7 linked to assassination in Mexico

John Rice
Associated Press

MEXICO CITY — At least seven people were involved in the assassination of the man who was likely to become Mexico's next president, a special prosecutor said Monday.

The suspects include the head of local security for presidential candidate Luis Donaldo Colosio at the March 23 rally where he was slain, as well as three men hired to guard him. The prosecutor, former supreme court Justice Miguel Montes Garcia, said still others may be involved.

Montes did not discuss a possible motive, nor directly address the issue of a broader conspiracy that many Mexicans believe existed.

But the announcement dramatically widens the number of suspects in Mexico's most serious political assassination since 1928. Colosio, as the candidate of the long-incumbent Institutional Revolutionary Party, or PRI, was seen as a shoo-in for the Aug. 21 election.

Initially, the government insisted that Mario Aburto Martinez, the confessed gunman, acted alone. Officials later said several people might have been involved, while discounting a wider conspiracy.

Montes said Monday that Aburto, 23, is still the man accused of firing the shots that killed Colosio. But he said four members of the security detail hired for the day were in custody, and two others are being sought.

Aburto told police he went to the rally alone but also said he belonged to an unspecified political group that has thousands of members.

"Understand me, I can't have confidence in anybody, not even those who were with me," he was quoted as saying in a police interrogation published by the San Diego Union-

RUMORS UNTRUE

Business school working on defects

Chris Pothoven
The Daily Iowan

The UI College of Business Administration is still accredited and will almost certainly be re-accredited despite rumors to the contrary, a college administrator said Monday.

Sharon Scheib, director of communications and external relations for the college, said the rumors began after the business college received the report from the American Assembly of College Schools of Business, which accredits the UI.

In its report, the on-site review team noted certain weaknesses in the college. One is the lack of documentation about the college's processes to assure continuous improvements in its programs and reviews. Another is that the business college's mission statement is "relatively generic" and may not adequately state its agreement with the UI's mission as a whole.

If the AACSB's Reaccreditation Committee agrees with the review team's report, there is a chance the UI would have to take another 18 to 24 months to provide full documentation and undergo a return visit by the review team before receiving reaccreditation, Scheib said.

If that should happen, the UI would still be operating under its current accreditation, she added.

"There is no danger of us losing our accreditation and there never has been," she said. "The worst thing that could happen is that they could continue the accrediting process while we line up the documents."

The college, which has been accredited since the 1920s, wants to make sure students, faculty and others are aware of what is happening, Scheib said.

Trial hearing set for Rojas-Cardona

A trial hearing has been set for former UI Student Senate President Juan Jose "Pepe" Rojas-Cardona after he allegedly violated his probation.

The hearing, set for April 28 at 8:30 a.m. at the Johnson County Courthouse, is in response to a November 1992 conviction in which Rojas-Cardona, 26, 19 Lakeview Circle N.E., was found guilty of second-degree theft. He was sentenced to five years in prison, but the sentencing was suspended and he was placed on probation for two years.

The county is now trying to revoke the suspension and reinstate the five-year prison sentence.

The probation violations occurred when Rojas-Cardona was arrested Feb. 11 with 17 pounds of marijuana valued at $13,600 in New Mexico, the report of violation stated.

Roger Maier, a public affairs specialist with the U.S. Customs Service in El Paso, Texas, said Rojas-Cardona was apprehended by the U.S. border patrol while driving north on U.S. Highway 54, which goes from Alamogordo, N.M., to El Paso, Texas.

After searching Rojas-Cardona's car with a drug dog, the border patrol discovered 10 packages of marijuana hidden throughout the vehicle.

MINORITY BLAME FOR SEGREGATION DEBUNKED

Study: White students less likely to mix racially

Associated Press

ANN ARBOR, Mich. — Minority college students are more likely to eat, study and go out with people outside their race than white students are, a study says.

The researchers who conducted the study say it debunks the idea that minorities socialize only among themselves. In fact, the researchers say, the study shows that white students are most likely to stick together.

"The current concern about whether minority students are promoting and practicing self-segregation is misplaced," said Sylvia Hurtado, an assistant professor of education at the University of Michigan. "In fact, students of color are crossing ethnic-racial lines the most, while white students seem to be segregating themselves."

Hurtado and her fellow researchers, Eric Dey of the University of Michigan and Jesus Trevino of Arizona State University, are to present their findings today at an educational research conference in New Orleans.

The researchers said they wanted to find out if ethnic and racial organizations, minority-theme residence halls and minority cultural centers were contributing to segregation on college campuses.

In 1987, they surveyed 209,000 college freshmen. See RACE STUDY, Page 8A

Drop deadline passes with flurry of activity

Dan Kelly
The Daily Iowan

The lazy and the luckless flocked to the Registration Center in Calvin Hall Monday to drop classes at the last possible moment.

"I like to procrastinate," UI junior Blake Southerlane said. "I'm dropping Sociology because I was flunking it. I basically haven't attended a class since the first week, and I could do with a few less hours anyway."

This is not a new experience for Southerlane.

"I dropped an engineering class at the same time last semester, and I'll probably be here again next semester," he said. "A couple of my friends do this too."

UI junior Chris Mahoney was more philosophical about his behavior.

"You are trying to put off the fact that you actually have to drop a class," Mahoney said. "However, you soon find out how really bad the class makes your grade point look, and it begins to take priority over your semester hours."

For some, the weekend had proven to be a watershed in their academic careers.

"I wasn't going to drop, but I have a test on Wednesday, and I didn't have time over the weekend to review, so I thought, 'Hey, I'll only be made to repeat it anyway,'" UI sophomore Laura Heath said.

Freshman Crystal Hodgdon said she was genuinely sorry to be leaving her class on "World cities in suffering, death and faith."

"It's a really good class, actually," she said, "but I have a lot of family priorities at the moment — and that's true."

Other excuses were based less on priorities and more on a lack of studying.

"I've decided to drop my class on the last day for convenience, I guess," UI sophomore Jeremy Barness said. "I fell behind and I didn't feel like trying to catch up. I mean, I was studying Biblical and Classical Literature and we had to read 12 books!"

Barness has dropped classes on "numerous other occasions" and said he will probably do it again.

Freshman Megan Hutt was less stoic about having to drop her Child Development class.

'I HAVE BEEN A LIBERAL'

Grandy visits I.C. school in campaign

William Pepper
The Daily Iowan

Reducing the tax burden on Iowans and finding ways to keep young people in the state were the main issues stressed by Iowa Congressman and Republican gubernatorial candidate Fred Grandy Monday in a speech before 500 City High School students.

Grandy responded to recent criticism for being registered as a Democrat until he returned to his hometown of Sioux City in 1985 to run for Congress.

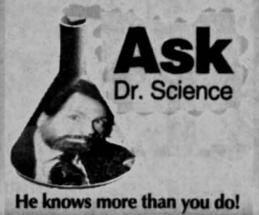

"At points in my life I have been a Democrat and, as God is my witness, a liberal," Grandy said. "I want you to decide whether or not that is important."

Grandy said he switched to the Republican Party because it supports several values he believes in. Specifically, Grandy referred to the Students cry out for yodeling contest

Ask
Dr. Science

He knows more than you do!

Dear Dr. Science:
When the wind blows hard, the water in my toilet bowl rocks back and forth. Why is this?
Larry Mahek; Durango, Colo.

You're experiencing Rocky Mountain Septic Movement Phenomenon, a highly unusual result of wrinkles in the normally uniform gravitational field that blankets our planet. Some theorize that the immense mass of the Rockies cause perturbations in the time-space continuum. Others suggest that the brains of those who live in higher elevations suffer from a chronic lack of oxygen. Whatever the cause, don't freak out, go with the flow!

Dear Dr. Science:
Why can't elephants jump?
Bob Fehnbach; Sterling Heights, Mich.

They can and do, but their jumps are so small you can't see them. If you were unfortunately small enough to find your way under an elephant's foot while he took those very small jumps, you'd still be squashed flat. Slow-motion macrophotography of an elephant at rest shows the immense pachyderm spends over 50 percent of its time airborne. Mice beware!

Dear Dr. Science:
Why do firemen always stand on the fire trucks on their way to a fire?
Gary Huckabone; Whiteford, Mont.

They're too darn excited to sit down. Most firemen have the emotional maturity of 10-year-olds, so they love noise for noise's sake, the color, the blur of cars and buildings as they rush by, the blare of the siren as the big truck storms through intersections. When they hang around the station, most firemen occupy themselves by playing marbles, trading baseball cards or giving each other Dutch rubs. Most firemen carry toads in their pockets as well as jackknives and wads of already chewed gum.

Dear Dr. Science:
Could you please do an alternative emergency broadcast message. For years now I've been hearing the same old ordinary one and I'm sick of it.
Kent Erlandson; Minneapolis, Minn.

OK, here goes. "This city has just been chosen to participate in a natural disaster. There is nothing you can do about it, so you might as well stay put and wait for me to give you instructions. There is only the sound of my voice. The screaming you hear upstairs is just the happy play of some children — maybe your own; it doesn't matter, they're OK. You're OK. I'm OK, or at least not terribly disturbed, but something is wrong somewhere, and until we get to the bottom of it, listen to this arrangement of 'Ebb Tide' which will play continually until we find out what's wrong." How's that?

"Yodolodoleheho!" The familiar sound of a yodel, known far and wide as a mountain cry, may also be heard echoing through the streets of Iowa City if three ambitious local yodelers take their voices to phones and enter Carefree's Yodeling Contest.

UI freshman Christian Heinisch said for him yodeling is a personal thing.

"It reveals my innermost being; it is most definitely private," he said.

Heading into the competition, Heinisch said he was confident.

"It is very competitive, but I think I have an outside chance of winning," he said. "The confidence is flowing."

Yodelers like Heinisch throughout the country are bombarding 1-800-94ALPINE with yodels ranging from "crazy to incredible," Lisa Morgan of Yecies Associates Inc. said.

"It is really a lot of fun and a little wild," she said. More than 5,000 calls have come in to the yodeling hot line. But what would make someone want to yodel into the phone?

The chance for a weeklong trip to the Swiss Alps in Switzerland — home of the world's most notorious yodelers.

"I always thought it was an interesting art. It is about nature — that is the only thing yodeling really fits. You can't yodel about cars; it doesn't work."

Chad Collingwood, UI sophomore

The contest is part of a promotion for Alpine Mint, a new flavor of Carefree Sugarless Gum.

Flonpina Miller, assistant manager of communication for the Life-savers division of Nabisco Foods Group, said this is the first time they have had such a contest.

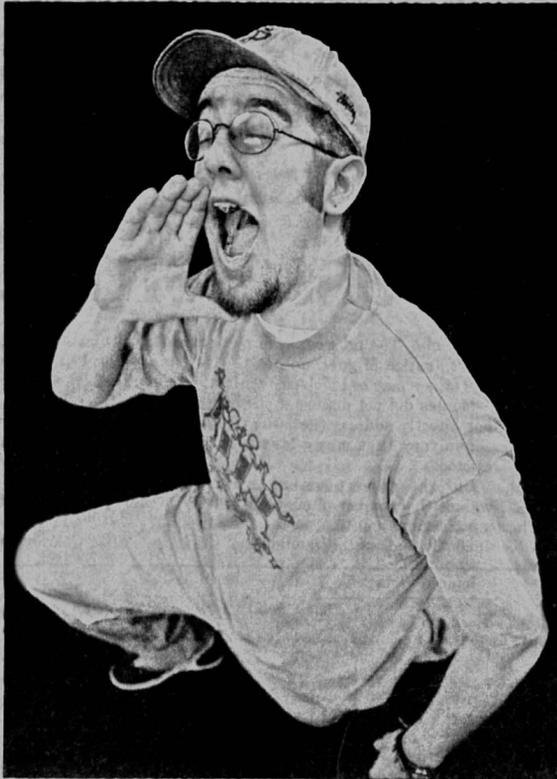

"This is the first time we've done it; it is the first new flavor since the late '80s," she said.

