Destruction of artwork 'really ironic'

Complaints prompt School of Social Work to trash statue

Chris Pothoven
The Daily Iowan

The destruction of a statue Friday that served as a symbol for the UI School of Social Work has enraged at least one graduate of the school.

The statue was removed by the School of Social Work after an accreditation review team received complaints that the artwork did not accurately reflect the variety of family types served by social workers.

The life-sized statue, which depicted a traditional family — a naked man, woman and child, with their arms outstretched to doves flying overhead — has served as the school's logo for several years, appearing on sweatshirts, mugs and the social work newsletter. The man's genitalia are discreetly covered, while the woman and male child are totally exposed.

Barbara McDonald, who received both her undergraduate and master's degrees from the UI in social work, found the statue in pieces by a dumpster when she picked up her son from his art class in North Hall.

"It was a shock to see it there. I couldn't believe something that had been in the school for 20 years was out there broken and ready to be hauled away," she said. "That was one of my favorite things about the school. It was so humane. It helped remind me why we were there — to help and empower people."

The arms of the parents had been cut off as well as the woman's and child's heads. The man's throat was partially cut and one of his eyes had been gouged. The doves were removed from atop the statue.

"All the students leaving the art class were stopping and wondering who had done this bad thing and why," McDonald said. "It seemed really ironic."

McDonald gathered all the missing pieces she could find and took them home with her, where they now sit in her garage. She hopes to find someone who is willing and able to fix the statue.

Martin Tracy, director of the School of Social Work, said a number of students raised concerns about the statue to the accreditation agency when it was reviewing the school in March.

"The students were concerned that it expresses a family combination that does not represent all groups," he said. "I think the students were very rightly concerned because while the school is very pro-family, we work with a variety of families and that should be represented."

The accrediting body told the school it should remove the statue,

Tracy said. The school will retain the logo because the gender and age differences are not as obvious, he added.

After learning about the concerns, Tracy said he and the faculty spent around a month gauging student feelings for the statue.

Drunken-driving offender caught after accident

A repeat drunken-driving offender who ran off after a car accident Friday afternoon was handed multiple charges once apprehended by Iowa City police.

Dale L. Eakes, 36, Hilltop Trailer Court, Lot 70, was charged with his third offense of operating while intoxicated, driving under revocation and leaving the scene of a personal injury after a collision in the 200 block of Stevens Drive. He was apprehended by police two blocks from the scene.

Jeanette Gill, 73, and Raymond Gill, 70, both of Coralville, were treated and released from Mercy Hospital with facial injuries. After hitting the Gills' vehicle, Eakes tried to drive away from the scene. The bumpers of the two cars locked and Eakes dragged the car 12 feet before dashing from the scene on foot.

At the Johnson County Jail, Eakes was also charged with interference with official acts and simple assault.

NEW YORK (AP) — Ralph Ellison, whose "Invisible Man" articulated the experience of being black in America and is regarded as one of the century's greatest novels, died Saturday of pancreatic cancer. He was 80.

Ellison

"Invisible Man" chronicles an idealistic black man's humiliations in the South and in New York City's Harlem, from campus life to street riots. It won the National Book Award in 1952 and more than 1 million copies have been sold.

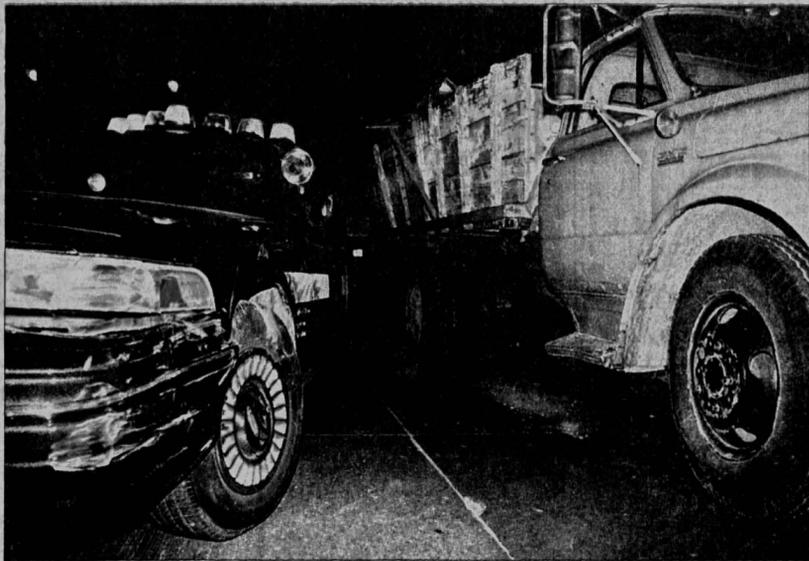

Ellison was putting the finishing touches on a second novel when he died. It wasn't immediately clear when or if it would be published.

Ellison was born in Oklahoma City on March 1, 1914 and named after the essayist Ralph Waldo Emerson.

SQUAD CAR RAMS STOLEN VEHICLE

A runaway stolen truck overflowing with debris was stopped by an Iowa City Police Department squad car just 20 feet from the HandiMart gas pumps at the corner of Market and Dubuque streets late Sunday night.

At least two men led a half-dozen police cars on a frantic chase for several blocks north down Madison Street and then the wrong way up the one-way Market Street before jumping out of the moving truck and fleeing on foot.

"We attempted to stop them for a routine traffic stop initially," Lt. Matt Johnson of the Iowa City Police Department said. "They were dumping parts of their load as they crossed a railroad crossing. It wasn't so much a high-speed chase as much as it was a failure to yield."

Witnesses estimate the truck was traveling at 5 to 10 mph when the two men leapt out midway between Clinton and Dubuque streets, less than half a block away from the crowded gasoline pumping area of HandiMart, 204 N. Dubuque St.

Johnson said police officer Harry Huff rammed the front of his patrol car into the truck, a 1970s GMC flatbed filled with utility poles and debris, to stop it 5 feet short of jumping the curb.

UI junior Michael Jordan was on his bike at the corner of Market and Clinton streets when he saw the truck speeding up the Market Street hill the wrong way.

"Twenty more feet and it would have hit the gas pumps," he said.

UI sophomore Kelly Flynn and her roommates were also among the stunned crowd of more than 70 bystanders. They witnessed the Hamburg Inn closes down following fire

An early morning fire at the Hamburg Inn No. 2 Inc., 214 N. Linn St., severely damaged the restaurant's kitchen and an adjoining shed, causing an estimated $100,000 in damage Sunday and forcing the restaurant to close for several weeks until repairs can be made.

Iowa City firefighter John Kelly was injured in the blaze. He was released after treatment for minor injuries at Mercy Hospital.

Firefighters arrived on the scene at 4:38 a.m. It took four hours to extinguish the blaze. Coralville, West Branch and Solon firefighters assisted.

"When we got there, there was a lot of heavy fire," said James Humston, acting battalion chief of the Iowa City Fire Department. "The fire was fully involved when we got there."

Also damaged was an apartment above the kitchen area of the restaurant. No employees or apartment dwellers were injured in the conflagration.

"The fire department was here by the time people showed up for work," said Steve Fugate, the restaurant's manager.

He said it was uncertain what caused the fire but that a lit cigarette may have been the cause.

"We're not really sure — we think some drunk might've flipped a cigarette butt into our recycling bin," Fugate said.

Damage caused by the fire was worst in the rear of the restaurant, according to Lt. Dan Smith of the Iowa City Fire Department.

"It's pretty well burned up in the back," he said.

The fire caused smoke damage throughout the structure, which also suffered minor water damage. The Hamburg has 30 employees.

"It will probably be two or three weeks at a minimum," he said.

The cause of the fire remains under investigation.

President reunited with 'first car'

Lawrence L. Knutson
Associated Press

CONCORD, N.C. — President Clinton slipped behind the wheel of his prized '67 Mustang on Sunday and drew the applause of some of the country's most avid devotees of the classic car.

Arriving at the first national convention of the Mustang Club of America, Clinton took obvious pleasure in what is now an unusual activity.

"I never dreamed I'd be invited here to this event and given a chance to drive my car; nobody lets me drive anymore," Clinton said after tooling past a reviewing stand at the Charlotte Motor Speedway.

He said the car, which has been on display in an Arkansas museum since the beginning of his presidency, works pretty well, "except the door still doesn't open from the inside."

The president was given a red jacket advertising the Mustang's 30th anniversary. And he waved another gift — a black and white checked starter's flag.

Reporters have had a hard time describing the color of Clinton's convertible, and the president joined the confusion.

"It's sort of a turquoise," he began, but then responding to a shout from the crowd of several thousand people, he amended that to "hornet green."

Some 300 Mustangs of all vintages, and all in top condition, awaited the president's inspection.

President Clinton leans over to talk with Ashley Weiss, 9, of Melbourne, Fla., in a miniature Mustang as he tours the 30th Mustang Anniversary Celebration at Charlotte Motor Speedway in Concord, N.C. The president's own Mustang also received a lot of attention.

"I'm glad there is this common interest, and I look forward to getting out there to see some of the best cars there are," he said.

Earlier Sunday, Clinton played golf in Williamsburg, Va., while his staff monitored the quickly changing situation in Bosnia.

On Saturday night, Clinton attended a closed-door conference in Williamsburg with Democrat senators.

Clinton purchased his Mustang from his half-brother, Roger, and then restored it. But he left the convertible behind in Little Rock, Ark., after winning the 1992 presidential election.

Since then, the car has been on display at the Museum of Automobiles near Morrilton, Ark. The nonprofit museum was founded by the late Arkansas Gov. Winthrop Rockefeller.

Talking about his car last fall, Clinton said, "All of us have car-crazy moments."

"One of my most prized possessions is a 1967 Mustang that I restored a few years ago," he said then. "And I think when I left my home, it was the thing I most regretted leaving behind."

Associated Press

KUWAIT — Stormin' Norman has some unfinished business from the war against Iraq's Saddam Hussein.

"I wish that we had blown up Saddam's statue," retired U.S. Gen. Norman Schwarzkopf told reporters Saturday. He was referring to a 30-foot-high statue of Saddam in downtown Baghdad.

"That is the one thing I would have liked to have done," he said. "I wanted to get that for a long time, and unfortunately the lawyers got involved in the thing at the end and we didn't blow it up. Now I wish that we had."

Schwarzkopf did not say how the statue would have been destroyed or why it wasn't.

He said his visit with his wife, two daughters and son was "purely social."

AN EPIC FEAT

Retiree memorizes nearly all of 'Iliad'

Jeff Donn
Associated Press

AMHERST, Mass. — Retirement brought Stephen Powelson lots of spare time. Perhaps too much: He decided to memorize Homer's "Iliad."

All 600 pages, two volumes, 15,693 lines and more than 200,000 syllables, by his count.

In the ancient Greek. For 16 years, he has spent about an hour a day — 5,840 hours in all — intoning the classic poem. So far, he knows 14,800 lines by heart.

And this is a man whose wife says can't find his glasses or car keys. How did he do it?

"Will, discipline and a touch of madness," he said.

More importantly, why did he do it?

"Every person has a secret desire to achieve immortality," he said.

"Will, discipline and a touch of madness."

Stephen Powelson, on his memorization techniques

"My way is to absorb into myself something that is immortal."

On Monday, Powelson recited an hour's worth of verse — about 650 lines — for a dozen classics professors and students at the University of Massachusetts. One long section was assigned to him the previous night to prove he wasn't cheating.

Powelson, 76, who lives in Paris, is in the midst of a national tour to show off his memory and promote the classics in a society whose most famous Homer is named Simpson.

As he recited on Monday, he periodically closed his eyes and clenched a fist, moving it up and down to the meter of the dactylic hexameter. Occasionally, he would falter, repeat a few words and press on. Only a few times did he need a cue from the audience.

Afterward, a listener asked if Powelson gained deep insights into ancient Greek thought by memorizing the text.

"Not really," he said. "I wish I had."

ARIES (March 21-April 19): This week you purchase a new high-tech basketball shoe — the Reebok Shazam — the only shoe with a full-service ATM in its heel. Your jump shot still sucks.

TAURUS (April 20-May 20): You worked hard last week, so give yourself a hand. On Friday night — again.

GEMINI (May 21-June 21): This week you realize that Kurt Cobain was not only the voice of a generation, but a prophet as well. He came unto them and verily he spoke: "And it was so. The multitudes thought and did and lived a life of..." They made their own powerlessness a badge of honor. They fashioned themselves suburban tragedies but lacked the decency of the truly screwed.

CANCER (June 22-July 22): Next week you'll get smashed and say things you wouldn't normally say at the frat, like "I love you guys." You don't mean it though.

LEO (July 23-Aug. 22): This week it's OK to move your hips a little on the dance floor. If someone jibes you for being effeminate, offer to buy them a removal kit for the large stick up their ass. If this seems too risky, dance stiffly and pretend to play air guitar, swear and give high-fives.

VIRGO (Aug. 23-Sept. 22): The ad says, "Don't let them see you sweat." Then they'd know you had doubts and emotions and that sort of thing. This would be bad.

LIBRA (Sept. 23-Oct. 23): Buy a leather jacket and an anarchy button. Call 1-800-ANARCHY, your rage fashion outlet store, and you too can look like a person who's had enough with business as usual.

