No apologies offered at forum on statue

Chris Pothoven
The Daily Iowan

The director of the UI School of Social Work said he felt like Daniel walking into the lion's den when he entered Wednesday night's forum on the removal and destruction of the social work statue.

Martin Tracy, director of the UI School of Social Work, admitted the removal of the statue was not well-planned, but did not apologize for the decision.

il, the forum raised fundamental questions about the right to freedom from degradation vs. the preservation of art in front of an audience of 30.

Barbara McDonald, the social work alumna who discovered the damaged statue, said the issue raised a number of questions, including how to deal with controversial art, whether nudity is always objectionable and whether art is responsible for producing a universal image that is acceptable to all.

As a social worker, I believe the way we treat our artwork is also a reflection of the way we treat each other," she said. "To me, this goes far beyond the treatment of one small statue. Ultimately, we are talking about what kind of future we are choosing to make for ourselves."

Martin Tracy, director of the UI School of Social Work, admitted the removal of the statue was not well-planned, but did not apologize for the decision.

"The statue was offensive to the faculty and offensive to the students because it is a symbol of a dominant structure, a dominant culture, that does not adequately provide for the protection of minority rights," he said.

Tracy asked the media and public to give as much consideration to basic human rights as it has to the preservation of art.

"Why is a broken and abused statue more newsworthy in Iowa than a thousand broken and abused families?" he asked.

The destruction of the statue could be compared to efforts to ban the dances of Illi-

$1.75 MILLION PROJECT

Sky boxes still a go despite criticism

Chris Pothoven
The Daily Iowan

Recent faculty criticism over the press box renovation and sky box construction at Kinnick Stadium has not deterred plans to begin the project this summer, according to UI officials.

Richard Gibson, UI director of planning and administrative services, said foundation and structural work will begin this summer on the renovation project. The sky box construction and major refurbishing of the press box will begin next fall, following the final home football game.

The $1.75 million project has come under fire recently from many UI faculty members, especially following last month's approval from the Iowa state Board of Regents. After the UI sought and gained the board's approval for the project, UI linguistics Professor Robert Wachal resigned from the Campus Planning Committee.

Wachal said the administration ignored the input of the advisory committee, which approved the initial sky box project in January but declined to take action in March on a revised proposal to add the five lower-level sky boxes.

At that meeting, some members objected to giving better seating based on financial contributions. Members also were concerned the design submitted in March would eliminate general seating from Kinnick, but UI officials later said the proposal was changed because of those concerns.

Wachal said he has talked to 30-40 people who feel the project is elitist and that it should not be undertaken when other campus buildings are in greater need of basic repairs and renovations.

"There are a lot of people concerned about the priorities at this university and about the emphasis the administration places on those priorities," he said.

The issue also came up at last week's UI Faculty Senate meeting.

Movie theaters switch to healthier popcorn

NEW YORK (AP) — Pop! Go the calories.

The major theater chains say they will start popping popcorn in canola oil rather than artery-clogging coconut oil. One chain says it will even begin offering an air-popped alternative.

The happy ending is in response to a report last week that movie popcorn is unacceptably high in saturated fat.

"Our goal is to provide our patrons with a healthier choice at our concession stands," Sony Theatres-Loews Theatres said Tuesday.

The New York-based chain, which has almost 1,000 screens in 15 states, said the change would go into effect by May 13.

Seventy percent of movie theater popcorn is made with saturated fat-laden coconut oil, according to the Center for Science in Public Interest. A typical small bag of theater popcorn, about seven cups, contains almost an entire day's allowance of saturated fat.

A medium bucket with "butter" has 56 grams of saturated fat and trans fatty acid, the center said. That's more artery-clogging fat than you get eating a bacon and eggs breakfast, a Big Mac, a large fries and a steak dinner with sour cream.

Commercial photographer fined for harassing whales

HONOLULU (AP) — A commercial photographer who sold footage to television's "1 Witness Video" of a pilot whale biting his assistant was fined $10,000 for whale harassment.

The fine, the maximum possible in a whale harassment case, was levied Tuesday against Lee Tepley.

Tepley, an experienced underwater photographer, should have known better than to violate the Marine Mammal Protection Act by chasing a pod of whales, said Hugh Dolan, the federal administrative law judge who fined him.

Caning sentence reduced to four lashes

Denis D. Gray
Associated Press

SINGAPORE — The father of an American teen-ager sentenced to a lashing for vandalism denounced Singapore's reduction of his sentence Wednesday as a ploy to defuse criticism of a "barbaric punishment."

Citing close relations with the United States, the government reduced Michael Fay's sentence from six lashes to four, noting that President Clinton had publicly commented on the case three times.

"To reject his appeal totally would show an unhelpful disregard for the president and the domestic pressures on him on this issue," a statement said.

It said the Cabinet had advised President Ong Teng Cheong to reduce the sentence, advice the president must act on according to law. The statement did not say when the painful strokes with a 4-foot-long, half-inch-thick rattan rod would be meted out.

Fay, 18, of Kettering, Ohio, is serving a four-month jail term for spray-painting cars and other acts of vandalism in October. Several other youthful expatriates were arrested and some face similar charges.

In Ohio, Fay's father, George, said the reduced sentence "changes nothing as far as I'm concerned. It is barbaric punishment for a crime not committed."

"Obviously, four strokes are better than six," the elder Fay, an automotive supply company chief executive, said Tuesday. "But it infuriates me that they are trying to defuse this issue by such a lame effort as to reduce this barbaric punishment by

SOME CONFLICTS STILL UNRESOLVED

Palestinians welcome dawning of self-rule

Donna Abu-Nasr
Associated Press

GAZA CITY, Gaza Strip — Palestinians stepped into a new era of self-rule in Gaza and Jericho on Wednesday after 27 years of Israeli occupation, cheering the arrival of PLO police commanders and the release of Palestinian prisoners.

The signing of the Palestinian self-rule agreement after months of torturous negotiations left important issues unresolved, and the changeover was expected to be rocky. But the prospect of autonomy and an eventual Palestinian state produced remarkable displays of goodwill in areas torn by six years of violence.

Newly freed Palestinian prisoners posed for pictures and shook hands with Israeli soldiers and some people released doves. Children in the West Bank town of Jericho showered an Israeli police car with flowers.

Israeli soldiers shouted "shalom" at passing Palestinian cars.

"This is the beginning of the changes we will see on the ground soon. It's the beginning of the translation of the historic agreement," said Col. Maher Fara, a spokesman for the Palestinian police force that will patrol the autonomous zones in the Gaza Strip and around Jericho.

Despite the formal signing ceremony in Cairo, Egypt, three main issues remained unresolved: the release of non-PLO Palestinian prisoners from Israeli jails, the size of the Jericho area and Palestinian demands to have at least a symbolic police presence at border crossings.

Israeli Prime Minister Yitzhak Rabin and PLO leader Yasser Arafat, bartering even as the ceremony unfolded, signed the 200-page document that emerged from nearly seven months of talks repeatedly interrupted by violence and temporary deadlocks. An outline of autonomy was signed Sept. 13 in Washington, but this document filled in the details.

Juveniles say racism involved in police acts

Four black juveniles suspected of car theft, shoplifting and carrying a weapon at Sycamore Mall Tuesday night were detained by Iowa City police at gunpoint and searched before they were released — spurring charges of racism.

Police responded around 8:15 to a series of calls from mall stores reporting a possible shoplifting ring.

When the officers arrived, mall employees reported that the four suspects dropped the merchandise in the parking lot and fled to a car. The car had been reported stolen from Palo, Eric Thompson practices with the UI Hawkeye Marching Band in San Antonio, Texas, during the band's trip to the Alamo Bowl last December. Thompson, like several other UI students, spends his summers participating in the rigors of drum corps.

Marching toward perfection

Chris Pothoven
The Daily Iowan

Like many UI students, sophomore Pam Boyer will be working long, hard hours in the hot summer sun battling vicious mosquitoes. Unlike other students, she will be paying more than $600 to do so.

Boyer is planning to spend her summer vacation practicing and performing in the horn line of the Colts drum and bugle corps from Dubuque, one of Iowa's two drum corps. As one of the 128 members of the corps, Boyer will travel across both Iowa and the United States working intensively to perfect one 11-minute show for competition with other groups from the United States and Canada.

"I've always been interested in marching. I've seen videos of shows and it looked really cool," said Boyer, who is also a member of the Hawkeye Marching Band. "But it took (UI students) Adam Brewer and Stephanie Reese to convince me to try it. Knowing someone, and seeing how much fun they had, made it more personal. They made me see I could do it too."

Last year the Colts placed 12th at the Drum Corps International Championships — their highest finish ever. This year the group is performing an all jazz show that including songs like "Smile," "Almost Being in Love," "Loverman," "Higher and Higher" and "As Time Goes By."

The other corps based in Iowa is the Nite Express from Cedar Rapids, which placed sixth in Division II championships last year with a theme that used music by the rock group Queen. Their show for this summer is based on music from the group Emerson, Lake and Palmer.

Drum corps share some similarities with marching bands, although most members are quick to separate the two. Music, drill (the formations on the field) and color guard routines (using flags, rifles, sabers, props and dance) generally are much more difficult in drum corps. Show themes are also more complex and members strive for a higher level of execution.

