-ahead run in the seventh inning and rookie shortstop Joe Randa had three singles.

Kansas City led 2-0 until Central Florida put together three singles and a double against Rusty Meacham to tie it 2-2 in the top of the seventh.

Chris Haney, Jeff Granger and Doug Harris each pitched two scoreless innings for Kansas City. Enrique Burgos struck out two in the ninth for the save. Kansas City pitchers struck out 11.

In intrasquad games:

—Baltimore first baseman Rafael Palmeiro homered in his first at-bat as an Oriole. Colorado's Howard Johnson did the same on his first pitch.

—Cincinnati starter Tom Browning allowed seven runs and six hits in two innings, including two two-run homers and a three-run homer. —Kevin Maas and Robert Eenhorn of the New York Yankees each hit two-run homers and Jim Abbott allowed one hit and struck out two in three innings.

—Tim Wallach of the Los Angeles Dodgers hit a three-run home run and teammate Mike Piazza added a two-run homer in a 9-9 tie.

WOMEN'S TRACK AND FIELD

Iowa's Poole, Stec to compete at top meet

Dave Herda
The Daily Iowan

For most members of the Iowa women's track and field team, this weekend will be a time to catch up on some much needed rest and relaxation after a long and grueling indoor season.

But for seniors Marlene Poole and Tina Stec, this weekend will just be business as usual when they travel to Atlanta to compete in the USA Track and Field Championships, renowned as the nation's premiere amateur track meet.

Not only will the top collegiate athletes in the country be competing in the Georgia Dome, the meet will also feature world-class athletes like Jackie Joyner-Kersey and Suzy Favor and a number of other ex-Olympic and world champions.

"I get excited about these competitions because they're an extra special opportunity for top-flight athletes, and the electric, carnival-type atmosphere inspires everyone to perform to a higher level," head coach Jerry Hassard said.

"I probably don't know how big this meet really is or what to expect, but I guess that's good," Stec said.

"Right now I'm just excited, but when I see all those people who I've seen competing on TV, I'm sure I'll be a little nervous. That's not bad, though, because I need to be a little nervous in order to run my fastest."

This meet offers the two women the rare chance of competing in just one event while not having to worry about scoring points to help their team.

Stec will run the mile, in which she has already qualified for the National Championships March 11-13 at Indianapolis, while Poole will compete in the 200-meter sprint, where she hopes the tough competition will help her run a season-best time.

"My main goal is to lower my time and see how much I can improve," Poole said.

"I have no big expectations. Hopefully I'll run my best time and possibly qualify for Nationals, but whatever happens, I'll definitely benefit from the experience of running against world-class athletes."

The meet, which has traditionally been held at Madison Square Garden in New York, was moved to the Georgia Dome at the request of a number of top athletes who wanted to take advantage of the brand-new 200-meter banked tartan covered board track that should yield fast times.

GOLF

Floyd, Thorpe hold Doral lead

Bob Green
Associated Press

MIAMI — Old pros Ray Floyd and Jim Thorpe mastered winds of 40 mph Thursday with a pair of 68s to share the first-round lead in the $1.4 million Doral-Ryder Open.

"I did the things you have to do in conditions like this," Floyd, 51, said after one-putting for par on nine holes and chipping in for par on another.

Another golfing senior citizen — Jack Nicklaus — did not fare so well. He had two double bogeys and a triple bogey-6 in an embarrassing 8-over-par 80 on Doral's Blue Monster course.

Even that looked good to Johnny Miller, however. Miller, 46, made a second foray from the television announcer's booth and found it much more difficult than his surprise victory last month in the Pebble Beach National Pro-Am.

Miller was 9-over for the first nine holes and finished at 83.

Dick Mast, who had a 69 in the morning, was the only other golfer in the strongest field of the year to break 70. The group at 70 included David Edwards, Billy Andrade, Brad Bryant and John Huston.

WOMEN'S GYMNASTICS

Hawks take on 'Clones'

Pat Regan
The Daily Iowan

The Iowa women's gymnastics team will face rival Iowa State twice in the next five days, beginning tonight in Ames.

The Hawkeyes beat the Cyclones twice last season, winning 189-186.95 on the road and 191.4-188.75 in Iowa City.

"This is probably one of our most exciting matchups to date," Iowa head coach Diane DeMarco said. "It's not hard to get up for an in-state rival. Their team is very strong. We've both been scoring about the same, so it should boil down to who has the better hit-miss ratio."

