Abortion clinic violence to be banned

Alan Fram
Associated Press

WASHINGTON (AP) — Congress answered a decade of bombings, arson and even a killing by sending President Clinton a bill Thursday banning blockades, violence and threats against abortion clinics.

"These are no longer peaceful protests," said Sen. Dianne Feinstein, D-Calif., as the Senate approved the bill 69-30. "These are examples of vigilante extremism that mirror the spread of hate crimes and random violence in our society."

Clinton is certain to sign the legislation, which would take effect immediately. Fifty-two Democrats and 17 Republicans voted for it, while three Democrats and 27 Republicans voted no. The House approved the measure last week on a 241-174 roll call.

Supporters argued that over the last 10 years, the protests have gotten out of hand. By one count, there were more than 1,000 violent acts at abortion clinics between 1977 and April 1993, including 36 bombings, 81 cases of arson, 131 death threats, 84 assaults, two kidnappings — and the killing of Dr. David Gunn in Florida.

Opponents countered that such violent acts are rare and are already crimes. This legislation, they said, is an attempt by liberals to thwart just one side in the emotional debate over abortion. They noted that there are no similar federal constraints against protests involving labor unions, environmentalists or animal rights supporters.

"What this bill does is aim the full force of the federal criminal system against a class of Americans who feel passionately about one of the key moral questions of our time," said Sen. Don Nickles, R-Okla.

Sen. Orrin Hatch, R-Utah, said the bill clamped unconstitutional restrictions on the free speech rights of anti-abortion protesters, constraints that the government has not before invoked.

"If states in the 1950s and '60s had been able to impose and uphold such severe penalties on civil disobedience, the civil rights movement might well have been snuffed out in its infancy," Hatch said.

But supporters said the legislation was aimed not at speech, but at the physical force and intimidation that some protesters have aimed at women using clinics and the people who work there.

"Clinics continue to be under siege," said Sen. Edward Kennedy, D-Mass. "The healthcare providers who work there continue to be in fear for their lives."

Lawmakers began work on the bill after a January 1993 Supreme Court decision that states could not use an 1871 civil rights law, aimed originally at the Ku Klux Klan, to halt anti-abortion protests. The use of that law was successfully challenged by Operation Rescue, which blockades abortion clinics.

The legislation approved Thursday makes it a federal crime to block access to an abortion clinic or to use force or threats against people using such facilities or working there.

Violent offenders would face up to $100,000 in fines and a year in prison for a first conviction, and up to $250,000 in fines and three years in prison for subsequent offenses.

School's out for summer: Have a good break!

The Daily Iowan will cease publication until Monday, June 13.

The DI business office will remain open from 8 a.m. to 4 p.m. during the break.

Phone service disrupted

Iowa City and 13 surrounding communities were without long-distance telephone service for more than 4 hours Thursday morning after a fiber-optic cable was cut by a construction company working at the intersection of Highway 30 and C Street on the east side of Cedar Rapids.

Lynn Gipple, spokesperson for US West Communications in Iowa, said the cable was cut at approximately 8 a.m. and affected both outgoing and incoming long-distance services.

Service was restored by 12:30 p.m., Gipple said. Emergency 911 calls had to be rerouted in the affected communities as well.

Two men charged in local robberies

Two men have been charged with the Wednesday night armed robbery of Country Kitchen, 1402 S. Gilbert St., and the Tuesday night robbery of Just Different adult video store, Coralville.

The gunman, Steven A. Rosen, 38, of Coralville, was charged with one count of first-degree robbery for the Coralville incident and another count for the robbery Wednesday night.

Jabir R. Mumin, 40, Kalona, was charged with one count of first-degree aiding and abetting robbery for each of the incidents.

Mumin also goes by the name of Paul C. Campbell.

The two allegedly made off with an estimated $200 after Rosen displayed a gun to a restaurant employee Wednesday night.

Witnesses at Country Kitchen wrote down the license plate of the suspects' car; the two were found in Kalona after units from Iowa City, Coralville, Johnson County, Washington County and Iowa State patrol attempted to stop the vehicle.

Arrests are being held in the Iowa County Jail with bond set at $25,000.

BILLS CONTRADICTORY

Senate agrees to end arms embargo

David Briscoe
Associated Press

WASHINGTON — The Senate voted to require President Clinton to lift the arms embargo against Bosnia Thursday, but muddled the action with a contradictory directive to first seek the support of other nations.

With back-to-back 50-49 votes on competing amendments that made up a Bosnia bill, senators first directed Clinton to seek a U.N. termination of the embargo and then added language ordering him to go it alone.

Sen. John Warner, R-Va., called the outcome farcical.

"It shows you the ineptitude of the United States Senate at times in giving direction on foreign policy. ... We sound an uncertain trumpet in the ears of those suffering in Bosnia," said Warner.

Only six other senators joined Warner in voting against both approaches to lifting the embargo, and Bosnia-Herzegovina's ambassador to Washington counted the 92 senators who voted for one or the other approach as a strong endorsement for arming his country against Serb aggression.

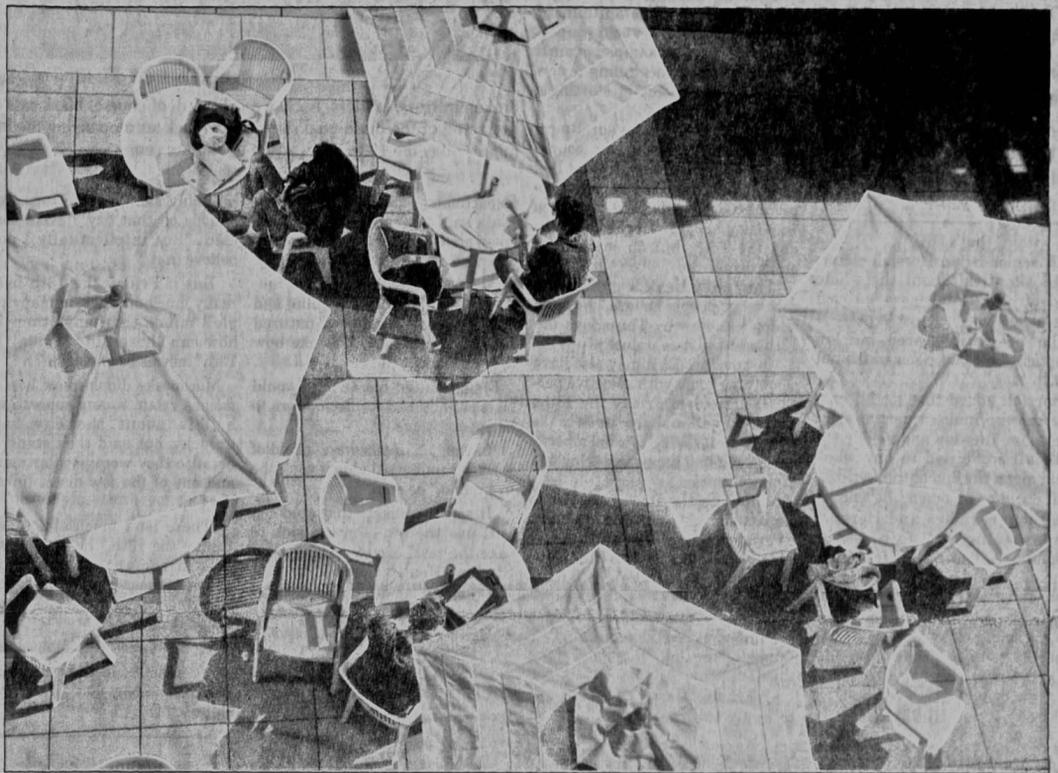

"We consider this a big step forward to finally having our rights to defend ourselves," said Ambassador Sven Alakaj, who witnessed the vote from the Senate gallery.

Senate Democrat and Republican leaders disagreed on the impact of the vote.

Senate Majority Leader George Mitchell, who faced surprising bipartisan opposition to his efforts to save the president from the embarrassment of having to veto a measure he supports, said the vote "makes clear there is not going to be unilateral action by the United States to lift the embargo."

Clinton supports a lifting of the embargo but is against doing it without U.N. and NATO support.

SUFFERING, NOT PARTYING

Students, faculty feel Friday finals stress

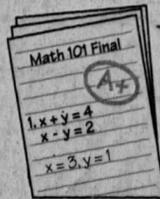

Prasanti Kantamneni
The Daily Iowan

Though many students went out Thursday night to celebrate the end of the school year, others were locked in their rooms cramming for dreaded Friday finals.

More than 100 students will be taking a scheduled 37 tests along with several other smaller exams today. Four of the larger ones are scheduled for 7 tonight.

UI sophomore Heather Craddock said having Friday finals has both a good and bad side.

"I have three finals today," she said. "I'm kind of glad they're today because I got to study all week. But it kind of upsets me because everybody is already finished with their finals, and I have to suffer alone while they're out partying."

Craddock said the late tests have put a damper on her plans.

"I was hoping to go home today, but I have a 7 o'clock final and I can't drive for six hours after finishing it," Craddock said. "And I won't have anyone to celebrate the end of finals with, because everybody will be gone."

UI freshman Sejal Sura also has a 7 o'clock final tonight.

"It sucks," Sura said. "It's the worst form of torture for a college student to endure. I would rather take a week's worth of Burge food over this."

Students aren't the only ones affected by the Friday final exam schedules.

UI religion Professor Jay Holstein, who is scheduled to give a 7 o'clock Quest for Human Destiny test tonight, said the exam scheduling process should be reconsidered.

"It's the worst time possible," he said. "The Seniors look forward to 'real life'

Molly Spann
The Daily Iowan

As they prepare to go out in the cruel world, several graduating seniors say they are ready to move on, although they will miss many parts of their college experiences.

More happy than scared, UI senior Aaron Holley is glad to finally move on with his life.

"I guess overall I'm relieved," he said. "It has been a tough four years, but I am going to miss the whole idea of college. In general, it has been a positive experience but I'm ready to be done."

Jude Sunderbruch

Drunken tomfoolery and other shenanigans will not be tolerated at commencement ceremonies this year as the UI continues its efforts to provide a dignified atmosphere at all graduation events.

The UI's campaign for students

Because he doesn't have a job yet, Holley said he will have to adjust to having more time on his hands.

"I won't miss having a schedule to follow, but it will be an adjustment," he said.

UI senior Julie Bressendorf is glad to be done with school but will miss the friends she'll leave behind.

"The worst thing about leaving school is saying good-bye and knowing that you may never see that person again," she said.

Bressendorf said she is not going through commencement because she wants to spend time with her

UI Dean of Students Phillip Jones said recent graduations have been pleasant and well-received by students and parents. "We have gotten a very positive response over the last couple of years from families and guests about the dignity and spirit of the graduation," he said. "I think to that extent you need to congratulate the students."

Who's afraid of Friday the 13th

William Pepper
The Daily Iowan

Jason's dead. Freddy's history. And although many students would probably rather face those two Friday the 13th icons than take final exams today, the general consensus among students and local officials seems to be that this "unlucky" day is no big deal.

"Friday the 13th is so negative," UI junior Derrick James said. "But I don't understand how it's supposed to be observed."

James added he doesn't buy into superstition, but said if other people do, that's fine.

"I think it's a bunch of hogwash," he said. "But if people have

"It could be an omen."

Brian Horsfall, UI senior, noting that finals, a partial solar eclipse and Friday the 13th all combined in one week could mean the end of the world fun with it, that's OK."

UI senior Brian Horsfall claims to be skeptical about the whole Friday the 13th business but said he watches his back just in case.

"I'm not really scared, but I'm skeptical," he said. "You watch out just in case."

Horsfall added that for all anyone knows, finals, a partial solar eclipse on Tuesday and Friday the 13th all combined in one week could mean the end of the world.

"It could be an omen," he said. Although James and Horsfall are avoiding the fate of the unlucky student today, freshman Jenny Welzenbach has to take a chemistry final.

"It's kind of spooky because I have a final Friday," she said. "It's probably going to be one of my easier ones, but I might think about that and do bad."

