A History of the UI Sex Act Policy

September 1991 - April 1994

- 9/27 - Newspapers report that UI German students were required to view "Taxi Zum Klo," a film depicting homosexual acts.
- 10/1 - UI President Hunter Rawlings says the showing of the film demonstrated extremely poor judgment.
- 10/16 - Despite reports that some regents wanted to write a policy prohibiting "inappropriate" material in the classroom, the board declines to make any proposal.
- 11/20 - Johnson County attorney J. Patrick White rules "Taxi Zum Klo" not obscene, but added that one scene, in which a child appears in a man's groin area, violates Iowa law.
- 2/5 - Controversy erupts after a videotape including 15 seconds of explicit homosexual sex is shown in a UI art colloquium. A UI freshman in the class calls her mother, who calls the UI to protest the video.
- 2/9 - The UI administration determines the videotape was artistic, not pornographic, but also finds some problems regarding the presentation. UI Vice President for University Relations Ann Rhodes said students should have been warned.
- 2/16 - The UI Faculty Senate begins discussing the possibility of changes in existing policy regarding UI instructional procedures.
- 2/17 - Regents President Marvin Pomerantz warns the UI that policy better be followed. He says this is the second strike against them. The regents indicate a new policy may be needed.
- 9/20 - Newspapers report a UI American studies teaching assistant received a letter of reprimand for failing to warn students about a film on drag queens shown in March.
- 9/21 - In a June 9 letter, newspapers report, Liberal Arts College Dean Judith Aikin rescinded the reprimand.
- 10/20 - Disgusted with the faculty for not implementing their own policy, the regents impose a policy on the UI until the faculty and regents can reach a compromise.
- Nov. - Dec. - The UI faculty and the regents fight back and forth on specifics of the sex act policy.
- 1/17 - Rawlings proposes a change to the regents policy, which is submitted without first being reviewed by the Faculty Senate or Council.
- 1/19 - The regents unanimously vote to approve Rawlings' proposal, ending the regent-imposed policy.
- 2/16 - Demonstrators disrupt the Board of Regents meeting at the Union to protest the policy.
- 4/12 - Newspapers report an anonymous phone call to the UI prompted an informal inquiry into a film on AIDS education shown in Communication Studies. The department head finds nothing wrong.

Policy's effect 'hard to define exactly'

Chris Pothoven
The Daily Iowan

The UI policy on sensitive materials in the classroom still has the power to create at least a small uproar almost three months after the Iowa state Board of Regents approved it.

A recent anonymous complaint to the UI administration about an AIDS education video shown in an editing class had policy critics up in arms, while UI officials downplayed the issue.

Communication studies Chairman John Lyne said the department informally looked into the concern and found the video to be appropriate to the class, but many policy opponents were angered that an anonymous call would spark any type of investigation.

In a Daily Iowan interview Monday, UI President Hunter Rawlings said he had not heard of the case, but the procedure followed would have been appropriate.

"If the complaint is not made to the instructor as it should be, but is instead made elsewhere, then the person elsewhere should go right to the department and say, 'You check on this. You find out what happened and you resolve it, if necessary,'" he said. "We shouldn't be over here in Jessup Hall looking at every class and every complaint."

The policy has also brought reaction from the UI dance department. Assistant Professor Alan Sener has choreographed a new work called "Scapegoat," which will be presented at the department's "Men in Labor" concert

"The whole episode has had a chilling effect that we have not noticed, but that has affected us subconsciously. It's hard to define exactly."

Peter Feldstein, UI art professor

April 23-24. "I wanted to attack the issue head-on and have a faculty response," Sener said, adding that it's difficult to know if the dance itself might be considered offensive. "That's exactly the point. We are expected to anticipate what might be offensive, which is very subjective. So it's really a piece about responsibility and where it lies."

Some instructors say there has been an adverse effect on academic freedom at the UI, while others feel students have a right to be informed about class content. And other than those involved in the Campaign for Academic Freedom, many students don't seem to pay much attention.

Magazine: Robert James Waller moving to Texas

AUSTIN (AP) — Robert James Waller, author of the best-selling novel "The Bridges of Madison County," is moving to Texas.

In its May issue, Texas Monthly magazine says Waller has bought a 971-acre ranch near Alpine, in the foothills of the Del Norte Mountains, and is remodeling the main ranch house and barn and building a studio for his wife, Georgia, to do jewelry and ceramics work.

The magazine says Waller "felt his native Iowa closing in ... the world beat a wide path to his door, including, it is said, a group of Japanese tourists who took photos of him during some private moments."

Waller was returning from a photography assignment in Mexico when he passed through Alpine.

"Understandably, he remains jealous of his privacy. So far Waller has accepted only a few of the invitations he has received from his new neighbors," it said.

Jail bans spinach after inmates caught taking it up

MCPHERSON, Kan. (AP) — The smoking ban at the McPherson County Jail will apply to spinach as well.

Sheriff Larry Powell banished spinach from the menu Tuesday after learning that inmates in neighboring Reno County were smoking the leafy green vegetable.

After cigarettes were banned in June, some Reno County inmates saved spinach from their meals, dried it, wrapped it in squares of toilet paper and lit up, Sgt. Ruth Divilbiss said.

"It smells terrible. You can't print what it smells like. When you don't have tobacco, you do what you have to do," she said.

Inmates also pulled weeds from cracks in the exercise yard pavement and dried them to smoke, Divilbiss said.

The yard is now kept weedless. McPherson County's new smoke-free jail is scheduled to open later this month.

Although she's only 5½, Katie Ovrom has been playing violin for seven months. "I didn't want to sit down with a cello," Ovrom explained when asked about her instrument choice. Ovrom along with other students and faculty from the Preucil School of Music in Iowa City performed their monthly "Bach's Lunch" concert Wednesday in the First National Bank Atrium.

'EDUCATION FOR THE MASSES'

Experts share visions of future info-highway

Thomas Wanat
The Daily Iowan

(Editor's note: This is the third of a three-part series examining people's growing demands of the Internet, the information superhighway.)

Imagine waking up one morning to a different world.

The Last Virtual Straw

Part 3 of 3

You shower with powdered water, have a full three-pill breakfast, get dressed in plastic, and when it's time for your first class — you turn on the television.

The UI-sponsored class is Conversational French IV, the teacher is in France and you're out in rural Iowa.

It's a dream today, and while you may never shower with powdered water, experts agree the information superhighway will change your world — and sooner than you might think.

"A lot more people are going to be completing their college degrees from their home communities," Emmett Vaughan, dean of the division of continuing education said. "Fewer people are actually going to make the move to campus. It will be education for the masses."

More people today are finding college too expensive, Vaughan said. Fiber optics and the two-way instant communication offered by the Internet may be the last chance for these people in an information-competitive world.

Currently, only nine courses are offered over the Iowa Communications Network, Iowa's brand-new fiber-optic communications network, but they already reach all 15 of Iowa's community colleges and 290 off-campus students. Vaughan

Iowa Communications Network

The ICN links all 99 Iowa counties, the three regent universities and all 15 community colleges with two-way video capabilities.

UI Campus Network

The UI network links most campus buildings to Weeg computers and also to the Internet. The backbone of the campus network is in the process of being replaced with faster fiber-optic cable.

The Internet

The Internet is the "information superhighway." It is made up of millions of computers spread across thousands of smaller networks.

Users have access to a wide variety of services, including e-mail, news and libraries.

UI areas decided off-limits to skaters

Natasha Courter
The Daily Iowan

Skateboarders, Rollerbladers and roller skaters will have to watch where they skate as a new UI policy prohibits the recreational use of skating on most campus areas, including UI buildings and parking ramps.

The policy was adopted due to continuous property damage and potential dangers of skating in high pedestrian traffic areas, UI director of Public Safety Bill Fuhrmeister said.

Hot spots for skateboarders — including Van Allen Hall, the Pentacrest and the T. Anne Cleary Walkway — are left with chipped and cracked concrete and damage to steps and benches, Fuhrmeister said. He said the new Pappajohn Business Administration Building has also been damaged by Iowa City skaters.

UI business manager Michael Finnegan said it's necessary to limit the recreational use of skates and skateboards in frequently used pedestrian areas.

"These aren't appropriate places for skaters to be skating backwards or jumping on curbs, railings or benches," he said.

People will still be able to use skates as a mode of transportation, however, Fuhrmeister said.

"We don't want to infringe on students' rights to use in-line skates as transportation," he said.

The UI administration and Public Safety, including the Public Safety bike patrol, will be enforcing these new rules, which are scheduled to go into effect within the next two weeks. International signs, a round sign with a picture of a skater on it and a line through it, will be used to mark areas where recreational skating is prohibited.

Fuhrmeister said skaters will be warned when skating in a prohibited zone and their names will be recorded. If warned several times, they may be charged with criminal trespassing.

"We're not out to arrest people, we're trying to educate them and make this a safer campus," he said. Iowa City resident and skateboarder Aaron Meyers said that the potential to damage property is

Burning out, not fading away

As Kurt Cobain proves, a rock career seldom dies with the performer

Dan Kelly
The Daily Iowan
(Editor's note: This is one reporter's introspective look at an ongoing phenomenon that is perhaps best labeled 'fame,' even long after a person's death.)

Candle lit parades, weeping in the streets and wreaths everywhere — Cobain's body is barely cold and already the death clones have moved in.

So will Kurt be remembered as a rock 'n' roll martyr, or will he simply be confined to the dustbin of history?

Will controversies rage over his life and work, will tour buses now offer the "Tragic Seattle Experience," and most interestingly of all — will he sell more records dead than alive?

Chances are that he will do pretty well.

No one remembers Jim Morrison as the fat, impotent has-been who moved to Paris to write some excruciatingly bad poetry. In the public eye he remains the cool, long-haired "Lizard King" who Oliver Stone fell in love with. Now he sells a tidy million records a year.

Adoration for Morrison is so great that his graffiti-covered grave in Pere Lachaise Cemetery in Paris is still regularly desecrated by drunk-en Doors fans.

The situation is so bad that in the year 2001, his remains are due to be moved elsewhere because of complaints from families owning neighboring plots.

When John Lennon was shot dead in New York in December 1980, he had just ended a five-year writer's block and was beginning to record furiously. In retrospect, however, his death was probably a good career move.

His last LP Double Fantasy was terrible, but posthumously it soared up the charts along with his other decidedly mixed solo work.

While Paul McCartney's name is now synonymous with mediocre pop music, Lennon is remembered as the sharp, daring Beatle. People have forgotten that it was actually McCartney who wrote almost the whole of Sgt. Pepper's Lonely Hearts Club Band.

On hearing of the death of Jimi Hendrix on Sept. 18, 1970, Janis Joplin begged the question, "I wonder if I'll get as much publicity?"

Two weeks later when she overdosed on heroin in a Hollywood hotel, she nearly did. Within months of her death, "Me and Bobby McGee" became her only No. 1, while three times as many of her albums were released in death as in life.

All this from a girl who left just $2,500 to her friends in her will "so that (they) can get blasted after I'm gone."

"I think Brian liked drink and I think he liked drugs. ... They just weren't very good for him," was Charlie Watts' verdict on the premature death of fellow Rolling Stones guitarist Brian Jones, and it neatly illustrates the accidental nature of most rock stars' deaths. The consequences, however, can live on for years — usually in the form of poorly packaged re-releases.

An artist who has been particularly badly treated in this respect is Jimi Hendrix.

Having released only a handful of records, his incredible talent seemed capable of anything. Now his memory is tarnished by tacky super-market compilations which continue to scrape the barrel of his insubstantial recording output. Still, at least death prevented Hendrix from becoming the kind of overblown caricature that many of his contemporaries have become.

Perhaps we should be thankful that Kurt Cobain's end is not shrouded in mystery. Jim Morrison, Elvis Presley and Brian Jones' deaths remain subjects of impassioned speculation.

"Death sells."