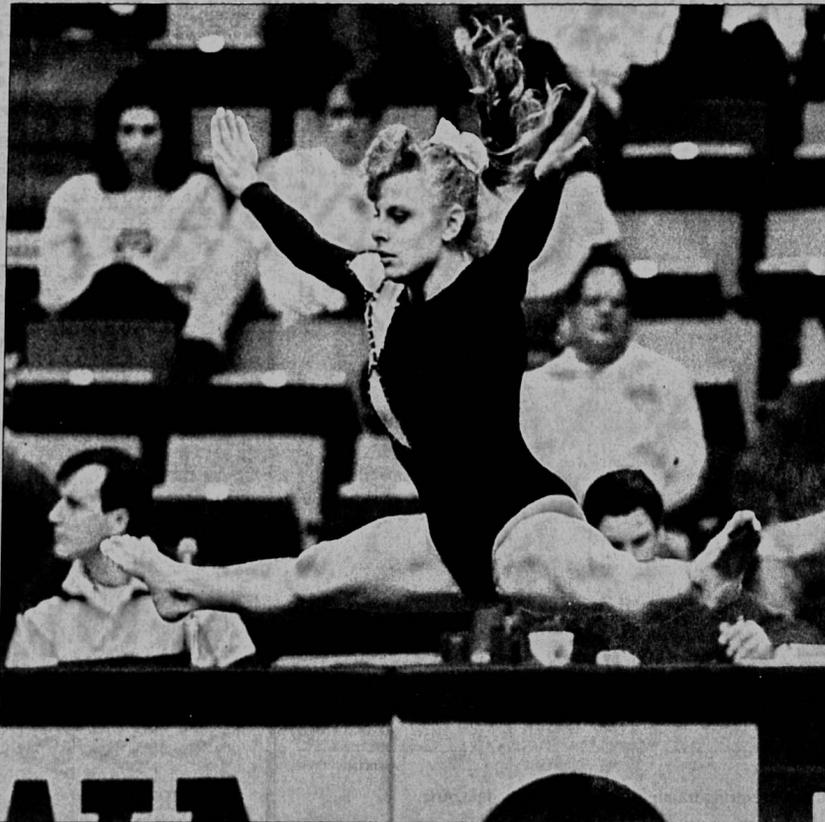

In its last meet, a 188.9-183.475 victory over Illinois, Iowa hit 20 of its 23 routines, its best ratio so far this year, DeMarco said.

"We're looking for that ratio to be higher," DeMarco said.

"We are constantly pushing to increase our difficulty, but we also need to be consistent. It doesn't help if you have a big trick and you fall on it."

The Hawkeyes are led by Kim Baker, who is in the midst of a sensational season. Baker has won the all-around title in five consecutive meets, including a season-high 38.875 score in Iowa's win over Illinois. In that meet, Baker took first place in all five events and set a school record with a 9.875 score on the balance beam.

Iowa is currently 4-7, but DeMarco said there is more to

Al Goldis/The Daily Iowan

Sandy Stengel and the Iowa women's gymnastics team travel to Ames tonight for a dual meet with Iowa State. The Cyclones will come to Iowa City for a rematch Tuesday at Carver-Hawkeye Arena.

gymnastics than just winning and losing.

"Obviously, it feels better to win," DeMarco said.

"It takes more than losing a meet or two to dampen my spirits. There is the artistry and creativity and beauty of the sport. You may walk out of a gym with a loss, but in your mind or the minds of some spectators, it may not be that way.

It's such a subjective sport."

The Cyclones have a 1-5 record and are coming off a 189-186.675 loss last week to Missouri. Iowa State was led by senior Jenny Olson, who finished second in the all-around (37.975) and second in both the floor exercise (9.675) and balance beam (9.70). Olson also placed third on the vault with a 9.50 score.

Iowa State will be in Iowa City Tuesday for a rematch with the Hawkeyes. The meet will be held at Carver-Hawkeye Arena and is scheduled to begin at 7 p.m.

DeMarco said the Hawkeyes and Cyclones face each other twice a season so each school can have the excitement of hosting an in-state rival.

Graf, Sanchez Vicario advance to quarterfinals of Florida Slims

Associated Press

DELRAY BEACH, Fla. — With 35 mph winds making for chaotic tennis, Steffi Graf and Arantxa Sanchez Vicario won easily in straight sets Thursday to advance to the quarterfinals of the Virginia Slims of Florida.

The No. 4 seed, Amanda Coetzer, was not so fortunate. Chanda Rubin, making the most of a bullet serve, beat the South African 3-6, 6-2, 7-5 in the biggest upset of the tournament.