Spooky or not, UI Vice President for University Relations Ann Rhodes said administrators never seriously discussed rescheduling finals week to avoid this unlucky day, and so far no angry students have called to complain about it. She also noted that when she was in college, she took finals on Friday the 13th and survived.

"I took a final on the 13th, and it was probably the highest grade I ever got," she said.

Encyclopedia Americana does not describe Friday the 13th specifically, but it does say that the sixth day of the week has unlucky connotations for Christians and is a holy day for Muslims. The entry reads in part:

"Probably because of the Crucifixion, Friday became an unlucky day in the Western world. Superstition warns, for example, against getting married, beginning a new job, launching a ship or starting a voyage on Friday."

UI sociology Professor Barry Markovsky, who teaches a course dealing with superstition called The Paranormal Society, said people may not really have any idea why they should worry about Friday the 13th, but do so because other people do.

"They may have a perception that other people believe," he said. "I don't know why Thursdays the 12th aren't just as unlucky."

Markovsky said it may also have something to do with selective perception. He said Friday the 13th and full moons are both rare events, so it's easy to remember if something bad happens during one of those times.

Although the Iowa City Police Department doesn't keep statistics on crime rates for Friday the 13th vs. any other day, police Chief R.J. Winkelhake said there's no indication people will be in any more danger today.

"During lunar moons, maybe," Winkelhake said. "But not Friday the 13th."

The same lack of a trend seems to apply to fires. Iowa City Fire

Broken mirrors, ladders, hockey masks and, of course, black cats are just some of the traditional signs of bad luck accompanying the infamous Friday the 13th. What a way to end the semester.

Department Battalion Chief Terry Fiala said firefighters may make jokes about having to be prepared for more activity today, but no one is really concerned.

"The thought comes to mind and maybe there's some good-natured ribbing," Fiala said. "It's like how they talk about the moon."

Fiala pointed out that it would be especially bad for firefighters to be superstitious.

"In this job, if you were afraid of walking under a ladder, you'd be in trouble," he said.

It seems unlikely that students will use the old "I'm too sick to take the test" excuse today either. Student Health Service director Mary Khowassah said she has never noticed an increase in reported illness or injury on Friday the 13th. She also said she doesn't believe in the 13th being bad luck.

"For fun sometimes you think I probably shouldn't do something serious on that day," Khowassah said. "But intellectually I don't believe in it."

But if Friday the 13th is not really much different in many people's minds than any other day, how can those nine "Friday the 13th" movies be explained?

Markovsky didn't know how the movies relate to any superstitious beliefs about the day being unlucky, but said they stand out because they were popular movies and one of the few direct links to the bad day.

"There isn't much else labeled Friday the 13th," he said. "I suppose a romantic movie might change perceptions of Friday the 13th, but it might not be a good selling point."

Hmm. Jason as a romantic lead? It's something to think about. And remember, don't launch any ships today.

RESERVATIONS A MUST

Local businesses brace for graduation rush

Terry Collins
The Daily Iowan

While UI students prepare for graduation and all of its festivities, local businesses are also preparing for the rush that's associated with the weekend.

Arguably the most difficult thing for out-of-town visitors to do this time of year is find a place to stay for the weekend as most hotels are filled to capacity.

Jake LeaVesseur, manager of Heartland Inn, Coralville, said his hotel will be extremely busy this weekend — and not just because of graduation.

Besides those who are in town for graduation, large groups attending the Pella Tulip Festival are also staying in the hotel, LeaVesseur said, which makes for an unusual dilemma.

"This year is very unique because the Tulip Festival is usually held during the first weekend in May and graduation the following," he said. "This time they're both here at the same time. It will be quite interesting."

LeaVesseur said the key to getting a room during graduation is to make reservations far in advance. This year the hotel began taking requests for spring graduation last December.

"Our hotel in Cedar Rapids has been full for months," he said. "We've received just over the last two weeks alone more than 2,000 phone calls."

"We've got people making reservations for next year already," LeaVesseur said.

There is hope though for those families of graduates who still don't have anywhere to stay. LeaVesseur said the best bet for rooms is to show up prior to the noon check-out time.

"I'm sure most hotels will have rooms available. Cancellations do occur also," he said.

Making reservations at restaurants is also essential during graduation. Mike Brannin, manager of Giannis, 109 E. College St., said he compares this time of year to a Hawkeye football weekend.

"We'll definitely be busy," he said. "We just plan weeks ahead of time for the occasion and do it."

Brannin said his restaurant has received numerous phone calls for reservations for large groups. He said they'll typically accept reservations up to 5 p.m. for the same day, but after that time, seating is on a first-come, first-served basis.

"We usually have no problem accommodating large parties," he said. "But if they come after a certain time, there could be a brief waiting period."

Excited could be the word to describe Pamela Sabin, owner of The Kitchen, 215 E. Washington St.

"We've received just over the last two weeks alone more than 2,000 phone calls. We've got people making reservations for next year already."

Jake LeaVesseur, manager of Heartland Inn, Coralville, on the spring graduation business boom

This is the first time her restaurant will cater to the graduation crowd since moving to its present location last July.

"I've had people who made their reservations three to four months ago," she said. "I think we're full for parties of up to six people."

Sabin said the restaurant is also prepared to handle large groups of 15 to 20 people due to its increased size from a year ago.

"We were very busy last weekend for Mother's Day, so we think we're ready," she said. "We have staff members fighting for more hours to work."

"It should be a great weekend."

71-year-old bank robber has no regrets about capture

Associated Press

WICHITA, Kan. — James Kimball had no regrets when a judge this week sentenced him to 12½ years in prison for a bank robbery.

That's because the 71-year-old Kimball strolled out of the bank with $168,000 and into three months of the high life: He traveled first class, stayed at fine hotels, rode in limousines and wore a $7,000 watch and $2,400 boots. He even fell in love in Los Angeles — and discovered he had cancer.

"No matter what they do to me, no matter how long they keep me in jail or even if I die here, they can't take away those few months I had," he said Tuesday from the Sedgwick County Jail.

On June 28, Kimball passed a note to a vice president at First National Bank of Hutchinson, saying he would blow up the building if she didn't fill a box with money.

The heist came just days after Kimball was paroled on a five-year sentence for forgery and theft.

CHANGE SPARKED BY BABY JESSICA CASE

New law clarifies adoption rights

Mike Glover
Associated Press

DES MOINES — Gov. Terry Branstad Thursday signed a new adoption law spurred by an emotional custody battle between couples in Iowa and Michigan over a child who came to be known as Baby Jessica.

The law makes it a crime to lie about who has fathered a child and makes the best interests of the child the guiding standard for courts in deciding when a parent's rights are ended.

It also establishes a voluntary registry in an effort to better keep track of the biological parents, though that list isn't used in deciding custody.

Branstad said the law "provides some clarifications that we hope can avoid some of the problems that have occurred in the past."

The issue was capped last year when an Ann Arbor, Mich., couple, Jan and Roberta DeBoer, were forced to return young Jessica to her biological parents in Blairtown.

Dan and Cara Schmidt were the biological parents, though the child was born before they were married. Cara Schmidt initially identified another man as the father and agreed to give the child up.

The DeBoers took the child to Michigan and began adoption proceedings, but Dan Schmidt later asserted his rights after learning he was the father.

After a court fight lasting years, he was successful and the child returned to Iowa last year.

The battle put a national spotlight on adoption and parental rights that spurred the Legislature to rewrite state law.

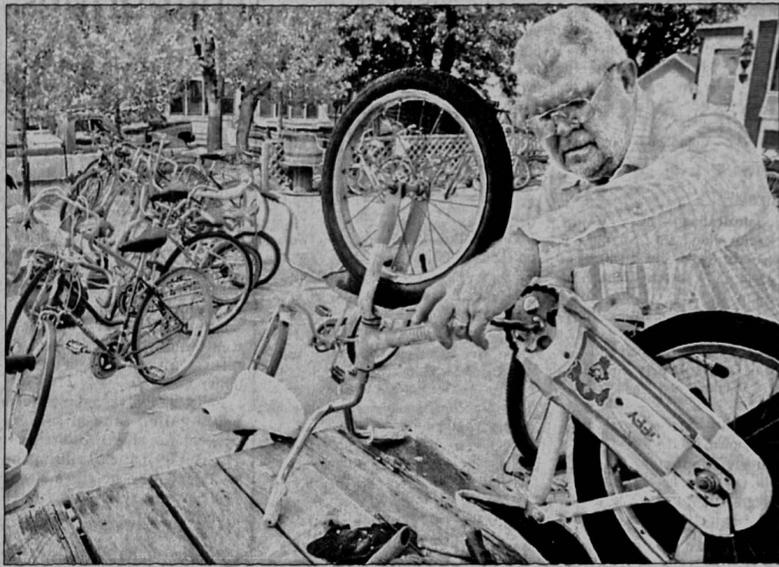

Lorrie Wood of the Iowa DeBoer Committee for Children's Rights praised the new law, saying, "It would have prevented" the emotional battle between the DeBoers and Schmidts.

"I don't know if it will boost the number of adoptions," said Wood. "I know it will certainly make prospective adoptive couples more eager and willing to try and adopt, to take that heartfelt leap to try and bring a child into their home."

The centralized registry for fathers had started as the focal point of the measure. As proposed, it would have required fathers to sign up on the central registry within 30 days of the birth of a child or they could not assert parental rights.

That was weakened to a voluntary registry, where failing to sign up wouldn't preclude a father from asserting his rights later.

Supporters said that making it a crime to lie about the father of a child and letting judges make custody decisions based on what's in the best interests of a child significantly strengthen state law.

$1 MILLION SAVED

Clarinda jail plan unveiled

Mike Glover
Associated Press

DES MOINES — Before Gov. Branstad approved construction of a 750-bed prison at Clarinda, state officials came up with a new plan to pay for it.

State Treasurer Michael Fitzgerald said Thursday a state-backed financing plan will be cheaper than that from the local nonprofit group that proposed the prison.

"We're 99 percent sure that by the state doing it, we will save $1 million for the state of Iowa," said Fitzgerald.

Fitzgerald unveiled his plan just hours before Branstad signed into law a measure authorizing construction of the prison.

Local officials in Clarinda had offered to issue bonds to build the prison with the state leasing the prison over a 20-year period.

After that, the state would own the prison. The eventual cost would be just more than $20 million.

When the Legislature authorized construction of the medium-security prison, however, lawmakers included a provision allowing Fitzgerald and state Auditor Richard Johnson to look for a state-backed plan that would be cheaper.

Under Fitzgerald's proposal, the state would issue revenue bonds, which would be backed by a surcharge on criminal fines the state already collects. About $2 million a year would be earmarked for that purpose.

The savings come because the revenue bonds issued by the state carry a very low interest rate and are "double tax exempt" — meaning those who buy them pay neither state nor federal taxes on their profits.

While details of the plan are being polished, Fitzgerald said it's a virtual certainty.

The prison proposal passed the Legislature easily with lawmakers under pressure to ease crowding in a system that's jammed well beyond capacity.

APPROVED 4-1

Board allows farmland rezoning

Jim Snyder

The Daily Iowan

A plan to develop a subdivision in a largely rural area west of Iowa City was approved by the Johnson County Board of Supervisors Thursday despite charges that the move would further deplete the county's agricultural base.

In a 4-1 vote, the supervisors approved an application for Marvin Lavin to rezone 7 acres of his property from agricultural use to residential. The approval enables Lavin to sell the property to contractor William Frantz, who plans to build six homes on the property located on the southeast side of Rapid Creek Road.

Phillip Leff, attorney for Lavin, said the sale would not hurt Johnson County agriculture because the land on which the homes will be built is highly erodible.

In addition, the sale includes 13 acres that will be set aside for grasslands for at least 20 years, Leff said. This would improve conservation of the soil, he said.

Board Chairman Steve Lacina and supervisors Patricia Meade, Charles Duffy and Don Sehr agreed that the development did not compromise the county's support of agriculture and, therefore, there wasn't any good reason to vote against it.