Ian Faith,
manager of
Spinal Tap

Some say Jim Morrison died of heroin or was murdered by a dealer; conspiracy buffs say the U.S. government assassinated him. Others claim that he is still alive. Only two people saw his dead body: his girlfriend, who died the following year, and a French doctor who refuses to talk. Morrison had often talked about faking his death, and he was sighted boarding a plane in Paris on the night his corpse was "discovered."

Whatever the whys or the wherefores, the death of a young rock star continues to fascinate people.

The sight of MTV executives bemoaning the loss of a man who despised corporate rock may seem sickeningly paradoxical to many, but it undoubtedly constitutes popular television. As the music guru and erstwhile Spinal Tap manager Ian Faith once said, "Death sells," and young rock 'n' roll death sells best of all.

SYSTEMS QUESTIONED

Equality in science depends on tenure

Kristin Berg
The Daily Iowan

Changes need to be made in tenure systems across the nation to allow equality in science, a visiting professor said in a lecture Wednesday.

Princeton life sciences Professor and Howard Hughes Medical Institute investigator Shirley Tilghman spoke to about 70 people about the under-representation of women in the sciences. She said it exists for several reasons including motherhood, marriage, science culture and tenure.

"An issue very close to my own heart is learning how to get more women in science," Tilghman said. "Science began as a men's club and for the most part still is."

Tilghman said science culture began after World War II when President Truman created a science doctrine encouraging individual research and competition for grants. She said the result was the idea that science was an all-encompassing profession.

"Science behaves like a black hole in space — ready to suck up whatever proportion of your life you allow it," she said. "Many women in science have forgone marriage and children as the price for their success."

Tilghman said in order for science to be more open to women, changes have to be made. She suggested official meetings and lectures be held at times good for parents — not after 6 p.m. She also said that the tenure decision should not come up during a woman's "major child-bearing age" — 35 to 36.

"Tenure at most universities is no friend of women," she said.

She would like to see tenure abolished, which she said would help move the focus from independent competitive research to cooperative team research.

UI internal medicine research scientist Gerene Denning said many women never enter the tenure track and remain in low-level positions.

"Sometimes women may not be under-represented, but in the wrong places," Denning said.

Tilghman said there are some women who drop out because they see how difficult it is, and other women never get tenure track job offers.

Overall, Tilghman said that in order for women to be accepted in science for their abilities, science culture has to change. She said she sees it beginning to happen as younger scientists are leaning toward collective work.

"Change has to start from the top," she said, "where people clearly have the ear of the institution."

POLITICAL 'JACKALS' FINGERED

Tabor: Iowans ready for changes

Jim Snyder
The Daily Iowan

Iowa Congressman Jim Leach's nationally publicized role as lead Whitewater critic has made the Republican's 1st District seat ripe for the taking, Chairman of the Iowa Democratic Party Eric Tabor said in a Wednesday interview with The Daily Iowan.

"I think he's in way over his head. He is taking the president to task and feeding the press frenzy. Iowans are fair. They don't like false charges," Tabor said.

Republican Sens. Robert Dole, Kan.; Phil Gramm, Texas; and Alfonse D'Mato, N.Y., are political "jackals," Tabor said, who care more about derailing a Democrat president than they do about health-care and welfare reform.

Tabor suggested Leach, who has been called a moderate, could be a "jackal in training."

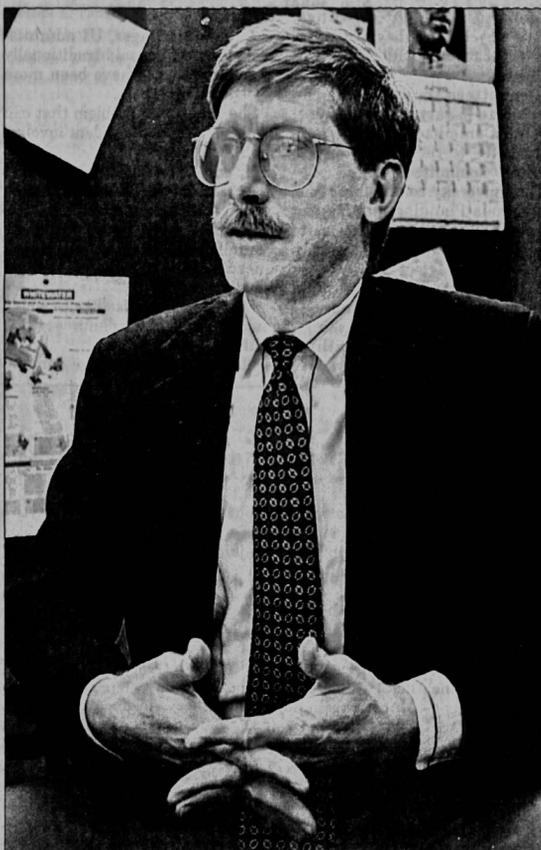

"He is certainly going against his character," Tabor said. "Why Jim Leach wants to be associated with that type of politician, I'm not sure."

Tabor expects Glen Winekauf, who works for Sen. Tom Harkin, to be the Democrat challenger for the 1st District seat.

"An important point is there is no illegality, no ethical breach. Nothing that should undermine the president's ability to head the country," he said. "The press has been running on innuendo. Leach has been part of the allegations and innuendo without any real facts."

Tabor said critics of Hillary Rodham Clinton's investment prowess are off the mark as well. Rodham Clinton turned a $1,000 investment into nearly $100,000 in a year by playing the volatile cattle futures market in 1979.

Critics say it's hypocritical of the Clintons to have campaigned against the greed of the 1980s while they benefited from trading.

Jill Sagers/The Daily Iowan

Eric Tabor, Chairman of the Iowa Democratic Party, discussed Congressman Jim Leach's role in the Whitewater investigation, among other issues, during an interview Wednesday at The Daily Iowan.

"If it had been a Republican man, then it would be OK. That's the hypocrisy. There is nothing legally or ethically wrong with what she did," he said. "Democrats are not against success. We just believe in allowing others to have success at the same time."

"It's like Senator Tom Harkin has said: We like to leave the ladder to success there for the next person."

Tabor said he feels good about the Democrats' chances across the nation, including the state governor's race.

"It is shaping up to be a good year overall. The trend in 1994 will be the same as it was in 1992 — change," he said.

Attorney General and Democrat gubernatorial hopeful Bonnie Campbell has a good chance of wresting control of the office away from Republicans who have held it for more than two decades, Tabor said.

"People are ready for a Democrat. It's quite fun to watch the candidates spew venom at one another," he said. "But whether it's Grandy or Branstad, it doesn't make much of a difference. They have the same policies."

The fact that Campbell is a woman will have no bearing on the outcome, Tabor said.

"People want quality. She brings to the race a fine mind, a creative mind and broad political experience."

I.C. LIBRARY BENEFITED

Bookstore recycles for Earth Day

Prasanti Kantamneni
The Daily Iowan

The University Book Store is encouraging students to help preserve the environment by recycling used books at the second annual Earth Day Book Recycling.

Through April 22, the bookstore will collect used general reading books in an effort to support Earth Day. In return, customers will receive a coupon for 20 percent off any general purchase book. The books collected during the recycling program will be donated to the Iowa City Public Library.

Maureen Hada, marketing assistant for the University Book Store, hopes the recycling effort will encourage students to help preserve the environment.

"The purpose is to celebrate Earth Day," she said. "We want to help promote recycling and reusing the resources we already have."

Customers wishing to donate general reading books should drop them off at the University Book Store's Customer Service Desk. The bookstore will not be collecting used textbooks during this Earth Day program. Coupons do not apply to sale books and textbooks and will expire on April 22.

Along with the environment, the recycling program will also be beneficial to the Iowa City Public Library, Hada said.

"Last year our customers donated more than 700 books," she said. "We want to help support the Iowa City reading community by helping the public library support itself. It's a great opportunity to celebrate the public library and the joys of reading."

The books donated to the library will be resold at the library's book sales. The next sale is June 18.

Larry Eckholt, director of development at the public library, said the library thanks the bookstore for its support.

"We're always looking for new sources for used books," he said.

"We were really delighted when the University Book Store suggested this project. Recycling and sharing — these two things that add up to make a difference."

Lawmakers make bargain on barring nude dancing

Mike Glover
Associated Press

DES MOINES — Legislators on Wednesday said they've struck a deal so that local officials can move to close juice bars that have nude dancing.

The House approved the deal 88-5, sending it back to the Senate where supporters predicted approval as the Legislature tries to end this year's session.

The House and Senate have disagreed on the issue, which was sparked by an Ames bar called Big Earl's Too.

That bar lost its liquor license but discovered that that let them wriggle through a loophole in the state's obscenity laws. The club reopened serving only nonalcoholic beverages and featuring nude dancers.

The House had moved to close such establishments; the Senate favored banning minors.

The deal struck Wednesday gives local officials the authority to pass an ordinance prohibiting nude dancing.

Participation in UI committees encouraged

Molly Spann
The Daily Iowan
Students who think computer fees are a waste, Bijou films are too bizarre, the UI Lecture Committee brings in boring speakers or have any other gripes about the university are being encouraged to take action and join a UI committee.

That's why I think they are amazing — because student voices will be heard." Committees that students can participate in vary from the Homecoming Committee to the Union Committee to the Computer Fee Advisory Committee.

The university committees, such as Campus Planning and Human Rights, make recommendations to the UI administration, Lohman said.

UISA Vice President Gretchen Lohman is trying to get students to fill more than 100 student seats on the committees before May 15. "Whatever age you are, you can be on these committees," she said. "They work with faculty and staff members and provide recommen-

Although students have held seats since the 1970s, Lohman said her goal this year is to make all committees effective, something that has not always happened in the past. Anna Huntzinger, UI administrative associate, said traditionally some committees have been more effective than others. She said it is a problem that can be fixed with more student involvement. "It will be changed if we can get full membership," Huntzinger said. "Some committees haven't attracted as much membership. If there is not full membership and there isn't a quorum, they can't meet to even have a meeting."

tions last year went and got their own friends," she said. "The university has not been utilized as much as it could be."

Huntzinger said UI committees give students a chance to make a difference on campus. "I think that on committees, students are providing an avenue of input directly to central administration," she said. "It is very important. It is a real opportunity for those interested in a particular area to have a real input."

Lohman would also like to widen the diversity of students working within UI committees. "The people in charge of nomina-

Jury continues deliberating in CR

Associated Press

CEDAR RAPIDS — The jury ended its first full day of deliberations at the first-degree murder trial of Rick Forsyth without reaching a verdict.

The seven women and five men on the jury began deliberations Tuesday afternoon and worked all day Wednesday. They will return today at 9 a.m.

The jury is trying to decide whether Forsyth killed his family before attempting suicide or whether he's the victim of a botched crime investigation by the state.

Forsyth, 43, of Norwalk, Iowa, is charged with six counts of first-degree murder in the deaths of his estranged wife, Jolene, their three children — Brian, 18; Nikki, 17; and Jessica, 11 — and the two daughters of Jolene's new boyfriend, Helen and Martina Napodano, ages 7 and 9, from Winfield, Ill.

Their bodies were found June 14 in Jolene Forsyth's Norwalk home.

On Wednesday, the jurors were given a tape player so they could listen to tapes introduced as evidence at the trial.

One of those tapes is of the State Division of Criminal Investigation interview with Forsyth in his hospital room two days after the killings.

The other tape was made by the Napodano girls' mother during a telephone conversation she had with Mark Napodano, their father and her ex-husband. She claims the tape shows Napodano is the killer, but he says he only told her he planned the killings and carried them out to get her off his back.

The trial, which was moved from Warren County in central Iowa to Linn County District Court in Cedar Rapids, is in its fourth week.

Legislature OKs bill for new plate

Mike Glover
Associated Press

DES MOINES — The Legislature on Wednesday sent Gov. Terry Branstad a bill authorizing a new automobile license plate designed to raise money for the state's main environmental program.