SCORPIO (Oct. 24-Nov. 21): You think of yourself as pro-environment because you prefer paper over plastic, but you're not. You have given up nothing and will continue to give up nothing. You will teach your great-grandchildren to fish at a rubber fishing hole inside a mall.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22-Dec. 22): This would be a good week to call Kraft's 1-800 number. Tell them to stop using bleached paper products for packaging. The unnecessary bleaching is destroying lakes and rivers and deforming animal newborns. Don't believe me? Call the moderators at the Environmental Defense Fund and ask them.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 23-Jan. 19): This is a time full of questioning: Can the world possibly find a drug user to write pop / thrash songs rivaling those of Kurt Cobain's in their meaningfulness? Rebellion against the unspecified is pretty easy to come by. Give it a week.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20-Feb. 18): You're not apathetic. You're just too stupid to take action.

PISCES (Feb. 19-March 20): Give a pregnant woman a fish and she can't eat for a night, because the fish has high levels of mercury and polychlorinated biphenyls that may deform her fetus. Consider this and live accordingly.

COLLEGE OF MEDICINE, KINNICK TARGETED

$5.6 million request reviewed by regents for UI improvements

Tricia DeWall
The Daily Iowan

A renovation of the Kinnick Stadium press box is the largest project in an estimated $5.6 million proposal for campus improvements, which the UI hopes will be approved by the Iowa state Board of Regents Wednesday.

The press-box renovation will cost an estimated $1.75 million and includes plans for adding 18 private-viewing suites. The improvements will be paid for by gifts designated to the men's athletic department.

According to UI director of Planning and Administrative Services Richard Gibson, 13 suites will be added to the current roof of the box and five more will be added to the box's lowest level, for a total of an additional 5,300 square feet.

New restrooms, lounges and food-service facilities also will be built to serve the suites. A new elevator will be added to the north end of the press box so that all of the suites may accommodate people with disabilities. A new fire-sprinkler system will also be installed.

"This project is an opportunity to undertake comprehensive improvements to a facility that is badly in need of refurbishment," UI men's athletic director Bob Bowlsby said. "The elevator and safety improvements are particularly well-timed, and the addition of the new boxes will accommodate a need we have identified among our upper-level contributors and corporate partners."

If approved, renovations will be completed between the 1994 and 1995 football seasons.

Also on the list will be improvements to the College of Medicine Administration Building, which will cost $974,800.

When built in 1991, the building's third floor and a portion of the second were left unfinished. The project will complete the unfinished space for use by UI Vice President for Health Sciences Henri Manasse and will be used for research and educational programs.

Additionally, the report includes plans to make improvements in the following buildings:

- Remodeling of the Agricultural Medicine Research Facility's inhalation toxicology suite.
- Installation of a fire alarm in Bowen Science Building.
- Replacement of General Hospital and Boyd Tower roofs.
- Replacement of Carver Pavilion Kathabar air-handling units.
- Life Safety Code renovation to UIHC Dietary Dock Building.
- Phase one of UIHC General Hospital elevator replacement.

'GREEN' COMMERCIALISM EXPECTED

Earth Week kicks off today; variety of activities planned

Holly Reinhardt
The Daily Iowan

What started as a way to celebrate the Earth has turned into a trendy and commercialized event, leaving some local environmentalists reconsidering the idea of Earth Day.

Today is the first day of Earth Week, which will culminate in Earth Day Friday. UI Environmental Coalition Co-chairwoman Sarah Webber said Earth Day is moving toward becoming more of a commercial event than the anti-establishment, well-intentioned event it began as in 1970.

"It basically started as an anti-nuclear movement — it grew out of the anti-war '60s movement," Webber said. "People began to see how we are destroying the Earth as we consume and destroy other things."

"Now, I am sort of opposed to it — it has become so over-commercialized. I really think one of the worst things people can do is think they can buy to save the Earth."

While she does see the need to recognize the planet's problems, Webber said those problems should be considered year-round.

"It is a damn good idea to celebrate the Earth, but people have to be conscious every day," she said. "My fundamental criticism is that people don't think about this high-consumption throw-away society."

With the hope that more people will begin considering the Earth on a daily basis, a week full of environmentally conscious movies, presentations and games has been planned by the coalition.

Webber said Earth Week is a time to evaluate what is happening to the Earth and to look at how individuals contribute to the destruction of the planet.

"Every action people take affects the Earth, and I don't mean just stepping on a bug," she said. "Just in going to the grocery store, some of the choices impact a much larger spectrum."

In past years, Friday rallies were held on the Pentacrest. However, a different approach is being taken to this year's Earth Day.

Various local organizations will be represented at booths on the downtown Pedestrian Mall from 10 a.m. to 4 p.m., with presentations and a raffle. Local bands will celebrate the day at Hubbard Park from 7-10 p.m.

"We have always done something on Earth Day," Webber said. "We have had rallies, but we won't have one this year unless Karen Kubby starts one at the Ped Mall."

Kubby, an Iowa City City Council member, will address environmental issues on the downtown Pedestrian Mall at noon, and a presentation on eco-feminism will follow at 12:30 p.m.

Fifty dollars worth of groceries from the New Pioneer Co-Op Fresh Food Market will be raffled off, and information will be presented on the Rammed Earth House.

Webber said the Earth is something that needs to be considered within the UI community on a regular basis.

She said there are many issues that need to be addressed at the UI but often aren't because of the politics involved in the university.

"I think there are some people who do care; only I think people, especially in the university, care more about getting money than preserving the Earth," she said. "The university, because it is so bureaucratic, is damn slow. I think they don't respect students and their ideas."

The UI Environmental Coalition worked in conjunction with the Women's Resource and Action Center in planning Earth Day events.

BRANSTAD, REGENTS ATTEND

Pappajohn honored in dedication

Jude Sunderbruch
The Daily Iowan

The John Pappajohn Business Administration Building was dedicated Saturday in an elaborate multimedia presentation that brought a variety of VIPs to town, including Gov. Terry Branstad, members of the Iowa state Board of Regents and major corporate executives.

The new building was the site of ceremonies and dedications throughout the weekend as the UI and state celebrated the completion of the $34 million project.

UI President Hunter Rawlings was the first of nine speakers at Saturday's ceremony, held in the 400-seat Buchanan Auditorium.

"Today, the campus has been transformed by this magnificent new structure," he said.

Rawlings said the new facility will benefit both students and faculty, noting in particular that it gives the UI mid-sized classrooms that enable full-time faculty to teach lectures, instead of having to use Teaching Assistants.

"From the very beginning, this building was designed with students in mind," he said.

Branstad spoke next, praising the coordination and cooperation of the public and private sector in raising funds for the project, a theme that was echoed by others throughout the day.

"It's an investment that will pay off in big dividends," he said.

In particular, Branstad praised UI business graduate and venture capitalist John Pappajohn, whose $4 million donation is regarded as a turning point in fund-raising efforts and resulted in the building being named in his honor.

"John Pappajohn epitomizes a true Iowa spirit," he said.

Pappajohn, taking a break from handshaking before the ceremony, said the building turned out even better than he had hoped.

"It's a fantastic facility, and I think it's functional for the students," he said.

The Des Moines businessman, who has also made sizable contributions for new facilities at the UI Hospitals and Clinics, said he never had any idea as a student that he would one day be able to contribute to the UI in this way.

"That's what lots of hard work and some luck does for one," he said.

Although he was lauded by almost all of the speakers as being instrumental in the realization of the project, Marvin Pomerantz, former president of the state Board of Regents, played down his role. Pomerantz noted others' efforts while attempting to put the day in a historical context.

"There probably won't be another University of Iowa College of Business Administration Building dedication for another 100 years," he said.

Reno. Svatos said the recognition is good for the department. "I know it gives us a sense of pride, and it shows that we're being acknowledged for the work we're doing," he said.

Svatos and Droll were acknowledged for their actions on July 26, 1993, when the two men rescued three individuals from a Iowa River. The victims, whose boat capsized, were in danger of going over the Burlington Street dam.

The two officers were recommended for national recognition by the commissioner of public safety through the governor's office. Droll, who was unable to attend the ceremony due to previous commitments, will receive his commendation by mail.

My Promise to You

As a counselor in an independent nursing clinic, "I will help you learn to live a healthier lifestyle."

WEIGHT & WELLNESS MANAGEMENT is not a franchise, so you won't be given slanted information about losing weight or unrealistic promises that make sales sheets look good at some corporate headquarters. I don't deal in diets, because nearly 90% of people who diet gain their weight back... and more. I sell no food products, diet drinks or formulas. I strongly discourage quick weight loss through low-calorie diets. This type of weight reduction is mainly water loss and is unsafe because the body may be forced to burn its own muscle for survival.

I promise to help you learn how to eat reasonably and to develop a regular exercise regimen. No marathons or burn 'til it hurts, but exercise that fits your lifestyle. Studies show that it is not the good dieters who keep their weight off, but rather those who use physical exercise regularly after reaching their weight goal.

If this sounds like what you've been looking for, give me a call. I will be happy to work with you. You may not end up super-thin, but with good, consistent effort, you should be able to achieve a weight that is realistic for you... and that's a promise!

REPORTS CHECKED

Possible accord resisted by Israel

Ron Kampeas
Associated Press

JERUSALEM — Israel will strongly oppose any military cooperation between the PLO and a militant Muslim group that has claimed responsibility for two suicide bomb attacks this month, Prime Minister Yitzhak Rabin said Sunday.

The warning came amid reports that the Islamic Resistance Movement, or Hamas, had held meetings with officials of PLO Chairman Yasser Arafat's mainstream Fatah faction in the West Bank and Gaza Strip.

Reports carried by state-owned radio and other Israeli media said Hamas sought Fatah's agreement to continue attacks inside Israel. But Palestinians said the meetings focused on arrangements between the two rivals after self-rule starts in the Gaza Strip and the West Bank town of Jericho.

"Israel will thoroughly check the reports of cooperation, and if there is any truth to it, Israel will be strongly against it," Rabin spokesman Oded Ben-Ami quoted the prime minister as telling the weekly meeting of his cabinet.

Rabin later told reporters after a meeting of his Labor Party, "I don't consider it possible that we will reach agreement with the PLO if it reaches agreement with Hamas to avoid a civil war but allows attacks on Israelis."

Hamas, which enjoys significant support among Palestinians, is the leading opponent of the Israeli-PLO accord. The agreement provides for an Israeli withdrawal and Palestinian autonomy in Gaza and Jericho but has been held up for months by violence and disputes over security arrangements.

Israel and the PLO have predicted that self-rule could begin by June.

Hamas wants assurances from the PLO that it will be permitted to continue attacks within Israel after autonomy begins, Israel radio reported Sunday, citing Palestinian sources. The PLO has rejected the demand, the radio said.

A meeting between Arafat and a Hamas leader, Ibrahim Abu Marzouk, in Sudan last year collapsed after Arafat rejected Hamas demands for a large share of power in the PLO. There have been no known attempts since then to reconcile the two groups.

However, a senior Fatah official told the Associated Press there had been talks with Hamas about local issues such as how to handle land disputes, control welfare institutions, share power in the Gaza municipality and prevent friction between Hamas and the PLO.

The official, who demanded anonymity, said there had been about 20 meetings in recent months.

Sufian Abu Ziad, a top Fatah official in the Gaza Strip, told Israel Radio that there was "nothing new" in the negotiations but that Fatah rejected any independent Hamas military operations against Israel.

Hamas has claimed responsibility for two bus bombings that have killed 12 Israelis since April 6.

Bloody rally — African National Congress marshals carry away a child who was trampled when crowds rushed onto a soccer field during a campaign rally featuring ANC President Nelson Mandela Sunday in Cape Town, South Africa. Three people, including a 6-year-old boy, were crushed to death and at least 20 people were injured when organizers opened gates to allow people to spill onto the field. Some 20,000 people were crowded into the stadium.

SENATE APPROVED BILL

Possible assault weapons ban falling short of votes in House

John Diamond
Associated Press

WASHINGTON — Supporters of a ban on assault weapons are 15 to 20 votes short in the House of Representatives, a key congressman said Sunday.

In the latest head count by House Democratic leaders, a bill banning assault-style weapons such as Uzis and AK-47s is shy of a majority, raising the prospect of a major disagreement between the House and Senate on anti-crime legislation.

"I find it very surprising with all the mayhem going on in the streets," Rep. Charles Schumer, D-N.Y., said in an interview Sunday. "The House voted against an assault weapons ban two years ago, but a lot has changed since then."

Schumer is chairman of the House Judiciary subcommittee on crime and leading sponsor of the assault weapons ban.

The Senate last fall passed a $22 billion crime bill that included the weapons ban. The House version, scheduled for continued debate this week, has no ban.

Differences between House and Senate bills are common. But if the disagreement packs enough political weight, it can sink an entire bill.

Schumer said aggressive lobbying by the National Rifle Association is behind the soft support for the assault weapons ban in the House.

"Members kept coming to me and saying, 'Look, I voted for the Brady bill. I thought it was the right thing to do, and the gun lobby came down very hard on me and I can't vote against them,'" Schumer said.

Schumer himself has been a target of NRA lobbying, including a full-page ad in USA Today that labeled him "the criminal's best friend in Congress."

The NRA was closed Sunday and a spokesman for the lobbying group could not be reached.

The Brady bill, signed into law last year, created a five-day waiting period and procedure for background checks on people seeking to buy a handgun.

