Statue damage caused by clumsiness

Chris Pothoven
The Daily Iowan

A worker who helped remove a controversial statue from the School of Social Work said Tuesday that simple clumsiness was behind much of the disfigurement caused to the piece.

Last Friday, workers removed the life-sized statue, which depicts a naked man, woman and child with their arms outstretched to doves flying overhead, because of student and faculty complaints. Representing a traditional family, the statue had stood in room 332 of North Hall for nearly 20 years.

Elton Davis, a part-time UI employee from Williamsburg, Iowa, said he and a friend removed the birds from the top and pried off the statue's base to take it out of the building.

"We were moving the statue on a two-wheeled cart, and it fell off the cart and broke," he said. "There was no intent to destroy the statue. I'm sorry, I'm clumsy, but it was heavy and it was awkward. There was no intent to destroy the statue."

Barbara McDonald, a graduate of the school, discovered the damaged statue lying by a dumpster Saturday. The arms of the parents were broken off as well as the heads of the woman and child. The man's throat was disfigured and one of his eyes was missing.

The statue was purchased for $1,500 from student and faculty contributions in the mid-1970s.

The artwork was removed by the School of Social Work following the recommendation of an on-site accreditation review team that visited the school March 14-17. Some students told the team they felt the artwork did not accurately reflect the variety of family types served by social workers, while other Local television personality Ellen Buchanan was in fair condition Tuesday evening after being struck by a bicycle near the UI Art Building Monday morning.

Iowa City police officer Joel Myers said the bicyclist was traveling down River Street at a high speed and crossed Riverside Drive in the pedestrian crosswalk. The bicyclist told Myers he did not see Buchanan until it was too late to stop.

Myers did not know if any criminal charges will be filed against the bicyclist.

Buchanan is known as the host of "Tell Me Your Story," which is broadcast on Public Access Television. She interviews local community members on the show.

Jury: L.A. must pay King $3.8 million for beating

LOS ANGELES (AP) — A jury sent a $3.8 million bill to the city Tuesday for the 1991 police beating of Rodney King that reverberated across the nation and sparked three days of racially charged riots.

King

The tax-free award was significantly below the $15 million sought from the city of Los Angeles by King's lawyers but well above the $800,000 that city attorneys said was a fair sum.

Later this week, the jurors will begin deciding whether 14 former and current officers should pay punitive damages for the beating.

"We think that this is a satisfactory result," said city attorney James Hahn.

King, 29, was not present in the courtroom for the reading of the jury's verdict, which came on the fourth day of deliberations in the civil trial.

One of his attorneys, John Burris, left the court smiling and said, "We're pleased."

In contrast to last year's federal criminal trial of four officers charged in the beating, the police department did not go on alert when the verdicts were announced.

Herky the Hawk visited the children of Alice's Rainbow Child Care Center and University Parents Care Collective, both UI child-care centers, Tuesday morning. The curious kids hugged Herky, banged

CAF, UI in campus showdown

A university refusal to allow the Campaign for Academic Freedom to set up a 5-foot-tall wooden box filled with "controversial" literature and photographs on the Pentacrest hasn't stopped the group from doing so.

This sets up yet another showdown between members of CAF and UI administrators who say the box violates university policy.

The latest tiff began last Thursday when members of CAF, formed last fall to oppose the regent-imposed sex act poli-

Survey: Unsafe sex still rampant at UI

Dan Kelly
The Daily Iowan

A survey on the health and sexual practices of UI undergraduates has revealed that most students are still participating in unprotected sex and remain complacent about catching HIV.

The overwhelming majority of students questioned (86 percent) believed their risk of contracting HIV to be low or nonexistent, despite the fact that more than half of the sample admitted to having unprotected sex in the last year.

"This complacency does not make sense. When you look at students' sexual practices in the survey, you would think that they would know that they are at higher risk," said Health Iowa survey investigator

Pat Ketcham.

The Health Interests and Practices survey was conducted by Health Iowa of the Student Health Service. Last fall, 856 UI undergraduates were questioned and the results were processed this week.

In a question answered separately by males and females, respondents were asked if during the last year a condom had been worn during sexual intercourse or oral sex.

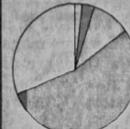

Only 9 percent of men and 8 percent of women said a condom had "always" been worn, while just 10 percent of men and 13 percent of women said a condom had "usually" been worn. More than a quarter of male respondents said a condom

Community college students shot at

Associated Press

FORT DODGE, Iowa — Campus violence and not studying for final exams have become a focal point for many students at Iowa Central Community College.

Several shootings at the residence halls, including one on Sunday, have many students fearing for their safety. Some want to leave.

No one has been injured, but "if you have to pay to go to college and get shot at... I don't see that's really necessary," said Troy Ambrose, a second-year student from Waverly, Iowa.

Ambrose and about 60 other students met with college administrators twice on Monday. School president Jack Bottenfield said students will be allowed to leave the residence halls and receive prorated refunds on paid contracts. Students also will be allowed to leave school now, with three weeks left in the term, and either have grades marked W for "withdrawn" or receive their current grade.

"The conflict arises from out-of-town students dating local girls," Bottenfield said.

The conflict appears to be between 15 or 20 Fort Dodge residents and a similar number of students in the residence halls, he said.

The college has beefed up security.

Jim McNeal, Iowa Central vice president for administration, said Sunday's shooting was the third or fourth such incident since the school year started in September. Students said the number of incidents may be as high as six.

In September, shots were fired into the lobby of the men's dormitory, breaking windows, said Jay Malone, a sophomore from Morning Sun, Iowa.

"I was just inches from a gunshot hitting me," said Malone. Since then, "every time they've done it, they've gotten closer and closer" to the residence hall.

Sunday night, some students were barbecuing outside when a car carrying several people pulled in behind the nearby women's residence hall.

"This time they weren't here just to shoot out windows," Malone said.

Man tosses toilet off bridge

FAIR PLAY, S.C. (AP) — A man was arrested and charged with heaving a toilet off an Interstate-85 overpass onto a passing truck, injuring its driver.

David L. Glenn, 20, was charged Monday with assault and battery with intent to kill in the April 10 incident.

The trucker, Gene Allen, 56, of Commerce, Ga., suffered chest bruises and had to have muscles and nerves reattached in his arm. He was released from the hospital last week.

The toilet had been stolen from a front yard, where it was being used as a flower planter.

Judge refuses to dismiss charge in castrated husband case

LOS ANGELES (AP) — A woman acquitted of mayhem for cutting off her husband's testicles with a pair of scissors should be retried on a battery charge, a judge ruled Tuesday.

A jury acquitted Aurelia Macias, 36, of mayhem and assault with a deadly weapon last month for the Sept. 20, 1992 attack. The jury deadlocked 7-5 in favor of acquittal on a charge of battery with serious bodily injury.

"Society has a great interest in seeing the case resolved," Superior Court Judge Robert O'Neil said.

Macias testified that her 39-year-old husband, Jaime, was drunk and tried to force her to have sex while she was trying to give milk to their 6-month-old baby. She said she attacked him after he grabbed her.

Prosecutors said Macias attacked her husband while he slept. She was in a jealous rage, they said, because he had drunkenly flirted with another woman at a party earlier that day.

Only one of Macias' testicles was recovered but not until the day after the attack, so doctors were unable to reattach it.

The couple have since reconciled and Macias didn't want to press charges, but the state pursued the case anyway.

Macias, who has recovered, can have normal sexual relations but can no longer father children.

$16,000 found in mail box

FRANKLIN PARK, Ill. (AP) — First-class mail sometimes doesn't get delivered at all in Chicago. But things are different out in the suburbs.

Postal worker Lamonia Lewis opened a mail collection box Friday and found about $16,000 in cash, secured with a rubber band along with several checks and a deposit slip.

"She just brought it in and said, 'Look what I found,'" said Sherman Carter, a customer service supervisor in the western Chicago suburb.

The deposit slip indicated the money belonged to the village.

In Chicago, inspectors have found nearly 70,000 pieces of undelivered mail since early this year. Postal officials found two more stacks last week: 2,000 pieces of mail behind the home of a fired letter carrier and as many as 3,000 pieces in another carrier's car trunk.

AIDS cards get mixed reactions

Tricia DeWall
The Daily Iowan

They're the newest craze in trading cards, and most of the people depicted on the cards are unaware of their small claim to fame.

AIDS Awareness Trading Cards are the most recent endeavor by Eclipse Enterprises, a California-based company that produces comic books, trading cards, graphic and political scandal novels.

Each package contains 12 cards featuring people, both famous and unknown, who have died from AIDS or have HIV. Some cards also contain educational information and statistics. Every pack comes with a condom.

Local comic book and novelty stores began selling the AIDS cards when they were introduced last summer. Michael Zeadow, manager of Daydreams, 114 E. College St., said so far they have sold about 200 packages of the cards.

"Ninety percent of the business has been college-aged students," Zeadow said. "The only reaction I really get is from young kids because of what they contain."

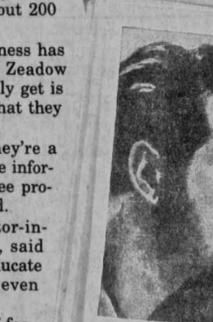

"College students think they're a pretty neat idea because of the information and because of the free protective device in there," he said.

Katherine Yronwode, editor-in-chief of Eclipse Enterprises, said the cards are an attempt to educate people and show them that even ordinary people get AIDS.

"We produce a large line of factual trading cards that are a compilation of a lot of information about different subjects," she said. "These cards are an attempt to inform people about AIDS on two different levels — about those that are HIV-positive or have died from AIDS and about prevention, activist groups, and scientific and medical information."

Yronwode said some of the people are depicted on the cards simply because of the way they got AIDS, and some, like Magic Johnson, are included because they are famous.

"Madonna was also included because she has raised more money than anyone else for the AIDS cause," she said.

The company printed close to 2,000 cases of the cards and have around 35 left, Yronwode said.

"They're not the hottest-selling thing we ever did, but we've certainly sold a respectable number," she said.

Eclipse Enterprises has also produced trading cards featuring such things as serial killers, the Iran-Contra scandal, friendly dictators and pioneers of country music, to name a few.

Fifteen percent of the profits from the sale of the cards will go to Broadway Cares / Equity Fights AIDS, a theatrically based group that uses the entertainment media to raise money for AIDS research. It is the same group that launched the red ribbon campaign.

Yronwode said there has been mixed reaction about the cards.

"It's been very interesting. There's been a lot of support for the cards in the gay community and AIDS activists," she said. "Some members of the gay community say we are trivializing AIDS. But that is a misperception."

Yronwode said people from the religious right claim the cards promote sex education and are upset because "they are against birth control" and against using anything but their particularly ineffective method.

"I've been on talk shows with these people that claim sex education makes people want to have sex," she said. "We've run up against more than our quota of nut cases. We've also run up against more than our quota of ignorance."

Scott Schumacher, member of the UI Gay, Lesbian and Bisexual People's Union and volunteer for the Johnson County AIDS Project, said the cards are a good idea.

"Any way you can spread the word about AIDS and HIV is good," he said. "We need to be creative in that market because some of the other methods might not be working the way they should be."

