Nixon's funeral free of judgments

Thousands gather to pay respects

YORBA LINDA, Calif. — Richard M. Nixon completed his remarkable and contentious life's journey Wednesday, honored in death by five American presidents. President Clinton called him a leader whose achievements overshadowed humiliation and said, "He never gave up being part of the action and passion of his times."

Twenty years after he resigned the presidency in disgrace, Nixon was bidden farewell by 2,000 mourners who gathered under cloudy skies at an outdoor funeral within sight of the home where he was born 81 years ago.

"Oh yes, he knew great controversy amid defeat as well as victory," Clinton said in a eulogy delivered beside Nixon's flag-draped casket. "He made mistakes and they, like his accomplishments, are part of his life and record."

"But the enduring lesson of Richard Nixon is that he never gave up being part of the action and passion of his times," Clinton said.

Clinton looked beyond the Watergate scandal that drove Nixon from office. "May the day of judging President Nixon on anything but his entire life come to a close," Clinton said.

Clinton said he had valued Nixon's judgment and advice. He said that based on a phone call and a letter he had received just a month before Nixon's fatal stroke, "I can say his spirit was very much alive to the very end."

There were only veiled mentions of the Watergate scandal in any of the eulogies. Instead, the speakers focused on his foreign policy successes and triumphs over adversity.

"In the conduct of foreign policy, Richard Nixon was one of the seminal presidents," said Henry YORBA LINDA, Calif. — They came to grieve, to reflect and to give thanks. By the thousands, Richard Nixon's faithful "Silent Majority" bid farewell to their president 20 years after he resigned the Oval Office.

They were given just 20 hours to view his flag-draped mahogany casket at the Richard Nixon Library & Birthplace. Somehow, 42,000 people did.

"It was absolutely one of the deepest experiences I've ever had," said a weeping Elna Johanson, 75. "I thought I was part of a silent majority. But you can see it's not really so silent."

Some came to seize a moment in history, others just to say goodbye to a loved one. Many hugged each other and cried as they emerged from the library.

"I didn't know him, but there was a sense that we are all part of the family," said Mary Ellen Cross, 39. "We all shared something here. That's what we did."

At one point the line was three miles long.

Latecomers were discouraged from lining up so no one would be turned away. When the viewing ended five hours before Wednesday's funeral, light rain began to fall.

Inside the library lobby, mourners saw pictures of Nixon's career highlights and a "thumbs-up" photo. Then they saw the casket.

"His soul is there. You can feel the aura," said Dennis Elmore, 41.

Back along the line, the funeral spawned an entrepreneurial spirit. Residents sold parking

Tom and Roseanne Arnold visit Mall of America

BLOOMINGTON, Minn. (AP) — Tom and Roseanne Arnold showed no signs of marital discord as they held hands, hugged and kissed during a stop at the Mall of America on Tuesday night.

Last week, Roseanne Arnold filed for divorce, saying her husband beat and pinched her. She withdrew the divorce petition later in the week and said it was a mistake to sign a divorce letter in "anger and haste."

During a stop at the Mall of America, the couple shopped, then had dinner at Planet Hollywood, sharing a booth at one side of the table. They didn't make any statements or indicate why they were in the Twin Cities.

Tom Arnold has denied abusing his wife. And in a "Tonight Show" appearance on Friday, he denied that the couple's spat was a publicity stunt.

Catalog: South America, Africa once linked

WASHINGTON (AP) — Fresh evidence that South America and Africa were once joined is among the findings in an unprecedented catalog of all 18,000 species of plants in Central America, one of the world's richest tropical regions.

The seven-volume "Flora Mesoamericana," a joint project of the Missouri Botanical Garden, the National Autonomous University of Mexico and the Natural History Museum in London, is also the first such work ever written entirely in Spanish.

"This represents the dawn of a new era of understanding, for human benefit, the plants in this area," Peter Raven, director of the Missouri Botanical Garden, a St. Louis-based research institution and the nation's oldest botanical garden, said at a news conference Wednesday.

The project, begun in 1981, describes the plants growing in the tropical region stretching from southern Mexico through Panama. The area is slightly larger than Texas but contains roughly the same number of plant species as all of North America.

Among the major discoveries of the project was a new species of tree in a Rica that is nearly identical to one thought to be found only in Africa.

Brady: I could kick Danny Partridge's ass

Brad Hahn
The Daily Iowan

Greg Brady thinks he can kick Danny Partridge's ass, no doubt about it.

In a telephone interview Wednesday, actor Barry Williams of "The Brady Bunch" fame said if he were to fight fellow former child star Danny Bonaduce, it would be no contest. Williams will be in Iowa City tonight for his presentation of "Growing Up Brady" at 7:30 in the Union.

Bonaduce, who played Danny on "The Partridge Family," is now a Chicago disc jockey. He recently boxed Donny Osmond for charity and last weekend beat Christopher Knight, who played brother Peter Brady, in wrestling.

Now Williams wants his shot. "Peter lost. I'm out for revenge," he said.

While negotiations linger, Williams is keeping busy with theater and other projects and living life the way he wants.

"Peter lost. I'm out for revenge."

Barry Williams, a.k.a. Greg Brady

"It's ideal," Williams said of his professional life. "I do the shows, then I go and do television, then I do some college talks, and I'll be working on another book. I enjoy the diversity of what I'm doing."

Just what the new book is about, Williams won't say, but he said it will be nonfiction and may have a Brady tie-in. His current book, "Growing Up Brady," was a national best seller and Williams expects the book's success to continue.

Williams: tough guy

"It's the kind of thing that should have some shelf life in that the story of the Bradys probably won't change so much, and I've tried to be fairly comprehensive," he said.

The success of the series is hard to pinpoint, Williams said, but he has a theory.

"I think it had to do with the chemistry we had," he said. "We liked each other, and it's something you can't fake, you can't write and you can't pretend. It was genuine and I think it came off on the screen."

Williams said he gets as much fan mail now as he ever has. But playing the oldest brother, teen idol or not, has its drawbacks.

"I did get offers, lots of letters signed 'love,' and not nearly enough pictures," he said. "Unfortunately, for my fantasy level of being a teen-ager, most of the girls writing were asking for advice. They thought of me as

ALTERNATE SPECIES UTILIZED

UI animal research on decline

Holly Reinhardt
The Daily Iowan

Although the number of animals used for research at the UI decreased by nearly 2,000 from 1992 to 1993, the UI Animal Coalition and university officials agree that the figures do not indicate a change in the university's commitment to animal research.

According to UI figures, 8,575 animals were used in research at the UI in 1993, compared to 10,284 animals used the previous year.

Rats and mice are not included in those numbers because they are not considered animals under the Animal Welfare Act.

Grace Trifaro, president of the coalition, said the latest figures are still too high.

"If the decrease continues within the next 10 years, then it is a positive effort, but the numbers can fluctuate depending on species and the experiments," she said. "There are just too many animals dying needlessly for unnecessary experiments."

JOHANNESBURG, South Africa — Police said they crushed a rioting bombing spree Wednesday, but South Africa's historic election came under threat of collapse from mile-long lines of voters and a shortage of ballots.

Police announced they had arrested 31 white extremists suspected of being behind a bombing spree that has killed 21 in recent days. The latest bomb exploded Wednesday at Johannesburg's Jan Smuts Airport, injuring 18.

RiverFest duck mascot is far from foul

Terry Collins
The Daily Iowan

Can you find him?
The theme of this year's RiverFest is "Eliot Undercover," and the duck synonymous with the spring celebration for the past eight years is now hidden under a series of clues. But why exactly has he been so popular?

RiverFest executive council member Shawn Thomas said Eliot's popularity stems from people of all ages.

"Kids see Eliot much like they see Mickey Mouse, where there's a certain attraction he creates," he said. "College students can relate to him as a mascot because they know when there's RiverFest, there's Eliot."

According to a research paper written by an unidentified UI student given to the committee, the legend of Eliot began in 1987 when the duck with the black sunglasses and gold bill emerged on a brochure with the theme, "April is the coolest month."

Eliot is defined in the paper as "easily recognizable and progressive." Sure enough, shortly afterwards his likeness would be on T-shirts and other materials related to RiverFest.

In 1988, following the enormous amount of sales of RiverFest merchandise, Eliot was copyrighted by that year's RiverFest committee. Sales bearing his likeness doubled and he's been around ever since.

Now with RiverFest comes the

Eliot RiverFest themes from the beginning

- 1987: "April is the coolest month"
- 1988: "Get your feet wet"
- 1989: "Livin' on the edge"
- 1990: "Spring... It's not a season, it's an attitude"
- 1991: "Fall into spring"
- 1992: "Eliot for president"
- 1993: "Eliot on tour"
- 1994: "Eliot undercover"

responsibility of how Eliot should be incorporated into an annual theme. Each fall the RiverFest executive committee submits a series of ideas, and in January the committee has the final say about how the duck will be used.

Chad Roethler, an executive council member, said this year's theme, "Eliot Undercover," was inspired by a comic strip.

"We got this year's theme from the 'Where's Waldo' comic," he said. "We decided to come up with ideas

"Everyone takes to him; there's definitely something magical about Eliot. He's an icon."

Chad Roethler, RiverFest executive council member and Eliot fan of where he's hiding and the chance to find him by giving clues to his location."

Eliot can be found at events like last Sunday's RiverRun, where he was seen running around entertaining the crowd. Roethler, who donned the Eliot costume, said despite the heat, being the duck was cool.

"It was more fun than I imagined," he said. "Everyone takes to him; there's definitely something magical about Eliot. He's an icon."

Proving Eliot's popularity, Thomas said T-shirts once again are proving to be big sellers. The latest edition has the duck somewhere on the back amid a mass of people in the Old Capitol. This year, the committee also introduced RiverFest posters featuring Eliot.

"We thought creating posters would be a great way for people to have another keepsake of RiverFest," he said.

Money generated by the image of Eliot goes toward the planning of next year's RiverFest, but what do the people who have to work with the duck really think of him?

"It's hard to imagine Eliot if he could talk, because he looks sort of goofy," said Roethler. "A prankster with his glasses on."

Thomas sees Eliot a little differently than Roethler. He views the duck as very laid-back.

"This year I see him as a sly character with the hat and trench coat on," he said. "No jumping in the water this time around."

GOING APE

Mechanical gorillas to direct traffic, drivers go bananas

Associated Press

JUNEAU, Alaska — State transportation officials have gone ape over traffic — and a little bananas.

Two mechanical black gorillas, flashing teeth through a no-nonsense grin, will be put to work directing cars around road work.

Each gorilla sits atop a barrel and wears a yellow hard hat, orange-striped vest and yellow gloves. They hold a rotating, flashing sign that says "Stop" or "Slow."

"Research showed people didn't get as irritated at being made to wait by an automatic flagger when it looks like this," said Jim Merrill, a chief of maintenance with the Alaska Department of Transportation.

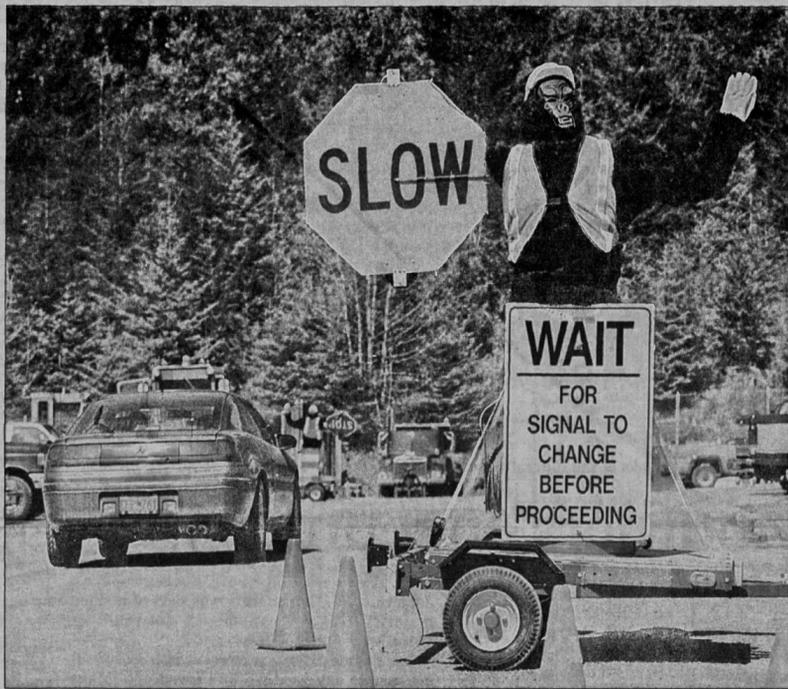

"They can laugh while they wait." Ed Flanagan, who represents the flaggers' union, wasn't laughing.

"It's not April 1, is it?" Flanagan asked. "I've got my doubts that it's going to be as effective or react as quickly as a human."

It is cheaper. Merrill said the gorillas cost a total of $3,100 and could pay for themselves in a couple of weeks. Human flaggers cost up to $35 an hour, he said.