The move marked an end to the effort to halt the spiraling number of specialty plates. It was accompanied by pot shots at Branstad's plan to issue plates to pay for giving the Statehouse a facelift.

The House gave the bill final approval without debate.

Under the bill, motorists could pay an extra $25 for the special plate to be designed by state officials. The money would go for the state's Resource Enhancement and Protection program, which pays for a variety of state and local environmental efforts. "This is one way to bring in an extra $1 million or so," said Rep. Ron Corbett, R-Cedar Rapids.

He said lawmakers have never been able to find the $30 million a year that was intended for the environmental program. Funding for next year is set at $7 million.

If Branstad approves, the new plate would mark the 47th specialty plate lawmakers have created. There was a brief flurry this year seeking to eliminate the specialty plates.

Police complain that the array of plates is making it increasingly difficult to recognize tags. They have pushed lawmakers to return to a standard plate.

"My effort to end the proliferation of plates is at an end," conceded Rep. Greg Spenner, R-Mount Pleasant, who is leaving the Legislature after this year.

Spenner said the crowning blow to that drive came earlier in the week when Branstad unveiled his plan to create a special plate to pay for Statehouse restoration.

The proposal has been widely dismissed in the Legislature and Spenner also discounted "the governor's crazy idea" as unworkable. "I think it's the most ludicrous idea that's come from downstairs this week," said Spenner.

He said a special plate to honor the state's 150th anniversary — among the most successful of all the specialty plates — has brought in only about $1.5 million in the two years it's been available.

Spenner said $40 million is needed to renovate the Statehouse.

Stopping Leaks: Nuclear Containment and Dams

Abstract

The presentation will focus on three areas.

The Department of Civil and Construction Engineering at Iowa State has three joint research projects underway with the University of Iowa: storm damage to electrical transmission towers, transportation planning, and high value materials from industrial byproducts.

Nuclear containment vessels are designed to prevent leakage of radioactive materials into the environment which may result from an accident within the containment. Research at Iowa State is studying the strength of these vessels with internal pressure and under earthquake conditions.

The locks and dams on our navigable waterways require continual repair and maintenance. A research project underway at Iowa State assesses the current condition of these facilities to help prioritize maintenance needs for the U.S. Army Corps of Engineers.

Biography

Professor Greimann is Professor and Chair of the Civil and Construction Engineering Department at Iowa State University. He is the winner of the 1993 ISU College of Engineering Research Award, and this lecture is scheduled in conjunction with that award. Dr. Greimann is a Fellow of the American Society of Civil Engineers, and his research focuses on reliability of large man-made structures, including reliability of nuclear containment vessels, and maintenance management systems for U.S. Army Corps of Engineers civil structures.

DEATH TOLL CLIMBS

Associated Press

A French paratrooper tries to break off the windshield of a car to remove a body trapped inside in the Rwandan capital of Kigali Tuesday. The person's shoe can be seen outside the glass. An estimated 20,000 people have been slain in a week of savage massacres and violence — the latest eruption of a decades-old feud between the country's two main ethnic groups.

Revolt-stricken Rwanda emptied; opposed forces battling for capital

Angus Shaw
Associated Press

KIGALI, Rwanda — Government troops and rebel soldiers traded artillery fire and fought street by street in downtown Kigali Wednesday as Tutsi rebels pushed to capture Rwanda's capital.

A midday cease-fire was shattered in the afternoon by mortar fire and gun battles. By nightfall, five mortar rounds were falling each minute during a battle for a building near parliament and the capital was anarchic. Mobs of marauding youths roamed in commandeered cars.

The U.N. Security Council, meanwhile, ruled out a full withdrawal of its 2,500-man peacekeeping mission from the Central African nation, where a weeklong ethnic slaughter has left an estimated 20,000 dead.

Foreigners have nearly completed their exodus, emptying Kigali of almost all but international relief workers and the battling government troops and Tutsi rebels.

As many as 20,000 mainly Tutsi fighters of the rebel Rwanda Patriotic Front began moving into the city Tuesday, reinforcing small groups already in the capital. A fragile cease-fire between the Hutu-dominated army and the Tutsi rebels fell apart in the ethnic fighting that followed the president's death in a plane crash last week.

A joint International Red Cross and Doctors Without Borders convoy of nine vehicles carrying two surgical teams and 25 tons of medical supplies reached Kigali from Bujumbura, the capital of neighboring Burundi. Later Wednesday, the Red Cross began feeding Rwandan refugees in Kigali.

The relief convoy was the first to reach the blood-soaked capital since the bloodshed erupted.

Doctors Without Borders field officials said 150,000 to 200,000 people are fleeing in every direction from central Rwanda, where the capital is, to seek safety in Zaire, Burundi, Tanzania and Uganda.

Many of the refugees were walking through the lush green hills, avoiding the main roads for fear of government roadblocks and vehicles carrying soldiers.

On their backs, they carried everything from sacks of food, pots and pans and blankets to, in one case, a woman who had a framed family photograph sticking out of the top of a huge bundle balanced atop her head.

"Many, many people have been killed," said Phillippe Gaillard, head of the International Committee of the Red Cross in Kigali. "Everyone is fighting here. The army is fighting the RPF (rebels). Part of the civilian population is fighting against the other part of the civilian population. The people are fighting against their own brothers, and this is very sad."

In one of the most dramatic evacuations, a heavily armed column of Belgian troops rescued 18 foreigners Wednesday from the Ndere psychiatric hospital north of the airport.

As the convoy arrived, 500 ethnic Tutsi refugees camped in one of the compound's buildings rushed out with their hands up, pleading for help.

But they were left behind along with 200 mentally ill Rwandans living in the hospital.

The Belgians had room for only 18 foreigners — five brothers and two nuns of the Belgian Charite order, along with a mentally disturbed Italian woman, two other Belgians and their families.

The hospital and adjacent convent had been besieged since Tuesday night by Hutu gangs armed with clubs, machetes and rifles.

TUMOR-SUPPRESSING CELL DISCOVERED

Gene offers key to cancer research

Richard Cole
Associated Press

SAN FRANCISCO — A key gene that normally suppresses cancer has been identified by researchers, offering an important new focus for treating the disease, scientists reported Wednesday.

Loss of the gene was detected in a broad range of cancers, including 60 percent of breast cancer cases and 82 percent of one type of brain tumor.

"It's very close to the action of cell division. When it's broken, destroyed, mutated, cell division is left out of control," said Dr. Mark Skolnik of the University of Utah Medical Center.

The newly identified tumor-suppressing gene, p16, appears even more significant than the previously identified p53 gene, which is believed to be a major factor in colon, breast, liver and other cancers, said Alexander Kamb of the Utah-based Myriad Genetics Inc., who helped lead the p16 research.

P16 controls the production of an enzyme that inhibits cell growth in cancer genes, while p53 does not, he said.

Cancer researchers are increasingly turning their attention to suppressor genes, which brake uncontrolled cell division.

Damage to these suppressor cells — by chemicals in cigarette smoke, ultraviolet light, radiation or other carcinogens — may be the chief cause of cancer, Kamb said at the annual meeting of the American Association for Cancer Research in San Francisco.

P16 may not be the "magic bullet" that ties all cancers together, but it's a major step, Kamb said.

"It looks really promising as a major player in human cancers," he said.

Discovery of the p16 gene — called MTS1 by the Utah team — was first announced by David Beach of Cold Spring Harbor Laboratory in New York late last year.

The Utah team researched the gene's role in fighting tumors and is publishing its findings in the April 15 issue of Science.

Beach said he felt p53 and p16 were among a small number of key suppressor cells that cause cancer when they fail. Scientists aren't certain how many such cells exist.

Dr. Michael Kastan of Johns Hopkins University in Baltimore, who wasn't involved in the research, said testing for missing or damaged p16 — along with p53 and other suppressors — offers hope both for diagnosing (and) eventually treating cancers.

"For example, this will add tremendously to deciding how aggressively we need to treat a breast tumor," he said. Women showing greater suppressor-cell damage after an operation would probably get closer monitoring and more therapy, he said.

But Kastan cautioned that the research was still a long way from providing definitive evidence that p16 can be tied to specific cancers.

Israeli bus bombed in suicide retaliation

Neil MacFarquhar
Associated Press

HADERA, Israel — Islamic militants bombed a bus jammed with soldiers and civilians Wednesday, killing six people and wounding 28. It was the second such attack in a week and raised fears of a new wave of violence.

The Palestinian militants, who oppose the Israel-PLO peace talks, vowed they would carry out at least three more suicide bombings as revenge for the killing of 30 Palestinians Feb. 25 in a Hebron mosque.

Officials tried quickly to reassure the Israeli public, whose support for the peace talks is largely based on the belief they will bring security inside Israel's pre-1967 borders.

Prime Minister Yitzhak Rabin sent more troops to seal off the occupied Gaza Strip and the West Bank, where authorities believe the bomb was constructed, but said he would continue with peace talks even in the face of future attacks.

"Hamas and Islamic Jihad have come to the conclusion they have to strike ... inside Israel because the dividend is Israeli opposition to the peace process," Rabin said in remarks broadcast nationwide. "The real answer is to show an agreement can be carried out and there will be a different reality."

He referred to Hamas, which claimed responsibility for Wednesday's bombing in this coastal city and for a bombing April 6 in Afula that killed eight. Islamic Jihad is a smaller group that also carries out attacks.

The morning explosion at the central bus station in this coastal city midway between Tel Aviv and Haifa reverberated across the country at the start of an extended holiday weekend, when Israel first mourns its 17,955 war dead on Remembrance Day and then celebrates its 1948 creation on Independence Day.

Police said they suspect a West Bank Palestinian either carried the bomb in a bag or rigged a pipe bomb to his waist and ignited it after climbing in the back door of the public bus, which stops repeatedly on its route from Tiberias across the country to Tel Aviv.

A second bomb left on a bench outside the bus was timed to go off at 11 a.m., when sirens sounded nationwide for two minutes in memory of the war dead and virtually everyone stands at attention. It was exploded harmlessly by police.

Bus passengers said someone outside had noticed an abandoned black bag, suspected it contained a bomb and was yelling at the driver to move the bus when the bomb inside the vehicle went off.

Blood, flesh, glass and burning metal flew in all directions.

"Suddenly there was a roar, I felt things hitting me from all sides," said Rachel Muallam, 50, from her hospital bed. "The man sitting next to me was either wounded or killed. He was completely mangled, covered in blood, his head lolling."

Police said five of the six people killed, including the attacker, had been identified. They include Rahamim Mazgawker, a 33-year-old Ethiopian immigrant from Hadera; David Moyal, 27, from Tel Aviv, who was riding the bus as part of the training to become a driver; and Sgt. Ari Perlmutter, 19, of Ovot. Names of the others were withheld until their relatives could be told.

The injured included two Israeli Arabs and 18 soldiers, Israel radio said. Most suffered slight injuries.

There were about 70 people on the bus when the bomb exploded.

Associated Press

Israeli police demolition experts cover the body of a victim of a bomb that exploded in an Israeli bus in Hadera Wednesday. The Islamic extremist group Hamas claimed responsibility for the bombing which killed six and wounded 28.

The Islamic Resistance Movement, or Hamas, claimed responsibility for the attack, saying it was to avenge the Hebron mosque massacre. The announcement was made over mosque loudspeakers in the Gaza Strip, but the customary leaflet bearing the attacker's name did not appear.

Mohammed Nazzal, the Hamas representative in Jordan, said the group's military wing, Izzeddin Al-Qassam Brigades, was responsible. PLO leader Yasser Arafat would not specifically condemn the attack, but he denounced violence by both sides.

"These attacks target only the innocents on both sides, Israelis and Palestinians, and serve only to hit at the heart of the peace process," he said in Strasbourg, France.

