Guilty plea finishes Harding's career

Bob Baum
Associated Press

PORTLAND, Ore. — Tonya Harding ended her competitive figure skating career and avoided jail Wednesday by pleading guilty to a conspiracy charge in the attack on Nancy Kerrigan and resigning from the U.S. Figure Skating Association.

As part of a plea bargain, Harding was fined $100,000 and agreed to three years of supervised probation. Withdrawing from the USFSA excluded her from all amateur competitions, including the world championships next week in Japan. She was to leave today for Japan.

Harding has said she learned of the attack after she and her ex-husband, Jeff Gillooly, returned from the U.S. Figure Skating Championships in Detroit on Jan. 10. In her plea bargain, Harding admitted that she and Gillooly met with her bodyguard, Shawn Eckhardt, in Portland on Jan. 10 and went over a cover story they had concocted.

Harding pleaded guilty to conspiracy to hinder prosecution, a felony punishable by a maximum five years in prison and a $100,000 fine.

She also agreed to undergo a psychiatric examination and perform 500 hours of community service. The plea bargain guarantees there will be no further prosecution of Harding by any jurisdiction.

Before accepting the plea, Multnomah County Circuit Court Judge Donald Londer asked Harding if she had any emotional or psychological problems.

"I don't know," Harding replied.

Harding later issued a statement saying there was no excuse for the bad decision she had made.

"I am committed to seeking professional help and turning my full attention to getting my personal life in order. This objective is more important than my figure skating," the statement said.

Residents to adopt green tinge for day

Tricia DeWall
The Daily Iowan

It's a wonder what a bit of green dye will do for UI students — especially when mixed with a keg of beer on St. Patrick's Day.

Celebrating the holiday by drinking the colored ale has become a tradition that gets UI students excited to go out, have fun and turn their tongues green.

"Everyone should go out and drink on St. Patrick's Day," UI junior Brian Campbell said. "We shouldn't even have class on of green beer on tap and a traditional Irish feast available for partying patrons tonight.

"I don't expect to have any left over," she said. "We will also have an Irish feast with corned beef and cabbage, potato skins and Irish stew."

Most bars and taverns will be serving green ale for happy-go-lucky partiers like UI junior Pat Krischel, a green beer drinking veteran. He says the special mixture makes people drunker and causes other adverse effects on a person's body.

"Green beer also causes you to get sick," Krischel said. "I have gotten sick the last two St. Patty's days. It was green all right, but it didn't stain anything."

However, there are sure to be some students like UI senior Kurt Scherf, who said he will not partake in any "hard-core partying" this St. Patrick's Day.

"I will probably go out and have a couple," he said. "I just don't understand the excitement-over-green-beer."

UI senior Amy Smith said if she is going to drink anything green on St. Patrick's Day, it will be a shamrock shake from McDonald's.

"It tastes better and is a lot easier on my stomach," she said.

Still, Campbell said, dedicated people who seem to celebrate each and every holiday with the same intense enthusiasm, love St. Patrick's Day because green beer is not available any other time of the year.

"You have to take advantage of it because you only get it once a year," Campbell said. "But that also means you have to drink as much as you can."

"I just don't understand the excitement over green beer. Beer is beer."

Kurt Scherf, UI senior

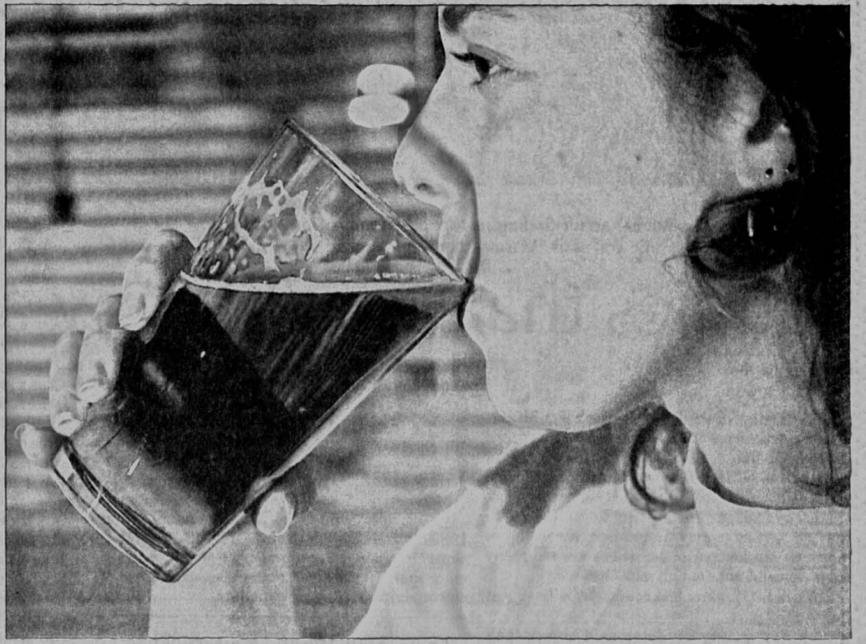

Thursday because everyone should be at the bars bright and early and drink all day long."

Rick Mouglin, off-premises manager of beer distributing company Fleck Sales, 2820 Riverside Drive, said the company sells approximately 100 kegs of green beer on St. Patrick's Day — almost all of which go to Iowa City bars.

To make the beer green, Mouglin said, a small amount of dye is injected into each keg.

"We use the green dye that you buy in stores and pump it into the kegs," he said. "We go around to the bars and green most of all of our kegs on Thursday. One bottle will do two to three kegs, depending on how much you spill."

Jennifer Rexroat, staff manager of The Vine Tavern, 330 E. Prentiss St., said her bar will have four kegs

T. Scott Krenz/The Daily Iowan

Sari Abelson, a waitress at Vito's, 118 E. College St., samples green beer that has found its way into bars all over Iowa City. So how does it get green? The beer is the same ale that bars have been serving all year except that green dye has been injected into the keg. Vito's staffers warn that for those who drink too much, the beer isn't the only thing that's green after St. Patrick's Day.

I.C. police anticipate little blarney

Tim Howe
Special to The Daily Iowan

St. Patrick's Day will no doubt see some clover-colored carousing, but barring a possible pinch to officer O'Kelly's belly the Iowa City Police Department expects business as usual.

Lt. Dan Sellers, police department watch commander, said he expects to see the typical 15 to 20 public intoxication charges this weekend — no matter what color beer they've been drinking.

"There's really no increase in problems," he said. "The only thing is when they puke, they puke green."

Lt. Mike Laing of the UI department of public safety said barring any mischievous leprechauns, things usually run smoothly during the green holiday.

"Our main goal is the protection of university property, students, faculty and staff," he said. "We handle each situation as it occurs." Sellers said about 10 officers are on night duty during the weekend. While patrolling downtown, the officers look for fights, vandalism and other forms of disorderly conduct, Sellers said.

"We don't have time to bother drunks who are just staggering home," he said. "We concentrate on people doing stupid things."

"We really don't have a problem with students, Irish or not. I've probably called more cabs for people than arrested them and I've arrested a lot of people."

ISRAELI PEACE NEGOTIATIONS OFF

Talks teeter on verge of collapse

Barry Schweid
Associated Press

WASHINGTON — With Mideast peace talks near collapse, Israeli Prime Minister Yitzhak Rabin on Wednesday rejected Palestinian demands for new security measures on the West Bank. He also signaled to Syria a willingness to make "painful decisions" over the future of the Golan Heights.

With President Clinton at his side, Rabin said Israel would not alter the agreement it signed last September to gradually permit Palestinians "to conduct their own affairs" while maintaining Israeli military control over the West Bank.

Virtually every week Israel buries victims of terrorist attacks, Rabin said, ruling out Palestinian security demands prompted by a Jewish extremist's deadly attack on a mosque.

See related story.....Page 7A

"We don't think it appropriate to wage new demands after every terrorist attack," Rabin said. "Security is a two-way street."

But taking an entirely different tack on Syria, Rabin said "we will stand ready to do what is required of us if the Syrians are ready to do what is required of them."

He then told Israeli reporters that what he meant was a "territorial compromise" on the Golan Heights.

Clinton encouraged the overture as he worked to keep the tattered 28-month-old Mideast peace process going. He said he had talked to Syrian President Hafez Assad by telephone a few days ago and was convinced "he wants to make peace with Israel."

In fact, Clinton said after talking to Rabin in the Oval Office, "both of them want to make peace with

UI students planning to leave their cars parked on the streets while they take off for a week of fun in the sun during spring break shouldn't be surprised if their vehicles are missing when they return.

All vehicles parked on Iowa City streets for more than 48 hours will be towed as Iowa City's streets division will be cleaning the streets while students are on vacation.

Beginning March 17, "No Parking Due to Maintenance" signs will be posted in neighborhoods at least 48 hours before the work will begin. Sweeping operations will begin Tuesday, March 22.

The spring sweep coincides with the Iowa City 48-hour vehicle stor-

An apple a day isn't likely to keep doctors away from 2 1/2-year-old Julian Personius. Julian's dad, Matt, and Jane Sande were among the medical students receiving their residency assignments Wednesday at Eckstein Medical Research Building. The Personius family will be heading to Salt Lake City, Utah, where Matt will complete his family practice residency. Sande will remain here to complete her residency in pediatrics.

Spring enrollments down

SIOUX CITY, Iowa (AP) — Enrollment is down this spring at the three state universities, a report to the Iowa state Board of Regents showed Wednesday.

The report by the board office showed the combined enrollment was 60,230 students at the UI, Iowa State University and the University of Northern Iowa. That compares to 61,321 one year ago, a decrease of 1.8 percent.

The UI's spring head count fell 1.8 percent from 25,724 students in 1993 to 25,271 this year.

Regents approve risk insurance for buildings

SIOUX CITY, Iowa (AP) — The Iowa state Board of Regents agreed Wednesday to insure its 567 buildings at the three universities against flood and earthquake damage.

There was no discussion as the regents voted unanimously to take out insurance policies with a $5 million deductible for single incidents, such as last summer's flooding.

The floods caused about $14.3 million damage and the universities are still awaiting more than $2 million in state reimbursements.

Board: Blume book doesn't fit emphasis of abstinence

MEDIAPOLIS, Iowa (AP) — A book about an 18-year-old girl's first sexual experience was removed from school library shelves because it doesn't fit the district's emphasis on abstinence, school officials say.

The Mediapolis School Board voted 5-2 Monday to remove "Forever," a 1975 book by Judy Blume, from the library shared by junior and senior high school students.

Superintendent William Newman said the book does not match the school's "strongly based abstinence policy." He said the board voted last year to teach sexual abstinence rather than contraception and "this book certainly does not model abstinence."

Librarian Joanne McCabe urged the board to keep the book available.

"I feel like students should have the right to read just like adults have the right to read," she said.

More and more UI students aren't finding newspaper comic strips funny. When's the last time you read "Marmaduke" and laughed out loud? How about "Family Circus?" "Peanuts?" Have some funnies outlived their eras? Some people, like Artur Wojdat, think so.

Funnies that aren't funny any more

Chris Pothoven
The Daily Iowan

Dick Tracy may divorce Tess Truehart. Blondie actually went out and started her own catering business. After more than 40 years of striking out, Charlie Brown finally hit a home run.