Officials plan to test the gorillas this week on a little used stretch of Glacier Highway north of Juneau as a machine clears underbrush along the shoulders.

Merrill said the department may buy more gorillas if the public likes them — and they don't monkey around.

Associated Press

The Alaska Department of Transportation has placed two mechanical gorillas Tuesday, April 25, to work directing traffic. Really. The two gorillas which cost $3,100 will pay for themselves in a couple of weeks; human flaggers cost from $22 to $35 an hour.

Medical recycling program cuts waste, helps world's needy

Holly Reinhardt
The Daily Iowan

What may seem like a small step toward waste reduction at the UI is a major step toward medical progress for underdeveloped countries.

Medicycle is a program designed to make use of medical supplies that would be considered unsterile by U.S.-government standards but are otherwise fit for use.

Bob Forbes, UI associate professor of anesthesia, said his interest in instituting such a program came from time he has spent in other countries.

"My interest is from a personal point of view. I have traveled to countries where health care is not what we receive in the U.S.," he said. "I have seen the conditions health-care providers work under and patients get healthy under."

Often here in the United States, some good supplies cannot be used for liability reasons, yet they would be adequate for use after sterilization. Medicycle-type programs provide a connection for supplies between U.S. hospitals and Third World countries.

Organization for the UI program began last April after the UI department of anesthesia decided to model a program similar to one at Yale University. Since that time, seven shipments totaling about 2½ tons of supplies have been forwarded to underdeveloped countries from the UI alone.

"There are a variety of different places with similar programs," Forbes said. "It is important for a number of reasons. We have things other people can use, and secondly, they are things we would otherwise put in our landfill."

Laurie Voigt, chairwoman of the UI Hospitals and Clinics Perioperative Task Force for Disposal and Recycling, said Third World countries can use the supplies without concerns of potential lawsuits.

"It is a question of liability once out of the package. We can't sterilize because of legal issues. When you are in need those issues aren't as important," Voigt said.

Forbes said the supplies that leave the hospital must be of practical use in the other country, serviceable for the purpose which they are intended for and things that could not be recovered for use by UIHC.

So far, supplies from the UI have reached countries in South America, Central America, Africa and Russia. Four national charities are helping the UI pass the supplies on to underdeveloped countries. Supplies include gowns, drapes, syringes, needles and miscellaneous dressings.

About 60 volunteers are currently involved with the program, which they have sometimes helped to fund out of their own pockets. To date, more than $800 in shipping fees have been paid for by volunteer contributions.

"Everyone that volunteers is very enthusiastic," Forbes said. "We do have some interest in expansion. We could if we had more volunteers."

In the future, Forbes hopes the program will be easy enough to implement that it can expand to departments of the hospital.

"We tried to make it simple and straightforward, so it becomes part of the daily routine," he said.

Both Voigt and Forbes said it is sometimes difficult to comprehend the need for medical supplies throughout the world.

"It is hard for most people to imagine the condition of hospitals around the world," Forbes said.

Voigt said the need is immense and the people in health care throughout the world find what would be waste in a U.S. hospital to be of considerable value.

"We have a hard time relating," Voigt said. "They get creative — our garbage is a real treasure."

Take notice that the following hydroelectric application has been filed with the Federal Energy Regulatory Commission and is available for public inspection.

a. Type of Application: Preliminary Permit
b. Project No.: 11463-000
c. Date Filed: March 22, 1994
d. Applicant: White Hydropower Company
e. Name of Project: Corvallis Hydro Project
f. Location: On the Iowa River, near Iowa City in Johnson County, Iowa
g. Filer Pursuant to: Federal Power Act 16 U.S.C. §5791(a)-§5791(f)

h. Applicant Contact: Mr. Mitchell M. White, White Hydropower Company, 1855 Glendale Road, Clinton, IA 52732, (319) 242-1775
i. FERC Contact: Ed Lee (202) 219-2809
j. Comment Date: June 13, 1994

k. Description of Project: The proposed project would utilize the U.S. Army Corps of Engineers' Corvallis Dam and Reservoir, and would consist of the following new facilities: (1) a steel penstock, (2) a powerhouse containing two generating units for a total installed capacity of two generating units for a total installed capacity of 12 MW (3) a tailrace, (4) a 5-mile-long, 13.8-kV transmission line, and (5) appurtenant facilities. The average annual generation would be 52.56 GWh. The applicant estimates annual generation would be 52.56 GWh. The applicant estimates that the cost of the studies under the terms of the permit would be $150,000. All power generated would be sold to a local utility company. The project lock and dam is owned and operated by the U.S. Army Corps of Engineers, District Engineer, Clock Tower Building, Rock Island, IL 61201.

1. This notice also consists of the following standard paragraphs: AS, A7, A9, A10, B, C and D2.

AS. Preliminary Permit: Any qualified applicant desiring to file a competing application for a preliminary permit for a proposed project must submit to the Commission, on or before the specified comment date for this particular application, the competing application or a notice of intent to file such an application (see 18 CFR 4.36). Submitting a timely notice of intent allows an interested person to file the competing preliminary permit application no later than 30 days after the specified comment date for the particular application.

A7. Competing preliminary permit application must conform with 18 CFR 4.30 (b) (i) and (j) and 4.36.

A9. Preliminary Permit: Any qualified applicant desiring to file a competing development application must submit to the Commission, on or before the specified comment date for the particular application, either the competing development application or a notice of intent to file such an application. Submitting a timely notice of intent allows an interested person to file the competing application no later than 120 days after the specified comment date for the particular application.

A10. Notice of Intent: A notice of intent must specify the exact name, business address, and telephone number of the prospective applicant, and must include an unequivocal statement of intent to submit, if such an application may be filed, either a preliminary permit application or a development application (specify which type of application). A notice of intent must be served on the applicant(s) named in this public notice.

D2. Proposed Scope of Studies Under Permit: A preliminary permit, if issued, does not authorize construction. The terms of the proposed under the preliminary permit would include economic analysis, preparation of preliminary engineering plans, and a study of environmental impacts. Based on the results of these studies, the applicant would decide whether to proceed with the preparation of a development application to construct and operate the project.

B. Comments, Protests, or Motions to Intervene: Anyone may submit comments, a protest, or a motion to intervene in accordance with the requirements of the Rules of Practice and Procedure, 18 CFR sections 385.210, 211, and 214. In determining the appropriate action to take, the Commission will consider all protests or other comments filed, but only those who file a motion to intervene in accordance with the Commission's Rules may become a party to the proceeding. Any comments, protests, or motions to intervene must be received on or before the specified comment date for the particular application.

C. Filing and Service of Responsive Documents: Any filing must bear in all capital letters the title "COMMENTS," "RECOMMENDATIONS FOR TERMS AND CONDITIONS," "NOTICE OF INTENT OF FILE COMING APPLICATION," "COMPETING APPLICATIONS," "PROTEST," or "MOTION TO INTERVENE," as applicable, and the project number of the particular application to which the filing is in response. Any of the documents must be filed by providing the original and the number of copies required by the Commission's regulations to the Secretary, Federal Energy Regulatory Commission, 825 North Capitol Street, N.E., Washington, D.C. 20426. An additional copy must be sent to the Director, Division of Project Review, Office of Hydropower Licensing, Federal Energy Regulatory Commission, Room 1027-UCR, at the above address. A copy of any notice of intent, competing application, or motion to intervene must also be served upon each representative of the applicant specified in the particular application.

D3. Agency Comments: The Commission invites federal, state, and local agencies to file comments on the described application. (Agencies may obtain a copy of the application directly from the applicant.) If an agency does not file comments within the time specified for filing comments, the Commission will presume that the agency has none. One copy of an agency's comments must also be sent to the applicant's representatives.

ADVOCATES AIM TO EDUCATE

David Greedy/The Daily Iowan

UI Animal Coalition members Abigail Leisinger, right, and Kathy Lindhurst were among the group of people and one dog, Pawnee, walking from Seashore Hall to the Medical Laboratories Wednesday. The march stopped in front of several buildings where animal research is done.

Animal activists hold march

Holly Reinhardt
The Daily Iowan

Nearly 20 advocates showed support for the UI Animal Coalition and its efforts to bring attention to the use of animals for research at UI laboratories Wednesday afternoon.

A march began at Seashore Hall with coalition treasurer Steve Kouzounas speaking about research at Seashore and Spence Labs.

"As we go from building to building, we are spending a few minutes to say a few words," Kouzounas said.

Grace Trifaro, president of the coalition, said the group hoped to educate the public with the march, which was held in conjunction with the observance of World Animals in Labs Liberation Week.

"We would like to encourage people to question and challenge the UI medical establishment's use of approximately 40,000 animals each year," she said.

About 15 supporters marched to the buildings on campus that house animals for research. Also joining the march was a dog — Pawnee. The march progressed through campus, crossing the Iowa River as marchers headed toward the medical research facilities.

Ann Rhodes, UI vice president for University

Relations, said the march was an effective way to increase public awareness, but the UI administration is already aware of the group's interest in research.

"I think we are pretty well aware of the concerns of the group," she said. "In some areas, we essentially have to disagree."

When the group reached the Medical Laboratories on the west side of the river, Trifaro spoke of the pain animals in experimentation suffer.

"Millions of animals such as rats, mice, pigs, dogs and cats are used in needless and cruel experiments involving burning; shocking; maiming; food, water and sleep deprivation; as well as psychological experimentation," she said.

Trifaro said the public should be allowed to offer input into the issue.

"We believe that the nonscientific community should have a say in this issue and be involved in the decision making," she said.

Cedar Rapids resident Jackie Baumhauer participated in the march.

"I'm here because I think a lot of research is unnecessary," she said. "What works for one species doesn't really work for another."

CABRANES, DAYS FAVORED

Professors ponder court choices

Michele Kueter
The Daily Iowan

Solicitor General Drew Days and District Court Judge Jose Cabranes were among the nominee possibilities mentioned by UI law professors as successors for retiring Supreme Court Justice Harry Blackmun.

UI law Professor Martha Chamallas said she would like to see Days as the next justice. She served with him on the board of the Society of American Law Teachers.

"His qualifications are really superb," Chamallas said. "He has been a law professor at Yale. He has a deep understanding of constitutional law with a specialty in anti-discrimination law."

Days' biggest impact to the court would come in decisions concerning civil rights, personal liberties and problems faced by the poor, Chamallas said.

"I see him as thoughtful, measured and compassionate. People respect him enormously and see him as being fair-minded," she said.

UI Associate law Professor Enrique Carrasco favors the nomination of Cabranes, who, if confirmed, would be the first Hispanic to sit on the Supreme Court.

Carrasco, an associate president of the Hispanic National Bar Association, supports Cabranes because he is a concerned academic as well as Hispanic. Cabranes, who serves on District Court in Connecticut, is one of seven Hispanics on a list sent to Clinton that the association endorsed more than a year ago.

Carrasco said the association based its decision on "intellectual prowess, a broad legal experience and the ability to appreciate political interrelationships in society."

Carrasco believes Cabranes has these abilities and would diversify the court, which was one goal Clinton mentioned in his campaign for president.

"It seems to us that the president can't really fulfill his campaign promise without naming at least one Hispanic American to the Supreme Court," he said.

Cabranes is a strong supporter of civil rights and the right to privacy, Carrasco said. Appointing Cabranes, however, may present a problem for Clinton, who is looking to replace perhaps the most liberal justice.

Liberals see Clinton as their chance to counterbalance a court which has become more conservative under Republican presidents, political science Associate Professor Cary Covington said.

However, many liberals feel Cabranes' rulings would be better described as moderately conservative, he said.

Clinton will have to choose between satisfying groups striving for demographic representation and those wanting an ideological representation, Covington said.

Law Professor Eric Anderson, who was a clerk for former Justice Lewis Powell, said the usual groups will pressure the president. But, he said, groups interested in a crucial issue such as abortion may be even more persistent.

If Clinton's nominee is confirmed by the Senate, Anderson said the new justice will be working by mid to late summer.

NO PARKING, NO BUILDING

Council declines developer's plan

Rima Vesely
The Daily Iowan

Plans to develop Iowa City's downtown area will continue despite a vote by the Iowa City City Council against the Southside Urban Revitalization Plan Tuesday night.

In a 4-3 vote, Council members decided not to pursue the project begun five months ago by Wilfreda Hieronymus, a developer who planned to build a six-story office and retail building downtown.

Council members voted against the project because the developer refused to provide additional parking, and they felt the project did not warrant the city's loss of $1.3 million in taxes.

Mayor Susan Horowitz, who advocated the project, said Hieronymus' request for a 10-year $1.3 million tax abatement is legitimate.

"We want to encourage ability to expand, especially professional office buildings," she said. "The area can be revitalized, but I would say that cautiously because Hieronymus' ability to make a bold statement is unique so far. I would welcome any other developer to make a bold statement — that is, a large multistoried structure."

Hieronymus said she was disappointed with the Council's overall decision and said she would not proceed with the project.