Auditions are usually held from November to January. Then until May, most corps hold one to two weekend camps each week to work on music, marching skills, drill and equipment work. After school gets out in May and June, members begin moving to the corps' hometown for up to a month of intense practices before touring across the United States.

Boyer went to her first camp in January. "It was kind of intimidating at first," she said. "But now that I'm more confident about playing a bugle, it's a lot of fun."

Like Boyer, UI freshman Amy Dettmann is also beginning her first year with the Colts, performing in the color guard. "The people are the best part. The people in drum corps really want to do it and want to be there," she said. "There's a lot more spirit than in a marching band. Everyone is working hard on perfecting one complex show, so it's a lot more fun."

For the privilege of giving up their summers to countless hours of practice and performance, corps members pay anywhere from $200 to $1,000 or more. This also entitles them to long nights of bus travel, sleeping bag accommodations on high-school gym floors, lukewarm locker room showers and picnic dinners in school parking lots.

Few, however, say they would give any of that up.

"The two things that stand out in my mind are the friends and the performances," said UI freshman Adam Brewer, who is in his fourth year with the Colts. "You meet so many people that you keep in touch with after the summer, and you get the thrill of playing for crowds

Drum Corps Competitions

This summer there will be eight major drum corps competitions held in Iowa.

The competitions will be held on:

Source: Drum Corps World DI/ME every night."

Members must be dedicated to produce a good show. During the summer, a typical day may begin with a wake-up call at 8 a.m., marching or music basics from 9 a.m. to noon, lunch, field rehearsal from 1-4 p.m., a full corps run-through of the show at 4 p.m., free time and supper until competition warm-up begins at 7 p.m. and a performance at 8 p.m. On a non-performance day, members often practice from 10 to 12 hours outside.

"There are some low points from the rigors of tour, when you have to pick yourself up and keep going," Brewer said. "If you have a bad rehearsal day, you just have to keep pushing. The work pays off."

The season of practices and competition culminates in mid-August with the weeklong DCI Championships, also known as "The Summer Music Games," during which champions are crowned in each of the three classes. This year's championships will be held in Boston.

Other than winning, one of the top honors for a corps is to make the Top 12 finals competition of the top class, held Saturday night of championships week. The Colts broke into the Top 12 for the first time ever last summer, placing 12th.

"That's got to be the proudest moment of my entire life without a doubt," Brewer said. "When they announced that we had made finals, I had never felt that much emotion before."

Besides going to the Colts or Nite Express, UI students also travel out of state to march with groups like the Cavaliers from Illinois, the Blue Devils from California or last year's champions, the Cadets of Bergen County from New Jersey.

Current or past members of corps often feel a special bond with each other. A corps T-shirt may often be the only thing needed to start a conversation, because as Dettmann explained, outsiders can't quite fully understand the drum corps experience.

"You really don't know what it's like until you do it, and you really can't describe drum corps to someone who hasn't marched," she said.

Take notice that the following hydroelectric application has been filed with the Federal Energy Regulatory Commission and is available for public inspection:

a. Type of Application: Preliminary Permit
b. Project No.: 11463-000
c. Date Filed: March 22, 1994
d. Applicant: White Hydropower Company
e. Name of Project: Coraville Hydro Project
f. Location: On the Iowa River, near Iowa City in Johnson County, Iowa
g. Filer Pursuant to: Federal Power Act 16 U.S.C. §5791(a)-(g) (25)(f)
h. Applicant Contact: Mr. Mitchell M. White, White Hydropower Company, 1855 Glendale Road, Clinton, IA 52732; (319) 242-1776
i. FERC Contact: Ed Lee (202) 219-2809
j. Comment Date: June 13, 1994

k. Description of Project: The proposed project would utilize the U.S. Army Corps of Engineers Coraville Dam and Reservoir, and would consist of the following new facilities: (1) a steel penstock; (2) a powerhouse containing two generating units for a total installed capacity of two generating units for a total installed capacity of 12 MW; (3) a tailrace; (4) a 5-mile-long, 13.8-kV transmission line; and (5) appurtenant facilities. The average annual generation would be 52.56 GWh. The applicant estimates annual generation would be 52.56 GWh. The applicant estimates the cost of the studies under permit on the terms of the permit would be $150,000. All power generated would be sold to a local utility company. The project lock and dam is owned and operated by the U.S. Army Corps of Engineers. The project lock and dam is owned and operated by the U.S. Army Corps of Engineers.

l. This notice also consists of the following standard paragraphs: AS, A7, A8, A10, B, C and D2.

A5. Preliminary Permit - Any qualified applicant desiring to file a competing application for a preliminary permit for a proposed project must submit to the Commission, on or before the specified comment date for the particular application, the competing application or a notice of intent to file such an application (see 18 CFR 4.36). Submitting a timely notice of intent allows an interested person to file the competing preliminary permit application no later than 30 days after the specified comment date for the particular application.

A6. Competing preliminary permit application must conform with 18 CFR 4.30 (b) (1) and (4) and 4.36.

A7. Preliminary Permit - Any qualified applicant desiring to file a competing application for a preliminary permit for a proposed project must submit to the Commission, on or before the specified comment date for the particular application, either the competing development application or a notice of intent to file such an application. Submitting a timely notice of intent allows an interested person to file the competing application no later than 120 days after the specified comment date for the particular application. A competing license application must conform with 18 CFR 4.30 (b) (1) and 4.36.

A9. Notice of Intent - A notice of intent must specify the exact name, business address, and telephone number of the prospective applicant, and must include an unequivocal statement of intent to submit, if such an application may be filed, either a preliminary permit application or a development application (specify which type of application). A notice of intent must be served on the applicant's name in this public notice.

A10. Proposed Scope of Studies Under Permit - A preliminary permit, if issued, does not authorize construction. The term of the proposed under the preliminary permit would include economic analysis, preparation of preliminary engineering plans, and a study of environmental impacts. Based on the results of these studies, the applicant would decide whether to proceed with the preparation of a development application to construct and operate the project.

B. Comments, Protests, or Motions to Intervene - Anyone may submit comments, a protest, or a motion to intervene in accordance with the requirements of the Rules of Practice and Procedure, 18 C.F.R. sections 385.210, 211, and 214. In determining the appropriate action to take, the Commission will consider all protests or other comments filed, but only those who file a motion to intervene in accordance with the Commission's Rules may become a party to the proceeding. Any comments, protests, or motions to intervene must be received on or before the specified comment date for the particular application.

C. Filing and Service of Responsive Documents - Any filing must bear in the top left corner the title "COMMENTS," "RECOMMENDATIONS FOR TERMS AND CONDITIONS," "NOTICE OF INTENT TO FILE A DEVELOPMENT APPLICATION," "COMPETING APPLICATION," "PROTEST," or "MOTION TO INTERVENE," as applicable, and the project number of the particular application to which the filing is in response. Any of the documents must be filed by providing the original and the number of copies required by the Commission's regulations to the Secretary, Federal Energy Regulatory Commission, 825 North Capitol Street, N.E., Washington, D.C. 20426. An additional copy must be sent to the Director, Division of Project Review, Office of Hydropower Licensing, Federal Energy Regulatory Commission, Room 1027-UCP, at the above address. A copy of any notice of intent, competing application, or motion to intervene must also be served upon each representative of the applicant specified in the particular application.

D2. Agency Comments - The Commission invites federal, state, and local agencies to file comments on the described application. (An agency may obtain a copy of the application directly from the applicant.) If an agency does not file comments within the time specified for filing comments, the Commission will presume that the agency has no comment. One copy of an agency's comments must also be sent to the applicant's representatives.

BUTTOCK PHOTOS COULD BE WORTH A FORTUNE American teen-ager could make millions from caning ordeal

Denis D. Gray
Associated Press

SINGAPORE — An American teen-ager sentenced to be lashed for vandalism could get rich if he or his family accept some of the offers pouring in for movies, story rights and television appearances.

Michael Fay's divorced parents say they have both been approached by publicity agents but have not yet accepted any offers or hired agents themselves. His mother says she may write a book about the case.

"We are greatly interested in the story. ... We hope to get both parents and the boy," said David Schmidt, who runs DHS Public Relations of Phoenix. His clients have included Jeff Gillooly, figure skater Tonya Harding's ex-husband.

He added, however, that the "window of opportunity is very limited" for the Fays and said they will lose out if they don't act soon.

"Time is of the essence in getting top dollar," he noted, saying he has presented both parents with a proposal to be their exclusive representative.

Fay, an 18-year-old high-school senior, is currently in jail awaiting four searingly painful strokes of a rattan cane for spray-painting cars and other acts of vandalism.

His original sentence of six lashes was reduced Wednesday by the Singapore government in deference to President Clinton's interest in the case and relations between the two countries.

Randy Chan, Michael's mother, resides in Singapore and has been besieged daily by the media, including the major U.S. networks. His father, George Fay, lives in suburban Dayton, Ohio. He has appeared on television talk shows and been under a similar media barrage.

One American publicity agent who spoke on condition of anonymity claimed that photographs or film of Fay's lashed buttocks could command at least $1 million.