Israeli Arabs were among the victims in both Wednesday's attack and the suicide car bombing in Afula.

WAR ON DRUGS

Who's responsible?

There is a popular commercial on television now warning our children against the perils of drug abuse. It features a teen-age hoodlum wearing gold chains and an athletic suit — and black-skinned, of course — selling drugs to children. The gist is to warn our youth away from thugs like this. It is a part of the media blitz in the so-called "war on drugs."

There is another kind of blitz going on here, too. The message that African participation in the illegal drug trade is equal to African causation is implicit in these commercials. Ultimately, the black drug dealers are responsible for the product they push on other blacks in the American ghettos and on "unsuspecting" whites in American suburbs. This not so subtle message perpetuated in the media is undoubtedly false.

The message that African participation in the illegal drug trade is equal to African causation is implicit in these commercials.

Africans in America do not farm the fields in South America where the plants are grown. We do not own the airplanes or boats on which the raw materials are smuggled in. We do not own the warehouses where the materials are stored and prepared for distribution. We do not make the guns, nor do we own the gun stores where they are sold and that are used to protect this major investment.

In short, black people generally are not involved in any drug transaction except the common and relatively insignificant transaction between the lowly entry-level street dealer and his even lower constituents. The ghetto black street dealer portrayed in these commercials and considered by many to be the evil force behind all drug activity in America is insignificant because the chain of events has snowballed into an unstoppable force by now.

When do we make war on the pimps and pushers in government and corporate businesses who are making a financial and spiritual killing on the drug market? The so-called "war on drugs," as long as it is limited to "busts" and "raids" in the black communities, is nothing more than a continuation of the "war on blacks."

Responsible hunters

To the Editor:

I would like to address the April 1 guest opinion by Amy Spencer, "A battle over the spirit of nature."

Amy, how could you do such a disfavor to a wild animal? If you wanted to protect this deer you adopted, you should have given it a chance to survive. Treating it like a domesticated animal was the same as signing its death warrant.

The deer population of Iowa and North America is huge. Without predators (hunting), the population would explode. In this state there is no natural way to keep the population down to healthy numbers. Coyotes do not hunt deer unless they have the advantage through starvation, injury or disease. Hunting is necessary to ensure the health of wildlife. The Department of Natural Resources could not possibly control the populations without hunters.

Hunting is legal, and although methods differ, most hunters make every attempt to make a clean kill and to recover their game. However, you have every right to complain if you were harassed. Trespassing is against the law and pointing a loaded gun at someone is a crime, as is poaching. The people you described are not hunters, they are criminals. The future of hunting will have to rely on responsible hunters.

Sportsmen contribute more money and time to save natural habitats than all other groups combined. It is irresponsible for people to hoard nature. You cannot treat your property and animals like a petting zoo and expect it to thrive and flourish. State biologists set quotas for all game animals that are hunted to ensure healthy numbers and healthy animals. You should consider adopting a hunter instead of a deer. A real hunter could help preserve your property and could even suggest ways to enhance both the number of deer on your property and introduce other species, such as turkey and wood ducks.

If you really think deer are in danger of extinction, drive Interstate 80 anywhere in Iowa. The carnage left by cars and semis on any given day is incredible. The amount of animals that are hit and run off to die dwarfs the amount crippled by hunters. It would have been a much finer thing had these deer made it to someone's dinner table than to have died in vain.

Campus buildings

To the Editor:

At the risk of nit-picking, I'd like to correct a small factual error in Jim Snyder's April 7 article on campus termite infestation. Snyder was misinformed that Seashore Hall is "more than 100 years old." Actually, the oldest sections of Seashore Hall were built in 1887, opening in 1898 as the first University Hospital. Additions were built in 1908, 1912 and 1914, so the areas affected by termites might be considerably less than 100 years old.

The nearby Old Music Building, also mentioned in the article, was built about 1917-18 as an isolation hospital for people with contagious diseases. These buildings served as hospitals until 1928, when the new General Hospital opened on the west side of the Iowa River.

The old University Hospital, known for decades as East Hall, was renamed in the early 1980s for Carl Seashore. Seashore was the longtime Graduate College dean who established at Iowa a separate department of psychology, which formerly had been a branch of the field of philosophy. He died in 1949.

TOM LINDSEY

DI columnist Lindsey takes own life

IOWA CITY (BS) — Authorities have identified the body of a man whom they believe committed suicide with the intention of interlocking souls in a state of nirvana with fellow artist and former rock 'n' roller Kurt Cobain. The body of Tom Lindsey, columnist for The Daily Iowan, was discovered early Wednesday morning by his landlord after neighbors complained of pungent orders exuding from under Lindsey's apartment door.

Preliminary reports from the coroner's office indicate that Lindsey died from self-induced lead poisoning. A barrage of broken No. 2 pencils and pencil shavings were found around Lindsey's body, which was hunched over a word processor. Forensic experts also ran across a number of puncture wounds and lead streaks on Lindsey's arms, further confirming their suspicions as to the cause of death.

While running tape around the corpse, an investigator inadvertently bumped the PRINT command on the word processor, which in turn printed up a suicide note linking Lindsey's suicide to Kurt Cobain. The following is a reprint of Lindsey's suicide note:

To Whom it May Concern, if indeed it should concern anyone,

In order to fully empathize with Kurt Cobain and understand his motives for taking his own life, I felt it necessary to take my own life and join Kurt in his quest for nirvana and perfect blessedness.

Like Cobain, I've lost my passion to write and create columns which challenge the readers' intellect and direct their insights one step higher toward nirvana. In fact, my passion for writing is so completely tapped that I'm having difficulty composing this suicide note. As my passion slowly fails me, I pray that somehow my ingrained grammatical upbringing will carry me through to the end of this letter.

Like Cobain, I can no longer deal with the overwhelming burdens of fame. I long for the day when I can walk into a burger joint, order my lunch without the cashier asking, "Say, aren't you the guy that writes them editorials," and then proceed to sit down and engulf my meal without having to sign autographs on napkins for probing saturated-fat enthusiasts.

I'm tired of opening up the DI every Thursday, turning to the Viewpoints Page and staring at an article I merely pretend to endorse with my photo in the corner. Like Cobain, I'm tired of PRETENDING!

Like Cobain, I feel the pressure to create within set deadlines. Even now, as I write this suicide note and the lead fills my blood stream, I feel the urgency to finish the letter before it's too late and my deadline passes.

After the announcement of Lindsey's "apparent" suicide, sales and subscriptions for the DI increased dramatically. People rushed to newsstands with the hope of getting their hands on the final published column (which, incidentally, contains a reprint of the suicide note) of Lindsey's career — of his life. Community members were reportedly rummaging through recycling bins, scurrying for back issues of the DI, even issues that don't contain Lindsey's columns.

"It's crazy ... pure bedlam I tell ya," said local citizen Jon Uplevy. "I got people bangin' on my door and askin' if they can look through my cat's litter box for old newspapers."

"Tom Lindsey was the closest thing his generation ever came to the likes of Ernest Hemingway, or Virginia Woolf for that matter," contends literary critic Alex Bourbon from Gathers No Moss. "And if you can't see this from reading between the lines, then you must be illiterate."

In a subsequent tribute to Lindsey, LTV (Literary Television) showcased a one-hour program which highlighted the works of Lindsey as a columnist. The program was narrated by William S. Burroughs; as he read the works, he drew from Lindsey's choice of suicide as a means of evoking passion. The program ran 24 consecutive hours, and LTV plans to rerun the program until the novelty of Lindsey's suicide wears off.

The day after the tragedy, community members gathered on the Pentacrest at the UI campus for a candlelight vigil which commemorated Lindsey's accomplishments as a columnist and as a human being. A copy of the suicide note was mounted on a platform which faced onlooking mourners, who were circled around a bonfire of burning newspapers. They built the fire in a symbolic gesture, hoping to communicate with Lindsey's spirit by sending him a smoke signal from below.

A few moments later, noted pop-psychologist Buck Turner took the stage and addressed the crowd with a black and gold bullhorn: "Your attention please! Your attention please! What in God's name are you people doing? How can you stand there and glorify this man's selfish deed? Can't you see that you're only perpetuating the problem by sensationalizing his cowardly act of suicide? You should be ashamed of yourselves. You should be condemning Tom Lindsey's actions. You should be dancing on his grave with spiked golfing shoes and spitting on his tombstone."

"By standing here like a bunch of zombies with burning candles in your hands, you're sending out the message that suicide is OK and candle wax is overabundant — and that afterwards, the entire world will mourn your tragic loss. C'mon people, get a grip and read between the lines before some prospective young columnist whose duties at the high school become burdensome decides to take the easy way out!"

With Buck Turner's final exhortation, the bonfire went out and the ashes slowly smoldered.

(Disclaimer: In no way does this column condone the act of suicide, nor is it to be interpreted in a literal sense. For those of you who did interpret it that way and are concerned about Tom Lindsey's whereabouts, don't worry. Rest assured, Tom Lindsey is mentally stable and doing well. In fact, it's safe to assume that he's probably in front of his word processor, pecking away at the keyboard in a race against next week's column deadline. Furthermore, all sharp objects and pencils have been removed from his apartment as a precautionary measure.)

Study conclusions merit some skepticism

In a recent editorial, a Daily Iowan writer was critical of the much ballyhooed sexual harassment study by the university's Council on the Status of Women, noting among other things its poor response rate. (About 60 percent of those who received the mail questionnaire did not reply.)

I, too, was struck by the study's weakness and also by the rather strenuous efforts of its authors to push certain conclusions at their press conference. Much was made, for example, of the finding that while only 15 percent of the respondents said they had been sexually harassed at the university in the past five years, a full 55 percent claimed they had experienced "unwanted behaviors" of the kind cited in the university's harassment policy.

In interpreting these figures, one must think carefully about the nonrespondents. What statement have they made by not returning the questionnaire? The importance of this question is highlighted by the fact that while 15 percent of the respondents claim sexual harassment, only 6 percent of the full sample make such a claim. This smaller figure does not suggest that there is no harassment problem at the UI, only that it may be much smaller than the council's press releases imply.

The same point can be made with respect to the 55 percent who supposedly have experienced unwanted behaviors, a figure which reduces to just over 22 percent if the full subject pool is used as the base. I say "supposedly" here because of bias in the wording of the questionnaire. The respondents were not asked if the listed behaviors were unwanted or objectionable; instead unwantedness is stipulated in the question itself. Respondents are only asked about the frequency of occurrence. Thus, if one reported hearing an "explicit" joke or anecdote sometime in the past year, this would be counted toward the 55 percent total, whether or not offense was actually given.

I am currently teaching an honors seminar on the use and abuse of statistical evidence and had thought that the council study would be a nice example for the class. But when I asked the council for their data so that my class could reanalyze them, I was told that they are confidential and unavailable! Thinking that the council mistakenly believed I wanted the original questionnaire protocols, I explained that I sought only the numerical data with all identifying information deleted. That made no difference. The data were unavailable because "the release of the data with any demographic information leaves open the possibility of identifying the respondent."

To understand the emptiness of this claim, one must look at the broad demographic categories that were employed in the questionnaire. One is gender. Another is university status: undergraduate, graduate student, merit staff, tenured faculty member, etc. A third is the vice president overseeing your work unit. With a single exception (which I suggested the council eliminate from the data), narrow categories were not used. It would have been a trivial assignment to produce a version of the data set in which almost all demographics were included but respondent confidentiality was still fully protected. I leave to your readers to decide why the council was unwilling to do that.

There is something especially appalling about research secrecy in a public university. It undermines a crucial requirement for scholarly work: peer review of any and all empirical claims. And, of course, this violation is made worse when the research is publicly funded (and is being used to influence institutional policy). The only reasonable response to such secrecy is skepticism about the entire investigation.

Although some incidents of sexual harassment surely do occur on this campus, neither the size nor the nature of the overall problem can be determined from the council study. And it goes without saying that no reputable university administration will base its policies on the unverified claims of lobbying groups.