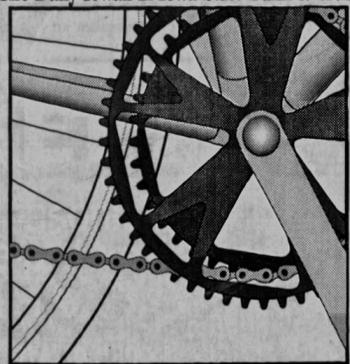

"What I offered was a building that would produce new jobs and office space so people wouldn't have to go elsewhere," she said. "The Council chose not to do anything. I was doing this for the city, not for myself, and I felt it was in the best interest of the city."

Council member Larry Baker, who voted against the tax abatement because it did not include plans for parking arrangements, said that Hieronymus should pay for parking.

"I wasn't comfortable with the abatement plan," he said. "I felt there should have been private cooperation. The amount of time we've spent on it is unfortunate, but the abatement by itself was never going to pass. Her project would have been greatly enhanced with parking."

AWAITING MANDATORY LIFE SENTENCE

Forsyth maintains innocence

Associated Press
INDIANOLA, Iowa — Rick Forsyth says he's asked his family, friends, even himself if he could have killed his family and two other girls before attempting suicide. No one believes it, he said Tuesday in an interview from the Warren County Jail.

"For several months, I tried to look at myself and evaluate myself and think, 'Well, am I the same person I am I a different person?'" Forsyth said. "I felt the same. I still had the same values, the same principles and the same scruples I was raised with. To me it's still not real."

"I started to ask everybody that I knew — all my family, all my relatives and all my friends — 'Am I a different person than what I was before this happened? Was I a mean person or a bad person?' And everyone said the same thing, 'No, you were always very kind and very gentle, very laid-back.'"

"And I'm not trying to blow my own horn for myself, but they said I was very loving and very caring."

Forsyth, 43, a former part-time janitor, is awaiting his mandatory sentencing to life in prison for six killings last June 14.

He was convicted April 18 of killing his estranged wife, Jolene, their three children — Brian, 18; Nikki, 17; and Jessica, 11 — and the two daughters of his wife's new boyfriend — Helen and Martina Napodano, ages 7 and 9, of Winfield, Ill.

The bodies were found in Jolene Forsyth's Norwalk home. Four of the victims were shot to death. Nikki was smothered and Jessica was strangled. Jolene's body was found in her bed with those of her children. The Napodano girls were found in a downstairs bedroom.

Forsyth, who was shot in the head and arm, was found in Jolene's bedroom with his family's bodies. He pleaded innocent and didn't testify at his trial. He says he can't remember anything of the period before and after the killings. But he also says he is confident he could not have been responsible for the deaths or for the head wound that he suffered.

"I know I'm right," he said. "I know that I could have never done anything like that and that's a fact, now or then or any other time."

"I love my children and I love my wife."

His lawyer, John Wellman, says an appeal is planned, based in part on the trial judge's decision not to allow the jury to hear some evidence that, Wellman said, might have shifted the suspicion away from Forsyth.

Forsyth said his last memory before the killings was of taking Jessica to a Kmart to have some film developed on Saturday, June 12.

A little after noon on June 14, he was found with the bodies.

He said Tuesday that his next recollection was of waking up in a hospital bed, talking to his brother, Cass Forsyth of Carlisle. "My brother was standing there and he asked me if I knew where I was and I said, 'No,' and he asked me if I knew what had happened and I said, 'No.'"

He said he still thinks of his wife and children as being "at home" and said he believes Jolene and the three children visited him in the hospital after he was shot. The experience, he said, was "very real."

"What I remember the most is Jessica saying, 'I want you to be with us, Daddy.' So for them to be gone is not real," he said. "Maybe a lot of people would call that denial, but when you're being told things that have happened to you in your life and you have no memory of it, it's very difficult."

Forsyth said he has thought "a lot of different times" about what it would be like to regain his memory from the period in which the slayings occurred.

"There have been times I want it back, but at the same time I get so afraid I'd see everything that happens there and I don't want to see everything that happens," he said.

2 DEGREES DROPPED

Assembly decides to combine programs

Tricia DeWall
 The Daily Iowan

Bachelor of science degrees in leisure studies and physical education will be phased out over the next few years to make way for a new combined program, the UI Liberal Arts Faculty Assembly decided Wednesday.

The new department, sport, health, leisure and physical studies, will begin in 1995. It will offer both bachelor of science degrees and a minor program. The emphasis areas will be on health promotion, recreation and sport, and cultural studies in sport and leisure. The program was recommended to the assembly by the Educational Policy Committee.

Professor of mathematics and member of the assembly Keith Stroyan said both the leisure studies and physical education departments unanimously recommended that the old programs be removed.

"We're recommending that the old programs be removed and we endorse the proposal for a new combined program," he said. "The old program will be combined into the tracks of the new program with the exception of the teacher education program, which has been eliminated, and the culture studies which is new."

The last degrees in leisure studies and physical education will be awarded in August 1999.

Committee President Dean James Lindberg reported to the assembly on the status of the ongoing review of the necessity of the physical education requirement.

In January, the committee passed a recommendation on to the assembly that they eliminate the liberal arts requirement in physical education. The assembly decided during its February meeting to refer the recommendation back to the committee for further review.

Lindberg said the committee has spent a great deal of time reviewing the sorts of questions that they are asking the department to provide answers to, as well as developing an outside committee to gather information.

"The department's report will be sent back to you sometime early in the spring of 1995," he said. "What you will have at that time is a full report of the pros and the cons."

In other business, the assembly discussed the final draft of the College of Liberal Arts Strategic Plan. The plan's mission statement states the intention "to provide undergraduate students with a comprehensive liberal arts education, to provide graduate students with advanced education in specialized areas, and to participate in the creation, preservation, and dissemination of knowledge."

The plan also includes four goals which include achieving "a diverse, high-quality faculty of sufficient size; a diverse, high-quality student body; excellence in teaching and learning; and improved infrastructure to support teaching and research missions."

Several members of the assembly raised concerns about specific points within the plan.

Professor of biochemistry Alice Fulton said the plan needs to include a statement about encouraging students to choose a major earlier in their academic career so they don't have to extend their stay at the UI.

"Some students aren't declaring their major until they are a junior, and they are cheating themselves," she said. "I've had students who have come to me with 10 different majors in two years. I don't think that's an education for anybody."

After further discussion, it was decided that a final version of the plan would be brought before the assembly for approval next fall.

TRYING MICHIGAN LEGAL LOOPHOLE

Kevorkian contends he ended man's pain

Julia Prodis
Associated Press

DETROIT — Dr. Jack Kevorkian testified Wednesday that he helped a gravely ill man commit suicide, defending the action as humane and compassionate, although he acknowledged a fascination with death.

"Nothing matters but the welfare of the patients, and it was his welfare that motivated my actions," Kevorkian told jurors in Michigan's first assisted-suicide trial.

The 65-year-old retired pathologist said he wanted only to help end the suffering of Thomas Hyde when he hooked him up to a carbon monoxide canister in the back of his van and placed a plastic mask over his face.

Hyde, 30, suffered from the degenerative nerve disorder Lou Gehrig's disease that left him unable to walk, talk or feed himself. He died Aug. 4 after inhaling the gas.

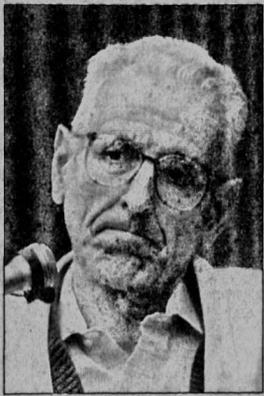

"Was your intent to cause his death?" asked Kevorkian's lawyer, Geoffrey Fieger.

"No," Kevorkian said. "To end his agonizing existence and end his suffering."

He compared his action to that of a surgeon cutting off the leg of a patient with cancer. The purpose was to stop the cancer, not cut off the leg, he said.

Fieger says a loophole in the state law allows doctors to prescribe medication to relieve suffering, even if its effect is to hasten death.

But Timothy Kenny, assistant

Kevorkian: unapologetic

Wayne County prosecutor, contends that loophole is for doctors prescribing experimental medication for terminally ill people. Carbon monoxide is a poison, not a medication, he said.

Kevorkian's license to practice medicine is suspended.

Kevorkian also testified Hyde died in the parking lot behind Kevorkian's former apartment at Royal Oak in Oakland County — not on Detroit's Belle Isle in Wayne County as Fieger once said and Kevorkian has strongly implied.

Kevorkian said he drove to the island park in his van, with Hyde's body on a mattress in the back, to surrender "because I wanted to avoid the strong-arm tactics of Oakland County authorities." Oakland County had jailed Kevorkian last year in another assisted suicide case.

Court to reconsider clinics' 'buffer zones'

Ike Flores

Associated Press

MELBOURNE, Fla. — The modest house doesn't look much different from its neighbors along Dixie Lane except for its extended driveway and paved parking area next to the front door.

For 17 years, the Aware Woman Center for Choice has served thousands of women seeking abortions.

And for 17 years, it has been the target of ministers' sermons, angry pickets, zealots who have threatened doctors and staff and destroyed property — and people who walk in silent protest or kneel and pray on the sidewalk.

Today, the U.S. Supreme Court will review a Florida court order that created a protest-free "buffer zone" outside the clinic. A ruling is expected by late June.

The case pits the free-speech rights of abortion protesters against the rights of women seeking abortions and of abortion clinic employees to be free from harassment, intimidation and other illegal conduct.

"We have worked for years to get everyone to understand the seriousness, and the conspiracy, involved with these anti-abortion groups," said clinic owner Patricia Windle.

"For so long, we were unable to convince people that it is the same leaders — nomadic carpetbaggers — who are simultaneously pulling their dirty tricks and violence at clinics across the country."

The court order resulted from a 1991 lawsuit filed by the clinic against Operation Rescue.

Among other things, the judge barred Operation Rescue members and supporters from entering the clinic's property, blocking access to the clinic, picketing within 36 feet of the clinic's property line and approaching anyone within 300 feet of the clinic seeking its services.

The Florida Supreme Court upheld the injunction last October, saying, "The First Amendment must yield when protected speech substantially interferes with the normal functioning of a public or private place."

The 11th U.S. Circuit Court of Appeals ruled the other way, saying the injunction protecting the clinic is "viewpoint-based" and likely to be unconstitutional.

Anti-abortion protesters may be on the defensive, however. On Tuesday, congressional negotiators resolved differences between House- and Senate-passed versions of a bill that would make it a federal crime to block or damage abortion clinics or intimidate patients or staff. The compromise now returns to the House and Senate for final votes.

The legislation is partly a response to the fatal shooting a year ago of Dr. David Gr. outside his Pensacola abortion clinic.

What is your favorite springtime activity?

Doing absolutely any athletic thing outside. I'm a big fan of running, so when the weather turns I can't wait to bet off the track and break out!

Watersports — water skiing, boating, fishing. I really enjoy being near or on the water.

Just being out in the sun, going for walks, staying outside late.

How do you balance academics and a social life?

I give myself time to do at least one thing a week with friends. It's hard, but that's what I need to do.

I think it's important to keep balance. I keep in mind why I'm here — I still enjoy life; having fun is important because you can get too narrow minded if you get too into studies.

My social life has been minimized due to the internship. I mostly go out on the weekends.

Do you have any special study tips or habits?

I'm a list person. If I can cross one thing off the list, I feel like I've accomplished something.

We work and go to school full time, so it's important to make the most of the time we do have.

Without a list, I don't know what I'm working toward. I also set time limits for each item on the list.

When spring fever strikes, how do you get motivated for academics?

I think it's good to do something for yourself every day, so you feel like you got something out of the day.

Getting out on the weekend helps me be goal-oriented during the week.

The nicer weather itself energizes me. I also sometimes procrastinate so I can get outside!

These messages brought to you by the BE H.I.P. professional health colleges grant program, Health Iowa, Student Health Service and paid for by a grant from the US Dept. of Ed. Fund for the Improvement of Postsecondary Education.

Debris from a destroyed mobile home hangs from a tree in the Sagamore Village Estates mobile home park in West Lafayette, Ind., where a tornado hit the area Wednesday about midnight. Two people were killed and more than 60 were injured in the tornado.

WEST LAFAYETTE, Ind. — Charles Lannan was watching TV early Wednesday when the storm outside suddenly grew ominously quiet. The next thing he knew, his mobile home was in the air and he felt himself in a sickening free fall, thinking he'd never see daylight again.

"I was thinking, 'Oh God, this is it,'" he said. "All I remember was rolling. It was like, one one-thousand, two one-thousand and it was over. I started digging myself out of the rubble."

He had been caught up in a tornado that swept through northwestern Tippecanoe County, two miles north of Purdue University, killing two people and injuring more than 60.

It ripped through the Lafayette Venetian Blind Factory, killing one employee who was working at a loading dock. Most workers already were out of the building when the tornado hit because the factory's electricity had failed.