Book rights, the agent said, could be worth another million dollars, while full movie rights could bring in anywhere from $750,000 to $1.3 million.

UISA senators lobby Congress members

Molly Spann
The Daily Iowan

Five UI Student Association senators got a taste of national politics last week as they lobbied in Washington, D.C., for more student financial aid.

Improving health care for students and changes in the National Security Education program were also on the UISA senators' agenda.

UISA Sen. Jon Fogarty said the group accomplished what they wanted to on the trip.

"The main goal was to express our views and to be heard," he said. "I don't know if we'll ever know if we were actually responsible for changes from this one trip, but I feel very positive about it."

UISA Sen. Jennifer Dawson said the lobbying was a success.

"I think we made them aware, especially of the financial aid issues," she said. "We let them know that the cuts they have proposed are very dangerous to students."

"It was definitely important for us to go there. As much as they try to keep in contact with people in this state, they tend to lose contact with students."

Jennifer Dawson, UISA senator, on lobbying legislators in Washington, D.C. for more student financial aid Fogarty said they met with the staff of Iowa Reps. Jim Leach and Neil Smith and Sens. Tom Harkin and Charles Grassley.

Dawson said it is important to let legislators in Washington know the priorities of students.

"It was definitely important for us to go there," she said. "As much as they try to keep in contact with people in this state, they tend to lose contact with students."

Most of the staff was very receptive to what the senators had to say, Fogarty said.

"They were very happy to see us," he said. "They were very attentive and willing to listen to us, except for Grassley."

Fogarty said a woman in Grassley's office was not interested in discussing increases in financial aid for students.

"She was very adversarial," he said. "She seemed more interested in telling us about when she was a law student, and she wasn't interested in hearing about what we had to say about life as an average student at the UI."

Fogarty said they returned to Grassley's office the next day, but no one was there. Grassley will be contacted about the meeting, he said.

The senators made many good contacts in Washington for future lobbying efforts, Fogarty said.

'PROACTIVE' PLAN PROFFERED

Safe school strategy proposed by task force

William Pepper
The Daily Iowan

Growing national awareness about the dangers of violence and weapons has led the Iowa City School District's strategic planning team to add a provision for a safe school environment to the plan.

Much of the discussion at a press conference held Tuesday centered on the team's decision to add the new strategy to the formerly seven-part plan, pending school board approval. The conference was called to review the former agenda, which was created in 1991.

The planning team intends to have specific action plans developed by October.

School Superintendent Barb Grohe, who served as facilitator for the strategic planning process, said national awareness about youth safety today is much different than it was in 1991.

"We want to be proactive rather than reactive," she said.

The strategic plan contains seven strategies for improving education, each of which has separate "action plans," or specific ways to carry out the strategy. Each year, a group of 30 original team members and new volunteers review the progress of the plan.

The district also recently passed a strict weapons policy which recommends mandatory suspensions and possible expulsions for students who bring weapons to school. In addition, the district has a number of policies on substance abuse, harassment and conflict resolution.

School board and strategic planning team member Mike Howard said the addition of the strategy on safety reflects the planning team's commitment to address social concerns like weapons, substance abuse and teen pregnancy.

"We're going to give this our best collective effort," he said. "We've decided to do something new and we're going to do it right."

Grohe said a wide range of experts from different areas, including law enforcement authorities, district administrators and community members, will work on the planning committee for the strategy.

"This isn't something the school district alone can take care of," she said. "People from different backgrounds often generate better solutions than any of those people would alone."

TEIKYO WESTMAR ADMINISTRATORS RESIGN

University's future threatened by fiscal problems

Associated Press

LE MARS, Iowa — Three administrators at Teikyo Westmar University have resigned, just one month after Joseph Olander, the school's president, also abruptly stepped down.

The upheaval has prompted students to worry that financial problems could close their school.

"Tomorrow is our last day of school and we just don't feel like we're getting the truth," said junior

Lisa Langlitz of Aurelia, president of the student government.

Richard Phillips, vice president for enrollment management, and Ron Koehn, an executive assistant to the president in charge of international programs, are leaving the university, officials said. Their resignations were effective Monday at 4 p.m. A third administrator, Robert Head, vice president for finance, also has resigned, university officials said Tuesday.

The administrators and university had no comment.

But David Hannie, Westmar's interim president, has said that budget problems forced him to ask the school's vice presidents to take a "significant" cut in pay.

Langlitz blamed those pay cuts for the administrators' resignations and those of some Westmar faculty members.

"Some of them have already decided to leave and others just don't know what to do right now," she said.

Olander, who had been president at Westmar since 1992, resigned last month after disagreements with the school's board of trustees.

Langlitz said students are wondering if Westmar will eventually have to close.

"I'll probably have a year and a half left and it's kind of late to transfer anywhere else," Langlitz said. "And I don't really want to."

Newspaper printing press worker guilty of off-hours counterfeiting

Associated Press

SIoux CITY, Iowa — A newspaper printer who made counterfeit bills on his employer's printing presses has been sentenced to almost three years in prison, U.S. attorney Stephen Rapp said.

U.S. District Judge Donald O'Brien on Wednesday sentenced David Koth, 28, of Marcus to 33 months in prison on federal charges of counterfeiting $20 bills.

Rapp said Koth used printing equipment at the Marcus News, a weekly Marcus newspaper, to print fake bills last November. At least 14 of those bills were passed in LeMars, Sheldon, Paullina, Remsen and Merrill that month, he said.

In addition to the prison sentence, Koth was ordered to serve a three-year term of supervised release after his release from prison. He also was ordered to pay $280 restitution and a $50 fine.

New site sought for cage trial

Associated Press

CHARLES CITY, Iowa — A north central Iowa woman accused of tying up her mother and keeping her in a cage in freezing weather wants her trial moved out of Floyd County.

Diana Giambelluca, 43, and her husband, Lawrence Giambelluca, 44, were arrested last November after Iowa state troopers found her mother outside in a cage.

They are accused of tying Diana's 73-year-old mother to a chair inside a fence topped with barbed wire. The woman, Dorothy Diebold, was treated for hypothermia.

The couple, who live near Rudd, have pleaded innocent to 10 felony counts, including attempted murder and first-degree kidnapping. They are scheduled to go on trial on Sept. 7.

Diana Giambelluca's attorneys this week asked that her trial be moved to another location because of pretrial publicity. Attorneys for her husband have not made a similar request.

The Giambellucas also are charged in a separate civil lawsuit of swindling Diana's mother of $77,000.

HUTUS, TUTSIS DENY INVOLVEMENT

U.N. sites suspected as targets in Rwanda

Terry Leonard
Associated Press

NAIROBI, Kenya — Troops of Rwanda's rival ethnic groups battled in the capital with artillery Wednesday, and the United Nations said fears that renegade government soldiers were purposefully firing at U.N. compounds.

Mortar rounds blasted the airport, severely wounding a U.N. soldier from Ghana, and shells also fell outside U.N. headquarters in the city center, U.N. spokesman Abdul Kabia said by telephone from Kigali, the capital.

The army of the Hutu-dominated government and the mostly Tutsi rebel Rwandan Patriotic Front both denied firing any rounds that hit near U.N. positions, Kabia said.

"If that is true, that means there is a third force that is capable of doing this and that is worrying us," Kabia said, speculating the shells were fired by soldiers who are no longer obeying the army command. "They might be trying to make life so uncomfortable for us that we will have to leave."

The United Nations already has reduced its peacekeeping force from 2,500 to under 500 because of the widespread fighting that has killed at least 100,000 Rwandans over the past month.

Kabia noted three U.N. soldiers were wounded at the airport by shelling Tuesday and pointed to other signs that army units were acting on their own after a month of bloodletting between majority Hutus and minority Tutsis.

On Tuesday, Hutu soldiers and militiamen ignored a safe-conduct guarantee from the army chief of staff and used machetes to severely wound seven Tutsis in a group of refugees being escorted to the airport by U.N. troops. After a two-hour standoff, the group was forced to return to the Milles Collines hotel.

"They said they didn't care about the letter from the army chief of staff. They said they didn't take orders from the chief of staff," Kabia said.

The fighting in Rwanda began after the president, a Hutu, died in a mysterious plane crash April 6. The next day, the presidential guard, renegade army units and civilian militias went on a killing spree in the capital, murdering Cabinet ministers, Tutsis and U.N. peacekeepers.

The slaughter led the Tutsi rebels to resume a civil war that had been on hold since a peace agreement was signed last August.

U.N. officials met with Rwanda's army commanders Wednesday, seeking an army escort to help move to safer locations nearly 300 refugees at the Milles Collines hotel and 6,000 others at a church and school.

Rwanda unrest

Developments in Rwanda:

- 1) Mortar rounds blasted the airport, severely wounding a U.N. soldier from Ghana, and shells also fell outside U.N. headquarters in the Kigali city center.
- 2) On Tuesday, Hutu soldiers and militiamen ignored a safe-conduct guarantee from the army chief of staff and used machetes to severely wound seven Tutsis in a group of refugees being escorted to the airport by U.N. troops. After a two-hour standoff, the group was forced to return to Kigali.
- 3) The International Red Cross evacuated 350 children and 25 adult staffers from an orphanage in Gisenyi across the border into Zaire on Tuesday.
- 4) The United Nations received other reports of ethnic massacres in Butare and in Cyangugu.