The cards are a nonconventional way of educating, Schumacher said.

"When you really talk about behavior change, you need to get to a certain part of the population that maybe other educational efforts don't," he said.

RUBBER ROBBERS

Store owners: condom theft on the rise

Molly Spann
The Daily Iowan

Maybe they're unwilling to pay the price, or perhaps they're too embarrassed to make the purchase. Whatever the reason, condom thieves have left several local grocery and drug store managers feeling frustrated.

At some local stores, condoms can only be purchased on request because theft is such a problem. Other stores have stopped selling them altogether.

When Randall's Mini-Priced Foods in Coralville first began selling condoms, they were sold in the aisle, Al Latuska, the store manager, said. But now they are displayed behind a glass counter at the front of the store along with expensive liquor.

"They were getting ripped off," Latuska said. "At eight or nine dollars a pack, it doesn't take much to destroy us."

The store discovered the condoms were being stolen by tracking them with the computer, Latuska said.

"We realized we were buying a lot, but we were not selling very many," he said.

Latuska said it is possible that the store sells fewer condoms since they have been behind the counter because some people could be too embarrassed to ask for them.

"I'm sure that might be the case for some people," he said. "But it's a matter of economics. We can't have them on display if 20 percent of them are going to be taken out of the store without being paid for."

"These cards are an attempt to inform people about AIDS on two different levels — about those that are HIV-positive or have died from AIDS and about prevention, activist groups, and scientific and medical information."

Katherine Yronwode, editor-in-chief of Eclipse Enterprises, makers of the AIDS Awareness Trading Cards pharmacy does not keep the same hours as the rest of the store.

Several of the Drug Town stores in Cedar Rapids have resorted to selling condoms from the pharmacy, she said.

The Hy-Vee at 1201 N. Dodge St. stopped selling condoms altogether one year ago after realizing how many were being stolen, Matt Cayler, Hy-Vee shift manager, said.

Although these stores have traced the theft of condoms by keeping track of their merchandise, Iowa City police Sgt. Craig Lihs said few people are actually charged with fifth-degree theft for stealing them.

"We have had a couple of incidents, but seldom are people arrested for that," he said. "We get more thefts of Preparation H than condoms."

UI junior Travis McCay said he can understand why some people steal condoms. At between $2 and $10 a box, he said condoms sold in stores are overpriced.

Although he said he has never stolen condoms, he does know people who have.

"I remember when we were in high school — my buddies used to rip them off all of the time," he said.

McCay said he usually would not be embarrassed to buy them, but he might be under some circumstances.

"It's much more embarrassing buying them from a lady than a man," he said.

Pat Ketcham, director of Health Iowa, said condom theft may prove that people aren't as comfortable purchasing condoms as they say they are.

Keeping condoms close to the register is one way stores could keep a closer eye on them and allow easier access for customers, she said.

Ketcham said despite the problem they may have with theft, it is very important that grocery and drug stores help keep condoms as accessible as possible.

"They are critical when looking at the real concerns with sexually transmitted diseases and AIDS," she said. "It is a necessity."

UI steam whistle takes a breather

Thomas Wanat
The Daily Iowan

The temporary lack of a steam whistle to accompany the work schedule of the UI campus seems not to have caused many to miss any work — or lose any sleep.

The shrill sound, which signals the start and end of the work day — including lunch — will be back soon enough, according to Garry Bleckwenn, head of Physical Plant utilities.

"It's only temporary. We're doing some changeover in the piping of the power plant," Bleckwenn said. "It should be back early next week."

Every spring and fall the Physical Plant performs maintenance on the steam system, which is responsible for heating and cooling most university buildings.

However, this is the first year that the steam to the whistle has been disrupted. Bleckwenn said they didn't give the absence of the whistle any thought until it was actually gone.

"It's the one thing we overlooked," he said. "It's one of those things that when it's there, nobody notices, and when it's not, people wonder where it went."

Some have complained about the piercing noise in the past.

The Physical Plant stopped blowing the whistle altogether a few years back but brought it back after receiving several calls from people who missed it. Now it's here to stay, Bleckwenn said — at least until somebody complains again.

"We're going to continue blowing the whistle until somebody tells us not to," he said.

Which isn't music to everyone's ears.

"It bothers me. It's very loud and it wakes me up," UI freshman Veronica DeLallo said. "I don't think they should blow it at all. They should get their own little alarms to tell them when to be at work."

FIRE DEPARTMENT INVESTIGATING

Arson may be cause of 2 area fires

Terry Collins
The Daily Iowan

Two local business fires occurring within hours of each other early Sunday morning have Iowa City Fire Department officials investigating the possibility of arson.

The fire at John's Grocery Inc., 410 E. Market St., was started by lighter fluid sprayed on the side of the building. The fire burned through some wood and posters causing minor damage to the outside of the building.

Fire trucks were called to the scene when the day manager discovered the incident well after the fire died out on its own.

Hours earlier and two blocks away, a fire struck the Hamburg Inn No. 2 Inc., 214 N. Linn St., severely damaging the kitchen and an adjoining shed, causing an estimated $100,000 in damage and forcing the restaurant to close for several weeks until repairs are made.

Bill Alberhasky, manager of John's Grocery, said the fire must have happened after he closed the store in the early hours of Sunday morning.

"It was just a routine lockup," he said. "I usually check around for something suspicious and there was no activity on the streets. It was dead quiet."

Iowa City Fire Department Marshal Andy Rocca said he has not determined if there is a link between the two businesses' fires, but he believes the fire at John's Grocery was definitely an arson attempt.

"There's no doubt about it," he said. "I think there was obvious intent to destroy at John's. The fact this fire happened within the same day as Hamburg's makes me even more suspicious."

Rocca said he intends to return to John's Grocery to check on the damage as part of the ongoing investigation, and that more information may be available by the end of the week.

Alberhasky said he hopes the fire wasn't set maliciously, and that it was only a prank gone astray.

"I can't think of why someone would do it. This just doesn't happen in Iowa City," he said. "You just don't want to see your livelihood taken from underneath you."

GROUP WON'T CONTEST ELECTION

COGS looking ahead to future work, gains

Eric Marty
The Daily Iowan

The Campaign to Organize Graduate Students has begun picking up the pieces after its bid to unionize more than 2,600 UI teaching and research assistants shattered last Thursday.

COGS had initially considered contesting the election because of alleged irregular balloting and illegal campaigning by the opposition. Instead the group will focus its efforts on calling for another unionization election next April.

Sara Cody, a TA in the English department, stressed that COGS members feel they have a legitimate complaint, but contesting the election would only delay their continuing efforts to improve the graduate students' quality of education.

"While we do believe that we have a legal basis to contest the election, we feel that it would be difficult to prove," Cody said. "Ultimately it could be a long, drawn-out process that would take away from our efforts to keep this issue at the forefront, where it belongs."

Cody said that even in defeat COGS has brought awareness to the plight of graduate students, and she feels this is a big step.

"COGS is what made people sit up and take notice of how much work we do and how little we get in return," she said.

UI Graduate College Dean Leslie Sims echoed this sentiment and said that while the COGS effort to unionize failed, there still are many positives that have come from the group's work.

"We all agreed that improvements must be made in the graduate student quality of education, and while we disagreed which strategy or tactics would best resolve the issue, we really raised awareness," Sims said. "I appreciate COGS' help with making sure this issue has and will continue to remain on the front burner."

Sims said the UI remains committed to making graduate assistant wages more competitive within the Big Ten and attracting top-notch graduate students to the university.

"We have not stopped working on these issues, and we will continue to work for the revision of these problems," Sims said. "We will also continue to strive for a formalized grievance procedure and improved health care."

Mark Wrighton, a TA in the political science department and member of the anti-union organization Students Tired Of Propaganda, hopes that COGS will continue to provide the UI with positive change — positive change that shouldn't be overlooked.

"It's important to keep these issues at the forefront, and I think COGS has done that," he said. "I think working together is the best way to go about this, and I hope they will continue to stress change because there is still work to do."

Wrighton rebutted comments that the hotly contested election vote has stirred up animosity among UI graduate assistants.

"I don't see much lingering animosity," he said. "I know there was some contention of dirty campaigning, and I'm hoping this attitude will disappear and we can get back to being colleagues and working together to promote quality education at the University of Iowa."

COGS, which had been financially subsidized by Service Employees International Union Local 150, will no longer receive this monetary support.

Cody said that COGS must now step back, recognize its mistakes and address them in order to win the fight.

"Now that the shock has worn off, we are starting to understand that we must not place blame, but instead we should look at what we can do better next time," Cody said. "This isn't about pure self-interest; it's a sense of what's right for all of us. I'm confident that this attitude will eventually win out."

CAMPAIGN DIFFERENCES AROUND

Branstad, Grandy trade jabs at GOP debate

Mike Glover
Associated Press

DES MOINES — Terry Branstad and Fred Grandy tangled over term limits, taxes and crime Tuesday in the prime-time opening of their campaign debate series for the GOP nomination for governor.

Grandy hammered at his campaign theme that Branstad has been governor for too long and that means "arrogance begins to replace accountability."

"I am seeking the job and not the career," Grandy said. "That, to me, is leadership."

Branstad accused Grandy of "selfishly" favoring term limits for his own political ambitions.

"Congressman Grandy says he's for term limits, but he doesn't support term limits for the people in Congress," Branstad said. "He wants term limits for governor because he wants to be governor."

The debate was broadcast live on Des Moines' WHO-TV and later in the evening on Iowa Public Television. It's the first of three scheduled meetings between the two.

Branstad is seeking a fourth four-year term in office, while Grandy is making his first run for governor after representing western Iowa's 5th District for six years.

The governor took shots at Grandy's record in Congress, pointing to increasing federal deficits.

"Congressman Grandy has been part of that problem," said Branstad, accusing his rival of voting for tax hikes. "He votes like a bunch of Democrats. He talks like a Democrat."

Grandy shot back that he's proposed a big tax cut, while Branstad has presided over enormous increases in state spending.

"Iowa has got to start believing it can lower taxes," Grandy said. "Fewer and fewer Iowans are paying more and more taxes."

The congressman said he's pushing for "a climate of prosperity that reaches beyond the next election."

Branstad said that Grandy's plan won't work and would spark a 30 percent boost in property taxes.

The rivals talked tough on crime and attacked each other's record on the issue.

"Iowa has one of the worst records in the country in keeping criminals locked up — 25 percent of normal sentences. That's under the national average," Grandy said.

"It's pretty easy to get tough on crime; it's tougher to get real."

"I wonder if the congressman is so concerned, why has he missed all of the votes on the crime bill that's pending in the Congress," Branstad said.

The two also clashed over gambling issues.

Grandy accused the governor of "half-steps and indecision" that are stopping the industry from succeeding.

"If you want this to happen, you lead the Legislature; you don't let the Legislature lead," Grandy said.

Branstad said the state needs to watch the gambling industry carefully.

"I think we ought to draw the line here; we ought not to be sucked into the idea that we ought to expand gambling further and further," he said.

Grandy accused the governor of "the mistake of taking all of these little half-steps."

"You either gamble or you don't," he said.

The candidates also split over a fight about regulating bingo parlors, a divisive issue in the Legislature.