Douglas Madsen, a professor of political science, submitted this guest opinion for publication.

BEVERLY HILLS — Singer Courtney Love and her husband, Kurt Cobain, were found dead Wednesday.

Cobain, the 27-year-old lead singer for the band Nirvana, was found with a shot to the head. His body was found in the Seattle home of his wife and their daughter, Frances.

Love told Seattle station KIRO on Wednesday that Cobain was using a knife to kill himself. She was found next to him. Love told the FBI she had her own pistol but wanted to see if Nirvana fans that anything.

Beverly Hills Police said Love was found Thursday at a hospital session and taken to Harborview Medical Center because of heroin overdose.

She was released Saturday after a three-day investigation of possible drug-related substance.

Questionable Chemicals

The eight chemicals among cigarette additives most questioned by tobacco opponents:

Megastigmatrienone: a flavoring tobacco companies contend is found naturally in grapefruit juice and considered safe by the food industry. FDA couldn't confirm that.

Dehydromenthofuroolactone: a flavoring tobacco companies say is found in peppermint and considered safe by the food industry. FDA couldn't confirm that.

Ethyl furoate: found naturally in coffee, kiwi and peanuts. FDA hasn't formally ruled on the issue, but said the food industry considers it safe. But a toxicologist last week said the chemical can cause liver damage in laboratory animals.

Maltitol: a sweetener used in chewing gum and diabetic candy. The food industry considers it safe, but FDA hasn't ruled on a petition questioning the safety.

Scaralolide: a synthetic form of a naturally occurring tobacco element. The food industry considers it safe.

Tobacco extract: used to boost flavor of reconstituted tobacco; companies say it does contain a small amount of nicotine.

Ammonia: a processing aid. FDA considers certain forms of ammonia safe in foods but couldn't comment on the type in cigarettes.

Methoprene: an insecticide that toxicologists say is biodegradable and works by stopping insects from growing to adulthood. Tobacco companies say FDA allows it in dried fruits, but FDA couldn't confirm that.

Associated Press

WASHINGTON — Under intense pressure from Congress, the nation's biggest tobacco companies released a top-secret list of chemicals in cigarettes — including some also found in candy, coffee and fruit.

But critics say cigarettes aren't off the hook. Amid the wholesome-sounding descriptions made public Wednesday are some chemicals that do pose safety questions, and tobacco opponents say companies still hide how much of these chemicals are in each puff.

"We really don't know the health effects of smoking a cigarette with a very specific quantity of chemicals added in a specific combination," said Rep. Ron Wyden, D-Ore., who vowed to press the companies for more information.

"It's disingenuous at best to contend the absence or presence of certain chemicals means that cigarettes are safe," said Victor Zonana, spokesman for the Department of Health and Human Services.

Companies have long opposed releasing the ingredients for fear competitors would steal their recipes, but officials said Wednesday they now want to prove they're not hiding anything sinister.

"We've been misunderstood, misrepresented and we want the American public to know there is not any misrepresentation," said Dr. Robert Suber, a toxicologist for R.J. Reynolds, which spearheaded the unveiling.

"We decided the noise level got to the point where we had to put those concerns about trade secrets aside," added Reynolds spokesman David Fischel.

The release came one day before a congressional hearing on the content of cigarettes and whether the Food and Drug Administration should regulate them as drugs.

Key to the FDA's decision is proving whether cigarette companies manipulate nicotine levels. On Wednesday's list of additives is tobacco extract, which contains a small amount of nicotine. But Suber contended the amount is too tiny to justify FDA action.

Also Wednesday, Rep. Henry Waxman, D-Calif., released a 1981 article written by a tobacco executive stating that companies specially blend tobacco to maintain high nicotine while reducing tar. The executive, Alexander Spears of Lorillard Tobacco Co., last month testified before Waxman's health subcommittee that companies don't do that, saying nicotine levels naturally drop when tar drops.

"Once again tobacco industry representatives have not only withheld information, but they have misrepresented the truth," Waxman said.

Spears didn't return a phone call seeking comment.

Tobacco is the biggest ingredient in cigarettes, and scientists have shown that tobacco itself and chemicals in cigarette smoke are lethal. The government estimates that 400,000 Americans die from cigarettes every year.

Report: supermodel, rocker split after nine years

NEW YORK — Billy Joel and Christie Brinkley are separating after nine years of marriage, CNN reported Wednesday.

The supermodel and her singer / songwriter husband sent a joint statement to Mitchell Fink, a People magazine columnist who contributes to CNN's "Show Biz Today" segment.

Further details were not immediately available. Calls from the Associated Press to their representatives late Wednesday were not returned.

The couple has an 8-year-old daughter, Alexa Ray.

Brinkley, 40, survived a serious helicopter crash earlier this month while "heliskiing" with friends near Telluride, Colo. Joel, 44, postponed a concert in Kansas City the next night to accompany his wife back to their Long Island oceanfront estate, outside New York City.

People magazine featured Brinkley on the cover of their April 18 edition. She said the April 1 accident gave her a deeper appreciation of her family.

CLAIMS HUSBAND WAS USING HEROIN

Wife arrested day before Cobain killed himself; says she was high

Niko Price
Associated Press

BEVERLY HILLS, Calif. — Singer Courtney Love was arrested and examined for a suspected drug overdose the day before her husband, grunge-rock star Kurt Cobain, was found dead, police said Wednesday.

Cobain, the 27-year-old singer for the band Nirvana, killed himself with a shotgun blast to the head. His body was found Friday at the Seattle home he shared with his wife and their 20-month-old daughter, Frances Bean.

Love told Seattle television station KIRO on Wednesday that Cobain was using heroin when he killed himself. She said narcotics were found next to his body.

Love told the TV station she has had her own problems with drugs but wanted to send a message to Nirvana fans that drugs don't solve anything.

Beverly Hills Police Sgt. Robert Smith said Love was arrested last Thursday at a hotel for drug possession and taken to Century City Hospital because of a suspected heroin overdose.

She was released from the hospital the same day and booked for investigation of possession of a controlled substance, possession of drug paraphernalia and possession of a hypodermic needle, Smith said.

"She was released after posting $10,000 bail later that day, he said. Arraignment was set for May 5.

Love is a singer with the group Hole. Hole's new album, which appeared in stores this week, is titled Live Through This.

Love was interviewed off-camera

"Kurt was very depressed. Some people just have thin skins. He tried things like Prozac, but opiates were what made him feel best."

Courtney Love

and the TV station broadcast a transcript of her quotes. She said Cobain was not an addict, but used heroin occasionally.

"Kurt was very depressed," KIRO quoted her as saying. "Some people just have thin skins. He tried things like Prozac, but opiates were what made him feel best."

The station also spoke to Nirvana bassist Krist Novoselic, who downplayed the importance of heroin to Cobain.

"It wasn't the dope, it was something internal," he was quoted as saying. "If it hadn't been heroin, it would have been booze or cappuccino. Drugs were just a small part of Kurt."

The Seattle Post-Intelligencer reported Wednesday that police records show Cobain was hospitalized last May after a heroin overdose.

On Tuesday, the Los Angeles Times reported that Cobain had attempted suicide last month, when he was hospitalized in Italy in a drug- and alcohol-induced coma.

Cobain had left a suicide note, the contents of which were not available, the Times reported.

A suicide note was found near his body Friday. He wrote, "I haven't felt the excitement for so many years," Love said.

The medical examiner has said the results of tests to see if Cobain had drugs in his blood will take several weeks. Cobain had been missing for several days when his body was found, and police are still trying to piece together his last days.

More than 8 million of Nirvana's records have sold since 1991. Cobain, considered to have been a poet for his generation, wrote of anger, frustration and despair.

TWO WOUNDED

Man opens fire, kills two at N.C. fiber-optic plant

Julianne Basinger
Associated Press

RESEARCH TRIANGLE PARK, N.C. — A man stormed into a fiber-optics plant Wednesday and opened fire with a 9 mm handgun, killing two former co-workers and wounding two others. The gunman later killed himself.

"We looked out over the plant floor — we saw people just running at random. And it was just a pop, pop, pop. We never did see the guy," Sid Gregory, an employee at Sumitomo Electric Fiber Optics Corp., told WRAL-TV.

Authorities evacuated the building after the shooting and spent more than six hours searching the grounds of the Japanese-owned plant before finding the gunman's body behind cabinets on the top floor.

The gunman, identified as Ladislav Galik, killed himself, said Capt. Deputy Walter Lawrence of the Durham County Sheriff's Department. Authorities said he opened fire with the 9 mm pistol and was also carrying a small caliber handgun.

The shooting happened in the fiber-optics inspection division a little before 8 a.m., while hundreds of employees were in the plant.

"When I heard the first shot, that's when I looked up, and I saw the guy with the gun in his hand and running, and I said, 'Oh my God, he's going to shoot everybody in here,' and I just took off running," Patricia Cardinez told WRAL.

Gunned down at point-blank range were the man's former supervisor and a woman who had filed a sexual harassment complaint against him, said Bob Martin, an independent contract writer who was working at Sumitomo on Wednesday. Police wouldn't confirm his account. The names of the dead weren't immediately released.

Antalik had worked for Litespec Inc., based at the Sumitomo plant, for just over two years before quitting in August.

"He resigned on his own because he had some personal grievances with some other employees, that is, his co-workers," said Basant Tariyal, chief executive officer of Litespec.

He declined to detail the nature of the disagreements. As the search continued into early afternoon with no sign of the suspect, other companies nearby canceled lunch hours and locked their doors.

Sumitomo employees were sent off the property and weren't allowed into the parking lot to get their vehicles. Shuttle buses took some to a Burroughs Wellcome Co. cafeteria nearby and relatives picked up others. Many huddled together in a pouring morning rain just outside the plant to talk about the shooting.

SPRING FEVER?

MORE SUCCESSFUL STRATEGIES FOR COPING WITH SPRINGTIME ACADEMIC STRESSES

Part 2 in a series of 4
Watch for others, Thursdays in April!

Kelli Ettelbrick
Dentistry

Laura Borgelt
Pharmacy

What is your favorite springtime activity?

Anything that gets me outdoors!

Playing outside. I try to get out about five times a week.

How do you balance academics and a social life?

In dentistry, we have to study a lot. We tend to get nutty to clear our heads for a while. Sometimes we go bowling.

Academics come first, but there are times when being with friends helps reduce stress. You need both to do well in school.

Do you have any special study tips or habits?

Making flashcards, giving it my all. Definitely, taking a break. I'd go nuts if I studied all the time!

I study 50 minutes on, 10 off, so I get a break period. I sometimes study outside, which can be distracting, but I like the environment!

When spring fever strikes, how do you get motivated for academics?

I realize what I want more in life — my future goals are more important than the weather of the day.

Studying is a habit for me, so motivation isn't too hard. Getting in the habit is important, then I can organize time to indulge in spring fever.

Sponsored by a grant from the U.S. Department of Education Fund for the Improvement of Post Secondary Education.

A US Department of Education survey of more than 70,000 college students shows that 41% of respondents do not drink in an average week. Of those who do drink, 74.6% drink fewer than five drinks per week. The BE HIP professional health colleges program, Health Iowa, and Student Health Service encourage you to think about your long-term goals when making choices about alcohol use.

POLICY

sor Peter Feldstein said the policy has had a subtle effect on the university.

"The whole episode has had a chilling effect that we have not noticed, but that has affected us subconsciously," he said. "It's hard to define exactly."

Feldstein, who teaches photography courses, said he hasn't changed his class content because he doesn't show anything he thinks could be considered offensive. Some of the photographs he includes do show genitals, but those are not the main focus of the pieces, he said.

"Most students are intelligent enough to approach things with an open mind," he said. "But it only takes one. That's the chilling part."

Often he shows photos in class, then thinks about the policy afterward.