Sen. Joseph Biden, D-Del. and chairman of the Senate Judiciary Committee, said Sunday that he will insist that the final crime bill ban assault weapons.

"I want a crime bill with assault weapons (banned) in it," Biden said on NBC's "Meet the Press." "I will not trade off anything for that."

One reason the House crime bill lacks the assault weapons provision is the opposition of Rep. Jack Brooks, D-Texas, the chairman of the House Judiciary Committee.

Schumer and other House members are hoping to get a vote on the weapons ban as a separate bill. If it passes, House-Senate negotiators working on the crime bill would probably include the ban in the final version, Schumer said. If the House defeats the ban, the negotiators would have to resolve the differences between the House and Senate bills.

VARYING REPORTS GIVEN

Controversy remains in candidate murder

Susana Hayward
Associated Press

TIJUANA, Mexico — Secret Service agents say they found a weapon used to kill Mexico's leading presidential candidate after the alleged assassin admitted using a different firearm, police documents show.

The conflicting reports raised fresh doubts whether Luis Donaldo Colosio, killed at a March 23 campaign rally here, was slain by a lone gunman, as investigators have maintained.

Mario Aburto confessed to the crime and has been charged with the murder. Three men hired for crowd control at the rally have been charged with being co-participants in homicide.

Authorities say the three men helped clear a path through a crowd for Aburto to shoot Colosio, the leading contender for the Aug. 21 election as candidate of the ruling Institutional Revolutionary Party, or PRI.

But doubts persist whether Aburto acted alone because no ballistics report has been made available and authorities say only one bullet was found, even though Colosio was hit twice.

In a report of Aburto's interrogation at the Attorney General's office here, Aburto identified a Taurus .38 revolver as the weapon "he used to fire the shots" at Colosio.

The revolver had two bullets in the chamber. It can carry up to six bullets.

The weapon was in a plastic bag during questioning and was identified by Aburto at about 7:30 p.m. on March 23, Jose Perez Canchola, the attorney general for human rights, who was present during Aburto's questioning, said Sunday.

But in a police report read Saturday by an Associated Press reporter and another foreign news correspondent by police director Federico Benitez, secret service agents returned to the hospital where Colosio was taken at 9:30 p.m. with a different bag that they said contained the murder weapon.

Miguel Montes, special prosecutor in the case, has said ballistics tests showed the bullet found matched the Taurus revolver and that the two shots came from the same gun. The government has not made that report public.

Colosio was shot in the head and in the abdomen. Only the bullet that pierced his stomach was found at the scene, officials say.

"It's possible that there was more than one gun but it's hard to tell," said Sergio Mascareno, Tijuana General Hospital chief of surgery, one of a team of doctors who operated on Colosio and declared him dead.

Mascareno and the autopsy report said Colosio was shot in the head on the right temple, the bullet entering the right side and exiting on the left, while the bullet to the stomach entered from the left and exited right.

A physician present at the operation and autopsy said the secret service confiscated rolls of photography taken by three doctors "for national security."

The physician said doctors often take photos during operations for scientific research. After the film was confiscated, a secret service doctor was allowed to take pictures, the physician said on condition of anonymity.

BUREAUCRACY IMPEDING DECISION-MAKING

EU considers addition of four new nations

Paul Ames
Associated Press

BRUSSELS, Belgium — The European Union plans to take in four prosperous new members, extending the reach of the powerful economic bloc into the heart of central Europe and north to Russia's Arctic frontiers.

If Austria, Sweden, Norway and Finland join as planned on Jan. 1, they will enlarge the union to 16 nations, 375 million people and an economy worth $7 trillion a year. The North American Free Trade Agreement of the United States, Canada and Mexico has 360 million people in a $6 trillion economy.

Such expansion warms the hearts of those who dream of building a European superpower to rival the United States. But some Europeans believe increasing the membership will only delay progress toward united foreign and defense policies.

"A common foreign policy comes from common interests, not from a declaration in a treaty," said Jonathan Eyal, director of studies at the Royal United Services Institute in London. He said larger membership will make it "even more difficult" to define those common interests.

Supporters of ever closer ties among European nations fear the newcomers will join Britain in defending national sovereignty against visions of a "United States of Europe."

Also, the NATO-aligned majority will have to accommodate the neutrality of Sweden, Austria and Finland.

Nor did negotiations with the four candidates boost confidence in Europe's ability to unite. Before they were completed a month after the March 30 deadline, foreign ministers spent weeks quarreling about how to adapt voting procedures and share out Norway's fish stocks.

While they wrangled, others took the lead in Bosnia and the Middle East, two areas where the European Union had once hoped for diplomatic success.

U.S. and Russian diplomats pressed for peace in former Yugoslavia with some success, and the United States became the broker in Israeli-Arab talks.

"It demonstrates what American leadership can provide," Stuart Eizenstat, U.S. ambassador to the European Union, told the Associated Press.

"Europe is beginning to come together. But even with that, they still need the entrance of the world's only superpower to make things fully happen."

In January, the bloc appeared to recognize this when its foreign ministers appealed for American help to end the killing in Bosnia. That was a far cry from a declaration in 1991 by Foreign Minister Jacques Poos of Luxembourg, then the EU chairman, that European diplomacy would end the war quickly.

"This is the hour of Europe, not America," Poos said on his way to the first of many EU peace missions. All of them failed.

The Treaty on European Union, which took effect last November, created stronger links among the 12 members and gave the EU executive more power to forge a united foreign policy. But squabbling among governments and complicated rules for making decisions have gotten in the way.

"Yugoslavia does point out the limitations of the common foreign and security policy," Eizenstat said. "It's very hard to manage a military crisis with 12 foreign ministers."

Eyal of the London institute was less diplomatic: "Their initiatives in the Middle East were a disaster. ... On Yugoslavia, they spent three years bickering like fishwives."

Hans van den Broek, foreign affairs chief of the EU executive commission, acknowledges a rocky start for the common foreign policy.

"What we have seen so far ... should certainly be followed by more visible, concrete and cohesive actions," he said in an interview. Van den Broek feels the union must simplify decision-making if it wants "to perform a role corresponding to its economic weight and political responsibility."

Member nations have scheduled a conference in 1996 to do that, clarify foreign policy and strengthen the new defense arm, the Western European Union.

Eighty to steel at No Star Stee Wilton,

Blue collar

Text and Photos by Jill Sagers

Myles Beavers, a blue-collar worker his whole life, shows his soiled hands. Weeks after this photo was taken, Beavers was in an accident at work and now has difficulty moving his fingers. He retired a few weeks early from Henschen's Manufacturing in Davenport, with a lifetime of work behind him.

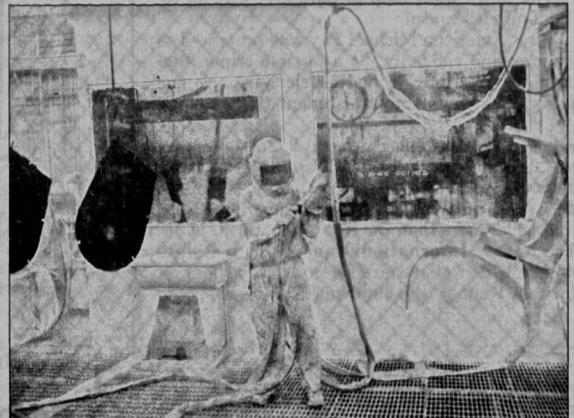

A worker stands behind a tar melting machine while waiting for further instructions on a project.

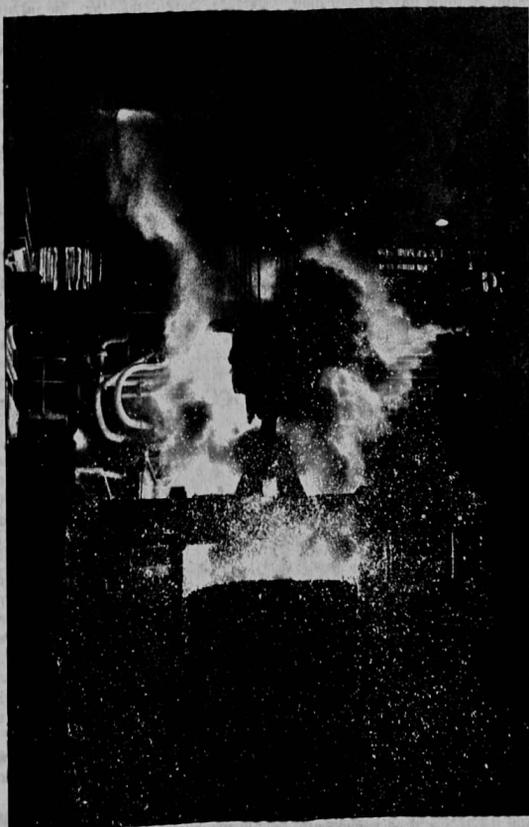

Practically everything we use daily is in part manufactured by a blue-collar worker. Mind and body alike are worn down in making the products we often take for granted. Though long hours, hot working conditions and the possibility of accidents are everyday encounters for this crucial component of the work force, many find the final result of their labors ultimately fulfilling.

Though the demand for white-collar workers has grown proportionally larger over the past 50 years, more than 40 percent of Iowa's work force remains blue-collar.

Most of the photographs here were taken in and around Davenport over the last semester.

Machine parts are painted on an assembly line at John Deere Davenport Works.

Eighty tons of steel are melted at North Star Steel in Wilton, Iowa.

The Farm Progress Show in Amana, Iowa drew in thousands of farmers last September.

Do we place real value on human rights?

Between 10,000 and 20,000 people have been killed in Rwanda since the country's president was killed last week. Most Americans know vaguely of the conflict, but Bosnia (156 dead) and Israel (12 killed) still get more headlines. We hear about Africa only because Americans are being evacuated there.

We should be used to this slanted coverage, but somehow thousands of people seem to warrant a little more of the world's attention. Then again, this is Africa, and that means no one who could make a difference really cares.

Yes, the rest of the world occasionally pays attention to what happens on "the dark continent." We got involved in Zaire in the 1960s, but we had to — it was a Cold War thing. If they were there, we had to be there, too; it wasn't because we wanted the people of the Congo to be independent. Zaire also had lots of natural resources; Rwanda boasts no such claim. It's little and economically insignificant.

There was also Angola, but that was again an East-West struggle. If Castro helped out, we had to support the people on the other side. We have no enemies taking a stand in Rwanda — it's just Hutus and Tutsis. We didn't care about them before, so why should we when they are killing each other?

Of course, we did send troops to Somalia under U.N. auspices. And when 18 Americans were killed, we backed out. The country is on its own now as far as we are concerned.

South Africa doesn't belong in this equation. There are white people there and all kinds of mineral reserves.

Why is it that it's "ethnic conflict" in Bosnia but "tribal warfare" in Rwanda? Why do we intervene in Europe but yawn and watch at least 10,000 people die in Africa during one week?

If democracy, freedom and human rights matter in China and Sarajevo, they need to be upheld everywhere. It's strange how those basic liberties are worth fighting for as long as there is an ulterior motive, but they seem to mean less when pursuing them would bring unrewarded discomfort.

Senate Minority Leader Bob Dole said, "I hope we don't get involved there. ... As far as I'm concerned in Rwanda, that ought to be the end of it," on "Face the Nation" last week. That's a prevailing attitude, but it's hypocrisy to support democracy only when it's convenient or America is deemed to have a "vital national interest."

Americans need to quit hiding behind lofty ideals. If it's oil in Kuwait, let's admit it. If it's business interests in China, say so. If our European allies want help in Sarajevo, why do we need to find a high-minded cause?

It's not just Africa. American Michael Fay was sentenced to caning in Singapore, and suddenly it's a terrible crime. Bigwigs from Clinton on down have called for clemency. No one doubts that he's guilty — it's the punishment that is being debated.

Where were those indignant voices when 1,208 Asians were caned in one year? It only matters when it affects Americans. It's not about human rights or liberty or freedom. It's about us.

That attitude is natural. When will Americans admit that we care about ourselves more than the rest of the world? Organizations like Amnesty International and Human Rights Watch are trying, but their efforts are meaningless as long as we pay attention only when it is in our own best interests.

Censorship is nothing to laugh about

To the Editor:

In his April 4 column, David M. Mastio once again revealed his true colors by coming out against free-speech rights in the classroom. With regard to the classroom materials policy on campus, Mastio says that he has "to just sit back and laugh."

While Mastio may be laughing about classroom censorship, it is anything but funny. This policy has created a dangerous climate of self-censorship on campus which threatens academic freedom. Teaching Assistants are being told to give warnings for being critically acclaimed films as "Kiss of the Spider Woman," because instructors feel threatened with reprimand if they dare to use material which does not conform to the mainstream. And if material is used, it is stigmatized with the warning "unusual and unexpected," again marking as deviant anything which doesn't pass the Sunday school test.

Moreover, the policy threatens one of the key educational missions of the university: to develop critically thinking individuals who are able to question and explore issues by themselves. The policy warps this effort by letting politicians in Des Moines determine the merits of material they wish to suppress. I wonder what will be the next subject to fall prey to censorship? Race? Class?

Students and their instructors should be able to study without interference by politicians and spineless university presidents. We should put the blame right where it belongs: with Hunter Rawlings, who has decided to flush academic freedom down the crapper in return for gold on the Capitol dome and bloated salaries for his army of bureaucrats. Enough of the hypocrisy and the rotten priorities of this administration — we want academic freedom now!