Grandy said he favored letting local officials regulate the operations.

"In the short run, we ought to perhaps give these local communities some say," he said.

"I disagree with the congressman," Branstad said. "I don't think you should turn it over to county boards of supervisors."

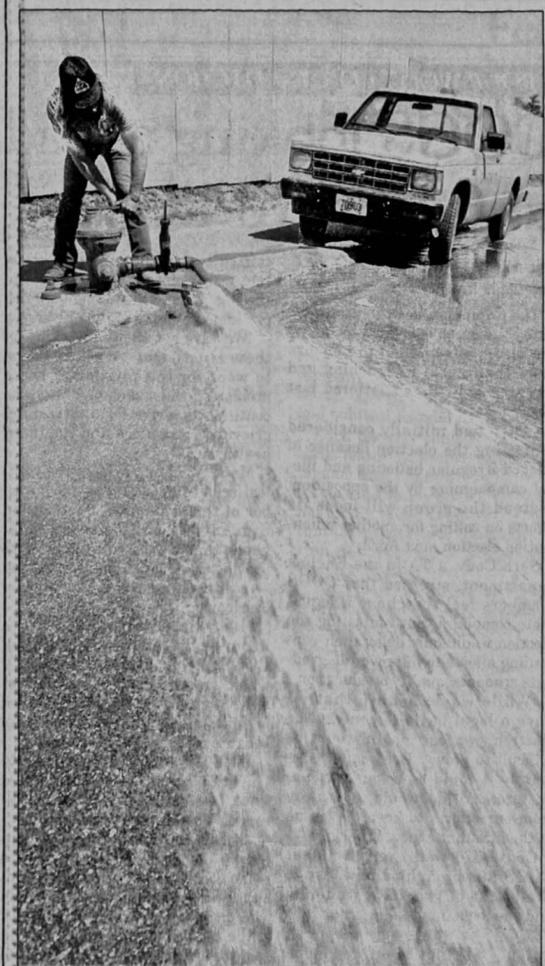

Heading into the debate, both contenders had clear goals and probably met them.

Branstad is generally viewed as holding a shaky lead in the race and was seeking to avoid a campaign-altering gaffe. There was no such goof in the 60-minute debate.

Grandy got the first chance to introduce himself to voters in the central part of the state and was seeking to appear as knowledgeable as Branstad on the plethora of issues facing the state. He exhibited no slips that would leave him vulnerable to the charge that he's an outsider.

"Congressman Grandy can tell you everything that's wrong with Iowa," Branstad said in his closing statement. "Even if you wake me up in the middle of the night, I'll tell you what's good about Iowa."

"Hopefully this will be the first of many, many debates the governor and I will participate in," Grandy countered. "Iowa cannot afford to continue to lose its best and brightest."

SMALL VICTORY GAINED

Parental notification proponents press issue

Tom Seery
Associated Press

DES MOINES — Supporters of a proposed parental notification abortion law are pressing their case in the final hours of the legislative session but remain unable to force a Senate vote on the issue.

The House overwhelmingly approved a bill earlier this year that requires a parent to be notified before a minor child has an abortion. The bill was defeated in the Senate Human Resources Committee, but its supporters believe it could easily win approval of the full Senate.

The Senate Ways and Means Committee, which normally handles tax matters, took the unusual step last week of approving its own parental notification bill. That measure remains on the Senate debate calendar, but Majority Leader Wally Horn, D-Cedar Rapids, has not expressed interest in calling it up for a vote.

With the Legislature expected to finish its 1994 session this week, parental notification supporters are scurrying to force a debate. On Tuesday, they scored a minor victory during debate of an insurance regulation bill. Senate leaders had agreed to attach health-care reform language to the bill, but Sen. Merlin Bartz, R-Grafton, offered an amendment that would also require parental notification before a minor has an abortion.

Parental notification amendments have been offered to bills throughout the session, but they had all been ruled out of order by Senate President Leonard Boswell, D-Davis City. Boswell, however, ruled that Bartz's amendment was in order.

That prompted the manager of the insurance regulation bill, Council Bluffs Democrat Michael Gronstal, to stop further debate of the amendment and the bill. Gronstal blamed Bartz for scuttling the health insurance reform effort.

"I think it was a valiant attempt to make some modest changes in our insurance law," Gronstal said.

Clinton tells NATO: more force necessary

Barry Schweid
Associated Press

WASHINGTON — President Clinton decided Tuesday to urge NATO to expand its scope of threatened air strikes against Bosnian Serbs poised to overrun Muslim enclaves, senior administration officials said.

Clinton's proposal is contained in a mix of military and diplomatic recommendations the allies are to consider later in the week in Brussels, Belgium. They were approved by the president after two White House meetings.

Confident of NATO's endorsement, the officials said NATO warplanes would be able to bomb Serb artillery beyond the safe zones designated by the U.N. Security Council as the outskirts of the six cities and towns.

Last year, the NATO allies balked at a U.S. suggestion that they authorize the bombing of Serb artillery sites and approve weapons deliveries to the Bosnian government. The initiative was dropped, though two minor air strikes were carried out last week by U.S. warplanes at the request of the U.N. commander, Lt. Gen. Sir Michael Rose.

This time the United States intends to take the lead at the North Atlantic Council meeting, not simply consult with the allies and solicit their views, said the officials, speaking on condition of anonymity.

Also, Clinton approved a proposal to stiffen economic curbs on Serbia, which backs the Bosnian Serbs, the officials said.

"We would expect we can work them through" at the Council meeting, an official told reporters at the White House.

Russia and the United Nations also will be consulted, the officials said.

The mix of diplomacy and threat of force so far has not deterred the Serbs from their assault on Gorazde, a mostly Muslim enclave in eastern Bosnia. The plight of the 65,000 civilians was discussed by the president and his advisers, the official said.

Haris Silajdzic, the prime minister of Bosnia-Herzegovina, made an urgent appeal for help to Secretary of State Warren Christopher.

"Gorazde is on the edge of falling. It might happen tonight," said a Bosnian official. "We might have thousands of people slaughtered if the Serbs enter the town."

"The Bosnian Army is willing to fight to the last man, but they would like to have help."

Anthony Lake, the president's national security adviser, said, "The use of power without diplomacy is purposeless, and the use of power without diplomacy will fail."

Clinton, in exchanges with reporters earlier, gave no clearer idea what he was asking the NATO allies to endorse.

Zulus will participate in S. African vote

Tina Susman
Associated Press

PRETORIA, South Africa — Zulu leader Mangosuthu Buthelezi broke a political deadlock Tuesday by agreeing to take part in next week's election, giving South Africa its first hope of peaceful balloting and an end to years of violence.

"This agreement is a leap forward for peace. ... A bright future awaits our land," African National Congress leader Nelson Mandela declared after a two-day summit culminated in the announcement.

Mandela, Buthelezi and President F.W. de Klerk struck a deal whereby Buthelezi's Inkatha Freedom Party will be added to the ballots for the April 26-28 elections. Buthelezi had threatened to boycott the vote unless he won guarantees of autonomy for his KwaZulu black homeland.

"We had to carry them into this agreement kicking and screaming. ... It's good for South Africa. Let the violence now stop," de Klerk told a campaign rally in the southeastern city of Port Elizabeth late Tuesday.

Buthelezi also had demanded the election be delayed to give Inkatha more campaign time and a security crackdown across the Zulu stronghold of eastern Natal province be lifted.

But he decided it was more prudent to enter the election at the last minute than boycott it and be

The only concession made by the ANC and government was to amend the constitution to recognize Zulu King Goodwill Zwelethini as traditional monarch of the KwaZulu-Natal region.

This proposal, offered earlier, means the all-white Parliament will be summoned to Cape Town a final time Monday to approve the change.

But Kenyan diplomat Washington Okumu, who knows Mandela and Buthelezi well, began secret mediation efforts the same day.

"When you have a situation where people have lost trust in each other, you need someone who can understand them, whom they can trust. It happened that both of them trust me," Okumu said.

In Washington, President Clinton praised the breakthrough as demonstrating "great courage and a capacity to compromise."

"Today's bold action by Chief Buthelezi, Nelson Mandela and F.W. de Klerk is one more act of collective statesmanship that bodes well for the prospect of free and fair elections in South Africa and for the success of the future government of national unity."

Printers will be going full tilt from now until the elections, spewing out tens of millions of stickers containing Inkatha's name, logo and a picture of Buthelezi.

The stickers will be added to the end of the national and provincial ballots, denying de Klerk's National Party its plum spot at the bottom.

Inkatha becomes the 19th party on ballot paper in voting for president, national parliament and regional legislatures. The parties toward the end are considered best placed for voters standing in the booth with pen poised.

Study: breast removal effective against cancer

Brenda Coleman
Associated Press

CHICAGO — Doctors who treat breast cancer can save a woman's life and still spare her breast, according to a study rushed into publication to offer reassurance after disclosures of fraud in earlier research.

The study, which involved the records of more than 5,800 patients, found that women who underwent breast-saving surgery combined with radiation were at least as likely to survive five years as women who had a mastectomy or complete removal of the cancerous breast.

The effectiveness of the lumpectomy surgery has been accepted by many doctors. But a cloud arose after it was disclosed last month that a researcher falsified data in a landmark study that was the basis for widespread use of the procedure.

The latest study backs the conclusion of the earlier research that removing only the malignant lump, rather than the entire breast, is a life-saving procedure.

The findings are being published in today's Journal of the American Medical Association. The study was led by Anna Lee-Feldstein, an assistant professor of biostatistics in the College of Medicine at the University of California, Irvine.

"In spite of what came out (regarding the research fraud) ... we should not have a knee-jerk response and go back to mastectomy," said Dr. Gerard Aranha, director of the Breast Care Center at Loyola University Medical Center in Maywood.

"(Breast) conservation is here to stay, but it has to be done under strict guidelines."

students and faculty members reportedly were offended by the figures' nudity. Except for the man, whose genitals are discreetly covered, the figures are totally exposed.

Martin Tracy, director of the School of Social Work, said despite the backlash, there is no question in his mind that the statue had to be removed.

"It was creating an atmosphere of sexual harassment in the school. The students, faculty and accreditation team all saw it that way," he said. "It was just unfortunate it had to be mutilated.

"But I do think there are legitimate questions that have been raised by this, and I'm glad to see it's being discussed."

Davis said he is indifferent toward the statue.

"I didn't think it was great art," he said. "Aesthetically, it didn't do anything for me either way. It was neither ugly nor beautiful."

Although she believes most of the destruction was unintentional, McDonald said removing the statue was not a responsible way to handle the complaints or to deal with the situation.

"When you're dealing with art, it's not the same as dealing with a worn-out piece of furniture," she said.

Currently, McDonald is looking for a place to display the statue in its disfigured state.

"It's very symbolic of what happens when we don't use good judgment," she said.

McDonald said she has talked with a number of people concerned about the statue's treatment, including some local artists who have offered to help in its repair. The statue is made of a type of Fiberglas similar to the kind used in cars and boats.

Although social work students have been discussing the issue among themselves, UI junior Michelle Brown said most were not aware of the statue's significance.

"I had no idea it was a symbol of the school," she said. "I suppose if you thought about it, you could tell what it symbolizes, but I think most students didn't know anything about it."