The comic pages are starting to catch up with the '90s — but it may be too late, according to many UI students who feel there are too many old strips and not enough new ones.

Besides that, many feel comic strips have lost the "comic" part.

UI senior Jenny Sindelar said she doesn't read newspaper comic strips very often because so many of them "just aren't funny." Instead, she likes reading the one-panel cartoons that appear in magazines.

"The comics pages are just for the dogs," she said. "So many of them are just trash."

Sindelara has a particular contempt for continuing comic strips like "Rex Morgan, M.D.," "Judge Parker" and "Mary Worth."

"I hate 'Mary Worth.' It's a stupid-ass comic," she said. "What's up with that? If you haven't read it from day one you don't know what's going on, so what's the point?"

She isn't alone in her bile. The serial "soap opera" strips seem to have little support among UI students.

"I hate the ones that try to tell a story," UI senior J.J. Weiss said. "That's missing the whole point of comic strips. They're supposed to be lighthearted — a little pick-me-up for people."

Occasionally, the comics page of the newspaper can even be gloomy, at least for UI senior Deb Walters.

"Sometimes they're really depressing for me," she said. "If I read through them and none of them make me laugh, it really bothers me because I expect them to be funny."

"Comics are just a nice part of the newspaper. You open it up and all these people are dead; there are wars and other terrible things happening, but the comics page can cheer you up."

Many strips are simply too old, some students say. "Blondie" and "Dick Tracy" began in the 1930s, while "Beetle Bailey" has been around since the 1950s. The number of strips that are more than 10 years old outweigh the number of newer strips in most newspapers.

"I hate 'Mary Worth.' It's a stupid-ass comic. What's up with that? If you haven't read it from day one you don't know what's going on, so what's the point?"

Jenny Sindelar, UI senior

"They need to update the comics more often," UI senior Jackie Dahlgren said. "After a while they kind of lose their humor. Take the 'Family Circus' — they look the same, they dress the same and they're just very outdated. It seems like most of the ones we've grown up with are really old and have gone downhill. They need to get some fresh writers."

But the older comics serve a purpose, said Walters, who still enjoys "Peanuts" and "Dennis the Menace."

"I think I read 'Family Circus' out of habit. I don't really find it amusing or particularly entertaining," she said. "I think it's good to keep the old ones, because people grew up on them. Even if they stopped printing the ones we don't find funny but still have always read, we'd really miss them."

Other comic strips suffer from poor art, according to UI sophomore David Lee.

"I hated 'University Heights.' Every picture was about the same," he said. "It was kind of like a generic comic strip. You could just put in whatever words you wanted."

But there still are quite a few good comics, Weiss said.

"I like 'Calvin and Hobbes' because of the pictures," she said. "Calvin makes really funny faces. I also used to have a roommate who made faces like that."

Lee also enjoys reading about Calvin and his stuffed tiger because he can relate to them.

"I like the whole idea that Hobbes is made up, but it's still about two friends and their adventures," he said. "I used to have a baseball that I carried around and talked to all the time."

Comic strips that are able to strike a chord in readers seem to be the most popular. Dahlgren said her favorite strip is "Cathy" because it makes fun of real-life situations.

"You can relate to them and see yourself in the same situations, or at least girls can. I don't know about guys," she said.

But Gary Larson's bizarre world of almost-human cows and twisted scientific facts, which is usually about as far from reality as one can get, still gets high marks from many readers — as long as they can understand them.

"Sometimes I have to have the 'Far Side' explained to me. I know they're really funny, but I don't understand them so that depresses me," Walters said. "But when I get it, it can make me laugh out loud even if there's no one around. I get a big bang out of them when they're funny."

NESSIE? — NOT!

Loch Ness researchers say famous 1934 picture fake

Associated Press

LONDON — The purported Loch Ness Monster pictured in a famous 1934 photo was just a toy submarine fitted with a fake sea-serpent head, two Loch Ness researchers say.

Researchers Alastair Boyd and David Martin claim one of the conspirators in the hoax told them about it just before he died in November at the age of 90, The Sunday Telegraph newspaper reported.

The photograph, depicting a sea beast with a humpback and long neck, was attributed to Robert Wilson, an eminent London gynecologist. He said he took it April 19, 1934 after his companion saw a commotion in the water and shouted, "My God, it's the monster!"

The London weekly newspaper said Boyd and Martin learned that Wilson was part of a hoax hatched by his friend Marmaduke Wetherell, a filmmaker and self-styled big game hunter hired by the Daily Mail in 1933 to hunt Nessie. Wetherell's son Ian and stepson Christian Spurling were also in on it.

Boyd and Martin said Spurling, a skilled model maker and the last surviving conspirator, told them he built the model for the 1934 photograph at Wetherell's request, the newspaper said.

Spurling created a "monster" 1 foot high and 18 inches long, it said. The keel of a toy submarine was fitted with lead to make the model ride steady in the water. The fake Nessie was taken to Loch Ness in Scotland to be photographed in authentic surroundings.

The Daily Mail ran the photo as a world exclusive, arousing huge interest.

Some researchers used the picture to back claims that Nessie is descended from plesiosaurs, large reptiles with small heads and long necks that died out 65 million years ago.

The hoax has not dealt a fatal blow to those who seek the truth behind the Loch Ness legend — or those who profit from the world's curiosity.

PRIMARY CARE PROGRAMS EXCEL

UI ranks high in family practice

Tory Brecht

The Daily Iowan

UI College of Medicine graduates are more than twice as likely to go into family practice medicine than their counterparts nationwide.

About 32 percent of 1994 graduates have chosen to enter family practice, the highest percentage going into that field ever from the UI.

Dr. Peter Jensen, UI acting associate dean for student affairs, said the numbers may represent the efforts the College of Medicine has made in recent years to encourage its students to enter primary care disciplines.

"We are delighted by the continued increase in the percentage of our students who are making the decision to enter family practice," he said.

U.S. News and World Report ranked the UI primary care program second best in the nation and the rural medicine program third.

"The high rankings are an acknowledgment of the university's accomplishments with education and research programs aimed at rural Iowans," Dr. Richard Lynch, interim dean of the College of Medicine, said. "The university's record compares very favorably to other states with respect to training family doctors."

UI student Michael Metzler, who will graduate from medical school in 1995, said he is considering family practice.

"It covers all aspects of health and it is very useful," he said. "It seems more people are going into family practice now rather than specialties."

Metzler said working in a rural community would also have some benefits.

"Most rural areas are underserved," he said. "You can be assured that your presence there will be appreciated."

Five percent of Iowa's population lives in counties in which there are no communities with more than 2,500 people. These counties suffer from a lack of family doctors.

To remedy this situation, the College of Medicine, in conjunction with the UI Office of Community-Based Programs, organized a three-year family practice training program.

Currently, 440 UI medical college graduates are practicing in 128 Iowa towns.

FLOODS, FIRES AMONG TOPICS

Forum to focus on disaster defense

Terry Collins

The Daily Iowan

The Grant Wood chapter of the American Red Cross will give tips on how area residents can be better prepared for disasters by sponsoring a community forum tonight at 7 in the Iowa Room of the Union.

The forum was planned in preparation for possible spring flooding and in response to a reported increase in multifamily fires. Donna Lee Olson, emergency services director of the Red Cross, said this is an excellent time for disaster education and training.

"It's a good time for people with questions about prevention, health concerns and other disaster-related subjects to discuss these issues with people who can give them the information they need," she said.

Olson said the forum should address concerns from all segments of the community, from home owners to businesses.

Speakers will include representatives from the Red Cross, the U.S. Army Corps of Engineers, the Iowa City Fire Department and a member of the Phi Kappa Psi fraternity, whose house was destroyed in a January fire which caused more than $1 million in damages.

Fire officials will discuss how the rise in multiple unit fires has occurred in the Iowa City and Coralville areas. They contend that disaster education can help reduce the number of residential fires.

Marianne Francisco, director of public relations for the Red Cross, said the information at the forum is essential for residents as it is better to be prepared in case of an emergency.

"It's always better to be safe than sorry," she said. "The forum will try to educate on how we can do our best to take preventative measures or minimize some of the impact."

Francisco said many people are in shock during a fire or a disaster because they are not adequately prepared when danger arises.

"Having the knowledge of what to do in the case of an emergency can definitely help save lives," she said. "In most cases, it's just a matter of having a plan of action which proves to be more beneficial when in danger."

In addition, the forum will provide information to victims of a fire or disaster on where to turn if they are in need of assistance.

The forum precedes the American Red Cross Iowa Disaster Institute, which begins Friday at the Union. The institute, sponsored by the UI, is a way of thanking the Red Cross for its assistance during last year's flood.

The institute, held annually, is open to current Red Cross volunteers and is seen as a training ground for those who would like to become more involved in disaster response and preparedness.

Among this year's highlights will be opportunities for volunteers and staff to share their experiences on how they survived the flood of '93 and to discuss new survival strategies for the possibility of another.

Spring-break tanners plagued by elevated skin cancer risks

Holly Reinhardt

The Daily Iowan

With spring break one day away and students preparing to head to the deep South for fun in the sun, some are looking to prepare their skin for the rays.

Kimberly Datisman, manager of Sunshine Laundry Co., 218 E. Market St., said tanning bed business has been booming.

"We are as busy as we possibly could be," she said. "We've been opening an hour earlier."

"It is the sunburns that are the killer. The more sunburns before 18, the greater the chance of getting malignant melanoma."

Gerry Tetrault, head nurse, UI Dermatology Clinic

She said Sunshine Laundry sets a one session per day limit for tanners. Each session lasts 25 minutes.

UI freshman Stephanie Bakosh has been tanning about twice a week for three weeks to prepare for her trip to Florida.

"I'm trying to get a base tan so I don't burn," she said.

Bakosh said she isn't concerned about the harmful effects of tanning because she doesn't plan to make it a habit.

"I figure this is a one time thing," she said.

At KSC Designs and Tan Spa, 214 S. Dubuque St., hours have been extended to meet the high demand of tanners.

Manager and co-owner Cheryl Edwards said the spa's busiest season runs from mid-February to mid-May.

She said KSC distributes booklets discussing the issues of tanning to customers before they purchase tanning packages. Edwards also said the Food and Drug Administration regulates tanning beds.

However, those preparations may not be as helpful as students think, Gerry Tetrault, head nurse of the UIHC Dermatology Clinic, said.

"Pretrip tanning doesn't offer as much protection as one may have thought," she said. "It offers little protection — don't go to tanning beds."

Tetrault said the idea of tanning in a bed prior to exposure to direct sunlight in hopes of preventing sunburn is mainly a myth. Tanning beds have ultraviolet-A light, while the naturally occurring light that burns skin is ultraviolet B. Tanning in a bed doesn't provide protection from the UVB light, she said.

Rather than hoping for protection from burns, UI freshman Sarah Johnson said she has been tanning twice a week for the past few weeks to prepare herself mentally for her spring break trip to Florida.

"I go to help me get in the mood for spring break," she said.

Johnson said the risks of skin cancer are a concern for her, so she limits how often she tans. She plans to use sunscreen with a high Sun Protection Factor and limit her time in the sun while in Florida.

Once students are at the beach basking in the bright rays, the most important thing is to protect themselves from sunburn, Tetrault said.