"Usually after I do it, I think, 'Oh my God, I hope this didn't offend anyone,'" he said. "Some people are just overly sensitive to some things. But I'm not going to change anything."

UI Associate Professor Lauren Rabinovitz, who teaches in the American studies and communication studies departments, said she has only noticed one difference among her students.

"The students just laugh at the absurdity of the policy," she said. "They're pretty intelligent about this."

Rabinovitz is currently teaching a class on women, consumerism and romance. One of the romance novels studied in the class is Kathleen Woodiwiss' "The Flame and the Flower." Many of the mothers of her current students probably have read the novel, which includes an explicit rape scene, Rabinovitz said.

"I'm in the curious position of advising students about material that most middle-class women are exposed to when they go to the grocery store," she said.

Although Rabinovitz has not heard of any student complaints, she said that may be because the policy has only been in place for a relatively short time. Like Feldstein, she also used the word "chilling" to describe the effect on the teaching community.

But UI Professor Alan MacVey, chairman of the theatre arts department, sees nothing wrong with the policy.

"I actually think it's perfectly acceptable to have the faculty let the students know what will be happening in the class so there won't be any surprises," he said.

Faculty in the department are being sure to comply with the policy, but he has heard no complaints from students or faculty.

"No one's brought anything to my attention at this point," MacVey said. "There haven't been any major changes in courses that I have known of. People have respected the ruling."

In his Art of the Theatre class, MacVey gave students information about an upcoming play at the beginning of the semester.

"It's not in the slightest a play that should offend, but I'm just being careful," he said.

After the intense debate about the issue, many people are ready to focus on other things, Rawlings said.

"But I think people still have concerns about the policy because it sets up a new expectation that's troublesome to some," he said. "On the other hand, I think many faculty members are pleased that it's been resolved and we can concentrate on teaching and scholarship for a while."

So far, Rawlings said he has not heard of any major teaching problems.

"I hear a little bit of people being uncertain on just how to interpret this, what it means they have to do that they didn't have to do before in the classroom, and that makes people uncomfortable," he said.

"But I think most people go on teaching the classes the same as they did before. It's my hope that it's not been too intrusive, but I know to some it has been intrusive and troubling."

Regents President Marvin Berenstein said there are no plans to revisit the issue anytime in the near future, despite the efforts of opponents like CAF.

"I think basically it's doing the job we intended," he said. "Because the nature of the policy was expanded to include all offensive material, rather than just sexually explicit things, I think there have been some questions as to what is offensive, but the university seems to be handling that appropriately."

SKATERS

not a good reason to prohibit skaters.

"The damage to the parking ramp where we skate is already done, and I don't see what they're going to prevent," he said.

Meyers was charged with criminal trespassing twice at the UNI campus and had to volunteer 120 hours of community service for skateboarding in prohibited areas. The threat of receiving the charge again will not stop him from skating.

"I've been doing it too long to quit," he said.

Fellow skateboarder Mark Perkins does not plan to stop skating on the UI campus either.

"We skate behind Burge, right next to a basketball court that gets broken rims and torn nets," Perkins said. "But people don't make students stop playing basketball just because of damage, so I don't think we should have to stop skating either."

Perkins called skateboarding a freedom of expression, although he knows it can cause damage.

"We've made the Pappajohn Building look ugly, and I can understand why they'd complain about that," Perkins said. "But we don't get in the way of students, and skateboarding is what sets me apart from everybody else."

VIRTUAL STRAW

said the sky's the limit.

"We're going to be doubling the number of courses and hopefully the number of students for the next three years," he said. By 1998, the department of continuing education expects more than 1,500 students to be taking UI courses without ever setting foot in Iowa City.

"It has already and will continue to change our culture," Bill Decker, director of the Office of Information Technology, said. Decker said he hopes the process of change is as democratic as possible.

"We want to make sure that as this new technology permeates our society, that it does so as uniformly as possible," Decker said. "One of the big challenges is to make sure that it enhances the democratic process instead of hinders it."

Not since the advent of electricity has something been this big, Decker said. The changes are just beginning though.

Up until now, the U.S. government has been the key underwriter of the Internet. However, like so many things in the United States, the future of the information superhighway lies in the hands of private industry.

"The government is going to be removing itself from the scene over the next four years," Decker said. "The Internet as it exists today will become a conglomerate of private corporate parts."

Users will definitely see these changes over the next few years, he said.

"The cost will go up. We may need to assign the costs more directly to the uses. It may be charged more like a telephone call," Decker said.

On the bright side, he said, cruising the highway will also get substantially more friendly.

"It will get increasingly easier to use," he said. "There will be some level of human interface over the Internet."

These "navigation tools," as Decker called them, will act like road maps to a world of knowledge. Someday, he said, information kiosks, touch-screen stations with picture-based menus, may be as common as pay phones.

"Homeless people or people from out of town could go to one of these to get information or find help," Decker said. "You'd like to think we could make a difference by making all this information available."

But that is becoming the central question in this evolving cyberworld, where information is worth its weight in gold and access to it will be the difference between being a part of society and being excluded from it.

How big a deal is this Internet?

To put it in perspective, roughly 2 million people have joined on-line computer services such as CompuServe, America On-Line and Prodigy, clubs, so to speak. They offer a chance for their members to network with thousands of other users in addition to offering services such as at-home shopping and multiplayer interactive games.

These, however, are privately owned companies' efforts at providing smaller alternatives to the Internet and are relatively only a drop in a much larger virtual ocean.

Worldwide, more than 2 million people start using the Internet for the first time each month and it's growing exponentially.

"It's definitely going to change people's lives," Bill Blough, general manager of TCI Iowa City, said. "There's no question about it. It's not a matter of if, it's just when."

Blough said locally TCI is going to start rebuilding its own cable network with fiber optics later this year. This, he said, means 500 channels of interactive television, home banking and grocery shopping are only a few years away.

"We've finally taken it from the talking stage and into the doing stage," Blough said. "All you have to do is put your imagination to work and chances are that it will be possible."

Salary cap increase

NEW YORK (AP) — The NFL's salary cap will increase another $400,000 a year when the latest audit is completed at $34.6 million per player.

The cap, which is set to rise to $35.1 million prior to the March 24, 1994, league meeting, had been increased to $34.2 million and then added the additional $400,000.

Under the labor agreement reached in 1993, the cap is set to rise 64 percent of the previous year's cap.

Belger breaks pitching record; Iowa wins 12-7

Sophomore right-hander Kurt Belger broke the school record for saves in a season, earning his fifth in a 12-7 win at Northern Iowa Wednesday.

Kurt Belger

The record was held by Brent Hartman, who claimed four saves in 1993. Belger, who held a 4.50 ERA going into the game, allowed four hits, three runs and three walks and struck out two in 2½ innings.

Junior Jeremy Lewis hit a three-run home run to give the Hawkeyes a 3-1 lead in the second. Designated hitter Curtis Reed's grand slam and Matt Ostrom's solo home run pulled the Hawkeyes ahead 11-4 in the eighth.

Sophomore Matt Austin (1-0) picked up the win. Hawkeye pitchers gave up 17 hits and the Panthers left 12 runners stranded. Northern Iowa committed five errors.

Iowa softball splits doubleheader

The Iowa softball team split a doubleheader with Western Illinois Wednesday, dropping the first game 5-3 before taking the nightcap 8-1 in eight innings.

Freshman Kari Knopf hit her second collegiate home run in the first inning of the first game, while teammate Katy Morgan picked up her first homer of the season in the sixth. The Hawkeyes stranded nine runners.

Iowa coach Gayle Blevins was not happy that the Hawkeyes committed three errors in the first contest.

"We create opportunities for other teams. The mistakes are by us, and that's really frustrating. At this point in the season, we expect a better level of performance," Blevins said.

Karen Jackson (16-5) relieved Iowa starter Alisha Nelson in the fifth, allowing two hits and three runs with one walk in the loss.

Jackson came back in the nightcap with a six-hit, 10-strikeout performance. The Hawkeyes put seven runs on the board in the eighth inning.

Ohio State star to face drunk driving charges

LIMA, Ohio (AP) — A trial date has not been set for a drunken driving case against Ohio State basketball player Greg Simpson.

Simpson, 20, appeared at a preliminary hearing in Lima Municipal Court on charges of driving while intoxicated, driving without lights on and underage possession of alcohol.

Judge Rickard Workman Wednesday heard evidence during a conference with lawyers.

Police arrested Simpson, the Big Ten's 1993 Freshman of the Year, March 17.

He was charged with drunk driving based on observations by the arresting officer. Simpson later took a blood-alcohol test, which showed his alcohol content was 0.08 percent, below the legal limit of 0.10 percent.

Salary cap increases

NEW YORK (AP) — The NFL's salary cap went up by another $400,000 on Wednesday when the latest audit by the NFL Players Association set the figure at $34.6 million per team.

The cap, which is in its first year, on Feb. 18 was set at $33.8 million prior to auditing. On March 24, the league announced that it had been increased to $34.2 million and the latest audit added the additional money.

Under the labor agreement reached in 1993, the cap is set at 64 percent of defined gross revenue.

Houston agrees to ship Moon to Minnesota

Michael A. Lutz

Associated Press

HOUSTON — Warren Moon, the triggerman of the Houston Oilers' run-and-shoot offense who led the club to seven straight playoff appearances, is heading to the Minnesota Vikings.

Oilers owner Bud Adams and Vikings president Roger Headrick confirmed Wednesday they had reached an agreement in principle on a deal that would make the Oilers' most prominent player a Viking.

"As of yesterday, it wasn't that close, but right now I have kind of mixed feelings," Moon said. "Everybody knows I wanted to finish my career here, but also knowing there's another team that wants me is a challenge. You can give your all if you know the fans are behind you."

Houston reportedly will receive two draft picks — a fourth-rounder

Wilson returns to Saints with 2-year deal

Associated Press

NEW ORLEANS — Wade Wilson, courted as a backup quarterback by several clubs, agreed to a two-year contract Wednesday with the New Orleans Saints, the team he played for last season.

The 34-year-old journeyman presumably will be paid far less than the $2.8 million he received in 1993.

He probably will play behind Jim Everett, who was obtained March 18 from the Los Angeles Rams, or one of the Saints' other two quarterbacks.

Steve Walsh and Mike Buck backed up Wilson last year before Wilson got injured in the 14th game. He was cut by the Saints on the day they obtained Everett.

Team spokesman Rusty Kasmiersky said he did not know when Wilson will sign his contract.

Wilson has an unlisted telephone number in Dallas, where he lives in the off-season, and could not be reached immediately for comment.

The Saints were among three teams negotiating during the off-season with Wilson, who has played for three teams in 13 seasons.

Detroit reportedly offered Wilson $1 million to be Scotty Mitchell's backup and Dallas offered him $700,000 to back up Troy Aikman after Bernie Kosar signed with the Miami Dolphins Tuesday. The Saints' offer was said to be between what Detroit and Dallas were offering.

New Orleans brought Wilson in to replace Bobby Hebert last season. Wilson got the Saints off to a 5-0 start. However, the Saints won only three of their final eight games and finished 8-8.

this year and a conditional third-rounder in 1995.

Moon's departure ends a 10-year era in which the Oilers became one of the most potent offensive units in the NFL and Moon became one of the league's most prolific passers.

The NFL's $34.2 million salary cap helped bring Moon's Oiler career to an end. It happened rapidly on Wednesday after Moon's

Iowa State's Orr to resolve coaching future today

Associated Press

AMES — Iowa State men's basketball coach Johnny Orr said Wednesday he's not sure if he'll stay or leave the Cyclone program.

"I'm not going to make up my mind until I go out there tomorrow," Orr said. "It's going to be, when I get up there, I've got 2 envelopes. One says I'm going and one says I'm staying."

Iowa State officials and fans alike anxiously await Orr's decision about his future. A news conference is set for 2 p.m. today at Hilton Coliseum, and Orr insists he's not sure if he'll return for his 15th season.