Brown said many students seem concerned about the controversy but aren't really upset about the statue as a symbol of the school.

"I don't think there was really any other way they could have done it," she said.

JURIES

crimination that women in this country have experienced," Brake said.

Ironically, the decision was a victory for a paternity lawsuit defendant who says his rights were violated when an only women jury decided he fathered a boy born four years ago.

Alabama authorities sued James Bowman, contending he fathered Phillip Rhett Bowman Bible. The boy was born to Teresia Bible on May 16, 1989, and a blood test showed a high probability that Bowman is Phillip's father.

A jury of 12 women decided against Bowman after a 1991 trial in Jackson County and ordered him to pay $415 a month in child support.

Nine of the 10 men in the jury pool were excluded with peremptory challenges made by state attorneys. Bowman's lawyer excluded the 10th.

Despite Bowman's constitutional challenge, Alabama's lawyers did not have to explain their tactics. Alabama courts ruled that keeping men off the jury, even if gender motivated, did not violate the equal-protection rights of either Bowman or any of the men excluded.

The Supreme Court said Tuesday that the Alabama courts were wrong.

"Discrimination in jury selection, whether based on race or on gender, causes harm to the litigants, the community and the individual jurors who are wrongfully excluded from participation in the judicial process," Blackmun wrote.

SURVEY

had "never" been worn during sexual intercourse or oral sex over the previous year.

These statistics have remained consistent since the first of these surveys in 1989, indicating that sexual practices have changed little on campus despite increased AIDS publicity over the last five years.

Cathy Barnett of Health Iowa said the figures were depressing but not surprising.

"That's the whole dilemma of health education," she said. "It is hard to change people's behavior even when they are aware of the dangers."

Survey investigators at the Student Health Service believe many students may feel they are unable to contract HIV because they are in monogamous relationships.

Half of the sample said they were in monogamous relationships, but Ketcham said serial monogamy, moving from one relationship to the next, was far more common.

"There is the perceived notion that you are safe if you are in a relationship," she said. "People always want to think the best of the person that they are involved with, and they want to be able to trust them. With HIV and other STDs, this is a dangerous thing to do."

However, the survey suggested that sexual promiscuity on campus was not widespread. The majority of respondents (65 percent) said they had one or no sexual partners in the last year.

Ketcham said the results would surprise many people on campus.

"If you are a college student, the perception is that people are going out and having multiple sexual partners and lots of one-night stands, but the survey shows that this is not necessarily the case," she said.

One-quarter of the sample said they had engaged in unintended or regretted sex after drinking alcohol at least once in the last year.

Barnett said students should try to help their friends from getting into the kinds of situations that may result in unintended sex.

"A lot of women we have spoken to say that one of their big rules is that they stay together when they go out, and they don't let their friends go home with someone that they don't know," she said.

The number of respondents who always wear condoms during unintended sex after drinking alcohol (9 percent) was similar to those who wore condoms when sober (7 percent).

"This suggests that people get into habits," Ketcham said. "If you wear a condom when sober, you are more likely to do so when drunk."

The biggest reason condoms were not always used during sex was that respondents did not believe they were necessary (29 percent).

Ketcham said she was shocked by such a response.

"I truly believe that if people do not perceive that they are at risk after all the publicity that AIDS has received, then it makes this a very difficult battle indeed," she said.

SHOWDOWN

cy, were booted off the Pentacrest. UI Dean of Students Phillip Jones said he told campus security to remove the CAF members because they hadn't applied for permission to set up on the Pentacrest, which is required under university guidelines.

Friday, a CAF member applied for permission at UI Facilities Planning and Utilization to set up a table and the 5-by-3 structure.

That request was denied. Despite this, CAF members were on the Pentacrest Monday and Tuesday with a table and box collecting signatures in opposition to the new policy governing the use of sensitive material in classrooms.

Jones said campus security notified him CAF had set up the structure again, but he took no further action against the group because he wanted to discuss the issue with the UI officials who were involved in the decision.

"Once I get clarification whatever policy is required, it will be enforced — period," Jones said.

CAF Co-chairman Brian Smith said the group plans to set up the wooden structure again today.

The box in question was filled with articles or photographs of people that have at one time or another been deemed controversial.

Included in the box were pictures of Malcolm X, Oscar Wilde and Emma Goldman, Smith said. Also included were books such as "The Catcher in the Rye" and "The Color Purple," Smith said.

Jim Coombes, manager of Facilities Planning and Utilization, who denied the application to set up the box on the Pentacrest, said he had no problem with CAF setting up a table, but allowing the wooden structure as well would not be consistent with university policy.

"What are allowed are tables. The structure wouldn't be consistent with what has been approved in the past," Coombes said. "I don't want to be involved in a box situation. I want to be involved in a table situation."

The UI Operations Manual states: "No sign, banner, slogan, symbol, display or other similar device shall be printed, affixed, erected or installed on the Pentacrest except as expressly approved by the Director in unusual and compelling circumstances."

The implementation of that policy has not been consistent, Smith said.

Smith wondered why the UI Sailing Club has been allowed to display a sailboat on the Pentacrest. The denial of the CAF request was a response to the increased pressure by their group on the administration, he charged.

"We're really applying pressure," Smith said, "and the administration is feeling it."

Jones said the use of a sailboat did not constitute a display.

There has been tension between some UI officials and CAF ever since the organization was formed in response to an Iowa state Board of Regents mandate that the university establish a policy guarding against the use of sexually explicit materials in classrooms.

In February, CAF members disrupted a regents meeting held in Iowa City. As they were told to leave the meeting, members repeatedly shouted, "We will be back!"

UI President Hunter Rawlings said he didn't approve of the disruption.

Next Tuesday, CAF members are planning a picket of Hunter Rawlings and will be protesting outside of Jessup Hall.

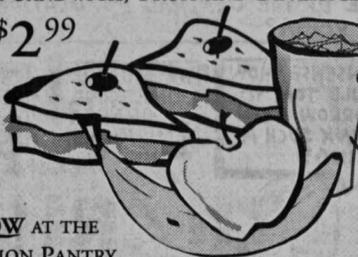

CAF members won't be satisfied until the policy that is now in effect is repealed, Smith said.

"We need to take more action. That is the only way that will happen," he said.

CIGARETTES

Make the customer want what you sell

With the recent publicizing of cigarette ingredients, manufacturers have been trying to persuade concerned public officials that they do not manipulate the nicotine content in cigarettes in order to addict consumers to their products. The makers of cigarettes do not add nicotine to tobacco, they tell us. Therefore they cannot be accused of, say, using ads to lure customers into trying their products and then getting them hooked on a highly addictive drug. Good for them.

Something is wrong with this picture, though. In denying that they are purposefully trying to addict people to smoking, cigarette manufacturers seem to admit that there would be something wrong with using chemistry to make people keep buying what they sell. But what difference does it make whether a chemical addiction is purposefully induced or the product of nature? In the recent examination of the health risks of smoking, and of the government's responsibility (or lack thereof) to protect people from such risks, this somewhat ominous aspect of the cigarette industry has been largely ignored.

Imagine that you buy a bottle of perfume or cologne and dab a little on every day. It's a soothing fragrance and makes you feel relaxed, so you go on buying it. Or else you stop buying it and experience withdrawal symptoms. You feel nervous, fatigued, perhaps physically sick. The need to use that perfume again is almost overwhelming. Without using any clear warning labels, the perfume's manufacturers have sold you an addictive product.

This scenario is no more benign simply because the addiction is caused by a naturally occurring chemical. All chemicals are "natural" to some extent; they come from some material that exists somewhere on this Earth. This doesn't mean that those chemicals are healthy, safe or nonaddictive.

Ask any smoker who has kicked the habit how difficult it is. Nicotine is not the same kind of thing as caffeine. It is certainly not to be compared with Twinkies. The body can actually cease to function normally when nicotine that was present in the system is suddenly cut off, as in the case of a man who experienced extreme abdominal distention after kicking a decades-long habit. The blood vessels in his lower intestine stopped working normally, and he was physically unable to have a bowel movement until a doctor figured out what was wrong and told the man to have a cigarette.

This problem with the sale of cigarettes is only made worse by the fact that a smoking habit can be fatal. Smokers may have the right to kill themselves, but cigarette manufacturers should not have the right to promote their products without letting people know what they are in for. Those who currently balk at the addition of any more restrictions or taxes on cigarettes may also want to consider why they are so dependent on the availability of their favorite drug.

Coverage of Holocaust Memorial Day missing

To the Editor:

How did everyone celebrate National Celery Month? A stick of celery a day keeps the doctor away? Do you think that if the Jews in Germany thought of that 50 years ago, it would have kept the Nazis away? Because Friday, April 8, was Holocaust Memorial Day, the answer must be "no." There was not one article in the DI covering this important issue. That Friday, while Jews across the world were reflecting upon their shattered pasts, others were thinking about eating celery. It is really a shame that the DI apparently considers a vegetable to be of more importance than 6 million brutally slaughtered people.

On April 8, Jewish students on the UI campus did something different to recognize Yom Hashoah, Holocaust Memorial Day. They wore yellow stars of David, just as Jews did 50 years ago. I know people noticed this, because as I walked through campus, people stared.

This experience taught me two things. By wearing the star, I was able to feel some of the pain and alienation that those Jews in the 1930s and 1940s felt. Cold darting eyes were shot in my direction, and I felt as though people were making many different judgments upon seeing the star. Being labeled "Jewish" so boldly did give me a feeling of pride. However, it also made me very sorrowful because I realized that the Jews who originally wore these yellow stars were forced to do so, and they were unable to demonstrate any pride for their heritage. They were threatened and killed on behalf of their Jewish identity. Friday I wore my star in remembrance of these 6 million Jews, and I was lucky enough to be able to do so without having my life threatened.

The second thing I learned was that people are ignorant. As most people do not think about the Holocaust, many do not care about it and still others actually deny it ever occurred. Human sacrifice is not something to be denied, forgotten or disregarded. For this reason am I so deeply disappointed with the DI. The approximately 800 Jewish students on campus wore yellow stars in remembrance of the Holocaust as one way to help others grow less ignorant. With this in mind, I wish the DI better luck in choosing subject matter to cover in the pages of your newspaper in the future.

The leaving and returning game

The word "da" directly translated means "father" or "one who leaves." It also means "one who eventually returns home."

Sam is my son. He knows all about fathers. Fathers wake up early in the morning and start up their blue and white vans. They kiss their wives and sons goodbye. They drive down the gravel road, van skirting the wooden fence in the front yard, black tires spinning up white clouds of dust that drift slowly in the air, hands waving at wives and sons who wave back through kitchen windows. Then fathers disappear over one roly-poly hill, then appear again for a second, then disappear again.

About noon every day, Deb (ma: mother — one who stays) takes Sam outside for a walk. They watch the cattle stand still and the brown hogs hump through the muck, and they remove the mail from the metal box. Deb tells me that when Sam first steps outside, he shouts for me. "Da! Da!" he shouts, imagining that his father has driven just over the second hill and has stayed there, perhaps lighting a little campfire or sitting down in the dry white dirt of the road. "Da!" Because the world is only this big, and it only changes when he is lifted inside the magic gray pickup truck which is driven by his magic mother or father. But today there has been no magic truck, and the world is only this big.