She recommended limiting exposure during peak direct sun hours. It is important to cover skin as well, she said. A sunscreen with SPF of 15 is recommended.

Skin Cancer Prevention Tips

- ▶ Avoid the sun. Try to stay out of the sun from 10 a.m. to 3 p.m. when its rays are strongest.
- ▶ Cover up. When you are out in the sun, wear wide-brimmed hats, long-sleeved shirts and pants.
- ▶ Use a sunscreen with a Sun Protection Factor of 15. Sunscreen keeps out the sun's harmful rays. Apply it at least 15-30 minutes before going in the sun.
- ▶ Beware of cloudy days. You can still get burned.

"Wear hats and cool, loose-fitting clothes," she advised. Tetrault also said shade does not offer full protection from the sun because the rays can be reflected.

"Even on cloudy days or when swimming, don't count on being safe," she said. "The rays can penetrate water and clouds."

Tetrault said there are two long-term hazards of sun exposure: skin cancer and wrinkles, along with the immediate hazard of a sunburn.

"A severe sunburn is just as bad as being burned in a serious accident," she said.

There are three types of skin cancer. Malignant melanoma is the most deadly and affects young people, Tetrault said.

"It is the sunburns that are the killer," she said. "The more sunburns before 18, the greater the chance of getting malignant melanoma."

"There really is no such thing as a healthy tan."

Campbell speaks at UI Hospitals

Jim Snyder
The Daily Iowan

Saying she was not Dan Quayle, Iowa Attorney General and gubernatorial hopeful Bonnie Campbell said it is time, nevertheless, to push for two-parent households during a speech to UI Hospitals and Clinics staff Wednesday.

"It's not that these are bad people. It's not about being judgmental," Campbell said. "It's not 'you shouldn't be having a baby if you're not married.' We should be saying this, but we have to find some way to be more tolerant."

"In some way, we have to be smart enough to say this is the way it is — that it is healthier for the children to grow up with two parents."

Campbell spoke to a group of about 40 UIHC staff members, many of whom were social workers, about the issues surrounding violent behavior in America.

Solutions should be sought for both the short and long terms, she said.

"I'm putting people in prison," she said. "I have an obligation to keep them there."

But looking for the reasons behind crime shouldn't be forgotten in the frenzy to build more prisons, she added.

Bonnie Campbell

"We have to develop a long-term strategy for ending violence," Campbell said. "If we don't, we won't win the battle and we certainly won't win the war."

Part of that strategy is advocating two-parent homes, she said, through health-care reform and expanding the availability of day care.

Many people on public assistance are willing to remain so, not only for the money, but also for the health-care coverage it provides, Campbell said.

Offering new legislation that doesn't punish mothers for working and fathers for staying home is one way to help solve the problem of crime, she said.

Another way to bring the fathers back into their children's lives is by aggressively pursuing the so-called "deadbeat dads" who don't pay child support, Campbell said.

"One of the benefits of getting absent dads to pay child support is they also begin to see their children more," she said. "We are benefiting from that simple premise."

However, steps to enhance the safety of women at home also must be advocated, Campbell said.

Most of the women who receive emergency health care do so because of violence at home, she said. Domestic abuse also leads to homelessness, Campbell said, adding that one-third of the homeless in Iowa are women and children fleeing abusive homes.

"If you resolve an issue by picking up a bat and hammering someone with it, it does not bode well for our society," she said. "Domestic violence is at the root of so many of our problems; it would be ridiculous not to focus on it."

Symposium to feature Van Allen

Prasanti Kantamneni
The Daily Iowan

UI physics and astronomy Professor James Van Allen will be one of the featured speakers at a symposium on manned space flight this afternoon in the Triangle Ballroom of the Union at 2:20 p.m.

At this year's Paul D. Scholz Symposium on Technology and its Role in Society, "Manned Space Flight: Is There a Future?" Van Allen and other speakers will discuss manned space flight's current and future programs.

Van Allen, a Regent Distinguished Professor of Physics and Astronomy, used UI-built instruments to discover bands of intense radiation surrounding the Earth in 1958. Today, at age 79, he monitors data on the radiation belts of Jupiter and serves as an interdisciplinary scientist for the Galileo spacecraft, scheduled to reach Jupiter in 1995.

Levi Brekke, co-chairman of the symposium's organization committee, said the manned space flight issue is debatable.

"The topic doesn't have a black or white side to it; it's just gray," he said. "Space has perhaps been the most historically important frontier. There are many lures above us that make it such an intriguing option. The counter-argument for that, however, is that these programs cost an excessive amount of money."

In addition to Van Allen, other featured speakers will be: Jeff Bantle, shuttle director at the Johnson Space Center in Houston, Texas; Ralph De Gennaro, director of the appropriations division in Washington, D.C.; and Robert Phillips, space station chief scientist at NASA. The speakers will speak for or against U.S.-manned space flight.

Brekke said the symposium will be both interesting and educational.

"It's going to be extraordinary to listen to the speakers," he said. "They are very knowledgeable on the subject."

CONFEDERATION TO BE ENDORSED

Serbs, Croats to begin talks to end war

Alison Smale
Associated Press

BELGRADE, Yugoslavia — Serbs and Croats, the main rivals in Yugoslavia's bloody breakup, agreed Wednesday to hold their first talks on formally ending their vicious war, which began in 1991 and later engulfed Bosnia.

Talks between leaders of Croatia's Serbs and the Croatian government will take place next Tuesday at the Russian Embassy in Zagreb, another indication that both Moscow and Washington are pushing hard for an overall peace.

Balkan bloodletting began when armed Serbs rebelled against Croatian independence during the breakup of the former Yugoslav federation.

The ensuing war killed at least 10,000 people before a U.N.-brokered truce brought an uneasy peace to the one-third of Croatia that Serbs control. More than 200,000 people are dead or missing in the nearly two-year-long Bosnian conflict.

Vitaly Churkin, Russia's special envoy on Yugoslavia, said the talks should yield a formal agreement ceasing military and all other hostilities between Croats and Serbs in Croatia.

Churkin stressed there could be no peace in neighboring Bosnia if hostilities in the Serb-held area of Croatia known as Krajina were ignored.

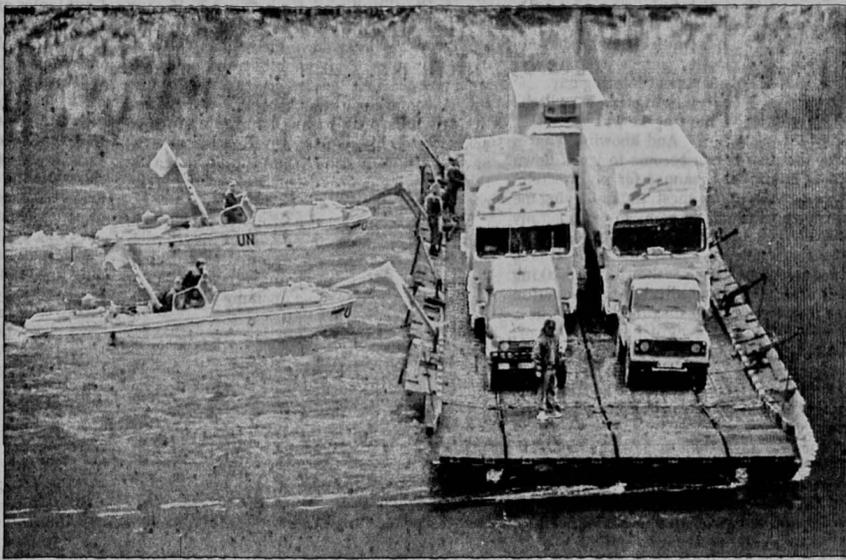

"We thought that while we keep working very hard on Bosnia-Herzegovina, we should not forget the very thorny issue, very explosive issue" of Krajina, Churkin said.

He said later that "mistrust is great" between Serbs and Croats and urged the two sides "not to try to squeeze out some last concession from the other party, but to try to make the longest step, stride, towards peace."

Churkin said he would travel today via Zurich to Washington, where Bosnia's Croats and Muslims are to sign an agreement on a U.S.-backed federation Friday.

He said the Americans were using their contacts to calm Muslim-Croat hostilities, and the Russians — traditional Serb allies — were working on defusing Serb-Croat and Serb-Muslim tensions.

After his meeting with Croatian

Associated Press

U.N. forces use a pontoon to ferry part of an aid convoy across the Nerevta River, near Medjugore, the destruction of the Biljaca bridge during fighting Bosnia-Herzegovina, Wednesday. The convoy was the first to cross the river in nine months, following the destruction of the Biljaca bridge during fighting between Muslims and Croats.

Serb leader Milan Martić, Churkin talked with Bosnian Serb leader Radovan Karadžić. He then met with President Slobodan Milošević of Serbia, the dominant state in the shrunken Yugoslavia.

Churkin is trying to persuade Karadžić to join the Muslim-Croat federation in Bosnia. Karadžić, whose troops now hold 70 percent of Bosnia, has said he wants to retain 56 percent of the war-torn state. Serbs made up only a third of Bosnia's population when the war began.

Karadžić reiterated that his people insist on "special relations with Serbia and Yugoslavia" if they join the Bosnian federation. "We haven't seen a solution (to that effect), but we see a path to such a solution," he said.

That makes Muslim and Croat leaders suspicious that the Serbs are trying to recreate the old Yugoslav federation.

Churkin acknowledged that it is difficult to find a solution that preserves the independence for which Bosnia and Croatia have paid so dearly, while acceding to the desires of Serbs in both states to have strong ties with Serbia.

Earlier, Croatian Foreign Minister Mate Granic told reporters Bosnian Serbs must join the new Muslim-Croat federation. "There will be no peace without the third party," he said.

But his counterpart in Bosnia's Muslim-dominated government told Croatian television that Bosnian Serbs would never be allowed to merge with Serbia proper.

"Bosnian Serbs are the aggressors and we shall refer to them as the aggressors," said Irfan Ljubijankić, the Bosnian foreign minister.

Bosnian Serbs continued to ignore pleas from U.N. relief officials to let aid convoys get to the besieged Muslim enclave of Maglaj. Its 19,000 residents have received only airdropped aid since the last truck convoy reached them Oct. 25.

Bosnian radio reported continued Serb shelling of Maglaj on Wednesday. It said one person died and two were wounded in a two-hour period before NATO war jets buzzed the area, prompting the Serb guns to go silent.

INSPECTION HALTED

Entry denied to N. Korean nuclear site

George Jahn
Associated Press

VIENNA, Austria — North Korea's refusal to allow inspectors in a nuclear reprocessing plant thwarted the search for a secret atomic weapons program, the International Atomic Energy Agency said Wednesday.

The report cast further doubt that a new round of talks between the United States and the reclusive Communist state would be held Monday.

Another stumbling block to the talks in Geneva is the failure of North and South Korea to work out an exchange of high-level envoys, a condition set by Washington. Another meeting between the rival states is set for Saturday.

The IAEA, a U.N. agency based in Vienna, said North Korea denied its seven inspectors access to a reprocessing plant they wanted to check for any signs of nuclear material being sidetracked to a weapons program.

State Department spokesman Mike McCurry said Monday's talks could go ahead only if it was determined that the U.N. inspection had been successful. Such a determination "seems doubtful at this point," he said.