AP/Wm. J. Castello

The International Red Cross said in Geneva that it evacuated 350 children and 25 adult staffers from an orphanage in Gisenyi, in northwestern Rwanda, across the border into Zaire on Tuesday.

The Red Cross said Tuesday that 21 orphans were slain by militiamen in Butare on Sunday, along with 13 Rwandan Red Cross workers who tried to protect them. It said the slain children "were selected on an ethnic basis" from a group of 500 orphans evacuated last month from Kigali, 50 miles to the north.

Kabia said the United Nations was getting other reports of ethnic massacres in Butare and in Cyangugu in southwestern Rwanda.

On Wednesday, Amnesty International, the international human rights group, endorsed greater U.N. involvement and criticized the "failure of the international community to effectively deal with the horrendous massacres."

BUSH CRITICIZED

Biting autobiography published by Quayle

Christopher Connell
Associated Press

WASHINGTON — Dan Quayle says he thought of running for president himself when the Reagan administration was immersed in hot water over the Iran-Contra affair.

But he shelved the idea after it became clear "that the administration was bouncing back and that George Bush would be running in 1988," Quayle writes in his new autobiography.

"Standing Firm," the tale of Quayle's four turbulent years as vice president, portrays him as the victim of relentless media bias from the day he joined Bush as his surprise running mate in New Orleans during the Republican convention to the Murphy Brown brouhaha over family values.

Quayle has not only authored a 402-page set-the-record-straight book, but narrated excerpts on two audio cassettes. He will be selling both on a 36-city tour over the next two months in a return to public life that could presage a run for the GOP presidential nomination in 1996.

"I certainly don't regard the Bush presidency as a failed one, but when any administration ends up not getting itself re-elected and receiving only 37 percent of the vote, historians look for the moment when things went off track," said Quayle.

He points the finger at Bush's 1990 decision to break his pledge not to raise taxes.

The Bush administration, "even before the gulf war, had begun to suffer from a perception that it was intellectually out of gas, that it was bored and disengaged when it came to imagining solutions for our more intractable problems here at home," Quayle said.

"Midway through what we still thought would be only George Bush's first term, his administration had begun to appear merely competent without any driving creed," he said.

"Cabinet meetings in the Bush White House were stilted, boring affairs," he said.

The 1992 campaign "was prone to gaffes, and this time none of them were being charged to me," he said, and Bush "was deferring to campaign advisers because he lacked confidence as a politician."

Quayle criticized former President Carter's trips abroad, saying he seeks too much publicity. "He often criticizes the sitting president and he winds up being distinctly unhelpful at times," said Quayle.

INTENSIVE SUMMER

ARABIC

THE UNIVERSITY OF CHICAGO
JUNE 19 - AUGUST 20, 1994

Its characters form some of the most ancient literature known to humanity.

It is the devotional language of more than 1 billion Muslims throughout the world and the daily language of more than 180 million people in more than 20 Middle Eastern countries.

Current events indicate its role as the language of a region of crucial international importance.

This summer the University of Chicago is once again offering an extraordinary opportunity to earn a full year's credit in the study of this fascinating and beautiful language.

This Intensive Arabic Program offers proficiency-based instruction in Modern Standard Arabic, the literary Arabic used throughout the Middle East for official communications, including broadcasting and publishing. Six hours of daily instruction in the classroom and the language lab, in addition to supervised study, will help you master the intricacies of conversation, reading, writing, and listening comprehension at the elementary, intermediate, high intermediate, or advanced level. Three-course sequences at each level provide 300 credit units, equivalent to 15 quarter hours or 10 semester hours.

Students will enjoy weekly lectures in Arabic and English on Middle East topics by leading experts in the field, and participate in Arabic-language extra-curricular activities including drama, poetry, storytelling, debate and newspaper groups. Instruction will also be supplemented by cultural activities including lectures, films, outings, and performances to broaden understanding of various facets of life in the Arab world.

To request a Bulletin describing this program and other summer courses, call (312) 702-2450 or write:

TUITION

Is education something that can be bought?

"Everything you're taught in law school can be taught when you're 6 years old. But they make you wait and wait and wait and, of course, the information is then sold. But what if you can't afford to pay? You walk around ignorant all day. The pimp doesn't care. It's really your decision. Kick up that money, ho! — Oops! I mean tuition. They like to dis. Their ass you like to kiss. Sitting in a room with a liar and you must listen."

— Hip-hop artist KRS-ONE.

As profound as he is poetic, KRS-ONE is telling us that our system of so-called higher education is flawed. His first point is that education should be free. The kind of learning we receive from our post-secondary institutions can be taught to us in kindergarten. Instead, we must wait while we are force-fed the "value" of obtaining a college education from the time we are able to read until we graduate. The "value" of an education should be our immersion into the experience of life and learning. This kind of intrinsic educational value is free. We savor it as early as the age of 6. Twenty-two years after birth and $30,000 later, after paying for a "degree" from a "university," a select few may be ready for the rigors of law school. They had also better be ready to shell out an additional $15,000. Educational value to regents and administrators means how much money they can squeeze out of our pockets.

What if you can't afford to pay? Americans cry about the pathological conditions of poverty, joblessness, homelessness, etc. in this country. Many do not know what to do about these myriad problems. Certainly, they understand the power of education to effect a positive change in the minds of individuals in desperate situations. A transformation toward a healthier state of mind is the first step before we can begin to change the depraved physical conditions that ravage this country. The present "value" of an education is such that only those who can afford to get it become clued into the unlimited possibilities to generate fundamental social change. The rest of us walk around ignorant all day.

The pimps, administrators and officials don't care. They would rather have you dangling in front of them — powerless, marginalized. They throw the American dream in your face, and blame you for not being able to live up to it. Of course, they did the same thing. Now, it has placed them in positions of authority, giving them the ability to commodify intangible entities like education — and save it for themselves.

If you want it, "kick up that money, ho!" Tuition has become synonymous with education. Why? There is no necessary correlation between the two words. KRS-ONE is correct to call us "hos," or prostitutes. Hookers don't need a pimp to sell sex. We don't need to pay tuition to become educated. But we are being pimped by an institution that makes it so. We work hard and learn and then feed our money to the system.

Sitting in a room with a liar and we must listen. The question then becomes, what are we learning when we get here? Self-knowledge to assist us in our transformation and prepare us for a change in the repository of truth? Not presently. Not unless we ask questions — and demand answers. Think about it. Do things have to be this way? Is the dominant European ideology currently flooding the world our only answer? It is really your decision.

Watergate can't be dismissed as 'misstep'

To the Editor:

I am writing in response to Stefan L. Jouret's guest column on April 27, "In praise of Richard Nixon." While Mr. Jouret is correct in asserting that "we should look to the whole record" in assessing Nixon's life and career, he is also too quick to dismiss the true scandal that Watergate was.

Jouret begins by asserting that it is incorrect to look at Watergate as "evidence of some major character flaw." I don't understand how abusing official power, lying, betraying the American public's trust, waging huge spying campaigns on enemies and sanctioning lawbreaking as a means to retain power could not be construed as evidence of major character flaws.

It is difficult to see how Jouret's term "dignity" could ever enter any discourse involving Watergate. It is arguably the greatest singular crisis with regard to the American public's trust in the government. By the same token, it is a major mistake to dismiss Watergate as "a single misstep." Watergate was a series of major crimes over a long period of time.

Calling this series of events a "misstep" misses the enormity of the crisis.

Citing Nixon as an anti-communist who was able to engineer detente with the former Soviet Union is also misleading. If not for anti-communists of Nixon's ilk, we might have had detente 20 years earlier — and at least two fewer wars.

It's true that Nixon's ability to deal with adversity and defeat were admirable, and I am touched by the idea that Nixon represented the ultimate "it ain't over 'til it's over" spirit. However, most of Nixon's adversity and defeat were due to his own policies.

While I certainly don't celebrate Nixon's death as some tasteless people did, I do believe in assessing him without rose-tinted glasses. He did achieve some remarkable things on the foreign policy front, but history must remember that the Watergate scandal overshadowed many of those achievements at the time. We cannot dismiss Watergate as a singular error that has somehow unfairly distorted our memory of Richard Nixon.

Farrakhan only offers easy way out

Possibly the one man in America today who poses the greatest threat to any chance for altruism between the various so-called races of humankind is the Rev. Louis Farrakhan. In his years at the pulpit as a member and, later, leader of the Nation of Islam, Farrakhan has done his very best to demonize the non-black. Malcolm X once preached a ministry of hatred. In fact, he endorsed the following odd idea, which is still embraced by the Nation of Islam today:

In the ancient past (in "true" history, not the history taught in white-controlled schools), when there were only black people and culture and science were evolved far beyond the point which they have reached today, a black scientist undertook evil experiments. He decided to begin an experiment wherein he "grafted" the weaknesses of the black race out. This produced the brown race. Further cycles of this evil scientist's experiment, grafting on layer after layer of weakness, yielded the so-called red and yellow races and eventually the weakest of all: the whites.