The twister picked up a car, tumbling it end over end several times and dumping it in a nearby field. The driver was taken to a hospital, but her condition wasn't released immediately.

Five homes were destroyed at the Prairie View Farms subdivision, where a second body was found buried in the rubble.

At least 70 trailers were destroyed at the Sagamore Village Estates mobile home park before the tornado skipped across U.S. Highway 52, struck two buildings and went airborne, said Tippecanoe County sheriff's Capt. Dave Murtaugh.

Elsewhere, funnel clouds were spotted Wednesday in Oklahoma, Arkansas and Tennessee, but there were no immediate reports of damage.

Texas Gov. Ann Richards on Wednesday surveyed the aftermath of a powerful twister that rampaged through the Dallas suburb of Lancaster on Monday, killing three people and destroying the historic town square, dozens of businesses and hundreds of homes. She had already declared the town a disaster area.

Texas was hit by another twister Tuesday at Gainesville, north of Dallas, which injured about a dozen people.

Most of those injured by the West Lafayette tornado were from the trailer park. One person was in critical condition Wednesday afternoon at St. Elizabeth Hospital in Lafayette.

More than 250 people were evacuated immediately after the twister struck.

FAVORED NATION STATUS IN JEOPARDY

China's nuclear tests come at critical time

Donald Rothberg
Associated Press

WASHINGTON — China is preparing for another nuclear test, and it could take place about the time President Clinton must decide whether to renew the nation's favored trade status, a senior administration official said Wednesday.

China broke an international moratorium last October when it detonated a nuclear device underground. President Clinton immediately directed the Department of Energy to prepare for possible resumption of U.S. underground tests.

Additional Chinese tests were widely expected and the senior official, speaking on condition of anonymity, said preparations are under way at its Lop Nor testing site.

The U.S. official would not speculate on the timing of the next Chinese test.

However, Ambassador Miguel Marin-Bosch of Mexico, chairman of the committee on disarmament at the international negotiations on a test ban treaty, said he expects the test to take place next month.

He said the Chinese "set out a plan (for testing) from which I would doubt they would deviate at this point."

If that timing holds, the test could take place within days of when Clinton must decide whether to renew Most Favored Nation trade status for China.

When China conducted its test in October, the White House issued a statement saying, "The United States deeply regrets this action. We urge China to refrain from further nuclear tests and to join the other nuclear powers in a global moratorium."

The Chinese responded with a statement saying they had "always exercised the utmost restraint on nuclear testing." The Beijing government said it would support the idea of achieving a test ban treaty no later than 1996 but would go ahead with its testing until then.

Clinton has made China's performance on human rights the main criterion for determining whether he will recommend that China continue to be subject to the lowest available tariffs for its exports to the United States.

So far, administration officials have made clear that China must do much more in that area to obtain renewal of MFN, the standing given most U.S. trading partners.

A presidential decision to renew all or part of China's MFN status could be challenged in Congress and, in that case, the nuclear testing could become a factor in the debate.

"It would not serve the Chinese well," said Rep. Nancy Pelosi, D-Calif., a leader of the faction pressing for cutting off MFN for selected Chinese products if the Beijing government doesn't take dramatic steps to improve human rights.

"If there is a test, it certainly would not help the MFN," said Rep. Mike Kopetski, D-Ore., an advocate of unconditional renewal of the trade status for China.

"In terms of the mood in Congress, this would definitely be a negative," said Pelosi. However, she said that if the Chinese took steps to satisfy the demand that "overall significant progress" be made on human rights, Congress still would support renewal of MFN.

After the June 1989 crackdown on political dissidents in Tiananmen Square in Beijing, there was strong opposition to continued renewal of MFN for China. President Bush continued to recommend renewal and the House routinely voted against it. But the president managed to prevail each time in the Senate.

FUNERAL

Kissinger, his secretary of state. He praised him for opening relations with China and pursuing arms negotiations with the Soviet Union even while he was dogged by the Watergate scandal that forced him from office.

"Richard Nixon would be so proud that President Clinton and all living former presidents of the United States are here, symbolizing that his long and sometimes bitter journey has concluded in reconciliation," said Kissinger.

Kissinger stopped briefly before the casket and saluted his former boss with a brief nod of the head.

The next eulogist, Senate Minority Leader Bob Dole, broke into tears after praising Nixon "as the most durable public figure of our time."

California Gov. Pete Wilson said, "To him it was no disgrace to fight and be beaten."

The service opened with the playing of "Victory at Sea," a rousing symphonic piece that was one of Nixon's favorites. He had played it in solitude the night he won the White House in 1968 and again on election night in 1972.

For the last time, Nixon was saluted with "Hail To The Chief," and as an honor guard carried in his flag-draped casket, the military band softly played "America."

By the thousands, ordinary Americans had stood in lines up to three miles long in rain, hail and nighttime chill for the momentary privilege of a final goodbye, to pass by his coffin as it rested on a pedestal in the library built to husband his memory. It was surrounded by so many flowers that providing them taxed the resources of florists.

Library officials estimated 42,000 people passed by the bier, some waiting up to eight hours. Police warned off those who arrived after there was no chance they would get in.

In an irony of history, a president who as a young man actively opposed and worked against Nixon's Vietnam War policies was the most prominent of the eulogists.

The Rev. Billy Graham, who often led Nixon in prayer at the White House and comforted him in his fall from power, was the officiant.

There were dozens of members of Congress. Also, Watergate mastermind G. Gordon Liddy and Spiro Agnew, Nixon's vice president who also resigned in disgrace.

Graham, in his sermon, said Nixon's cardiologist, Jeffrey Borer, had finished examining Nixon the day after his stroke and had turned to leave. The former president was partially paralyzed and unable to speak but "waved and gave his trademark thumbs-up signal and smiled," Graham said.

"This is a moment of determination, an example of fighting on and never giving up, that Jeffrey Borer will never forget," he said.

A few months ago, Nixon was asked in a television interview how he would like to be remembered, Graham said. "He thought a moment and then he replied, 'As one who made a difference.'"

Added Graham, "And he did make a difference in our world and in our lives."

Nixon's successors also came to pay him final honor: Gerald Ford, who spoke of Nixon's Watergate saga as "our national nightmare"; Jimmy Carter, the Democrat who wrested the office from Ford partly because of the pardon Ford granted Nixon; Ronald Reagan and George Bush, whose Republican nominating conventions treated Nixon as a pariah not to be invited.

Eighty-eight nations sent delegations made up mostly of their U.S.-based diplomats. China's delegation included a vice premier and Russia's a deputy prime minister.

The federal government and financial markets were closed for a day of mourning.

Nixon never apologized for the panoply of crimes called Watergate. The closest he came was to say, "I should have set a higher standard" for the conduct of his people. "I should have established a moral tone that would have made such actions unthinkable. I did not."

The 37th president, forced to resign Aug. 9, 1974, in his second White House term, had spent the intervening years striving for what he called "renewal," not rehabilitation. His legacy includes 10 books, the first on the crises of his life — long before Watergate — the last on America's challenges in the next century.

He died Friday, at 81, after a stroke earlier in the week. His final resting place is beside Pat Nixon, his wife of 53 years, who succumbed last year to lung cancer. The grave site, in a garden alive with flowers, is only steps from the house in which Nixon was born on Jan. 9, 1913.

spaces for $10 per car, $100 for TV vans. A group of children hawked bouquets of roses and carnations for $5.

"We're good Republicans who are making money. Nixon would be proud of us," Linda Albers said while selling coffee and doughnuts.

A gift shop a block from the library sold $18 T-shirts that read, "Defeat is never fatal unless you give up. RMN."

"I wasn't going to carry anything because I thought it was out of taste," shop owner Judy Curtis said. "But there were so many people who kept asking me if we had Nixon stuff."

The library's entrance sign became a shrine of flowers and mementos. A stuffed panda sat in a baby car seat on which was written, "Nixon's the One." Two candles burned in glass cups, and stuck to the cups were "Re-elect the President" and "Nixon Now" buttons.

Rosemary Falcon, 66, said Nixon's decision to have his viewing in California rather than in Washington wasn't lost on his supporters.

"I think Washington rejected him then, and I don't think he wanted to go back," Falcon said. "He came from here and he wanted to come back here."

Many who bid Nixon farewell received something from their late president in return.

"I feel like a true American," said Debby Shepard, 43. "Red, white and blue. I felt very proud and it's been a long time since I felt that way."

Funeral brings out protesters; many laugh

Associated Press

Not everyone mourned the passing of Richard Nixon.

In Portland, Ore., a tombstone-shaped sign read "Honk If You're Glad Dick is Dead" and several people who drove past did.

"Lots of people laughed. Lots of people smiled," said Eddie Ludwig, who carried the sign among a small band of demonstrators in downtown Portland. "I haven't had one negative response. I was expecting to get run off the curb."

The tiny group that gathered Wednesday just a few hours before Nixon's funeral in Yorba Linda, Calif., provided only a whisper of what it was like during his administration, when hundreds of thousands protested the Vietnam War.

Margaret Labadie, 72, and her son, Marc Labadie, 47, remember that era well. Both took part in big anti-war demonstrations in Washington, D.C.

Margaret Labadie even wore a "Throw the Bum Out" button she kept from the days of the Watergate scandal that eventually forced Nixon to resign.

She and the others said they were upset with the favorable coverage Nixon has received since his death last Friday. He died of a stroke in New York at age 81.

"I'm offended because I was among many protesters many years ago," she said.

In Albany, N.Y., cannons boomed at noon in memory of Nixon in a ceremony that drew a few hundred state workers.

As the cannons fired, a man wearing a rubber Nixon mask walked through the crowd, climbed on a step next to a statue and gave Nixon's familiar two-armed victory sign salute.

Some heckled the protester who identified himself only as "Richard Milhous Nixon."

"Why don't you show some respect?" someone yelled.

"He didn't show respect for the people he bombed," the man answered before disappearing through the crowd.

In Portland, the protest took place without incident, although someone left a death threat on demonstration organizer Dan Handelman's answering machine.

"I was looking at the newspaper on Monday and it said the flags were going to fly at half-staff for 30 days, federal workers are getting the day off and there's no mail being delivered," Handelman, 29, said.

"I thought that was a little extreme reverence for a man who was basically kicked out of office."

Eddie Ludwig, right, reacts to honking motorists in downtown Portland, Ore., Wednesday as he and others protest the national day of mourning for former President Richard Nixon. About a dozen protesters, some of whom were involved in protests in the '60s, held the peaceful noontime gathering. The man at left is unidentified.

their big brother." Williams still keeps in touch with all the cast members. Unlike many child / teen stars, the Brady kids had no publicized drug problems or scrapes with the law. "What helped us a lot is first, we were a family show, so there were lots of us around instead of being just one kid," he said. "And there were no divorces of any of the Brady kids' parents during the filming of the show, so we all had strong family backgrounds." "Forever being known as 'Greg' doesn't bother Williams.

"I have fun with it," he said. "When I come in and do these talks, we kick ass." There are no plans for another reunion, Williams said, but Paramount is working on a Brady movie. It will not cast the original characters in their roles, and Williams said he has not been directly contacted about the film. "Philosophically, I would never rule anything out until it was time to rule it out," he said. "You can't do that until you have the proposal in front of you and know what the deal is." Williams' views on a few other things:

- On people recognizing him on the street: "If they don't, I sing the theme song and that helps."
- On mail from obsessive fans: "I keep hoping."
- On his date with television mom, Florence Henderson: "I'm desperate for her and I'm still trying to hook up."
- He dated television sister Maureen McCormick "intensely."
- On good television in the '90s: "Larry Sanders," "Seinfeld" and "Murphy Brown."
- "Cosby" show is the closest to a modern-day "Brady Bunch" in terms of chances of lasting in syndication.

RESEARCH

research to cease in the next five, 10 or 15 years - I don't think that's possible." Another point of contention for the two sides is the level of access to the Animal Care and Use Committee, the publicly funded governing body of animal research at the UI. "Because so much of the money spent on the research comes from the public sector, the public must have access to information on the research being conducted," Trifaro said. "Despite the fact that $46 million is used in research and $42 million of that money is from the public sector, the Animal Care and Use Committee meetings remain closed," she said. "There is no avenue for the public to have access to decision making."

Trifaro's figures came from information given at a public forum held to discuss research in February. David Skorton, UI vice president for Research, updated the Fiscal Year '93 numbers on Monday. He said $48 million was spent on research with $44 million coming from the public. While the numbers are actually higher than originally estimated, Skorton stressed that only a small amount of that total is used to purchase animals. "Forty-eight million dollars is not being spent buying and maintaining animals," he said. About $2.2 million from both public and private sources is spent in the purchase and maintenance of animals, Skorton said. The rest of the money goes to salaries and supplies as well as other research expenses.