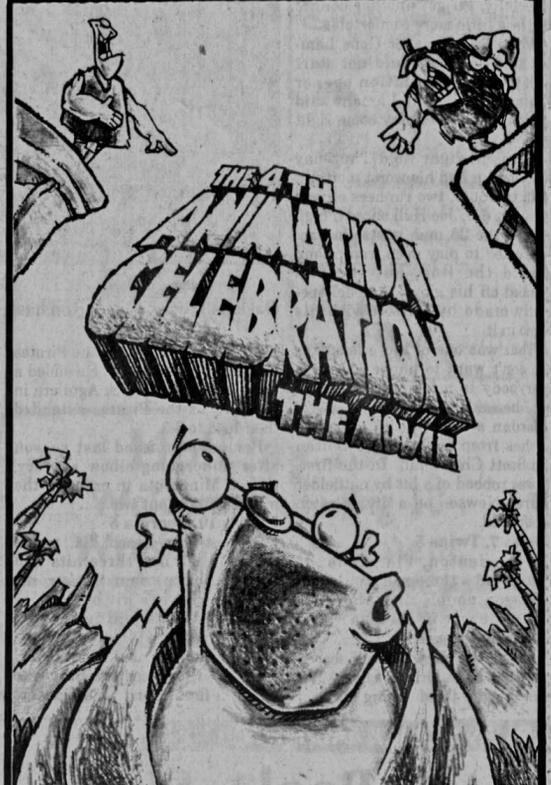

Graf, the top seed, continued her season-long rampage with a 6-2, 6-4 victory over Elena Likhovtseva of Kazakhstan.

Graf has won the three tournaments she has entered this year and has yet to lose a set in winning all 19 matches. Dating to last year, Graf has won 68 of 69 matches.

No. 2 Sanchez Vicario plowed through No. 12 Julie Halard of France 6-1, 6-1 in 43 minutes. Sanchez Vicario dropped just 18 points the entire match.

Hawkeyes to rebound on home courts

Doug Alden
The Daily Iowan

After two disappointing weekends in a row, the Iowa men's tennis team gets back into dual action when it hosts Gustavus Adolphus Saturday.

The Hawkeyes are coming off last weekend's Big Ten Singles Championship, where they failed to advance anyone past the third round, and a 7-0 loss to Minnesota Feb. 20.

Coach Steve Houghton is looking for his squad to rebound and gain momentum before the Big Ten season gets fully underway.

"I don't really feel like we're necessarily in a slump or something like that. I just feel like in the last week or two we've taken a little bit of a dip and we can go right back up again," Houghton said. "I would think that they'd be pretty anxious in most cases to sort of prove that they're better than they showed last weekend."

Although Gustavus Adolphus is a Division III school and does not have the depth of a Big Ten team, the Hawkeyes are not looking past Saturday's meet.

"They're as good as it gets in Division III," junior Naguib Shaid said. "We're all looking for a good match and to play well."

"It may look on the surface like we can just kill them and they're not in our league, but that's not true at all," Houghton added. "The main thing I want to see is the guys go out there and play hard, respect their opponent and go right after them."

No. 1 singles player Bryan Crowley will not play Saturday because of tendinitis in his knee. Junior Bob Zumph will take over at No. 1, Tom Derouin will play at No. 2, Todd Shale at No. 3, Carl Manheim at No. 4, Neil Denahan at No. 5 and Shaid at No. 6.

Houghton expects Gustavus Adolphus to be strong in doubles and is not sure who will play for the Hawkeyes.

The Hawkeyes are 3-2 in dual meets this season with wins over Miami (Ohio), Northern Illinois and Iowa State.

Saturday's competition begins at 10:30 a.m. in the Recreation Building.

Ex-Viking Browner charged with criminal sex conduct

Associated Press

MINNEAPOLIS — Former Minnesota Vikings safety Joey Browner was charged Thursday with third-degree criminal sexual conduct — an offense tantamount to rape in the state of Minnesota.

Hennepin County District Court Judge Harold Crump released Browner, 33, on condition he checks in with the court weekly and avoids contact with the alleged victim.

The felony carries a maximum penalty of 15 years in prison and a $30,000 fine. Browner's attorney said the six-time Pro Bowler will plead innocent at his next court appearance April 20.

"It's a pretty simple defense. He didn't do what she's alleging he did, and he's anxious to defend himself," Minneapolis lawyer Michael Colich said.

According to the complaint, the 34-year-old woman had known Browner casually for five years but had not dated or had a sexual relationship with him.

The complaint alleges that after dinner at a restaurant Jan. 15, Browner and the woman went back to her Minneapolis home.

After the two watched television and talked for about an hour, Browner allegedly grabbed the woman's arm without warning and began kissing her.