"It's hard to ask them (the Lavins) to hold onto 20 acres and farm," Sehr said. "It is unrealistic to ask them to pass up the money."

John McNutt, who spoke on behalf of approximately 30 residents who opposed the plan, said building a subdivision is an inappropriate use of the land and changes the character of the area.

"This establishes a precedent for allowing small subdivisions out from an area where they have been occurring," he said.

Laura Ruth of Iowa City said she was "deeply disturbed" by what she saw as "unbridled development." Others stood to put their names on record as opposing the move.

Supervisor Joe Bolkcom voted against rezoning. He saw too many conflicts between the proposal and Johnson County's growth strategy.

"This flies in the face of the comprehensive plan," he said. "I don't see how we can support this plan."

The increased development may create safety hazards on Rapid Creek Road, Bolkcom said. He advised the board to establish a plan to deal with the increasing development interests.

NO ONE INJURED

Chemical spill forces evacuation of Bowen

A chemical spill at Bowen Science Building forced those inside to evacuate for more than an hour Thursday morning.

Iowa City Fire Department Lt. Corvin Justice said firefighters were called to the building, located on the west side of campus, at 11:42 a.m. They learned that one gallon of glacial acetic acid had spilled in a room on the sixth floor.

"It dissipated pretty fast," he said.

The person who spilled the acid tried to mop it up, but when the fumes continued to spread she called fire officials.

Justice estimated 40 people were evacuated due to the fumes on the sixth floor, in stairways and in the elevator.

There were no injuries.

Chemical spill brings evacuation

Associated Press
CEDAR RAPIDS — Two people were hospitalized and others in a southeast Cedar Rapids neighborhood were forced to evacuate their homes Thursday after a chemical spill.

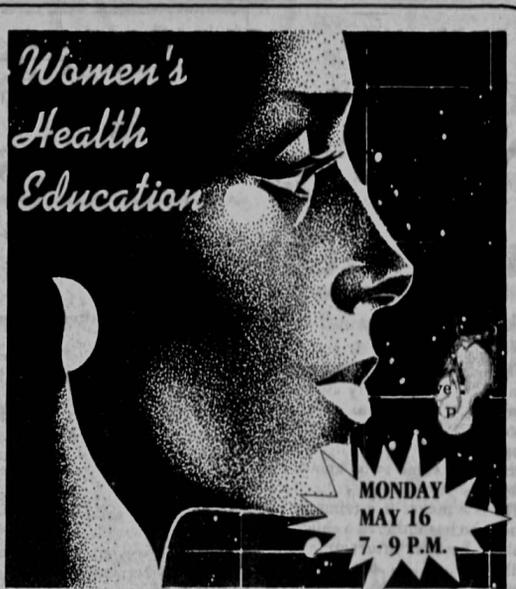

Shortly after noon, police evacuated about 40 homes in a three-block area when dangerous fumes were carried on the wind into the neighborhood. Residents were allowed to return to their homes around 3:30 p.m.

Police said a valve broke on a 2,200-gallon tank of sodium hypochlorite shortly before noon at Pool Tech Inc., spilling the chemical into the city's sewer system and releasing fumes into the air.

A spokesman for Mercy Medical Center said two people were undergoing treatment for chemical burns and were listed in stable condition. It was not immediately known if they worked at Pool Tech or lived in the neighborhood.

Sodium hypochlorite is used to kill bacteria; chlorine used in swimming pools is a weak form of the chemical.

Pool Tech workers were able to cap the spill shortly before 1 p.m. as the city flushed its sewer system with another chemical to neutralize the sodium hypochlorite.

SELF-RULE ONE STEP NEARER

First 300 Palestinian police take over

Karin Laub
Associated Press

JERICHO, West Bank — The pace of Israel's withdrawal quickened Thursday with the entrance of about 300 Palestinian police into Jericho, the seat of Palestinian self-rule.

A first batch of 20 policemen drove from Jordan across the Allenby Bridge into the West Bank town shortly after midday. Israelis allowed 100 others to enter hours later, then the remaining 200 to trickle through late in the day.

The policemen, some of the first of thousands to be deployed in the occupied lands, will take up duties in Jericho and in the Gaza Strip — two areas that will soon come under Palestinian rule.

The arrival of the Palestinian police and the PLO takeover from Israel of more areas in the Gaza Strip showed the Palestinians were moving ahead to beginning self-rule.

A PLO official who helped negotiate the deal for self-rule said he hoped the Palestinians would be able to take over all civil powers by Tuesday. In Cairo, the PLO announced the appointment of 13 men and two women to the Palestinian Authority that will control the two areas.

"We are transferring files, other departmental things. Everything is going smoothly," said Khaled al-Qudra after he and other PLO officials met with Israelis at the new administrative headquarters for the Gaza Strip.

In the Gaza border town of Rafah, Israeli soldiers and police withdrew, turning over the police station and military government headquarters to about 40 locally recruited police.

Rafah, a town of 100,000 people, is the biggest to be ceded to Palestinian control. About 500 residents turned out to see the PLO flag run up over the police building, and spray paint was used to scrawl "Autonomy Administration" on both buildings.

"It is a great moment ... to see the Israeli soldiers lowering the Israeli flag and have it replaced with the Palestinian flag," said Adnan Jummaa, a 40-year-old laborer who brought his two children to watch.

The 40 Rafah police were not yet issued weapons, but they did not remain unarmed for long. Soon after the Israelis left, about a dozen PLO militants, some of them wanted for anti-Israeli activities, showed up toting Kalashnikov rifles.

The police in Rafah were to be joined by the 300 armed police who came from Jordan Thursday and were passing through Jericho. The 20 policemen who arrived in Jericho earlier were to stay in the town.

When the 20 policemen arrived in Jericho, Israeli authorities kept crowds away, but at one point the officers waved their guns out the window as they passed a small knot of Palestinians.

Hundreds of Jericho residents gathered later to greet the new arrivals. The police stood in a receiving line as residents filed past, welcoming them with handshakes or kisses.

Soon after their arrival, the police drove their U.S.-donated trucks in a convoy with Israeli jeeps. The PLO vehicles and Israeli jeeps flew identical orange flags. Joint patrols are part of the Israel-PLO agreement for security.

The Palestinians were given a briefing by Israeli officers. One of the officers told reporters later that elaborate plans were laid out for the transfer of police powers in Jericho, expected Friday.

A similar meeting took place on the civilian side at Gaza's administrative building near the Erez checkpoint into Israel. Al-Qudra, the PLO official, said the Palestinians and Israelis discussed the transfer of power in all 38 departments such as taxes, schools and hospitals.

Al-Qudra said the government was starting with enough money to operate for three months. "I'm sure we have enough money to provide services until President (Yasser) Arafat arrives," he said.

Despite the optimism, delays and confusion continued to mark the takeover of Gaza and Jericho that began Tuesday.

Some of the 20 officers who came to Jericho rolled over the Allenby Bridge from Jordan about nine hours behind schedule after a series of arguments with Israeli authorities. Then one of their cars apparently ran out of gas.

Some of the 300 police who crossed the Jordanian border later were at first turned back. A PLO officer said he was told the Israelis had no orders to admit them, and other Palestinian officials said the problem mainly was that 100 of the police officers lacked travel documents.

Environmental experts: seal sunken nuclear sub

Vladimir Isachenkov
Associated Press

MOSCOW — Environmental experts urged Russia Thursday to seal the cracked bow of a sunken nuclear submarine in the Barents Sea but played down the risk of catastrophe from a possible plutonium leak.

Officials fear the Komsomolets could fall apart if they try to raise it from its watery grave 210 miles north of Norway. The submarine caught fire and sank in 1989, killing 42 of the 69 Soviet sailors aboard.

Russia and Norway are worried it will corrode and leak radioactive plutonium from its two nuclear torpedoes.

But a report by experts in the Russian Ministry of Environmental Protection said there was no cause for alarm.

"Even if all the plutonium leaks into the sea, the possible doses of radiation people would receive through sea products would be far below the permissible limit," the report said.

Russian and foreign experts examined the Komsomolets with a remote-controlled device last summer and concluded the torpedo warheads could begin leaking plutonium sometime this year.

But in their report today, experts said the torpedoes contained only 400 curies of radiation, while Britain dumped about 20,000 curies of radioactive waste in the Irish Sea in the 1950s without any known environmental damage.

Child left in locked car while mother gambles

Associated Press

AURORA, Ill. — A woman left her 2½-year-old daughter in a locked car for eight hours while she gambled aboard a riverboat casino, police said.

Sherry Stackowski, 26, was charged with child endangerment and released on $200 bond. The girl, who wasn't hurt, was turned over to the state Department of Children and Family Services.

"Obviously, this was a pretty callous thing to do," said David Clark, a spokesman for the state's attorney's office.

Police said Stackowski boarded the casino Tuesday afternoon.

When the ship returned, she was arrested and charged with disorderly conduct for snatching tokens from other passengers.

Police discovered the child while Stackowski was being processed. She was arrested again when she returned to her car.

Stackowski said she boarded the casino to repay a $10 debt to a friend and was caught when the boat left the dock. She said she did not intend to abandon her only child.

NEW LEADER BEGINS CABINET SELECTION

Associated Press

A woman turns away from the body of 43-year-old shopkeeper Jean-Claude Pierre who, according to his brother, was pulled from his shop and shot by armed civilians Thursday in the slum of Cite Soleil in the capital of Port-au-Prince. Bodies turn up on Port-au-Prince's streets almost daily. Most are suspected to be victims of thugs who oppose the return of Haitian President Jean-Bertrand Aristide.

U.S., U.N. refuse to recognize Haitian president's right to rule

Lisa Hamm Associated Press

PORT-AU-PRINCE, Haiti — Haiti's new army-backed president began naming a Cabinet on Thursday while critics mocked assertions of his independence from the corrupt and brutal military that installed him.

Supreme Court Chief Justice Emile Jonassaint, 81, was sworn in Wednesday by a minority group of army-backed lawmakers and military commander Lt. Gen. Raoul Cedras. The United States and the United Nations have refused to recognize him.

The capital was quieter than usual Thursday as Haitians celebrated the Roman Catholic feast of the Ascension. The Presidential Palace was shut and locked as Jonassaint formed his Cabinet at an undisclosed location in suburban Petionville.

In a key first move, Jonassaint chose as chief of staff ultranationalist lawyer Mireille Durocher Bertin, who also is a counsel for coup leaders Cedras and Lt. Col. Michel Francois.

A close acquaintance of Jonassaint, conservative historian Georges Michel, insisted Jonassaint wouldn't be an army "puppet," put in power only to cement the military's 1991 overthrow of elected President Jean-Bertrand Aristide.

Sen. Thomas Eddy Dupiton insisted that the Parliament, not the army, took the lead in engineering Jonassaint's appointment, saying the army was merely "accompanying" the lawmakers.

But Jean-Claude Martineau, a spokesman for Aristide in Washington, called Jonassaint's inauguration a "fraud and a masquerade."

Victor Benoit, education minister under the Aristide-backed Cabinet, on Thursday called Jonassaint's government "illegal and unconstitutional."

"I will not go to work tomorrow," he said in an interview with Voice of America Creole-language service.

Benoit is one of the few Aristide Cabinet members who has been trying to function in his job while Haiti, caught in the stranglehold of the military and an international fuel embargo, has plunged deeper into crisis. The Aristide-designated prime minister, Robert Malval, announced his resignation in December, saying it had become impossible for him to govern.

A prominent businessman, speaking on condition of anonymity for fear of army retribution, said there was no way the judge would be able to govern Haiti effectively when met with nothing but condemnation from the rest of the world.

Jonassaint, from the north coast town of Port-de-Paix, was a senator in the northwest district from 1950-1956. He was president of the 1986-1987 Constituent Assembly, which wrote the 1987 Constitution.

The judge was a member of the 18-member State Council, which co-governed Haiti with provisional President Ertha Pascal Trouillot from March 1990 until Aristide's inauguration a year later. He became chief justice after Aristide's ouster.