Miller said the yodels have been coming. Reluctantly sometimes, but they are coming. Some have been impressive.

"They have been outstanding in variety of yodels," she said. "We have heard Billy Ray Cyrus-type yodels to Elvis to rap and, of course, the traditional yodels."

At the end of last week, more than 4,000 yodels had been entered.

Judging the yodels are five individual judges with considerable fame. Among them is P. Hinnen, the Guinness Book of World

UI freshman Luke Azinger demonstrates his self-titled "billy-goat thing" from "The Sound of Music." Carefree's Yodeling Contest runs through the end of April.

Records record holder for the most rapidly recorded yodel.

What exactly will an award-winning yodel have?

"We'd love to see the yodel be original, creative, imaginative and authentic," Miller said. "We want it to be fun — that's the important thing. It can use any musical format. Have fun with it and don't feel confined to the Switzerland-type yodel."

Judge Josh Sarubin, director of arts and repertoire for Columbia Records, said he will be looking for the bizarre.

"I want somebody to go off the deep end," he said. "It should be a lot of insanity."

UI sophomore Chad Collingwood said yodeling is an art.

"I always thought it was an interesting art. It is about nature — that is the only thing yodeling really fits. You can't yodel about cars; it doesn't work," he said.

Collingwood felt yodeling was an individual gesture.

"It is more of an individual thing. I do it to express my feelings — love, hate, death, fear and anger," he said. "It is more of a private thing." Privacy seems to be a trend for local yodelers — and the shower ranks first for practice.

"It is something to do when I am in the shower and no one is around," Collingwood said.

UI freshman Luke Azinger agreed that the shower is the next best place to a mountain.

"I yodel on occasion, sometimes when I am in the shower, something from 'The Sound of Music,'" he said. "My Swedish roots have kind of been in my blood."

And sometimes those roots get the better of his brain.

"I like to yodel hellos to my friends across the fjords and on various mountaintops," he said. "Sometimes love calls to some sweet maiden washing her clothes on the hill."

"It is truly a form of love — the next best thing to emotion is a good yodel," he said.

The contest ends April 30 and judging will be in May, a time Sarubin is looking forward to.

"The idea of hearing strange people yodeling doesn't sound too bad," he said.

COMPUTER CRIME

High-tech pedophiles luring children by e-mail

Ken Guggenheim
Associated Press

BOSTON — The pedophiles' techniques aren't new: befriend some lonely children, gain their trust, lure them into sex.

But the setting is changing. Now, instead of hanging out in video arcades, pedophiles are increasingly staring into computer screens, using electronic mail and computer bulletin boards to meet children, authorities say.

"Pedophiles are like anyone else. They're becoming more high tech and using it to their advantage," said Special Agent Don Huycke of the U.S. Customs Service, which investigates international child pornography cases.

"This whole information superhighway is wonderful, but it's loaded with dangers," said Alfred Olsen, police chief of Warwick Township, Penn., a national specialist in computer crime.

Last week, John Rex, 23, of Chelmsford, Mass., was indicted on charges he used a computer bulletin board to find children for sex. He is accused of raping two youths he met by exchanging messages through the bulletin board and of trying to recruit two teen-agers to kidnap young boys for him.

In Fresno, Calif., last year, Mark Forston was convicted of sodomizing a 16-year-old boy he had lured to his home after the two met on a computer network.

William Steen, a 44-year-old computer expert, pleaded no contest last year to felony charges stemming from sending pornographic computer files to two 14-year-olds in Sacramento, Calif.

No one yet keeps statistics on cases involving computer searches for child sexual assault victims. Authorities say the problem isn't rampant, but it's likely to get worse.

"As computers become less expensive, more sophisticated and easier to operate, the potential for abuse increases," said Special Agent Ken Lanning of the FBI Behavioral Sciences Unit in Quantico, Va.

Electronic mail networks, which allow computer users from around the world to instantly exchange messages and sometimes send pictures, are "made to order" for pedophiles, said Ruben Rodriguez, senior analyst at the National Center for Missing and Exploited Children in Arlington, Va.

E-mail offers instant access to countless children, for many of whom the computer is a substitute for working parents or nonexistent friends.

Police in Gardner, Mass., say a 15-year-old boy ran away to Houston last August to live with an 18-year-old who had befriended him through computer bulletin board conversations. The FBI found the boy last month, and he has returned home.

E-mail also allows pedophiles to assume different identities in their computer exchanges with children — even pretending to be children themselves.

Typically, a pedophile begins communicating with a child on an electronic bulletin board where many people can simultaneously exchange messages. Then he moves on to exchange private, direct messages with the child.

"He breaks the inhibitions down and eventually suggests to the kid, 'Instead of going home and playing with the computer, why don't you see me sometime?'" Huycke said.

Not all pedophiles arrange meetings. Some find gratification from exchanging sexually explicit messages or, if the technology is available, exchanging pornographic pictures, which can be illegal if child pornography is involved or if minors receive the material.

In the last two years, SEARCH, a Sacramento, Calif.-based consortium that teaches police how to use technology in their investigations, has helped police departments investigate five cases of pedophiles contacting children through computers and about 30 cases involving the transmission of child pornography through e-mail.

Local man accused of stalking ex-partner

Liza Roche
The Daily Iowan

After several alleged incidents of harassment against a woman he dated, an Iowa City man was charged Sunday night with stalking, second-degree burglary, interference with official acts and obstruction of emergency communication.

Michael P. Howard, 39, 2103 E. Court St., allegedly forced his way into Becky Kloos' home at 2713 Wayne St. after she said he couldn't enter. Police said he entered with the intent to commit a theft or assault.

He remains at the Johnson County Jail with bond set at $5,000.

According to court records, upon Howard's entrance, Kloos ran to the telephone to dial 911. Howard took the phone and pulled the cord out of the wall. He chased her out of the building and she phoned police from a neighbor's house. He then returned to Kloos' home and stole her videocassette recorder, which a neighbor witnessed.

"It is apparently an ongoing problem," Iowa City police Capt. Donald Strand said.

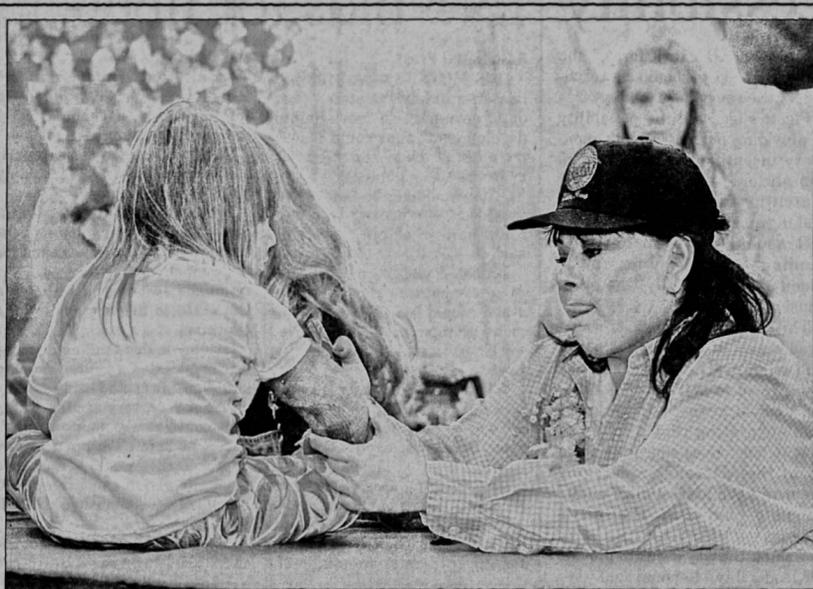

Kloos complained of repeated phone calls and unwanted contacts with Howard, Strand said. She told police that Howard has snooped around her home, followed her to work and vandalized her property.

Howard was charged with interference with official acts Sunday night after being taken to the jail. There he allegedly struggled with officers and had to be held in a corner.

This is the third time since January that Howard has been charged with a domestic disturbance-related crime.

On Jan. 13, he was charged with operating while intoxicated after police received a domestic dispute complaint. Upon arrival, police were told that Howard had left and was driving drunk.

On Feb. 19, Howard was charged with third-degree criminal mischief after allegedly causing $680 in damages to a car that belonged to a friend of Kloos.

Variety of programs slated by RVAP for Sexual Assault Awareness Month

Molly Spann
The Daily Iowan

A mock trial of an acquaintance rape and a "Body Awareness Through Yoga" workshop are just two programs planned by the Rape Victim Advocacy Program to educate women and men about sexual assault this month.

April has been designated Sexual Assault Awareness Month by the National Coalition Against Sexual Assault, and RVAP is participating by sponsoring a variety of events to raise awareness of sexual assault at the UI.

"We've been trying to do more and more education," said Ashley Sovern, RVAP assistant director. "But most of what we do is on a request basis. We now want to give everyone a chance to come and explore the issues more in depth."

On April 19, a rape and racism program will explore and define the connections between sexual violence and racism, Sovern said.

"This is a special interest of ours at RVAP because it doesn't get addressed very often," Sovern said. "It has not been explored very much as to where the connections between racism and sexual violence are."

An April 11 mock trial, titled "Her Word Against His: A Trial Scenario," will give the audience a chance to see how an acquaintance

"The whole key to changing our society so we can put an end to sexual violence is education."

Christie Munson, RVAP director rape trial works, Sovern said.

"This is for people to whom the legal system is a mystery," she said. "This gives them a chance to explore it."

RVAP Director Christie Munson said the events are crucial to raising awareness of sexual assault.

"The whole key to changing our society so we can put an end to sexual violence is education," she said. "RVAP puts a lot of effort forth for services to survivors, but education is important, too, because it provides the opportunity for positive change."

Munson said she hopes people will take advantage of the activities.

"I hope people will attend events they're interested in and learn things they've thought about but want to learn more about," she said. "We're encouraging the exchange of ideas as a conduit for social change. We want people to come and talk and listen."

Sovern said the events may help individuals work against sexual assault.

"I hope people show support for these issues that really do affect all of us," Sovern said. "It might give a little bit of empowerment to people to make a change in society or inner-personally."

Sovern said most programs throughout the month are open to both men and women, except for the April 23 yoga session, which is for women only. An April 5 workshop titled "Men Get Raped, Too" and an April 12 workshop titled "About Date Rape" will be directed toward men.

Most events this month will take place on the UI campus, and many are being held in the Union.

CONSTRUCTION BEGINS IN JUNE

Highway 6 project to add safety, beauty

Julie Anderson
The Daily Iowan

A $2.7 million construction project designed to increase the safety and aesthetics of West Highway 6 in Coralville is scheduled to begin this summer.

The Coralville strip has the second-highest accident rate in the state, according to Coralville City Manager Kelly Hayworth, but he said new renovations should help to reduce that figure.

"With this project we're hoping to alleviate a lot of the problems we have down there. A turning lane should help a lot," Hayworth said. "But we're also going to do a lot of landscaping with trees and light poles to make it look better."

Phase one of the two-part project involves widening Hawkins Drive to First Avenue to include a turning lane, curbs, gutters and a storm drainage sewer, Hayworth said.

Renovations will begin no later than June 6 and should, weather permitting, be finished by mid-September, Hayworth said.

The construction may ease the traffic problems in Coralville, but not all the businesses on the strip are anxious for the obstacles blocking potential customers.

"We're very concerned about our business," said Shakey's Pizza & Buffet Manager Jeff Fairholm. "We anticipate some loss in revenue, but we also know it will be beneficial in the long run."