The inspectors returned to Vienna late Tuesday. McCurry said the United States would not have the U.N. agency's final evaluation of the inspection until Monday.

The Clinton administration indicated previously that it might seek U.N. economic sanctions against North Korea if the U.N. inspectors were unable to certify that safeguards on nuclear materials had been maintained.

An IAEA official, speaking on condition of anonymity, confirmed South Korean newspaper reports that the U.N. inspectors were prevented from taking samples at a North Korean facility that is widely suspected of being used to extract plutonium, an essential component of nuclear bombs.

A statement from the IAEA said the agency "was not in a position to verify that there had been no diversion of nuclear material at the facility."

RACISM

Truth will set them free

Long ago in a galaxy far, far away, a white male assumed the identity of a great and terrible historical figure. So devilish were his deeds and so thorough was his application of oppression, he initiated fundamental social change by turning himself over to the oppressed people. He wanted to force the white supremacists to face their atrocious living history and assume responsibility for the global colonization, mental and physical, of many peoples. Only then, he argued, could the proper confluence between different groups of people and their contributions to humanity be correctly determined.

He was a visionary. He was there when hundreds of millions of Africans and their descendants were murdered during the mid-Atlantic passage; the destruction of Mayan, Inca and Aztec civilizations; and the war against the Quilombos and Maroons. He saw it all; the terrorism practiced by Southern whites, Caribbean whites, the British in India and North Africa, the Boers of South Africa and everywhere they have plundered. His brothers were physical devils resolved to wallow in the glory of white supremacy — to generate, sustain and reign in hell on earth.

He was a coward then. Now he was prepared to put an end to the continued miseducation of the world and the misappropriation of its resources. He was sick of all the perks. He was tired of the inequities. He was sick and tired of the racism, sexism, intolerance, discrimination, stereotypes, societal norms, scientific justifications, gross exploitation and rampant hatred perpetuated by one but internalized by many. He was an instant hit. The oppressed vilified him and became strong in their execution. The white elites were afraid.

When he was exposed as a fraud — having murdered not, tortured not, burned and looted not, everyone's attitude changed. The oppressed were pacified into believing that this one white male, alive, could do more to advocate social change than any person ever before. Unite. Forgive and forget. Overcome. Reform. The supremacists knew they had dodged a bullet. The white male was released by the oppressed and began to take his apologist message back to his brothers. He was promptly murdered by an oppressed fanatic. The pacificos asked, "Why did you do it?" The answer came, "Because he was white, that is enough."

Here was a simple story. A white male recognized the path of violence and domination his people took to get to the top. He wanted to say "I'm sorry" and begin to make amends. He was killed. It was also a work of complete fantasy inspired by an episode of "Star Trek." Reality tells us that no white conquistador ever said "I'm sorry." Today they refuse to see how they continue to thrive off of the success of their fathers. Still, they have not assumed responsibility. Still, they have not made amends. "Them belly full, but we hungry," Bob Marley said, still.

The pacification of the oppressed African comes when we fantasize about the existence of such a man. Fundamental change in the power structure and behavioral patterns of white supremacy will not occur until Africans ourselves become self-determined to bring them about. White males will not alter their collective consciousness. They have only one thing to gain by suddenly sharing their accumulative wealth — the truth, which will never be enough. Accepting the truth of their violent living history will set them free. Why are they so afraid to admit it? Certainly, the truth is liberating for diaspora Africans. We existed before the dawn of civilization. We survive despite continuous attempts to terminate our spirit. We will forever shine through. White supremacists can have their racist culture, economy, politics, education, government, land, labor, resources and the military might to defend it all. WE do not have to lie when the truth is on our side.

LETTERS

CIA a sinister means of control

To the Editor:

I would like to respond to a letter written by Paul Margolis in regards to a column written by Tom Hunter on March 8. In the Margolis response, the ever-trusting Paul is under the impression that he, and not Tom Hunter, is properly educated as to the always thoughtful and kindhearted intentions of the Central Intelligence Agency of the United States of America. What laboratory was this guy's mind conditioned in? Margolis, you watch too many movies.

The CIA has outlived its usefulness for one reason: It is yet another means by which our U.S. government tries to control the lives of the common, working class man all around the globe. Don't be so naive as to think that you or I could properly speculate as to what activities that organization has been engaged in. What we should be spending our time examining is why, when people here in our own country are being starved, raped, made homeless and murdered, the CIA still spends millions of dollars tracking the movements of military figureheads that should not concern us. The Cold War is over, and all those idiots that are waiting around for another war to boost the American economy and spirit need to find another decade to fuck up. When will we quit wasting our time, lives and environment finding new ways to eliminate our species from existence? We are one of the youngest species on the planet and organizations like the CIA seem determined to keep it that way. Take the American flag sticker off your bumper, Mr. Margolis. It's time you took a good look at your government's concern for your own life ... and ours, too.

Down with oppressive tyrant landlords

I woke up this past Saturday with cockroaches prancing on my eyelids, swaying rhythmically to the outdated nuances of "La Bamba." The roaches' gyrations quickly reminded my dulled senses that it was apartment hunting day.

A hunting we will go, a hunting we will go ...

And knowing what a pain in the arse it has become to track down the ideal habitat, I arranged for my proctologist to escort me in my quest, thus relieving me of any pains which might be bestowed upon my baby-sensitive buttocks.

After I completed my usual morning rituals, I turned my focus to the task at hand: making oneself presentable and alluring to a potential renter. Consequently, I disguised myself as a professional, nonsmoking graduate student, who despises pets and flosses after every conversation. Before I had a chance to toss my smoking jacket (the one with Harley Davidson patches on the elbows) to the closet floor, the feedback from a bullhorn seeped through my apartment windows, followed by the evangelical preachings of my proctologist:

"Arise, Brother Thomas, for the Lords of the Land never sleep! Not while dwellings go unleashed and dollar signs dance around their greedy heads like bloodthirsty gnats. Awaken from your slumber, Brother Thomas, and prepare to storm the Bastille and wreak justice in the name of the Renter."

In no time, my proctologist and I mounted my jeep en route to my first rental appointment. My proctologist was propped up on the back seat of my jeep as the brisk morning air blew his hair back, revealing his receding hairline. He sat tall and proud, perched there like a pagan ruler on an archaic throne, one hand on his knee and the other clutching his bullhorn.

As we drove to my first appointment, I couldn't help but notice all of the new apartment buildings shooting up around town like Kool-Aid stands, only taking up half the ground space and 50 times the air space of a Kool-Aid proprietorship. Stockpiling tenants in miniapartment complexes seems to be the current economic trend while historical houses, Chinese restaurants, laundromats / bars and Kool-Aid stands are a wave of the past. Hold onto your hats or someday somebody might just try and build an apartment on top of your priceless skull.

A few more blocks down the road, my proctologist leaned over my shoulder and said, "As your proctologist, I advise you to pull over into the convenience store up ahead." He resumed his previous pose before I had a chance to acknowledge his request. He then leaned over once again, "On second hand, pull alongside that gathering mob of people kitty-corner to the convenience store."

To my left, I noticed a group of people who had converged upon an Add Sheet distribution corner, jockeying for position with clutched rental agreements in their fists. As I pulled closer, the mob converged upon my jeep, simultane-

"Awaken from your slumber, Brother Thomas, and prepare to storm the Bastille and wreak justice in the name of the Renter."

aneously shouting, "Sublease from me, May free, I gotta find a sublesser, you're my last chance ..."

I shifted my jeep into first gear with the intention of speeding off, but the mob sensed my fear as members leaped onto the hood of my jeep.

My proctologist rose up as if enlightened by the melee, leaned his weight on the roll bar and blew into his bullhorn, "Back, heathens, back I say! You should be thoroughly ashamed of your pathetic selves. You turn your frustrations and desperation on Brother Thomas, an innocent man with a true inclination toward the downfall of your true oppressors ... the Lords of the Land. Shame on you! Join forces with us and help bring rental justice to all of Iowa City. Bring down the Lords! Bring down the Lords!"

Meanwhile, at the underground headquarters of the oligarchic landlord association, landlords discuss upcoming rental strategies. The leader of the group, the head honcho of a local management company, points out the advantages of creating a state of pandemonium in the community as a means of distracting renters from issues such as increased rental rates, the relocation of landlord headquarters to the Iowa City Yacht Club, covert price fixing, and an imbalance between supply and demand:

"Thus, by creating a state of urgency just prior to spring break and during midterms week, we can distract tenants from the blitzkrieg of new apartment buildings, making them believe that the demand for apartments is still increasing while the supply is diminishing. The reversal of this theory has even left MBAs in a state of befuddlement. Speaking of urgency, I got to fly, I've got a 10 o'clock showing."

We finally arrived at the apartment showing, only to be confronted with a large group of people sprawled out on the front yard and playing hacky sack on the sidewalk. As it turned out, they were waiting for a showing of the same apartment. As we dismounted from my jeep, my proctologist whispered into my ear, "As your proctologist, I advise you to tell these poor delirious urchins that you're the landlord and the apartment has already been rented."

Using my disguise to my advantage, I grabbed the bullhorn from my proctologist's hand, stood poised and said, "Your attention, please. I'm the landlord and I'm sorry to inform you that the apartment has already been rented. Not to worry, though; this showing was merely a hoax by me and my fellow landlords in creating a state of delirium among the rental community. Open your eyes, folks, the number of apartment complexes has increased dramatically while student enrollment has stagnated, yet rental prices have still skyrocketed."

Before I could finish, everybody dispersed, shaking their heads in frustration as they wandered off. I grabbed a can of spray paint from my jeep and spray painted "RENTED" over the "FOR RENT" sign in the front yard. My proctologist nodded his head approvingly as we hopped into my jeep and sped off down the street, shouting "In the name of the RENTER" over and over into the bullhorn.

Can peace someday fill our moral vacuum?

A few minutes after waking up, I heard the news report from Hebron of a Jewish settler with a machine gun, entering the Mosque of Abraham and killing, wounding ... how many people? While they were on their knees, their faces to the ground. While they were praying. (Oh God, I thought.)

What came next in the report was outrage, everyone in the world expressing their outrage over this massacre: the United States, Israel, the Palestine Liberation Organization, the United Nations. A huge outpouring of outrage. (Dear God, I thought and began to cry.)

Was there no one in the world who felt, as I was feeling, this sorrow and overwhelming sadness? Not that outrage is not justified in reaction to such a horrific act. But to become immediately filled with rage, without first mourning at all, was just one more manifestation of the very thing that caused this obscene act in the first place. One more manifestation of our collective moral and spiritual emptiness.

I am a Jew and I am a woman. Because of each of these facts, I have suffered beatings and other acts of violence and hatred at the hands of others. It would be a lie to say that I have not felt rage in response to these experiences. It would also be a lie to say that, even now, I do not carry anger within me — anger which has its effect on the interactions I have with other people. Despite these things, perhaps because of them, it is clear to me that violence is not the solution to the problems we have with one another. It is violence itself which is the problem. It is difficult for me to understand why it is so hard for so many other human beings to see this and to stop behaving so shamefully.