Jonassaint's appointment came as the United States was considering possible military intervention to restore democracy in the Caribbean nation.

"Mr. Jonassaint is not recognized by the United Nations or the Organization of American States," said Eric Falt, spokesman for the U.N. mission in Haiti. "We recognize President Aristide as the only legitimate president of Haiti."

In Puerto Rico on Thursday, OAS Secretary-General Joao Baena Soares denounced the army-backed appointment of Jonassaint as Haiti's provisional president, calling it "a continuation of the coup."

SUPREME COURT SEAT STILL OPEN

Clinton delays naming nominee

Terence Hunt Associated Press

WASHINGTON — Resisting pressure for a decision, President Clinton said Thursday he still had questions to resolve before choosing a Supreme Court nominee. His hesitation left a question mark over Bruce Babbitt's reputed standing as the top prospect.

The longer Clinton waits, some administration officials suggested, the more likely he is to turn to one of two other finalists: Arkansas judge Richard Arnold, a close friend, or Boston jurist Stephen Breyer, probably the safest bet for an easy confirmation.

Aides said Clinton was the only one who really knew which way he was leaning but that didn't stop White House guessing.

"On these matters," Clinton said, "I tend to keep my own counsel more than on other things. ... It is one of the few things that the president just does on his own, of course ultimately with the advice and consent of the Senate."

A specialist in constitutional law, Clinton said, "I believe I know a lot about this issue and I care a lot about it." He said he would resist "all the pressure of time deadlines."

Clinton spent the afternoon talking by telephone with members of Congress and others about the strengths and drawbacks of potential nominees.

On Capitol Hill, most of the talk was about Babbitt, the Interior secretary who has riled Republicans and Western ranchers with his environmental policies and attempts to raise grazing fees.

Sen. Joseph Biden, D-Del., chairman of the Judiciary Committee that would conduct the nominee's confirmation hearing, defended Babbitt against criticism that he was too liberal. "If you look at his record, he's right up Clinton's alley," said Biden, noting that Babbitt supports the death penalty and is a moderate on economic policy.

Sen. Orrin Hatch of Utah, ranking Republican on the Judiciary Committee, said that in contrast to Babbitt, Arnold and Breyer would be easily confirmed. "They would be slam dunks for the president," Hatch said.

Noting GOP opposition to Babbitt, Sen. Richard Bryan, D-Nev., said Republicans would toughen him up, but he's confirmed.

Clinton had said two days ago he would have a decision by Thursday, the end of the fifth week of his search for a successor to retiring Justice Harry Blackmun. But he indicated he wanted more time.

"I know that this has now become the most pressing story in the capital, but this is really a story that will have implications for years, indeed perhaps for decades to come," he told reporters.

SUCCESSOR FOR SMITH UNCERTAIN

Leader's death stuns Labor Party

Audrey Woods Associated Press

LONDON — Opposition leader John Smith died of a heart attack Thursday, creating a crisis for the Labor Party just as it was looking strong enough to regain control of government after 15 years on the sidelines.

The death of the eloquent Scot, known for his witty and combative parliamentary style, came as Labor hoped to exploit public outrage over Prime Minister John Major's inability to end Britain's longest recession since World War II.

Major's Conservative Party is reeling from last week's defeat in local elections and expects to be battered at next month's vote for the European Parliament. With the surge in Labor's popularity, there has been speculation that Major's Tory colleagues will oust him.

While the Conservatives are not obligated to hold elections until 1997, Smith's death removes Labor's best hope for a victory.

Unlike many Labor politicians with strong socialist views, Smith was from the right wing of his party and had credibility among London's financial community. He was seen as a force that could draw his party further toward the center and make it more palatable to British voters.

The often-raucous Parliament was stunned by the death of the 55-year-old lawmaker. Speaker of the House Betty Boothroyd faced a crowded, silent Commons to announce the death in a shaking voice. All business was canceled so lawmakers could hold an afternoon tribute.

Smith, who had recovered from a near-fatal heart attack in 1988, was at his London home Thursday morning when he was stricken again. He was taken to nearby St. Bartholomew's Hospital, where he was pronounced dead.

The Labor Party was left wondering "how we move forward in the light of this tragedy," spokesman Dave Hill said.

No Labor leader stood out as a clear favorite to succeed Smith, probably ensuring a fight over the party's leadership. Party members feared that infighting could divide them and weaken their chances of ousting the battered Conservatives.

Deputy leader Margaret Beckett does not have a high profile. Early speculation on a new leader focused on several of Smith's ranking deputies: John Prescott, the party's labor spokesman; Gordon Brown, spokesman on economic issues; and Tony Blair, who speaks for Labor on law and order.

Gubernatorial candidates outline agendas

Terry Branstad

Age: 47
Occupation: governor serving his third term

Grandy Terry Branstad is stressed out at making a state of Iowa "at" as he gears up for a run at a fourth term in office. Branstad's platform is centered around economic growth, raising education standards, quality health care and a tough, effective crime program. All are issues that Branstad said he is committed to improving on a statewide level — a state he said he knows and loves. "Being a native Iowan allows me to more clearly see the daily struggles that Iowans face," Branstad said. "I can see that as a state we do need to grow and I believe that growth starts with creating more quality high-paying jobs. "My goals are to increase the population, to increase the income of the citizens and to increase the quality of the jobs that are made available."

Branstad answered his critics who accused him of not being an innovative governor.

"Look at the record," he said. "I'm the governor that had the vision to establish the statewide telecommunications network and not only had the vision to establish the network, but had the courage and tenacity to stick with it against tremendous criticism."

He also addressed his opponents who claim the state has been stagnant during his 12 years as governor.

"I think I've made a big change," he said. "You think of what Iowa was like in January 1983 when I became governor, and then you look at it today, and what you see is a state with more focused quality education at our universities, economic development that created more quality jobs and long-term agriculture research that is going to pay off down the road."

Branstad was vehement in his commitment to improve the quality of education at the state's colleges and universities.

"I think the most important thing I can do for college students is to provide a quality undergraduate education so that Iowa's students have an opportunity for the best quality jobs once they graduate," he said.

"I invite the comparison with the other states. Look at New York or California and I think you'll see that higher education in Iowa has fared pretty well under my leadership."

Branstad said he is determined to make Iowa a safe haven for families and his plan calls for stiffer crime laws. He said even though Iowa already is recognized as a safe state to live, steps still need to be taken to crack down on crime before it becomes a serious problem.

"My plan, which focuses on prevention, treatment and enforcement, is the most comprehensive and should prove to be the most effective crime prevention plan to date," he said.

Branstad took a parting shot at Grandy, questioning his Iowa roots and his opponent's proposed $500 million tax cut plan.

Bonnie Campbell

Age: 46
Occupation: Serving her first term as Iowa's attorney general

Iowa has been greatly mismanaged under the tenure of Terry Branstad, Democratic gubernatorial candidate Bonnie Campbell said Thursday.

"Under Terry Branstad state spending has doubled, we've acquired a $409 million deficit, seen taxes increased 71 times and fee increases 63 times, and property taxes are up 44 percent and sales tax up 66 percent," she said.

"Who in the world is going to believe Branstad when he says he plans to cut taxes?"

Campbell said she plans to cut taxes if elected governor, but she isn't willing to make election year promises. She is willing, however, to take issue with much of Branstad's record, including the state's property tax freeze.

"At the same time the governor supported property tax freezes, he continued issuing mandates," she said. "It's the height of hypocrisy."

The governor has also mishandled Iowa's health-care system, Campbell said.

"The health-care initiative the governor put together didn't accomplish a thing," she said. "We should have been doing something about health care a decade ago. I hope we can join together with the federal government and work together."

Campbell said she supports managed competition and universal health-care coverage for Iowa.

As Iowa's attorney general, Campbell is the top crime official in the state. Although Iowa has a relatively low crime rate, she said the problems in larger areas are evident in this state as well.

To handle the concerns, Campbell supports many of the tough measures at the forefront of the national debate, but she would also push for more preventative crime steps.

"It's often the case that people believe we have to do one or the other — dealing with violent criminals or preventing crime where it starts," she said. "We need to be doing both."

Campbell thinks prisoners should serve their full sentences, but she opposes the death penalty. She also supports the need for more prison space, community-based corrections, and gun control through background checks and banning certain types of assault weapons.

"We need to respect the rights of hunters, but I won't stand by and allow police officers to be out-gunned by thugs," she said.

Economic development is another area Campbell thinks Branstad has failed in.

"I think our economic development program is all wrong," she said. "One of the reasons is that we don't have a strategy. Every time a Maytag or Ipsco or any large corporation wants to come into the state, we reinvent the wheel. We need community-based economic development."

Fred Grandy

Age: 45
Occupation: 5th district U.S. congressman serving his fourth term

Ask U.S. Rep. Fred Grandy why he's giving up his congressional seat to challenge incumbent Terry Branstad in this year's Iowa gubernatorial race and he'll tell you it's because "Iowans deserve better."

Grandy, who is serving his fourth term in Congress, has been diligently campaigning for statewide economic growth, tougher crime legislation, and an end to the tax and spend philosophy that he said Iowans have subscribed to for the last 12 years — thanks to Branstad.

"I'm not a career politician who is just going to say what it takes to get re-elected," Grandy said.

"I've challenged my opponent to start telling the truth, and so far we haven't heard it. Terry Branstad needs to stop using the pronoun 'I,' because government is about 'we.'"

Topping Grandy's agenda is stimulating Iowa's economic growth through a proposed $500 million in state and property tax cuts, coupled with a freeze on much of state spending. Grandy said the tax cuts and a partial freeze on spending will spur statewide job growth and protect personal income.

"Our current tax system has disintegrated to the point where individual counties are vying against one another for outside companies, and this isn't in the best interest of Iowans," he said.

Grandy is especially critical of Branstad's dealings with Ipsco Inc., a Canada-based steel company, which Grandy said chose to build a new plant in Muscatine County largely as a result of $70 million in Branstad-supported tax breaks.

"What's good for Muscatine isn't good for Mason City," he said. "I'm not going to promote economic growth by recruiting big companies to come to our state. Instead, I aim to keep profits here, and the way you do that is by lowering the burden on success and that means lowering taxes."

Grandy also attacked Branstad's statement that he has cut Iowa's $409 million deficit in half.

"To me, Terry Branstad taking credit for cutting our deficit in half is like a driver who pulls apart two cars after an accident they just caused," Grandy said. "Terry Branstad caused the deficit, so I don't see where cutting it in half is any accomplishment."

Grandy also is dead set on getting tough with Iowa's criminals. His plan not only promotes cracking down on adult violent crime, but dealing forcefully with juveniles who commit violent crimes as well.

Bill Reichardt

Age: 63
Occupation: Owner of Bill Reichardt's Sports Shop in Des Moines

Stopping crime where it starts is the central focus of Bill Reichardt's campaign for governor, and for him that means educating children.

"Mission-driven governments tell you what they want — not how to get there," Reichardt, D-Des Moines, said. "I'm on a mission. The mission starts by putting about 30,000 kids back into school."

Reichardt's mission was born after he did an independent study of 12 state prisons.

"Eighty-five percent of adult prisoners were found guilty when they were juveniles," he said. "Ninety percent of people found in adult prisons dropped out of school. If you want to know who the criminals are, the criminal is a male, a juvenile criminal and a dropout."

To begin solving this problem, Reichardt wants to create and enforce a truancy law. He said the law could function in two ways. The first would have dropouts attend school and return to a shelter in the evening. The second would create boarding schools.

"Lack of education contributes to the economy, the work force and much more as well as it does to crime," he said. "It works like a domino effect on our lives."

Government needs to invest in education, Reichardt said.

"Education, above all, is the salvation of the state and nation," he said.

Reichardt, who served in the Iowa House for two years and the state Senate for four years, said he would also encourage the universities to become more involved in the social and economic development of the state.

Health care is another area that can be improved through awareness and education, he said.

"Health care is a major issue on the national scene," he said. "The federal government will probably give the states many options. It is up to us to learn which options will be in the best interest of Iowans."