Fairholm said the owners of Shakey's are planning to take advantage of the construction time to remodel the restaurant.

"It's something we've been thinking about for a long time, and this seems like a good time to do it," he said.

It will be wonderful, Fairholm said, when the renovations are completed and getting to work isn't such a pain.

"Every day when I pull into work, my eyes are glued to the rearview mirror, wondering if I'm going to get rear ended," he said.

Dick Querrey, owner of The Wig and Pen Ltd. restaurant, doesn't think his business will suffer and sees the project as purely positive.

"This is going to be great for both pedestrians and drivers," he said. "The turning lane will make things easier, and it'll look more like a boulevard."

Expansion of the project to include landscaping was possible in part because of a $100,000 grant to Coralville for trees, Hayworth said. The federal government is providing 90 percent of the funding for the highway portion of the project as part of the highway-safety program. The city of Coralville will have a $300,000 bill. Iowa City is paying $98,000.

Construction on phase two of the project, from First Avenue to the Clear Creek Bridge, will begin next summer.

STATE INVESTIGATOR TESTIFIES

Evidence of soiled T-shirt proves inconclusive in trial

Associated Press

CEDAR RAPIDS — A state investigator testified Monday that blood found on a T-shirt that Rick Forsyth was wearing did not reveal much about who killed six people in a Norwalk home.

Paul Bush, an investigator for the state Division of Criminal Investigation, testified as Forsyth's first-degree murder trial resumed after a three-day break over the Easter holiday.

Rick Forsyth is charged with six counts of first-degree murder in the deaths of his estranged wife Jolene, their three children — Brian, 18; Nikki, 17; and Jessica, 11 — and Helen and Martina Napodano, ages 7 and 9, respectively, who were visiting from Winfield, Ill.

Forsyth had been shot in the head and right arm and was lying on the floor in his underwear and T-shirt, investigators said. A .22-caliber pistol was on the bed with the bodies.

Bush said the T-shirt was covered with a mixture of blood that did not tell investigators much about who killed Jolene and the children. Bush also said tests on a pair of bloody gloves showed that they were stained with Martina Napodano's blood but did not indicate who killed her.

TASK FORCE CONSIDERED

Council works for accessibility

William Pepper
The Daily Iowan

City Council members and members of an advocacy group for people with disabilities met Monday night to discuss ideas for getting Iowa City businesses to comply with the Americans With Disabilities Act.

Council members Bruno Pigott, Jim Throgmorton and Ernie Lehman met with a dozen members of Independent Living Inc., a group of individuals with disabilities. Everyone at the meeting agreed that local businesses need to be educated about and helped to comply with the terms of the ADA.

Kevin Burt, ADA coordinator for Independent Living, said he spends a lot of time talking with business people about how they can better comply with the ADA.

He said he conducts many "accessibility audits" in which he visits businesses, usually with a team of people including a blind person, a deaf person, a person in a manual wheelchair and one in an electric wheelchair. One other disabled person is also present to assess where a business is not meeting the standards of the ADA and suggests inexpensive ways they can make changes.

"We strongly advise that all these folks come together and work together," Burt said. "If you can't afford it, let us point out those things you can afford and fix it."

Marjorie Hayden Strait, who has a disabled daughter, suggested the Chamber of Commerce set up an ADA task force and work with businesses to find the most cost-effective ways to put in automatic door openers, ramps and other equipment.

"I personally believe the Chamber of Commerce must quickly set up its own ADA task force," she said. "Somebody should be teaching a little savvy in spending."

Pigott suggested the possibility of providing businesses with monetary incentives to work toward compliance, such as providing matching funds or awards for making an effort to comply.

"I wouldn't be against the city funding some money to provide incentives to comply," he said. "Businesses love incentives."

The Council members encouraged disabled people to join city and chamber task forces. They also agreed to make a proposal to the Council at the next work session suggesting that a letter be sent to businesses educating them about the ADA and encouraging them to have accessibility audits done, perhaps at the city's expense.

"I think the city needs to provide the leadership," Lehman said.

INS bids for fiber-optic system

Associated Press

DES MOINES — A $103 million offer to buy the state's fiber-optic network is a "very helpful development" that could lead to more use of the system, Gov. Terry Branstad said Monday.

"That would be the best of both worlds if something like that could be worked out," Branstad said.

Branstad said there would have to be competitive bids before the system could be sold but said he's met with top officials of Iowa Network Services and likes what they have to say.

"I think it's a constructive effort to work with the state of Iowa in delivering services," Branstad said. "I'm excited about this."

Officials at INS, made up of 129 telephone companies, last week released an offer to buy the state's high-tech communications network. They offered $103 million for the transmission equipment and cables.

An alternative offer from the company was for $64 million for the network's "backbone" cable linking all 99 counties.

"If this is worked out appropriately, it could be tremendously helpful," Branstad said.

Branstad said his understanding of the offer — which he conceded he hadn't seen — called for the company to buy excess capacity on the system while allowing the state to use the system for education.

"It's my understanding it would be some kind of a joint-ownership situation," Branstad said.

"It's a very exciting thing that could really make a difference," he said. "I'm open to any approach that would continue to meet the vision that we spelled out when we established the network."

The state has borrowed more than $100 million to build the first phases of the network linking all 99 counties, and Branstad has asked lawmakers to complete the system by linking all schools and libraries. There are no cost estimates for doing that.

Branstad said the private phone network could open the system to businesses and residents and expand use.

The governor said he didn't have the authority to approve a sale unless the Legislature approves. But he said it presents one way to finish the system.

"I don't think I have the authority to make that kind of a decision," Branstad said. "I thought it was a very helpful development."

The governor said other communications companies would get a chance to bid for the system if a decision is made to sell.

"I think it's important that this be done in a very open process," he said.

PALESTINIANS STILL CAUTIOUS

Israeli army packs up to leave Gaza Strip

Nicolas Tatro
Associated Press

DEIR EL BALAH, Occupied Gaza Strip — Monday was moving day for the Israeli army at their Gaza Strip headquarters.

Soldiers took farewell photographs and loaded cabinets, desks, still-cold refrigerator onto a truck in the courtyard.

But even as they packed things up, soldiers had to dodge stones hurled at them by young Palestinians.

After 27 years of occupation, changes demanded by Palestinian leaders are finally starting to take shape not only here, but at other sites in the Gaza Strip and West Bank town of Jericho.

But for young militants in particular, dismantling bases is too little to be convincing. Soldiers still patrol the streets, and Palestinians remain wary of Israel's intentions, especially since the army is building new outposts to guard Jewish settlements that will not be uprooted.

So even though the moving was a visible sign of Israel's intent to leave, Palestinian youths with slingshots lobbed stones that bounced off the walls and olive drab jeeps. Troops gave chase, firing plastic bullets and tear gas, wounding two Arabs.

"We don't want peace. There will be stones every day," shouted the youths, many aligned with the Islamic fundamentalist Hamas group that opposes the Israel-PLO peacemaking.

Some soldiers appeared bewildered about why the Palestinians were throwing stones while they were pulling up stakes. "They don't want us to leave?" asked one.

Confusion prevailed in the streets as well. Soldiers kept loading the trailer during the melee. Women walked through Israeli lines carrying bundles of wash, and a Muslim fundamentalist dressed in white with a black beard bicycled unnoticed between the soldiers as they knelt to shoot at rioters 50 yards away. Arab cars tried to edge their way around army vehicles.

Maj. Udi, a military commander in Deir el Balah, said his unit was being moved to guard Gush Katif in Gaza, where more than 4,000 Jewish settlers live.

Udi said that even while the army was still in full control, his soldiers had orders not to patrol in the nearby Palestinian refugee camps of Bureij, Nuseirat and Mughazi unless absolutely necessary.

"We are not going in because we know the sensitivity of conducting patrols inside the camps," said Udi, identified only by his first name according to army regulations. "We are in a period of transition, and we are trying to avoid confrontation."

Israel and the PLO resumed accelerated talks in Cairo on Monday. Chief PLO negotiator Nabil Shaath said he expected agreement soon on the size and timetable of the Palestinian police force to patrol the autonomous areas.

But a trip expected Monday by senior officers to inspect Gaza facilities was postponed. About 300 police are due to be sent in the autonomy areas by Thursday for administrative purposes. Up to 50 deportees, including some top Arafat aides, are due to cross into the occupied areas from Jordan and Egypt starting today.

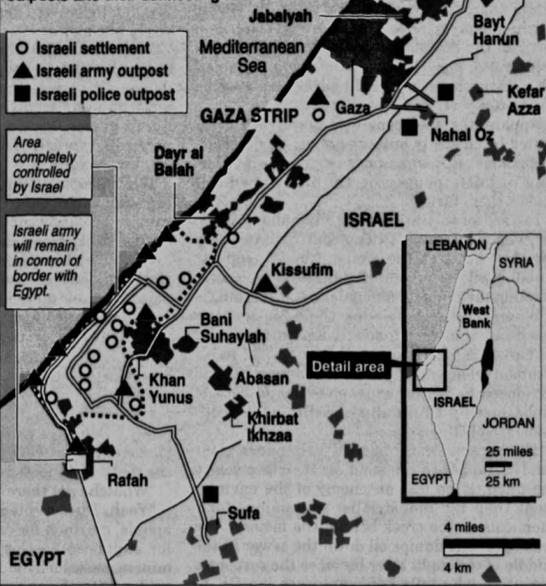

At a seaside army base in Gaza City, soldiers emptied mobile homes and moved them onto trucks. Equipment is either being trucked to Israel or to Gush Katif, where troops are to be posted once autonomy begins.

At the future Palestinian police headquarters, Arab workers planted flowers out front and began paving a parking lot.

Similar scenes took place in Jericho, where Palestinian youths rioted and hurled stones as flat-bed trucks pulled up outside police headquarters to remove equipment

Israeli areas defined

After 27 years of occupation, Israeli withdrawal from the greater part of the Gaza Strip is proceeding. While some aspects of the pullout remain unclear, Israeli presence will be restricted to 16 settlements, army and police outposts and their connecting roads.

Source: CIA AP/Wm. J. Castello, Eileen Glanton, Dawn Desilets

for the second day. Palestinians staged a large protest in the streets nearby, hurling stones at troops who detained three Arabs.

Saab Erekat, a PLO negotiator in Jericho, explained the continued protests as an expression of Palestinian doubt.

"While they're leaving buildings in Jericho, the army is building new positions outside of town. People are cautious about the steps Israelis are taking and want to see whether they are just moving from one place to another," Erekat told the Associated Press.

But Sufian Abu Zayde, the PLO spokesman in Gaza, said there was full cooperation between the army and the PLO on the redeployment and hand-over of buildings to the Palestinian police.

Abu Zayde said the troop movements were good for Palestinian morale.

"It is clear that in a few days, we will not see Israeli forces here. That shows that the agreement is starting to be implemented on the ground," he said.

TRAFFICKERS POISED TO CASH IN

Heroin use increase anticipated for U.S.

George Gedda
Associated Press

WASHINGTON — A government report warned Monday of a possible U.S. heroin epidemic in the 1990s and said traffickers from Colombia and elsewhere in Latin America are poised to cash in.

"In the past five years, there has been a steady increase in the flow and purity of heroin to the U.S., suggesting that the taste for the drug is growing," the State Department report said.

It said this was a logical consequence of more than a decade of cocaine abuse, since it is normal for a depressant drug such as heroin to succeed a stimulant such as cocaine.

The implications are serious, the report said, because heroin can hold its prey for decades while the staying power of cocaine is usually limited to five years.

Economics also are contributing to the revival of heroin.

"While at U.S. street prices, cocaine and heroin are competitive, at the wholesale level, heroin has a strong advantage," the report said.