Eventually, after Malcolm's hajj, or pilgrimage, to Mecca and upon his decision to embrace true Islam and take on the name El Haj Malik El-Shabazz, he renounced years of blanket indictments on the generic, generalized white person, who he from time to time had referred to as "that old white thing."

It got him killed — by Louis Farrakhan, according to the widow of El-Shabazz, Betty Shabazz, in a widely circulated interview.

And that's when the Nation of Islam split: Some followed Islam, some went their own way and some stuck with Farrakhan and the blanket indictments against the nonblack. In those days, Farrakhan went by the moniker Louis X.

And he hasn't really cooled his spiteful rhetoric in the years since the assassination of Shabazz / X. Indeed — particularly once he decided to pursue a more mainstream, recognizable position as an African-American leader — this habit of dealing out bigoted statements has come back to haunt him.

In a spring 1993 issue of the news and commentary publication In These Times, Farrakhan grudgingly admitted (on the condition that people must have been misinterpreting his meaning) his referring to Judaism as a "wicked religion" and a "gutter religion" and Israel as a "wicked country" might be taken by some to be a racially bigoted, anti-Semitic statement. He insists it was all in the context.

Later, when Nation of Islam lieutenant Khalid Muhammad decided to refer to the Jews as "bloodsuckers ... sucking the life out of the African-American community," Farrakhan very lightly chastised Muhammad for being impolite.

But Farrakhan embraced the "truths" that Muhammad spoke: To Farrakhan it was acceptable to refer to the "truth" that all Jews are inherently "bloodsuckers" who "suck the life out of the African-American community."

Apparently, it's acceptable to make such a bigoted reference if one uses enough tact.

This week, according to The Associated Press, Farrakhan also has come out against all Caucasians because, he informs us, white people favor black-on-black violence. Why? So that Caucasians can get access to healthy black organs.

Farrakhan told a mostly black audience that when a rich white person needs a kidney or a heart, they say "get us a nigger." His speech was delivered to a crowd of roughly 6,000 at a stop-the-violence rally last Saturday night at the University of Toledo.

"When you're killing each other, they can't wait for you to die," the very levelheaded Farrakhan told the audience. "You've become good for parts."

And while no one could ever denigrate Farrakhan for the work he has done for the people of the inner city, what price do those people pay?

To put it another way: Is it worth having the trains run on time if in exchange all one must do is hate whole populations of people?

Bobby Seale, co-founder of the Black Panthers and certainly no conservative, may have put it best in an article which ran in The Daily Iowan on Tuesday, May 2: "There's nothing wrong with being a white person. ... It's about where your heart is. We've got to get everyone beyond this xenophobic isolationism."

Hatred is the easy way out. When people embrace the pigmentation-based rhetoric of Farrakhan or a Hitler (the comparison is made only because Farrakhan has in the past referred to himself as "the black Hitler"), they do not bother themselves with considering the humanity of the individuals they have decided to look down upon: They can tell from across the street who's acceptable and who's not.

They need only gauge whether that person across the street is appropriately pigmented. And that's the simple-minded way out.

Certainly the oppressed have more reason to be angry, to want change and to want out of the system which oppresses them. But does this mean that it is therefore acceptable for them to be bigoted, to train shortsightedness into themselves?

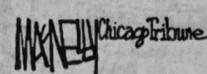

The one way out of this is through understanding — not tolerance, which implies a begrudging attitude, but understanding. Look at the humans you see around you — not the blacks, whites, females, gays, males, Jews, Asians, etc. For in the end, racial supremacy leads to ethnic cleansing.

The bigotry that those of African descent have experienced must not be met with more bigotry, for that reduces the oppressed to the level of their oppressors.

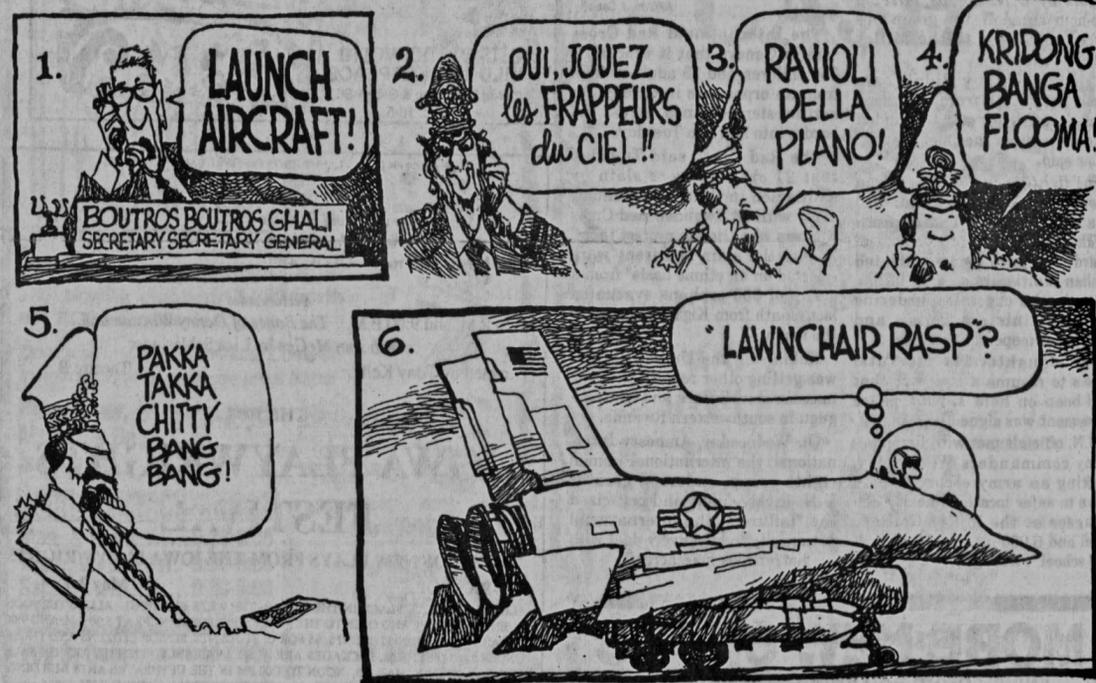

Leave Farrakhan's hate rhetoric, sexism and racial arrogance where they belong: with Louis Farrakhan. Together, we must all learn and, indeed, know to be better than that.

On crime, Congress doesn't have a clue

Congress is going to fling $20 billion or more at crime. They are still mulling over how it will be spent, but we are promised more prisons, cops on the streets and tougher sentencing laws.

But in scanning the day's top crime stories, it is hard to see how the $20 billion and new laws would have prevented any of them.

In the northwest suburbs of Chicago, a likable bartender broods because his girlfriend dumped him. He kidnaps her as she leaves her job, and when the cops close in on his car, he kills her and himself.

Obviously, he wouldn't have been discouraged by any "three strikes and you're out" sentencing threat. Nor would an extra cop or two in his community have made a difference.

About the only way the murder-suicide might have been prevented would have been if he didn't own guns. But he had been a law-abiding person, so there isn't and won't be anything to prevent someone like him from arming himself.

Only a total ban on gun ownership could have stopped him. But Americans don't want a total ban, and no politician would dare suggest it, so the two deaths couldn't be avoided.

On the same page was the story about the arrest in the killing of two men in a suburban pizza parlor. It was a typical, mindless 1990s crime. Two men die, and the total loot was a stereo and $14.

If people are stupid enough to murder for $14 and a stereo, how do you prevent it? You can't. The cops can't, the prosecutors can't, nobody can.

It happens somewhere just about every day. If it isn't a pizza parlor, it's a convenience store, a tavern, a gas station or a taxi. For a small business with open doors, there is safety only in thick bulletproof glass and a pistol within reach.

So what will Congress do — provide every small business with a glass wall and gun of its own? Of course not. It won't do anything except huff and puff and blow a lot of money.

Oh, there is a chance it might ban the so-called assault weapons and limit the size of ammunition clips. And that makes for a good TV sound bite.

But the reality is that assault weapons are used in only a small fraction of crimes. A standard six-shooter is still the weapon of choice for those who want to commit murder.

So if Congress really wanted to prevent shootings such as the above, it would forget about registration, cooling-off periods and background checks and boldly ban all handguns, assault weapons and any other form of firearm.

It can't do that because the majority of Americans would be furious. They want their guns. In recent years, gun ownership has soared. Records indicate that in Chicago's North Shore suburbs, which are much safer than most places, gun ownership has gone up about 400 percent.

What they want is for criminals not to have guns. Unfortunately, there doesn't seem to be a way to keep guns from criminals. Under present and future laws, someone without a criminal record can buy guns. Then they can sell them at a profit to criminals. That happens now, and it will happen after Congress creates new paperwork.

Drugs are also behind much of our crime. The need for it drives users to steal and kill to feed their habit. The profit in it causes dealers to kill rivals over territory.

So Congress will provide some new meaningless laws — maybe a few hundred million for rehab. But they won't do much good because the demand is intense, our borders are sieves, the supply is plentiful and there are billions to be made in profits.

Besides the street crime, the drug industry gives us official corruption. In New York, many cops have given up trying to bust drug dealers. Instead, they take a cut of the business or rob the dealers and sell the stuff themselves. If it's happening in New York, can we doubt that it is happening in other drug-drenched cities?