Statue removed in censorial atmosphere

You are about to read an unusual and unexpected story. In the ongoing saga of the new age of "students' rights" at the UI, the School of Social Work removed a statue from North Hall over the weekend. It was a life-sized nude of a man, a woman and a child, including doves. It has been a fixture in the department since 1975, when it was commissioned. The statue has been used as an informal logo on newsletters and T-shirts and is well known to graduates of the department. Some of them, it must be said, always thought it was pretty ugly. However that may be, the work, if not particularly challenging, was at least symbolic of hope, peace and love.

Trouble with the statue surfaced during a recent accreditation review. The Council on Social Work Education is the national body governing this process. While visiting with students in the UI school, the review committee heard two types of commentary about the statue.

One camp voiced displeasure at being exposed to life-sized nude figures in the educational environment. The other end of the spectrum complained that the configuration represented an antiquated family model, one not in keeping with the diverse family formations modern social workers are called to serve and support.

In the council representatives' final report on accreditation such remarks were duly noted. The extent to which any strong recommendation was made to the school regarding the statue is not known at this time. Reliable sources indicate that the school mulled the report over for a good month or more. Ultimately, the decision was made to remove the statue. Sources also stated that attempts were made to find a new home for the work, but such attempts failed.

The removal was not as quick or clean as might have been desired for minimal din and exposure. To be removed from the building, the statue had to be destroyed. The broken remains of man, woman, child and doves were left in and around a dumpster near North Hall.

Enter mother and former student of the School of Social Work Barbara McDonald. McDonald arrived on the scene to pick her children up from an art class (ouch). The children exited the building to find the demolished statu- ary, which wreckage caused a fair amount of dismay. "Who did this?" the children asked. "What mean person would do this?" Fine questions from the mouths of babes.

We are riddled with fear, making decisions to censor or "leave things out" in quiet, among ourselves.

McDonald did not want to simply rush her children away from the macabre scene, so she took action. She began to gather the pieces of the statue and pile them into her car. They are in her garage as you read this.

"If the police want to come and take me away for opening my garage to art, let them come and take me," she says. She says some other things, too.

"I was so upset to discover that this was a result of student complaints and accreditation fears. I remember sitting in those classrooms as a student, with my babies, thinking how that statue represented so much of what we were taught to believe in."

McDonald understands very well the need to appreciate diversity in our definitions of family. In fact, she feels that people who do not fit traditional definitions of family are the ones most threatened by an ethos wherein complaints lead to institutional censorship.

"People who are marginalized in our society are the first people to lose their rights when we allow this sort of censorship. That a work of art would be destroyed like this — for these reasons — is awful. Is this what we want to teach our children?"

That last question is perhaps the most important one faced by any educational institution. Yet here at the UI, we are no longer discussing the issue. It has been decided for us, in a wash of politics, media lust and more politics.

The questions involved in this episode are not simple, and it does no good to wonder anyone — or any department — already in a tough position. The fact is, however, that the UI is a sick family right now. We are riddled with fear, making decisions to censor or "leave things out" in quiet, among ourselves. We are afraid to discuss the broader issues of our plight in public, because such discussion clearly does not endear us to the upper tiers of administration. This is worse than unfortunate. It is horrifying.

Now more than ever, we need to talk. About art, the human body, politics and religion — all the things that make regents' telephones ring at 11:30 at night. To further discourage such conversation will only lead to more casualties. We got a preview Saturday of who those casualties might be, in a dumpster outside North Hall.

Perhaps the most ironic thing about the whole episode is that a middling piece of statuary became a brilliant work of art in the moment of its destruction. A naked man, a naked woman, a naked child and doves — humanity and harmony shattered to accommodate the shrill voices of the right and left. This is where the UI stands today as an educational institution. Where in God's name will we be tomorrow?

DAVID M. MASTIO

Screwed: Generation X is in for it again

After the suicide of Kurt Cobain, the blather from the media's talking heads has reached a deafening din. Labeled "slackers" by an army of judgmental boos over 40, we were informed from dozens of sources last week that our generation is full of lazy complainers who are never going to go anywhere. We lack the holier than thou "idealism" of the baby boomers and the grit and fortitude of the World War II generation before them.

Yes, we complain. They're right; we might not go as far as our parents did. The real questions, however, are: Why do we complain? Why does it look like we won't go as far as our parents?

The simple answer is: We've been screwed. Look at the "grit" generation of World War II. They battled international fascism across Africa, Asia and Europe. They won at an incredibly high cost. They battled international communism to a standstill in the mountains of Korea. They turned the United States into a middle-class suburban nation with the most powerful economy in world history.

Ge, they're great! I'm afraid not. The World War II generation certainly had the guts to spend a lot of their own lives and an awful lot of money fighting the Cold War. The money they spent was ours. My children's children will probably still be paying off the debts of the Cold War.

Much of the upward mobility of those Cold War years in which our parents and grandparents prospered was created by huge military budgets that were never paid for with contemporaneous taxes. The economy had the huge boost of government spending that created whole new industries but none of the drag on other parts of the economy that would have been caused by high taxes. Our generation, Generation X, must pay off their debt.

Our parents' generation, the baby boomers, began to come of age in the '60s. They thought they were "different" than their parents. They had high ideals. They planned to change the world.

They changed the world all right. They brought us the trillion-dollar war on poverty, free love, casual drug use, abortion on demand, capitulation in southeast Asia. They changed the school system from an oppressive academic dungeon into an educational wasteland.

The war on poverty has left our generation with even more debt piled on top of that left to us by our grandparents' Cold War. It has also left the black community bereft of a strong family structure and many of its members abjectly dependent on the state. Crime has gone through the roof as our parents poured billions into treating the "root causes" of crime rather than do anything about criminals. Our generation must clean up their mess.

Free love, casual drug use and abortion on demand have left us a hedonistic culture obsessed with instant gratification. AIDS has decimated the gay and racial minority communities and now is beginning to strike more and more of those who don't use drugs or have promiscuous lifestyles. Every year more than 1.5 million unborn children are slaughtered. Still, the United States is plagued by unwanted children and child abuse. Our generation is left to put the culture back together.

The baby boomers also revolutionized the education system that our generation grew up in. The result is the most ignorant and uneducated generation in history, just when education is becoming the primary determinant of success in the global economy. American students score at the bottom of the industrialized world in almost every subject, but the school reforms our parents wrought assured we would have the highest self-esteem of any people in the world. Remember "new math," outcomes-based education, "social studies" instead of history, and geography and "language arts" instead of grammar and composition. Our generation is left trying to make a living without the solid education our parents took for granted. Has anyone stopped to consider why more than half of the teachers in some public-school districts send their children to private schools?

I wish the baby boomers would stop doing us favors, but they have gotten their first president in office and the favors have just begun. The pet project of our baby-boomer president is to reform the health-care system.

According to President Clinton, our health-care system needs to be reformed to help the 37 million Americans who are uninsured. Guess who two-thirds of that 37 million is? It's us.

Most single people our age chose not to pay for health care because we simply don't expect to get sick. Most of the time we are right. The Clinton plan is going to force us to be responsible and get insurance so that the small number of Generation-Xers who do get sick or injured can take care of themselves, right? Wrong.

The politicians in Washington are not talking about something in the Clinton plan called "community rating." Community rating means that everyone in a certain "health plan" will pay the same premium for the same plan regardless of their health or the risk that they will get sick. Community rating means that our generation, young and healthy, will be paying two or three times the premiums we normally would in order to subsidize the higher health risks of our parents and grandparents, who are more likely to need health care because they are old and often lead much less healthy lifestyles than we do.

We're about to get screwed again. I wish the baby boomers would stop doing us favors.

SAFE HAVEN BESIEGED

Associated Press

A group of Bosnian Serb soldiers take a break along front-line positions overlooking Gorazde Friday. Bosnian Serb tanks lumbered into the long-suffering Muslim enclave Sunday, even as U.N. officials spoke of reaching an agreement for the Serbs to pull back.

Serbs ignore U.N. resolution, advance tanks into Gorazde

Samir Krilic
Associated Press

SARAJEVO, Bosnia-Herzegovina — Serb tanks ground into Gorazde on Sunday, shortly after U.N. officials announced an agreement had been reached to end the siege of the long-suffering Muslim enclave.

In a sense, much of Gorazde had already fallen to the Serbs, though there were pockets of resistance around town Sunday, particularly at the hospital, which remained in government hands but under intense sniper fire. Serbian forces appeared free to move elsewhere about town.

"The Bosnian Serbs possess the capability to proceed at will into Gorazde," the special adviser to the U.N. secretary-general, Chinmaya Gharekhan of India, said Sunday night in New York.

The Security Council in a non-binding statement read late Sunday by the president, Colin Keating of New Zealand, said the 15-member body condemns "the escalating military activities by the Serb forces against Gorazde." It made no threat of force to enforce its condemnation.

Said Keating of the situation in Gorazde, "It has not fallen in the literal sense. It is threatened but resistance continues."

Tens of thousands of Gorazde residents, who have been under fire for most of the two-year war, covered Sunday in buildings or huddled fearfully in a drenching rain as the Serbs' tanks lumbered down the streets.

A senior government official in Gorazde told Sarajevo radio that 21 people had been killed and at least 55 wounded by Serb attacks that intensified in the afternoon and evening. The casualty report could not be independently confirmed.

The official told the radio that 10 to 12 tanks were moving toward town from the direction of Ustipraca to the east.

Taking de facto control of Gorazde, 35 miles southeast of Sarajevo, is a substantial victory for the Bosnian Serbs because it improves road links between land they captured from Bosnian government forces to the east and south.

It is also another blow to efforts by the world community to end the war, efforts often criticized as weak and unfocused.

Despite Gorazde's designation as a protected zone for Muslims last year by the United Nations, the Serbs continued their siege and were undeterred by NATO air missions in the past two weeks.

"I think that the means at our disposal are not sufficient to cope with the situation," admitted Yasushi Akashi, the chief U.N. representative for Yugoslavia. "I am afraid ... the situation does not look good."

David Hannay, the British ambassador to the United Nations, said Sunday night that the council "does not have a magic wand" to protect the six U.N.-declared "safe areas," which include Gorazde.

Vitaly Churkin, the Russian envoy who participated in negotiations Sunday in Pale, the Bosnian Serb headquarters outside Sarajevo, was similarly downcast.

"Optimistic is not the word I would use," he said about chances of a long-term cease-fire for Gorazde.

Others closer to the battlefield agreed. "Before the eyes of the entire world, a city is dying," declared Gorazde ham radio operator Enes Musovic, monitored by Bosnian radio.

Sylvana Foa, spokeswoman for the Geneva-based U.N. High Commissioner for Refugees, told of the despair at the building housing U.N. staff in Gorazde.

"Shells and sniper fire are shaking the building and it's suicidal to step outside," she said. "We're now up to about 30,000 panicking people who have moved into the center of town. Our building is full of people fleeing."

Doctors Without Borders, an international medical relief organization, cited its staff as saying Gorazde's hospital was being hit, leaving staff wounded and patients killed.

Manuel de Almeida y Silva of UNHCR in Zagreb, Croatia, said all available buildings are teeming with terrified residents, with many people reduced to standing in the streets amid heavy rains.

Earlier Sunday, U.N. peacekeepers spokesman Maj. Dacre Holloway said an agreement had been reached at U.N.-Serb talks for the Serbs to end their advance and to withdraw heavy weapons from a 1.8-mile radius around the city.

Minutes later, he reported the offensive was continuing.

An official of the Bosnian army high command said the talks had been nothing but a "trick," allowing the Serbs to continue their move toward the city.

Under the reported agreement, the Serbs were to end their siege, pull back their weapons and allow a U.N. peacekeeping force of about 350 soldiers to enter the city of 65,000 civilians.

Shuttle imaging task a success

Mike Drago
Associated Press

SPACE CENTER, Houston — NASA's Earth-monitoring radar has gathered all the information researchers had hoped for with days to spare in the flight of space shuttle Endeavour, a project scientist said.

The $366 million worth of 3-D imaging equipment has been scanning the planet's mountains, valleys, deserts and oceans since Endeavour's April 9 launch.

Some of the data was beamed directly to scientists in Houston, while the rest has filled more than half of the 183 data-collecting tapes on board. In all, the instruments have mapped an area equivalent to twice the size of the United States.

"We have collected 100 percent of the data that had been planned," Charles Elachi, a science team leader for one of the two radar instruments, said Saturday. The shuttle is set to land in Florida on Tuesday.

As the information, including thousands of related photographs snapped by six shuttle astronauts, is analyzed over the next six months, "there is no doubt that we will set a new standard for science from space," Elachi said.

The mission, which is to be duplicated on Endeavour's next flight in August, is expected to give oceanographers, hydrologists, ecologists and geologists a better understanding of the global environment.

The primary goal of this flight was to test the new radar, built by NASA and the space agencies of Germany and Italy. With only minor glitches, officials say the instruments have worked perfectly.

Sharratt named Iowa's Most Valuable Wrestler

Iowa captain Joel Sharratt was awarded the 1994 Mike Howard Most Valuable Wrestler Award at the team's annual awards banquet Friday night.