When I was a kid, my father would wear dark and mighty suit coats to work. He would smell like hair tonic and Listerine. He car-pooled to the office, and we three kids would watch for the yellow convertible or the big red four-door. We would call for our father when we saw the car. The car would honk. Then our father would leave. He went to a place called "work." I imagined an automobile showroom with colorful plastic banners strung diagonally from flagpoles to each corner of the roof. I don't know why I imagined a car lot. Maybe because car lots were the only places other than home where I saw men wearing suit coats. My father, however, was not a car salesman. He was an "engineer," my mother told us. "But not that kind of engineer."

Of course, we were disappointed. What was he doing if he wasn't selling cars or driving trains? Maybe he had a job like Craig Stivers' dad who got to stay home all day and only went to work at night and carried a gun and stopped robbers from breaking into Raytheon. Maybe. But why did our father have to leave every day? Why was he always so tired when he came home? Why did he stare blankly at the television screen? No answers were forthcoming. These things, we figured, just were.

Around 7 o'clock at night, after work and dinner, I like to soak in the tub and read Sports Illustrated. Sam always comes into the bathroom and visits with me. Lately he has begun to play a new game with me: the leaving and returning game. In this game, I am the child (one who waits) and he is the father.

"Gabok gabok jup yup," he says, nodding his head certainly, and then he says, "Wuk wuk tuk. Bye-bye. Bye-bye." He waves and I wave, and he walks out of the bathroom and closes the door. A few seconds later, he bursts through the door again and says, "Hi! Hi!" and begins telling me about the time he has spent out in the hallway. Then he leaves again and comes back, and he repeats this game five or six times before he gets bored with it.

Strange, but I never get bored with it. Leaving and returning, I mean. Leaving and returning are the two things that keep me sane. Before we had Sam, I thought that I'd like to be the one who stayed home with children. Maybe, I thought, I could stay home with the kids for the first two years, then Deb could stay home with them for the next two. I wanted to experience fatherhood from the trenches. I wanted to be patient and kind and unselfish.

Sam is now 18 months old. I have learned a lot about myself in 18 months. I have also learned a lot about my father. We are not patient people. We are not kind or unselfish as we hoped we could be. We can take care of our children in four-hour sprints before we must stare blankly at the television set, must go to bed, must leave. But when we are away — driving trains or selling cars or sitting on gravel roads or repairing air conditioners — there is a listing of the sails, a leaning in the water, an increasing want to come home. Because home is the only place where someone thinks we are magic.

The evolving toilet paper dispenser

There's a game I like to play when my husband is trapped on the pot with no paper on the roller. Holding a quited full roll just out of his grasping fingers' reach, giggling evilly, I make him repeat promises to take me dancing, to make dinner and ply me with wine, to at least clean the litter box. Sometimes I pretend to forget him there while I loudly, gleefully start breakfast or water the plants, carrying the roll of Charmin with me like a tucked football. Sometimes I bring the kitten back to show him how silly his dada is for not looking before he sits down.

Though my husband has learned to stash a box of tissue under the sink, only a stretch and lean away from the toilet, few of us are so lucky when we find ourselves caught in a lonely stall of a public rest room with our pants around our shins, feeling up the tinted plastic shell of an empty dispenser.

Most public facilities no longer keep a pyramid of individually wrapped rolls on the toilet tank in case the wall dispenser runs out. Manufacturers like Marathon / James River and Fort Howard identified a couple of snags in this practice of heaping and piling. It seems society's ne'er-do-wells were either pinching the extra rolls or knocking them to the floor to sog in whatever happened to be puddled there. Suddenly building contractors, university purchasing offices and third-shift custodians at Sears were sold on the worry about waste.

Inventors, tinkers and low-level engineers, set to build a better mousetrap, came up with double-decker models, side-by-side models and models that did away with rolls altogether by stacking individual sheets, like folded Kleenex, to be stingily meted out one at a time. By the mid-1970s, single rollers — those dinosaurs we all have at home — were quickly yanked from stall walls and replaced with the updated smarter models.

Years later, though, another catch was found. Two rollers at a time were still not enough, despite the intent paper hoarding of the side-by-side's stainless steel sliding door and the hideaway tower of the double-decker model. What had not been originally factored into the economically sound, crime-deterrent toilet paper dispensary was the cleaning lady.

High-volume rest rooms, like those ladies' rooms in bars and shopping malls, were tended infrequently, leaving little or no paper for the constant flow of patrons. Instead of janitors returning once in a while to check the supply, they simply started stacking again, saving precious minutes for coffee and smokes. In the meantime, vandals and wastrels were ripping off the sometimes unworkable door of the side by side and prying wide the chaste opening of the no-roll model, using more paper than they needed and leaving the rest of us stranded.

In an effort to curb what manufacturers and distributors call "human nature," developers invented an almost endless roll of toilet tissue. It solves, because of the sheer enormity of the roll, the problem of theft. And because the paper has no perforation, users will, with the aid of a serrated blade, tear off only what they need — thus drastically cutting waste. To add to the hard sell, those unmotivated "cleaning ladies" would have only to replace rolls once a week rather than three times a day, every day.

This is where we are now — individually tailored toilet paper dispensers. Sizes large and enormous, but the range changes every year. There are even double-enormous models with two giant rolls inside one locked shell, good for heavy traffic areas like highway rest stops.

But while all new buildings install these units and older buildings once again replace what they have, the original problems have not gone away. And though, on the surface, these mousetraps are bigger and snappier, they are ultimately creating only more snags, and the mice they are trapping are the buyers, not the users.

Manufacturers are no longer sticking to a standard-size roller, but subtly varying sizes in order to sell the customer on his "exact needs." Once installed, the dispenser can be fitted with the rolls of paper made by whatever company sold the model, in the end boondoggling the buyer into paying what price the retailer asks and praying the model doesn't go obsolete or the mother manufacturer doesn't go belly up.

These new wall hogs are no panacea for the original dispenser ills, either. There are wiseacres out there who can pick the locks, crack the shells and take home under their coats a roll of Scott the size of a Honda tire. And, from my own experience, as far as waste and the theory of perforationlessness go, the serrated edge usually cuts only at my cuticles, making me yank more paper out than I need before simply getting a hold of it in both hands and ripping a hank off. Then, after all this, the "cleaning lady" is still not changing the rolls.

Maybe we should try some alternatives to paper. There are still bidets around, though they are a little beside the point when one ends up drying off with paper anyway. If there were some sort of sanitary vacuum, smaller versions of those gadgets that suck beaded water off your hood and windshield at the car wash? No? Well then, maybe we ought to go back to stockpiling rolls on the back of the toilet with a J.C. Penney catalogue underneath for good measure. It may be an eyesore to some, but it is also a vivid visual aid in avoiding time spent red-faced and paperless in a lonely public rest room.

GUEST OPINION • JULIE MONROE

Future of unionization

On April 12 and 13, the graduate employees' union was voted down. For so many of us, this is a very sad event after a year's worth of hard work for what we truly believe is our best and brightest hope. Because we sincerely believe in what we are doing, many of us will also find it difficult to forgive some of the events preceding the election: the lies and the deliberate misinformation from people who obviously do not take the well-being of the community, the university and graduate employees quite so seriously. So the question now is, where do we go from here?

The answer is, we examine what happened and we organize. First of all, we need to look closely at the election results. When you omit the votes of those who were not in the bargaining unit, the union lost by 81 votes out of about 1,400. Over 600 graduate employees voted for the union, even in the face of misinformation and an institution with far more power and resources than we have. This cannot be seen as a decisive loss. Secondly, none of us believe that we are now free to negotiate "individually" and "collegially" with the administration. We have never had that right, and we still do not. Finally, we must consider the history of graduate employee organizing. No graduate employee union has won recognition in only one year, and it is not unusual for it to take more than one attempt to win an election.

So our task is now clear. The administration made a lot of promises in the course of the election campaign and ill-informed anti-union graduate students made a lot of threats. Now, it is up to us to call these people on their claims. The best way to do this is to keep right on doing what we've been doing for the last year.

When we started a year ago, we had little information and fewer resources. Since then, we have made huge strides. The bargaining unit we negotiated with the administration is now written into law. We brought graduate employee issues to the forefront and kept them there. We have at least 600 graduate employees who support the effort to unionize. And we know what needs to be done. State law prohibits us from having another election for one year, but nothing can keep us from continuing to organize, continuing to insist that changes must be made and continuing to hold those people to task who claim it can be done without a union.

What we have accomplished in the last year is partly due to the assistance of the Service Employees International Union, the organization anti-union people claimed was using us for their own ends. SEIU put thousands of dollars and many people into helping us just because we asked them to, money and resources that come directly out of the dues of hard-working people around the country. Like us, all those people are disappointed in the results of the election. But they are not disappointed in us. They have not given up and neither can we.

Our task cannot be accomplished by just a few dedicated individuals. Our accomplishments so far are the result of hundreds of people's commitment and work. If you are one of the people who voted for the union, if you are angry about the lies or stunned by the loss, come to the COGS general meeting today, April 20, at 8 p.m. in Shambaugh Auditorium. This is our chance to demonstrate that we are still here and we are still strong. Come to the meeting and help ensure that next April, our voices will be even louder and stronger. "Don't mourn. Organize."

Freedom and responsibility

To the Editor:

We see and hear volumes of comments in the media on freedoms, rights, privileges and privacy. Freedoms of the press, of expression, academia and personal. Fine! But if anyone analyzes the functions of a citizen in a democracy, he or she is immediately confronted with the self-evident truth that freedoms must be balanced by responsibilities, duties and obligations, or society and the nation quickly descend into anarchy in which no one has freedom. Freedom is precious, but the world really operates successfully on persons who respond to and carry out responsibilities.

Professors, at least some of them, are quick to defend their "academic freedoms." Commendable, but I find it strange that as members of a "community of scholars searching for truth," I have heard so little concerning academic responsibilities. Instead I hear, "No absolutes," "Everything is relative," "Values clarification," "You can't impose your values on anyone else." It doesn't take an Einstein to deduce an effort to resist any form of discipline.

When do we begin training our children to look for and accept opportunities to carry out responsibilities for which they will be adequately rewarded? In the first eight years of their lives, particularly. The reward need be no more than, "Well done, Janie / Jimmy. I'm proud of you." Is there a better way of building self-esteem and first-class citizens for the future?

In all the discussion over "what's wrong with our schools," I can't recall a single instance of the students being challenged with their responsibilities to the taxpayers who have spent millions of dollars for buildings and programs which offer the opportunity to any boy or girl who really wants to learn to achieve a goal which they can set for themselves.

One summer I had a series of tennis lessons with a young Japanese girl, Matsuo Okada. She'd never had a racket in her hand, but the intensity with which she approached every lesson was a marvel to behold. In over 90-degree heat she would go an hour with no sign of a let up in effort. Her progress was phenomenal. Motivation? Heck, she motivated me! I don't know what you may think of the Japanese education system, but friends who've been there tell me that Miss Okada is representative of all the Pacific Rim people. Ouch! Do we meet that kind of competition or do we fade into might have been?