"With the likelihood that heroin will be to the 1990s what cocaine was to the 1980s, Latin American trafficking organizations are poised to cash in on a heroin epidemic," the report said.

Colombia was cited as a country where cocaine traffickers are diversifying into opium and heroin. Incipient poppy cultivation also is under way in Peru and Ecuador.

It added that heroin brokers in Southeast and Southwest Asia collaborate with Nigerian drug enterprises to emulate the marketing success of the Medellín and Cali cocaine cartels.

On Friday, President Clinton added Nigeria to the list of countries he says are not cooperating in U.S. anti-drug efforts. The other countries, held over from last year, are Burma, Iran and Syria.

Countries on the list are prohibited from receiving U.S. backing in their requests for assistance from international lending institutions. There are other economic penalties as well.

Elaborating on the Nigerian role at a briefing Monday, Assistant Secretary of State Robert Gelbard said Nigeria has become a major source of trafficking around the world.

He said 35 to 40 percent of all heroin coming into the United States is brought by Nigerians.

The report pointed out that a major difficulty in controlling heroin at the source is that the greatest opium producers are countries where the U.S. government has limited political leverage or physical presence.

Burma was described as the world's largest opium producer. That country supplies perhaps 60 percent of the U.S. heroin market.

"With an estimated potential production in 1993 of 2,575 metric tons of opium gum, it alone could satisfy most of the world's heroin demand," the report said. Afghanistan, with an estimated 685 tons, was a distant second followed by Laos (180 tons) and Pakistan (140 tons).

U.N.-protected Gorazde comes under Serb fire

Susan Linnee
Associated Press

SARAJEVO, Bosnia-Herzegovina — The U.N. commander in Bosnia will make a personal inspection of the besieged Muslim enclave of Gorazde, where a new Serb offensive has underscored constraints on his overstretched peacekeeping force.

Heavy fighting flared Monday in Gorazde, a supposed U.N. "safe area" that has been the site of some of the Bosnian war's fiercest clashes and the United Nations' greatest frustrations.

Local officials have accused Lt. Gen. Sir Michael Rose, the U.N. commander, of trying to downplay the seriousness of the assault on Gorazde. The city's mayor, Ismet Briga, on Sunday invited him to visit "and witness the suffering of its citizens." He will visit Wednesday.

In developments elsewhere, the Red Cross said Monday it had put on hold plans to evacuate thousands of non-Serbs from a new wave of ethnic terror in northern Bosnia after failing to win safety guarantees from Bosnian Serb

The report could not be independently confirmed.

With only four military observers in Gorazde, the United Nations has appeared helpless as Bosnian Serbs shell the city of 65,000 people.

U.N. officials say they can do little to supplement their military contingent in the Muslim enclave, which has been under siege for most of the two-year war, because of Serb intransigence and a shortage of peacekeeping troops.

U.N. spokesman Maj. Rob Annink said Serbs had rejected U.N. plans to send more observers because of what they claimed was a "Muslim offensive." He added that it was "very clear" that Serbs, not the Muslim-led government, were on the offensive.

U.N. officials also say they have no way of verifying all claims about fighting and casualties around Gorazde because they have only four observers there who have chosen to stay together rather than split up in dangerous territory.

Serb commanders also rejected a request Monday to send a relief convoy to Gorazde, said Kris Janowski of the U.N. High Commissioner for Refugees.

By taking Gorazde, 35 miles southeast of Sarajevo, the Serbs could consolidate control over strategic supply routes linking their holdings in southern Bosnia.

Adding to the general frustration is Gorazde's status as one of Bosnia's six "safe areas" designated by the U.N. Security Council in May 1993.

WOMEN IN POLITICS

The apron syndrome

America has found the perfect scapegoat. She is a woman, her hair is straight and her mind is sharp. Her name is Hillary Rodham Clinton, she is the wife of the president and she doesn't know her place.

Yes, she was elected to be a wife, in part as a result of winning the chocolate-chip cookie baking contest against incumbent Barbara Bush. However, she stepped out of that role, tearing off the apron and burning the cookie recipes. Instead, she took on a business suit and — to the great dismay of American mass media and conservatives — cultivated eloquence in service of the Democratic health-care proposal.

Now she's under fire. She's a victim of the apron syndrome: the tendency for women to be valued only when wearing aprons. As soon as they take them off, they become vulnerable to charges of anything from murder to lesbianism to financial crime.

"Hillary is 'uppity' and the boss men don't put up with that for long. There is a particular passion to see her brought down, to stain her reputation, to pierce her proud independence," Jesse Jackson has pointed out.

Not that Hillary Rodham Clinton is perfect. She has probably made plenty of mistakes in her life as well as failed investments. Maybe she has also made successful investments. Whichever the case, the Whitewater farce seems strangely similar to the one that was played out 10 years ago, when the 1984 Democratic presidential candidate, Walter Mondale, chose to run with a woman, Geraldine Ferraro.

While the Republican candidate for vice president, George Bush, was depicted inspecting troops wearing a funny helmet, giving speeches with dubious syntax and consoling victims of assorted disasters, our Geraldine was shown in the kitchen or somewhere else in her cozy home.

When she protested this treatment by taking off the apron and talking politics, she was charged with "radical feminism" and "lesbianism."

And — surprise — because she didn't have any criminal record, her financial past was examined. Then her husband and his father's business transactions were exposed. The campaign reached its low when her own father, who had been dead since she was 8, also became subject to this type of scrutiny.

The beautifully engraving term "radical feminism" was recycled at the 1992 Republican National Convention, where several speakers accused Hillary Rodham Clinton of indulging in this cardinal sin.

Both women have asked for just one thing: respect. Considering the resistance and hostility they have met, it is no wonder that we're lagging dangerously behind the rest of the world in terms of gender equity in politics.

In order for our society to function optimally, we need to utilize all the human resources we have instead of celebrating less than half of the population: the men who are already in power. We need to fight the apron syndrome.

Examine the stereotypes about women in power. Sit down for a moment and imagine that you vote for a woman not because she is good-looking or an accomplished cookie baker, but because she is intelligent and competent.

LETTERS

Confronting stereotypes

To the Editor:

It is often difficult for a foreign student to come to this country unfamiliar with American culture and uninitiated in the professional relations among colleagues. When one is put into such a situation, it is very easy to misunderstand the intentions of others, thereby making many wrong assumptions about people's professional attitudes toward one's self and their willingness to help one become more comfortable working for an American institution.

I found myself in this very situation as an Italian Teaching Assistant in the French and Italian department. When I began to work here, I was quite ignorant of the department's expectations of me, since these were never made clear to me beforehand. Therefore, I was willing to learn from my colleagues, but most of the advice I received was not about how to teach but on how not to offend and how not to be rude. I soon realized that the perception my colleagues had of me was that of a vulgar Italian male who was insensitive and unprofessional. This stereotype effectively erased my personality and prevented me from having any kind of healthy relationship with my department.

The atmosphere became so difficult that before any kind of observation of my classes by my supervisor took place, I was informed by someone outside the department that my position was not going to be renewed next year, because it had already been determined that I was not a good TA. I then felt it necessary to contact the university's ombudsman, who suggested that I contact Affirmative Action. When my department found out from Affirmative Action that an investigation was to take place, I felt a wave of hostility from my colleagues.

In the midst of this hostile atmosphere, my supervisor decided to observe my class. I was not told until the day of the visit. I happened to be in the department office on my way to teach when I met my supervisor, who was distributing memos to the other TAs informing them of future visits to their classes. She then turned to me, handed me a copy of the memo and said that she was going to follow me and observe my class at that very moment. It was clearly an unfair treatment in order to make my performance appear inferior to that of the other TAs. It is hard enough to be a foreigner and confront people's stereotypes without having to deal with this kind of unprofessionalism.

Continuing to keep America beautiful

People who litter should be burned at the stake. Anyone who carelessly tosses a candy wrapper or a cigarette butt on the ground should be slapped in manacles and carted off to a gulag.

Stroll through the Pentacrest on any beautiful spring day and what do you see? The crocus flowers bloom along the sidewalk. And oh — how sweet — the smokers have done their part to help fertilize the crocus flowers with all their cigarette butts. How thoughtful of them. In about 500 years, those butts will surely make some dandy compost.

Apparently, the scene of a flower bed desecrated by cigarette butts is not an abomination to smokers. But when nonsmokers see a collection of butts peppering the flower beds, it makes them furious.

Instead of tolerating the rude habits of people who don't think twice about casually tossing their butts on the ground, the UI ought to respond with a punishment that fits the crime: stapling the offender's tongue to the sidewalk.

When I see people fling their McDonald's trash out the car window, I am outraged. I'd rather see a litterer dragged from his car like a common felon, charged in a kangaroo court and sentenced to death by means of a wild pack of blood-lusting Chihuahuas with sharp teeth and ear-splitting yelps.

The person who innocently abandons their candy wrapper to the wind, or their pop can to the ditch, is no less an enemy of the environment than the industrialist who pumps toxic chemicals in the creek behind the factory. The teen-ager who dumps oil down the sewer in the middle of the night later becomes the corporate executive who tells her employees it's OK to dump toxic waste in Ralston Creek. When the teen-ager makes excuses to pollute, the adult has an easier time finding excuses to do likewise. So what if a few babies are born without brains — business is business. Avoiding pollution cuts into profits, but we know it costs more to clean up the damage later.

I know I'm not alone in my disgust at persons who carelessly litter the world with their junk. On the street, on benches, in the ditch, you see signs of people who don't get it. I'll make it easy: Pick up your own crap! Unless you like to live in a garbage can, don't treat the world like one.

Perhaps I take it too personally. I think it shows how little people appreciate the marvelous ecosystem that is earth. The world's environment is interconnected. When you dump poison in the sewer drain, it doesn't magically vanish. The poison returns in our drinking water.

When people discard their trash in the ditch, or dump their paint stripper down the sink, I wonder how they can ignore where that junk is headed. The poison has a round-trip ticket.

I'm sure the majority of backyard garden warriors don't realize how they have brought poison to their dinner tables.

Two backyard warriors might have this chat while they're getting ready to spray their lawns with the season's assortment of pre-emergent pesticides, insecticides and herbicides.

"Hi Herb, I see you're getting your lawn ready," Bob says as his neighbor puts on goggles and gloves. Bob notices something new in the tongs Herb uses to carry the stuff.

"Whatcha got there?"

"Yeah, I use a rotenone-pyrethrum spray for aphids, diazinon for cabbage maggots, carbaryl for Japanese beetles, Malathion for the leaf miners, metaldehyde for slugs and for the red spider mites I use my own recipe of two parts dicolol to one part folpet. After the dust settles, there's not a single bug that's got wiggle left in 'em," Herb boasts. "Between these few sprays I expect a fine crop of veggies to feed the kiddies."

"Good way to save some dough," Bob says, "what with the water bills going up 150 percent after the damn EPA said we gotta build a new water-treatment plant."

"Sons a bitches!" Herb says. "Always foisting that clean water crap on us. Why can't they just leave us alone?"

"Damn right!"

Most people don't even consider how the poison they spray returns in the water. People expect detritus to just go away, but the earth is no bottomless pit. When Herb dumps his pesticides on his lawn, he should expect to pay for it through his water bill.

In America, pocketbook issues have raised our awareness of the toxic effects of pesticides. Most other nations outside of North America don't teach people to throw their trash in a central location.

In many Asian countries, especially ones on the continent, the citizens dump trash in rivers and lakes, out of windows into the streets, wherever it drops. Everywhere one looks, there are bits of paper and plastic; trash is everywhere. Prior to the early 1970s, the United States was also a pig sty until a famous ad campaign that featured a crying American Indian raised the public's consciousness of pollution and helped to keep America beautiful. Let's hope this new generation can learn to pitch in too.