Reichardt thinks the plan that Iowa chooses should include a law prohibiting insurance companies from not covering people with pre-existing conditions. He said he also would like to see the state create a fund to provide coverage for those who cannot afford it.

But Reichardt is skeptical about forcing businesses to pay high insurance premiums.

"If you make insurance costs too high for businesses, they will find different ways to employ people — part-time employment only," he said.

WOMEN'S LEGAL RIGHTS

The scarlet 'P'

With the stitches just barely healed from his bout with womankind last autumn, John Wayne Bobbitt was recently arrested in Las Vegas for brutalizing yet another woman. You might think that losing and then regaining his penis would be a life-altering experience, something for men that is akin to seeing God or the afterlife, yet Bobbitt's flippant tempting of fate and the law clearly shows that he is one little boy who should have his cap gun permanently confiscated. Acquitted last November and made into the poster boy for victims of female hysteria, this burly ex-Marine was released back into society for another go at women while his wife, Lorena, was imprisoned for psychiatric evaluations. Most certainly crazy, Lorena was a complete nut case to believe that American society and law would take punitive action against a man who hurts women.

Like all the laws created to protect mainly women, sexual abuse laws are designed to criminalize the victim and not the criminal. Rape and sexual assault in many states still holds less of a penalty than robbery or murder. Freedom of reproduction laws hold a seriously tenuous position, and women attempting to protect these laws are murdered, bombed and physically attacked; the persons violating these laws are often acquitted, given community service instead of hard time, and are rewarded by their government with the freedom to return to the streets to continue breaking laws specifically designed to protect women. If men could become pregnant, reproductive freedom would be in the Bill of Rights. Not so for the rights of the weaker vessels.

For all the women ever killed by obsessive and vengeful ex-lovers, ex-husbands and ex-boyfriends because the law and law enforcers refused to enforce restraining orders, the adoption of much-lauded anti-stalking laws is surely a huge relief. The handful of states now supposedly enforcing these laws still put women through rigorous questioning and bureaucratic bullshit. The woman is treated as a child crying wolf while the murderous maniac shadowing her every move, threatening her life and disrupting her daily activities is given the benefit of the doubt. Just because your ex-husband sits outside your house and tells you he's going to kill you, why should we infringe on his freedom and jail him? Call us when he actually tries to kill you, and then we might discuss this with him, OK, little lady?

American government blatantly ostracizes women who try to gain protection from rapists, sexual abusers and social institutions designed to legally, financially and socially restrict women. Drug dealers and political dissidents, usually male, are often given political asylum in the United States, while women who are the victims of genital mutilation are merrily sent home like bad girls who broke curfew. When men like Bobbitt are allowed to walk among us to perpetrate more abuse, we must realize that our lawmakers are purposely putting us at risk. Perhaps there should be a women's lobby insisting that if sexual offenders aren't penalized by the law or put in jail, then at least they should be visibly marked for positive identification by the average woman on the street. A scarlet "P" perhaps or a great big "Rapist" or "Womankiller" branded onto their foreheads ... and onto other body parts as well.

Lorena was probably not the first woman Bobbitt abused, and quite obviously she was not the last. Perhaps women should take some political actions to ensure that men like Bobbitt are clearly identified as woman abusers and denied access to the people they love to hate. For men who like to hit women, I suggest rubber blow-up dolls — they are a lot more malleable and rarely take scissors to the family jewels.

CAF not receiving enough coverage

To the Editor:

Don Eyres' May 11 guest opinion, "KKK, IISO similarities dwarf differences," equates Iowa International Socialist Organization member Patrick Gallagher with a Klansman simply for calling the UI administration cowardly and hypocritical. According to this warped logic, the mere fact of attacking the actions of an official body makes one a fascist, regardless of the identity of the target or the content of the criticism. If Eyres truly believes that all political positions are equal simply by virtue of being expressed in strong language, he should return his political science diploma. Comparing a group that advocates the mass murder of gays with one that fights for gay liberation is outrageous.

Unfortunately, if the Campaign for Academic Freedom's experience this semester is any indication, the criticisms raised by Gallagher have some merit. When CAF sponsored a well-attended and spirited picket of Hunter Rawlings' office last month, the DI ran the story with a headline reading, "Protesters rally outside empty office," casting the event as a failure due to Rawlings' physical absence. This despite the fact that CAF Co-chairwoman Susan Wolfe was quoted in the article saying, "We figured he wouldn't be around." Of course not! Once he heard about the picket, Rawlings undoubtedly made plans to be out of his office, if he didn't have them already. Although his absence was clearly irrelevant to the goals of the picket, the headline served as an unofficial editorial device to diminish the event's success in the eyes of DI readers.

Moreover, DI reporters have been conspicuously absent from a number of significant CAF events, including a panel discussion where a department chairperson was among the speakers condemning the policy; a rally addressed by this year's recipient of the Philip C. Hubbard Human Rights Award; and a public speak-out where undergraduates, graduate students, staff and faculty all recounted their personal experiences of the classroom materials policy's detrimental effects.

I join Gallagher in urging the DI to be more diligent and fair in covering issues of such vital importance to UI students.

LETTERS POLICY. Letters to the editor must be signed and must include the writer's address and phone number for verification. Letters should not exceed 400 words. The Daily Iowan reserves the right to edit for length and clarity. The Daily Iowan will publish only one letter per author per month.

OPINIONS expressed on the Viewpoints Pages of The Daily Iowan are those of the signed authors. The Daily Iowan, as a nonprofit corporation, does not express opinions on these matters.

GUEST OPINIONS are articles on current issues written by readers of The Daily Iowan. The DI welcomes guest opinions; submissions should be typed and signed, and should not exceed 750 words in length. A brief biography should accompany all submissions.

The Daily Iowan reserves the right to edit for length, style and clarity.

It could be decades before I get to do this again: write pretty much whatever I feel like without some editor breathing down my neck, asking me to explain every sentence I've torn off on a jittery caffeine high. It's difficult to imagine a time when I'll have more fun and freedom than I've had this year as editor of one of the finest college newspapers in the nation. And after putting in my four years of early mornings, chaotic days and late nights, I think I've earned my 30 column inches of self-indulgence, so here goes:

I'll spare you the history of what all I've done here; suffice it to say I've done a bit of everything — though none of it has compared to my job this year. Simply put, hanging out here a lot makes graduating on time a real challenge.

Being the editor can get really intense at times and my term has certainly been no exception. Adapting to a new computer system, celebrating a 125th reunion, covering last summer's floods, surviving a ton of controversy too complex to explain yet again — all have been extraordinary learning experiences for me and hopefully everyone else involved.

I'm happy that my vision for The Daily Iowan was brought at least partially to reality. The goal I've worked toward all this year was making this newspaper as interesting for everyone else as it has been for me ever since I found a copy outside my dorm room my first day here at the UI. Picking up a Society of Professional Journalists' regional award for best all-around college newspaper was a nice realization of that goal. I'll share the credit for doing that with a dedicated, hard-working and supportive staff. I'm expecting at least as much for next year.

That aside, I have a few things to get off my chest.

To the remaining staff: Don't forget that this is a college newspaper: a place to experiment, make mistakes and learn. Don't be afraid to get wild, take risks and break the rules. Leave your mark.

If as journalists you fail to upset people along the way and make a few enemies, you're not doing your jobs. Never forget that almost everyone on this campus has an agenda to push and many would like the DI to serve as nothing more than their own newsletter. And when you refuse to comply, you'll be accused of having an agenda of your own. You'll hear a lot of phrases like "lack of coverage" from people in student government, the greek system, protest groups and the athletic department, to name just a few. That's just the nature of the news business given a limited amount of space, resources and reader interest. Your task is only to be as fair as possible. Don't let anyone tell you otherwise.

To the multi-acromed group of about 30 on (or, in a more accurate way, off) this campus:

For a group so ostensibly concerned with free speech issues, it's remarkable how many complaints the DI takes from you people after printing a guest opinion, letter to the editor, editorial or column that takes issue with your actions and behavior. You seem to stand up strongly for free speech until that speech targets yourself. I and other DI editors have been called a whole slew of nasty names this past year: insensitive, unprofessional, racist, bigoted, McCarthyite, homophobic, university conspirators, hypocrites, red baiters, Republican, etc. We've printed them all. My point is this: If you're going to make yourselves heard, then you'd better expect to take some flak for what you're going to say. We do.

To Rich Herbst, KGAN general manager: Your on-air editorials are always a joy, especially the one last fall in which you so eloquently stated that I "need a little therapy." Wrong again. My shrink says that after a year like this, I'll need a lot.

To Jon Yates, Locke Peterseim, John Kenyon, Annette Schulte, Ann Riley, John Waterhouse, Jonathan Lyons, Tory Brought, Tom Wanat, David Guttenfelder, David Greedy, Danny Frazier, Terry Colaband Paulson, Gloria Mitchell, Kris Wev, Iris Frost and many other fine folks I've worked for and with over the years: I've never met a more fun, fascinating and talented group of individuals in my life. Thank-you all.

To Publisher Bill Casey: Thanks for leaving the editorial decisions to us, helping us make the right decisions and taking the angry phone calls for it the next morning. Thanks also to department heads Joanne Higgins, Bob Foley and Jim Leonard: Your flexibility and understanding of the newsroom have been invaluable.

Thanks also to fellow Muskie Joe Bartenhagen, the younger brother of former DI editor John Bartenhagen, who encouraged me one night four years ago to march into the DI newsroom and "get my hands dirty." For that little shove I'll always be grateful.

And finally, to Brad Hahn, my successor: Good luck, be patient and what's left of the Pepsi is yours.

That's about all for me. I plan to disappear for a few weeks after my lifelong dream of hurling myself out of an airplane at 10,000 feet is (hopefully) fulfilled tomorrow morning.

A fitting end to the year, I think.

Paradox: psychological research on animals

Of all the forms of animal experimentation in use today, psychological experimentation is the most obviously indefensible. I say this because such experimentation rests upon two contradictory rationalizations for its ethical basis:

1) Nonhuman animals psychologically resemble humans closely enough that using them in psychological experimentation will yield important and/or useful information which may be generalized to humans.

2) Nonhuman animals do not psychologically resemble humans, and it is therefore ethically defensible for us to exhibit them to sometimes torturous research.

This mindset is unfortunately reinforced through years of training, required readings and, eventually, experiments for the furthering of academic careers.

I'd like readers to ask themselves: Which is it? Do animals resemble or not resemble humans psychologically? And does it matter either way?

Experimentation using animals as test subjects is a practice which has been common for more than a century. So common is it, in fact, that those exposed to labs or readings involving such experimentation only very rarely question, even within their own minds, the possibility that they as experimenters might have at least some ethical responsibility to their subjects.

This is where assumption No. 2 comes in handy: Students' exposure to their instructors taking part in, and directing the students to take part in, animal experiments removes the burden of guilt (or thought). Why wonder whether what one is doing is ethical when there's an authority figure to vouch for it?

And so callous disregard for the creatures involved in those experiments becomes just another day at the office (or school).

Take Dr. Harry Harlow as a case in point. Harlow's career in psychology was spent destroying the psychological makeups of primates. Among his wonders for modern psychology to praise were Harlow's Hell For Monkeys, the Tunnel of Terror, his Monster Mothers series and the Well of Despair. The charming Harlow named them all himself.

Harlow spent his career committing various levels of torture, both physical and psychological, upon primates in attempts to induce psychosis. On the occasions that he was successful in doing so, however, even the emotionally calloused Harlow took care to point out that his monkeys (referred to as models once he had reduced them beyond the point of day-to-day ability to function) had attained a form of psychosis which was not comparable to spontaneously occurring psychosis in humans and would not yield results which could be extrapolated to humans.

The following excerpt from "The Environmental Wars," written by David Day, demonstrates the value of Harlow's animal psychology experimentation. This passage concerns his Monster Mothers experiments:

"Because of their deprivation, the surrogate mothers (who had been isolated from the outside world in solitary, seamless steel cavern cages — the Well of Despair previously mentioned) had no idea of their roles. They either ignored the infants or became insanely hostile and, finally, homicidal.