According to the complaint, the woman began fighting Browner and told him to stop, but he pinned her on the couch and raped her. After the woman insisted he leave her apartment, she made calls to a friend and to 911. Browner later called to apologize, the complaint said.

UI dance company's home concert offers usual eclectic range of work

Molly Faulkner
The Daily Iowan

Dancers in Company are back. The UI's 11-member performing ensemble was originally scheduled to open this year's concert tour in Clinton, Iowa, but last week's storm canceled their engagement. As a result, Space / Place Theatre and the folks of Iowa City will get the first look at this year's eclectic mix of faculty and guest choreography.

Troupe co-directors Alan Sener and Dan Berkey both feel that the philosophy of Dancers in Company is to give a select group of students the opportunity to work with a variety of different choreographers in all styles of dance: ballet, jazz and modern. The group also enables students to perform in a variety of different venues ranging from elementary school auditoriums to professional theaters.

"The reward is seeing it all pull together," Berkey said. "Seeing the dancers make those big leaps in their performing, from rehearsal to mature dancers, and the change from the first night jitters to the final performance. Performing repertory more than two times allows the students to grow into the role."

Berkey has contributed three works to this year's endeavor. "True Blue" is a ballet featuring three women on pointe playing with the boundaries of ballet vocabulary. Berkey said this work is predominantly lively. "I wanted steps that made the performers look good," he said. "The interplay between the dancers seemed to fall into place. It became joyous interaction and sharing the movement, three people working together."

"Berkey's Law" is about the manipulation of props. Starting with two lengths of piping, Berkey said that he and the dancers "played with props and saw what we could do with them. It was kind of a freeing-up process." Despite being known for such emotional works as "Sentinel" and "Torrent," Berkey said, "I really wanted to go back to just movement as a source and not be tied into some heavy-duty concept — not even an emotional base." Local composers Sean Seaton and Paul Cunliff have written the music for this work.

"Hush" is Berkey's third piece on the bill. This is a short section of a previous work. In context, it is about birds sitting on a wire. Out of context, Berkey felt it was upbeat and animated enough to work for the elementary school audience members.

Sener has added "W/O Men," a series of four character solos for women, to this year's concert. "These solos were motivated because of these women's absence of men in their lives," Sener said. "I'm not making a sweeping generalization about the condition of womanhood ... this is a personal piece ... very situational, like we are looking in on private moments."

"Youwarkee," from last year's Dance Gala, will be making its way back into the company's repertory. Dance faculty member Armando Duarte has based this work on a mythical creature that is half-bird, half-woman. The piece, set to music by Philip Glass, has been chosen to represent the UI at the Midwest Regional American College Dance Festival in Athens, Ohio, this spring.

Duarte has also contributed "Just for Fun" to the company's repertory. This work explores difficult rhythms that can be created without the use of music. Using improvisational singing and counting in different languages, Duarte expresses a lighthearted joy of movement.

The dancers will also get the opportunity to perform the Gala favorite "Dance With Two Army Blankets" again. This lively work, choreographed by Daniel Shapiro and Joanie Smith to the tunes of Toby Tunning, explores the range of movement possible with five dancers and two army blankets.

Other returning guest choreographers include Claire Bataille, a founding member of the Hubbard

St. Company, and Charles Moulton, best known for his contributions to Joffrey Ballet's "Billboards." Bataille's "Libertango" features four women dancing to the tango beat of South American composer Astor Piazzolla. Moulton's "Nine-Person Precision Ball Passing," a visually stunning piece whose name speaks for itself, will also return.

Dancers in Company will perform in Space / Place Theatre in North Hall Saturday, March 5 at 8 p.m. and Sunday, March 6 at 3 p.m. Tickets are $5 for nonstudents and $4 for students. They can be purchased at the door.

DOWNTOWN ROUNDUP

Milkmen, Johnson, alternative showcase slam into town

Tad Paulson
The Daily Iowan

"They did not take me in the army ... I was four-P."

"Four-P?"

"Yes — in the event of war, I'm a hostage." — A fine, springtimish quote from Woody Allen's "Annie Hall"

We face a bold weekend, ladies and gents; these March days are the warm winds that blast our faces before the storms of springtime, and we are all riding one huge magic carpet a thousand feet in the air, wondering if we'll be home in time for "Cops."

Though we may be facing at least another week of "My Girl 2," there is no need to fear. "Much Ado About Nothing" is out on video as is "Tokyo Decadence."