Perhaps it is because violence is easy. All one needs to do is blame one's problems on other people, and then the solution to these problems is obvious and simple: eliminate the other people. Just amass enough military, or political, or psychological artillery to do away with whoever it is that you've convinced yourself is a threat to you, and everything is solved. This kind of thinking works a strange transformation in the mind. Other people are no longer human beings. They are problems, obstacles which need to be overcome, or conquered, or gotten rid of. As such, their obliteration does not involve any messy ethical questions. All one has to consider is strategy: How can I get what I want at the least cost to myself? Very easy.

But peace is not so easy. Peace requires work. It requires patience and communication. It requires us to recognize one another's humanity. We must look each other in the eye, opening our minds to seeing an other as a person and opening ourselves to being seen (for the imperfect human being that each of us is) in turn.

These are actions which engender humility and tolerance. Once these arise, we are compelled to struggle with our own egos, instead of with each other, and to confront the realities of being creatures with limitations, realities such as the fact that none of us is the center of the universe. The world and the rest of humanity do not exist merely to ensure the fulfillment of our desires. We cannot have everything we want when we want it. We cannot expect to get things without having to pay for them — in one way or another.

As a Jew I was taught fear at a very young age. I was told horror stories and given instructions as to how to align my sympathies and hatreds. But how much energy and life has been consumed by this institutionalized disregard for God's commandments? When we self-righteously presume to hate one another, we make ourselves into gods, worshipping ourselves instead of our unnameable creator.

I long to be able to look into the eyes of all Arabs and Jews with trust and respect, to know that our lives are enriching one another's and to know that we are working together in the project which is, after all, the seed of our passions (twisted though they have become): the desire to glorify God. Killing one another is no way of doing this.

There has been so much violence between us, so many wrongs committed by both Arab and Jew. We have hurt and been hurt so many times now, it is not possible to keep count.

How can any one of us think of settling the score, when none of us can honestly say that we know what the score is at this point? We are all in pain, poisoned with the sickness that arises when grief goes unattended for too long. Yet, day after day we continue to kill one another. Does either of us really think that this will get us what we want? Isn't it obvious by now that it just is not working? Aren't we ready to just say "Enough!"

We are members of one family. It is time to stop "resolving" our conflicts in terms of might makes right. It is time to stop thinking that the act of eliminating one another can be liberating. It is time to stop drawing the line between right and wrong at what one can "get away with." And it is time to stop capitulating to those who do think in these terms.

We must stop now and do something else, before our spirits and our bodies are so broken that we are simply incapable of doing anything else.

ESCAPEES STILL AT LARGE

Brazilian human rights activists released after prisoner standoff

Altamiro Nunes
Associated Press

FORTALEZA, Brazil — Convicts who escaped a maximum-security prison in an armored van provided by police crashed into a tree Wednesday and fled into the hills of northeastern Brazil. A Roman Catholic cardinal and 12 other hostages had earlier been released unharmed.

Inmates of the Paulo Sarasate prison pulled sharpened spoons from their clothing and put them to the backs and throats of the visiting cardinal and human rights activists Tuesday to begin the hostage-taking odyssey just outside this city 1,750 miles north of Rio de Janeiro.

Thirteen prisoners joined in the uprising, making a deal with authorities to release the hostages in exchange for police providing weapons and a getaway vehicle and even turning off the prison lights as they fled late Tuesday.

Police made good on their side of the bargain, but the prisoners did not, dumping only a guard who had been shot in the leg out of the van as they sped past the prison gates and west into the scrub bush.

Packed into the armored vehicle with the inmates was Cardinal Aloisio Lorscheider and 12 other hostages.

"We don't know how they all fit in there," said Ceara state police Col. Durval Tavares.

Throughout the night and by dawn Wednesday, the hostages were released unharmed along the road in small groups as police trailed the getaway vehicle.

An estimated 250 federal, state, municipal and highway officers, including sharpshooters, planned to follow until the vehicle ran out of gas. They set up roadblocks around the area and used helicopters to scan the woods, which grow thick during the rainy season.

"We'll follow them to the end of Brazil, but we'll get them," said police Col. David Rodrigues, in charge of the rescue.

Nearly 20 hours after the siege began, the escapees abandoned the armored van after crashing into a tree and fled into the Blue Hills region near Quixada, 100 miles from Fortaleza.

Lorscheider, the 69-year-old archbishop of Fortaleza forced to sit in the front seat as a human shield against police sharpshooters, complained only of stiff legs. He was examined by a doctor and sent home to rest.

"We had a minor epic, but it's over. I have forgiven them," Lorscheider said, waving to supporters and giving a thumbs-up sign.

Police initially said after the crash that the prisoners were surrounded, but as nightfall neared there was no report of their capture.

Police hoped to negotiate a peaceful end.

"Our orders are to take them alive," state police Col. Durval Tavares said in Fortaleza, capital of Ceara state.

The uprising began Tuesday morning when Lorscheider and the human rights activists began a routine visit to check reports of overcrowding and abuse.

The prison, 15 miles outside Fortaleza, is the state's largest. Police said it held 465 inmates, under its capacity of about 800. But the CBN radio network said it was built for only 400 prisoners and 650 were being held there.

As Lorscheider was speaking to inmates from a podium, Antonio

Carlos Barbosa — a convicted bank robber, murderer and member of the "Red Command" organized crime gang — grabbed the cardinal around the neck and pulled him to the ground.

Inmates grabbed a guard and took a revolver and a rifle. Two inmates died in a shootout and two police officers and a prison guard were wounded, authorities said.

The inmates moved the hostages to the prison's central pavilion. They were forced to stand near the windows in front of their captors, forming a human shield against police sharpshooters.

The hostages included two bishops, a priest, the prison director, a state legislator, a city councilman, the councilman's wife, two Brazilian journalists and a photographer.

Lorscheider, a Franciscan named cardinal in 1976, is a leading voice of the liberal wing of Brazil's church. Brazil, the world's most populous Roman Catholic country, has 130 million followers among its 150 million residents.

RABIN READY TO REVIVE TALKS

Hebron mosque massacre amplified by soldiers according to Palestinians

Said Ghazali
Associated Press

HEBRON, Occupied West Bank — Arab judges and lawyers investigating the Hebron massacre for the PLO said Wednesday they believe soldiers fired at people and caused at least one death at the mosque despite denials by Israeli officers.

"Soldiers had a role in the massacre, because they shot inside the mosque and in the area outside," said Abdel Ghani Awawi, a lawyer on the 11-member Palestinian panel looking into the Feb. 25 massacre.

Anger over the massacre continued to grip Hebron. Arab youths fought with soldiers Wednesday when a curfew was lifted briefly to allow people to buy food. Awawi's cousin, Amjad Awawi, 22, died from a bullet wound in the neck, Alia Hospital reported. The army did not confirm the death.

Prime Minister Yitzhak Rabin was reported ready to allow the PLO to deploy several dozen Palestinian police in Hebron even though the West Bank city is not in the self-rule areas designated by the PLO-Israel peace accord.

The move, which Israel radio attributed to sources close to Rabin, would be a concession to the PLO in an effort to revive the peace talks, which have been at a standstill since the massacre. The Palestine Liberation Organization has said it needs guarantees for the safety of Palestinians before it can return to the talks.

But in Washington to meet with President Clinton, Rabin rejected Palestinian demands for new security measures in the West Bank, noting that Israel buries victims of terrorist attacks virtually every week.

Awawi said that after interviewing more than 70 witnesses, the PLO's inquiry panel reached the same conclusion as the Israeli army — that 34 Muslims were shot dead in Hebron the day of the massacre. The group's complete report is due within three weeks.

The key discrepancies to date revolve around Palestinian claims that army gunfire was responsible for at least one death in the confusion as people tried to escape a Jewish settler who gunned down worshippers inside the mosque.

The PLO panel counted 28 people killed by the settler inside the mosque. It said army gunfire killed one Arab just outside the mosque, one in the nearby cemetery and four outside Ahli Hospital, where crowds gathered after the massacre.

Maj. Gen. Danny Yatom, the Israeli commander for the West Bank, and other officers testified at the official Israeli inquiry last week that the settler killed 29 people in the mosque and soldiers killed four outside the hospital and one in a neighborhood behind the mosque.

Yatom denied reports that soldiers shot at people trying to flee the mosque. He said soldiers fired only in the air inside the mosque, lodging a few bullets in the ceiling.

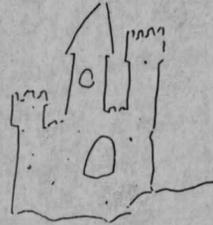

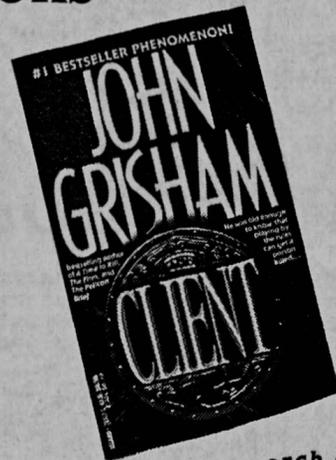

It is possible that soldiers might have been disoriented by stampeding Arabs shouting "God is great." Israelis associate the phrase with attacks by fundamentalists, while Muslims use the expression widely in times of distress.

Witness accounts have been contradictory and difficult to piece together.

Three Palestinian witnesses said Diab Karaki, 23, was shot dead by soldiers as he fled from the mosque.

"I saw him running out of the mosque, and I saw five Israeli soldiers chasing him. I saw at least three soldiers shooting at him from behind," said Zuhaira Abu Mayala, whose house is about 300 yards from the site.

racketeering in a plea bargain with prosecutors. He told authorities Harding was in on the plot and gave the final go-ahead. Harding has denied knowing about the attack beforehand.

After the hearing, Deputy District Attorney Norm Frink said there was "substantial evidence to support Harding's involvement prior to the assault."

"She's not going to plead guilty to it, but I think the facts speak for themselves," he said. The state accepted the plea agreement because of the potentially large cost of a trial, he said.

Eckardt, hit man Shane Stant and getaway driver Derrick Smith have been charged with conspiracy. They have confessed to their roles but have not been indicted.

William Hybl, chairman of the USFSA panel that investigated Harding, said the USFSA would continue its investigation and that Harding could still be stripped of the national title she won in Detroit.

A grand jury deciding whether to indict Harding met throughout the day. Among those testifying were Gillooly; Harding's choreographer, Erica Bakacs; and a handwriting expert.

On Jan. 18, Harding was questioned for 10½ hours by the FBI. After being confronted about her testimony, she changed her story and implicated Gillooly. Midway through the questioning, she announced she was separating from her ex-husband.

Harding has said in several interviews that she didn't immediately tell authorities about the attack because she was afraid. She has said Gillooly had hit her on many occasions during their stormy on-again, off-again relationship.

Farrakhan sues Post for libel

NEW YORK (AP) — Nation of Islam leader Louis Farrakhan filed a $4.4 billion libel lawsuit against the New York Post, which last week quoted Malcolm X's widow as accusing Farrakhan of complicity in her husband's murder.

The lawsuit, filed Tuesday in Manhattan's state Supreme Court, said the Post printed Betty Shabazz's "false and defamatory statement" in a March 12 column by Jack Newfield headlined "Widow Pins Malcolm X Murder on Farrakhan."

The Post said the lawsuit was without merit.