Sharratt, a junior from Bloomington, Minn., posted a 31-2 record with eight technical falls, seven major decisions and three pins. He upset top-ranked Andy Foster of Oklahoma State to win the national title.

Sophomore Lincoln McClravy received the John H. Sill Most Dedicated Wrestler Award after winning Big Ten and NCAA championships at 150 pounds.

Sophomore Daryl Weber won the Mike J. McGivern Sr. Award, presented to the most courageous wrestler. Freshman Jeff McGinness received the Most Pins and Sacrifice awards.

Junior Matt Nerem was given the Coaches' Appreciation Award. Seniors Mike Neuman and Cody Strub are candidates for the J. Donald McPike Award, which is presented at the end of the academic year for the highest grade-point average on the team.

Ultimate frisbee clubs advance to regionals

The Iowa men's ultimate frisbee club advanced to regional action after a first-place finish Sunday in the sectional tournament in Iowa City.

The women's team also advanced after placing second to Kansas. Grinnell College finished third.

The top three teams at the regional tournament, scheduled for this weekend at Grinnell College, will advance to the national tournament.

Men's novice eight rowing finishes third

The Iowa novice men's eight with coxswain rowing team placed third at the Great Plains Regatta last weekend in Topeka, Kan.

The team, with Amy Getter as coxswain, finished the 2,000-meter course ahead of 11 teams with a time of 7 minutes, 2.5 seconds. Kansas State's A-boat was first at 6:58.4, and Minnesota took second in 7:01.9.

Irwin edges Norman for Heritage Classic title

HILTON HEAD ISLAND, S.C. (AP) — Hale Irwin, who nearly ruined his chances after six holes, recovered with a 3-under-par 68 Sunday for a record-setting victory at the Heritage Classic.

The 48-year-old PGA Tour veteran finished with a record 18-under 266 at Harbour Town Golf Links, two strokes ahead of Greg Norman. It was the third time Irwin won the Heritage.

Norman, who led Irwin by three strokes with 11 holes left, closed with 13 straight pars for a 68 and 268. Loren Roberts, with a 62-269, was a surprising third after nearly tying a course-record set two days earlier.

Defending champion David Edward aced the par-3 No. 7 hole on the way to a 64. He ended in a tie for fourth at 270 along with Nolan Henke and David Frost.

Skinner wins LPGA Championship

STOCKBRIDGE, Ga. (AP) — Val Skinner birdied five holes and closed with a 4-under-par 68 Sunday to win the LPGA Women's Championship by one stroke over Liselotte Neumann.

Skinner completed the three rounds in 10-under 206. Her only bogey Sunday came on the par-4 17th.

Neumann had a chance to pull even on that hole, but the Swede also bogeyed and finished at 71.

Judy Dickinson, who was in second place, one shot behind Neumann, heading into the final round, shot a 73 and finished at 210.

Inconsistency costs Iowa first place

Weekend split with Hoosiers drops Iowa to 9-3 in Big Ten

Mike Egenes

The Daily Iowan

Senior right-hander Karen Jackson threw 28 innings, but won just two games for the Iowa softball team over a four-game series with Indiana this weekend at the Hawkeye Softball Complex.

Jackson tossed 1-0 and 3-0 wins Saturday, giving the Hawkeyes sole possession of first place in the Big Ten. But the No. 20-ranked Hawkeyes looked like a completely different team Sunday, when it dropped both ends of a doubleheader 5-2, 5-2 and returned to second place behind Indiana with a 9-3 conference mark.

Blevins said the Iowa defense "self-destructed" during Sunday's losses. The Hawkeye offense collected 17 hits, but stranded 15 runners in Sunday's twinbill.

"I thought we were very apprehensive and fearful in the first game today," Blevins said Sunday. "Those plays are routine and are plays our infield has to be able to make."

In the first game, the Hawkeyes committed two sixth-inning errors, which allowed four Hoosiers to cross the plate. Shortstop Christy Hebert and catcher Stacey Harrison were charged with throwing errors on the same play, which allowed three runs to score. Indiana's Karen Kron followed with an RBI single to right field to extend the lead to three.

The Hawkeyes (24-16 overall) did not pose an offensive threat in the seventh as they went down in order, including strikeouts by Melissa Young and Harrison.

Iowa scored one of its runs in the third inning on three consecutive two-strike, two-out singles by Melissa Wielandt, Jenni Stotmeister and Kari Knopf.

The other run came from Wielandt's RBI single to center in the sixth.

Jackson struck out seven and was hit hard just once in the first game Sunday when Indiana's Michelle Venturella drove her 10th homer of the season over the left-center field wall in the fourth inning. After that, Venturella was intentionally walked five times. She came into the four-game series hitting .425 with nine home runs and 38 RBI.

Jackson (18-5) didn't take the games personally.

"Every loss hurts, but you have to learn from them," Jackson said. "Personally, I'm not going to take them as a setback, but if it comes down to the end of the season I'm going to look back and say, 'Yeah, these games hurt.'"

"But I approach every game the same way — I want to win and I want to win the Big Ten," she said.

"That's my goal and that's what I put on the field every day."

In the second game, the Hawkeyes started strong, scoring two runs in the first inning on an RBI single by Katy Morgan and an RBI triple by Harrison.

But this time, it was the Hawkeye outfield that struggled to make plays, surrendering three runs on one error and two Hoosier doubles in the sixth. Blevins thought both doubles could have been caught.

"In the last game, our outfield self-destructed. And that hurts," Blevins said.

Jordan gets job done for Barons

David Droschak

Associated Press

ZEBULON, N.C. — Michael Jordan has reached that magic baseball number — 300.

The former NBA star extended his hitting streak to five games Sunday night, going 2-for-4 to raise his average to .304 in his return to his home state as a professional baseball player.

Jordan has gone 7-for-23 after seven games and is now the leading hitter for the Double AA Birmingham Barons. He also picked up his fourth stolen base during a 4-3 loss to the Carolina Mudcats.

After taking the day off Saturday night, Jordan was back in the lineup batting seventh and playing right field, drawing an overflow crowd of 8,045 to Five County Stadium.

After falling behind 0-2 and bouncing weakly to second base his first time at bat, Jordan smacked a sharp single to left field in the fourth, and his lazy fly to right fell in three innings later.

Jordan was picked off after his second single, but showed his athletic ability during the rundown as Carolina had to make six throws before getting him between first and second.

Jordan popped up to second base to lead off the ninth.

It was Jordan's second multi-hit game. He has all singles.

Jordan had an uneventful day in the field, his only chance a one-hop single, which he fielded cleanly.

Jordan last played organized baseball at Laney High School in Wilmington, about two hours from Zebulon.

The crowd cheered each time Jordan walked to the plate. Carolina's mascot, Muddy the Mudcat, had some fun by carrying around a cardboard figure of Orlando Magic center Shaquille O'Neil wearing a home uniform.

Before the game, Jordan took some extra hitting for about 20 minutes in a cage behind the stands, shaking off some rust from an all-night, 10-hour bus trip from Chattanooga, Tenn.

He was surrounded by about 100 children seeking autographs on basketballs as well as baseballs. Many of the youngsters wore No. 23 Chicago Bulls jerseys.

However, Jordan didn't sign any autographs except for a few Mudcat players while he shagged fly balls during batting practice.

Jordan seemed annoyed at times by the attention before the game, walking to the other side of the batting cage to avoid about 40 reporters and photographers.

He also danced away from a cameraman and gave him several dirty looks while walking to the locker room.

Fans five deep lined the right-field line behind a short fence, taking photos and clapping every time

Jordan walked to and from the locker room. But they went away disappointed when he didn't sign any autographs and re-emerged to run a few sprints and get loose just before the 6:05 p.m. start.

Dodgers slug 21 hits in 19-2 win

PITTSBURGH — Cory Snyder hit three homers and drove in seven runs, and the Dodgers matched their highest run total since moving to Los Angeles with a 19-2 victory Sunday over the Pittsburgh Pirates.

Snyder had a pair of two-run homers, then added a three-run drive during a nine-run seventh inning for the second three-homer game of his career.

Tom Candiotti (3-0) allowed two runs over six innings for his third straight victory as the Dodgers finished with 21 hits, halting a four-game losing streak and Pittsburgh's six-game winning streak.

Two of Snyder's homers and Raul Mondesi's three-run drive came off Steve Cooke (2-1), roughed up for nine runs and 12 hits in five innings.

Braves 4, Cubs 2

CHICAGO — Atlanta tied a club record with its 10th consecutive road victory, and John Smoltz (2-1) allowed five hits in seven innings and struck out eight. Greg McMichael got three outs for his fourth save in five opportunities.

Atlanta, a major-league best 12-1, also won 10 straight on the road in July 1992. Including the end of the 1993 season, the Braves have won 12 consecutive road games.

Mike Morgan (0-2), who missed his two previous turns because of weakness in his right shoulder, gave up all four runs and six hits in five innings.

Reds 7, Phillies 0

PHILADELPHIA — Tom Browning pitched a two-hitter for his first shutout in four seasons.

Browning (1-0), who missed the final three months of 1993 because of a broken finger, won for the first time since last July 22. It was his 12th career shutout, his first since May 7, 1990.

Rangers, Stars grab early series victories

Associated Press

The New York Rangers won with authority and the Dallas Stars won with a gamble in the NHL playoffs Sunday.

Led by a goal and two assists from Mark Messier, the Rangers enjoyed a surprisingly easy victory over the New York Islanders, a 6-0 romp in the opener of their Eastern Conference series.

Though the Rangers were the NHL's top team during the season, they had only one victory and two ties in five games with their New York rivals, who finished 28 points behind them in the standings.

The Stars beat St. Louis 5-3 in a Western Conference opener with backup goaltender Darcy Wakaluk a surprise starter over Andy Moog, the 10th winningest goaltender in NHL history. Wakaluk made 33 saves as the Stars brought playoff hockey to Texas.

On Sunday night, Buffalo beat New Jersey 2-0 and Washington stopped Pittsburgh 5-3.

The playoffs opened Saturday night with Boston beating Montreal 3-2 in the Eastern Conference. The playoffs continue tonight with the Islanders visiting the Rangers and Montreal at Boston in the Eastern Conference, and San Jose at Detroit, Chicago at Toronto and Vancouver at Calgary in the West.

MEN'S TENNIS

Hawkeyes seal top seven finish

Doug Alden
The Daily Iowan

After falling behind early, the Iowa men's tennis team rebounded to beat the Boilermakers 5-2 Sunday at Klotz Tennis Courts.

It was the second win of the weekend for the Hawkeyes (11-7 overall, 5-3 in the Big Ten), who won an emotional 4-3 showdown over Illinois Friday afternoon.

The pair of Big Ten wins guarantees the Hawkeyes a top seven seed at next month's Big Ten Tennis Championships in Minneapolis. The eighth through 11th seeds have a playoff on the first day of the tournament to see who plays the top seed in the opening round.

"We've put ourselves in excellent shape in the Big Ten race," Coach Steve Houghton said. "This guarantees we won't have to play on the first day at Big Tens. It's a big load off everyone's mind."

Depending on the last two matches of the season, Houghton said Iowa could be seeded anywhere from No. 2 to No. 7.

"We've put ourselves in excellent shape in the Big Ten race. This guarantees we won't have to play on the first day at Big Tens. It's a big load off everyone's mind."

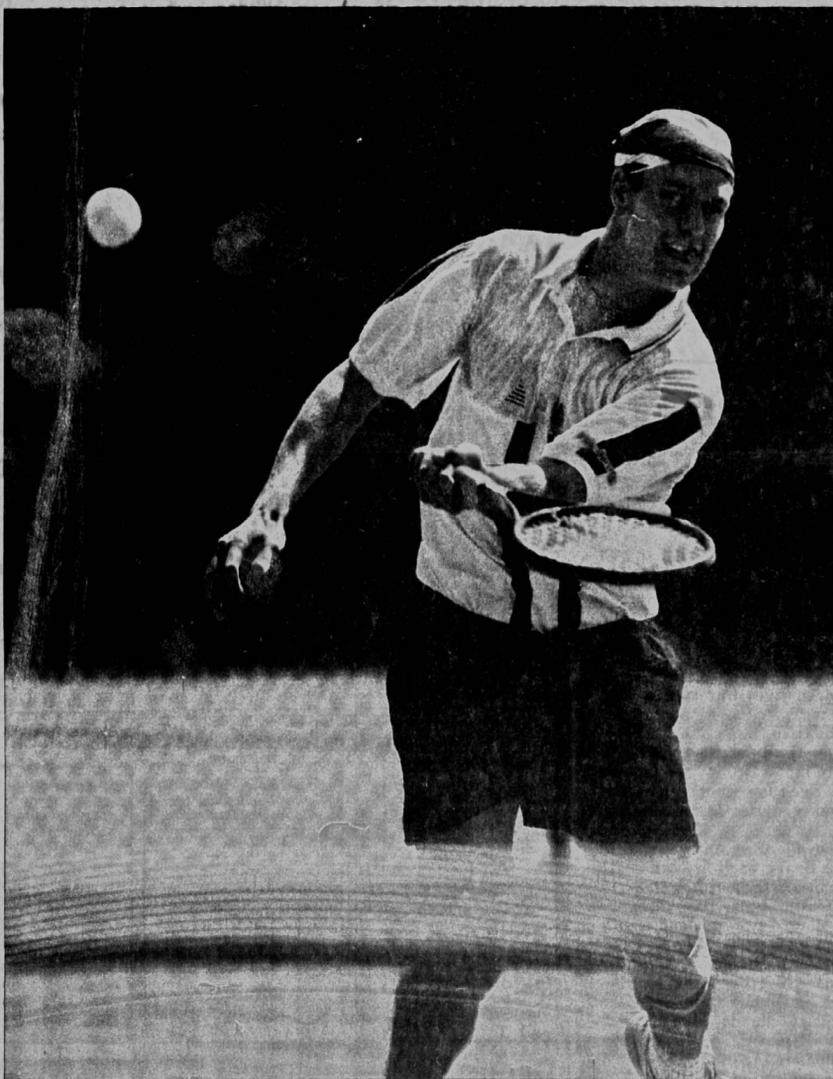

Steve Houghton, Iowa men's tennis coach

On Sunday, the Boilermakers took a 1-0 lead after winning two of the three doubles matches, but the Hawkeyes came back in singles to take the dual.