The Animal Care and Use Committee itself is another point on which the coalition and UI officials clash. Despite lobbying efforts by the coalition and other community members that the meetings be opened to the public, the Animal Care and Use Committee meetings remain closed. Vice President for University Relations Ann Rhodes said the decision to keep the meetings closed will stand. "There is no requirement that they are open," she said. "The minutes of the meetings have been made available when they have been requested." Skorton said although the meetings are closed, public input is welcomed and new membership is being added to the committee in efforts to integrate the public.

ELECTION

Associated Press

South Africans queue to cast their votes outside the town hall in Durban, in South Africa's Natal Province, Wednesday. Despite the fears of terrorist attacks, South African voters poured into polls for the second day of balloting in the country's historic all-race election.

try by next week. Fifteen minutes after Mandela's vote was broadcast live nationwide, a bomb detonated inside a sedan parked outside the international terminal at Johannesburg's Jan Smuts Airport. Eighteen people were wounded. By now familiar scenes of panic, twisted metal, broken glass and bloodied pavement repeated themselves. But this time police were quick to announce they had apprehended a suspect, a tall white man thought to be involved with right-wingers believed behind a spate of bombs exploded this week in an attempt to derail the election. The bigger threat Wednesday came from the sheer numbers of voters. Some sites ran out of invisible ink applied to voters' hands so that they could not vote twice. The ink is read with an ultraviolet lamp. Other polling spots lacked either lamps or electricity to run them. Some ballots never arrived. In the violence-wracked East Rand near Johannesburg, a truck carrying ballots to voting stations in Katlehong was hijacked - not an unusual event in those parts. With lines stretching for more than a mile in places and political parties getting angrier, the Independent Electoral Commission agreed late Wednesday to postpone poll closings from 7 p.m. to midnight. Today was declared a holiday so that more people could miss work and stand in line.

The commission pledged that polling stations would remain open as long as needed to accommodate everyone in line at 7 p.m. today. Election officials admitted that there might simply be more South African voters out there than they had estimated based on previous censuses. Judge Johann Kriegler, overseeing the vote, ordered the printing of 9.3 million additional ballots with 5 million to be completed by this morning.

RACIAL IDENTITY

Name, color and cultural heritage

What's in a word? Why is it important to capitalize the "B" in Black? When talking about a group of people who are distinguished by their physical and cultural characteristics and shared historical experiences, it becomes necessary to capitalize the first letter of the word we assign to the group. It is a matter of respect which indicates that as a group, "Black" people have contributed to the forward flow of humanity. Notice when we speak about the Jews, or the Arabs, or other groups who share physical, cultural and historical similarities, we use a capital letter. Or if we say Americans, Serbs or Kurds — groups with shared cultural and historical, but not necessarily physical traits, then we also capitalize. But when we refer to black people, the "b" is not capitalized. Why?

If we are just talking about the color "black," then the answer would be easy. We do not capitalize the names of colors. But no "black" person can be color-coded as "black," just as no "white" person can be color-coded as "white." We are all shades of brown, or pink for many white people. Clearly, when we talk about "black" people, we mean more than the color of one's skin. If a person claims to be "black," her skin color may not even be distinguishable from whites. To be "black" is to have a certain state of mind or point of view that interprets reality in a way that reflects our great history and culture. If we choose to call ourselves "black," then the "b" should be capitalized as it is for the Jews, the Arabs and countless other historically significant groups of people. To do otherwise is another striking form of disrespect that seeks to further deny our humanity.

When we say "African," we are allowed to capitalize. But many people are not comfortable calling black people "Africans." Why? Quite often we will see a stranger with Asian physical features and we will not have a problem calling her "Chinese," if it is what she happens to be. That person may be third-generation American and unable to even speak the Chinese language. Still, we do not refer to her as "Chinese-American" or simply "American." She is Chinese, if not in her own mind then certainly in the minds of others. Likewise, we must begin to call ourselves African and identify with Africa. Calling ourselves "black" is subject to interpretation which generally leads to disrespect. "Black" people have no history beyond American chattel slavery. There is no place called "Blackland" where we all come from. On the other hand, the history and heritage of Africa can no longer be ignored. Due to the greed and savagery of European slave traders and colonists, today we have to dig very deep to rediscover our particular roots within the continent. But Africa — and calling ourselves Africans — is a start. At least it is capitalized. No one can take that away from us.

Representation of typical family

To the Editor:

Regarding that sawed-up statue that went from emblem of high ideals to dumpster: First off, if you got a nekkid man, woman and child running around and calling themselves a family, you probably do have a case for social workers.

Secondly, if they're supposed to be a typical American family, shouldn't there be 1 1/2 children?

Finally, if we want an emblem of what's going down with marriages these days, with at least a 50 percent divorce rate, couldn't that be symbolized by half of the man being out the door for good — the half with the wallet in it, which means he'd better acquire some pants right soon unless you frame the front half for one of the attorney general's wanted posters of deadbeat dads which hang in the public library and the post office.

'Bout time we got some political correctness 'round yar, heh?

Will School of Social Work seek new logo?

To the Editor:

What do our social workers in training expect to see when they reach the slums — beauty queens and masterpieces of body building clad in silk and satin and soft leather? How will they respond to the traditional family — tag it for demolition? Having junked the figures, the UI School of Social Work will retain its logo on sweatshirts, etc., because the gender and age differences are not so obvious. This makes as much sense as scrapping the papier-mâché and feathers and allowing Herky to continue on beer mugs and T-shirts because it's not as obvious he's a hawk! What's the matter with the women faculty members who object to the nudity — are they ashamed of the way their maker made them?

And where does the accreditation team come in — is iconography a legitimate concern of theirs? The simple-mindedness displayed in the episode of the School of Social Work sculpture (DI, April 18) is disgusting. The "they whine — we remove" mentality of social work officialdom allows the present generation of faculty and students to speak for those of the past and future. Permanent fixtures should not be decided by the whim of the moment. It would be redeeming if the university administration would recall the statue from Mrs. McDonald's garage, repair them and redeploy them until a new School of Social Work logo can be devised. If the administration lacks the courage to intervene, then it may as well paint the dome of the Old Capitol pink.

Ambiguity 101: a lesson in fear, hypocrisy

During my formative years, if one of my elementary-school rivals came up to me in the school yard and said, "Hey Tommy, your mamma's an incestuous byproduct of a Cro-Magnon interlude and your daddy's the spitting image of Mr. Potato Head," I would have no other choice but to respond with "Sticks and stones may break my bones, but words will never hurt me."

Usually, the "sticks and stones" defense mechanism left my opponents speechless, and to save face, they would run off and harass other children — preferably those with a weaker threshold for ignorance. Other times, my opponents would take my "sticks and stones" defense at its literal meaning and proceed to bash me over the head with a stone.

Later on in life, eighth grade to be more precise, my English teacher (the unforgettable Mrs. Dann) assigned our class Ray Bradbury's futuristic novel, "Fahrenheit 451." The book dealt with a future where literature was outlawed, and the penalty for housing the bounded wonders was a thorough torching of the printed words.

Sticks and stones ... More specifically, the themes of "Fahrenheit 451" centered around free speech, book banning and the possible repercussions of government intervention into the deterrence of free speech. Fear, hysteria and ignorance also play formidable roles in Bradbury's novel. I found the novel truly fascinating, and I was flattered that Mrs. Dann had enough faith in us to assign such a significant book.

Before I had a chance to finish reading "Fahrenheit 451," my faith in Mrs. Dann was quickly extinguished when she confiscated a half-dozen copies of Jim Morrison's biography, "No one Here Gets Out Alive," from my ambitious classmates. She confiscated the books and later defended her actions to the entire class by claiming that the book was completely inappropriate for kids our age because it contained the word MASTURBATION.

Sticks and stones ... Two weeks later, I nearly failed the test over "Fahrenheit 451," not to mention the fact that I nearly failed English that semester. Mrs. Dann wrote on the back of my essay exam that I failed to grasp the thematic discourse of the novel, and she also implied that I didn't read ranks. Thanks to the Bored of Regents, instructors at the UI have been disabled with the new classroom material policy. The only difference between present events and the ordeal with Mrs. Dann is that Mrs. Dann acted alone, whereas UI instructors were dismantled from above. Out of fear and ignorance, the Bored of Regents crammed a stick in the pathway of UI instructors, thus hindering their educational efforts; while in turn, the students are stoned in the crossfire.

Sticks and stones ... Furthermore, if creating a controlled learning (oxymoron?) environment wasn't bad enough for the UI, the Bored of Regents took measures one step further in establishing a separatist atmosphere by approving the sky-box renovations at Kinnick Stadium. It's bad enough that we have Big Brother watching over our instructors' shoulders in the classrooms, but now we have to deal with their filthy rich chums watching over our shoulders at Hawkeye football games.

The mere thought of wealthy contributors languishing in their luxurious sky boxes as caviar drippings ooze from the corners of their manipulative lips is enough to make anyone sick, except for the fish suckers themselves. Not to worry though, they'll have separate bathrooms to wash their dirty hands.

The sky boxes have been deemed elitist by some, but the term separatist seems more fitting. The concept of separating themselves from the black and gold peasantry out of fear is completely understandable, considering that they might end up cheering in an act of unity or togetherness with a fan next to them — who coincidentally might be a homosexual or worse, a free thinker, hollering, "C'mon, Hawkeyes! Let's go, defense; break their freakin' necks!"

Interesting: Sticks and stones may break my bones but words will never hurt me?

Tom Lindsey's column appears Thursdays on the Viewpoints Pages.

the book. But then again, that's only my interpretation of her comments. Coincidentally, I had Mrs. Dann for two other classes (Reading and French) that semester and nearly failed them as well.

Welcome to my world: minorities in the U.S.

The "American Dream" isn't as bright as it once seemed to be. The children of the '80s raised on MTV and Brady Bunch reruns are singing the blues. Where have all the flowers gone? It's as if they're dipping their cups into the fountain of prosperity and coming up empty. Four years or more of a formal education and chances are they still won't be able to find a job. Wow, reality does bite! Boy, I wish someone would reshuffle the deck.

I spent half the night crying over the plight of the twentysomething / X Generation. I asked myself through the sorrow-filled tears, "What are they going to do? Lord, where are they going to go? I'm so distraught in my search for answers. Is there any way to lead these children of darkness back into the light? Life just seems so unfair." Well kiddies — welcome to my world.

It never ceases to amaze me how problems can be ignored until they hit main street. In the black and Hispanic communities, unemployment has become another page in the saga of life. However, it has been overlooked and mislabeled by mainstream society, where they are viewed as lazy and unmotivated: "That's why they're on welfare and hanging out on corners, gang-bangers, drug users and habitual criminals."

Have you ever stopped to wonder why the job situation is so different for minorities? Why they tend to be clustered together in little communities? Or why there are so few minorities on this campus? I wouldn't put much thought to it either if it didn't concern me. But it does, therefore I do.

Only within the past three decades have minorities had the privilege to select a career, instead of merely looking for a job. Before that time, and continuing into today, minorities were raised with the mindset that manual labor (working with their hands) would be their ticket to mecca. Unfortunately, this was not the case because unskilled labor, although extremely important, is not highly valued.

It never ceases to amaze me how problems can be ignored until they hit main street. In the black and Hispanic communities, unemployment has become another page in the saga of life. However, it has been overlooked and mislabeled by mainstream society, where they are viewed as lazy and unmotivated: "That's why they're on welfare and hanging out on corners, gang-bangers, drug users and habitual criminals."

Also, when minorities' members strive for something more, they are often discouraged. Take, for example, the words of my high-school counselor when I mentioned my interest in attending the UI. "Heather, you lack the mental capacity to make it through a four-year institution — you might as well enroll in a technical school." While the other side of the coin consists in being a credit to your race. Can you imagine entering your freshman year with that big of a load on your shoulders? Luckily for me, I never had to worry about such things because according to every standardized test I've ever taken, I'm a blathering idiot.

Being written off at such a young age is painful. Looking into your community and being unable to acknowledge your potential is even worse. Although some of the most intelligent people you could ever hope to meet live in "the ghetto," very few are ever given the opportunity to score. Instead, they are condemned to continue the prevalent cycle of poverty that is too much seen as their just due.

However, some minorities are given a chance to move up the corporate ladder — that is until they hit their head on the glass ceiling that tends to be fairly low. Although affirmative action is still extremely necessary, its purpose is often misunderstood and looked upon unfavorably. C'mon, what's the point of giving a qualified person the opportunity at a job which their race has been systematically denied for decades?

This article has taken a lot out of me. For some strange reason, I no longer feel a need to cry for the plight of the twentysomething generation. It seems as if those tears shouldn't be wasted on a group whose only remorse stems from the fact that their piece of the pie won't be as big as they expected. Instead, I will cry my river in the direction of the real lost generation, whose dreams lay stifled and whose future is unknown. And who knows, maybe these tears will clean the streets and make everything seem peaceful before the chaos of another day begins.

GUEST OPINION • RAYMOND M. TINNIAN

Precision needed in defining rape

On Feb. 28, in a calm editorial, Vikki Pahl questioned many of the expanded definitions of rape which are being bandied about by local rape activists, such as People Out Working to End Rape (POWER). Among other things, Pahl wrote: "POWER says 'mental coercion' is rape. So, if a sweet-talking man scams his way into a woman's pants, it's all his fault."