Once started, the habit of littering is hard to break, especially in a country where everyone else does it.

Examining harsh realities of unionization

COGS / SEIU has been living in a dream world, refusing to deal with the cold, harsh realities of unionization. The reliance on emotional illusions by these graduate colleagues dismays me; isn't the point of graduate education to learn to base your arguments on facts? It is time for the dreaming to end and reality to be dealt with. There are five critical items that you need to know before you vote away your future on April 12.

1. The union claims that they will increase the number of Teaching Assistants and research assistants, increase stipends, obtain tuition remission and provide comprehensive health coverage immediately and simultaneously. The reality is that the money is not there. A pie analogy works here. How can you cut a pie so that both the number of pieces and the size of each piece increase? Answer: You can't and neither can the union. Evidence from Michigan, Wisconsin and other unionized schools shows that the number of pieces will decrease. Wisconsin has lost 637 TAs and Michigan 137. Some have stated that one cannot link these losses to a union. A brief case study may prove otherwise.

Using Wisconsin, where a union started negotiating for stipends in 1988, as an example and data from the Big Ten, a clear pattern emerges. In 1987-88, prior to the union negotiation, there were seven TAs per 100 undergraduates at Wisconsin, and 44 percent of graduate students held TA or research assistant appointments. In 1992-93 (post-union negotiation), the number of TAs per 100 undergraduates had dropped to 5.5, and only 37 percent of graduate students held TA or research assistant appointments. Between those years, the salaries of unionized TAs increased by 20 percent and those of nonunionized research assistants went up 36 percent. During this same time period, 637 graduate positions were lost.

The numbers show that unionization has had a dramatic negative effect on TAs at Wisconsin. While I am sure that we will see letters from union organizers about the wonders at Wisconsin, they cannot deny the facts. It should be noted that Michigan had similar numbers.

Combining all the evidence together leads to two alternatives, higher tuition and / or larger classes. Thus, either graduates or undergraduates will pay for COGS' dreams.

2. If the union wins, and you don't cancel your automatic membership, you will pay about $120 in dues per year. Meanwhile, other graduate students and the administration have been working for free to phase in over three years much of what the union now seems to promise. What is the union going to do with the $300,000 it's going to collect each year? When asked about this, COGS / SEIU tells you that you will get a grievance procedure for your money. Well, there is already a procedure and a committee. This committee even contains graduate students. Three hundred thousand dollars is a lot to spend for a grievance procedure.

3. The union claims great support among international students. Several weeks ago, an international student came to me and asked, "Are the union representatives allowed to bother me at home?" This was only the beginning of numerous complaints by international students about the union's organizing efforts. One person has even told me that the repeated harassment has frightened his wife. Since these complaints started coming in, I inquired with other international students about the union campaign. It seems that many international students thought they had to sign the union authorization cards. The union's strategy of singling out graduate students is just plain disgusting.

4. The union claims to be on the graduate students' side. Frankly, I agree with much of what they claim to see. Unfortunately, SEIU is simply using graduate students as a stepping stone for organizing the UI Hospitals and Clinics. SEIU, which has no other graduate assistant locals, would use our graduate student union and our dues to work on organizing the UIHC. If the union is truly interested in graduate students, SEIU should impose upon itself a seven-year moratorium on trying to organize the UIHC. They should announce this before the vote, so that SEIU can show its concern for graduate students and not the hospital. If SEIU doesn't, then you know what they are really interested in.

5. COGS has been in existence nearly a year. Yet, in all that time, the union has never even made clear exactly what it would ask for in a negotiation. Based on COGS' last article in The Daily Iowan, it would seem they they now support Dean Sims' plan. Given that graduate students and administrators are working on this plan for free, why do we need COGS? The only concrete thing that COGS / SEIU stands for is dues. It is time for COGS to answer the hard questions and stop trying to give us a warm, fuzzy feeling.

The union will probably tell you to ignore the above concerns. Instead of responding to the above objections, they will talk about union goals and gaining "dignity." If the union ever respond, now is the time. At the end of the day, they should tell you exactly what they will be asking for. Telling us about dreams of a brave new world won't be enough. If you are a graduate student and do not vote, it is a vote in favor of the union. If you are an undergraduate, hold onto your wallet.

Sheldon F. Oppenheim, a graduate student and member of the Graduate Student Senate from chemical and biochemical engineering, submitted this guest opinion for publication.

Stocks drop; Dow reaches six-month low

Rick Gladstone
Associated Press

NEW YORK — Stocks plummeted again Monday in violent spasms of selling that sent the Dow Jones industrial average down more than 40 points to a six-month low, renewed a decline that gripped the market last week.

Still, there were no signs of a much more cathartic drop in stocks as some investment professionals had feared during the three-day Easter weekend. Although the market bounced around in heavy trading, buyers emerged to exploit price drops.

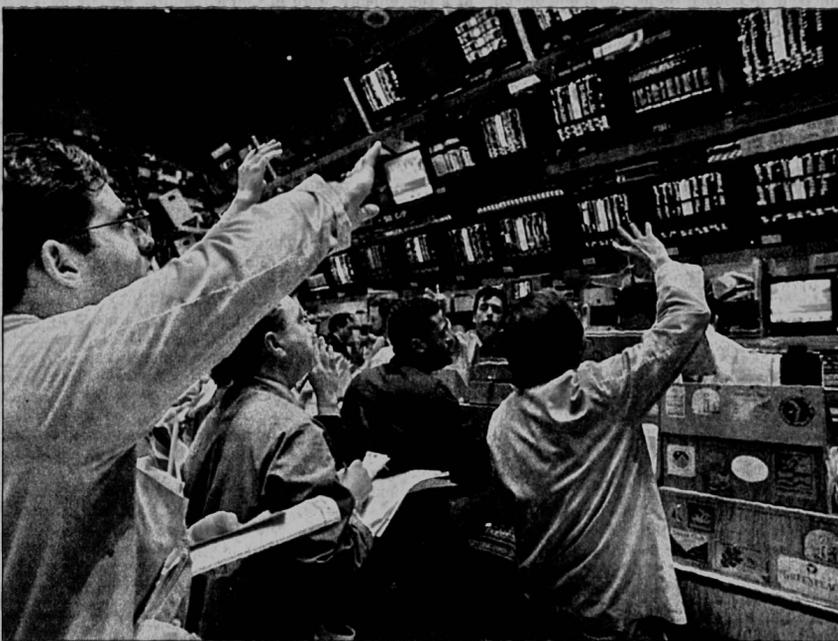

In addition, anecdotal evidence showed that millions of small investors — the underpinnings of the market's vitality over the past few years — haven't been goaded into selling. That was regarded as a healthy sign.

"We do not sense any great panic, especially on the stock side," said Raymond Worsack, chief economist at A.G. Edwards and Sons, a St. Louis-based network of brokerages that caters to individual investors. "We don't detect any great groundswell of anxiety."

At Fidelity Investments, the nation's leading purveyor of mutual funds, spokeswoman Jane Jamieson said phone volumes were heavy but there was no significant selling. Millions of individuals own stocks through the purchase of professionally managed funds.

"The outflows from our stock funds are quite small," Jamieson said. At some points during the day, she said, "there was more buying activity than selling."

Most traders attributed the stock market's behavior to heavy selling in the bond market, a powerful barometer of interest rate trends, where big investors have been dumping bonds in fears that rates will continue rising. Higher interest rates tend to lower the value of stocks and bonds.

Traders in the Merrill Lynch options area on the their transactions in the opening hour of trading floor of the American Stock Exchange complete Monday.

"As rates have gone up very significantly, the stock market has responded by going down," said Mary Farrell, an investment strategist at Merrill Lynch and Co., the Wall Street brokerage.

But by the end of the day, several big investment firms were recommending purchases of stocks and bonds, asserting they were underpriced.

"Over the next twelve months, rewards in investing in stocks and bonds outweigh the risks," said Rao Chalasani, chief investment strategist at Securities, a large money management firm in Chicago.

The Dow average of 30 premier U.S. stocks plummeted more than 60 points at the outset of trading, yo-yoed in negative territory and finished at 3,593.35, down 42.61 points from Thursday and the lowest point since Oct. 11.

The average is now off 4.5 percent from a week ago and 9.7 percent from its all-time high of 3,978.36 reached Jan. 31. Broader measurements of stock values also tumbled Monday and declining stocks outnumbered advancing stocks by a margin of 6-to-1.

A report from a national group of factory purchasing managers showing the economy grew in March for the seventh straight month had little effect on the market.

The decline in the stock and bond markets over the past few months has been widely blamed on the Federal Reserve's moves to raise short-term interest rates Feb. 4 and March 23, reversing a 5-year-old strategy of lowering rates to stimulate the economy.

The Fed has said higher rates are needed to thwart inflation, a step that was presumably meant to reassure investors concerned that faster economic growth would lead to higher inflation and erode the value of stocks and bonds.

SUSPECTS WERE BANNED FROM GROUNDS

Biosphere scientists charged with vandalism

Associated Press

ORACLE, Ariz. — Two members of the crew that spent two years inside Biosphere 2 were accused by project managers of breaking into the sealed environmental experiment, sabotaging equipment and letting in outside air.

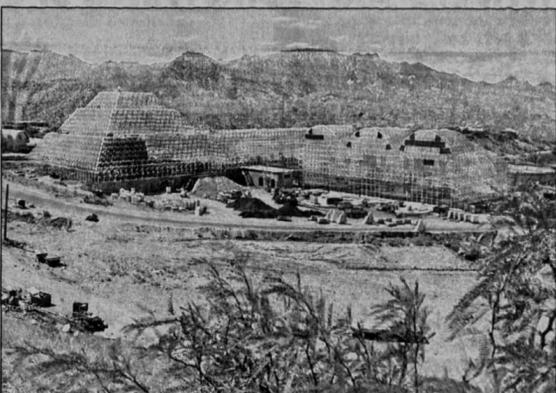

The Monday morning break-in came three days after a representative of Biosphere's main backer, Texas billionaire Ed Bass, seized control of the project and barred the pair from the grounds.

Pinal County Sheriff's deputies were seeking Abigail Alling and Mark Van Thillo for questioning, said sheriff's spokeswoman Belia Fessenden. Biosphere managers reported getting a 4 a.m. call from the two in which they claimed responsibility for the break-in, Fessenden said.

A crew of seven remained in the 3-acre domed world, which wasn't significantly damaged, said Biosphere spokesman Chris Helms. Reporters were barred from the complex in the desert 35 miles north of Tucson and paid public tours were suspended.

"Biosphere 2 is totally and completely operational," Helms said.

The project seeks to duplicate the Earth's environment as a laboratory and prototype space colony. It is designed to be self-sufficient and sealed off from the outside world. Air, water and waste are recycled. During her two-year stay in the dome, Alling, a marine biologist from New York, was best known for her scuba dives in the project's miniature ocean. Van Thillo, of Belgium, ran most of the life-support equipment.

Jack Corliss, the project's research director, said one airlock double door — which allows people to enter and leave without letting in outside air — and three single-door emergency exits were left open for about 15 minutes. The emergency doors are not locked and the airlock doors are not locked on the inside, Corliss said.

There also were five broken panes of glass on the "lungs," two huge rubberlike diaphragms that bulge in and out, equalizing air pressure within the dome as the artificial atmosphere expands and contracts with temperature variations, Corliss said.

Eight people were sealed into the $150 million dome on Sept. 26, 1991 for a much-publicized two-year stay. The project was clouded by disclosures that Biosphere operators concealed such negative news as installation of mechanical air-purifiers, injection of oxygen and importing equipment into what was supposed to be a self-contained world.