"Dr. Harlow set up the experiments, then watched and took notes: 'One of their favorite tricks was to crush the infant's skull with their teeth.' Another 'trick' was 'that of smashing the infant's face into the floor, then rubbing it back and forth.'"

His compassion for his subjects came through in his honest, refrigerated tone, "The only thing I care about is whether the monkey will turn out a property I can publish. I don't have any love for them. Never have. I don't really like animals. I despise cats. I hate dogs. How could you like monkeys?"

And yet not only was he allowed to experiment upon these creatures — but no one thought to try to stop him.

And Harlow isn't alone in his contempt for his animal test subjects.

Reacting to the notion that animal experimental subjects should be cared for in such a way as to minimize the agony they will endure, Dr. James Watson, discoverer of DNA, replied, "The logical conclusion is we won't do any research and will spend all our resources making monkeys happy. I don't like monkeys."

I believe him.

But why is Watson allowed anywhere near animal test subjects, when he is obviously not interested in their well-being?

This is not a blanket indictment of all experimenters in psychological and biological studies involving animals. However, once a pupil has learned that inflicting agony is a reasonable thing to do, they will always scoff at questions and comments to that effect — and they will be likely to dismiss such comments as animal rights hysteria.

And yet shortly thereafter, we will find them attempting to demonstrate a correlation between their studies and like mental diseases in human subjects.

The psychologist who experiments on animals must face the dichotomy of titration: If the animals tested for psychosis are given results which can apply to humans, the suffering that those animals feel is real, and such experimentation must be abandoned on ethical grounds.

And if those animal test subjects are not similar psychologically to humankind, and results from experiments involving them cannot be extrapolated to the human population, then such experiments cannot yield results which might be of benefit to humankind — and therefore, such experiments should be stopped.

At the White House, Press Secretary Dee Dee Myers reiterated Thursday that "the president does not support unilaterally lifting the arms embargo."

"What it says is that the Senate favors an end to the embargo ... but is equally divided on the question of how to do it," Mitchell said after the votes.

He said the bill had virtually no chance of becoming law. The House would have to approve the bill before sending it to the president.

No Republicans voted for Mitchell's approach, but 13 Democrats voted with Sen. GOP leader Bob Dole of Kansas who backed the unilateral embargo.

"This is a big, giant step towards lifting the embargo, even on a unilateral basis," Dole said after the votes.

He called it "a very strong signal not only to the president but to the British, the French and others that there's a limit on how patient Congress will be, particularly on the right to self-defense."

The contradictory directives remained in the bill as the Senate recessed for lunch and it was not clear when it would be taken up again.

The close votes came a day after a strong appeal from Bosnian Prime Minister Haris Silajdzic for the United States to act on its own in supplying his government with arms.

Silajdzic, in a letter to Dole and Sen. Joseph Lieberman, D-Conn., said, "The hopes of the Bosnian people are turned to the United States Senate."

Most of the debate was not on whether to lift the embargo but whether to do it without first making one more effort to seek agreement from U.S. allies.

Associated Press

Senate Majority Leader George Mitchell, D-Maine, is pursued by reporters on Capitol Hill Thursday after the Senate voted to lift the arms embargo against Bosnia.

Dole insisted that his version was "not an effort to undermine the president." He described it as a step to avoid further U.S. military involvement.

"We don't send any ground forces," he said. "All we do is lift the embargo."

"Lifting the arms embargo is the only feasible option that will permit the Bosnian government to defend itself," said Sen. Joseph Biden, D-Del., who backed Mitchell's alternative.

"It's far too late to try one more thing," said Sen. Russell Feingold, D-Wis., urging an immediate unilateral lifting of the embargo.

Some senators, however, opposed any lifting of the embargo on grounds that it would lead to further bloodshed and U.S. involvement in the conflict.

Warner raised the possibility that Bosnia's government would use new military equipment to escalate the fighting and "regain what they have lost."

Sen. Daniel Patrick Moynihan, D-N.Y., who was among eight senators who voted for both approaches to lifting the embargo, said he saw no contradiction in his votes.

Moynihan, a former U.S. ambassador to the United Nations, said the United Nations charter provides that when one country invades another, "the inherent right to collective self-defense automatically comes into play."

"The Security Council has no right to deny arms for purposes of self-defense to Bosnia nor to deny us the right to provide such arms," Moynihan said.

students are totally wiped out by this time. Everybody wants to take the test at another time, and it puts enormous pressure on us to get the grades in — especially with the course size.

"There are 800 students enrolled in the class. The times are just awful," Holstein said. "To give the largest class in this university such a time shows an appalling lack of consideration for both students and faculty."

There is a total of 30 testing periods during finals week — six each day at 7:30 a.m., 9:45 a.m., noon, 2:15 p.m., 4:30 p.m. and 7 p.m. The testing period for a class is determined by a rotation system, Catherine Pietrzyk, an associate registrar in charge of compiling the final exam scheduling, said.

Pietrzyk said she realizes some students and faculty members are unhappy with Friday exams — but she didn't have any solutions.

"Sometimes people are unhappy with 7 o'clock Friday exams, but some are happy to have the time to study," she said. "It makes things difficult for instructors to get everything graded and have grades in on time."

"I'll miss the stability of knowing all I had to do every day was get up and go to class — now I have to get up and go to work," she said.

UI senior Michelle Anderson said she is not sad about graduating yet.

"It hasn't really hit me," she said. "I think that Saturday night it will sink in while I'm saying good-bye to friends."

Anderson said she has come to grips with the fact that college is easy compared to what "real life" will be like.

"It will be different now that I can't just go out any night," she said. "Now I'll have to be more responsible. In college, your problems aren't that big to deal with."

UI senior Michele Spagnuolo said she has many mixed emotions about graduating on Saturday.

"It's just starting to hit me," she said. "I feel like I'm going to have this void in my life. College was my life and now it's going to be gone in a few days. I'm scared."

Spagnuolo said since she does not have a job yet, it makes it even more difficult to leave.

About 3,200 degrees will be handed out at ceremonies today and Saturday throughout the nine UI undergraduate and graduate schools.

The College of Business Administration and the College of Liberal Arts will have graduation ceremonies Saturday morning.

monitoring the start of commencement," he said. "We ask for cooperation and consideration, but we do and will enforce the policy if need be."

Duane Thompson, associate dean for undergraduate programs in the College of Business Administration, said almost everyone has been receptive to the campaign and appreciates the dignified air it lends to graduation.

"The students and parents really appreciate having a nice ceremony," he said.

To ensure that commencement is a pleasant experience for everyone involved, a variety of different measures are taken by each college, such as free sweet rolls after the undergraduate ceremony for the College of Business Administration.

"We try very hard in every way that we can to let the students know this is for them," Thompson said. "We're always looking to make it better."

James Lindberg, associate dean in the College of Liberal Arts, said he has been impressed by the ceremonies since the "Graduate with Class" campaign began and separate commencements started being held instead of an all-university graduation.

"From my standpoint of sitting on the stage, it's been a much more appropriate ceremony," he said. "It's made a big difference."

Although an all-university ceremony creates a sense of unity and completeness, the current method allows students to be personally recognized, Lindberg said.

"On balance, the individual college ceremonies work better," he said.

GRADUATION

To ensure that students recognize the significance of the event and act accordingly, letters have been sent to students on after-graduation notices for commencement. In similar notices were given to students when they picked up graduation gowns.

The rules state that no alcoholic beverages or inappropriate dress will be allowed, including messages taped on academic apparel. In addition, parcels, balloons and flowers will not be allowed in the student seating area.

The policy states that inebriated students will not be allowed to participate, and Jones said anyone who fails to act appropriately could be removed from the ceremonies.

Postseason hinges on weekend for Hawkeyes

A berth to the Big Ten baseball tournament will be on the line for Iowa as it heads into the final conference series this weekend.

The Hawkeyes will travel to Michigan State Sunday and Monday for a pair of doubleheaders to begin at noon each day. Iowa stands at 21-29-1 overall and 12-12 in the Big Ten. The top four teams from the regular season will advance to postseason play. The Hawkeyes are in third place, ahead of Indiana with a record of 11-13.

The Spartans are tied for seventh place in the league with Illinois at 10-14.

Ohio State and Minnesota have already clinched playoff berths. The tournament is scheduled for May 19-22 in Battle Creek, Mich.

The Hawkeyes haven't competed since a 7-6 loss to Grand View May 7 in Carroll, Iowa.

Softball could lock Big Ten title against Buckeyes

The Iowa softball gets back into Big Ten Conference action this weekend with doubleheaders against Ohio State Friday and Saturday at the Hawkeye Softball Complex.

The No. 24 Hawkeyes (33-21 overall and 18-6 in the conference) are tied for the Big Ten lead with Michigan. Coach Gayle Blevins' team jumped up in the standings after taking three of four games from the Wolverines April 29-30.

The Hawkeyes haven't played since sweeping a doubleheader from Minnesota May 3, but Blevins said the break is good for the team.

"We've had some tough games lately so I think the layoff will be good for the group," Blevins said.

Blevins said the Hawkeyes will have their hands full with Ohio State, which is in third place in the conference and boasts the best offense in the league.

NBA

Bulls file tampering suit against Magic

CHICAGO (AP) — The Chicago Bulls have filed tampering charges with the NBA against Orlando Magic president Bob Vander Weide for his comments about forward Horace Grant during a telecast last week.

The Bulls claim that Vander Weide's comments constitute tampering under the NBA constitution. He made his comments during a New York Knicks-New Jersey Nets telecast on TNT.

In a statement, the Magic said they "believe the Bulls' charge is without merit."

Legal counsel has advised the Magic to refrain from further comment in the case, the team said.

"Certainly have to be careful how we talk about a Horace in light of July 1 dating (when Grant would become a free agent)," Vander Weide said on the telecast.

Hawks run over Pacers

Ed Shearer
Associated Press

ATLANTA — The key element Lenny Wilkens preached when he took over as Atlanta's coach last June was defense. That's what the Hawks stressed Thursday night, and the result was immediate and dramatic.

Holding Indiana to the fewest points in NBA playoff history, the Hawks got 20 points each from Danny Manning and Kevin Willis to beat the Pacers 92-69 and tie their Eastern Conference semifinal series 1-1.

"This was a huge turnaround for us after we were embarrassed the other night," Wilkens said of Atlanta's 96-85 loss in the series opener Tuesday night. "All year long our team has been responsive and resilient, and we certainly did not want to go to Indiana down 0-2."

The 69 points by the Pacers broke the league-low mark of 70, shared by Golden State against Los Angeles in 1973 and Seattle against Houston in 1982.

The loss also snapped a 12-game Indiana winning streak, including its last eight regular-season games, a three-game sweep of Orlando in the first round of the playoffs and a series-opening defeat of Atlanta.

Mookie Blaylock added 11 points, 13 assists and 10 rebounds for the Hawks, the fourth triple double of his career.

"We came in and took care of what we had to," Willis said. "We need that type of effort the rest of the series. We've got a little confidence now and if we can keep that up and keep the intensity up, we're going to be OK."

"I really felt after the game Tuesday that our focus would have to be on defense," Jon Koncak said. "It's huge. We had a great defensive effort." Atlanta surged to a 61-42 lead halfway through the third quarter, then withstood a Pacers comeback that closed them to 65-57 on Reggie Miller's 3-point basket with a second left in the period.

Miller scored 12 points and Derrick McKey 11 for Indiana, which plays host to games three and four on Saturday and Sunday before returning to Atlanta Tuesday night for game five of the best-of-seven series.

"Atlanta didn't do much different on defense," Indiana's Haywoode Workman said.

"We were right there going to the fourth. Ten down means nothing to us, but we made some lousy passes and missed a lot of shots we usually make."

The Pacers, who shot 31.8 percent for the game, hit only 29.4 percent in the final quarter.

Indiana had seven of its 17 turnovers.

"Like Miami did in the last series, we took too many ill-advised shots," Pacers coach Larry Brown said, alluding to Atlanta's first-round victory over the Heat.