A friend of mine is a very smart judge who spent several years running a narcotics court. When I asked him how the battle was going he said, "It's over. We lost. The only thing we can do is legalize the stuff."

Of course, if he said that publicly, he would be shouted down, as was Milton Friedman, the Nobel Prize-winning economist. Anyone who talks about putting drugs on the same plane as booze — licenses, taxes, controls and low-cost fixes for hard-core addicts — is considered a nut out to destroy our society.

Those were the same objections I heard about 10 or 12 years ago when I suggested that casino gambling be legalized. How the do-gooders howled.

Now we have riverboat casino gambling all over Illinois. And we are barely keeping up with the competition in all of the other states that have legalized.

But I haven't noticed that the sky has fallen. No, Congress isn't going to do much besides blow hot air and spend a lot of money. It is caught between politics and reality, practicality and the do-gooders, laws written on paper and the laws of the city streets.

Why, not one congressman has mentioned dogs. I note that because I once asked former Chicago police Superintendent James Rochford what the most effective home burglar alarm system was.

"A dog that barks," he said.

Maybe Congress should provide a tax deduction for everyone who owns a dog.

Why not? Some mutt's bark is better than a congressman's bite.

Sabotage of computers blamed for slow S. African vote returns

Tom Cohen
Associated Press

JOHANNESBURG, South Africa — The election commission said Wednesday that computer sabotage was part of the reason for vote-counting delays that have forced back the date for Nelson Mandela's ascension to power.

But officials said the sabotage had no impact on overall trends in results from last week's first all-race election, which Mandela's African National Congress is easily winning. Johann Kriegler, head of the Independent Electoral Commission, said only "tens of thousands" of votes had been affected.

The slowness in counting the estimated 23 million votes caused the first meeting of the new Parliament to be put off until Monday from Friday. Its first task will be to elect Mandela, leader of the ANC, as South Africa's first black president.

Mandela is to be inaugurated Tuesday in Pretoria. Officials say that date cannot be changed because so many foreign dignitaries are coming. The guests could include the presidents of Israel and China, PLO leader Yasser Arafat, Hillary Rodham Clinton and Britain's Prince Philip.

The computer sabotage was the latest in a series of embarrassing problems and delays that have plagued South Africa's first democratic election. However, most observers maintain the election was substantially free and fair.

Kriegler said the computer fraud was discovered Tuesday morning and the commission still did not know who was responsible.

"Anyone who had access to our computer system could have done it," said Ben van der Ross, a commission member.

Several parties were given additional votes in a pattern, said van der Ross. But officials refused to name the parties.

The fraud was discovered because ballots are being counted twice — once by hand and once by computer. The totals did not match and officials found the problem with the computer.

The commission has tabulated just over half of the votes cast over four days last week. Asked when the figures would be complete, Kriegler said only that the count would be finished before the presidential inauguration Tuesday.

In a separate dispute over alleged vote fraud, the ANC is questioning the validity of about 170 voting boxes in the eastern province of Natal, where the Zulu nationalist Inkatha Freedom Party is winning the regional election.

The ANC denied reports Wednesday that it had withdrawn its objections to those boxes. Kriegler said the counting could be speeded if the parties reached agreement among themselves on disputed ballots in Natal and elsewhere.

As of this morning, with almost half the results still outstanding, Mandela's ANC had 62.5 percent of the vote, enough to ensure the former political prisoner will be chosen president when Parliament meets.

The National Party, led by President F.W. de Klerk, had 22.1 percent. Mangosuthu Buthelezi's Zulu-based Inkatha held 8.3 percent, and the conservative Freedom Front, which demands a separate white homeland, had 2.7 percent.

SCIENTISTS SURPRISED

Ocean warming trend discovered

Scientists believe the discovery may aid in ongoing studies of global warming.

Malcolm Ritter
Associated Press

NEW YORK — Scientists who retraced the route of Christopher Columbus across the Atlantic have made a discovery of their own: a surprising warming trend deep below the surface.

The finding may help test computer simulations used to predict global warming.

Readings taken between the coast of Africa and the Bahamas found warming over the past 35 years at depths ranging from half a mile to 1.6 miles.

The biggest change was about six-tenths of a degree Fahrenheit, measured at about seven-tenths of a mile deep.

The trend emerged from sampling at 101 locations across the Atlantic in the summer of 1992, along the line of 24 degrees north latitude, and comparison of the results with similar samplings done in 1981 and 1957. The 1992 survey was done to observe the 500th anniversary of the Columbus voyage.

The warming was a surprise and its cause is not clear, said oceanographer Harry Bryden, a co-author of a report in today's issue of the journal Nature.

"It's an indication that there are changes out there," he said. "As oceanographers, we don't really know whether that's a signal of global warming or just a sign of the natural variability in the ocean."

He said he expected the data to be used for testing computer simulations that attempt to predict climate change by forecasting the behavior of the ocean and atmosphere. The simulations can be tested to see if they would have predicted the deep-ocean warming.

Ronald Stouffer, a research meteorologist for the National Oceanographic and Atmospheric Administration, called the study a first step toward such tests.

The work is reported by Bryden of the James Rennell Center of the Institute of Oceanographic Sciences in Southampton, England, with scientists in Spain and the United States.

niwek, Tracy said. Both are considered by many to be a form of art, but both have been criticized for being offensive to many people.

Those who protest the destruction of the statue should also be fighting to protect Illiniwek, Tracy said.

Stephen Prokopoff, director of the UI Museum of Art, said the form of "political correctness" demonstrated by the social work school is dangerous to the history of culture.

"We would have to junk most of the greatest masterpieces of all time," he said. "We would wipe out most of our history in the interests of not offending someone."

While she would have found the statue problematic if she were in the social work school, Erin Stack, a painter and assistant professor of art, said a better solution could have been found. She suggested rather than removing the statue, it should have been surrounded with examples of other family structures.

One audience member said the statue was not offensive.

"If I look at the 'Pieta,' I do not assume that the artist is in favor of single parent families," she said. "I do fear that as a country we are making a national pastime out of taking offense."

Stack said she was excited about the prospect for the art and social work schools to work more closely on these issues.

"We have much more similarity than we imagine," she said. "We are all thinking about these things. The problem is that we aren't talking to each other."

SKY BOXES

Peggy Burke, an associate professor of physical education, told the Senate the project represented a shift in philosophy at the UI. Many senators applauded her remarks.

But Bob Bowsby, director of UI men's athletics, called those kinds of comments "absurd" and "groundless."

"This project shouldn't lead anyone to believe our goals and mission has changed," he said. "I don't believe we've sold out, that we're corrupted."

Included in the renovation are $100,000 to $200,000 of improvements to physical systems at Kinnick. Without the renovation project, money for these repairs would have had to come from the general athletic funds, Bowsby said.

The department is following the same entrepreneurial model that has been in place for several years to remain self-sufficient, Bowsby said. If anything, the addition of the sky boxes will be beneficial for the average football fan at Kinnick, he added.

"If this has any affect on the average fan, it will come from the opportunity to generate revenue from nonticket sources," he said. "That way we'll be able to keep ticket prices low."

Besides contributing a total of $100,000 to be eligible to use the sky boxes, donors also are giving money for the actual construction. They will have access to the booths for 10 years, then will have to pay some sort of annual fee to keep them, Bowsby said.

The department has not yet decided how those funds will be allocated, but since much of the revenue from men's athletics goes to the women's department, it is likely women's athletics will also benefit from the sky boxes, Larry Bruner, associate director of men's athletics, said.

In addition to the direct funds, the sky boxes will aid the athletic departments in their fund-raising efforts, Bruner said.

"This will help us get on an avenue to these people for other projects," he said. "It's something that helps intangibly for funding on other things."

Bowsby said the entire university should benefit from bringing state business leaders to the campus six times a year in a "festive setting," where they can interact with administrators, the regents and the deans of colleges.

"It can be a catalyst for discussion about other areas of support at this university," he said. "We're kind of the well-traveled bridge between the campus and the community."

six strokes to four strokes." He said he would consider suing Singapore's government, then giving any money he wins to charity.

Fay's American attorney, Theodore Simon of Philadelphia, described the four strokes as "torture, torture and torture." Fay and Simon say the teen-ager's confession was coerced.

Fay's last slim hope to escape the lashing is to be declared medically unfit. A doctor will be present when the beating is administered.

Fay has lived in Singapore since 1992 with his mother, Randy Chan, and stepfather, Marco Chan, who told reporters waiting at their luxurious apartment complex that they were upset by the government's decision and did not want to make further comments to the press.

The reduction in sentence came as a surprise. Senior government officials have repeatedly said giving in to U.S. pressure on this case would undercut their authority.

Fay, a high-school senior, pleaded guilty last month to two charges of vandalism, two of mischief and one of possessing stolen property. Three skin-splitting lashes of a rattan cane are mandatory upon conviction for each vandalism charge. Fay was also sentenced to four months in jail and paid a fine of $2,244.

Iowa, police Lt. Ron Fort said. The four suspects ranged in age from 14 to 17.