The project is called Biosphere 2 because it is supposed to provide a contained environment that duplicates that of the Earth or "Biosphere 1."

Friday, a federal judge in Fort Worth, Texas, named Bass associate Martin Bowen as receiver and issued an order barring four top managers from the project for alleged financial mismanagement.

The court order didn't name Alling and Van Thillo, but when Bowen arrived, he banned them from the grounds until he could interview them and decide their future with the project, Helms said.

Bass declined to comment on the break-in, said Terrell Lamb, his spokeswoman in Fort Worth.

Among those suspended by the court order were Margret Augustine, president and chief executive officer of Space Biospheres Ventures, and John Allen, a vice president and one of the project's original creators.

Aburto said he had intended only to wound Colosio in order to win news coverage for his views on a rebellion by southern Indians and other social ills, according to the transcript.

Aburto's attorney said he suggested he had made contacts with unspecified armed groups in Mexico. Police have also speculated that radical groups in Southern California, where Aburto lived for several years, might be involved.

Opinion polls have repeatedly indicated that Mexicans believe there was a conspiracy to kill Colosio. Many say they suspect members of the country's political establishment. Widely varying theories of who did it, and why, have run rampant.

Aburto's family members have said that Aburto met with at least two members of the security detail before the murder.

Montes did not describe charges against the men, but officials earlier said Aburto was accused of murder and a second suspect — Tranquilino Sanchez — was accused of being a co-conspirator.

Of the other suspects in custody: • Montes said Sanchez interfered with Gen. Domiro Garcia Reyes, one of the soldiers assigned to guard Colosio, "easing the access of Mario Aburto Martinez to a point close and alongside Colosio."

• Another guard, Vicente Mayoral Valenzuela, "opened a path toward the victim" for Aburto, Montes said in a statement he later read on television.

• Mayoral Valenzuela's son, Rodolfo Mayoral Esquer, shoved and interfered with another army security man, Col. Federico Antonio Reynaldos del Pozo, "managing to distract him and thereby diminish the security measures."

• Rodolfo Rivapalacio, who headed the local security detail, was accused of hiring the other three.

men from 390 schools across the country. Four years later, they sent a follow-up survey to 28,000 of those students; 6,107 responded.

The students were asked if they crossed racial lines when studying, dating and dining.

The study found:

• About three-quarters of Mexican Americans surveyed frequently studied or dined with someone from another race. That was followed by Asian-Americans (69 percent reported crossing racial lines to dine and 60 percent to study) and African-Americans (55 percent to dine, 49 percent to study).

• Fewer than one in four white students frequently dined with someone from a different ethnic group, and fewer than one in five frequently studied with someone from a different ethnic group.

• Asian Americans were most likely to date someone from another race (42 percent), followed by Mexican Americans (24 percent), blacks (13 percent) and whites (4 percent).

Some of the low numbers for white students could be attributed to the fact that whites are such a sizable majority on most campuses, Dey said.

But the unwillingness of white students to interact with other groups didn't change on campuses with more minority students, he said.

Larry Davis, author of the 1989 book "Race, Gender and Class," said he generally agreed with the study's findings.

Asians and Hispanics have been more successful at integrating socially than blacks because they're more easily accepted by whites, said Davis, an associate professor at Washington University in St. Louis.

"Blacks are probably doing some of it," he said, "but white America is less accepting of them in social situations."

DROP DAY

"I got my test back last Thursday and I was left with little choice, really," she said. "Now I'm supposed to take a summer course, which has left me pretty pissed."

Midterm results were a big factor in most students' decisions to drop.

"I held off until I got my grades, and then it became obvious that Skeletal Muscle Biology was not for me," UI junior Keith Vogt said. "It's a big hassle to drop a class and hopefully it won't happen again."

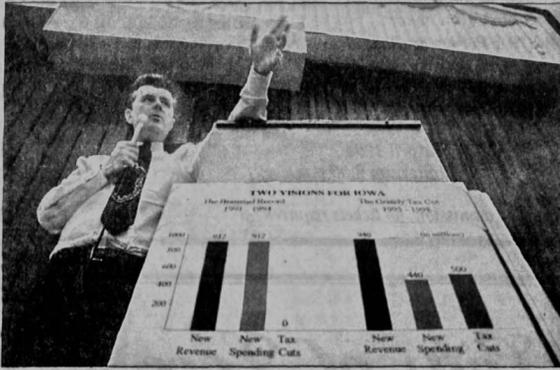

Many students had simply run out of time to raise their grades.

"I waited as long as I could to see if I could improve my grade," UI junior Barry Hren said, "but things didn't go too well."

Hren is another who is no stranger to the corridors of Calvin Hall.

"I drop one every semester, because it's nicer when you're not stuck with a W," he said. "I usually wait until the last day before I do it ... but then I'm like that with everything."

GRANDY

David Guttenfelder/The Daily Iowan

Rep. Fred Grandy, campaigning for governor of Iowa, fielded questions from City High School students Monday afternoon.

belief that individuals should be emphasized over government institutions, and government funding should be based on the value of what comes from that funding.

To improve the prosperity of the state, Grandy said young people need to be encouraged to stay in Iowa after graduation. He said Iowa is experiencing a "brain drain" from the 500,000 people who have left the state in the last 10 years.

"The reason I'm in this probably has more to do with you than your parents or grandparents," he said.

Grandy cited Legislative Fiscal Bureau statistics showing Iowa experienced a 12 percent increase in job growth between 1985 and 1993, one of the lowest in the region. Illinois had a growth of 16 percent, and both Missouri and South Dakota had a growth of 22 percent.

Grandy said to combat that low job growth taxes need to be lowered and much of government spending frozen. The move would reduce the burden on taxpayers because it will stimulate more consumer spending and investment in business, he said.

"If you want real growth, you have to give at least half of the tax money back to taxpayers," he said.

Still citing the Legislative Fiscal Bureau, Grandy said a $940 million increase in government revenue is anticipated over the next five years. He proposed spending $440 million of that increase on education, criminal justice and other human service programs. The other $500 million would be used to fund tax cuts.

Grandy said he would advocate a spending freeze on a number of programs at current levels, including the state administration budget, the Department of Economic Development and the Department of Transportation.

Aside from economic issues, Grandy fielded audience questions ranging from abortion and criminal justice.

On the abortion issue, Grandy said he is pro-life, provided something is done to address the problem of teen pregnancy and how the child will be cared for once it is born.

"It is nowhere near enough anymore to be pro-life," he said. "Those people who have no interest in a fetus after it becomes a newborn are kidding themselves."

Grandy also said he does not favor "boot camps" as a punishment for juvenile offenders because they create "disciplined, faster, better" criminals. He said instead that 11- and 12-year-old offenders should be put in Boys' Town-type facilities where peer pressure and education would be stressed. Older serious offenders would be subject to the same types of punishments as adults.

"Boot camps train you for the marines," he said. "If you're not going to the marines, why build a boot camp?"

Radio host kidnapped, taken to Minneapolis

Jason Auslander Associated Press

OMAHA, Neb. — After kidnapping her at knife point in Council Bluffs, Iowa, and driving her to Minneapolis, a morning radio talk-show host said her abductor expressed gratitude.

"He stopped the car and said, 'Thanks for the ride,' opened the door and once he got out said, 'Don't try to look at me,' (and) shut the door,"

Kristy Prokop, 26, said Monday in an interview on KARE-TV in Minneapolis.

Prokop left the KKAR radio station at about 4:30 a.m. Monday to get a bottle of orange juice at a convenience store in Council Bluffs. She never returned. Council Bluffs is located across the Missouri River from Omaha.

She was allegedly kidnapped at knife point, blindfolded and driven to Bloomington, Minn., just outside of Minneapolis, said Neil Nelkin, KKAR operations manager who spoke with Prokop on Monday evening.

After she was let go, Prokop called her husband in Omaha about 10:30 a.m. and said in a shaky voice that she had been kidnapped but was all right, said her sister Stacey Prokop, who answered the telephone.

"She said she was just really scared," Stacey said. "She was shaken up, but OK."

BUSINESS SCHOOL

"If people don't understand what's happening, then rumors will start to fly and it will hurt," she said. "I think the thing that's scary for students is that they're afraid others might hear about this and not want to hire students if they don't come from an accredited program."

Scheib said that while the college has been performing well, the review came at a bad time. The college sent in an initial written report and documentation in August, just before former Dean George Daly left office. Interim Dean Gary Fethke and the rest of the administration were then busy making the transition and preparing to move into the new Pappajohn Business Administration Building among other things.

"We had an awful lot of irons in the fire, so we weren't as careful in the documentation as we should have been," Scheib said. "And because we're small and can interact on a more one-to-one basis with our faculty, we don't have as many of the procedures and policies written out as they would have liked."

Scheib said the College of Business Administration is due to review its mission statement this year, so it will take the report's concerns into consideration.

The college's statement includes a threefold mission of teaching, research and service to prepare students with an integrated core education for useful jobs and lives, seeking research eminence in selected areas and facilitating lifelong learning.

The review team did list a number of strengths in addition to the weaknesses, Scheib said. These included the strength of students in the MBA and BBA programs, an excellent research record by the faculty, the potential for the new Pappajohn Business Administration Building to make improvements in instruction, the college's good connections with outside interests and the college's location in a historically strong liberal arts institution.

Typically, business colleges are reviewed every 10 years, although the UI's last review was done in 1982, 12 years ago. The current review was delayed because the AACSB was redrawing its guidelines.

Charles Hickman, director of projects and services at AACSB, said the new standards were approved in 1991 to meet the changing needs of business schools. He said the previous guidelines, which were some 30 years old, had outlived their purpose of making business schools more respectable on college campuses.

"Those threshold standards were no longer very meaningful to schools that had long since passed them," he said. "The new process standards ask some very pointed questions about the goals, missions and objectives of a school, how it intends to measure its performance and who its stated interests are."

Strawberry to enter drug treatment center

LOS ANGELES (AP) — Darryl Strawberry, who disappeared from the Los Angeles Dodgers for a day, has a substance abuse problem and has been placed on the disabled list, the team announced Monday night.

Strawberry

General manager Fred Claire said Strawberry will immediately enter a treatment center, and could not predict when — or if — the outfielder will return.

"Darryl Strawberry has admitted having a substance abuse problem and has requested assistance from the Dodgers," the team said in a statement. Claire did not say specifically whether Strawberry, who has been treated for an alcohol problem, was now having trouble with drinking or drugs.

But Strawberry's attorney, Bob Shapiro, said: "He is not going to be playing on opening day, he is going to be in a drug treatment center."

The Dodgers start their season today at home against Florida.

Strawberry met with Claire on Monday to discuss his mysterious absence Sunday, which prompted an all-day search by the Dodgers. When the Dodgers located him Sunday night, Claire said Strawberry did not have a sufficient explanation for his disappearance.

Thurman sinks 3 to seal Arkansas' first NCAA title

Associated Press

CHARLOTTE, N.C. — Arkansas won its first national championship Monday night, sending a president to Hog Heaven and giving its coach, finally, the one college basketball title he so desperately wanted.

Scotty Thurman's 3-pointer with 50 seconds left as the shot clock expired gave the Razorbacks a 76-72 victory and deprived Duke, the dominant team of the decade, from a third title in four years.

With President Clinton once again watching his beloved Razorbacks in person, Arkansas came up with a gutsy performance to give Coach Nolan Richardson a championship ring to wave in front of his critics whom he openly challenged throughout Final Four weekend.

It also offset an unbelievable final college game by Grant Hill, one of three Duke seniors looking for a third title.

He engineered an early second-half run that gave the Blue Devils a 10-point lead, but it wasn't enough as the Razorbacks fought back and took the lead for good on Thurman's long jumper.