NHL

Gartner knots series with OT goal

Associated Press

TORONTO — Mike Gartner scored at 8:53 of overtime as the Toronto Maple Leafs beat the San Jose Sharks 3-2 Thursday night and tied their NHL playoff series at three games apiece.

Gartner banked a sharp-angled shot off Sharks goaltender Arturs Irbe to force a seventh and deciding game in the second-round series.

The Maple Leafs and Sharks will play Saturday night with the winner advancing to the Western Conference finals against the Vancouver Canucks starting Monday.

The New York Rangers host the New Jersey Devils in the opener of the Eastern Conference finals Sunday.

Gartner's goal was the only shot on net either side had in overtime, although the Sharks nearly won the game 1:13 into the extra period when Johan Garpenlov hit the crossbar.

The Sharks pushed the Leafs to the limit.

Wendel Clark scored for Toronto in the first period and Igor Larionov for San Jose in the second.

Clark and Jeff Norton exchanged third-period goals before Gartner netted the winner.

Clark's second goal of the game and sixth of the playoffs gave Toronto a 2-1 lead at 5:32 of the third.

Sandis Ozolins was serving an interference penalty for hauling down Doug Gilmour away from the play. Clark stuck out his stick blade to deflect a long Todd Gill shot past Irbe.

A mistake by Gill then set up Norton's goal at 7:38 to make it 2-2. Gill had the puck in a corner of his own zone and dumped it behind his net — right to the Sharks' Ulf Dahlen.

Dahlen quickly passed out front. Norton, a defenseman, had rushed deep and got past the Leafs' Mark Osborne to get into the clear and he slammed Dahlen's pass behind goalie Felix Potvin.

In the first, Clark scored at 5:26. Gilmour shot the puck from the neutral zone into the corner of the rink to Irbe's right. The carom went to Clark, who was moving down left wing and he slapped a shot from the middle of the circle.

Clark got only a piece of the puck but it bounced between Irbe's legs, anyway.

San Jose controlled the second period, allowing Toronto only three shots on Irbe while smothering the Leafs' offensive stars.

Larionov scored at 8:43. He took a pass from Garpenlov at Toronto's blue line and slapped a drive from near the top of the circle that beat Potvin on the short side.

Dunston homers in ninth to beat Cardinals

R.B. Fallstrom
Associated Press

ST. LOUIS — The Chicago Cubs rallied from six runs down on Tuesday yet ended up losing. This time, they finished the job.

Pinch-hitter Shawon Dunston broke a ninth-inning tie with a two-run homer as the Chicago Cubs rallied from a four-run deficit Thursday and beat the St. Louis Cardinals 8-6.

"We felt from the sixth inning on that they were more nervous than we were," manager Tom Treblehorn said. "I told the guys on the bench, 'Hey, they're scared, let's go out and snatch this one.'"

Chicago entered 1-20 when trailing after seven innings, including a 7-6, 11-inning loss on Tuesday after the Cubs had tied it. Mark Parent led off the ninth with a single, his third hit of the game. Two batters later Dunston homered off the first pitch from Rob Murphy (1-2), his second of the year.

"The guys on the bench told me to look for a fastball to hit," Dunston said. "If I hadn't been pinch hitting, I probably would have taken a strike."

Chicago trailed 5-1 after five innings but scored twice in the sixth, once in the seventh and twice in the eighth to tie it 6-6. Treblehorn used 19 players, including all of his utility men.

"I figured we might see Murphy in the ninth, so we wanted to have Dunston ready," Treblehorn said. "He was the last player we had, and that was probably our last chance. I don't know how it could have gotten more dramatic than that."

Chuck Crim (2-0) allowed one run in two innings and Randy Myers got three outs for his sixth save in seven chances.

Rey Sanchez got an infield hit starting the eighth and Ryne Sandberg doubled off Mike Perez, activated from the disabled list earlier in the day. Derrick May's ground-out off Rich Rodriguez drove in a run and pinch-hitter Mark Grace tied it with a two-out single off John Habyan.

Perez was 6-for-6 in save opportunities before straining his shoulder. Torre wanted to ease him back and hadn't planned on Perez finishing the game.

"My strength is hitting spots," Perez said. "I threw two pitches pretty high and they hit them. If something good came out of it, I didn't feel any pain. I hope I don't look really bad the next time."

St. Louis' Bernard Gilkey is safe at second with a stolen base while Cubs' second baseman Ryne Sandberg leaps after attempting the tag during the fourth inning Thursday in St. Louis. Chicago won 8-6.

Hawkeyes aim to top last year's showing

Pat Regan
The Daily Iowan

The Iowa men's golf team will try to improve on last season's 10th place finish when it travels to Ann Arbor, Mich., this weekend to compete in the Big Ten Championships.

The competition will take place at the par-72 University of Michigan course. First round tee time is scheduled for 8 a.m. today. Ohio State, Wisconsin and Indiana are considered the favorites.

The Hawkeyes have finished in the top 10 in each of their spring tournaments.

Last weekend they finished 10th overall and fifth among the eight Big Ten teams competing at the Bruce Fossum-Spartan Invitational.

"We want to finish the spring on a good strong positive note," Iowa interim head coach Terry Anderson said. "Hopefully that will carry over to the summer, and we'll come back ready and hungry next fall and just clean house."

Iowa is led by co-captains Sean McCarty and David Sharp, who average 76.3 and 78.2 shots per round, respectively.

Sophomore Chad McCarty has a 77.3 average followed by freshman Sean Rowen at 78.8 and junior Chad Lydiatt with a 79.6. Rowen has the lowest round of any Hawkeye this season with a 68.

All the Hawkeyes will return next season which has Anderson excited.

"This team is just loaded," Anderson said. "This could be the best team Iowa has ever had, starting next fall."

Anderson took over as head coach of the Hawkeyes in February, replacing Lynn Blevins who resigned.

Anderson is a graduate of Iowa State where he was a four-year member and captain of the Cyclone golf team.

Williams' single pushes past Indians

Associated Press
Yankees 7, Indians 6
 NEW YORK — Bernie Williams singled home the winning run with the bases loaded in the 10th inning Thursday as the New York Yankees beat the Cleveland Indians 7-6 and stretched their winning streak to seven games.

Mike Stanley reached on third baseman Jim Thome's fielding error and took third on a single off Eric Plunk (3-2) by pinch-hitter Luis Polonia, his 1,000th career hit.

Steve Farr intentionally walked Mike Gallego, and Williams slapped a 2-2 pitch past first baseman Eddie Murray for his third hit of the game.

New York's winning streak is its longest since the Yankees won nine straight from Aug. 30-Sept. 8, 1989. The Indians have lost nine of 10.

Xavier Hernandez (2-1) won despite allowing a game-tying RBI single to Wayne Kirby with two outs in the ninth. Kenny Lofton's two-run, two-out triple had chased Sterling Hitchcock.

New York had rallied for four runs in the seventh to go ahead 6-3. Williams hit game-tying double, Paul O'Neill hit a two-run double off Derek Lilliquist and scored on Plunk's wild pitch. O'Neill raised his major league-leading average to .473.

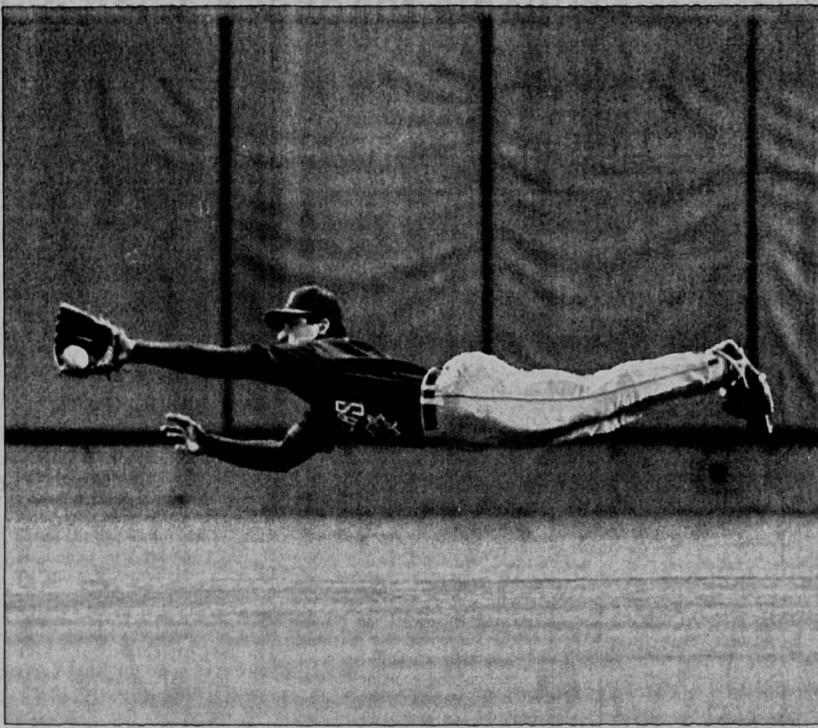

Hitchcock relieved starter Melido Perez in the seventh when Perez left with a lower back strain.

Manny Ramirez' RBI double gave the Indians a 1-0 lead in the second, but Stanley tied the score in the bottom half with his fifth homer. Pat Kelly's RBI single later in the inning put the Yankees ahead.

Albert Belle and Murray hit consecutive homers in the sixth inning, Belle's ninth and Murray's eighth.

Red Sox 3, Brewers 1
 BOSTON — Roger Clemens stopped Milwaukee on two hits in seven innings as the Brewers wasted a strong performance by starter Ricky Bones.

and walked three before leaving the game after seven innings with an apparent minor leg problem. He lowered his ERA to 0.80 in his last six starts covering 45 innings.

Boston took a 1-0 lead in the fourth inning on Damon Berryhill's sacrifice fly.

Bones (3-2) matched Clemens over the first seven innings before leaving with two runners on and one out in the eighth. Graeme Lloyd came on and allowed a two-run single to pinch-hitter Tim Naehring that made it 3-0.

Bones, who entered the game with a major league-leading ERA of 1.12, allowed three runs and four hits in 7 1/2 innings. Phillies 6, Pirates 4

 PHILADELPHIA — Pete Incauglia went 3-for-3 and scored three runs to help Tommy Greene get his first win of the season.

Incauglia doubled twice and hit his fourth homer as the Phillies snapped a three-game losing streak.

Greene, a 16-game winner in 1993, allowed 10 hits but only one run in six innings to gain his first decision this season in four starts. Greene has not lost at Veterans Stadium since Sept. 3, 1991, going 12-0.

The Pirates stranded a season-high 17 runners, giving them 89 in their last nine games.

Philadelphia broke a 1-1 tie with a three-run fourth off Zane Smith (4-3).

Tigers 6, Athletics 5
 DETROIT — Travis Fryman broke a sixth-inning tie with a sacrifice fly and rookie Chris Gomez homered as the Detroit Tigers won 6-5 Thursday, sending Oakland to its loss in 22 games.

The A's stranded 11 runners and lost their fourth straight, their eighth in nine games. Joe Boever (2-0) allowed one run in 1 1/2 innings. Mike Gardiner got four outs for his second save.

NFL

Former Hawkeye ends playing career

Howard Ulman
Associated Press
 FOXBORO, Mass. — A career of terrorizing quarterbacks ended Thursday when Andre Tippett, still confident of his playing ability, retired with 100 sacks and without regrets.

Tippett, who spent all 12 of his NFL seasons with New England, was an unrestricted free agent. The Patriots wanted to slash his $750,000 salary nearly in half. He could have entertained offers from other clubs.

Instead, he took a new position as Patriots director of player resources and said the team always had treated him with respect.

"It was very important for me to finish my career here," said Tippett, a second-round draft choice from Iowa in 1982.

"I'll miss it, but it's time to move on."

Tippett, 34, is seventh in career sacks since the NFL started keeping the statistic in 1982. He is first with the Patriots and set their single-season record of 18 1/2 in 1984. He went the Super Bowl after the 1985 season and five straight Pro Bowls from the 1984 through 1988 seasons. In those five years, only Lawrence Taylor had more than Tippett's 64 sacks.