Houghton was pleased with the win, and said losing the doubles point may have helped the Hawkeyes.

"We're unaccustomed to losing the doubles point," Houghton said. "That really woke some guys up as far as singles goes. They responded really well."

Iowa took all but one singles match in straight sets with Bryan Crowley winning at No. 1, Bob Zumph at No. 2, Tom Derouin at No. 3, Todd Shale at No. 4 and Neil Denahan at No. 6. Carl Manheim had Iowa's only loss in singles when a shoulder injury forced him to retire after splitting two sets with Greg Wessenberg.

The Fighting Illini and the Hawkeyes were tied at three with Manheim and Michau Basson batting for the game-winning point Friday. Manheim dropped a 4-1 lead in the third set, but was able to hang on and take the match 6-4, 3-6, 7-5 for the win.

"That was a really dramatic match," Houghton said. "It was an emotional win over Illinois."

The Hawkeyes will host Indiana Saturday at 9:30 a.m.

Belger gains sixth save in Iowa split

SPORTS ROUNDUP

Hawkeye junior Kurt Belger earned his sixth save of the season as Iowa split the series 2-2 with Michigan last weekend.

Belger struck out five in 1 1/2 innings, relieving junior Jason Schulte (1-3) in the sixth of a 6-0 shutout at Michigan Sunday. He fanned two with the bases loaded in the sixth and three to close out the seventh.

The Hawkeyes moved to 9-7 in the Big Ten, 17-19-1 overall.

Iowa lost the opener 5-1, giving up all five runs in the fifth inning. Brent Glendinning (1-2) took the loss, allowing four runs on three hits in 4 1/2 innings.

The Hawkeyes scored a run in the 10th inning to break away from the Wolverines 4-3 in Saturday's opener. Colin Mattiace (5-2) gave up eight hits, walked two and struck out three to earn the win.

Michigan's Scott Weaver led the Wolverines to a 9-3 win in the second game with three hits and five RBI.

-Roxanna Pellin

WOMEN'S TENNIS

The Iowa women's tennis team improved its Big Ten record to 5-3 over the weekend with road wins over Purdue and Illinois.

The Hawkeyes had little trouble beating the Boilermakers 8-1 Saturday, but had a more difficult time with the Fighting Illini Sunday.

The score was tied at three after the singles competition Sunday with the Hawkeyes getting wins from Laura Dvorak at No. 1, Nikki Willette at No. 4 and Cara Cashon at No. 6. Doubles wins from the teams of Dvorak and Sasha Boros at No. 2 and Cashon and Amy Jahn at No. 3 were enough to give the Hawkeyes the 5-4 win.

-Doug Alden

WOMEN'S TRACK

For the Iowa women's track and field team, last weekend's Mount SAC Relays at Walnut, Calif. was just another step towards what promises to be one of the team's most successful seasons in years.

The Hawkeyes broke one school record and provisionally qualified for Nationals in two events while finishing first or second in four events.

The 400-meter relay team of Tina Floyd, Yolanda Hobbs, Tanja Reid and Marlene Poole broke the school record they set a week earlier with a time of 44.95 seconds.

Tina Stec provisionally qualified for the national championships in the 3,000 race with a time of 9:28.57. Stec came back to finish fourth in the 800 with a time of 2:11.64.

"It was a very strong (3,000-meters) field that Tina ran in, it was a remarkable finish," head coach Jerry Hassard said.

Other standouts for Iowa were Poole, who finished first in the 200, Christine Salsberry, who won the 1,500 and Reid, who took second in the 100.

-Dave Herda

MEN'S TRACK

With wind gusts reaching 40 mph Saturday afternoon in East Lansing, Mich., the Iowa men's track and field team needed a victory in its final event to capture the dual meet title from host Michigan State.

Reggie Hawkins, Andre Morris, Marco Loureiro, and James Porter teamed up in the 1,600-meter relay to give Iowa a victory at the tape and take the dual meet crown.

Chad Ohly led Iowa with 15 points in six events, including first-place finishes in the javelin and the pole vault. Morris scored 13 points in four events, including a victory in the 200.

"This meet showed us that everyone is important," head coach Ted Wheeler said.

All-American Kevin Herd won the 3,000 and the 1,500. Michael Seymour captured first place in the long jump, and Jake Drewry contributed five points while competing in three events.

-Dave Herda

MEN'S GOLF

The Iowa men's golf team is 14th with a score of 320 after 18 holes at The Legends of Indiana Intercollegiate in Franklin, Ind.

The remaining 36 holes will be played today.

Shaq, Magic snap Bulls' 10-game win streak

Associated Press

ORLANDO, Fla. — Chicago trailed Orlando by just two points late in the third quarter, and it seemed the Bulls would have a good chance to extend their 10-game winning streak.

Seven points by the Magic in a 37-second span changed all that.

Shaquille O'Neal made a free throw and Dennis Scott and Nick Anderson followed with 3-pointers to break open a close game and propel the Magic to a 118-101 victory Sunday.

"We had a pretty good game going for ourselves and we just caved in," Coach Phil Jackson said after Orlando moved a game closer to clinching homecourt advantage in the first round of the playoffs. "And when caved in, they just ran over us."

With a sellout crowd of 15,291 waving placards in support of O'Neal for MVP, the Magic center had 32 points, 14 rebounds and two blocked shots. The seven-point spurt he started with 2:35 left in the third quarter turned a 78-76 lead into an 85-76 advantage.

Anderson scored 22 points and rookie Anfernee Hardaway, coming off his first career triple-double, had 21 points, eight rebounds and seven assists.

Orlando, which stopped a two-game losing streak, leads Cleveland by 2 1/2 games in the race for the fourth seed in the Eastern Conference playoffs. The Magic (47-31) have four games remaining; the Cavs (45-34) three.

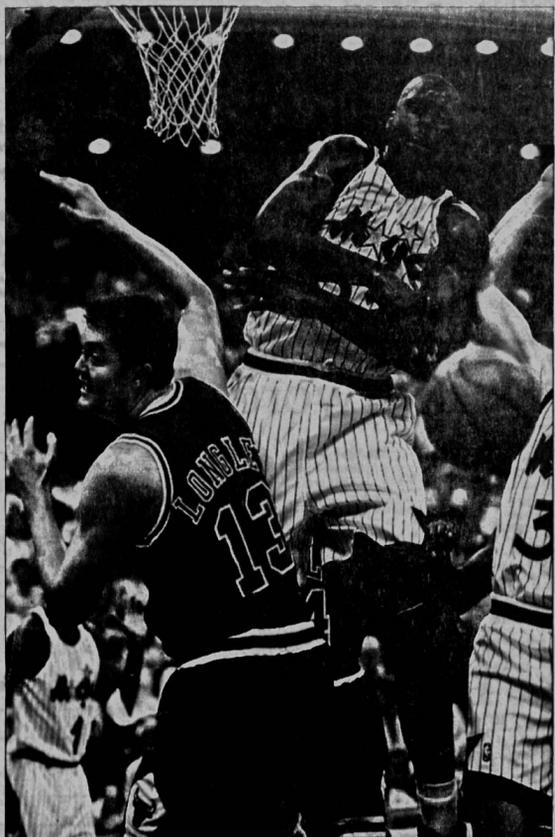

Chicago, meanwhile, missed an opportunity to pull ahead of New York in the battle for best record in the conference. The Bulls (54-25) currently have the third-best record in the East, one-half game behind the Knicks and 1 1/2 games behind Atlanta.

Scottie Pippen led the Bulls with 34 points. Horace Grant added 17 for Chicago and B.J. Armstrong had 14.

Nets 110, Heat 103
MIAMI — Kenny Anderson scored six of his 29 points down the stretch and New Jersey clinched a playoff spot for the third straight year.

Miami, losers of five straight and 12 of 15, is 1 1/2 games ahead of Charlotte for the eighth and final playoff spot in the Eastern Conference.

total of last year and won the season series with Miami 3-2. Benoit Benjamin finished with 25 points and 12 rebounds. Derrick Coleman, plagued by foul troubles, was held to seven points, 13 below his season average.

Hornets 107, Knicks 91
CHARLOTTE, N.C. — Larry Johnson scored 22 points and Hersey Hawkins had 20 as Charlotte, playing without suspended center Alonzo Mourning, kept its playoff hopes alive.

Johnson was 10-for-20 from the field with 12 rebounds. He also made three straight baskets, two from outside, midway through the fourth quarter to hold off the Knicks. The rest of the Hornets also played well. Dell Curry scored 15 points, Frank Brickowski 11 and Kenny Gattison 10. Patrick Ewing led New York with 20 points.

Nuggets 99, Timberwolves 88
MINNEAPOLIS — LaPhonso Ellis and Robert Pack sparked a 40-13 second-half run, and Denver rallied from a 16-point third-quarter deficit.

Denver, which two days earlier clinched the NBA's final Western Conference playoff berth, improved to 39-39. The Nuggets are seeking their first winning season since 1989-90. Ellis finished with 21 points for the Nuggets, who shot 53 percent from the floor.

Christian Laettner had 19 points and 12 rebounds for the Timberwolves, who have lost six straight games and 11 of their last 12.

Bullets 142, Celtics 100

LANDOVER, Md. — Don MacLean had 21 points and Calbert Cheaney 20 as Washington had its most lopsided victory ever.

Tom Gugliotta and Kevin Duckworth had 18 points each for the Bullets, who ended a three-game losing streak with its biggest offensive output of the season.

Dee Brown scored 21 and Dino Radja 19 for the Celtics.

Pacers 104, Pistons 99

AUBURN HILLS, Mich. — Byron Scott scored nine of his 16 points in the fourth quarter, leading Indiana to a playoff-clinching victory.

The loss was Detroit's ninth straight.

Rik Smits also had 16 points for Indiana. Isaiah Thomas led all scorers with 22.

Royals' Appier rebounds

Associated Press

CLEVELAND — Five days after the worst start of his career, Kevin Appier pitched seven strong innings Sunday as the Kansas City Royals beat the Cleveland Indians 4-3 for their fourth straight win.

Rookie designated hitter Bob Hamelin homered and doubled, driving in three runs and has eight RBI in his last two games.

Brian McRae had four hits, matching his career high for Kansas City, which completed its first sweep in Cleveland since 1973.

Appier (1-2) came into the game with a 13.50 ERA after allowing nine runs in three innings of a 22-11 loss to Boston last Tuesday.

Jack Morris (1-1) gave up eight hits in 6 1/2 innings.

White Sox 7, Red Sox 4

BOSTON — Frank Thomas and Darrin Jackson hit solo homers in the fourth inning, and Lance Johnson added a pair of RBI singles for Chicago.

Scott Sanderson (1-0), making his first appearance for the White Sox, allowed one run and six hits in six innings.

Roberto Hernandez got the final four outs, striking out the side in the ninth for his second save.

Frank Viola (0-1) allowed four runs and seven hits in 5 1/2 innings.

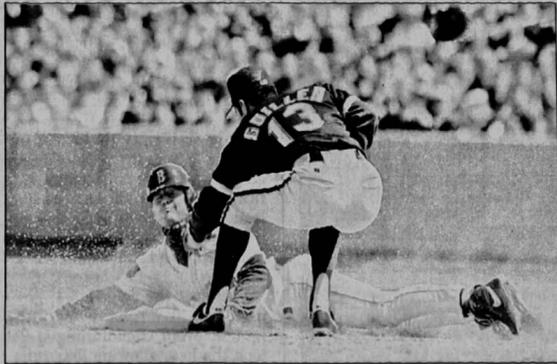

Yankees 8, Tigers 6

DETROIT — Bernie Williams ignited a four-run eighth with a sacrifice fly and Luis Polonia singled in two runs.

Don Mattingly opened the eighth with a double off Bill Krueger (0-1) and Danny Tartabull singled him to third. Mike Stanley was walked intentionally to load the bases, and Williams' fly to right brought Mattingly home.

Mike Gardiner relieved Krueger and yielded an RBI single to Mike Gallego before Pat Kelly walked to re-load the bases. Polonia followed with his two-run single to make it 8-4.

Xavier Hernandez (1-0) picked up the win despite giving up a two-run homer to Eric Davis in the eighth. Jeff Reardon got his second save.

Athletics 5, Twins 1

OAKLAND, Calif. — Ron Darling, coming off two shaky starts, limited Minnesota to three hits in eight innings and Mark McGwire homered for the third straight game.