This was the Razorbacks' first championship game appearance in their fifth Final Four.

As Richardson walked across the court after the game the Arkansas fans shouted "Nol-an, Nol-an."

Richardson brought Arkansas to the 1990 national semifinals where they were beaten by Duke. He was in search of what he called his coaching triple crown — he won the junior college national title with Western Texas in 1980 and the NIT with Tulsa the next season.

The Razorbacks got him that third title by overcoming poor shooting with tenacious defense that forced Duke into 23 turnovers. The defense was at its best when Arkansas rebounded from the 48-38 deficit with a 16-4 run. Duke went four minutes without scoring, and in that span the Blue Devils missed five shots and committed five turnovers.

Duke finally righted itself to tie the game at 54 with 10:16 left. From there, there were three lead changes and two ties, the last at 70-70 when Hill nailed a 3-pointer with 1:30 left.

Arkansas called a timeout and when the Razorbacks returned to the court they had trouble getting an open shot. As the shot clock ticked down, Thurman finally let one go from the right side, giving the Razorbacks the lead for good. They closed the game by going 3-for-6 from the free-throw line while Duke missed two shots, including an ill-advised 3-pointer by Chris Collins with 24 seconds left and the Blue Devils down 74-70.

Corliss Williamson led Arkansas with 23 points, while Thurman and Corey Beck had 15 each.

Hill finished with 12 points, 14 rebounds and six assists. Antonio Lang, another senior, led Duke with 15 points and Jeff Capel and Cherokee Parks, whose status wasn't known until Monday morning because of a swollen knee, each had 14 points.

Richardson had let it be known he felt he didn't get the credit he deserved. He confronted television analysts and lectured the print media. He challenged his team to get the respect he felt wasn't given them — and it did.

Duke coach Mike Krzyzewski would have been part of an elite group with a third title. Only John Wooden with 10, Adolph Rupp with four and Bob Knight with three have accomplished that.

The Blue Devils were in their seventh Final Four in nine years, but they didn't reach the championship game until they were there under Krzyzewski. That 1990 title game was one to forget, with Duke losing to UNLV by 30 points. The next year, Duke avenged the loss in the semifinals and went on to beat Kansas for the title. The Blue Devils repeated the next year by beating Michigan as Krzyzewski became only the second coach to win it all in consecutive years.

Hill, Lang and Marty Clark had a chance at a third title with this year's championship run. Only 13 players have ever won three titles, and they all played for UCLA, which won 10 titles from 1964-75, including seven in a row from 1967-73. The seniors finished with an 18-2 record in NCAA tournament play.

Arkansas had made its way through the tournament with an average victory margin of 12.6 and the Razorbacks managed that with 55 percent shooting. Duke held them to 39 percent, but it wasn't enough with the defense forcing turnovers, some even on inbounds passes.

Coming into the game, everyone was concerned about the matchups. Could Duke find a way to stop Williamson down low? Parks covered him for most of the game and he was 10-for-24 from the field, but he had eight rebounds and managed to come up with the big baskets when the Razorbacks needed them.

Hill took over the game for a three-minute stretch in the second half as the Blue Devils went on a 13-0 run for the 48-38 lead. He only had two points in the burst, but he was involved in every play. He twice stripped the ball, steals that led to fast-break points. He had two great assists on 3-pointers by Collins and Capel as he penetrated and dished off.

NATIONAL LEAGUE

Rhodes steals opening-day show

Associated Press

CHICAGO — The first lady threw out the first ball, then Karl Rhodes hit three of them over the ivy-covered walls of Wrigley Field.

But his record-setting effort was in vain because the New York Mets beat the Chicago Cubs 12-8 Monday. Rhodes became the only major-league player ever to homer in his first three at-bats in a season opener.

In addition to her pregame contribution, Cubs fan Hillary Rodham Clinton joined broadcaster Harry Caray — starting his 50th year behind the mike — in his ritual, a hearty singing of "Take Me Out To The Ball Game."

Rhodes tied George Bell's 1988 record of three opening-day homers, but never got a chance for another off winner Dwight Gooden. Mets manager Dallas Greene lifted his starter with Rhodes coming up in the seventh inning.

Rhodes walked against reliever Eric Hillman, but later added a single.

Jose Vizcaino, traded last week from the Cubs, and Todd Hundley hit consecutive homers in the third off loser Mike Morgan. Jeff Kent had four hits for the Mets, including a homer. Gooden had a two-run single and improved his career mark to 27-4 against Chicago.

REDS 5, CARDINALS 4

CINCINNATI — Owner Marge Schott had her dog-and-pony show a day late, then got her first victory in extra innings from Kevin Mitchell.

He homered in the 10th of a game designated as the Reds' traditional opener. Schott refused to acknowledge Sunday night's game.

After Hector Carrasco pitched out of a bases-loaded threat in the top of the 10th, Mitchell hit a pitch from Rob Murphy into the third deck.

For more baseball coverage, see Pages 3B and 4B.

John Smiley pitched five shutout innings, and Cincinnati got two-run homers from Reggie Sanders and Joe Oliver. But the Reds' bullpen failed in the eighth.

GIANTS 8, PIRATES 0
SAN FRANCISCO — Matt Williams didn't miss free agent Will Clark on opening day, homering in his first two at-bats against Zane Smith and finishing with five RBIs.

That made it easy for John Burkett, who limited Pittsburgh to five hits in seven innings as San Francisco opened the season before 58,077 at Candlestick Park.

Last season, Williams had a career-high 38 homers with 110 RBIs batting behind Clark, who left the Giants to sign with the Texas Rangers.

Taking over for Clark, Todd Benzing marked his debut at first base by hitting a two-run triple off Ravelo Manzanillo in the fifth for a 7-0 lead.

Johnson's no-hitter halted in eighth

Associated Press

CLEVELAND — Seattle's Randy Johnson had seven no-hit innings, but Cleveland tied the game in the eighth and 10th before properly inaugurating Jacobs Field before President Clinton with a 4-3 victory Monday in 11 innings.

Wayne Kirby drove in the winning run with a two-out single off loser Kevin King. Kirby's hit scored Eddie Murray, who doubled with one out. The late rallies thrilled a sellout crowd of 41,459, watching the first regular-season game at the Indians' new downtown ballpark.

Sandy Alomar, hitless in 10 previous career at-bats against Johnson, broke up the no-hit bid with a single after a walk to Mark Lewis began the eighth. After both runners advanced on a wild pitch, Manny Ramirez tied the game with a two-run double.

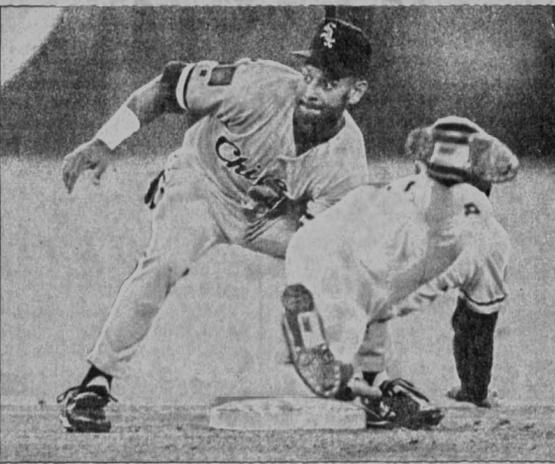

Each team scored in the 10th. Keith Mitchell singled home a run against Derek Lilliquist for a 3-2 Seattle lead, but Omar Vizquel's RBI forceout tied it in the bottom half.

Seattle's Eric Anthony hit the first homer in the stadium, off Dennis Martinez, who pitched well in his debut with the Indians. Eric Plunk won in relief.

Red Sox 9, Tigers 8

BOSTON — Otis Nixon demonstrated Boston's new-look speed, racing home on Mickey Tettleton's passed ball to cap a decisive three-run eighth inning.

opening-day start, but was hampered for eight runs in 4 1/2 innings.

With the Red Sox trailing 8-6, Nixon walked to load the bases with two out in the eighth. After Billy Hatcher's ground-rule double tied the game against Storm Davis, a pitch went off Tettleton's glove to bring home the winning run.

Andre Dawson had his 413th career homer and an RBI double for the Red Sox. Alan Trammell had a two-run double for Detroit.

Yankees 5, Rangers 3
NEW YORK — Jimmy Key made it 5-0 in opening-day decisions, allowing three runs on five hits in seven innings as New York beat Kevin Brown with the help of homers by Mike Stanley and Danny Tartabull.

Brown, 11-3 in his career against the Yankees, gave up five runs on 10 hits in five innings. Will Clark had two run-scoring doubles in his debut for Texas.

Wade Boggs had four hits and scored twice for the Yankees, who got a two-run double from Paul O'Neill and two RBI from Tartabull.

Xavier Hernandez got three outs for the save.

Blue Jays 7, White Sox 3

TORONTO — Roberto Alomar's three-run homer in the seventh inning overcame a 2-1 deficit, and Toronto beat Cy Young Award winner Jack McDowell.

Rookie Carlos Delgado and Ed Sprague also homered for the two-time World Series champions, who got their rings from last October in a pregame ceremony.

Winner Juan Guzman allowed two runs on seven hits in seven innings. McDowell, 0-2 with a 10.00 ERA against Toronto in the 1993 AL playoffs, gave up four runs on eight hits in seven innings.

Frank Thomas, the AL MVP last season, was 2-for-4 and scored twice for Chicago, which also got a solo homer from Ron Karkovice.

Orioles 6, Royals 3

BALTIMORE — Mike Mussina left his slump in Florida, and Rafael Palmeiro and Lee Smith made Baltimore's free-agency decisions look good as the Orioles handed Kansas City its eighth loss in the last nine openers.

Mussina, who had a 6.75 ERA in spring training, allowed a run on two hits in eight innings. Palmeiro homered and Smith got the final out for a save.

Mike Devereaux also homered, giving Baltimore a 1-0 lead in the first against loser Kevin Appier.

After Mike Macfarlane's fourth-inning homer tied the game, Mussina retired the final 14 batters he faced.

rans from the West, the newly formed Central Division has White Sox written all over it.

Quite simply, the Sox have the strongest starting rotation in the division — and arguably the whole American League — in Jack McDowell, Alex Fernandez, Wilson Alvarez and Jason Bere. Spring training pickup Scott Sanderson won't overpower anybody from the No. 5 spot in the rotation, but he can't be any worse than Dave Stieb, who lasted about a month in that role last year.

On offense, Chicago should come up with a solid cleanup hitter in Julio Franco and Darrin Jackson to protect Frank Thomas. Of course, Thomas managed to do OK last season without such protection, and barring injury there's no reason the Big Hurt shouldn't be back with a vengeance this year.

In addition, look for Lance Johnson to continue his clutch hitting of last season and perhaps move up to the No. 2 spot in the batting order should Joey Cora struggle at the plate. And Ron Karkovice? Who knows, the guy might actually hit his weight one of these years.

AL East: Baltimore.

Without question, the East has become the strongest division in the league following the Brewers' and Indians' migration to the Central. If things fall into place, any of the five teams could wind up with the title, but all bets here are on the O's.

After acquiring veterans Rafael Palmeiro, Chris Sabo, Sid Fernandez and Lee Smith in the off-season, the Orioles have a team to match the splendor of their neat-o new ballpark. Palmeiro and Sabo join an already-stacked lineup which includes Brady Anderson, Mike Devereaux, Cal Ripken, Harold Baines and Chris Hoiles.

The one chink in Baltimore's armor could be its pitching staff, which beyond closer Smith and starters Ben McDonald, Mike Mussina and Fernandez is pretty thin. This weakness is the strength of division contenders New York and Boston. With a full return to health by Roger Clemens, the Red Sox rotation of the Rocket, Frank Viola, Aaron Sele and Danny Darwin could carry them to the top.