In attacking this editorial, our town's foremost rape hysteric wrote that Vikki Pahl: "... did this community a great disservice. ... She reinforced many rape myths. ... Let's look at what the real problem is — rape and those who continue to blame survivors for rapists' actions (The Daily Iowan, March 11)." In other words, Pahl is now part of the problem. In the minds of rape activists, anyone who takes issue with ridiculous definitions of rape is either "in denial" or doesn't care about rape victims. This rhetorical tactic dates back hundreds of years. I'm out to get witches. If you don't like me, then you must be siding with the witches.

Here in Iowa City, the stuff that rape hysterics peddle is neither information nor opinion. It is "awareness," a unique combination of bad social science and feminist zealotry dressed up as "fact." They think anything they deeply believe must be true, because they are the good people. They encourage nutty, deluded, self-pitying recovery addicts to huddle together with actual victims of sex crimes and demand equal treatment.

Take, for example, the case of Midge Buchanan of Pella, Iowa, as reported in the Des Moines Register on March 7. She claims she went to her minister for "help dealing with problems stemming from sexual abuse in her childhood." She claims that the minister "sexually exploited" her for "several months." She is accusing the minister of rape.

Leaving aside the debate about whether one sober, consenting adult can be "exploited" by another for several months, Buchanan's accusation of rape is preposterous. Did she return to the minister day after day for "several months" at gunpoint? Did the minister hunt her down and use a weapon on her? Is a woman helpless if a minister asks her to take her clothes off? Does she have no choice but to repeatedly go to bed with some guy just because he asked? Of course the minister behaved unethically, but how he has been accused of rape on the pages of the Des Moines Register.

This business of manufacturing rape victims wouldn't be so bad except that every victim must have a perpetrator. The public denunciation of innocent men has been described by a local feminist as "empowerment." A March 7 story in the DI describes an opinion about anonymous accusations of rape scrawled in public places around the university. When asked about the possibility of false accusations, Ashley Sovern, assistant director of the Rape Victim Advocacy Program, said that she "isn't as concerned with the validity of the names of the attackers," but instead sees "the lists as a way for women to empower each other outside of traditional legal boundaries."

Sovern has repeatedly shown contempt for the facts. After being informed that there were specific objections to her rape statistics, Sovern wrote: "Let's assume for a minute that the numbers are wrong. To some of us, it doesn't matter. ... Defending or refuting the statistics on rape is an exercise in futility; you either accept them or you don't (DI, Dec. 7, 1993)." Whenever pressed for specifics, rape activists reflexively retreat into a sort of religious faith, only to emerge again, later on, as social "scientists" in some other venue.

On Dec. 9, responding critically to an article about false memory syndrome, Sovern wrote in the Des Moines Register that "sexual abuse in this country is overwhelming: One of four girls and one of six boys will be a victim of sexual assault before the age of 18." Two days after saying in the DI that facts don't matter, two days after saying "you either accept them or you don't," Sovern used her "facts" to create fear and to "prove" a point.

Most of us take sexual assault very seriously. We know that rape is real; it is pervasive; it is a devastating and violent crime. It is the campus rape hysterics who are not taking sexual assault seriously. They think human pain is a toy for them to play with. By consciously manipulating statistics, emotions and facts in the service of an ideological agenda, the Rape Victim Advocacy Programs all across America are plundering real victims every day and helping to create new ones in the form of innocent men falsely accused.

Censorship becoming prevalent at UI

To the Editor:

I am saddened by the increasingly prevalent attempts of the UI to censor works of art, literature and various media forms in the classroom and on campus. Ideally, the university should be a place where ideas can be discussed freely and openly and people can decide the issues for themselves. But recent events show this is just an ideal and not a reality. The right to free speech is not a given right on this campus, despite our constitutional claim to it — it is something we have to continually strive and struggle for.

The recent destruction of the School of Social Work statue, the "offensive materials" policy concerning all forms of media, literature and art in the classroom, and the administrative harassment of student groups such as the Campaign for Academic Freedom and the Iowa International Socialist Organization all represent institutional attempts at censorship. This sets a dangerous precedent in the university community because it threatens free speech and the free marketplace of ideas. When any institution supported by the government, such as the UI, begins censoring student groups and labeling creative works as offensive and therefore deviant, they are institutionalizing discrimination and prejudice where it should not exist. It is clear that on a local scale the UI's attempts at censorship represent government against the people and not for the people. It is only when students and faculty are allowed to decide for themselves what is offensive, may express their ideas freely through student groups and have the right to interpret on their own authority what a work of art, literature or media means to them that the freedom of speech guaranteed by the First Amendment is upheld.

It is a shame that the UI is not a national leader in upholding the rights of students, faculty and administration. Instead, censorship is gaining an institutional and governmental foothold in the university community. It appears that freedom of speech and freedom of expression through works of art are rights that are becoming more elusive to us every day.

Spring weather should be appreciated

To the Editor:

In response to all those "weather complainers" out there, I would like to offer this:

To all those people who complain that "it's too windy" or "it's too hot" these past few beautiful days — do you remember all those 30 below zero degree days a mere 2½ months ago? Or do you recall that one year ago we had no spring? That it rained nearly every day and that we all had to alter our walking, driving or even living arrangements due to the severe flooding in this area? I don't understand your pessimism. I have been able to wander through the woods and smell and see the wildflowers made perfect due to the right mixture of sun and rain (and my shoes aren't even muddy!). And those cotton-puff clouds in that blue, blue sky — I can hardly keep myself from lying down on the grass and lazily staying put for an hour or so to gaze at these marvelous beauties floating across the sky. Even the rainy days haven't been so bad. I took my 2-year-old son out in that perfect rain without thunder or lightning just so he could experience the patter on his first umbrella. Of course he jumped in the puddles — who wouldn't?

Could we please learn to love the days of which God gives us too few?

Concerns about teaching at UI

To the Editor:

As a freshman here at the UI, I would like to applaud and say that I can relate to Tom Hunter's article about professors teaching or padding their resumes. My peers and I often talk about feeling cheated from the lack of attention students get. We could totally relate to the Teaching Assistant scenario. I also feel that some professors may be of "top talent" in their field of expertise, but they can't teach in a way that students understand. I do feel relieved to hear someone else, besides my freshman friends and me, addressing this issue. Thank-you, Tom Hunter, for the reassurance.

Interaction with instructors is common

To the Editor:

I am writing in response to an editorial published on April 19 by Tom Hunter. Hunter addressed the topic of faculty commitment to teaching, and found the faculty at Iowa unsatisfactory. As I read Hunter's article, I found myself wondering if we attended the same university as my experience differed greatly from his.

Hunter writes that most classes at the UI are taught by TAs with minimal interaction between students and faculty. Aside from a few introductory level courses which are required for most students at Iowa, nearly all of my classes have been taught by faculty members in departments ranging from psychology to mathematics to religious studies. As a transfer student from Grinnell College, a small liberal arts school with an emphasis on teaching, I can say that the quality of the instruction I have received at the UI is at least comparable to that at Grinnell.

Even in the large lecture courses which I have attended, faculty have urged students to come to them with questions or issues from the class. In visiting the office of a professor, I have never felt unwelcome or that I was trespassing into the throne rooms of royalty. (In fact, given the size and comfort of many faculty offices, it feels more like going into a dungeon!) Given the size of the university, I am not certain that even if every faculty member did nothing but teach we would be able to fit every student into cozy 30- or 40-person classes. I feel that the lecture/discussion system is a workable compromise.

Finally, I feel that Hunter should consider a different perspective on faculty research. Instead of considering research as competition for faculty time, consider research as an opportunity for students to become involved with faculty members in research projects for which they share an interest. In many of my social and natural science classes, professors have made a "pitch" to the class, inviting interested students to work in their labs for class credit. It requires some student initiative, but having worked with three professors during my stay at Iowa, I can assure you it is possible to get plenty of one-on-one contact with faculty.

In conclusion, I disagree with Hunter's negative assessment of the UI faculty and would encourage other students to get involved in faculty research and projects.

Excellent care at UIHC

To the Editor:

I am writing to express my deepest gratitude for the outstanding care given to my husband, Dr. Michael Solursch, by the staff of the UI Hospitals and Clinics.

The AIDS virus can assault the body in various ways, but the doctors and nurses were unceasing in their efforts to restore and repair Michael's health so that he could continue to teach and do research and to be with his family. Everyone at the hospital from the housekeeping staff to the medical specialists exhibited the highest level of professionalism intertwined with kindness, friendliness and genuine interest in Michael's well-being.

During Michael's struggle he had some valiant allies. How lucky he was to have Dr. Jack Stapleton, Dr. Ralph Knudson, Dr. John Walker and Dr. James Folk on his side. They provided the expertise to enable Michael to beat the odds for many years.

I want everyone to know what dedicated people are at work every day at the UIHC. Their efforts are appreciated and applauded by Michael's family and friends.

Iowa softball signs second California recruit

The Iowa softball team signed Leticia Castellion out of Stockton, Calif., to pitch for the Hawkeyes next season, Coach Gayle Blevins announced Wednesday.

Castellion is a four-time all-state selection from Lincoln High School in Stockton.

She joins Jamie Almoradi from Anaheim, Calif., Debbie Bilbao from Salt Lake City and Erin McGee from Hillsdale, Ill.

Hawkeye softball drops out of top 25 ratings

The Iowa softball team fell from the national rankings for the first time in two years.

The Hawkeyes also fell from third to sixth in the Midwest region rankings.

Arizona is ranked first, followed by Southwest Louisiana and Oklahoma State. Indiana is ranked No. 15, Ohio State is No. 21 and Michigan is No. 25.

Pain forces Pippen from practice

DEERFIELD, Ill. (AP) — Scottie Pippen, the Chicago Bulls' leading scorer, was forced to leave practice Wednesday, complaining of nagging pain in his right thigh muscle.

Trainer Chip Schaefer described the problem as muscle strain.

Pippen aggravated the injury Tuesday at the team's practice center in Deerfield but continued to practice, Schaefer said.

"I think he noticed it more today. He didn't think it was anything to concern himself with yesterday, but it was a little tight today," Schaefer said.

Coach Phil Jackson said he thought Pippen would be able to play in the first game of the playoffs against the Cleveland Cavaliers Friday.

Pippen underwent treatment for about 90 minutes Wednesday, Schaefer said.

Robinson tops computer rating chart

NEW YORK (AP) — David Robinson, who edged Shaquille O'Neal for the NBA scoring title, won the NBA's IBM award, a computerized rating that determines a player's overall contribution to his team's success.

Robinson, who led San Antonio to a 55-27 record, averaged 29.8 points, 10.7 rebounds, 4.8 assists, 3.31 blocks and 1.74 steals. The assist figure was the best among centers and led the Spurs, the first time a nonguard has done that.

Robinson beat O'Neal 113.8 points to 107.43 in the computerized rankings. Houston's Hakeem Olajuwon was third, followed by Karl Malone of Utah and Patrick Ewing of New York. Only Malone, a forward, is not a center.

HAMBURG, Germany (AP) — Monica Seles, who remains sidelined indefinitely nearly a year after she was stabbed in the back during a tournament in Hamburg, said in a magazine interview that she plans to return to competition.

"Of course I will play tennis again," Sports Life magazine quoted Seles as saying in its issue released Wednesday. "I don't want to be remembered just as someone who grunted and giggled. I'd hate to be remembered only for that."

"I also don't want to be 'the one with a knife in the back.' There's still a lot I can accomplish."

Sports Life said the interview was a reprint of an article that appeared in the March issue of Tennis magazine in the United States.

Big Ten tennis crown up for grabs

Doug Alden
The Daily Iowan

After a season of 10 conference duals, Big Ten teams finally have the opportunity to see who is No. 1 when the Big Ten Women's Tennis Championships begin today at the Westfield Tennis Club and Racquet Club East in Cedar Rapids, due to inclement weather.

At 9-1 in conference play, Michigan is the tournament's No. 1 seed, followed by No. 2 Indiana (8-2), Northwestern (8-2) is No. 3, Wisconsin (8-2) is No. 4 and Iowa (6-4) rounds out the top division at No.

Indiana is going for its eighth straight conference title, but Coach Lin Loring said the Hoosiers, who have been hampered by injuries all year, are not the team to beat.

"We're probably lucky to be seeded No. 2," Loring said. "I think we're huge underdogs this year. We know we're going to have to play our best tennis to win it this year."

Loring said Michigan and Wisconsin have the best chances, but any team in the top division is capable.

"There are certainly a lot more chances for upsets this year than in past years," Loring said. "The league has shown on any given day anybody in the top seven can beat anyone. But to win you have to win three straight and I don't know that there are seven teams that can do that."

Although Indiana looks more vulnerable than in past years, Iowa coach Micki Schilling said never to count out the Hoosiers.