Darling (2-1) had given up nine runs in nine innings in his two previous outings before putting it together Sunday. He walked two and struck out eight before giving way to Billy Taylor, who pitched a perfect ninth.

After the Twins staked Scott Erickson (1-2) to a 1-0 lead on Kent Hrbek's sacrifice fly in the first, the A's scored three runs in the fourth.

Blue Jays 5, Angels 4, 10 innings

ANAHEIM, Calif. — Ed Sprague singled over a drawn-in infield in the 10th inning to score Roberto Alomar.

In the 10th, Alomar led off with a single against Joe Grahe (0-2) and Joe Carter followed with a ground-rule double. After an intentional walk to John Olerud loaded the bases, Sprague hit a soft liner that deflected off the top of first baseman Eduardo Perez's glove, allowing Alomar to score.

Todd Stottlemyre (1-0) gave up a one-out double to Perez in the 10th and a walk, but got Gary DiSarcina to fly to center.

Devon White and Carter homered for the Blue Jays.

Mariners 8, Brewers 3

SEATTLE — Ken Griffey Jr. and Torey Lovullo each had three hits and the Seattle Mariners scored five runs in the fourth inning.

Seattle, shut out 1-0 by the Brewers on Saturday, broke out of a 16-inning scoreless streak with the five-run outburst against Milwaukee starter Jaime Navarro (1-1).

Lovullo, Eric Anthony and Darren Bragg each hit run-scoring doubles in the fourth.

Seattle starter Dave Fleming (2-1) allowed two runs and nine hits in 6 1/2 innings.

Orioles 6, Rangers 5

ARLINGTON, Texas — Reliever Lee Smith came on in the ninth inning to shut down Texas.

Baltimore reliever Mark Williamson (1-0) allowed four hits and one run in 3 1/2 innings to pick up the victory. Starter Jack Armstrong (0-1) took the loss.

GOLF

Trevino rallies to win Seniors

Associated Press

PALM BEACH GARDENS, Fla. — Lee Trevino watched Ray Floyd hit three balls into the water in the last four holes and rallied from four shots behind on the back-nine to win the PGA Seniors Championship Sunday.

Trevino earned his second victory of the season with a closing 70 and a 279 total, 9 under par on the PGA National Golf Club course.

Floyd, who moved in front by avoiding the multiple-stroke penalties that plagued other competitors, held a four-shot lead at the turn.

But successive swings off the tee on the par-3 15th found the water and Floyd eventually stalked away with a quadruple bogey-7.

Losing seven shots to Trevino in six holes, Floyd went from four ahead after nine to three behind after 15. Any chances he might have had to regroup were drowned on the 17th when, again, he hit one into the water for a double bogey-5.

And, essentially, the title race was over. So were Floyd's chances of keeping alive a shot at the unaccomplished Senior Grand Slam, a one-year sweep of the four major titles on the senior circuit.

He beat Dale Douglass in a playoff for the first one, the Tradition at Desert Mountain, two weeks ago. This was the second.

His 42 over the back, finishing off a round of 75, killed any thoughts of a second consecutive major title.

Jim Colbert, never really in the title hunt, came on to take second at 280, after a bogey-free final round of 67.

Floyd fell back into a tie for third at 282 with Dave Stockton. Stockton matched par 72.

The group at 283 included Douglas, Isao Aoki of Japan, DeWitt Weaver and Chi Chi Rodriguez. Aoki closed up with a 66. Weaver birdied four of the first five holes and shot 68. Rodriguez had a 69 and Douglass shot 72.

Trevino, who won this title for the second time, collected $115,000 from the total purse of $850,000 and increased his leading money-winning total $381,017.

for goaltender Mike Richter, who had 21 saves in recording his third playoff shutout.

The Rangers attacked from all directions while Islanders goaltender Ron Hextall played poorly and was pulled in the second period after the sixth goal.

Messier assisted on Brian Leetch's power-play goal in the first period, then scored at 9:13 of the second to launch a four-goal spurge. Messier's goal was the backbreaker, a shot from deep in the left circle that Hextall probably should have stopped. It gave the Rangers a 3-0 lead and the Islanders were never the same after that.

Sabres 2, Devils 0

At East Rutherford, N.J., Dominik Hasek brought his regular-season goaltending brilliance to the playoffs by stopping 30 shots and leading the Sabres over the Devils.

Seldom-used Todd Simon provided all the offensive support Hasek needed by scoring his first NHL goal on a 4-on-3 power play late in the first period. Alexander Mogilny added an empty-netter with 8.2 seconds to play.

Capitals 5, Penguins 3

At Pittsburgh, the Capitals wore down the Penguins with patience and defensive pressure, sealing a victory on Joe Juneau's breakaway goal at 10:34 of the third period.

Peter Bondra and Mike Ridley scored 2:22 apart in the second period to reverse a one-goal Pittsburgh lead as the Capitals beat the Penguins in the first game of a playoff series for the third time in four seasons.

The Capitals are 20-12-6 since Jim Schoenfeld replaced Terry Murray as coach at midseason and installed a system that kept their high-scoring defenseman active.

Western Conference Stars 5, Blues 3

At Dallas, Grant Ledyard and Trent Klatt scored late third-period goals and Wakaluk made them stand up as the Stars won their first playoff game in Texas. Walaluk started his first playoff game in Texas.

St. Louis tied it 3-3 early in the third period on a power-play goal by Brett Hull and a 60-foot wrist shot by Phil Housley. But Ledyard tipped in shot by Craig Ludwig with 3:49 left. Then Klatt put the game away with 1:37 to go on a pass from Mike Modano.

NATIONAL LEAGUE

Shawn Boskie (0-1), making his first appearance for Philadelphia since the Phillies acquired him from Chicago on April 12, allowed two runs and nine hits in six innings, struck out four and walked one.

Mets 4, Astros 2

NEW YORK — Jeff Kent hit two more home runs, including a two-run drive in the eighth inning. He has seven this season, including two multi-homer games.

Kent connected for a solo homer in the second inning off Darryl Kile and his go-ahead drive with one out in the eighth against Todd Jones (0-1).

Bobby Jones (2-1) gave up five hits in eight innings, struck out four and walked two. John Franco finished for his second save.

Cardinals 5, Padres 0

ST. LOUIS — Geronimo Pena homered from both sides of the plate, and Rene Arocha (1-1) rebounded from two poor starts with a five-hitter. He struck out nine, matching his career high.

San Diego has lost seven of eight and is 2-11 overall, the worst record in the major leagues. St. Louis has won four of five.

Pena, playing only because of an injury to second baseman Luis Alicea, homered left-handed off Andy Ashby (0-2) in the third and hit a 3-2 pitch from Mark Davis in the seventh.

Giants 9, Marlins 8

MIAMI — Mark Portugal (2-0) won his 14th consecutive decision, and Barry Bonds and Matt Williams hit two-run homers for San Francisco, which nearly wasted a 9-2 lead. Williams went 4-for-5.

Portugal (2-0) allowed five runs in seven innings. Mike Jackson, helped by Bonds' leaping catch that robbed Jeff Conine of an extra-base hit, pitched a perfect ninth for his second save.

Ryan Bowen (0-3) gave up eight hits in five innings for Florida, which scored three runs in the eighth after a bench-clearing fight that began when a pitch by Kevin Rogers brushed back Benito Santiago, who then charged the mound and tackled the reliever.

Rockies 6, Expos 5

DENVER — Ellis Burks homered with two outs in the 10th inning off Gil Heredia (0-2), putting Colorado above .500 for the first time ever at 6-5.

Colorado has won four consecutive games and also has won six straight extra-inning games. Mike Munoz (1-1), Colorado's sixth pitcher, threw a one-hit 10th.

High and Lonesome peaks with exuberant new LiveFromGabe's

Tad Parsons
The Daily Iowan

Iowa City's High and Lonesome has been blowing crowds with its brashly bold barroom rock for over a year now, amassing a sizable local following and a reputation of mammoth proportions. Turning local venues into saunas of sweat and spilled beer, High and Lonesome jams with rocketlike velocity, stealing the hearts of patchouli girls and winning over elbow-throwing frat dudes along the way. In the solemn words of Plato, "These are tunes to body-slam to."

This is a band that thrives on the live vibe; its debut CD, 1993's Alackaday, was an excellent packaging of the group's original material, but it seemed too contained and restrained to truly evoke that bouncy vibe. Back then, you could hear the obliterated masses muttering to themselves, "Man, they oughta put out a live album, man!"

Apparently, the band heard and understood. LiveFromGabe's, High and Lonesome's second, and best, release, was recorded during a show last October at Gabe's, 330 E. Washington St. John Svec, who also engineered Alackaday, mixed this latest release at Minstrel Studios here in Iowa City. Svec is one talented guy when he gets behind the sound board and it shows here; qualitywise, LiveFromGabe's songs are squeaky clean, like rubbing a bald man's head.

LiveFromGabe's is by no means a brief spin on the CD player, although it only has seven tracks. It contains four cranked-up songs from Alackaday and three unreleased tunes, totaling about 60 minutes in length. Two of the tracks ("I Can" and "Shining Softly") are over 11 minutes long.

We learn on the third tune ("Doin' Time") that the show was dedicated to a well-known groupie about to enter into a short-term living arrangement with Iowa's penal system; this may very well explain the evident inspiration behind these particular jams.

David Zollo, High and Lonesome's crooning lead singer and keyboardist, seems especially enlivened, pounding away at his piano and howling with joyous abandon. His piano stylings match up tightly, as always, with the dueling guitars of Ruairi Fennessy and Darren Matthews.

The rhythmic core of drummer Brad Engeldinger and bassist Dustin Connor is solid and bottom-heavy, too, though Connor's thumps are often drowned out by the other players.

(Engeldinger has since been replaced by former Head Candy drummer Jim Viner and is now playing with the funk group Dagobah, another Iowa City band that includes former members of another former Iowa City band, Captain Barney. This change of lineup is, of course, ancient history by now.)

So which cuts truly sparkle on LiveFromGabe's? For starters, "Driftwood from Kerry," which features some fine slide guitar and a lot of desperate wailing from Zollo. Also, the unreleased cut "I Can," which washes over the listener like a never-ending wave of sound — this is a moody, shimmering midtempo ballad you won't want to end.

Check out "Doin' Time" and "Straight Ahead Boogie" to get a taste of what drives live audiences into zany spasms of euphoria. Both of these tunes are racing rockabilly escapades, featuring some awesome guitar-slinging from both of the band's axmen.

High and Lonesome definitely has stood the test of time on the bloody battlefield of the Iowa City live music scene. Like most bands, this one has its critics — mainly those who relentlessly throw out words like "unoriginal" or "derivative" to describe fresh takes on old, reliable formulas.

But High and Lonesome's raw energy and enthusiasm is undeniably exciting. Hopefully, LiveFromGabe's will all but reinforce the band's followers' adoration, as well as win over some new fans in the process.

Kevorkian's 'rebellious' art being sold to raise money

Julia Prodis
Associated Press

SOUTHFIELD, Mich. — Dr. Jack Kevorkian has returned to an old hobby while waiting to go on trial, painting stark, surrealistic works in oil.

In "War," Kevorkian created a human head oozing on a table platter. Mars, the god of war, peers over its bare shoulder.

"It's symbolic of humanity. It's self-destructive," said Kevorkian.

His "Fever" depicts the naked torso of a man. Bones red hot from fever show through his skin; heat emanates from his body.

"When you look at this painting, I want you to feel fever," Kevorkian said in an interview Tuesday.

He is charged with breaking Michigan's law banning assisted suicide and could face four years in prison and a $2,000 fine if convicted. The retired pathologist has been present at the deaths of 20 people.

Kevorkian plans to auction off both paintings to raise money for his campaign to legalize assisted suicide in Michigan. Volunteers are gathering signatures to place a constitutional amendment on the November ballot.

The two paintings mark Kevorkian's return to the easel after a 30-year hiatus.

He began painting when he was a young pathologist in his hometown of Pontiac. He took a night-school art class, mostly with housewives and nurses who painted clowns and landscapes.

"Out of a mild revulsion, I thought I would rebel," he said. "So

"War," by Jack Kevorkian

I said, 'I'll paint something here that will turn everybody's stomach and I'm going to quit. Instead of walking out, I thought I'd go out with a roar, not a murmur.'"

His first painting showed a human skull with a disjointed jaw "like it was laughing." Out of an eye socket grew an iris. The head's skin was ripped off and tacked up in the background.

"It was a nice painting. The iris had a little glow and aura around it," he said.

He called it "Very Still Life." Kevorkian went on to paint a series illustrating medical symptoms: nausea, coma, vertigo, depression, paralysis. The works were exhibited at several Michigan colleges in the 1960s but were lost while being shipped in 1990.

He said he doesn't like painting, but enjoys watching people react to his work.

CULTURAL FUTURE EXPLORED

Bizarre 'Wax' offers vision of Pynchon's Armageddon

Ian Corwin
The Daily Iowan

"I've never been able to buy into the worlds created by writers of 'post-apocalyptic cyber-fiction.' That name alone conjures images of the Heavy Metal magazine-type, men with mechanical hands making love to hefty-breasted vixens in the middle of space stations or subterranean caves. If this is mankind's destiny following all of these atomic wars I've heard tell about, I'm beginning work on a bomb shelter immediately ... not.