Newfield's column quoted remarks Shabazz made on a WNBC-TV show broadcast Sunday. She was asked, "Do you think that Louis Farrakhan had anything to do with the death of your husband?" Malcolm X was assassinated in 1965.

Shabazz replied, "Yes, nobody kept it a secret. It was a badge of honor. Everybody talked about it. Yes."

each other."

In another development, U.S. officials disclosed Secretary of State Warren Christopher wrote Arafat last week urging him to follow the step-by-step approach favored by the Clinton administration — and to steer clear of a Russian strategy for resolving the Arab-Israeli conflict.

Christopher told Arafat he was concerned the PLO might set up another diplomatic track with Russia in an effort to cut a better deal over the West Bank and Gaza, said the officials, who insisted on anonymity.

The letter was written while Christopher was in Australia and then sent to Tunis while he was en route to Japan.

Clinton, at the joint news conference with Rabin, said the Russians as co-sponsors of the Mideast peace process "have a right to have their say." But he urged Moscow to coordinate its actions with Washington so what Russia does "is not seen as an obstacle to peace."

Israel's negotiations with the PLO to implement an agreement on Palestinian self-rule came to an abrupt halt when Dr. Baruch Goldstein opened fire inside a mosque in Hebron on Feb. 25, killing at least 29 people.

A series of Israeli measures to rein in radicals and U.S. exhortations that peace talks were the best prescription for the Palestinians' plight, failed to persuade Arafat to resume the negotiations.

Syria, Jordan and Lebanon, meanwhile, joined the boycott, derailing negotiations with Israel on the three other tracks.

Clinton, at a joint news conference with Rabin, acknowledged peace had become more elusive and Rabin looked to Syria to rekindle peace hopes. He tried to smooth the way with conciliatory gestures.

"We know that as we engage in serious and authoritative negotiations, the point will come where painful decisions will have to be made," Rabin said.

The Israeli leader was not explicit, though the reference apparently was to the Golan Heights, captured by Israel in the 1967 Six-Day War and now home to thousands of Jews.

On the Palestinian front, though, Rabin stood firm, rejecting demands by PLO Chairman Yasser Arafat for additional measures to protect Palestinians from Jewish extremists, some of whom seek to expel the Arabs from the West Bank.

On the other hand, with Arafat still holding out, Rabin directed his attention to Syria.

"We are ready to negotiate peace with Syria," Rabin said. "There must be give and take on both sides."

Rabin had vowed in the past not to "go down" from the Golan Heights. But he declined to reaffirm that stand in an exchange with a reporter.

"This is an issue to be addressed between Syria and Israel," he said at a picture-taking session with Clinton.

Then, at the news conference, he said painful decisions must be made. "The promise of peace and its genuine benefits ... justifies making such decisions vis-a-vis Syria," Rabin said.

Clinton offered U.S. help to Israel and Syria and deplored the breakdown in Mideast talks on all fronts.

"We are closer to a lasting peace than would have been thought only a year ago, yet we are further from that peace than we expected to be only a month ago," he said.

"The events of the past several weeks have demonstrated the risk in this great undertaking."

Rabin called on Arafat to end his boycott of negotiations over Palestinian self-rule on the West Bank and Gaza.

age ordinance, which is continually in effect. Vehicles left on the streets for long periods of time will be towed, Iowa City Manager Steve Atkins said.

Iowa City street division Assistant Superintendent John Sobaski said sweeping begins during spring break because there are fewer cars on the streets.

"Since many students are gone, this is really the only time we get the full opportunity to sweep these streets," he said.

More UI student vehicles are likely to be towed during break than any other period, Atkins said. Though students have been informed of the sweep in past years, more than two dozen vehicles were still towed last year.

Atkins said the city does not want to charge students or tow their vehicles during the break.

"We want to avoid having hefty charges awaiting students upon their return from vacation," he said. "The important thing for students to know is that they cannot store their car on the streets."

Owners who park their vehicles on Iowa City streets are advised to continually check their cars, at least every other day. The sweeping operation project is scheduled to be completed by Thursday, March 24.

Bears Pitch Harbaugh

LAKE FOREST, Ill. — Chicago Bears, who signed quarterback Matt Barkley from Detroit, on Wednesday released three-year starter Jim Harbaugh.

The move, which was expected, makes Harbaugh an unrestricted free agent, allowing him to negotiate with any team without the approval of the Bears.

Harbaugh's release comes a year after he signed a $13 million contract with the Bears, up from a $3.8 million salary in 1993. He was expected to be a three free agents — offensive tackle Art Shell, running back Mercer Lewis, and tight end Mike Anderson.

Harbaugh, who was picked in 1987, was the Bears' starting quarterback last season, when he completed 7-9. He completed 325 passes for 2,000 yards and seven touchdowns, and was intercepted 11 times.

During his career with the Bears, Harbaugh has completed 58.2 percent of his passes and completed three numbers are club history.

Raiders try to trade El Segundo

THE LOS ANGELES RAIDERS announced Wednesday that they will keep running back El Segundo, who received the Pro Bowl award in 1993.

The Raiders announced their decision on Wednesday before their deadline to trade the offer or lose Brown to the 1994 draft.

Brown caught 8 touchdowns and scored seven touchdowns in 1993.

Brown said Wednesday the Broncos' offer was "not what I wanted to play the contract, there is a clause that Brown would be released if the Broncos believed would be difficult for the Raiders to sign."

The cause of death was not immediately known, but an autopsy, the coroner said, would be performed. A person who answered the phone at the rehab center said he did not know the pitcher.

Bears ditch Harbaugh

LAKE FOREST, Ill. (AP) — The Chicago Bears, who last month signed quarterback Erik Kramer from Detroit, on Wednesday released three-year starter Jim Harbaugh.

Jim Harbaugh

The move, which was expected, makes Harbaugh an unrestricted free agent, allowing him to negotiate with any team without compensation to the Bears.

Harbaugh's release comes a year after he signed a four-year, $13 million contract and opens up considerable room under the $33.8 million salary cap for the Bears, who already have signed three free agents — Kramer, offensive tackle Andy Heck and running back Merrill Hoge.

Harbaugh, Chicago's top draft pick in 1987, was the quarterback of the NFL's worst offense last season, when the Bears finished 7-9. He completed 200 of 325 passes for 2,002 yards and seven touchdowns. He was intercepted 11 times.

During his career with the Bears, Harbaugh attempted 1,759 passes and completed 1,023 for a 58.2 percent success rate. All three numbers are the highest in club history.

Raiders try to keep Brown

EL SEGUNDO, Calif. (AP) — The Los Angeles Raiders ensured that they will keep Tim Brown by matching the four-year $11 million Pro Bowl wide receiver received from the Denver Broncos.

The Raiders announced their decision on Wednesday, two days before their deadline to match the offer or lose Brown, who won the 1987 Heisman Trophy.

Brown caught 80 passes and scored seven touchdowns in 1993.

Brown said when he signed the Broncos' offer sheet that he wanted to play there. As part of the contract, there is a no-trade clause that Brown and the Broncos believed would make it more difficult for the Raiders to match.

SAN DIEGO (AP) — Eric Show, who helped pitch the San Diego Padres to a pennant in 1984, was found dead Wednesday in his bed at a drug rehabilitation center. He was 37.

Show's body was discovered at 8:23 a.m. PST at the Rancho L'Abri retreat in the rural community of Dulzura, south of San Diego, the San Diego County coroner's office said.

The cause of death was not immediately known, pending an autopsy, the coroner's office said. A person who answered the phone at the retreat refused to answer questions.

Show played for the Padres from 1981 to 1990 and threw the pitch that Pete Rose hit to break Ty Cobb's all-time hit record.

Missouri reserve suspended

COLUMBIA, Mo. (AP) — Guard Paul O'Liney was suspended for Missouri's first-round NCAA tournament game after pleading guilty to misdemeanor assault and paying a fine, his lawyer said Wednesday.

O'Liney was arrested early Tuesday outside a downtown Columbia nightclub for allegedly punching a woman in the face.

He pleaded guilty and paid a $100 fine and $20 in court costs Tuesday, said an administrative assistant in the city's traffic violations bureau.

Paying the fine resolved charges against O'Liney, the administrative assistant said.

Iowa breezes past Mountaineers

Tunsil, Yarbrough net 15; Hawks coast 70-47 in first-round action

Joel Donofrio
The Daily Iowan

Superior size, quickness and surprisingly accurate outside shooting led the Iowa women's basketball team to a 70-47 NCAA first-round victory over Mount St. Mary's Wednesday night at Carver-Hawkeye Arena.

Paced by 15-point performances from guards Arnela Yarbrough and Necole Tunsil, Iowa shot 47 percent from the floor and 60 percent from 3-point range to thwart the Mountaineers' collapsing zone defense.

"The shots were open, so I just took them," said Yarbrough, who sank a career-high 5 of 8 3-point attempts. The 15 points tied her career-best performance at Wisconsin earlier this season.

Mountaineer coach Bill Sheahan's game plan was obvious from the start: Play zone defense and make Iowa hit their outside shots, then run down the shot clock when they had the ball. This strategy kept Mount Saint Mary's in the game early, as the Hawkeyes could manage only a 16-12 lead with 8:35 left in the first half.

At that point, however, Iowa went on a 14-3 run to lead 30-15 five minutes later and 34-20 at halftime. Tunsil poured in 11 first-half points to pace the Hawkeyes, while Virgie Dillingham and Andrea Harmon combined for 11 more points through their offensive rebounding and high-post shooting.

"At the beginning of the game, they just collapsed three or four players every time the ball came inside. I thought maybe at first they would just play Cathy (Marx) like that, but they didn't," Harmon said. "We just knew we had to move the ball around ... reverse it and get the post open on the opposite side (of the lane)."

"Iowa's got great players, we were really impressed with them. They're bigger, stronger, quicker than anybody we've played."

Bill Sheahan, Mount St. Mary's head coach

After intermission, the Hawkeyes quickly opened up a 20-point lead behind two long jump shots by Dillingham and a 3-pointer by Yarbrough. Mount St. Mary's used 3-point shooting by guard Shari Delaney and the post moves of forward Susie Rowlyk to trim the lead to 56-42, but Iowa regrouped after a time-out and held the Mountaineers to five points for the rest of the game.

"Iowa's got great players, we were really impressed with them. They're bigger, stronger, quicker than anybody we've played," Sheahan said. "I'm very proud of my team for the way they hung in there."

Marx and Dillingham added 10 points each to the Hawkeye offense while helping their squad to a 47-29 rebounding advantage. Antonia Macklin came off the bench to add six points and six assists to the Hawkeyes' total of 23 assists.

With the victory, the third-seeded Hawkeyes advance to a Sunday afternoon matchup with Alabama, a 96-86 first-round winner over Oregon State. Iowa coach C. Vivian Stringer said Wednesday night's win was just what her team needed

Iowa wrestling coaches Jim Zalesky, left, and Dan Gable will lead the Hawkeyes to the national tournament today through Saturday in Chapel Hill, N.C. Iowa has won the past three years.

Hawks have to 'step up'

Kris Wiley
The Daily Iowan

Iowa wrestling coach Dan Gable has a simple answer for what his Hawkeyes need to do in order to win their fourth consecutive national title.

"I think we're going to have to wrestle a little better (than the Big Ten tournament)," Gable said. "I don't think we can afford to lose three matches in one round by a point. I think we're going to have to step up to win this national tournament."