"Weapons were drawn because they were suspected of shoplifting, because they had a large butcher knife and because the car was stolen," Fort said. "It's called a felony stop. Officers are to take suspects out at gunpoint."

When police and four mall employees searched the parking lot and mall for stolen items, nothing was found, Fort said. No shoplifting charges were filed.

Nor were the juveniles charged with carrying a weapon.

"We simply chose not to," Fort said.

A fifth suspect and driver of the car, Tammy J. Hillesheim, 18, of Palo, was detained at Von Maur department store and charged with fifth-degree theft.

She is the daughter of Lloyd Hillesheim, the owner of the car that was reported stolen. The charges were dropped.

Anthony Postely, 17, Cedar Rapids, was in the car when police arrived. He believes the officers may have gone after the juveniles because they were black.

"I don't know what else it could be," he said. "There were a whole bunch of people in the mall."

He said earlier in the evening, the four were approached in the mall arcade and accused of stealing shoes. After denying the charges, the group left the mall and walked to the car, Postely said.

When police arrived, the four were instructed to get out of the car before it was searched, he said.

According to Postely, the knife wasn't displayed but was found under the passenger seat during the search.

Both Postely and Hillesheim said they don't know how the knife got into the car.

Iowa City resident Kelly Connell witnessed the incident and said police aimed the gun at the suspects from behind the police car door. She said the juveniles backed up to a wall, one by one, and were eventually handcuffed. Hillesheim also thinks race may have been a factor.

"I don't think they should have had my friends involved," she said. "They didn't do anything."

But Fort said the officers did nothing wrong. "They followed training and the law by word," Fort said, adding that the knife was destroyed by police.

Sycamore Mall Manager Mike Hachstadt said he and all mall employees are unable to comment.

Doonesbury BY GARRY TRUDEAU

SO IT'S TRUE... YOU REALLY ARE GAY! WAIT A MINUTE... YOU KNEW?
ONE OF THE NEIGHBORS TOLD ME. SHE HEARD YOU DISCUSSING IT ON YOUR RADIO SHOW.
WELL, MOM, IF YOU HEARD ABOUT IT, WHY DIDN'T YOU SAY ANYTHING TO ME?
I GUESS I JUST FIGURED IT WAS SOME SORT OF RATINGS STUNT. ACTUALLY, WE DID GET PRETTY GOOD NUMBERS.

Jim's Journal by Jim

Today at the copy store it was just me and Hal.
He said, "Keep an eye on things, Jim, I got things to do in back."
Then he went into the back office.
Later, I walked by the office and he was reclining so far back in his chair that he was practically horizontal.

Leafs knot playoff series at 1

Associated Press

TORONTO — Mark Osborne scored a key short-handed goal in the second period, and the Toronto Maple Leafs routed the San Jose Sharks Wednesday night to tie their Western Conference semifinal at a game apiece.

Dmitri Mironov, Mike Gartner, Doug Gilmour and Wendel Clark also scored for Toronto, which got three power-play goals after going 0-for-5 in game one.

Gaetan Duchesne scored with five minutes left for the Sharks, who now go home for the next two games in the best-of-seven series, which resumes Friday night.

Toronto, which lost the opener 3-2, outshot San Jose 13-3 in the first period. Mironov put the Maple Leafs ahead on the power play at 8:06 with a shot from the top of the left circle that beat goaltender Arturs Irbe.

Gartner made it 2-0 at 9:31 of the second, lifting the puck into the top of the net from close range as he was being knocked to the ice from behind by Bob Errey.

Osborne then scored a short-handed goal at 13:29 after Gilmour intercepted a pass in San Jose's zone to create a 2-on-1.

After Jay More was penalized for tripping Peter Zeehl at 2:58 of the third, Gilmour tapped a crossing pass from Dave Ellett into the open side of the net.

Clark ended a scramble by batting the puck past a fallen Irbe at DALLAS — Pavel Bure scored two goals and Kirk McLean stopped 39 shots for his second shutout of the playoffs as Vancouver beat Dallas and seized a 2-0 lead in their semifinal series.

The victory before a boozing sell-out crowd of 16,914 fans in Reunion Arena sends the Canucks back home for the next three games of the best-of-seven series, the first of which will be Friday night.

McLean, who was 0-2 against the Stars in the regular season, made 16 saves in the first period as Vancouver spoiled three power plays.

He kicked out four straight shots during one bombardment.

Bure, who has six goals in his last nine playoff games, scored his second goal with only 21 seconds to play in the second period. He picked up a loose puck, faked out Derian Hatcher and wristed a forehand past goalie Andy Moog.

Vancouver victimized Moog twice in the first period to take a 2-0 lead.

Cliff Ronning scored an unassisted goal when he faked a slap shot to get defenseman Doug Zmolek to hit the ice, then skated around him and beat Moog with a 10-foot wrist shot on the stick side.

Bure scored his fifth goal of the playoffs by taking advantage of a confusing scramble in front of the Stars net as he poked in a rebound on Moog's glove side.

Moog sat on the bench while Darcy Wakaluk was in goal for four straight victories over the St. Louis Blues. Wakaluk had an off night in the Stars' 6-4 loss to the Canucks on Monday night.

Moog was 3-1 against Vancouver in the regular season and had a 59-41 career playoff record before his start against the Canucks.

For the second straight game, the Canucks shut down high-scoring center Mike Modano.

Fielder hits 200th career home run

Associated Press

DETROIT — Cecil Fielder hit the 200th home run of his major-league career Wednesday during the Tigers' 14-7 victory over the Texas Rangers.

Fielder hit a 475-foot solo homer off Rick Reed in the third inning that landed on the roof in left field. It was his ninth home run of the season.

"It just shows you that people upstairs in the front office aren't always right," said Fielder, who went 2-for-5. "A lot of people said I'd never make it in this league, but here I am with almost 3,000 at-bats and 200 home runs."

Nets hang on with 93-92 OT win

Bill Barnard
Associated Press

EAST RUTHERFORD, N.J. — Chris Morris made two free throws with 1.5 seconds left in overtime Wednesday night, keeping the New Jersey Nets alive in the playoffs with a 93-92 victory over the New York Knicks.

The Knicks, who won the first two games of the best-of-five series at home, still lead 2-1, with game four at the Meadowlands on Friday night. If the Nets win that meeting, the fifth game would be Sunday at Madison Square Garden. The winner faces the three-time defending champion Chicago Bulls in the second round.

Morris' free throws came after the Knicks rallied from a 16-point deficit in the second half.

The Nets scored only nine points in the fourth period on 2-for-16 shooting.

John Starks' 3-pointer gave New York a 90-89 lead with 1:04 left in overtime, but reserve forward Armon Gilliam gave the lead back to the Nets with a dunk at the 43-second mark. Patrick Ewing's baseline jumper once again gave the Knicks a one-point lead, but Charles Oakley couldn't stop Morris' baseline drive, forcing him to foul.

Derrick Coleman, held to 32 percent shooting the first two games, finished with 25 points and 17 rebounds for the Nets, while Kenny Anderson had 17 points and 11 assists.

In the fourth quarter, New Jersey still led 79-67 with 9:32 left before Greg Anthony started a 12-2 run with a 3-pointer, and Starks' driving basket made it 81-79 with 4:04 remaining.

Ewing, who led the Knicks with 27 points and 14 rebounds, and Anthony both missed shots that would have tied the game in the Anderson, who missed five of six shots in the first two periods, scored nine points in the first 7:13 of the third as the Nets took their largest lead, 70-54 with 4:07 left. Seven straight points closed the Knicks within nine, but New Jersey took a 74-63 lead into the fourth quarter.

Coleman did most of his damage in the first half with 19 points on 8-for-11 shooting and 10 rebounds, leading the Nets to a 53-42 lead.

The Nets, who managed just 33 points in the first half of each of the first two games, scored 32 in the first quarter alone in game three, making 58 percent of their shots.

Shapiro wouldn't answer questions concerning where Strawberry's aftercare program will take place or where Strawberry will be staying in the near future. It is believed that he spent the last few weeks at Rancho Mirage, Calif.

"I don't know when he'll play again," Shapiro said. "He is going to continue to follow his doctors' advice on their program for his rehabilitation."

The Dodgers are paying Strawberry $3 million this season and owe him $5 million for next season, the final year of his five-year, $20.25 million contract.

"Strawberry will continue to report to the center as part of the outpatient aftercare program recommended for him by the facility," the commissioner's office said in a statement. "Strawberry's aftercare program is being reviewed by the commissioner's office, the players' association and their respective medical advisors."

Strawberry is being paid while he undergoes treatment. Some reports say his weight has increased from 215 pounds to about 240 during the past month.

Without Strawberry, the Dodgers are off to a 12-15 start.

Floyd turns down Cyclone coaching job

Associated Press

AMES — Tim Floyd will remain as basketball coach at New Orleans after turning down what was described as a "significant" financial package from Iowa State.

New Orleans athletic director Ron Maestri announced Floyd's decision at a news conference in New Orleans Wednesday. Floyd returned to New Orleans on Tuesday night after visiting the Iowa State campus. He had one more conversation with ISU officials Wednesday before announcing his decision.

"It came down to bass fishing and ice fishing, and I chose bass fishing," Floyd said.