Meanwhile, the Yankees hope lefty ace Jimmy Key, former Phillie Terry Mulholland and young guns Melido Perez and Jim Abbott can give them the pitching they sorely lacked down the stretch last season. Of course, no one's counting out two-time defending World Series champion Toronto either, but early injury trouble and the loss of veterans Jack Morris, Tony Fernandez and Rickey Henderson could prove too much of a mountain to overcome.

AL West: Texas.

No team really deserves to make the playoffs from this hurtin' little division, but look for the Rangers to pull off a .500 season, which will be enough. As usual, Texas has plenty of offensive firepower (Juan Gonzalez, Ivan Rodriguez, Jose "Head Case" Canseco and newcomer Will Clark) but virtually no pitching (Kevin Brown, perhaps the most overrated pitcher in baseball, is as good as it gets in Arlington).

If any other team has a shot at the AL West title, it's the Seattle Mariners. Randy Johnson can rock 'n' fire with the best of them, but the loss of Erik Hanson hurts their rotation. Groundball pitchers Greg Hibbard, Dave Fleming and Chris Bosio will get neck cramps from watching balls skip into the Kingdom outfield on that puke-green carpet.

Wildcards: threes and nines of any suit.

Just a reminder for all you greedy, poker-playing owners out there that these playing cards should be the only "wildcards" in the game of baseball.

new team got him off the hook after he walked home two runs in the 12th inning.

Tom Edens, who faced one Mon-real batter in the 12th, got the victory, Houston's first on opening day since 1989.

Braves 4, Padres 1

SAN DIEGO — Two-time NL Cy Young Award winner Greg Maddux allowed seven hits in eight innings, and Deion Sanders and rookie Ryan Klesko hit homers as the Braves won their first game as members of the NL East after three straight NL West division crowns. Atlanta had a franchise-record 104 victories last year.

The Padres, who lost 101 games in 1993, got off to a bumbling start. The game was delayed 16 minutes

Clintons join celebs in tossing out opening-day first pitches

Ben Walker
Associated Press

Like great pitching? Should've been with President Clinton, watching Randy Johnson take a no-hitter into the eighth inning in Cleveland's new ballpark.

Prefer big hitting? Should've been with the first lady, seeing Karl Rhodes hit three home runs for her beloved Chicago Cubs. Or in Toronto, where rookie Carlos Delgado homered off the window of the Hard Rock Cafe.

With Clinton enjoying a hot dog during the inauguration of Jacobs Field in Cleveland and his wife singing "Take Me Out to the Ball Game" with Harry Caray at Wrigley Field in Chicago, baseball began in earnest on Monday.

Opening day meant Joe DiMaggio throwing out the first ball at Yankee Stadium and Nancy Kerrigan doing the same at Fenway Park. It meant Joe Carter and the Toronto Blue Jays receiving their second set of World Series championship rings and Mitch "Wild Thing" Williams walking home two runs for his new-look Houston Astros.

And, it meant the first full day with the most radical changes the game has seen in a quarter-century — realignment into six divisions, expanded playoffs that include wild-card teams and, if there are a couple of rainouts, perhaps baseball's first Mr. November.

A day after the season officially started Sunday in Cincinnati with the first night opener in the game's 125-year history, all but six teams played traditional day baseball.

Clinton, a left-hander, started off the afternoon festivities with the first ball in Cleveland. A sellout crowd of 42,000 cheered Clinton's soft, but accurate, throw.

"It started high — the only thing you can't do is put it in the dirt," Clinton said. "It was a little high."

Johnson, the 6-foot-10 left-hander from the Seattle Mariners, threw much harder. He did not give up a hit until Sandy Alomar Jr. singled with no outs in the eighth inning, and the Indians went on to win 4-3 in the 11th.

While the president was with the Indians — and preparing to go to Charlotte, N.C., to see his favorite Arkansas Razorbacks play Duke for the NCAA basketball title — his wife was watching her Cubs.

Hillary Rodham Clinton, a right-hander, threw out the first ball at sunny Wrigley Field. Then she saw Rhodes, playing his first game for the Cubs, hit home runs off Dwight Gooden in his first three at-bats.

Later, in a game the Cubs lost 12-8, she heard that the president was seeing possible pitching history in the making.

"I didn't know my husband was watching a no-hitter today. What finally happened? Who broke it up? Is the score still 2-2?" she asked.

For the seventh-inning stretch, she joined Caray, now in his 50th season as an announcer, and serenaded the crowd with "Take Me Out to the Ball Game."

"I've sung along with you in my living room and other places I've watched the game," said Clinton, born in Chicago.

Blue Jays return power to lineup

(Editor's note: This is the first of a five-part series looking at the 1994 major-league teams.)

Ben Walker
Associated Press

A team-by-team look at the AL East, in predicted order of finish.

Toronto Blue Jays
Even without making any major moves — Michael Huff and Greg Cadaret were the only players they added — the Blue Jays return the top three hitters in the league, all of their key pitchers, plus a couple of talented rookies. In all, that should be enough to win the division, although who knows whether it can win Cito Gaston an overdue manager of the year award.

John Olerud (.363, 107 RBI, 114 BB), Paul Molitor (.332, 111 RBI, 22 SB) and Roberto Alomar (.326, 93 RBI, 55 SB) formed the first trio from the same team to finish 1-2-3 in the batting race this century. Joe Carter (33 HR, 121 RBI), who joined Bill Mazaroski as the only players to end a World Series with a home run, broke his thumb when he was hit by a pitch in spring training, and may not be ready to start the season.

Carlos Delgado (102 RBI in Double-A) moves from catcher to left field to begin the year, while Huff, acquired in March from the White Sox, backs up. Fellow rookie Alex Gonzalez will share time with veteran Dick Schofield at shortstop.

Juan Guzman (14-3), Pat Hentgen (19-9) and Dave Stewart (12-8), perhaps in his last year, anchor the rotation. Duane Ward (45 saves) was bothered by biceps tendinitis in spring training.

Baltimore Orioles
The Orioles spent about $45 million on free agents in the winter, and are eager to get back to the playoffs for the first time since 1983.

Lee Smith (43 saves for St. Louis) is expected to replace injured stopper Gregg Olson, who left for Atlanta. Rafael Palmeiro (37 HR, 105 RBI for Texas) solidifies the spot at first base and Chris Sabo (21 HR for Cincinnati) does the same at third. Sid Fernandez was tough to hit when he was healthy for the Mets, but came down with tendinitis in March.

Outfielders Brady Anderson and Mike Devereaux need to get back to their 1992 levels. Rookie Jeffrey Hammonds hit .305 in 33 games as a rookie, and will start in right.

Cal Ripken has played 1,897 consecutive games. If he doesn't miss a game, he will break Lou Gehrig's record of 2,130 in June 1995.

New York Yankees
The Yankees made the trade they wanted for a starting pitcher, getting Terry Mulholland, although they may have left themselves short in the bullpen.

Mulholland (12-9, 3.25 ERA for Philadelphia) joins fellow left-handers Jimmy Key (18-6) and Jim Abbott (11-14) in a rotation that also includes Bob Ojeda. Despite pitching a no-hitter, Abbott was a disappointment last year, and so was Melido Perez (6-14).

Owner George Steinbrenner said this spring that he wants Abbott to cut down on his charity work and concentrate more on pitching. What would really help is a reliever — newcomers Xavier Hernandez, Jeff Reardon and Steve Howe are among the candidates to close.

Don Mattingly (.291, 86 RBI) and Wade Boggs (.302) bounced back and Mike Stanley (.305, 26 HR) was a big surprise.

Detroit Tigers
As always, Cecil Fielder and friends will put some points on the board. The question is whether newcomer Tim Lincecum and the other pitchers can stop the other teams from scoring.

Fielder (30 HR, 117 RBI) has seen his homer total drop every year since he hit 51 in 1990. Still, he's a force, as is Mickey Tettleton (32 HR, 110 RBI, 109 BB) and Travis Fryman (22 HR, 97 RBI). Alan Trammell (.329) and Lou Whitaker (.290) are productive at age 36, and Tony Phillips (.313, 132 RBI) had a .443 on-base percentage, second in the league to Olerud's .473.

Belcher (12-11 with Cincinnati and the White Sox) was signed to help steady a staff that includes Bill Gullickson and Mike Moore, both 13-9. Manager Sparky Anderson hopes to preserve stopper Mike Henneman (24 saves) by using him only one inning at a time.

Boston Red Sox
The Red Sox signed Otis Nixon in hopes of speeding up the offense, although Boston really needs Roger Clemens to quickly return to form.

Clemens (11-14) hopes to rebound from his worst season and perhaps win his fourth Cy Young, tying Steve Carlton's record. Danny Darvin (15-11) and Frank Viola (11-8) were Boston's best pitchers.

Nixon (47 SB with Atlanta) will bat leadoff and roam center field. The Red Sox want Mo Vaughn (.297, 29 HR, 101 RBI) and Andre Dawson (67 RBI) to drive him in. The Red Sox tied for last in the league with 114 homers last season and stole only 73 bases.

WOMEN'S FINAL FOUR

Thrilling ending missed by most

Teresa M. Walker
Associated Press

If more people tune into women's basketball next season as a result of Charlotte Smith's buzzer-beating 3-pointer, credit the wonders of videotape.

Smith's 3-pointer gave North Carolina its first national championship with a 60-59 victory over Louisiana Tech Sunday in a game most people missed.

"It was as thrilling as the end of any sporting event you could see, and it had everything — the lead changes, .7 seconds on the clock and a competitive game with emotion and drama and the change at the buzzer," said Susan Kerr, CBS' director of communications.

Still, the women's title game earned a 2.9 rating and a 9 share in the overnight ratings reported Monday. That's down from a 4.1 rating and a 10 share overnight for 1993's Texas Tech-Ohio State championship.

The final numbers come later this week once the ratings from the rest of the country are added to the overnights from the major cities.

What television viewers missed was a finish to a championship game reminiscent of North Carolina State's last-second upset of Houston in 1983.

North Carolina trailed Louisiana Tech 59-57 when Tonya Sampson missed a shot off the backboard, but the Tar Heels regained the ball on the alternating possession rule after a tie-up for the rebound.

With only 0.7 seconds left, Stephanie Lawrence fired a 30-foot inbounds pass to Smith who let loose with her title-winning and buzzer-beating 3-pointer.

For fans who missed the shot, expect to see it in CBS promotions over the next year, Kerr said. The network has three years remaining on its deal to televise the women's title game.

Donna Lopiano, former Texas women's athletic director and currently executive director of the Women's Sports Foundation in East Meadow, N.Y., can't help thinking about the people missing out on the excitement of women's basketball.

"It's like Russian roulette," she said by telephone. "When you don't have very many games on, it's like a six-cylinder gun and so few people get a chance to see it. If you happen to get the cylinder with the bullet in it, it kills you."

That describes the Catch-22 women's basketball finds itself in — exciting games draw more fans but fan bases and ratings influence which games are televised.

"Conversely, when you have got the great game and that's the one time people tune in, of course they're likely to come back," Lopiano said.

Police question Mullin

Associated Press

OAKLAND, Calif. — Golden State Warriors forward Chris Mullin will continue to play while police investigate a complaint that he assaulted a woman in a Seattle hotel room, the team said Monday.

The Warriors are scheduled to take on the Spurs today. "He will play tomorrow night against San Antonio," said a team media official who declined to give his name. The team has no other comment on the case, he added.

Mullin, 30, a five-time NBA All-Star, was questioned by police Saturday after the Warriors' 119-109 loss to the SuperSonics.

The case is being investigated as a misdemeanor, said Seattle police Sgt. Dan Whelan.