We also have another enriching weekend lineup on the glittering Iowa City nightlife scene. Take a listen:

- Take a kamikaze spirit and bouncy, happy feet with you to the Iowa City Yacht Club, 13 S. Linn St., as they host the blasting bar-room rock of local yokels High & Lonesome tonight and Saturday. These guys put on a pretty good show at The Samples' gig last week at The Union. Check 'em out if you haven't already, but be warned — these shows get to be a little crowded and sweaty.

- Everybody will be swinging from the ceiling at Gabe's, 330 E. Washington St., this weekend, considering the bar's whammo lineup. Tonight, the Deadlike Uncle Jon's Band will wrap up a two-night stopover, performing its friendship-bead, jinga-jing tuneage. Saturday night at 8, the bar will host a powerball combo show called the "Iowa Alternative Label Showcase," featuring No Pain, Critical Gopher, Mugwump and The Swarays. Sunday night at 8, The Strangers will perform and (whew) Monday, of course, The Dead Milkmen will scream into town with opening band Possum Dixon. Need I say more?

- Tonight and Saturday night, Robert "One Man" Johnson will kick back for a night of solo guitar stuff at The Sanctuary Restaurant and Pub, 405 S. Gilbert St. He's pretty good, and so are the pizza and beer, so if you're feeling laid-back, this may be the place to be.

- The back roads, roopy sound of Big Wooden Radio will permeate The Mill Restaurant, 120 E. Burlington St., tonight and Saturday night at 9. The folk ensemble will be fervently celebrating the release of a new CD, and cover will be a whopping $2.

- Lastly, local acoustic group No Fault Folk will perform its zesty brand of rock, zydeco and Conjunto music Saturday night from 8 to 11 at the Season's Best Restaurant and Lounge. The show will be free, free, free.

On the grapevine this week, rumor has it The Breeders will be performing sometime later this month at The Union Bar and Grill (I really hope it's true). Also, be looking for the return of the live kapow of Lincoln Garcia's Funky Reggae Party in the next few weeks.

And on the movie front, we're getting "What's Eating Gilbert Grape?," "The Chase," "Angie" and "Greedy" this weekend, none of which should have audiences doing cartwheels. They all sound kind of flat.

Anyway, enjoy the weather while it lasts. Sooner or later, we'll all be singing in the rain.

Free film, reading offer peek into Sarajevo's heart and art

Charles Monson
The Daily Iowan

Iowa Citizens will get a glimpse into the soul of Sarajevo this weekend, when the theatre department presents a free play reading and a film dealing with artists' response to the Bosnian war.

The program, which will include Macedonian playwright Goran Stefanovski's piece "Sarajevo (Tales from a City)" and Nicole Stephane's film "Waiting for Godot in Sarajevo," has been organized by Mark Hunter as an attempt to support the beleaguered residents of Sarajevo. The program sprang in part from Hunter's conviction that artists working in comfort in Iowa owe something to suffering artists in the Balkans.

"As artists, we operate in an ever-shrinking world — one which is becoming more international in scope," Hunter said. "I feel it's important to observe some kind of solidarity with Balkan artists. If we have no choice except to be bystanders, we can at least be aware and caring bystanders."

The program grew out of an idea by visiting Professor Bonnie Marranca, who edits a series of avant-garde arts playwright Goran Stefanovski

texts which will soon include the as yet unpublished "Sarajevo." Marranca brought the script to Hunter's attention and encouraged him to produce it. The result will be Saturday's reading, in which some of the UI's most experienced actors (including Robb Barnard, Eric Johnson and lead Anne Fogarty) will present Stefanovski's unique vision.

"This play comes out of a tradition that's less linear than the Anglo-Saxon dramatic tradition," Hunter said. "It's presented as a theatrical poem offered to the spirit of the city itself."

The other highlight of the evening will be "Godot," a dif-icult to obtain film dealing with art critic Susan Sontag's Sarajevo production of the Beckett play. Like the play, "Godot" is appearing mainly because of Marranca's knowledge and connections; Marranca learned about it through her friendship with Sontag.

"We scored a bit of a coup by getting this film; it's only appeared in the U.S. a couple of times," Hunter said. "It's thanks to (Marranca's) presence and her commitment to being a world citizen that we are able to present it."

While the subject matter of the productions may be dark, Hunter believes that the evening will ultimately be an upbeat one — a demonstration of artists' refusal to be victimized by the nationalist passions tearing their country apart.

"It's almost a spiritual offering to the health of the city," Hunter said. "It acknowledges all the horror going on in that part of the world, but it still gives a great deal of hope. It's very life-affirming."

Both productions will be presented at 8 p.m. Saturday, March 5 in Theatre B. Admission is free.