Iowa State athletic director Gene Smith said he wasn't surprised that Floyd decided to stay at New Orleans and is confident the school will find a highly qualified coach to succeed Johnny Orr, who retired April 14 after 14 seasons.

"I think we've done a good job of identifying potential candidates and certainly Tim was one of them," Smith said.

Although Smith said the university never made a formal offer, Floyd's attorney, Bill Beck-nell, said his client stood to receive a lucrative deal if he took the Iowa State job.

"Financially, it was significant," Becknell said. "It's been talked about anywhere from $300,000 to $600,000. I think the final number would have ended up somewhere between those two numbers."

"It came down to bass fishing and ice fishing, and I chose bass fishing."

Tim Floyd, New Orleans men's basketball coach

Becknell said Floyd didn't use the negotiations with Iowa State to try to obtain more money from New Orleans.

"Nothing has changed financially in his contract here," Becknell said. "In some ways, financially he's sacrificing. I think it speaks highly of him that after I laid out all the alternatives for him, finances weren't the only thing he looked at it. If it was, he wouldn't be here right now."

Floyd, who has a 126-59 record in six seasons at New Orleans, is believed to have a total financial package of $150,000 to $175,000 a year with the Privateers. He is under contract to the school through the 1999-2000 season.

Orr said Floyd's decision keeps Iowa State assistant Jim Hallihan in the running for the job. The outgoing coach has urged Iowa State officials to appoint Hallihan as his successor.

Smith said Hallihan remains on his list of candidates for the job, but added that neither Hallihan nor anyone else should be considered the leader in the wake of Floyd's decision.

"I've had conversations with him all along," Smith said of Hallihan. "We talked yesterday a little over an hour. There's a couple of more (candidates) I've talked to. I hope to get this done by the end of next week."

Maestri said Floyd told him late Tuesday that he would attend Wednesday's press conference. But Wednesday, Smith and Iowa State President Martin Jischke called Floyd with a "substantial counter offer and he was having second thoughts," Maestri said.

TENNIS

Denahan's 9-1 Big Ten record this season is also the Hawkeyes' best, and he is 20-2 in conference play over the past two seasons. Houghton said Denahan's competitiveness is one of the strongest assets he gives the team.

"He just kind of refuses to lose when he's playing, and his record indicates that," Houghton said. "From a coaching standpoint, it's just great for me and his teammates to figure he's going to win when we go out and play a match."

In addition to playing well in singles, Shale has been consistent for the Hawkeyes in doubles. Shale and Bryan Crowley have gone 9-3 at No. 2 doubles this spring, which Houghton said also has been a big part of Iowa's success this season.

Houghton said players often burn out as their careers wind down, but he does not see that in Denahan or Shale.

"We've had cases in the past sometimes when seniors are sort of lukewarm about how important tennis is to them at that point," Houghton said. "Neither one of those guys has been at all a victim of that. They've been really into it the whole year and cared a lot about the team and how we did."

Shale said "senioritis" was never going to be a problem.

"Tennis has been an important enough part of our lives that it's not like we're just going to go out there and go through the motions and not give a damn," he said.

ICCT's engaging 'Rumors' pulls out all the stops for fun

Charles Monson
The Daily Iowan

The Iowa City Community Theatre has pulled out all the stops for its season-ending production of Neil Simon's "Rumors." From its fast-paced comedy to its opulent set, "Rumors" is engaging, attractive and a lot of fun.

Neil Simon's farcical script hits the ground running, opening with the aftermath of a botched suicide attempt by New York Deputy Mayor Charlie Brock. Brock happens to have scheduled a party for that evening, and the first guests to arrive — two vanilla socialites named Chris and Ken (Jorah Hubregtse and Rick Amundson) — recognize the awkwardness of the situation and begin to concoct stories to keep the truth from subsequent guests. The situation quickly degrades into a messy web of elaborate lies and switched identities.

Complicated as it sounds, "Rumors" is actually relatively unencumbered by plot. Simon knew better than to confuse the audience with story progression or character development; once he's set up the basic premise, he just finds different ways to play off it. The resulting production is so breezy and spontaneous that the performers sometimes seem to be doing an elaborate improv rather than a scripted play. Taken together with the pointed but accessible humor, which consists mainly of broad physical comedy and a slew of wry one-liners, the sparse plot makes "Rumors" an easy play to watch.

The cast of "Rumors" is a talented and experienced group, and they seem genuinely interested in what they're doing. Aided by director John Harper's flawless staging, they do a wonderful job with the physical comedy; every entrance and pratfall is timed perfectly. Their delivery is not as consistent, but it's never flatly bad — at worst, it's sometimes kind of bland.

Naturally, the actors with the meatier roles are generally more fun to watch (Chris Carpenter and Laura Esquibel, as the "cute" couple Ernie and Cookie, are good examples), but even the actors with unfunny lines or thankless roles have enough enthusiasm and aplomb to make the material work. Laura Smith makes her shallow character Claire seem positively affable at times, and Derrick Toney earns kudos for successfully getting through a long and potentially unfunny speech near the end of the show.

"Rumors" is also a visually striking production. The lavish set, as designed by Russ Irvine and furnished by Heilig-Meyers Furniture, is quite beautiful and very bourgeois; it looks exactly as one would expect a rich New Yorker's house to look. The lighting and sound are both well-designed and well-executed, and the tech crew

Jill Sagers/The Daily Iowan

Cookie (Laura Esquibel) examines an earring she thought she had dropped, but had actually been holding all along, in Neil Simon's engaging comedy "Rumors." The show concludes its run at the Iowa City Community Theatre May 6-7, and is the company's season finale.

seemed to have everything well under control throughout the show.

"Rumors" has many positive attributes to its credit: a funny script, a talented cast and an effective crew. Perhaps the best endorsement, though, is the audience's reaction: last weekend, it played to a full house and almost nonstop laughter.

"Rumors" will be performed at the Iowa City Community Theatre on May 6 and 7 at 8 p.m. Tickets are $10 for adults and $9 for senior citizens and students.

ARTS IN BRIEF

Short takes, updates:

Associated Press

• A judge dismissed charges Monday against Jack Nicholson after the man who accused him of bashing his Mercedes said he didn't want to proceed.

Robert Blank told the judge he was satisfied with Nicholson's apology and settlement of a lawsuit. Terms of the March settlement have not been disclosed.

• Roseanne Arnold has yet another relationship going sour.

This time it's former agent Arlyne Rothberg, who wants $20 million for what the nettle-some actress wrote about her in her autobiography, "My Lives."

Rothberg claims in a defamation lawsuit filed Tuesday that Arnold unfairly portrayed her as disloyal and unprofessional. In fact, Rothberg says, she helped make Arnold a star, only to be dumped after the actress's 1990 marriage to Tom Arnold.

• Proving that what passes for originality in Hollywood looks like desperation anywhere else, the Walt Disney Co. says it will make a movie based on a rubber doll. "Stretch Armstrong" is scheduled for a 1995 release.

The watchword in mainstream comics (and in other entertainment media these days) is "capitalize" — capitalize on the investment fad with glow-in-the-dark hologram prism cover art, capitalize on the "Death of Superman" success by killing off and reviving as many characters as possible, capitalize on successful writers and artists by setting their inferiors to imitate well-crafted writing and art that would do Gaiman proud.

"Witchcraft" is a three-part limited series featuring the three Weird Sisters as visualized in Gaiman's "Sandman." The aspects of the goddess — bride, mother and crone — become involved in the reincarnations of one of their followers, as her death at the hands of a brutal rapist initiates a centuries-spanning search for revenge.

"Witchcraft" is a rare find in that the first issue tells a complex but complete story, yet still demands interest for future issues. Writer James Robinson has put together a powerful narrative that never disappoints, but which promises better things to come.

There's less power and focus to "Arcana," a follow-up to Gaiman's "Books of Magic." Disgruntled teenager and powerful magician-to-be Tim Hunter finally returns and begins to learn to use his powers in a crossover with Vertigo's "Children's Crusade." While less intense than "Witchcraft," and with spottier and less predictable art, "Arcana" still shows every sign of carrying on Gaiman's tradition of finely tuned characters, deft storytelling and intricate use of language.

Neil Gaiman's metaphorical shoes are tricky things to fill, and it's rare to find an artist with the capacity to come close. Two such attempts in one month are nothing short of amazing.

And to find an artistic success coming from financial opportunism is more astonishing yet. Still, there's a first time for everything. Who knows, maybe next week we'll even see a coherent plot line out of Rob Liefeld.

No, I'm not holding my breath either.

their styles and develop spin-offs of their books.

To a large part, the financially dictated necessity of the comics industry's handling of comic books as commodities rather than art is responsible for the ongoing flooding of the medium with dreck. There's nothing in particular that can be done about this, and there's no point in breast-beating over it; the best solution is simply to look for quality writers and artists and buy only quality work, instead of whatever fad is currently captivating the market.

And from time to time, quality and the profit motive prove compatible. For proof, check out "Witchcraft" and "Arcana: The Books of Magic," two new series from Vertigo Comics. Both are direct spin-offs of the amazingly popular works of Neil Gaiman; both nonetheless feature intriguing