"If I could tell you, I'd tell you. Hell, if I knew, I'd tell you," he said. "I don't know what I'm going to do yet. I've changed my mind several times. I don't know yet. I don't know, so, hell, if I knew I'd tell everybody."

Orr, 66, has one year remaining on his contract and will serve as an associate athletic director if he opts to retire from coaching.

Orr has won more games than any coach at both Iowa State and Michigan — the only person to accomplish that feat at two Division I schools.

Orr came to Iowa State in 1980 and revived a program that had not been in a postseason tournament in more than 40 years. Through the years, the Cyclones have made six NCAA appearances and played in the NIT once.

Twins' Winfield, Kelly etch names in record book during 9-6 victory

Associated Press

SEATTLE — Dave Winfield moved into 16th place on baseball's career hit list and Minnesota manager Tom Kelly notched his 600th victory as the Twins beat the Seattle Mariners 9-6 on Wednesday.

The 42-year-old Winfield had two singles to give him 3,024 hits, moving him past Lou Brock's 3,023. Rod Carew is 15th on the all-time list with 3,053.

Kelly, 43, became the ninth active manager to reach 600 victories.

Pat Mahomes (1-0) gave up a home run to Eric Anthony, his fourth of the season, and to Reggie Jefferson, but the Twins battered Greg Hibbard (0-1) for seven runs in 5½ innings. Rick Aguilera earned his second save.

Tigers 6, Orioles 3
DETROIT — Cecil Fielder went 4-for-4, including one of three Detroit homers, and John Doherty pitched seven strong innings.

Tony Phillips and Eric Davis each homered in the seventh inning for the Tigers, helping Manager Sparky Anderson earn his 100th win against the Orioles.

Doherty (1-1) held the Orioles to two runs and eight hits in seven innings. Henneman finished up for his second save.

Jamie Moyer (0-1) gave up four runs and seven hits in 6½ innings.

Royals 2, Red Sox 1

KANSAS CITY, Mo. — Rookie Bob Hamelin, who has replaced George Brett as Kansas City's designated hitter, hit a two-run homer with one out in the ninth.

Kansas City had not gotten a runner past first before Hamelin homered off Jeff Russell (0-1).

Billy Brewer (1-0) pitched 1½ innings of hitless relief.

White Sox 5, Yankees 0

CHICAGO — Jason Bere scattered four hits in seven innings, and Julio Franco homered as Chicago stretched its winning streak to four.

Bere (1-0) struck out six and walked two. Paul Assenmacher pitched the eighth against his former team and Kirk McCaskill finished. The loss was the Yankees' fourth straight.

Jim Abbott (1-1) gave up four runs — three earned — and eight hits in 6½ innings. He walked four and struck out three.

Associated Press

Seattle Mariner Mike Blowers is called out as he slides into second base and Minnesota's Chuck Knoblauch during the second inning of the Twins' 9-6 win Wednesday in Seattle.

Martinez one-hits Cincinnati

Associated Press

MONTREAL — Pedro Martinez made it through an eighth-inning brawl with a no-hitter, then gave up a leadoff single to Brian Dorsett in the ninth as the Expos beat the Reds 3-2 Wednesday night.

Martinez had perfect game and a 2-0 lead with one out in the eighth when he hit Reggie Sanders in the elbow with an 0-2 pitch. Sanders charged the mound, tackled Martinez and touched off a bench-clearing incident that took several minutes to wind down.

Martinez, who struck out eight and walked none, completed eight no-hit innings before Dorsett's hit. Barry Larkin and Hal Morris then hit sacrifice flies off John Wetteland (1-1).

Darrin Fletcher, who homered twice and went 4-for-4 for the first four-hit game of his career, singled off Chuck McElroy (1-1) in the bottom half and scored on pinch-hitter Lou Frazier's bloop single off Hector Carrasco, stopping Cincinnati's six-game winning streak.

Astros 4, Marlins 2

MIAMI — Greg Swindell (2-0) allowed five hits in eight shutout innings, struck out seven and walked none as he remained unbeaten in four decisions against Florida.

Chris Hammond (1-1) gave up four runs — just one earned — and seven hits in 5½ innings, allowing a two-run double in the sixth to Jeff Bagwell, who scored on Tony Eusebio's first major-league homer.

Pirates 3, Padres 2

PITTSBURGH — Al Martin tripled, doubled and scored the go-ahead run on third baseman Archi Cianfrocco's throwing error in the fifth inning. San Diego, which lost its fourth straight, is a major-league worst 1-8.

Denny Neagle (1-1) allowed four hits in 6½ innings, and rookie Rick White pitched the ninth for his second save in as many nights.

Tim Worrell (0-1) lost despite limiting the Pirates to four hits in seven innings.

April no picnic for Royals

Craig Horst
Associated Press

KANSAS CITY, Mo. — Hal McRae has gone out of his way to keep smiling. There was, however, no escaping the fact that his Kansas City Royals reached a very low point in a 22-11 loss Tuesday to the Boston Red Sox.

The positive? Kansas City scored 11 runs.
The negative? Where to start.
Kevin Appier, the Royals' top pitcher last year, couldn't get one of the first seven batters out. It took a diving play by third baseman Gary Gaetti on a line drive to retire the eighth Boston hitter.
Appier gave up six runs in the first, and McRae left him out there for three miserable innings.
The few thousand fans who filed into Kauffman Stadium on that cold, drizzly night knew they were facing football weather. Little did they know they'd get a football score.
An eight-run Boston sixth, that included all of two hits, sent most home.
Appier was charged with nine runs on eight hits and fell to 0-2. This was the same pitcher who won 18 games last year and led the American League with a 2.56 earned run average. Make it a 13.50 ERA after two starts this year.

This is April, and April is no picnic for the Royals. Two years ago, Kansas City started 1-16. Last year, it was a 2-9 start. This year, the Royals are 1-6. "You guys saw it. Write it," was the best McRae could say.
His team gave 13 walks and committed three errors. Two batters were hit.
A double-play ball hit straight at second baseman

Chico Lind caromed into right field. Lind will make that play the next thousand times.
This is the Royals' April.
Scott Cooper hit for the cycle for Boston, going 5-for-6. His fourth hit was a double, and writers in the press box were second-guessing him for not stopping at first to get the single he needed.
Not to worry. He got another chance in the ninth against utility infielder David Howard, who pitched two innings. Cooper hit a clean single to right.

The Royals have studiously avoided talking about their bad starts under McRae, who's beginning his third full season as manager. And Kansas City has been a notorious slow starter, usually waiting until the All-Star break to get rolling.
But there was no way to hide the numbers of this one.
"He is struggling right now," McRae said of Appier. "I don't know anything about pitching mechanics. I know hitting and I know what it's like when a hitter gets in a slump. He can't locate his pitches. He has no command. He's getting underneath his slider. But he's going to be OK."
The Royals hadn't allowed more runs since they began play in 1969, a span of 3,986 games. It also was the highest-scoring game in the 22-year history of the ballpark.

"It's a little on the humiliated side. It's a little demoralizing," catcher Mike Macfarlane said. "We come back out tomorrow. You have to look on the positive side. We scored 11 runs."
It can happen to anybody, any time.
"I've been on the other side," Boston catcher Dave Valle said. "Last year, the Tigers did this to us three times in a row. It's a nightmare. No matter what you throw up there, it's getting crushed."

Jordan takes act on the road

Paul Newberry
Associated Press

MONTGOMERY, Ala. — The sparkling new bus is gassed up and ready to go. All aboard, everyone, it's time for the Jordan Tour to begin.

Unlike his high-flying days in the NBA, there are no glamorous stops like Madison Square Garden in New York or the Forum in Los Angeles.

No, Michael Jordan and his Birmingham Barons will have to be content with Engel Stadium, a 64-year-old ballpark in Chattanooga, Tenn., and Five County Stadium, a 6,000-seat structure surrounded by tobacco fields in the sleepy North Carolina town of Zebulon.

Welcome to the real world of minor-league baseball: long bus rides, small towns and big dreams. At least with Jordan as the main attraction, the crowds will be larger than normal.

"It's always nice to play in front of people instead of nobody," said Barons catcher Chris Tremie. "At some minor-league parks, they don't draw hardly anyone."

Actually, the Carolina Mudcats, who will play host to the Jordans — make that the Barons — on Sunday for the start of a three-game series, led the Double A Southern League in attendance last season. The excitement, however, is magnified in a state that has revered Jordan since he led North Carolina to a national basketball championship in 1982.
"There is a high demand for tickets," said Joe Kremer, the Mudcats general manager. "I hear people have been scalping them for $50 apiece."

It should be a bittersweet homecoming for Jordan. After all, this is the state where he starred as a Little League pitcher and shortstop, where he had last played baseball as a skinny high-school senior in Wilmington, where he mourned his murdered father last year and perhaps made a silent promise to return to the sport his dad always wanted him to play.

Jordan's brother, Larry, will throw out the first ball, and Jordan's car dealership in nearby Durham is sponsoring a batting helmet giveaway for the youngsters.

Kremer said all 3,000 reserved seats have been gobbled up for not only this series but two games against the Barons in July. The rest of the stadium is left to general admission on a first-come, first-serve basis.

"It'll be a wild parking lot with everybody trying to get a ticket," Kremer predicted.

But before the Barons arrive in Zebulon aboard their new $350,000 bus leased by you-know-who, they'll stop in Chattanooga for a three-game series against the Lookouts, the same team that opposed Jordan in his professional debut last Friday.

NBA

Pathetic Mavericks ponder changes

Jaime Aron
Associated Press

DALLAS — Now that the Dallas Mavericks know they won't have the worst record in NBA history this season, team officials can get to other pressing issues — like the future.

A 108-107 victory Tuesday night over the Portland Trail Blazers gave the Mavericks 10 victories, sparing them the disgrace of possibly tying the 1972-73 Philadelphia 76ers' worst-ever record.

Earlier Tuesday, team owner Donald Carter fired Vice President Rick Sund and hinted that other, possibly sweeping, changes could be ahead.

"When you haven't reached what everybody hoped to do in a period of time, you have to evaluate things," Carter said.

"In sports, one thing can make a difference in the chemistry and that can make a lot of difference."

Donald Carter, Dallas Mavericks owner

Carter didn't have delusions of grandeur about this year's team, but he also didn't expect another countdown against the 76ers' futility mark.

Many of the CBA-caliber players on last year's 11-71 team had been replaced by Jamal Mashburn, a full season of Jim Jackson, a healthy Fat Lever and rookies Poy-eye Jones and Lucious Harris.

Carter also was banking on Coach Quinn Buckner being a hit. Buckner was hired at Sund's urging, and some have suggested Buckner's failure led to Sund's firing, although Carter denies it.

Instead, the team never took to Buckner, making him possibly the next victim of Carter's housecleaning.

Buckner said he's not worried. "You take these decisions for what they are. I don't read into anything," he said.

No matter who's in the front office or on the bench, they have plenty to work with as Sund leaves behind Mashburn, Jackson and seven first-round picks in the next five drafts.

Guitar buffs holding free concert to display instrument's versatility

Shayla Thiel
The Daily Iowan

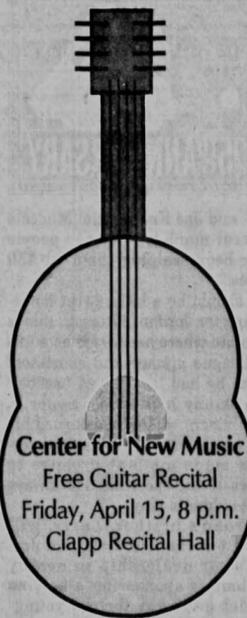

Convinced that grungy distortion is synonymous with guitar music after spending the week glued to MTV? Then get off the couch and check out the UI Center for New Music's free presentation of guitarist Todd Seelye at 8 p.m. Friday in Clapp Recital Hall.