"Indiana has not had their most successful season, but somehow they always pull it together for Big Tens," Schilling said. "You always have to be on guard for them."

Being the top seed can put pressure on a team, but Michigan assistant coach Susan Sommerville said the Wolverines welcome the challenge.

"Others may see it as pressure, but we really don't. The only pressure we'll be feeling is what we put on ourselves," Sommerville said. "We've been working hard all season and we're looking forward to proving ourselves."

Today's competition begins with a playoff between the eighth through 11th seeds, with the winner facing Michigan Friday at 8:30 a.m. No. 8 Penn State (3-7) plays No. 11 Michigan State (0-6), while

Cyclones work over Hawks 8-4

Joel Donofrio
The Daily Iowan

The Iowa baseball team "embarrassed" itself by committing four errors, giving up six walks and blowing a four-run lead in an 8-4 loss to Iowa State Wednesday at Iowa Field.

"We're en route to make a hundred errors this year. I'm sure we already set a school record for errors," said Iowa coach Duane Banks after his squad fell to 19-24-1 with the loss. "It's embarrassing, it's disgusting and everything else."

Hawkeye pitchers Colin Mattiace and Brent Glendinning cruised through the Cyclone lineup for five innings, giving up three hits and striking out five batters between them.

"We're en route to make a hundred errors this year. I'm sure we already set a school record for errors."

Duane Banks, Iowa baseball coach

Iowa's troubles began in the sixth when Glendinning walked Iowa State's Mark Elsinger to lead off the inning. Cyclone Pat Pithel took Elsinger's place at first following a fielder's choice, then stole second and third while cleanup hitter Monte Jones drew a walk at the plate.

Iowa State first baseman Brad Mangler batted next, squibbing a dribbler toward the mound, which Glendinning fielded and threw off Mangler's back and into right field for an error and the first Cyclone run.

Iowa left-hander Rob Holst (1-2) came in, and Cyclone Kory Kloewer promptly brought Jones home when Mattiace, who moved to first after three innings on the mound, booted a grounder. Backup catcher Chris Grubb scored Kloewer as his fly ball drifted over right fielder Matt Ostrom's head for an RBI double. Consecutive RBI singles by Cyclones Dave Konigsmark and Marc Motzer gave Iowa State a 5-4 lead.

power of his former teammate. "I should have had that ball out there," Ostrom said of Grubb's double.

"I played the guy pretty shallow, because I remember that last year he couldn't hit the ball that far, but he got it over my head."

The Hawkeyes scored twice in the first and third innings to take an early 4-0 lead on Cyclone starter Chad Menster. Iowa second baseman C.J. Thieleke drew a one-out walk, stole second and went to third when Grubb's throw sailed into center field. Two pitches later, Thieleke scored as a wild pitch went between Grubb's legs.

With the bases empty, Ostrom drove a double down the left-field line, then scored as Hawkeye designated hitter Matt Kraus punched a single into left field. However, Menster caught Kraus leaning toward second and picked him off. The out proved costly after Jeremy Lewis and Steve Fishman followed the pickoff with base hits.

In the third, Thieleke led off with another walk and again stole second. He raced home on Ostrom's base hit to score, taking out Grubb's legs in a collision at the plate.

Iowa State pitcher Troy Keonig replaced Menster and gave up a two-out single to Fishman, which scored Ostrom and made it a four-run Iowa lead.

From that point, the Hawkeyes could manage only one hit off Cyclone relievers Keonig (1-0) and Matt Ruess, who pitched the final three innings for a save.

MINNESOTA TWINS

Erickson fires first career no-hitter

Mike Nadel
Associated Press

MINNEAPOLIS — Scott Erickson, who allowed the most hits in the majors last season, pitched Minnesota's first no-hitter in 27 years, and the Twins beat the Milwaukee Brewers 6-0 Wednesday night.

Erickson (2-3) struck out five and walked four — two with two outs in the ninth inning — and hit a batter in throwing the first shutout of the season for the big leagues' lowest-ranked pitching staff.

"I got lucky, I think. It takes more than good pitches to get a no-hitter," Erickson said.

It was the second no-hitter of the season in the majors, following one by Atlanta's Kent Mercker on April 8 in Los Angeles. Jim Abbott of the Yankees had the last AL no-hitter against Cleveland last Sept. 4.

Erickson burst onto the baseball scene in 1991, winning 20 games in his first full season and helping the Twins win the World Series.

Since then, his career has gone down the tubes, and it would be hard to find a more unlikely candidate to pitch a no-hitter. He was 9-24 in his last 40 starts.

Erickson entered Wednesday's game with a 7.48 ERA, and opponents were batting .384 against him. Just two weeks ago, he allowed 11 hits and 10 runs in a four-inning stint against Seattle, and he'd lost three straight games.

"I haven't changed anything since my last three starts," he said. "I had a better slider today, reminiscent of years past."

Erickson walked Bill Spiers in the fourth, hit John Jaha with a pitch in the sixth and walked Dave Nilsson in the eighth. He walked Spiers and Turner Ward with two outs in the ninth before retiring Greg Vaughn on a short fly ball to left to end the game.

"I kind of hung it, actually," Erickson said of the final pitch.

The crowd of 17,988 stood and cheered when Erickson, as usual, ran to the mound before the ninth inning. As soon as left fielder Alex Cole caught the final ball — narrowly avoiding a collision with shortstop Pat Meares — Erickson was mobbed on the mound.

NBA

Expansion to include Vancouver

Rick Warner
Associated Press

NEW YORK — The NBA has opened a western front in its Canadian campaign.

The league's owners unanimously approved a Vancouver franchise on Wednesday, six months after admitting Toronto. Both teams will begin play in the 1995-96 season.

"Vancouver is a beautiful, fast-growing city," NBA commissioner David Stern said. "It's got a great seaport, great restaurants and great fans."

For NBA playoff coverage, see Page 3B.

The addition of Toronto and Vancouver will give the NBA 29 teams. The franchises must pay an entry fee of $125 million, nearly four times the $32.5 million paid by the four expansion teams in the late 1980s.

But Vancouver owner Arthur Griffiths thinks it's a good investment.

NBA

Anderson primed for playoffs

Associated Press

The long wait is over for Nick Anderson.

Anderson, the first player drafted by the Orlando Magic in 1989, suffered through four nonwinning seasons before the team made the leap to victories and its first NBA playoff appearance this season.

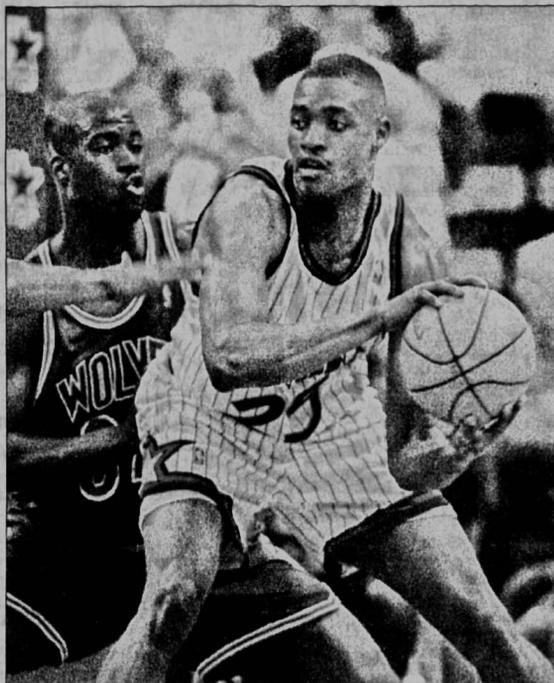

"I've waited a long time for this," Anderson said of Orlando's opener against Indiana tonight. "There are a lot of guys that may never get to say they were on a team that won 50 games. I can say I have."

The Magic are the No. 4 seed in the East ahead of No. 5 Indiana, which won its last eight games of the season, a franchise record.

A major change in Orlando this season was that rookie Anfernee Hardaway replaced Scott Skiles at point guard.

"There are a lot of guys that may never get to say they were on a team that won 50 games. I can say I have."

ball where he wants when he wants regardless of the situation, and that's not easy. He's going to get to a point where he can take over games."

In other playoff openers tonight, Miami is at Atlanta in the East, while it's Denver at Seattle and Utah at San Antonio in the West.

On Friday, it's New Jersey at New York and Cleveland at Chicago in the East and Portland at Houston and Golden State at Phoenix in the West.

Atlanta, the top-seeded team in the Eastern Conference, isn't so highly regarded in the public eye.

The trade of Dominique Wilkins to the Clippers for Danny Manning raised doubts about whether this was the kind of deal a contending team should make.

Manning's unhappy final years with the Clippers also caused some to question his attitude and character, and his first game at Atlanta in a Hawks uniform prompted as many boos as cheers.

Manning's performance down the stretch gives little hint that the trade damaged the team's hopes for the playoffs against the Heat, who became the 16th and last team to qualify for the playoffs by defeating Atlanta last Thursday.

It was the only time the Heat beat the Hawks in four games this season.

"Dominique was here for a very long time and is a legend in the city," Manning said. "I'm not going to replace Dominique. I'm just going to go out, play my game and do the best I can."

The Hawks were 37-16 before the Manning-Wilkins trade, a .698 percentage, and 20-9 with Manning on the roster, or .690.

That's hardly a precipitous drop, but the Hawks still found it necessary to defend Manning.

"Danny is an All-Star caliber player and is six years younger than Wilkins," Coach Lenny Wilkens said. "Anytime you get an opportunity to make this kind of deal, you're kind of foolish if you don't."

Wilkens said that no one who knows Manning or deals with him in the media questions his attitude.

"He has outstanding character, and the fact that he was unhappy there (Los Angeles) doesn't belittle him at all," Wilkens said.

Seattle is the top seed in the West and has homecourt advantage throughout the playoffs because of its NBA-best 63-19 record. That was five games better than the previous high by Houston.

But like Atlanta in the East, the SuperSonics feel they don't get the respect they deserve.

"When they've talked about the West, they've talked about Phoenix or Houston. People have said all along that we're going to fall apart sooner or later," forward Detlef Schrempf said.

Denver, despite a 2-2 split of the season series with the Sonics, matches Miami's 42-40 record as the worst among the 16 playoff teams.

Fourth-seeded San Antonio has the homecourt advantage in the first round against Utah, but the Jazz were 5-0 against the Spurs this season. San Antonio hopes to reverse the trend with its advantage at center, where David Robinson is coming off a 71-point performance Sunday that gave him the NBA scoring title over Shaquille O'Neal.

Jordan blends into minor-league lifestyle

Pete Iacobelli

Associated Press

GREENVILLE, S.C. — The world's biggest basketball star is just another minor-leaguer these days.

Michael Jordan, who led the Chicago Bulls to three straight NBA championships, plays cards and dominoes with Birmingham Barons teammates and avoids most of the star treatment and accolades he was afforded during his basketball career.

"I've kind of just fitted in, which is the way I wanted it to be," Jordan said. "I didn't want to be viewed as one above all. I'm probably lowest on the totem pole here, because I don't know much about the game."

He is desperately trying to make his minor-league life as normal as possible.

"He wants to get to the major leagues just like these other guys. If he were treated any different it wouldn't be fair to him or to me," Birmingham manager Terry Francona said.

Francona was concerned about the potential distractions when Jordan was assigned to the Southern League affiliate of the Chicago White Sox. Francona sat down the 6-foot-6 outfielder and, like he would with any player, told him what the team expected.

"He said he didn't want to be treated differently, and he doesn't," Francona said.

Some things can't be avoided. Fan and media attendance swells at each stop. The Greenville Braves will draw more than 24,000 people for their three-game series with Birmingham, more than they did for their previous nine home games combined. Extra security is called to corral the screaming fans.

"There are some distractions early because of the attention," Greenville manager Bruce Benedict said. "But certainly when you have an opportunity to work with a person of Michael Jordan's caliber, you'd get used to that as well."

Jordan extended his hitting streak to 13 games Tuesday night and raised his average to .327. He is second in the Southern League with eight stolen bases in 11 attempts.

Jordan, who hadn't played organized baseball since high school, says baseball comes a lot less instinctively to him, and the support and guidance of teammates is essential.

Cubs blow five-run lead

Associated Press

HOUSTON — Jeff Bagwell drove in the go-ahead run with a ground-out in the seventh inning Wednesday night as the Houston Astros rallied from five runs down for an 8-5 victory over the Chicago Cubs.

Houston trailed 5-0 after two innings before battling back to hand Chicago its 10th loss in 12 games.

Ken Caminiti hit a three-run homer and Andujar Cedeno added a solo shot for the Astros.

Shane Reynolds (1-0) picked up his first win since Sept. 27, 1992, with three scoreless innings of relief.

The Astros tied it 5-5 in the sixth on Cedeno's sacrifice fly. Marlins 3, Rockies 2

MIAMI — Gary Sheffield homered for the third straight game and Charlie Hough pitched seven strong innings, leading the Florida Marlins over the Colorado Rockies.