With three young pass rushing linebackers — first-round draft pick Willie McGinest, 1993 rookie Chris Slade and two-year veteran Dwayne Sabb — the Patriots were looking to the future.

Tippett's sack of Scott Mitchell, then with Miami, became his last on Jan. 2.

"My role would have stayed the same" if he continued playing, Tippett said. "I've always taken the attitude (that) that's my job until someone beats me out."

"I've always felt I could do it in my sleep."

Tippett, probably the best defensive player in Patriots history, said he received inquiries to play for other clubs but didn't know how substantial they were.

He expressed confidence he and the Patriots could have found a way around the salary cap dilemma.

"I could go out right now and play the game, play a couple of more years," he said, but "I've got to look out for myself. I've got to look out for my family."

LIFE IN HELL

©1994 BY MATT GROENING

DOWNTOWN ROUNDUP

Beer-sodden, music-driven mayhem liable to follow incipient end of finals

Tad Paulson
The Daily Iowan

"A toot, Brutus?" — Julius Caesar's last words (an homage to that nasty nose candy), according to Tom Robbins' "Still Life With Woodpecker"

Iowa City is now, and for the next 72 hours or so, officially renamed Werewolf City. Come midnight, when all the finals are truly over and the bars really begin to overflow, a terrible, wonderful howling shall begin. Listen for it and beware.

You see, students unleashed from classroom dungeons are like ravenous dogs, ready to eat, drink or screw anything that shivers. They're animals to be feared, growing claws and sharp pointy teeth. And newly ordained graduates start resembling the Queen Alien in "Aliens."

Expect to see couples entangled in the downtown Pedestrian Mall trees, attempting the wheelbarrow position. Expect to see droves of screeching, emaciated Polo blondes vomiting on newspaper machines and each other, warbling out sorority anthems and snorting blow off their Rolex watches. Expect to see Tarzanlike frat boys with greased-up hair punching out windows and Gyros vendors, then running naked from cops, house letters stenciled in grease paint on their asses.

Expect to see a short Finnish man named Abe emerge from his hiding place and challenge the downtown crowds with Marxist dogma and bellows of "Yachtze!" Later, the cops will bury a slug in his hip for attempting to fondle a sack in a public place.

This is the weekend where things get kooky and kinky, a weekend where memory and virginity are eradicated, a weekend to assault and be assaulted by rival live-music journalists, a weekend to pee in the river. Do it all and be done with it. Scratch my beard and fear me.

Music? Oh yeah. There's music, too. Once more on the merry-go-round, my friends?

This is the weekend where things get kooky and kinky, a weekend where memory and virginity are eradicated.

Former President George Bush and stripper Nicki Knockers will marry at the Iowa City Yacht Club, 13 S. Linn St., to the music of the funk-shuffle ensemble Dagoah tonight and Tide on Saturday night. This infamous establishment will close in a few weeks, so enjoy its hallowed halls while you have the chance, and keep your eyes open for final party posters (I know Hank won't go quietly).

Ronald Reagan will twist to the mambo and the samba this weekend at Gabe's, 330 E. Washington St., with gigs by Bo Ramsey and the Sliders tonight and the thrash machine Sludgeplow, with Squidboy, on Saturday night. Remember, Tuesday nights are beer garden nights during the summer in good old I.C.

Richard Nixon's spirit will be conjured this weekend at the Sanctuary Restaurant & Pub, 405 S. Gilbert St., where the always fine guitarist Robert "One" Johnson will jam it up with discussionist Titi Raid (a provocation name) tonight and Saturday night. Also, the Jim Munro Jazz Band will play tonight, presumably before Johnson's show. Remember, the pizza, the imported beer and the jazz of this hot spot cannot be touched.

Dan Quayle and Geraldine Ferraro will square dance at The Mill Restaurant, 120 E. Burlington St., tonight and Saturday night at 9 to the folk thunder of Big Wooden Radio with cover costing a whopping $3. On Sunday night at 7, the fine Italiano eatery will host the pesky Catfish Keith, a highly lauded guitarist with a lot of press releases and photos.

Finally, Warren Christopher and Yasser Arafat will do a reading of "Waiting for Godot" at the Texas Steak Co. & Saloon, 121 Iowa Ave., with country group the Dean Woody Band tonight and Nerve Tonik Saturday night.

I exhort all of you to catch "The Crow," the new flick starring the late Brandon "Son of Bruce" Lee — it looks like a seriously intense watch. It opens today at Coral IV. Also coming in this weekend are John Waters' "Serial Mom," the supposedly abominable "House of the Spirits" and the Luke Perry yee-haw rodeo movie "8 Seconds."

Otherwise, keep your powder dry and have a zany summer of debauchery and fun. It's been real for me — at least most of the time.

MOVIE PREVIEW

Summer films feature familiar names, but not many surprises

John Horn
Associated Press

LOS ANGELES — If you can describe a movie in one sentence, odds are it's coming out this summer.

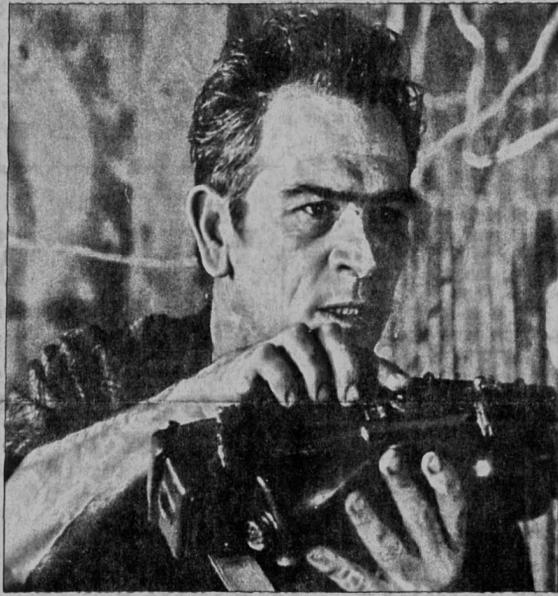

John Goodman IS Fred Flintstone. Bingo. "The Flintstones." Eddie Murphy plays that detective again — "Beverly Hills Cop III."

Mel Gibson remakes the James Garner TV Western — "Maverick." The summer film season is packed with an assortment of no-brainers, easy to sell sequels and lowbrow star vehicles.

Billy Crystal returns in "City Slickers" and there's yet another "Karate Kid" update (without the Karate Kid himself, since he's now in his 30s). Watch for a movie version of "Lassie" and be warned now: Keanu Reeves has the title role in "Little Buddha."

Nearly 60 movies will be released nationally between Memorial Day and Labor Day. The most notable summer titles include Disney's animated "The Lion King," Arnold Schwarzenegger's $100 million gamble "True Lies" and the late comedian John Candy's last movie, "Wagons East."

Some of the notable summer releases: (Release dates are subject to change and several films will debut in limited markets before moving nationally.)
• May 25: "Beverly Hills Cop III," Eddie Murphy.
• May 27: "The Flintstones," John Goodman.
• Sometime in June: "Me Let's Hope I Make It," Tina Wernmuller, director.
• June 1: "The Cowboy Way," Woody Harrelson.

Tommy Lee Jones returns to action films this summer, this time as a mad bomber in "Blown Away," which opens July 1.

- June 3: "Renaissance Man," Danny DeVito; "Endless Summer II: The Journey Continues," Bruce Brown, director.
- June 10: "City Slickers 2," Billy Crystal; "Go Fish," Rose Troche, director; "Speed," Keanu Reeves.

- June 17: "Getting Even With Dad," Macaulay Culkin; "Wolf," Jack Nicholson; Michelle Pfeiffer; "Airheads," Steve Buscemi; "White," Julie Delpy; "Fear of a Black Hat," rap group N.W.H.

- June 29: "I Love Trouble," Julia Roberts.
- Sometime in July: "The Shadow," Alec Baldwin; "D.R.O.P. Squad," Spike Lee, producer.
- July 1: "Blown Away," Jeff Bridges; "Baby's Day Out," Joe Mantegna.

- July 15: "Forrest Gump," Tom Hanks; "True Lies," Arnold Schwarzenegger; "Mi Vida Loca," Alison Anders, director.
- July 20: "Little Big League," Jason Robards; "Black Beauty," David Thewlis.

Fab Four, Elvis Costello meet on Cotton is King

Paul Ferguson
The Daily Iowan

The ghosts of the Beatles have lurked eerily about since their breakup, and they will probably outlast all of the band's former members. For some reason, though, they have been particularly active lately, even spawning the recent movie "Backbeat."

It seems odd that the producers of the film hand-picked musicians to cover the Beatles' songs when so many bands strive to sound just like them. Crowded House and Jellyfish could have used the work, for instance.

Austin, Texas, quartet Cotton Mather, which just released Cotton is King on Elm Records, would probably also have done it and for a lot less money. Cotton is King could almost be mistaken for a lost collaboration between the Fab Four and Elvis Costello. The Beatles' simple melodies and cute rhymes and Costello's quirkiness inhabit these songs like poltergeists. The cover photo even gives the band the stiff, sober look the Beatles and Costello have been known for.

Cotton Mather could have left it at that as numerous other bands have done, but their clever, literate lyrics and desperate view of life make it difficult to write them off as the latest parasites on the Beatles' legacy. "Mr. Should" is in the same vein as "Nowhere Man" but quite a bit more bleak: "And everybody has the right to decide / How to make a miserable affair of their lives / As if waking up wasn't enough of a fight," intones one verse. The angst of "Payday" seems particularly aimed at the plight of our overeducated, underemployed generation, telling the tale of many young people more honestly than Douglas Coupland ever could ("They don't have a future / But they do have a wage / Cause a job's not one of those things / That gets better with age"). The almost cheerful delivery of such bitter sentiments gives Cotton Mather an edge their mentors seldom dared to attempt.

Making perky pop songs out of grief and disappointment is not a new concept, but if nothing else, the band deserves credit for doing it well. There is a consistency and vibrance among these 12 tracks that make Cotton is King a very entertaining album, if not an entirely original one.

If Cotton Mather has anything in common with the 15th-century Puritan biographer from whom it borrows its name, it's the group's revealing analysis of the people in its songs. Though the tone is usually less than serious, Cotton Mather has an oddly ironic and often whimsical outlook on failed relationships and troubled lives. "Ivanhoe" scoffs at some poor lad whose social graces seem lost in the Middle Ages, and "April's Fool" puts a witty spin on the standard "my baby done me wrong" motif. Word play is perhaps the band's most notable talent, particularly on "Lost My Motto," which mingles the sacred and the profane most delightfully as it examines sex and Catholicism. And if they indulge in the occasional frenetic guitar passage, it only adds character.

If only they didn't display their influences quite so proudly, Cotton Mather might merit mention for more than just a clever album. It is quite possible that the familiar sound many must notice on Cotton is King will ultimately reduce them to a lounge act in some seedy nightclub someday. My prayers are with them.

Lawsuit claims Shannen Doherty owes L.A. landlord over $150,000

Associated Press

LOS ANGELES — "Beverly Hills 90210" star Shannen Doherty trashed an apartment and stiffed her landlord for $14,000 in rent, a lawsuit claims.

The lawsuit by Mark Nishimura contends Doherty did $136,300 worth of damage to the unit before he evicted her in March 1993 and that it took him five months to put the apartment back in shape so he could rent it.

Lisa Kasteler, Doherty's publicist, said the actress was out of the country.

The lawsuit contends Doherty caused $70,150 in structural damage to the apartment. Nishimura also claims he will have to replace an alarm system, satellite dish, sprinklers, a $9,769 sofa, a coffee table valued at more than $6,000 and an ottoman put at $2,696.

Doherty, who won't be returning to "90210" in the fall, has had numerous problems off the set, including disputes with her show's producers and a nightclub fight with another woman.

Last month she filed for divorce from Ashley Hamilton, ending a stormy six-month marriage.