Demand better movies

To the Editor:

I would like to applaud Tad Paulson for pointing out what I have become acutely aware of since moving here three months ago — "the Iowa City movie scene is really awful." Having moved here from Atlanta (and Houston before that), I was surprised how easily Iowans were entertained at the movies (re: "Mighty Ducks II," etc.). I'm glad to learn that this is not a conscious choice. Perhaps we need more pressure on the theater owners to stop sending second-rate pictures or maintaining films for a three-month run. In a town with so few screens, what we get is what we demand.

Equal opportunity in anatomical humor

To the Editor:

Thank-you, S. Giraudeau, for your letter about the April Fools' Day article. I, too, wondered, "Why is female anatomy so often at the butt (pun intended?) of a joke?" Because I don't really find jokes about male / female anatomy to be especially funny. I wondered why it was only female anatomy selected for the article. My feeling was, "Gosh, if they're going to do something like this, it ought to be an equal opportunity joke. Certainly the editors at the DI could have dreamed up something about male anatomy to go right along with their joke about female anatomy." Like S. Giraudeau, I ask, "What was the purpose of mentioning any sex organ?" If the purpose of the article was to make light of the university's recent debate about the classroom sex act policy, I'm not sure it did the job.

Viewing speakers and sources critically

To the Editor:

On April 4, DI columnist David Mastio wrote about an incident that took place on the UI campus in 1989. Unfortunately, he was not an eyewitness and he evidently relied upon the recollections of some of his right-wing friends in the Young Americans for Freedom. His omissions and misstatements deserve comment.

According to Mastio's account: Antonio Ybarra-Rojas, "a member of the Contra rebels," was to have given a speech about the pending elections in Nicaragua, but he was frightened by a "horde of hostile, chanting, sign-carrying leftists" and refused to speak. The YAF then moved the speaker to a different room where they physically prevented the demonstrators and others from entering — an action for which the YAF lost their campus funding for one year.

Mastio does not mention that campus security officers began dragging the demonstrators out of the room and tearing up their signs until they were informed by the university's legal counsel that the demonstrators were not doing anything illegal. If the demonstrators had obstructed the doorway or chanted in the room, as Mastio alleges, then they could have been removed.

But what is most interesting is Mastio's description of Ybarra-Rojas as "a member of the Contra rebels" and a "Contra leader." These are certainly things that he would have denied at the time because he was presenting himself to his audience and the media as an independent election observer. The two front-page articles in the DI the next day described Ybarra-Rojas innocuously as a professor and a "consultant to the American and European governments."

The purpose of the demonstrators and the messages on their signs was to alert his audience and the media to his past and his financial supporters. In fact, Ybarra-Rojas had worked for former Nicaraguan dictator Somoza's Central Bank in the 1970s and since then with a variety of right-wing organizations supported by the CIA and the Rev. Moon's Unification Church. I don't know if he was ever really a "member" or "leader" of the Contras as Mastio asserted, but he hardly has the credentials of a freedom-loving election observer.

The irony is that Mastio's description of Ybarra-Rojas is actually more accurate than the propaganda that the DI carried on its front page back in 1989. I hope that future DI editors and reporters will cast a more critical eye on future speakers and sources.

Iowa baseball travels to Iowa State today

The Iowa baseball team will travel to Ames today to play Iowa State in a doubleheader scheduled for 1:30 p.m.

The Hawkeyes (16-19-1) are coming off a four-game series split with Michigan last weekend.

BASEBALL

Reds pick up Houston's Taubensee

CINCINNATI (AP) — Joe Oliver's swollen ankle prompted the Cincinnati Reds to trade two minor-league pitchers Tuesday for Houston backup catcher Eddie Taubensee.

The Astros obtained minor leaguers Ross Powell and Marty Lister for Taubensee, who wasn't playing much behind Scott Servais. Taubensee appeared in just five games, going 1-for-10.

The Reds put Oliver on the 15-day disabled list Tuesday, retroactive to last Tuesday. He's not sure exactly how he hurt his left ankle, and the Reds aren't sure exactly what's wrong.

Yankees' Steinbrenner released from hospital

TAMPA, Fla. (AP) — New York Yankees owner George Steinbrenner was released from a hospital Tuesday after an overnight stay for an undisclosed reason.

"He was discharged today," a woman answering the phone at St. Joseph's Hospital said. "He was here overnight."

Telephone messages left with hospital administrators and with Steinbrenner's office at American Shipbuilding Co. were not returned.

CBS reported Tuesday that the Yankees owner had been hospitalized, but team officials in New York said that was news to them.

"I don't know where the report came from," said Marty Naughton, assistant director of media relations. "One of my bosses talked to him on the phone a little while ago, and he was fine."

FOOTBALL

NCAA lets Notre Dame off the hook

SOUTH BEND, Ind. (AP) — The NCAA will not penalize Notre Dame after the university reported two former football players were living at an off-campus condominium paid for by an alumnus.

Jeff Burris and Bryant Young, both expected to be high picks in Sunday's NFL draft, lived at a complex near campus for at least a month this year.

When the university found out about the arrangement, it ordered Burris and Young to move back on campus and reduced their scholarships by $200 each. The players also were warned they would lose the rest of their scholarship money if they moved off campus again before graduation.

Both players are seniors and have no remaining eligibility. Notre Dame reported itself in late February.

WAC ready to expand, BYU says

PROVO, Utah (AP) — Brigham Young says the Western Athletic Conference is ready to become a 16-team league spread across four time zones.

Among the WAC's additions will be Southern Methodist, Texas Christian and Rice — three of four Southwest Conference schools that are out of the Big Eight's expansion.

Also joining the league beginning with the 1996 football season will be UNLV, San Jose State and Tulsa.

Jay Monsen, BYU electronic media director, said BYU President Rex Lee issued a letter Tuesday confirming the presidents' council made the decision to expand and he supported the decision.

Iowa's Fry stresses defensive speed

Roxanna Pellin
The Daily Iowan

Iowa football coach Hayden Fry is requiring something different from his defense this season — speed.

Body fat is out, and strength and quickness are what Iowa's defense will focus on, Fry said at a press conference Tuesday.

The Hawkeyes will play the Coca-Cola Classic Spring Game Saturday at 1 p.m. at Kinnick Stadium. Admission is $2.

Iowa's defense lost seven to graduation, including all-Big Ten defensive tackle Mike Wells and defen-

Driscoll on target to quarterback Hawks

Kris Wiley
The Daily Iowan

Ryan Driscoll's timetable for success is right on schedule.

When the sophomore from Cedar Rapids joined the Iowa football program in 1992, he planned to quarterback the Hawkeyes for three years. After ranking second on the depth chart at the start of spring practice, Driscoll took over the starting position just five days before the annual spring intrasquad game, scheduled for Saturday at Kinnick Stadium.

But Driscoll's role isn't solidified. Coach Hayden Fry said at a press conference Tuesday that the Hawkeyes will rotate Driscoll, senior Jefferson Bates, junior Corby Smith and freshman Matt Sherman at the No. 1 and No. 2 quarterback positions this weekend. Junior Mike Duprey may see spot sive end Larry Blue. Returning starters include guard Parker Wildeman, tackle Chris Webb and defensive backs Chris Jackson and Damien Robinson. Wildeman ranked second in tackles for the Hawkeyes with 107 last season, and Webb was eighth with 63 tackles and had five sacks for a loss of 49 yards.

Linebackers John Hartlieb and Bobby Diaco saw extensive time last season and ranked 10th and 11th in tackles, respectively. Hartlieb will play on the strong side, Diaco in the middle, and George Bennett is in front for the weak side position.

Free safety Bo Porter is playing rookie-league baseball with the Chicago Cubs, but will return in the fall.

Although the Hawkeyes will have size on the defensive line, Fry said he also is looking for speed.

Iowa track standout Anthuan Maybank warms up before practice Tuesday. Maybank, who became the first athlete ever to run the 400-meter dash in under 45 seconds with a 44.99 last year at the Drake Relays in Des Moines, will return to the Relays April 29 and 30.

Iowa 'just going through motions'

Mike Egenes
The Daily Iowan

The Hawkeyes played consistently poor as they were swept by Northern Illinois 3-1 and 4-3 Tuesday afternoon at the Hawkeye Softball Complex.

Coach Gayle Blevins had little to say following the doubleheader, but assistant coach Jenny Allard said the Hawkeyes (24-18) didn't come to play.

"We're just going through the motions. You are not going to win ball games that way," she said. "The game is a challenge, and if you don't rise to the challenge, you're not going to succeed. End of story."

In the first game, sophomore Tasha Reents scored Iowa's only run on Melissa Young's RBI single in the third inning. The Hawkeyes were retired in order three times and left runners at first and second in the fifth and seventh innings. They also stranded runners at first and third in the first.

"We're just going through the motions. You are not going to win ball games that way."

Jenny Allard, Iowa assistant softball coach

Alicia Nelson, who pitched the first two innings, was charged for all three runs and was tagged with the loss. Nelson was chased after giving up a double to the Huskies' Missy Kaczor in the third. Karen Jackson pitched the rest of the game in relief.

Jackson (18-7) fanned nine in the second game, but was saddled with the loss. She ran into trouble in the first inning, sandwiching

Iowa's Jackson granted medical redshirt season

Kris Wiley
The Daily Iowan

Iowa senior Tia Jackson, who missed most of the 1993-94 season with a knee injury, received a medical hardship from the Big Ten Conference Tuesday and will play for the Hawkeyes next year.

The news came as no surprise to Jackson. She injured her right knee in a game against James Madison Dec. 19, requiring surgery for a torn anterior cruciate ligament. In the four games she played before her injury, she led the Hawkeyes in scoring, at 16.8 points per game, and rebounding, at 4.3 a contest.

"I was pretty sure everything would turn out the way it did," said Jackson, a 6-foot guard from Mardela Springs, Md.

She is continuing rehabilitation and said she should be ready for Iowa's first practice on Oct. 15.

"If I can come back ready, 100 percent, that's what I want to do and contribute as much as I can. But if I'm not 100 percent, I wouldn't want to be on the floor," Jackson said.

Board to deliberate labor, strike in July

Ronald Blum
Associated Press

NEW YORK — The executive board of the Major League Baseball Players Association will meet on July 11, the day before the All-Star Game, to consider the status of labor talks and a possible strike.

"This is what we normally do in negotiating years," union head Donald Fehr said Tuesday.

In 1985, the year of the last strike, the board met in Chicago on the day prior to the All-Star Game in Minneapolis and set an Aug. 6 strike date. The two-day work stoppage was settled the following day after the intervention of Commissioner Peter Ueberroth.

Fehr said the meeting may take place in Pittsburgh, the site of the All-Star Game the following day, or in Cleveland or possibly another city near Pittsburgh. Fehr has said a strike is a "real possibility" because of the lack of progress in negotiations and the fear owners may unilaterally impose a salary cap after this season if there's no agreement.

"I don't have any comment to that," said Milwaukee Brewers president Bud Selig, chairman of the ruling executive council.

There have been just four negotiating sessions since owners reopened the labor contract on Dec.

7, 1992, and there has been no substantive bargaining. Baseball has been interrupted by four strikes and three lockouts since 1972.