Somehow, I don't think we're headed for anything that dramatic. Granted, there's a certain romance behind that stuff, but if we're being realistic, we should say that the research and hilarious newsreel footage, creating a basis for his fiction in the past, a gesture on par with Woody Allen's faux documentary "Zelig."

Old newsreel footage from 1914 introduces James Hivemaker, a professional beekeeper whose half-sister is a spirit cinematographer who believes she can photograph the souls of the dead. She meets a colleague of her brother's, one Zoltan Abasid, who romances her and woos her to America, to New Mexico.

Here is where "Wax" begins to tell the tale it has to tell. The film winds up as a modern myth of death and killing, told from the point of view of Jacob Maker (James Hivemaker's great-grandson), an employee at an Army weapons plant outside of Alamogordo, N.M., in the year 1991. Jacob is married to a woman who works on the space shuttle project for the government. Together they watch television and live a kind of twisted modern-day nightmare.

Jacob has kept his great-grandfather's stock of rare Mesopotamian bees for years. He feels a special bond with the bees, a bond that grows into a troubling distraction for Jacob as he spends more time at the hive. He's ignoring his wife, speculating about his job and growing increasingly distant as the days wear on.

Finally, the bees decide to let Jacob in on a little secret; they implant a "bee TV" in Jacob's head, and he begins receiving images from the Planet of the Dead, where the bees live. Jacob, of course, can't be bothered with trivialities like work and marriage anymore, so he walks out into the desert, looking for the entrance into the bees' world.

"Wax" is truly bizarre. Once the concrete details of time, place and character are firmly established, they are subordinated to a hypnotic flood of hallucinatory imagery, computer-enhanced graphics and speculation. Blair muses on everything from the ancient concept of the Logos and gnosis to the purpose served by the x-shaped targeting system on modern weapons. It all builds to a cosmic climax reminiscent of "2001," with a little "Dr. Who" thrown in for good measure.

The fragmented nature of the story and the obvious dependence on psychedelics thought may put some viewers off of "Wax" from the start. But for those who appreciate being exposed to some very astonishing ideas within the framework of a funny, frightening narrative, "Wax" awaits. ... It's part honey, part maddening buzz and one big sting.

Videotapeworm

Apocalypse, for what it's worth, is happening now. It's cultural ... quieter and slower than a hydrogen bomb, and no one knows who'll be left standing when it's over.

Novelist Thomas Pynchon gave us a brief glimpse of his vision of man's hallucinatory, post-apocalyptic future with his brainy, meticulous book "Gravity's Rainbow." The hero, Tyrone Slothrop, careens through war-ravaged Europe circa 1944-45, giving Pynchon an apocalypse in the making, a framework based in documented fact with which to explore the possibilities of our future.

But how does one transpose Pynchon's striking mixture of psychedelic imagery, historical research and cultural discourse onto a 3:4 television aspect ratio (not to mention a 90-minute timeframe) and still be able to expect that the ideas will remain intact?

A strange question with a stranger answer ... "Wax, or the Discovery of Television Among the Bees" (1991) is a far cry from Pynchon's work in terms of impact and universality. But in its elaborate myths and strange, hypnotic story line, "Wax" comes about as close as a film can to creating a world of bizarre and horrifying wonders on par with the writings of Pynchon or Don DeLillo (see "White Noise" or "Mao Two").

Filmmaker David Blair, working on a shoestring budget (the entirety of "Wax" is shot on video), sets out armed with obscure historical

Myles Aronowitz/MGM

After months of waiting, Iowa City is finally getting a look at best actress nominee Stockard Channing in "Six Degrees of Separation." The film, starring, left to right, Donald Sutherland, Channing, Bruce Davison and Mary Beth Hurt is apparently worth the wait.

'Six Degrees' jump-starts a career with complex images of prejudice

Ian Corwin
The Daily Iowan

When your most memorable role in a spotty, uneven screen-acting career is the part of Rizzo in the John Travolta version of "Grease," you need all the help you can get to find work.

So will Stockard Channing ever get another part again? After watching her burn up the screen in "Six Degrees of Separation," the answer can only be a full and resonant "Thank God for jumper cables!"

Channing is responsible for a large part of "Six Degrees"'s success, and her Oscar nomination for her work on the movie is well-deserved. But given the other fine performances in the film (specifically from Donald Sutherland and the riveting Will Smith), it's safe to say that Channing merely helped bolster the spirits of an explosive ensemble. Working in perfect harmony, the cast of "Six Degrees" is by far one of the best of 1993.

Sutherland and Channing are the Kittridges, Flann and Louisa, respectively, who live a very comfortable Manhattan-type existence as high-profile art dealers. While hosting an old friend from South Africa at a dinner gathering, Flann's need to impress the friend and set up a crucial art sale is seriously compromised by outside forces.

These inconveniences take the form of Paul (Will Smith), a complex and witty "friend" of the Kittridges' children, who is on break from Harvard University. While outside the Kittridges' posh apartment building, Paul is "mugged," and since he's heard so much about them, he decides to come to Louisa and Flann for help.

Will Smith's Paul is fast-talking but always literate, dazzling the dinner party with tales of Harvard and of his thesis, an interesting digression of ideas on the societal forces at work behind J.D. Salinger's "Catcher in the Rye." He convinces the Kittridges and their guest to stay at home for dinner, cooking a spectacular feast and winning the hearts of his hosts.

There's one more bit of information. Paul is African-American, and eventually he lets slip an important fact about his history

... he's the son of Sidney Poitier. The Kittridges and their guest buy it hook, line and sinker and invite Paul to stay the night.

It's a startling revelation early the next morning that kicks "Six Degrees" into overdrive, playing speculations off of suspicions and challenging our preconceived notions of what Paul and his games are all about.

Director Fred Schepisi ("Roxanne," "The Russia House") has in his hands a fast and furious script (by John Guare, based on his play), a fact that helps "Six Degrees" sustain itself through some of the weightier segments of idea-tossing and exposition. The format of the story, told as a series of anecdotes by Flann and Louisa to their pish-posh friends at social gatherings, lends itself well to furious pacing and top-notch delivery from the cast.

Arguably, however, it's the ideas behind "Six Degrees" that are the real stars. The performances are so engaging that they keep the audience from second-guessing screenwriter Guare's thinly veiled societal diatribes. The rumors are true, however ... "Six Degrees" tackles everything from race and class prejudice to homosexuality and back again, and it does the job with no small amount of grace and dexterity.

A supporting cast which includes Mary Beth Hurt, Richard Masur and a strikingly mature Anthony Michael Hall (remember him?) has a field day listening to and participating in the Kittridges' growing dilemma. Hall's performance in particular is a standout; he's come a long way from "Sixteen Candles," through a career just as spotty and inconsistent as Channing's, but his work on this film could very well get him a much-needed jump-start.

That's really the idea behind "Six Degrees of Separation." As art the movie has given a jolt of electricity to many flagging careers in the motion-picture industry. But it has also shocked some new twists into several important contemporary issues ... issues which may be relatively new to our society, yet are already foundering amongst a jaded population.

ACTOR WEDS FOR 4TH TIME

Dudley Moore marries woman who had him arrested

Associated Press

LOS ANGELES — Actor Dudley Moore married Nicole Rothschild on Saturday, less than a month after a fight with her led to his arrest.

Moore, 58, and Rothschild, 29, were married in a private civil ceremony at his oceanfront home near

Dudley Moore

Venice Beach, said Lou Pitt, Moore's manager.

"It was a very small private affair," Pitt said Saturday. "With the exception of a few people it was all family."

Moore was arrested March 22 for investigation of cohabitational abuse after a fight with Rothschild that prompted both to call police. Rothschild did not press charges and Moore was soon released on $50,000 bail.

"Dudley asked her to leave and she wouldn't. He repeatedly asked her to leave and, when she didn't, he called 911 and said there was a damsel who refused to leave," Moore's lawyer, Allan Sigel, said after the arrest.

"In a retaliatory fashion," Sigel said, "she called 911 herself and she reported to them that she had been pushed about and struck by Dudley."

The couple reconciled a short while later, Sigel said.

This is the fourth marriage for Moore, who starred in "Arthur" and opposite Bo Derek in "10"

OVER 50 ARTISTS REPRESENTED

Student exhibit dauntingly ambitious

Charles Monson
The Daily Iowan

The Fine Arts Council's 12th Student Art Exhibit is exciting, but it's also daunting. The exhibition, which crams 65 ambitious works by some 50 different artists into the limited space of Old Brick, may leave visitors suffering from sensory overload.

The spring Student Art Exhibit is an annual event organized to showcase the talent of the UI's student art community. This year's exhibit was juried by CSPA artistic director Mel Andringa, who winnowed 65 representative pieces out of the 165 submissions.

Andringa's choices constitute a fascinating hodgepodge of artistic styles, ambitions and visions. Every kind of visual art, from painting to sculpture, is represented; furthermore, many of the pieces push the boundaries of their respective media. Mixed together in the display, they form a fascinating, diverse patchwork that seizes and holds viewers' attention. Most people who wander into the exhibit will probably stay to browse through the whole thing, if only to see what lies around each corner.

The pieces on display run the gamut from amateurish to finely polished, but all of them reflect enthusiasm and genuine involvement on the part of their creators. The young artists' "inexperience" works to their advantage in that it gives them a willingness to experiment. Even the pieces which are not particularly impressive on aesthetic or interpretive levels exude a refreshing energy and novelty.

The best thing about the exhibit's diversity is the nonjudgmental egalitarian feel of its stylistic mix. The fact that these artists are all represented in one place lends them all equal credibility. The council members bolstered this effect by choosing not to highlight Andringa's best-of-show choices, opting instead to simply acknowledge them in the program.

The downside of this plurality of artists and pieces lies in the fact that none of them can possibly receive much individual attention. Unless they're prepared to spend several hours at Old Brick, viewers simply won't have time to give each piece the consideration it deserves. This is particularly unfortunate in light of the complexity of many of the works; a cursory glance will not do them justice, but it may be all they'll get.

The council members have made good use of their display environment; both organization and lighting are generally adequate. The placement of the pieces calls attention to itself only once with Teresa Konechne's "Female Circumcision," a series of plaster images which are inexplicably divided up and placed on opposite sides of an altar. The lighting is also a problem with one work, a dark charcoal drawing by Mary Trafton which is rendered indecipherable by the glare it catches.

The Student Art Exhibit is an intriguing look at the nature of contemporary student art. It's a valuable opportunity for developing artists to display their work, but it may be a little too inclusive for its own good.

The 12th Student Art Exhibit will be on display in Old Brick, corner of Clinton and Market streets, through April 22. Hours are 1-9 p.m. weekdays and 1-5 p.m. weekends. Admission is free.

HANCHER PERFORMANCE

Dresden Orchestra gives sumptuous show

William Palik
The Daily Iowan

Those fortunate enough to attend Friday evening's Hancher concert given by the Dresden Staatskapelle Orchestra heard a sumptuous, seamless, perfectly controlled sound unmatched today by any American (and few European) symphony orchestras.

The opening work on the program, Schoenberg's "Verklarte Nacht," featured the orchestra's 60 string players in the composer's own transcription of his 1899 chamber work. Music director Giuseppe Sinopoli led his players through the decadent fin de siècle climaxes of this almost indecent music, milking every phrase for maximum effect and often raising goose flesh in listeners susceptible to the work's opulent post-Wagnerian idiom. Not since the Philadelphia Orchestra in its best days has such a creamy string sound been heard, in this case joined to seemingly infinite gradations of dynamic level.

Schoenberg's chromatic excesses, mosaic structure and loosely functional harmony were well-served by Sinopoli's teasing elongation of the music. His over-determined approach worked less well in the Brahms Second Symphony, which is a cadence-driven, strongly structural composition.

In what must be the slowest rendition of this work, Sinopoli's extremely leisurely tempi and held-back approach robbed Brahms of his full impact, weakening the symphony's backbone and musical thrust, vitiating the tensile strength of Brahms' melodies and phrase structure. The climaxes in this approach therefore seemed unconvincingly prepared, and by not leaning into the music, Sinopoli let the symphony sag under the laws of musical gravity.

As a conductor, Sinopoli is given to strange mannerisms: His downbeat is sometimes so delayed that he has to make funny little meter indications beforehand. The technical excellence of the Dresdens allowed them to surmount these obstacles, though things threatened to get a bit dicey in the more strenuously complex portions of the Brahms. On the whole, though, Sinopoli crossed far over the line between thoughtful analysis aimed at performance and outright musical deconstruction.

The Dresden Staatskapelle remains a gorgeous ensemble, in part because the section leaders seem in performance to pay such close attention to each other, enjoying their own interplay rather than looking slavishly up at Sinopoli. With more than 400 illustrious years of music history behind it, we can only hope that one of the world's great musical instruments will survive the custody of its current conductor.

Nixon sues in intensify

NEW YORK (AP) — Former President Richard Nixon, whose accomplishments in lifetime on the world stage were forever overshadowed by the Watergate scandal that ended his office, suffered a setback Friday.

Nixon, 81, filed a lawsuit in federal court in New York City, where he was conditionally released from prison after his conviction in the Watergate scandal.

Nixon's lawyer, Robert F. Kennedy Jr., said the suit was filed to clear Nixon's name and to ensure that his reputation as a public figure is not damaged by the Watergate scandal.