"The guitar is such a versatile instrument," said David Gompper, director of the Center for New Music. "It can perform music on a much deeper level than what most people are used to hearing."

Although the instrument's fixed frets present some limitation for composers, local guitarist and composer Tom Nothnagle said he believes the guitar composition in fact can be a more creative endeavor.

"The modern guitar has been evolving a lot throughout the 20th century, and a lot of new techniques have been developed," said Nothnagle. "It has almost an unlimited tone color. The guitar is polyphonic, like the piano, and you can be percussive, run a baseline, harmony and melody all at once."

Richard Stratton, owner of the posed in 1980 for guitar and alto flute by Toru Takemitsu, performed with UI graduate student Laura Koenig; and "Sequenza XI," composed by Lucian Berio in 1988.

Gompper encouraged the public to take advantage of the concert of rarely performed works, but he warned that the sound of classical guitar might take them by surprise with its unamplified intricacies.

"Going by last year's performance, Seelye's music was very chamberlike," he said. "It's quiet music and very, very intense."

Nothnagle said he feels the instrument he has devoted most of his life to is finally receiving its due praise. According to him, the Center for New Music's concert seems especially appropriate for the guitar.

"Guitar was not very well-respected in classical music until fairly recently, when Segovia became well-known. Before, it was considered sort of a peasant instrument," Nothnagle said. "However, the best guitars are being built now. The guitar is happening now more than any other instrument."

Pittsburgh New Music Ensemble, and he will be a guest artist at this year's June in Buffalo festival.

"Seelye is an accurate and intelligent performer, so he will investigate and carry out the composers' wishes," Gompper said. "He's one of the few guitarists I know who has this interest."

Featured on the concert program will be "Variation-Fantasy," which was composed in 1993 by Andrew Mead, a music theory teacher at the University of Michigan. To learn more about his musical intentions, the public can attend a discussion with Mead on "Variation-Fantasy" at 3:30 p.m. Friday in room 1027 of the UI Music Building.

Also included in the concert are four other pieces by contemporary composers: "Sheer Pluck," composed in 1984 by Milton Babbitt; "Five Intermezzi," composed between 1984 and 1990 by Ursula Mamlock; "Toward the Sea," com-

EL SEGUNDO, Calif. — Nancy, meet Barbie.

A line of Nancy Kerrigan dolls will appear on store shelves this fall, Mattel Inc. said Wednesday.

Mattel, which makes Barbie, said the first Kerrigan doll will wear a replica of the gold costume the champion figure skater wore during the Olympics in Lillehammer, Norway.

The upshot is that interviewers are happy to talk to her about the album when she stops for chats at radio stations, "but then they'll say, 'I don't know if you should say the title on the air.'"

"I go, 'Excuse me, squid! It's NOT one of the seven dirty words!' ... It's so typical! I don't get it. They can have naked women exploding on MTV and I can't say 'Attention Butt-Pirates and Lesbians!'"

Thumbelina (Jodi Benson) encounters a flamboyant mother toad (Charo), who offers speed bump on her road to true love — a fame, fortune and a green, warty husband.

Vapid 'Thumbelina' okay for kids, but still no competition for Disney

Tasha Robinson
The Daily Iowan

At first, the phenomenal success of Disney films like "Beauty and the Beast" and "Aladdin" seemed promising. It helped convince some people that "animation" doesn't necessarily mean "childish." It helped revitalize studio confidence in feature-length animation. Several other studios got the courage to try out the medium themselves.

But the boom didn't last long. Disney's artistic standard was apparently too high for most imitators, and its financial success thus proved impossible to obtain. But somehow the parade of incoherent, shoddily produced fiscal failures (among them "Cool World," "Rock-a-doodle," "Tom and Jerry," "Bebe's Kids" and "We're Back") convinced many companies not that they should put more work into their finished product, but that the key to success is simply the Disney name.

The actual key is only very slightly more complicated. What no other company seems to fully grasp is the importance of a script that can capture the imagination of adults as well as children. The latest entry in the field — Don Bluth's long-delayed "Thumbelina" — is a picture-perfect study in why nonDisney films so often fail to fly.

"Thumbelina" is actually an adequate enough film for the younger set. With flashy visuals, a choppy storyline that never dwells too long on any scene or concept, numerous songs and Bluth's trademark thoughtless slapstick mentality, the film should have no problem grabbing most kids' short attention span.

But when it comes to pulling in the kind of repeat adult attendance that results in Disney-esque $200-million-plus jackpots, "Thumbelina" is lacking on nearly every count. The story is taken almost directly from the original fairy tale: Thumbelina, a young girl "only as tall as a thumb," is frustrated by the huge world around her. Her life is controlled by larger, smarter creatures — a clever metaphor for childhood in general.

Thumbelina is looking for romance, but her dreams are frustrated by her unique size — until she meets a fairy prince who seems like the perfect mate. Unfortunately, she's whisked away by a series of lecherous beasts who covet her singing voice and want her to marry them instead.

The result is a chain of mostly comic encounters in which Thumbelina struggles with her doubts about her feelings and self-worth. The slapstick humor of these meetings is passably amusing, but hardly touching or dramatic — mostly because Thumbelina herself is such a vapid, moronic protagonist.

Thumbelina is played by Jodi Benson, who made such a splash as Ariel in "The Little Mermaid," and who clearly has the talent to portray a strong, memorable character. But Benson's voice is never allowed full strength or range. Limited to a high, squeaky babble spiced with constant annoying giggles, she sounds like a vicious parody of Ariel, not a unique character.

Thumbelina herself has the emotional maturity of a spoiled 5-year-old and is about as compelling to watch. Her inability to think for herself, make even the simplest decision or even stop whining makes her seem flighty, shrill and unappealing.

And the other characters aren't any more attractive, in part thanks to Bluth's apparent decision to find the most jarring vocal talents possible. Carol Channing (a mouse), Charo (a frog) and Gilbert Gottfried (a beetle) each has the distinctive vocal qualities necessary to flesh out a two-dimensional character, but all three are also needlessly strident and grating. John Hurt is the exception as a reclusive mole, the one understated character in this relentlessly hyper production.

"Thumbelina" 's musical numbers and animation are also lacking. The former are merely abrupt and unmemorable. The latter relies on obvious computer animation (apparently de rigueur since Disney did it, but still lifeless compared to careful hand-rendered art) and on images stolen directly from a number of Disney films — most notably "Fantasia," "Peter Pan," "Great Mouse Detective" and "Aladdin."

Back to the Drawing Board

In fact, the overall design of "Thumbelina" in general looks much like some of Disney's successes (from "Snow White" to "Little Mermaid"). What's lacking is an appreciation for an older audience — one looking for substance, not just flashy colors and loud noises.

While less forced and deliberately precious than much of Bluth's other work, "Thumbelina" is still unlikely to make the grade with many people over the age of 12. And until Bluth or his rivals learn to write for an older, wiser audience, Disney's prominence in the animation field will remain unchallenged.

Fear & loathing on the campaign trail

Bijou's "The War Room" offers inside peek at '92 Clinton crusade

Ian Corwin
The Daily Iowan

The documentary "The War Room," which runs tonight through Saturday at the Bijou, does for the reality of the 1992 presidential campaign what the film "Feed" did for the media circus surrounding that campaign.

Where "Feed" was assembled almost exclusively from media bites and satellite outtakes, "The War Room" 's unblinking eye is trained on the inner workings of the highly unconventional Clinton camp, from the Democratic primaries to Election Day, including all the intriguing muck in the road along the way. "Feed" focused on what the politicians and their henchmen said and did when they thought the cameras and mikes were on standby, but "The War Room" gives us poor members of the easily duped electorate a pretty good idea of exactly why the politicians may have said those things.

"The War Room" 's two stars are the ever-animated George Stephanopoulos, Clinton's officer in charge of communications during the campaign, and the "Ragin' Cajun" James Carville, a political strategist for Clinton who bears an odd resemblance to Hunter S. Thompson in appearance and PBS' Cajun Cook in manner and habits.

We are treated to manic flights of Stephanopoulosian excitement and frustration as Clinton hits his ups and downs. After watching "War Room," one has to wonder whether Clinton was paying Stephanopoulos to act as a surrogate emotion center; the film makes it very clear that if you're having a party where caffeinated beverages are being served, Stephanopoulos would be a poor call as an addition to the guest list. Whether his involvement in getting Clinton elected was crucial or not is debatable, but the film suggests that if it weren't for George and his boyish impetuosity, the Democrats in 1992 would have been about as dynamic as William F. Buckley discussing insurance premiums.

Bill Clinton

Associated Press

Carville winds up coming off like Marlon Brando in "Apocalypse Now." This guy is a nut, and we get a great many proofs to that effect; his speeches to "the troops" on the Clinton staff are gritty, insane and more than a little dramatic. His obsession with exposing the Bush campaign's faux pas in using Brazilian business and labor to print re-election material is just short of side-splitting ... but especially in these moments, "The War Room" reminds us of what modern political campaigns have become.

Chris Hegeudus and D.A. Pennebaker, in making "The War Room," do not want us to forget that the 1992 presidential campaign was filled with bursting with smears, libel and slander. For every discussion of foreign policy, there were personal accusations of decadence and "sickening" immorality; for every diatribe on health-care reform or unemployment, fingers pointed to draft records, smoke inhalation and Jennifer Flowers.

In fact, "The War Room" gives us very few glimpses of the Clinton staff discussing issues of burning national and international import. Stephanopoulos and Carville are not concerned with what their man will do once he reaches the end of the road; their job is simply to get him there. The rest is up to President Swill.

John F. Kennedy made an audacious move in the early '60s, when he let camera crews record private moments of his campaign and invited the same crews into the Oval Office during meetings that had, until then, been largely hidden from public record. Comparing those films with "The War Room," one can get a pretty clear picture of what American politics has evolved into ... and it's damn funny.

Until I realized I had just forgotten to breathe, I thought I was having a heart attack during the Dresden Staatskapelle's last Hancher performance, 10 years ago. The orchestra's deeply compelling combination of full-throated sonority and exquisitely refined musical commitment made their rendition of the Brahms First a literally breathtaking experience that has not faded with the passing years.

The prospect of hearing the ensemble have their uniquely persuasive way with the Brahms Second evokes a mixture of anticipation and terror: Will they measure up to their previous standard? If so, what medications should audience members avail themselves of to withstand such an experience?

The Dresdeners, whose orchestral history reaches back to 1548, rank with Berlin and Vienna at the very zenith of European ensembles. Their music directors over the centuries have included legendary names: Praetorius, Schuetz, Weber, Wagner, Reiner, von Karajan. Iowa City is the first stop on the group's first U.S. tour under Giuseppe Sinopoli, who assumed his post as music director of the Dresden Staatskapelle in 1992.

Sinopoli, who completed doctorates in medicine and psychology before turning to composing and conducting, sees genius as "the sublimation of deviance" and music as the ultimate mode of personal expression and communication.

Whether this philosophy represents a rare marriage of musical profundity and the scientific method, or is merely dilettantism exalted to the level of dogma, will be for individual listeners to decide. Sinopoli and his orchestra have elicited worldwide accolades from critics lauding their "power and magnificence (Vienna)," their "extraordinary warmth in every tint and shade (Milan)," their "beautiful sound and extraordinary rigor (Rome)."

Besides the relatively sunny Brahms Second, Friday's Hancher program includes "Verklaerte Nacht" (Transfigured Night), a lush post-Wagnerian tone poem written in 1899. This piece's swirling currents illustrate a tale of loveless marriage, pregnancy and extramarital devotion. The Dresdeners will undoubtedly play this voluptuous music in their patented-to-the-hilt style, so it's comforting to know there will be a doctor in the house.

Tickets for Friday's Dresden Staatskapelle performance are available through Hancher Box Office at 335-1160.