Fehr said the site of the meeting will depend on whether the commissioner's office makes hotel rooms in Pittsburgh available to the union. He also said that there could be an additional board meeting "if need be before that."

After five weeks of talks, the sides finally agreed last week on a confidentiality agreement covering financial data owners will turn over to the union in an attempt to convince players of the need for a salary cap.

Owners claim they will lose millions this year, partly due to a drop in national broadcasting revenue from $15.4 million per team to $6-7 million. However, Financial World magazine reported Tuesday that teams had an overall operating profit of $168 million in 1993.

Penquin defense stops Capitals

Associated Press

PITTSBURGH — The Pittsburgh Penguins proved they also can play defensive hockey, riding Tom Barrasso's goaltending to a 2-1 victory over the Washington Capitals to tie their first-round playoff series Tuesday night.

Barrasso stopped 34 of 35 shots as Pittsburgh took a 2-0 lead on first-period goals by Mario Lemieux and Rick Tocchet, then shifted into a defensive mode after the Capitals surprisingly opened up their game.

The Penguins won despite managing only four shots on goal in the final two periods — three in the second and only one in the third.

Pittsburgh, which lost the series opener 5-3, improved to 8-0 on home ice in game two of a playoff series to even the Eastern Conference quarterfinals. Game three will be Thursday night in Landover, Md.

The Penguins put only 17 shots on rookie goaltender Byron Dafeo — a surprise starter playing just his sixth NHL game this season — and were outshot 35-17, but responded with one of their best defensive games of the season.

Barrasso, uneven at times in the opener, was spectacular in the second period as Washington outshot the Penguins 13-3, then withstood a flurry of late third-period Capital rushes to prevent an overtime period.

Devils 2, Sabres 1

EAST RUTHERFORD, N.J. — Scott Stevens' power-play goal with 6:21 to play on a shot deflected by a Buffalo player gave the New Jersey Devils a victory over the Sabres and evened their best-of-seven series at 1-1.

Associated Press

New Jersey's Tommy Albelin, right, checks Buffalo's Petr Svoboda in the first period of the Devils' 2-1 win Tuesday night.

The Eastern Conference quarterfinal now moves to Buffalo for games Thursday and Saturday before returning here for game five Monday.

Like the opening game of the series between the league's two best defensive teams, game two was marked by tight checking and outstanding play by goalies

Dominik Hasek of Buffalo and Martin Brodeur of New Jersey.

None of the goals was their fault, and the game-winner was deflected by Buffalo's Yuri Khmylev, who also had a hand in the Devils' first goal, by Stephane Richer early in the second period.

Alexander Mogilny tied it early in the third, and then Stevens got the game-winner 1:37 after Wayne Presley was sent off the ice for tripping Bernie Nicholls.

Devils defenseman Bruce Driver kept the play alive in the Sabres end by sending the puck around the end boards to Nicholls.

He sent it to the left point and Stevens one-timed the pass. Just as the puck left Stevens' stick, it hit Khmylev and deflected over Hasek.

Brodeur had only one tough save the rest of the way.

Michigan's Rose joins Howard in NBA draft

Harry Atkins
Associated Press

ANN ARBOR, Mich. — The Fab Five was reduced to two Tuesday as Jalen Rose, following in the footsteps of Chris Webber and Juwan Howard, announced he will leave Michigan early to enter the NBA draft.

That leaves only Jimmy King and Ray Jackson — the two Texans — from the greatest freshman basketball class ever assembled.

Webber is a rookie with the Golden State Warriors, and Howard announced Monday he was turning pro.

"I thought about my teammates and the passionate love we have for each other," Rose said. "This has been my dream, and now I'm getting a chance to go for it. I think this is the best thing for me at this time."

The Fab Five went to the NCAA final game in 1992 before losing to Duke. In 1993, they again played for the national championship, but lost to North Carolina after Webber's infamous timeout call.

This season, without Webber, the Wolverines lost to Arkansas in the Midwest Regional final.

"For us, it's like a legacy that will never be forgotten," Rose said. "The year before I got here, Michigan was playing in the NIT. The next year, we were playing for the NCAA championship."

Rose was asked if he had any regrets about the Fab Five era.

"I wouldn't do anything different," he said. "We did so many things as a team. If I could change anything, I'd have cut down the nets twice."

Rose, a 6-foot-8, 210-pound guard, ranks 17th in career NCAA tournament scoring with 250 points. He was named to the 1992 All-Tournament team and the 1993 West Regional team. This season he was named second team All-American by The Associated Press and was one of 16 finalists for the John R. Wooden Award.

Rose, a boyhood pal of Webber, came to Michigan after leading Detroit Southeastern to the state championship. He ranks sixth on the Wolverines' career scoring list with 1,788 points for a 17.5 average. Rose scored in double figures in 98 of his 102 games for Michigan.

Rose said he wasn't concerned with "speculation" that he may not be among the top players drafted. He also doesn't care which NBA team he plays for.

"It's kind of like the Army, I guess," Rose said. "Whoever takes you, that's where you've got to go."

Broncos snatch Washington from 49ers

Associated Press

SAN FRANCISCO — Defensive lineman Ted Washington of the San Francisco 49ers was acquired by the Denver Broncos on Tuesday for a fifth-round pick in the upcoming draft.

Washington, a 299-pound nose tackle / defensive end, was the 49ers' first-round draft choice in 1991.

He is recovering from a broken left leg.

Washington moved into the San Francisco starting lineup in 1992, making six starts overall. He had two sacks and knocked down two passes.

He did not miss a game because of injury in 1991 or 1992.

He started in 12 games for the 49ers last season, missing four because of injury. He had three sacks and proved a solid run stopper.

The San Francisco Chronicle reported Tuesday that free-agent linebacker Ken Norton of the Dallas Cowboys has decided to accept San Francisco's five-year, $8 million contract offer. He is expected to sign in the next few days.

The 49ers said Tuesday that Norton had not signed with the team.

In other moves, 49ers cornerback Don Griffin agreed to a four-year contract with Cleveland that reportedly averages just over $1 million a year.

"We're bringing him in tomorrow for a physical and hopefully a contract signing," said Kevin Byrne, the Browns' vice president for public relations. "We have a tentative verbal agreement right now with his agent (Steve Weinberg)."

The Browns tried to reach a deal with Griffin last year.

"We talked to him a year ago, when he had been waived by the 49ers, but they had made an agreement to bring him back and we couldn't persuade him to come to Cleveland," Byrne said. "We got him, we just got him a year later."

The Chronicle also reported that the 49ers are making a serious effort to keep quarterback Steve Bono. The backup quarterback met for an hour Monday with club president Carmen Polycy.

Polycy described the meeting as "very pleasant" and said he plans to start talks with Bono's agent about a new contract.

L.A. comes from behind in 8-7 win

Associated Press

PHILADELPHIA — Mitch Webster singled in Eric Karros with the winning run in the ninth inning, and the Los Angeles Dodgers scored four times in the eighth Tuesday to rally past the Philadelphia Phillies 8-7.

The Dodgers, who have scored 31 runs in their last three games, trailed 7-2 entering the seventh.

Todd Worrell (1-1) pitched the eighth for the win, and Darren Dreifort picked up his first major-league save.

Expos 4, Giants 3

SAN FRANCISCO — Moises Alou homered off Dave Burba in the ninth inning to snap the Expos' four-game losing streak.

Alou, who went 3-for-4 and scored twice, was the first batter to face Burba (0-1) and drove a 2-2 pitch over the right-field fence for his third homer.

Mel Rojas (1-0) got the final four outs for the victory.

Cardinals 5, Braves 4

ATLANTA (AP) — The St. Louis Cardinals took advantage of an error by third baseman Terry Pendleton to rally for three runs in the seventh inning and stopped Atlanta's six-game winning streak.

Greg Maddux (3-1) took the loss.

The Braves scored three times off Allen Watson (2-0) in the third.

Mike Perez got three outs for his league-leading fifth save.

Reds 8, Pirates 2

CINCINNATI — Roberto Kelly put Cincinnati in control with a three-run homer and Jose Rijo allowed just two hits in seven innings to beat Pittsburgh.

Rijo (1-1) got his first win in four starts despite control problems. He walked five, including .219-hitting Orlando Merced three times.

Jeff Brantley completed the two-hitter by retiring the last six batters.

Denny Neagle (1-2) struggled to throw strikes during his 3½ innings, walking five and hitting Hal Morris.

Astros 3, Cubs 0

CHICAGO — Greg Swindell won his third straight start and the Houston Astros hit three solo homers to beat Chicago.

Swindell (3-0), who retired the first 12 batters, extended his scoreless streak to 17 innings, allowing four hits in seven innings. Rookie Steve Trachsel (1-1) took the loss.

Playoff battles Heat up

Associated Press

MIAMI — The Miami Heat moved within one victory of clinching a playoff spot, opening a 33-point lead in the first half Tuesday and coasting to a 126-99 win over Minnesota.

Glen Rice scored 32 points for Miami, which snapped a five-game losing streak.

One more victory by Miami or a loss by Charlotte will clinch a playoff spot for the Heat.

Isaiah Rider scored 28 points for Minnesota, which fell to 20-59.

Magic 132, Pistons 104
AUBURN HILLS, Mich. — Isaiah Thomas tore his Achilles tendon in what was almost certainly the last NBA game of his career.

Thomas scored 12 points in 26 minutes and waged a losing battle against Magic point guard Anfernee Hardaway, who finished with 25 points.

With the victory, Orlando clinched the homecourt advantage for the first round of the playoffs. It was the Magic's first win at The Palace in 10 tries.

Hawks 87, Knicks 84
NEW YORK — Kevin Willis had 23 points and 17 rebounds, and the Atlanta Hawks used a 12-2 fourth-quarter run to take a commanding lead in the Eastern Conference.

The Hawks are one game in front of Chicago and 1½ ahead of the Knicks with five days left in the regular season.

Patrick Ewing had 24 points and 15 rebounds and Charles Oakley 21 points and 12 rebounds for the Knicks.

Danny Manning scored 16 points and Craig Ehlo 14 for Atlanta.

Celtics 112
BOSTON — Ed Pinckney had a career-high 22 rebounds and a season-high 21 points and Rick Fox scored 31 points, leading the Boston Celtics over the Milwaukee Bucks.

Associated Press

Milwaukee's Ken Norman grabs the defensive rebound against Boston's Ed Pinckney, left, and Robert Parish during the first quarter of the Celtics' 120-112 win over the Bucks Tuesday in Boston.

Robert Parish added 25 points and 15 rebounds as the Celtics dominated the boards 64-37.

Milwaukee was led by Ken Norman with 28 points and Eric Murdock with 23.

Pacers 111, Bullets 110
LANDOVER, Md. — Reggie Miller scored 34 points and hit the deciding basket with 2.8 seconds left as the Indiana Pacers beat the Washington Bullets for their team-record 18th road victory of the season.

Rick Smits added 23 points on 11-for-15 shooting for the Pacer offense.

Don MacLean had 25 points and 13 rebounds and Rex Chapman 25 points for the Bullets, who lost for the 14th time in 18 games.

Nets 115, 76ers 110
PHILADELPHIA — Derrick Coleman scored 31 points and added 12 rebounds and 10 assists as the New Jersey Nets won their fourth game in a row.