The Hawkeyes begin defense of their string today in the Dean E. Smith Center in Chapel Hill, N.C. First-round action gets underway at 10 a.m. with the second round set for 6 p.m. The quarterfinals start at 11 a.m. Friday followed by the semifinals at 6 p.m. Consolation finals begin Saturday at 11 a.m., and the championship finals are scheduled for 6 p.m.

The Hawkeyes (11-3) have been ranked third most of the season behind Oklahoma State and Minnesota. After losing to the Golden Gophers 23-11 Jan. 28, Iowa came back to win its 21st straight Big Ten championship March 6 in Iowa City. Oklahoma State beat the Hawkeyes twice during the regular season, including a 17-15 win at the National Duals Jan. 23.

Gable was surprised that coaches predict Oklahoma State and Iowa to contend for the championship. He said Oklahoma State has been in a separate category this year, but because of the loss of

WOMEN'S SWIMMING

Widmyer to compete against nation's finest

Doug Alden
The Daily Iowan

All athletes want to finish their career on a high note, and senior swimmer Nicole Widmyer is getting the chance to do it at this weekend's NCAA Swimming and Diving Championships in Indianapolis.

Widmyer met the NCAA B standard for provisional qualification in the 100-yard butterfly at last month's Big Ten Championships with a time of 55.76 seconds, but had to wait until last Thursday before finding out she qualified.

She is the first Hawkeye swimmer to participate in the meet since 1991, and Coach Pete Kennedy feels the accomplishment shows Widmyer's determination.

"It's an outstanding feat just to make (the NAAs)," Kennedy said. "If you've made it in you're just doing an outstanding job. There's no question about it. You've paid the price and earned the right to be there."

Nicole Widmyer

Qualifying for Friday's 100 butterfly enabled Widmyer to enter today's 50 freestyle, for which she also met the provisional standard, as an at-large participant.

Widmyer is seeded 19th going into the Friday's race and said she feels privileged to represent the Hawkeyes. Her goal is to improve her time and possibly score points.

"I'm trying to stay relaxed and not think too much about it. If I could score, it'd be great," Widmyer said. "I'm just excited to go there. I'm excited to swim with the fastest swimmers in the country or even the world."

Kennedy also would like to see Widmyer do well but is not putting any additional pressure on her.

"She's got herself to the meet now and has nothing to lose and everything to gain," Kennedy said. "You've got two swims, just make them count for something."

Widmyer said the anxiety of not knowing if she would qualify was the worst part of training after Big Tens, adding she was more relieved than anything else after she finally knew she had qualified.

"I called my mom after I found out. I think she was more excited than I was," Widmyer said.

Associated Press

EVANSTON, Ill. — Cedric Neloms and Patrick Baldwin sparked a second-half comeback, and Northwestern — making its first postseason appearance in 11 years — beat DePaul 69-68 in the first round of the NIT.

The Wildcats (15-13) rallied from a 12-point halftime deficit, finally taking the lead with 4:17 to go when Kip Kirkpatrick tipped in a missed free throw.

Neloms scored 10 of his 24 points in the second half, while Baldwin had 12 of his 21 in the second, including a slam dunk with 1:51 to go that gave the Wildcats a three-point lead.

DePaul (16-12) got 18 points from Tom Kleinschmidt, who had only five in the second half.

In the second round, Northwestern plays Xavier, which beat Ohio University 80-68.

Kirkpatrick's tip after a missed free throw — Northwestern's third offensive rebound in less than a minute after a miss from the line — put the Wildcats ahead 64-63.

Neloms hit one of two free throws for a four-point lead before Kris Hill of DePaul made a layup with 23 seconds to go, cutting it to two.

Kirkpatrick made one of two free throws with 14 seconds to go, putting Northwestern in front 68-65 before DePaul's Brandon Cole missed a chance to tie when his 3-pointer hit the rim with nine seconds left.

Baldwin made one free throw for a four-point lead before Kleinschmidt banked in a meaningless shot at the buzzer.

Siena 76, Georgia Tech 68
ALBANY, N.Y. — Doremus Bennerman scored 33 points, including a 3-pointer from the top of the key that broke a 66-66 tie with 56 seconds to play, to send Siena past Georgia Tech.

Bennerman, player of the year in the Metro Atlantic Athletic Conference, scored 14 of his team's last 17 points as Siena rallied from a 64-60 deficit in the final 3:34. Bennerman made 11 of 12 free throws during that span.

He outplayed Georgia Tech's star guard Travis Best, who had just 10 points before fouling out with 2:16 to play. Best missed 11 of 14 shots.

Iowa, which qualified eight wrestlers, also may have an advantage because of its performance at the Big Ten tournament, where 150-pounder Lincoln McClravy and 167-pounder Ray Brinzer were crowned champions.

Host North Carolina qualified all 10 wrestlers. Oklahoma State and Minnesota will take nine.

"This is going to be rather an interesting national tournament, I have a feeling," Gable said.

Even though they were soundly defeated, Sheahan and his Mountaineer players said they enjoyed the experience of NCAA tournament basketball and the atmosphere of Carver-Hawkeye Arena.

"It was very exciting, we all came out of warm-ups with a big smile on our faces," Rowly said of playing before the crowd of 4,290, Iowa's second-lowest of the season. "And the tremendous support that everyone gives the Iowa players, I found that fascinating."

"It was hard to find your parents up there, you're looking around and there's this little section from Mount St. Mary's," Delaney added.

Tulane defeated Evansville. Tulane's bruising man-to-man half-court defense stifled the Purple Aces inside as Lewis went 4-for-7 from 3-point range, loosening Evansville's inside defense.

The loss ended Evansville's season at 21-11, while Tulane (18-10) advanced to a second-round game against Siena.

Lewis struck early, scoring seven of the Green Wave's first nine points of the game. Carlin Hartman had nine of his 16 points for Tulane midway through the first half.

Brent Kell led Evansville with 18 points and Andy Elkins and Reed Jackson added 12 each.

Vanderbilt 77, Oklahoma 67
NORMAN, Okla. — Billy McCaffrey and Ronnie McMahan led a second-half rally that carried Vanderbilt over Oklahoma.

McCaffrey scored 12 of his 16 points in the second half, and McMahan hit two big 3-pointers to help get the Commodores going. They trailed by as many as nine points in the first half, and four at the break.

Vanderbilt (17-11) advances to play New Orleans.

NCAA TOURNAMENT

Longshot elated to be invited

Associated Press

Of all the 64 teams in the NCAA tournament, one of the most surprised to be there is the College of Charleston.

The Cougars, who jumped from NAIA to Division I only three years ago, were such longshots that Coach John Kresse suggested to his players they not show up at the restaurant where he was watching the NCAA selection show with fans Sunday.

"I told them, 'We need not have you at a gathering where if you don't see your name pop up, it would be a major bummer,'" Kresse said.

Meanwhile, Kresse had solicited the help of Lou Carnesecca, his former boss at St. John's, in trying to secure a place in the National Invitation Tournament for Charleston.

"They had never looked at the little guy for an at-large bid" in the NCAA, Kresse said.

When the Cougars were selected as an at-large NCAA entry, Kresse said, "I was flabbergasted," and the players began celebrating.

Shortly afterward, the Cougars (24-3), who were seeded 12th in the Southeast Regional, began practicing for their first-round game against No. 5 seed Wake Forest (20-11) at Lexington, Ky., today.

That game will be the opener of a quadrupleheader at Rupp Arena. It will be followed by Kansas (25-7), the No. 4 seed, against 13th-seeded Tennessee-Chattanooga (23-6).

Purdue (26-4), the No. 1 seed, against Central Florida (21-8), seeded 16th, and eighth-seeded Providence (20-9) against Alabama (19-9), the No. 9 seed.

The East Regional begins today at Uniondale, N.Y., with Connecticut (27-4), the No. 2 seed, against 15th-seeded Rider (21-8); Alabama-Birmingham (22-7), seeded seventh, against No. 10 seed George Washington (17-11).

Nebraska (20-9), seeded sixth, against Penn (24-2), the No. 11 seed, and Florida (25-7), seeded third, against James Madison (20-9), seeded 14th.

First-round games in the Midwest Regional will be played at Wichita, Kan., Thursday, with Saint Louis (23-5), the No. 7 seed, against Maryland (16-11), the No. 10 seed; Massachusetts (27-6), seeded second, vs. Southwest Texas State (25-6), seeded 15th; Michigan Massachusetts head coach John Calipari directs his team during practice Wednesday. The second-seeded Minutemen take on Southwest Texas State tonight in the first round of the NCAA playoffs.

(21-7), seeded third, against Pepperdine (19-10), the No. 14 seed, and Texas (25-7), seeded sixth, vs. Western Kentucky (20-10), seeded 11th.

And the West Regional starts today at Ogden, Utah, with Syracuse (21-6) against Hawaii (18-14), seeded 13th; California (22-7), seeded fifth, vs. Wisconsin-Green Bay (26-6), seeded 12th; Missouri (25-3), the No. 1 seed, against Navy (17-12), seeded 16th, and Cincinnati (22-9), seeded eighth, vs. Wisconsin (17-10), seeded ninth.

The remaining 16 opening-round games will be played Friday.

Charleston, the 1983 NAIA champion, was able to overcome its small-time reputation this season with victories over Penn State, Alabama and UNC-Charlotte. The Cougars also own the nation's longest winning streak at 16 and have a 364-98 record in Kresse's 15 years as coach.

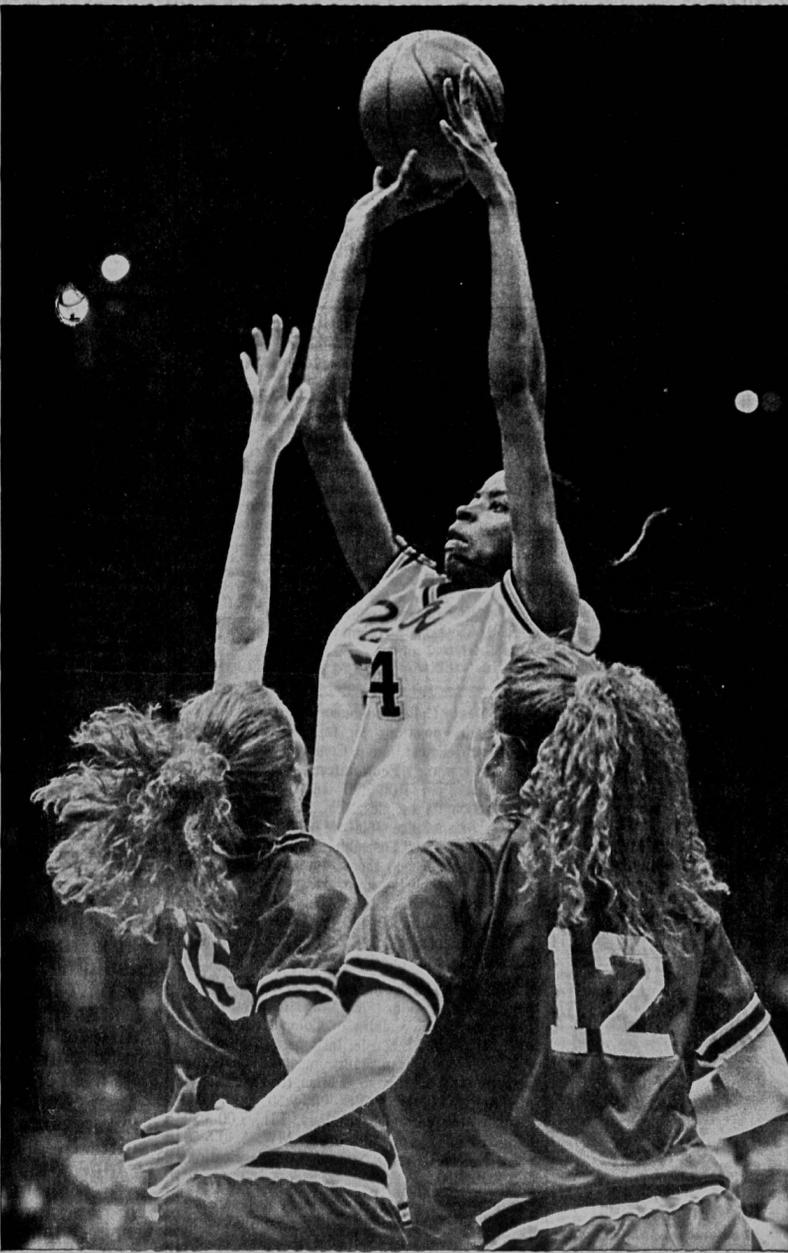

They are one of the nation's best defensive teams, holding opponents to a field-goal percentage of 38.9.