A day after relief ace Bryan Harvey was placed on the disabled list, the Marlins barely held on in the ninth.

Pinch hitter John Vander Wal's triple made it 3-2 with one out, but Jeremy Hernandez retired pinch hitter Eric Young on a pop-up and got Walt Weiss on a fly ball for his second save.

Sheffield hit his eighth homer of the season — and tied a team record for home runs in a month — with a two-run shot in the first inning.

Hough (2-0) allowed one run and five hits. He has not allowed more than two earned runs in his first five games. Richie Lewis pitched the eighth.

Expos 7, Giants 1
MONTREAL — Ken Hill scattered six hits for his first complete game in more than a year as the Montreal Expos beat the San Francisco Giants.

Hill (4-1), who last went the distance in a 6-1 victory over the Giants on April 24, 1993, allowed one unearned run in pitching his ninth career complete game. He struck out one and walked two.

Sean Berry had three hits for the Expos.

Montreal got five hits, all singles, off Mark Potvin (2-2) in the second to take a 3-1 lead.

Moises Alou singled to extend his hitting streak to 14 games, and after Berry singled, Wil Cordero brought in Alou with a base hit.

Pirates 3, Reds 1
PITTSBURGH — Zane Smith kept Cincinnati off balance with an assortment of sinkers and off-speed pitches and drove in a run, leading the Pittsburgh Pirates past the Reds.

Carlos Garcia had a go-ahead run-scoring double and Jay Bell homered off ex-Pirate John Smiley (2-2) to back Smith's four-hit pitching. The complete game was only the second for Smith since 1992.

Smith (3-1) already has matched his victory total since developing shoulder problems in July 1992. Indians 8, Sox 7

CLEVELAND — Rookie Manny Ramirez hit a two-run homer and Mark Lewis hit an RBI double as the Indians scored three runs in the 12th inning to beat Chicago.

The Indians stopped a string of six straight losses to the White Sox and moved a game ahead of Chicago in the AL Central.

Chicago committed five errors, including two in the 12th.

The White Sox had taken a 7-5 lead in the top of the inning on Darrin Jackson's two-out, two-run double off Eric Plunk (3-0).

Roberto Hernandez (1-1) took the loss.

Rangers 11, Blue Jays 3
ARLINGTON, Texas — Kenny

Rogers allowed six hits in 7 1/2 innings and David Hulse had three hits, lifting the Texas Rangers over the Toronto Blue Jays.

Toronto's Joe Carter set a major-league record by driving in his 30th run of April with a first-inning single.

Rogers (2-2) struck out seven and walked two as the Rangers won consecutive games for the first time this season.

Texas blew the game open with a five-run fourth off Pat Hentgen (3-2).

ment. He said 7,000 people have already agreed to buy season tickets to watch the team play in a 20,000-seat arena that is now under construction.

"We've been overwhelmed by the response," said Griffiths, who also owns the NHL's Vancouver Canucks and the new arena. "We are confident the NBA will be a big success here."

While hockey remains the No. 1 sport in Canada, Griffiths said basketball is growing in popularity, especially in Vancouver.

"We have more high-school and college teams than anywhere else in Canada," he said. "When I drive around my neighborhood, I see kids playing basketball all the time. I see them wearing Chicago Bulls' jerseys and Phoenix Suns' shirts. Now they'll be wearing Vancouver paraphernalia."

The team was going to be called the Mounties, but that name has been scrapped because of licensing problems with the Royal Canadian Mounted Police.

"We're going to do some test marketing and come up with another name," Griffiths said. Griffiths said he plans to hire a general manager by the end of the summer.

"We want someone with credibility, respect and a strong track record," he said. "We want somebody who knows how to build a franchise from the bottom up."

An expansion draft will be held in the summer of 1995 to stock the two Canadian teams, who will take unprotected players from existing clubs. Each expansion team also will get a pick in the first round of the 1995 college draft. One team will pick sixth and the other seventh.

Expansion teams usually struggle in their first few years, but Griffiths promised his team will play an exciting brand of basketball. "The NBA is in the entertainment business, and we plan to give our fans their money's worth," he said.

Stern, who has marketed the NBA on a global basis, said he doesn't anticipate any more expansion before the end of the century.

However, he did mention Mexico City as a future frontier.

Hit theater festival returns with 8 new works

Tad Paulson
The Daily Iowan

Great things often come in small packages, especially when it comes to theater. A three-hour Shakespearean production may wow an audience out of its socks with its emotive power and grandiose scale, but a 10-minute play that focuses on one issue or emotion may, believe it or not, pack a greater punch.

Tonight, Iowa City theater aficionados will have a chance to catch the Third Annual Iowa Festival of Short Plays, sponsored by the Midwest Center for Developing Artists. The collage of eight short dramatic pieces will be performed tonight only at Riverside Theatre.

The festival was originally the brain child of local writer and playwright John Smick and has enjoyed considerable success with local audiences since its inception.

"I had a lot of friends in the UI theatre department, and I had a play that was only 10 minutes long that I wanted to perform — but who wants to sit there for just 10 minutes?" Smick said. "So I got seven of my writer friends together, rented out some local theater space and put together the first festival. And it was a hit."

Smick hooked up with local playwright Todd Ristau, president and founder of MCDA, during that first show. Subsequently, the festival was brought under the auspices and funding of MCDA and, due to the popular response from audiences, became an annual fund-raising event for the nonprofit company.

Now the show is in its third year, and Smick feels this year's show is one of the best yet.

"We've got eight pieces with very different tones and textures to them," he said. "They're all very complete and express eight different moods. This is one of our best crop of writers and actors yet in the festival."

The plays range from five to 15 minutes in length. One of the festival's prerequisites is that the pieces be unpublished and unperformed as well, so audiences can rest assured that what they'll be seeing is fresh material.

Shannon McCormick, a UI theatre department student, is among the eight writers debuting a piece in the show. His work, titled "The Mayor's Big Day," is a comedic piece dealing with a politician losing his mind. The play is McCormick's first in the festival and the first of his own works that he's directed.

"It's the only festival like this around town right now," he said. "I wrote this play for a class, but all along I had it in the back of my mind that I'd like to submit it to the festival."

Some of the other short plays being performed are:

- "King Without a Face," Smick's own contribution to the festival. It focuses on Baldwin the Fourth, a king of Jerusalem during the Crusades, and how he deals with the unattractive situation of losing his city to the war as well as being 17 years old and a leper.

- "Quitting Time," written by Dave Drayer, about a young man and an old man living a cyclical going-nowhere life in small-town Pennsylvania and explores the absurdity of what we settle for in life.

- "Brain Damage," written by Amy Tofte, which is one of the evening's more experimental pieces. It looks at gender issues in a contemporary world where "women are systematically transfigured by seemingly beneficent plastic surgeons."

Smick believes the festival is a great opportunity for audiences to get a lot of little tastes of theater and encourages theater regulars and newcomers to come check the show out.

"There's a lot of new talent being tapped into as well as a lot of the old guard. It'll be a really good, broad spectrum of theatrical entertainment."

The Iowa Festival of Short Plays will be performed tonight at 6 and 9 at Riverside Theatre, 213 N. Gilbert St. Admission will be $5 at the door.

David Greedy/The Daily Iowan

Grayscale — Nicole DeSalle and David Lazzar play young versions of Mabel and Abner, a crotchety old couple from skits performed at No Shame Theatre, in the drama "Shades of Gray." The play, which is free, will be performed tonight at 7 and Saturday at 3 and 7 p.m. at the Wesley Foundation, 120 N. Dubuque St.

Barney may lose 'I Love You' song due to copyright-infringement suit

Associated Press

EVERETT, Wash. — What? Barney the dinosaur without the "I Love You" song?

Everett music publisher Jean Warren has sued Barney's owner, alleging copyright infringement. She says she bought the rights to the song in 1983.

The lawsuit was filed by Warren Publishing House Inc. against the Lyons Group of Dallas, Barney's owner, and companies that have marketed musical Barney products, including Time-Life Inc. and

J.C. Penney Co.

Russell Mack, a Lyons Group spokesman, denied the lawsuit has influenced Barney's music but said he didn't know if the Purple One will sing "I Love You" in next season's shows, which begin taping next month.

Video Week magazine said the "Barney and Friends" show has generated hundreds of millions of dollars in related product sales. Warren Publishing seeks an unspecified share of profits attributable to the song.

'Concubine' an epic visual wonder

Ian Corwin
The Daily Iowan

From its opening frames, Chen Kaige's "Farewell My Concubine" drowns its audience in a rare, lyrical beauty which always seems to be in flux. Given this overriding feeling of change, it's safe to say that one viewing of this amorphous wonder may not be enough to absorb everything it has to offer.

"Concubine" 's historical context was wisely chosen; the cultural and political turmoil which marked China's history from the turn of the century until the 1960s provides constant outside intervention in the lives of "Concubine" 's cast of endearing characters. The result is a morphing backdrop just as worthy of scrutiny as the issues raised by the action in the foreground.

Leslie Cheung is Dieyi, the son of a prostitute who was given by his mother to the masters of an acting troupe. Dieyi is frail and delicate, and his instructors cultivate him for playing female roles, specifically the role of concubine Yu in the opera "Farewell My Concubine." But Dieyi, like his country, is often in a state of either doubt or non-identity.

"I am by nature a girl," he's required to sing, but Dieyi can never get the line right, instead offering up, "I am by nature a boy." And while Dieyi struggles with his part in the opera, China crumbles around him.

As Dieyi's ambitious "stage brother" Xiaolou, Zhang Fengyi provides a foil to Cheung's brooding and fragile nightmares. Xiaolou's part in the opera is that of King Chu, a revered hero in the old society of China. Through his role, Xiaolou tries in vain to stabilize his friend and partner.

The gender issue in "Concubine" reflects in bright tones and sharp lines what China has endured for most of the 20th century. From the occupation of Beijing by the Japanese in the '30s to Chairman Mao

Miramax Films

"Stage brothers" Xiaolou and Dieyi face political and personal turmoil in the intimate epic "Farewell My Concubine," playing tonight through Saturday at the Bijou.

Tse-Tung's declaration of the "Cultural Revolution" in the '60s, Kaige keeps the events swirling behind the actors and their fight for survival.

"Concubine" 's story moves from simple to complex, from poetic to horrifying with an almost shocking ease. Again, Kaige gets high marks for balancing his backdrop with his actors — and the actors, Cheung, Fengyi and Gong Li (as Juxian, Xiaolou's wife), who must be monolithic enough to outshine the film's history and establish themselves, create enough electricity and magnetism to carry Kaige's vision.

Even "Concubine" 's cinematography stands almost defiantly on its own. In luscious reds and icy blues, Kaige and his production designers have created a texture for the film that often threatens to overwhelm the viewer. A period and its culture have been reproduced with love and reverence, leaving one again with a sense of pure wonder for Kaige's control of the elements of his film.

"Concubine" is a lavish and often overpowering experience. It's very rare that a film which can truly be called an "epic" gives us the chance to see into the lives of the people caught inside its massive gears. These very human moments, balanced with almost inhuman dexterity, cause "Farewell My Concubine" to burn with a delicate passion and to leave smoke in our eyes for days after the lights come up.

"Farewell My Concubine" plays at the Bijou tonight at 8:15, Friday at 7 p.m. and Saturday at 9:15 p.m.

Awards honor popular rap artists, performers

Jesse Washington
Associated Press

NEW YORK — The rap community handed out its own awards Monday night, in a ceremony sponsored by Source magazine, which covers hip-hop music, culture and politics. The goal was to recognize artists who make often overlooked contributions to a genre that sold nearly $1 billion worth of records last year, publisher David Mays said.

"This is where it's at. We don't need no Grammys; we don't need no American Music Awards," radio host Ed Lover told the crowd.

"It's about time they started recognizing us based on talent, not sales or crossover appeal," said rapper Method Man. "Hip-hop comes from the streets. Those awards shows don't know nothing about that, so they always pass over the real for the fake."

Winners were selected through ballots mailed to 10,000 Source subscribers nationwide with no music industry affiliations.

Source award winners:
BEST ARTIST OF THE YEAR, GROUP: A Tribe Called Quest
ARTIST, SOLO: Dr. Dre
NEW ARTIST, GROUP: Wu-Tang Clan
NEW ARTIST, SOLO: Snoop Doggy Dogg
LYRICIST, GROUP OR SOLO: Snoop Doggy Dogg
ALBUM: The Chronic, Dr. Dre
SINGLE: "Method Man," Wu-Tang Clan
MOTION PICTURE SOUNDTRACK: Menace II Society Soundtrack
ACTING PERFORMANCE IN MOVIE OR TELEVISION ROLE: MC Ehl, "Menace II Society"
R & B ARTIST, GROUP OR SOLO: Mary J. Blige
PRODUCER: Dr. Dre
DANCE-HALL ARTIST, GROUP OR SOLO: Buju Banton
LIVE PERFORMER, GROUP OR SOLO: Ice Cube, "Check Yo Self"