Kenny Anderson added 19 points and 11 assists for the Nets, who already have clinched a playoff spot in the Eastern Conference.

After Philadelphia tied the score 84-84 with 10:43 to play, the Nets won on a 13-3 run.

Philadelphia rallied once again and closed to 101-99 on a layup by Johnny Dawkins with 3:11 to go.

Kevin Edwards and Armon Gilliam each had 16 each for the Nets.

Jeff Malone had 26 and Clarence Weatherspoon 24 for Philadelphia.

FRY

and more turned into a game of big plays," he said. "That's where that speed factor comes in. There's no question in my mind this will be the fastest defensive team that we've had. It will also be one of the most inexperienced. But if you point them in the right direction and say 'sic em,' they don't have to have a lot of experience if they can recognize the guy with the ball."

Iowa led the Big Ten in pass defense last season, allowing 172 yards per game. The Hawkeyes finished the season at 6-6.

Fry will count on the defense early in the season while Iowa's new quarterback gets adjusts.

"To me, everything starts on defense," he said. "If you play good, sound defense and have a good, sound kicking game, you can bring the offense along. It takes longer to bring the offense along. If you can't stop folks, it's all over with."

The Hawkeyes' kicking game shouldn't be a major concern, with freshman punter Nick Gallery and kickers Brion Hurley and Todd Romano returning. Gallery averaged 41.7 yards per punt last season, second best in the Big Ten.

Iowa's offense should be anchored by center Casey Wiegmann, split end Harold Jasper, guard Hal Mady, tackle Ross Verba, tight end Scott Slutzker, fullback Kent Kahl, wingback Anthony Dean and running backs Ryan Terry and Sedrick Shaw.

Fry said Terry and Shaw are listed on the same line in the two-deep, but could play at the same time Saturday.

"We're experimenting a lot, hopefully getting ready for (redshirt freshman Tavian) Banks and (incoming freshman Tim) Dwight for next fall," Fry said.

"Fry said Driscoll and Bates have been practicing well, while Smith, a transfer from USC, and Sherman are still learning the system. Driscoll and Sherman have not taken a snap in an Iowa game.

"It'll be kind of a toss of the coin, and I'll let Coach (Don) Patterson decide how many repetitions each one receives during the spring game," Fry said. "It appears right now we're going to be evaluating right up until kickoff next fall before we make up our minds."

If the Hawkeyes had a game today, however, Fry said the starting job would go to the 6-foot-4, 200-pound Driscoll.

"At this time, based on the scrimmages we have had, Ryan Driscoll has the best numbers from a completion standpoint, percentage of completions, number of interceptions, etc.," he said. "He's big, he's strong, he's intelligent. Up to this point, he hasn't made the dumb mistakes."

Taking turns guiding the Hawkeyes has its good and bad points, Driscoll said.

"You can learn a lot from lots of other guys and try not to make the mistakes that each of us are making. On the negative side, it cuts down on the number of reps in practice," he said.

Driscoll has waited two years to get his chance at Iowa, sitting out with neck and knee injuries, and a bad shoulder that required surgery almost a year ago. He currently is nursing an ankle injury, but said it won't affect his playing time.

He also hasn't felt any pressure to keep his job.

"As long as I'm in the No. 1 position, it's up to me to lose it. If I keep relaxed and doing the things I know I can do, then I don't think I'll lose it.

"Maybe on Saturday I'll feel a little bit of pressure. I'm not the type of guy that gets real uptight about things. I'm relaxed at all times, so I'm not too uptight about it yet. Hopefully I can maintain my composure."

'SNL' regulars visit CR for evening of comedy

Ian Corwin
The Daily Iowan

This week, fans of NBC's "Saturday Night Live" have a chance to get an up-close peek at what some of the show's cast members do with their downtime.

When they're not pissing off General Electric (which owns NBC) or hobnobbing with the show's guest hosts, cast members Kevin Nealon, Julia Sweeney and Jay Mohr work on their own brands of stand-up comedy. Their show at Cedar Rapids' Paramount Theatre Thursday marks a return to form for at least two of the performers.

Nealon (best known as the current anchor for the show's "Weekend Update") is the veteran of the group, having been active in stand-up for nearly 16 years. In a recent phone interview, he talked about his reputation as a comic.

"It's kind of funny, because stand-up is really my forte," he said. "Not many people know it."

Nealon lists Andy Kaufman, Steve Martin and Albert Brooks among his biggest influences.

"I do some off-the-wall stand-up," he said. "It's dry and subtle. ... There's a lot of misdirection. It's kind of a potpourri of different styles."

For Nealon, "SNL" is "a great job." Their schedule runs only 20 weeks out of the year, which gives the comedian time to get out on the road and do what he likes to do. His "other irons in the fire" at this point include two films based on characters he created for "SNL,"

"Saturday Night Live" cast member Julia Sweeney will emcee a stand-up comedy show as "Pat" Thursday in Cedar Rapids.

Subliminal Man and Franz of the Nealon / Dana Carvey "Hanz and Franz" body-building team.

The newest member of the "SNL" cast, Jay Mohr is most widely recognized as the host of MTV's "Lip Service," although he has been doing stand-up nearly five years.

According to organizers of the event, Julia Sweeney, the woman behind the puzzlingly androgynous "Pat," will emcee the show as that character. She's also expected to do improv and routines of her own.

"Saturday Night Live Thursday" will play Thursday, April 21, at 7 p.m. Tickets for the show are $21.50 and can be purchased at any Ticketmaster outlet.

Garrett Morris still suffering from month-old bullet wound

Associated Press

LOS ANGELES - Comedian Garrett Morris was back in the hospital Tuesday, after a month-old gunshot wound apparently became infected.

Morris walked into Daniel Freeman Memorial Hospital on Monday night complaining of pain in his back, publicist Rita Tateel said Tuesday.

"There have been some complications, and we don't know what kind of procedure will be done," she said.

"There is some speculation that he has had some inflammation and infection in the area where the bullet was."

Morris was critically wounded during a botched holdup in South Central Los Angeles on Feb. 24.

He was reportedly confronted by two robbers while he was on his way to his car.

He told them he had no money.

One of the assailants then fired two rounds, wounding Morris in the chest and arm. Morris was originally treated at Daniel Freeman Hospital.

The 57-year-old actor was a member of the original cast of "Saturday Night Live" and plays Stan in the current TV comedy "Martin."

Beatles reunion unlikely, unnecessary

Stuart Reid
The Daily Iowan
This week: Beatles reunion rumors

One of the hottest rumors in the music world today surrounds some sort of Beatles reunion in 1994. In England, where each year's No. 1 song at Christmas is the subject of much speculation and wagering, the Beatles are this year's early favorites.

Already, the surviving group members have gotten together to record "incidental music" for an upcoming Beatles retrospective. As with most big reunions of great bands from the past, this is a project probably best left in the imagination of music journalists.

The most obvious drawback to such a reunion is the absence of John Lennon, arguably the most vital member of the band. While George Harrison wrote several underrated tracks during the Beatles' reign and Paul McCartney's natural showmanship helped to define the band, it was Lennon's songwriting abilities that lifted the Beatles to a unique level of cultural significance.

If there is any doubt as to how critical Lennon's input was, one need only survey the post-Beatles recordings of the other band members. While McCartney has maintained a modicum of popular (if not critical) support for his solo work, his songs never reached the sort of universal appeal that Lennon recaptured with "Imagine."

Even Harrison's solo recordings, while maintaining and expanding some of the themes established during the Beatles' brief but prolific career, somehow seem like little more than pale reflections of their past glories. Lastly, there is Ringo, whose post-Beatles artistic endeavors reached their pinnacle with the film "Caveman."

The issue of who, if anyone, should be the band's fourth member is also a center of controversy and speculation. It is rumored that a "short list" now exists of some 150 potential candidates. While favorites include Bernard Sumner, Peter Dinklage and, of course, that little weasel Julian, I'd choose Ian McCulloch.

Like Lennon, McCulloch is a fine singer and songwriter with a distinctive, compassionate lyric voice. McCulloch shares the sort of uniquely English boyishness which typified the early Beatles. None of which is to say that McCulloch ought to be considered in the same breath as Lennon, merely that he strikes me as the least offensive of the candidates mentioned.

It is also possible that the debate over a fourth major participant might be irrelevant depending on the nature of the reunion. Clearly if the purpose is to play live or re-record classic Beatles tracks, a fourth is necessary. However, if the three surviving members move in the direction of recording and playing exclusively new material, then an "official" fourth member might not be needed, and a series of guest musicians might be incorporated on different songs.

While some sort of limited reunion project, perhaps a one-off concert to celebrate the release of some previously unavailable recordings, might be tolerable, it is clear that some stones are better left unturned. As stimulating an intellectual game as a Beatles reunion is for music addicts, the reality would inevitably fail to live up to the hype.

Few things are as depressing as watching middle-aged men endlessly chasing after their lost youth, desperately set on recreating celebrated moments from the past. Perhaps a quick viewing of the verging on incontinent cast of "Star Trek VI" would be enough to ward Paul, George and Ringo off from this ill-conceived venture. And with luck, they will have the sense to simply "Let It Be."

RESTRAINING ORDER OBTAINED

Arnold cites abuse in demand for divorce

Lynn Elber
Associated Press

LOS ANGELES — They flashed their rear ends in public, posed for gross-out photos and squabbled with TV networks. It wasn't pretty while it lasted, and now the union of Roseanne and Tom Arnold is coming to an ugly end.

Roseanne Arnold filed for divorce Monday and got a restraining order against her husband and business partner, accusing him of slapping her around.

"I now realize that I have been a classic battered and abused wife," Arnold said in court papers. "Throughout our marriage the respondent hit me, struck me, has thrown objects at me, pinched me and verbally abused me. He also has pushed me against walls, while he screams and shouts at me, drowning out any possible plea that I might take for him to stop."

In her book "My Lives," she says she was sexually abused as a child, leading her to abuse drugs and alcohol.

The Arnolds made news together by flashing their bottoms — each bearing a tattoo of the other's name — at the 1989 World Series, mud wrestling in photographs for Vanity Fair, recounting personal recollections of child abuse and squabbling with networks over their contracts.

The divorce filing came three days after an argument erupted between the Arnolds on the set of ABC's "Roseanne." Arnold said her husband forced his way onto the set Friday — past the four security guards she hired to prevent him — and assaulted four people.

That same day, she said, she called police after her husband charged into her Los Angeles home and threatened her three children from a previous marriage. She said in court papers that her husband had moved out six months ago.

In asking for a restraining order, she declared, "I have often been the subject of humiliating stories in tabloid newspapers. However, I must make these revelations at this time because of the conclusion that I have reached that I cannot continue to live in a classic battered wife syndrome mentality."

An entertainment industry analyst said that the impact of the split remains uncertain, but that Arnold clearly outweighs her husband in ratings clout.

"If Roseanne Arnold left 'Roseanne,' that would have an impact on Capital Cities-ABC and on Viacom, which syndicates the show," said Jeffrey Longdon of the Seidler Cos. securities firm. "Tom Arnold is not someone who would impact the earnings per share of any company."