While Charleston is making its first appearance in the NCAA tournament, its first-round opponent, Wake Forest, is making its fourth in a row.

The Demon Deacons beat Duke twice and North Carolina once late in the season and finished third in the Atlantic Coast Conference.

Two other tournament longshots are Southwest Texas State and Wisconsin-Green Bay.

Southwest Texas State, which never had won a game in the Southland Conference tournament in four previous tries, won the championship this season, beating North Texas 69-60. Only two years ago, the Bobcats finished with a 7-20 record.

Cowboys lose two linemen

Associated Press

IRVING, Texas — Dallas Cowboys owner Jerry Jones is halfway to his prediction of losing four free agents.

Offensive lineman John Gesek became the second Cowboy to sign elsewhere when he agreed Tuesday night to a reported three-year deal worth $3.6 million with the Washington Redskins. Defensive lineman Jimmie Jones signed with the Los Angeles Rams last month.

Linebacker Ken Norton is reportedly being wooed by the San Francisco 49ers, offensive lineman Nate Newton is talking to the Philadelphia Eagles and wide receiver Alvin Harper is near a deal with the Pittsburgh Steelers.

Four student choreographers and dancers offer works on dealing with life in tonight's Space / Place concert.

Dances pose life questions

Molly Faulkner
The Daily Iowan

A box of 64 Crayola crayons and a pile of student-colored programs are just part of this week's student dance concert, "Posing Questions."

The student lounge at Halsey Hall was transformed into an art studio Monday, as any students with breaks between classes were invited to come draw their impressions of the "Posing Questions" theme on the show's programs. No two are alike — they seem to be an appropriate teaser for a mixed-work concert.

Student choreographers Mark Drahozal, Erica Jasna and Lisa Kneller have contributed two works each to the evening; UI graduate student Jeffrey Bullock also has a work on the bill. The concert's running theme is life and how to deal with it.

Drahozal's "I Do" is a piece on love and marriage; his "Bed One" is a duet between a man and his bed. "The bed is more of a representation or symbol of loss and longing," he says.

Jasna's "Spilled Milk" and "Schedule" will be performed. The former has been selected to be performed at the American College Dance Festival Association in Athens, Ohio.

"The solo changes constantly," Jasna says. "Every time I perform it, it means something else. One day it might be about being trapped, and another day it might be about trying to obtain lightness in a Zen sort of way."

"Schedule" is a new work about dealing with daily schedules. It is set up in three sections: a light-hearted look at the morning ritual of getting that 10 minutes of extra sleep, a power lunch and a look at the "show girl" mentality.

Kneller, a graduating senior, is redoing "365th Breakfast." First choreographed in 1991, this work is about a couple breaking out of their set morning routine. "Moving Day" is a solo performed by Kneller about leaving a secure space and moving on to something larger and less familiar. The set for this piece was built by Kneller's father, Don.

Bullock offers "Bach 1," a work that takes the ballet vocabulary and abstracts it into what he calls the "sisterhood / womanhood relationship between the soloist and the ensemble."

Between the broad range of styles and themes and the innovative program art, "Posing Questions" should offer something for everyone.

"Posing Questions" will be performed tonight at 8 in Space / Place Theatre in North Hall. Admission is $4.

'CRITIC' TEMPORARILY CANNED

'Duckman': another stab at prime-time animation

Tasha Robinson
The Daily Iowan

With "The Critic" already off the air after only half a dozen episodes, things aren't looking too hot for prime-time animation. While "The Simpsons" and "Beavis and Butt-head" remain cultural phenomena (and marketing godsend), the brief, miserable lives of recent attempts like "Capitol Critters," "Fish Police" and "Family Dog" prove that drawing an adult audience for a cartoon isn't child's play.

Fortunately, there are still some hardy souls out there convinced that the medium has possibilities. With the corpse of "The Critic" still warm (perhaps even still showing a pulse — ABC says the show is only on hiatus and will eventually be back despite weak ratings), "Simpsons" production company Klasky Csupo Inc. is already offering up the next sacrificial lamb.

"Duckman," which airs at 9:30 p.m. Saturdays on cable's USA Network, stars "Seinfeld" s Jason Alexander as the voice of a private detective duck short on temper, da Barry was hung over. Though the art is cleaned up and brightly colored for the TV version, a lot of the loose, spontaneous sense of Peck's style remains.

And so does a lot of his strangeness. The little details — Duckman's eyes come off with his glasses, his license plate reads PSSD-OFF — are worth watching for, but the show's entire offbeat style may attract those who found "The Critic" too visually staid.

With luck, "Duckman" will find an audience, prompting networks to take the plunge with other unconventional, unclimbed series. Otherwise, we can rely on a continuation of the usual cheap, bland, unfunny fare. "Martin," anyone?

luck and brains. Bitter, foul-mouthed and nicotine-addicted, Duckman stumbles through his angst-clogged life, taking on the occasional bad guy along the way.

"Duckman" certainly doesn't lack the sense of cynical, even nihilist cruelty that has helped make shows like "Simpsons" and "Beavis and Butt-head" such hits with college students sick of pat, inane sitcoms. Take the main character's family life — he lives with his dead wife's contemptuous sister, who charges him rent to live in the same house with his own kids. The latter are Ajax (voice by Dweezil Zappa), an overweight, under-brained surfer type, and Charles and Mambo, a two-headed genius whose main household chore is to keep Grandmama, a comatose, flatulent couch potato, vacuumed. For the most part, none of them seem aware Duckman's alive.

But the series makes its main anti-kiddie statement with Fluffy and Uranus, a pair of obscenely cutesy huge-eyed teddy bears who work in Duckman's office — and who routinely get shredded, burned or blown up as a result of circumstance or their boss's ire. The gruesome extremes of sweetness and violence are one strong clue that this series is intended for those who like their comedy weird and wicked.

The art is another clue. "Duckman" s style comes directly from artist Everett Peck's comic-book version of the series, which is available through Dark Horse Comics. Peck's comic style is a bizarrely distorted, claustrophobic scribbling that looks like "Ernie Pook's Comeek" drawn while Lyn-

'Heart' shocks with energetic honesty

Audiences should prepare to be bayoneted in the gut by Naomi Wallace's "In the Heart of America," which opened its second run at the UI Theatre Building last week. This is a play of startling emotional power that both shocks and entertains, performed with tremendous visceral energy by its cast. Don't shy away from it for any reason, be it the sexual content or the bad language — go see it soon, before it hits Broadway where it belongs.

"America" asks us, the audience, to examine who we are as Americans in a very direct way; it wonders aloud if spreading our vision of "democracy" and "liberation" through our military excursions abroad has been worth the cost to the countries our soldiers have ravaged and died in.

The play also assumes that everything the public was told about U.S. actions in Kuwait and Iraq was wrong — that civilian death numbers were always underestimated, incidents of torture and mass burials covered up, dubious casualties attributed to "friendly fire."

Wallace used vast amounts of research on recent wars in writing the script, and it shows. Characters bark out weapon specifications and bomb tonnage figures as if reciting verse, and there's a consistent thread of realism pervading the scenes as if the actors are re-enacting actual historic events.

So, on one level, this play is a perceptive, highly relevant war story. Like Oliver Stone's "Platoon," it introduces us to characters we immediately identify with, then relocates them at the gates of hell — in this case, the burning desert dunes of Saudi Arabia in the early months of 1991.

But more importantly, "America" is an honest, sensitive portrayal of a love borne between two men in an impossible situation. This love story is undoubtedly one of the most believable and gut-wrenching to be seen on the American stage in recent years. It's no surprise that Tony Kushner, writer of the scathing AIDS drama "Angels in America," has shown interest in taking this play to a larger audience.

"America" centers on Remzi Salameh and Craver Perry (played with great feeling by Samir Saboura and Christian Cartano, respectively), two soldiers who develop a strong friendship and love for one another in the midst of the gulf war. Adding to the obvious difficulties such a relationship in such a situation presents, there's an extra racially-oriented edge to their relations, as it is revealed that Salameh is a Palestinian-American and Perry is "Kentucky white trash."

We learn about the relationship between Salameh and Perry primarily through a series of flashbacks that bounce back and forth between Saudi Arabia and post-war Kentucky, where Perry is being questioned by Salameh's sister, Valentina (Kim Benesh). Valentina is searching for Remzi, who disappeared after the end of the war, and she knows Perry can tell her more than the U.S. military will.

However, most of the play's themes concerning the American military's nebulous ventures abroad come in the form of two other characters, Lue Ming (Martina Paris) and Boxler (Brant Peitersen). Lue Ming is a victim of Vietnam's My Lai Massacre — a representation of the many innocent civilian victims of America's wars — who spends the play searching for Boxler, an embodiment of the ethnocentric, robotic killing-machine that the U.S. military can be.

Most of the scenes involving these two have an abstract feel to them — it's tough to say whether they are really interacting with Valentina, Craver and Remzi or just defining what they're feeling and experiencing. But Petersen and Paris turn in two great, sometimes hilarious, performances — like all the other actors in the play, they've obviously sunk their teeth into Wallace's script and completely understand their characters and motives.

It is perhaps a testament to the power of these performances, as well, that "America" has no props or intricate set pieces — just a "dune" that slopes upward toward the back of the stage. The lighting scheme, designed by Kelly Huggert, is the only real "theatrical" element involved in the play and it's brilliant, to say the least, staying shaded and atmospheric for intimate scenes and shining blindingly during the desert scenes.

Leviathan kudos go to the cast, writer and director (UI graduate directing student Pauline Tyler) for their accomplishments with this play — it's genuinely compelling, thought-provoking and recommendable. We'll be hearing a lot about it in the months and years to come for sure.

"In The Heart Of America" concludes its run tonight and Friday at 8 in Theatre A of the Theatre Building.
